It follows as the crow flies that if laws and structures are declared to the public as the benchmarks of safeguarding the security of the country and thus the protection of its people, it is no defensive argument that subordinates who were delegated with the powers both by Constitution and statute failed the repository of the main powers. These subordinates like the Secretary to the Defence or the heads of department such as Director, SIS and the IGP were only alter egos of the President and the Director, SIS, the IGP and the Secretary, Defence are really liable for their omissions and in addition to their non-performance which impacts on the Minister who had undertaken such enormous powers under the Ministry of Defence, the Minister is also liable for serious omissions to have put in place mechanisms and structures which could have easily averted the disaster the country faced. We take the view that the Petitioners have established a violation of fundamental rights by the Respondents we have named namely the then President, the then Secretary, Defence, the then Chief of National Intelligence (CNI), the then Inspector General of Police (IGP) and the then Director, SIS.

We declare that all these Respondents named above have violated the fundamental rights enshrined in Articles 12 (1) and 14 (1) (e) of the Constitution.

In the exercise of the just and equitable jurisdiction of this Court, we proceed to hold the above respondents liable to pay compensation to the victims and the families of the deceased. This Court orders that the former President Maithripala Sirisena who held the office of the Minister of Defence pays a sum of Rs 100 million as compensation. The former IGP, Pujith Jayasundera and Director, SIS, Nilantha Jayawardena are each ordered to pay a sum of Rs.75 million as compensation. The former Secretary, Defence Hemasiri Fernando is ordered to pay a sum of Rs 50 million as compensation. Sisira Mendis, the former Director, CNI is ordered to pay compensation in a sum of Rs 10 million. The above sums of money ordered as compensation are ordered to be paid out of the personal funds of the aforesaid respondents. These payments have to be made to a Victim Fund to be set up at the Office for Reparations and maintained in an escrow.

We will set out the mode of payments after having dealt with the submissions on state liability.

State Liability

As regards state liability for the infringements we would like to observe that by putting the lives and liberty of common citizens at risk, the Respondents caused the possible collapse of public order and of the rule of law and it cannot be denied that it entailed the potential to destroy the faith of citizens in its state and erode its legitimacy. Large scale destruction, disruption and consequential violence can threaten a country's social fabric, endanger national unity and destroy prospects for economic growth and development. If there is a failure of public order, it is because of the inadequacies of the branches of government and we need to address them holistically in order to change things for the better.

A human being cries out for justice when he feels that the insensible act has crucified his personal liberty and family. That warrants grant of compensation under the public law remedy against the state as well. We are absolutely conscious that compensation was decided upon by the State to be paid to the victims.

Submissions have been made that the Ministry of Public Administration and Disaster Management was notified to ensure that the funeral expenses of the deceased were borne by the State. The then Cabinet of Ministers, by way of a decision dated 23.04.2019, directed the Office for Reparations to pay a sum of Rupees One Million to each of the families of the persons who died and those who were permanently disabled. Further, a decision had also been taken to pay compensation in a sum of Rupees Five Hundred Thousand each to persons who were injured in the said explosions and, such instruction, it was submitted, has been given to the Office for Reparations.

But the learned President's Counsel who appeared for the Respondent Archbishop of Colombo) in SC/FR/195/2019 submits in his written submissions that there has been not only an underpayment of compensation but also nonpayment as far as the majority of the victims and families are concerned.

This Court orders this fact of the matter to be investigated by the Office for Reparation and an accurate information by way of a motion should be made available to this Court as to the above facts within 3 months from the date of this judgment. The Attorney General is directed to liaise with the Office for Reparation and notify this Court of the same.

Be that as it may, quite contrary to the voluntary payment the State has decided to make for the benefit of the victims and families, the learned Senior Additional Solicitor General adverted to a requirement to prove an "administrative practice" on the part of the State to make it liable. However, this view of "administrative practice" that was first expressed by Wanasundera J in Thadchanamoorthi v AG[26] no longer holds good in this country. It has to be recalled that even in Velmurugu v Attorney General[27] Wanasundera J repeated his view in Thadchanamoorthi' s case. Both cases involved allegations of torture against police officers and in Velmurugu's case there was also an allegation against Army Personnel.

The view of Wanasundera J in Thadchanamoorthi on the question of the liability of the State is long recognized as obiter as the concept of administrative practice was not necessary for the ratio decidendi of the two cases. In Thadchanamoorthi the Court held on the facts that there was no infringement of fundamental rights. In Velmurugu too, the majority view was that on the facts, there was no infringement of fundamental rights and as such Wanasundera J's view on administrative practice is clearly obiter. In any event what is alleged against the Respondents is an omission on their part and therefore an imposition of a requirement for establishing an administrative practice in regard to omissions would be preposterous and illogical.

As for state liability, recourse must also be had to the decision of the Privy Council in Maharaj vs. Attorney-General of Trinidad and Tobago (No.2),[28] wherein it was said in relation to the liability of the state for fundamental rights:

[28] (1978) 2 All ER 670

"This is not vicarious liability; it is a liability of the State itself. It is not a liability in tort at all; it is a liability in the public law of the State"

In Nilabati Behera v. State of Orissa[29], the Supreme Court of India delineated the principles on which compensation can be directed to be paid by the state or its agency in a writ petition under either Article 32 by the Supreme Court or Article 226 by a High Court, and explained it in the following words.[30]

> "It would, however, be appropriate to spell out clearly the principle on which the liability of the State arises in such cases for payment of compensation and the distinction between this liability and the liability in private law for payment of compensation in action on tort. It may be mentioned straightway that award of compensation in a proceeding under Article 32 by this Court or by the High Court under Article 226 of the Constitution is a remedy available in public law based on strict liability for contravention of fundamental rights to which the principle of sovereign immunity does not apply, even though it may be available as a defence in private law in an action based on tort. This is a distinction between the two remedies to be borne in mind which also indicates the basis on which compensation is awarded in such proceedings.."

It follows then that a claim in public law for compensation for contravention of human rights and fundamental freedoms, the protection of which is guaranteed in the Constitution, is an acknowledged remedy for enforcement and protection of such rights, and such a claim based on strict liability made by resorting to a constitutional remedy provided for the enforcement of a fundamental rights is distinct from, and in addition to, the remedy in private law for damages for the tort resulting from the contravention of the fundamental right. The defence of sovereign immunity being inapplicable, and alien to the concept of guarantee of fundamental rights, there can be no question of such a defence being available in the constitutional remedy. It is this principle which justifies award of monetary compensation for contravention of fundamental rights made by the State or its servants in the purported exercise of their powers, and enforcement of the fundamental rights is claimed by resort to the remedy in public law under the Constitution by recourse to Article 126 of the Constitution. In the circumstances this Court would hold that the State is liable to compensate the victims for the incalculable harm and damage that have caused to people and property.

Right to Life

There is another basis through which state liability is predicated. Though leave was not granted under Article 13(4) of the Constitution, this Article has been declared by previous dicta of this Court to recognize right to life.

> "No person shall be punished with death or imprisonment except by order of a competent Court, made in accordance with procedure established by law, and shall not be further held in custody, detained or deprived of personal liberty except upon and in terms of the order of such judge made in accordance with procedure established by law".

A careful consideration of Article 13(4) of our Constitution makes it clear that if there is no order from a competent Court, no person should be visited with death and unless and otherwise such an order is made by a competent Court, any person has a right to live. Considering the content of Article 13(4) of the Constitution, Justice Mark Fernando made the pronouncement in Kotabandu Durage Sriyani Silva v Chanaka Iddamalgoda, Officer-in-Charge, Police Station, Payagala[31]

> "expressed positively that provision means that a person has a right to live, unless a Court orders otherwise.."

This aspect was considered by the Supreme Court at the leave to proceed stage in Kotabandu Durage Sriyani Silva[32] as well as Wewalage Rani Fernando v Officer-in-Charge, Police Station, Seeduwa[33] and the Court took the view that when Article 13 (4) of the Constitution creates a right even impliedly, there cannot be a situation where such right is without a remedy. Alluding to the decision in Kotabadu Durage Sriyani Silva it was stated in Wewalage Rani Fernando:

> "this concept, viz. a right must have a remedy is based on the principle which is accepted and recognized by the maxim 'ubi ius ibi remedium' viz. there is no right without a remedy'. One cannot therefore think of a right without a remedy as the right of a person and the remedy based on the said right would be reciprocal. Furthermore, when the rights of a person who has been subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment is protected by Article 11 of the Constitution which could be treated as a lesser infringement, compared with the situation where the death occurs as a result of torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, it is difficult to comprehend as to how the graver infringement could be ignored."

[31] SC Application No 471/2000, SC Minutes of 08.08,2003; Reported in (2003) 2 Sri.LR 63.

It was therefore held in Wewalage Rani Fernando's case that Article 13(4) should be interpreted broadly to mean that the Article recognizes the right to life and Article 13(4) read with Article 126(2) of the Constitution would include the lawful heirs and/or dependents to be able to bring an action in a situation where death has occurred as a result of violation of Article 11.

We hold that when either executive action or inaction infringes the fundamental right of right to life resulting in harm or loss to a person or citizen, it is actionable as a constitutional tort and security lapses and anomalies on the part of the executive that are writ large upon the facts in the case render the socially harmful behaviour liable to be cast in compensation and though the value of the lives lost is inestimable and beyond measure, it is not just and equitable that the state is not ordered to make amends and reparation and the Berlin Declaration on Upholding Human Rights and the Rule of Law on Combating Terrorism adopted by the ICJ affirms that in suppression of terrorism, States must give full effect to the principle of duty to protect. The cardinal duty is couched in the following tenor:

"All states have an obligation to respect and to ensure the fundamental rights and freedoms of persons within their jurisdiction, which includes any territory under their occupation or control. States must take measures to protect such persons, from acts of terrorism. To that end, counter-terrorism measures themselves must always be taken with strict regard to the principles of legality, necessity, proportionality and non-discrimination."[34]

None of the protections granted by Chapter III of the Constitution can really be enjoyed without the provision of safe, secure and protective environment in which a citizen of Sri Lanka may realize full potential of his existence. A person's right to life is, thus, not negotiable. The inability of the State to provide for such secure environment is, thus, clearly in breach of and in violation of the constitutional mandate and the privilege provided to a citizen of this country under the Constitution.

The Supreme Court has in the exercise of its just and equitable jurisdiction awarded compensation concurrently against both the State and individual actors or omitters- see Sirisena and Others v Ernest Perera and Others[35] (“*..In fact relief has been freely granted previously not only against the State but also against Respondents who were found to have been personally responsible for infringement of fundamental rights. Even if the liability is not based on delict but liability sui generis under public law, this Court has the power under Article 126(4) read with Article 4(d) to grant relief against the offending public officer and the State…”) ; Samanthilaka v Ernest Perera and Others[36] (.. “The State, necessarily, acts through its servants, agencies and institutions: But it is the liability of the State and not that of its servants, agents or institutions that is in issue. It is not a question of vicarious liability. It is the liability of the State itself….”); Amal Sudath Silva v Kodituwakku, Inspector of Police and Others[37] (“…Constitutional safeguards are generally directed against the State and its organs. The police force being an organ of the State is enjoined by the Constitution to secure and advance this right and not to deny, abridge or restrict the same in any manner and under any circumstances. Just as much as this right is enjoyed by every member of the police force, so is he prohibited from denying the same to others, irrespective of their standing, their beliefs or antecedents. It is therefore the duty of this Court to protect and defend this right jealously to its fullest measure with a view to ensuring that this right which is declared and intended to be fundamental is always kept fundamental and that the executive by its action does not reduce it to a mere illusion…”).

Based on these indicia the State should pay fair compensation for the pain, agony, distress, suffering and destruction undergone by the victims and families as a result of the contraventions by the Respondents we have identified. We direct the State to pay Rs 1 million as such compensation to the Victim Fund we have already ordered to be established at the Office for Reparation. This sum would be in addition to the compensation that the State had decided to pay by way of its cabinet decision, on which we have called for a report through the Attorney General.

Recommendations

Before we proceed to summarize the compensation payable and part with the judgment, we must express our shock and dismay at the deplorable want of oversight and inaction that we have seen in the conduct of affairs pertaining to Security, Law and Order and Intelligence. There are glaring examples of a lack of strategic co-ordination, expertise and preparedness that need a critical examination as to the way forward. The failures that eventuated in the Easter Sunday attacks and the concomitant deaths and devastations have left behind an indelible blot on the security apparatus of the Country and this Country which is blessed by a multi-cultural and multi religious polity cannot be left to the vagaries of these follies and made to suffer leading to violence, fear, apprehension and uncertainty. These events must recede into oblivion but they remind us starkly of the necessity to effect legislative, structural and administrative changes.

It is evident from the evidence placed before us that there is an urgent need to place the National Security Council (NSC) on a statutory footing and its composition specified with clarity so that there are no maneuvers to manipulate hostile exclusions and selective inclusions. The affidavit testimonies and the large volume of documents we have perused highlight the necessity to revamp the security systems and intelligence structures so that the expanding threats of terrorism and emerging challenges could be nipped in the bud and arrested as this Country cannot descend into anarchy once more. The course of conduct we have scrutinized demonstrates a woeful lack of expertise in intelligence gathering and dissemination among important individuals entrusted with the task. For instance, the office of Director, SIS and CNI must be occupied by individuals with necessary skill and expertise and the conduct of the Respondents who held the office, upon receiving sensitive intelligence, shows a lack of awareness and understanding of strategic vision. We recommend that the duties and functions of the office of Chief of National Intelligence (CNI) must be stipulated with definite certainty and the office should be occupied by a person having the necessary expertise, training and qualification.

We now turn to crystallize the orders we would make in addition to the orders, recommendations and directions we have indicated above.

Summary of Orders

1) A Victim Fund must be established at the Office for Reparation, which must formulate a scheme to award the sums ordered as compensation in a fair and equitable manner to the victims and families.
2) The former President, Mathripala Sirisena is ordered to pay a sum of Rs 100 million as compensation.
3) The former IGP Pujith Jayasundera and the former Director, SIS Nilantha Jayawardena are directed to pay Rs 75 million each as compensation.
4) The former Secretary, Defence Hemasiri Fernando is ordered to pay Rs 50 million as compensation.
5) The former CNI Sisira Mendis is directed to pay Rs 10 million as compensation.
6) The State is ordered to pay Rs 1 million as compensation.

The State and the individual respondents named above must make their payment of compensation to the victim fund maintained at the Office for Reparation. Respondents are directed to pay the aforesaid sums out of their personal funds.

7) The Office for Reparation must also investigate the alleged underpayment and nonpayment with regard to the cabinet decision taken to compensate the victims.

8) We also direct the Office for Reparations to invite any generous benefactors and donors to contribute towards the Victim Fund, by way of notifications in the media.

9) A progress report on the scheme of payment and the details about payments made by the above respondents and any benefactors must be made available to this Court within 6 months from today.

10) The Attorney General is directed to coordinate and liaise with the Office for Reparation in giving effect to this order.

11) In view of the observations we have already made as regards the conduct of Director, SIS, we direct that the State take appropriate disciplinary action forthwith against the former Director, SIS Nilantha Jayawardena for his aforesaid lapses and failures.

We wish to place our appreciation of all learned counsel both from the official and unofficial bar for the exemplary manner in which they presented their cases consistent with the highest traditions of the Bar.

ARGUED ON : 6th May 2022 and 3rd February 2023.

DECIDED ON : 6th October 2023

S. THURAIRAJA, PC, J.

This Judgement relates to an Application filed in terms of Articles 17 and 126 of the Constitution by the 1st to 42nd Petitioners (hereinafter referred to as "the Petitioners") seeking relief in respect of an alleged infringement of Fundamental Rights guaranteed under and in terms of Articles 12(1), 12(2) and 14(1)(g) of the Constitution by one or more of the Respondents to this Application.

The 1st Respondent is the Director General of the Department of Irrigation, the 2nd Respondent is the Secretary to the Ministry of Irrigation and Water Resources Management, and the 3rd Respondent is the Attorney General who has been made a Respondent in compliance with the Constitution.

This matter was supported before this Court on 12th February 2018, and leave was granted under Articles 12(1), 12(2) and 14(1)(g) of the Constitution.

In S.C. (F/R) No. 157/17 Counsel for the Petitioners made an application on 24th May 2017 and the Court was informed that S.C. (F/R) No. 157/17 was connected with the instant case, S.C. (F/R) No. 166/17. The Court listed both matters for support with S.C (F/R) Nos. 155/17, 156/17, 158/17 and 159/17. Leave was granted under Article 12(1) of the Constitution on 10th October 2017.

In S.C (F/R) No. 12/17, Counsel for the Petitioners made an application on 22nd May 2018 and informed the Court that the circumstances of this matter are the same as in S.C. (F/R) 166/17 Counsel for the Petitioner moved to re-fix this matter with S.C. (F/R) 166/17 for Argument on 21st September 2018, and leave was granted under Article 12(1) of the Constitution on 15th March 2017.

I find it pertinent to refer to the factual matrix of this application as provided by the parties in order to ascertain whether the Petitioner's Fundamental Rights guaranteed under Articles 12(1), 12(2), and 14(1)(g) of the Constitution have been violated by the 1st to 3rd Respondents.

Facts of the case as per the Petitioners

The Petitioners state that they were recruited to the Department of Irrigation (hereinafter referred to as the "Department") as "Casual Employees" between 1st January 2000 and 3rd March 2014 to the roles of either Technical Officer, Management Assistant and or Primary Grade – Unskilled worker.

Thereafter, the Petitioners state that they received appointment letters from the 1st Respondent (marked "P5(1)" to "P5(42)") stating that the Petitioners were appointed to permanent posts with effect from 24th October 2014 in accordance with the Public Administration Circular 25/2014 (hereinafter referred to as "P.A.C. 25/2014" and marked "P4"). The Petitioners state that the letters of appointment indicated that the afore-stated appointments to permanent posts were subject to a three-year probationary period, following which, if the work is found to be satisfactory, the Petitioners would be issued confirmation letters. The Petitioners state that, up to date, the Petitioners have received no complaints pertaining to unsatisfactory work and, as a result, harboured the legitimate expectation that they would be confirmed in their appointments following the conclusion of three-year probationary period.

According to the Petitioners, however, those who were appointed to the posts of Technical Assistant and Management Assistant received letters on or about 18th August 2015 (marked "P6(1)" to "P6(8)"), which cancelled the previous letters of appointment to permanent posts and instead stated that the aforementioned Petitioners were re-appointed to posts of Primary Grade – Unskilled worker.

The Petitioners state that, despite this, the aforementioned Petitioners continued to carry out the functions of a Technical Assistant and Management Assistant; the Petitioners further state that they were treated similarly vis-à-vis a permanent employee and experienced similar salary deductions.

Thereafter, the Petitioners state that they received a letter on or about 20th June 2016 (marked "P8(1)" to "P8(28)") stating that an Audit had commenced, and as per the Audit, there were observations of instances wherein the minimum requirements and qualification of an employee under the P.A.C. 25/2014 were not fulfilled. Subsequently, the Petitioners state that the same letter further revealed that they shall be removed from employment as the Petitioners did not fulfil the aforementioned minimum qualifications stipulated in the P.A.C. 25/2014.

The Petitioners state that the 1st Respondent did not communicate information regarding the individual(s) responsible for conducting the Audit, and neither were the Petitioners, at any point in time, summoned, questioned or inquired from to ascertain their compliance with the minimum qualifications. The Petitioners maintain that they fulfilled all requirements set forth in the P.A.C. 25/2014. The Petitioners state that, instead, the Audit was the commencement of an "organized attempt of political revenge" by the Respondents to remove the Petitioners from Public Service posts appointed to them by the previous government.

The Petitioners further state that, notwithstanding the aforesaid letters informing the Petitioners of the commencement of the Audit, the Petitioners continued to work as permanent employees for more than two years; according to the Petitioners, this was until the Petitioners received letters signed by the 1st Respondent between 7th April 2017 and 21st April 2017 (marked "P9(1)" to "P9(42)") stating that the Petitioners' appointments have been cancelled and/or the Petitioners have been removed from employment in light of the discovery made as a result of the Audit, stating that the Petitioners had failed to continuously work for 180 days as set forth in the P.A.C. 25/2014. According to the Petitioners, this same letter further claimed that any advancements of money and loans obtained from the government should be paid on or before 2nd May 2017.

The Petitioners believe that the word "continuous", in the context of the P.A.C. 25/2014, has been erroneously misinterpreted by the 1st Respondent to mean "every day". The Petitioners base this belief on the following reasons: (a) the objective of enacting the P.A.C. 25/2014 was to grant employment for those who were recruited and are still in the service on Temporary Casual (daily wages), Substitute, Contract or Relief basis; (b) it is impossible for any of the employees in the above categories to work "every day" as none of them are permanent employees and are not assigned work every day; (c) it is impossible and impracticable to work every day as "every day" may include Saturdays, Sundays, as well as public holidays, and as no employee is immune from illnesses, it is impossible to expect that any person could work every day for 180 days; (d) if the word "continuous" is interpreted to mean "every day" it shall not give any substance to the objectives of the P.A.C. 25/2014, and the process of enacting the P.A.C. 25/2014 will be rendered nugatory; and (e) if the government wanted the P.A.C. 25/2014 to confine to employees who have worked "every day" the government would have expressed so, but the Cabinet deliberately used the word "continuous" knowing that employees in the categories specified are not assigned work every day.

The interpretation employed by the Petitioners of the use of the word "continuous" is to mean "six months"; hence, the Petitioners state that an employee must be eligible under the P.A.C. 25/2014 if the said employee has worked continuously for six months. The Petitioners further state that, even if the use of "continuous" is interpreted to mean a total of 180 days from the date of recruitment to 24th October 2014, the Petitioners would still satisfy this requirement.

Additionally, the Petitioners state that, to the best of their knowledge, the aforementioned interpretation of the use of "continuous" employed by the Petitioners was adopted at the time of the Petitioners' appointments as permanent employees.

Moreover, the Petitioners state that, on or about 4th April 2016, the Cabinet adopted the Public Administration Circular 25/14 (II) (hereinafter referred to as the P.A.C. 25/14 (II) and marked "P12"), which cancelled the previously issued P.A.C. 25/14. The Petitioners state that, in doing so, the Cabinet expressly communicated that the P.A.C. 25/14 was being cancelled without prejudice to any permanent appointments made according to the P.A.C. 25/14. In support of the Petitioners' interpretation of the use of "continuous" in the context of the P.A.C. 25/14, the Petitioners state that: (a) when adopting P.A.C. 25/14 (II) the Cabinet would have been fully aware of the interpretation given to the use of "continuous" in the previously issued P.A.C. 25/14 and, therefore, knowingly, intentionally and deliberately communicated that no appointment made in accordance with the P.A.C. 25/14 was to be affected by its cancellation which confirms that the Petitioners' interpretation of the use of "continuous" was the policy adopted by the government; (b) subsequently, a change in the interpretation of the use of "continuous" amounts to a change in policy as it is a broad concept affecting the livelihood of several Public Officers; (c) as per Article 55 of the Constitution, only the Cabinet has the power to change or make policy in respect of appointments, promotions, transfers, disciplinary and dismissal of Public Officers; and (d) even if the interpretation of the use of "continuous" adopted by the Petitioners is considered erroneous, it is the Cabinet of Ministers, and not the 1st Respondent, that reserves the power under the law to make decisions and/or interpretations to the P.A.C. 25/14 and P.A.C. 25/14 (II) in respect of policy pertaining to appointments, promotions, transfers, disciplinary control and dismissal of Public Officers.

The Petitioners state that, consequently, the removal from employment of the Petitioners in the absence of a hearing and the erroneous interpretation of the P.A.C. 25/14 employed by the 1st Respondent are unjust, unlawful, arbitrary, capricious and in violation of the Petitioners' Fundamental Rights guaranteed by the Constitution. In the foregoing circumstances, the Petitioners claim that the Petitioners' Fundamental Rights guaranteed under Articles 12 (1), 12 (2), and 14 (1) (g) of the Constitution have been infringed and/or are being continuously infringed by the aforesaid executive and administrative action. Hence, the Petitioner prays for an order to quash the decision to remove the Petitioners from employment.

Facts of the case as per the Respondents

As per the 1st Respondent, the Petitioners were not recruited on a casual or contract basis but instead as "Labourers" on an ad hoc/Thaduchitha (තදුචිත) basis. Persons recruited under the afore-stated category were to be paid only for the days on which they worked, were free to work elsewhere simultaneously on the days they did not work for the Department and were not entitled to leave nor maternal benefits.

The 1st Respondent states that, as per the P.A.C. 25/14, only the persons who were recruited on a temporary, casual (on a daily wage), substitute, contract or relief basis were eligible to be granted permanent employment, and that too only if the said persons, inter alia, (a) had worked for a continuous period of 180 days as of 24th October 2014 as per paragraph 02 of the P.A.C 25/2014; and (b) had possessed the relevant educational qualifications stipulated by the P.A.C. 25/14 as per paragraph 03 of the same. Accordingly, any persons who had not worked for a continuous period of 180 days as of 24th October 2014 or had not possessed the relevant educational qualifications stipulated in the P.A.C. 25/14 will not have a right to permanent employment nor be deemed to be eligible to claim permanent employment under the P.A.C. 25/14.

Moreover, the 1st Respondent states that, as per paragraph 04 of the P.A.C. 25/14, the eligible person(s) ought to be made permanent in the post to which they were initially recruited and not to the post they were serving or in relation to the functions they discharged.

The 1st Respondent further states that, as per the Gazette Notification No. 1733/52 dated 25th November 2011, the powers to make appointments to the posts relevant to this case have been devolved to the Department by the Public Service Commission, and it is the Department's duty to ensure that permanent appointments made under the P.A.C. 25/14 are compliant with the provisions thereof.

The 1st Respondent states that the Petitioners who were recruited as "Labourers" on the aforementioned ad hoc/Thaduchitha (තදුචිත) basis were issued letters of appointment (marked "P5(1)" to "P5(42)") in respect of the posts of Labourer, Clerk, Technical Assistant, etc.

The 1st Respondent states that, however, the Department was informed by the Department of Management Services by means of a letter dated 18th March 2015 marked "R1" that a number of these appointments, i.e. "P5(12)", "P5(18)", "P5(21)", " P5(30)", "P5(32)", "P5(33)", "P5(41)" and "P10(42)", appeared to have been made on the basis of the functions they performed, which was contrary to the provisions of paragraph 04 of the P.A.C. 25/14. The 1st Respondent states that, accordingly, the abovementioned eight Petitioners were issued fresh letters of appointment dated 18th August 2015 (marked "P6(1)" to "P6(8)") appointing the Petitioners to the posts of "Labourer". The 1st Respondent states that the Petitioners accepted the abovementioned appointments and did not take any legal steps to question the same at the relevant time. Hence, the 1st Respondent maintains that the Petitioners had acquiesced to the act of being appointed as "Labourers" and, as a result, are estopped from complaining about the same.

The 1st Respondent states that, following confusion as to the calculation of the requirement set forth by paragraph 04 of the P.A.C. 25/14 wherein only the persons who had worked satisfactorily for a continuous period of 180 days as of 24th October 2014 would be eligible, a clarification was sought from, and a response thereto was issued by the Ministry of Public Administration and Management to the Ministry of Irrigation and Water Resource Management by means of a letter dated 9th May 2016 (marked as "R2", "R2(a)" and "R2(b)"). The 1st Respondent states that this clarification set forth the interpretation of the said 180 days to mean 180 working days, excluding public holidays, Saturdays and Sundays. As such, the 1st Respondent maintains that the interpretation given in "R2" is consistent with the provisions of paragraph 02 of the P.A.C. 25/14, that the various interpretations of the word "continuous" employed by the Petitioners are erroneous and misleading, and further that the Ministry of Public Administration and Management has informed the Ministry of Irrigation and Water Resource Management by means of a letter dated 2nd October 2015 (marked "R3") that if the Department wished to act in excess of the provisions in the P.A.C. 25/14, it should be done after receiving a policy decision in respect of the same.

The 1st Respondent states that the Petitioners who served on the ad hoc/Thaduchitha (තදුචිත) basis were not eligible to be considered under the P.A.C. 25/14 as the said ad hoc/Thaduchitha (තදුචිත) basis was not recognized by the P.A.C. 25/14. The 1st Respondent states that, even if the Petitioners were serving as casual employees and were, therefore, eligible to be considered under the P.A.C. 25/14, the Petitioners would be compelled to establish inter alia that: (a) the Petitioners had worked satisfactorily for 180 days continuously as per paragraph 02 of P.A.C. 25/14, and (b) the Petitioners possessed the relevant educational qualifications as per paragraph 03 of the P.A.C. 25/14.

The 1st Respondent states that an internal Investigation Report (marked "R4") in respect of the appointments made under the P.A.C. 25/14 by the Department revealed that the Petitioners had not worked a continuous period of 180 days as required by paragraph 02 of the P.A.C. 25/14 but had yet been granted permanent appointments under the P.A.C. 25/14.

The 1st Respondent states that, in light of the aforementioned circumstances, the Department was compelled to cancel the permanent appointments previously issued to the Petitioners by means of letters dated 31st March 2017 (marked "P9(1)" to "P9(42)").

The 1st Respondent further states that the Petitioners have failed to submit proof of the Petitioners' compliance with the relevant educational qualifications stipulated in paragraph 03 of the P.A.C. 25/14.

As such, the 1st Respondent maintains that: (a) the cancellation of the Petitioners' appointments was reasonable, in good faith and legal, and not politically motivated; (b) the Petitioners have failed to adduce any evidence to suggest that the cancellation of the Petitioners' appointments was politically motivated; and (c) in view of the aforementioned facts, if the Petitioners' appointments were not cancelled, then it might appear that the Respondents have acted in violation of the provisions of the P.A.C. 25/14.

The 1st Respondent submits the following preliminary objections: (a) the Petitioners are attempting to obtain a relief they cannot obtain directly; (b) the Petitioners have suppressed and/or misrepresented material facts from/to this Court; (c) the Petitioners have failed to come before this Court with clean hands and/or the Petitioners are in breach of the doctrine of uberima fides; and (d) the Petition is filed after the expiry of the one month's time set out in Article 126(2) of the Constitution. The 1st Respondent, therefore, prays to dismiss the Petition.

The Preliminary Objections will be addressed within the body of the analysis.

Legal Analysis

Article 12(1) of the Constitution

The specific question before this Court is whether the decision of the 1st Respondent to remove the Petitioners from permanent employment is violative of the equality postulated by Article 12(1) of the Constitution.

The two well-known legal expressions that are interrelated to the concept of equality are found in Article 12(1) of the Constitution, and it provides as follows:

> "All persons are equal before the law and are entitled to the equal protection of the law."

Thus, Article 12(1) of the Constitution confers a positive obligation on the State to ensure that every individual is entitled to equal treatment and equal protection guaranteed by the law, regardless of their status in a given circumstance. In this context, it is the duty of the Department of Irrigation to ensure that the permanent appointments are made in line with the P.A.C. 25/14 and its provisions thereof.

In the instant case, the Petitioners who were recruited to the said Department on an ad-hoc /Thaduchitha (තදුචිත) basis were later appointed as permanent employees in accordance with the P.A.C. 25/14 through appointment letters from the 1st Respondent effecting from 24/10/2014 (as provided in documents marked "P5(1)" to "P5(42)").

Thereafter, as per the letters (marked "P9(1)" to "P9(42)") received by the Petitioners, it is evident that the Petitioners had been removed from permanent employment on the basis that they had not continuously worked for a period of 180 days as required by the P.A.C. 25/14.

Accordingly, the grievance of the Petitioners is that the removal from employment of the Petitioners in the absence of a hearing and the erroneous interpretation of the P.A.C. 25/14 employed by the 1st Respondent are unjust, unlawful, arbitrary, capricious and in violation of the Petitioners' Fundamental Rights guaranteed by the Constitution.

However, in order to determine whether the 1st Respondent violated the Petitioners' Fundamental Rights under Article 12 (1) of the Constitution, firstly, it is necessary to examine the eligibility of the Petitioners to be considered under the P.A.C. 25/14 for permanent employment and secondly, the reasonableness of the conduct of the 1st Respondent.

The P.A.C. 25/14 granted permanent employment to those in the mentioned categories who had completed 180 days of continuous satisfactory service as of 24th October 2014 and who possess educational qualifications to have at least passed Grade 8/Year 9. The Petitioners were recruited as "Labourers" on ad hoc/Thaduchitha (තදුචිත) basis, and the said ad hoc /Thaduchitha (තදුචිත) basis was not recognized under the P.A.C. 25/14. In these circumstances, could the challenge based on Article 12(1) succeed? It is apparent from the foregoing circumstances that the Petitioners are not eligible to be considered under the P.A.C. 25/14 for permanent employment and thus have no right to claim permanent employment. The Petitioner cannot claim a right to which he is not entitled, and allowing such would be unlawful and indeed negate the advancement of equal protection of law principle enshrined in Article 12 (1) of the Constitution.

G. P. A. de Silva J, in Jayasekara V. Wipulasena and Others [1988] 2 Sri LR 237, stated as follows:

> "Article 12(1) cannot confer on the petitioner a right to which he is not entitled in terms of the very contract upon which he found his complaint of "unequal treatment"".

In K. J. A Chathumi Sehasa and Another v. S. Irani Pathiranawasam, Principal, Southlands Balika Vidyalaya and 7 Others [2018] S.C. [FR] Application No. 201/2017(SC Minutes dated 30. 05. 2018), Aluwihare PC, J. observed as follows:

> "For the complaint of an unequal treatment of law to succeed the petitioner must show that the unequal treatment was meted out in the performance of a lawful act. It is a cardinal principle that equal treatment should be referable to the exercise of a valid right, founded in law in contradistinction to an illegal right which is illegal in law".

Justice Shirani Bandaranayake in the case of Farook Vs Dharmaratne, Chairman, Provincial Public Service Commission, Uva and others (2005) I Sri L. R. 133 observed as follows:

> "When a person does not possess the required qualifications that is necessary for a particular position, would it be possible for him to obtain relief in terms of a violation of his Fundamental Rights on the basis of unequal treatment? If the answer to this question is in the affirmative, it would mean that Article 12(1) of the Constitution would be applicable even in a situation where there is no violation of the applicable legal procedure or the general practice. The application of Article 12(1) of the Constitution cannot be used for such situations as it provides to an aggrieved person only for the equal protection of the law where the authorities have acted illegally or incorrectly without giving due consideration to the applicable guidelines. Article 12(1) of the Constitution does not provide for any situation where the authorities will have to act illegally. The safeguard retained in Article 12(1) is for the performance of a lawful act and not to be directed to carry out an illegal function. In order to succeed the petitioner must be in a position to place material before this Court that there has been unequal treatment within the framework of a lawful act".

The Petitioners have also maintained that they were of the legitimate expectation that they would be confirmed in their appointments as there were no complaints against them that their work was unsatisfactory.

Prof. Endicott of the University of Oxford [Administrative Law 2nd ed. at p. 283] has commented that a legitimate expectation, "Might be better called a 'legally protected expectation'".

In the case of India vs. Hindustan Development Corporation (1993) 3 SSC 499 it was stated as follows:

"However earnest and sincere a wish, a desire or a hope may be and however confidently one may look to them to be fulfilled, they by themselves cannot amount to an assertable expectation and a mere disappointment does not attract legal consequences. A pious hope cannot amount to a legitimate expectation. The legitimacy of an expectation can be inferred only if it is founded on the sanction of law or custom or an established procedure followed in a natural and regular sequence. Again, it is distinguishable from a mere expectation. Such expectation should be justifiable, legitimate and protectable. Every such legitimate expectation does not by itself fructify into a right and, therefore, it does not amount to a right in a conventional sense."

When considering whether the Petitioners can base their application on legitimate expectation, this Court has already held that the Petitioners are not eligible under the P.A.C. 25/14 to be considered for permanent employment. Further, in the instant case, the Petitioners neither satisfy the minimum educational qualifications nor fulfil the requirement of satisfactorily working continuously for 180 days as required by the P.A.C. 25/14. Therefore, there is no legitimate expectation to be frustrated by the 1st Respondent.

With regard to the reasonableness of the conduct of the 1st Respondent in the instant case, although the Petitioners had been wrongly appointed as permanent employees through appointment letters (marked "P5(1)" to "P5(42)") effecting from 24th October 2014, the 1st Respondent had rectified the above by issuing fresh letters of appointment (marked "P6(1)" to "P6(8)") dated 18th August 2015 which comply with the provisions of the P.A.C. 25/14. As the 1st Respondent had taken action to rectify the previously issued letters of appointment to comply with the provisions of the P.A.C. 25/14, I am of the view that the conduct of the 1st Respondent is reasonable.

The Petitioners have also alleged that Petitioners were not provided with an opportunity to establish whether they satisfied the minimum qualifications required by the P.A.C. 25/14. As it has already been established that the Petitioners are not eligible to be considered for permanent employment under the P.A.C. 25/14, this Court can see no justification as to why the Petitioners should be afforded an opportunity for a hearing.

Furthermore, the allegation of the Petitioners that the 1st Respondent had erroneously interpreted the word "continuous" is dismissed by reason of the clarification sought from and the response thereto issued by the Ministry of Public Administration and Management to the Ministry of Irrigation and Water Resource Management which prescribed that the interpretation of the use of "continuous" was to mean 180 working days excluding public holidays, Saturdays and Sundays. The 1st Respondent had acted accordingly and in compliance with the aforementioned interpretation.

It must also be noted that the Petitioners accepted the appointment letters marked P6(1) to P6(8) dated 18/08/2015 without raising any objection and did not seek any relief from the Court at the time they received the above letters. And if the Petitioners are eligible under the Circular, they should have revealed all the details affirming the same. The absence of the above explanations show that the Petitioners were aware that they had no legal basis to challenge the above and thus, the Petitioners cannot now complain that their Fundamental Rights have been violated by the 1st Respondent.

The Petitioner had sought relief from the Court to quash the decision taken by the 1st Respondent to terminate the Petitioners' services and/or cancel the appointments, as well as claim advancements of money and loans obtained from the Government to be paid on or before 2nd May 2017. It must be borne in mind that the Petitioners cannot seek this Court to compel the Respondents to act illegally or against the law. The relief sought by the Petitioner is one that this Court, as a Court of Law and Equity, cannot provide since,

> "Illegality and equity are not on speaking terms."

Therefore, this Court declares that the Petitioners' Fundamental Rights guaranteed under Article 12(1) of the Constitution have not been infringed by the Respondents in this instant case.

Article 12(2) of the Constitution

While Article 12(1) of the Constitution outlines the positive obligation of the State, Article 12(2) of the same sets out the negative obligation of the State to ensure that,

> "No citizen shall be discriminated against on the grounds of race, religion, language, caste, sex, political opinion, place of birth or any one of such grounds".

The Petitioners allege that the Petitioners' removal from employment is an organised attempt at political revenge since the appointments were made permanent by the previous government. In the instant case, the Petitioners are attempting to insinuate that the Petitioners were discriminated against based on the grounds of political opinion. However, this allegation is insufficient, especially in the absence of any material evidence illustrating the Petitioners' association with the previous government, in establishing that the Petitioners' removal from employment by the 1st Respondent infringes the Fundamental Rights secured by Article 12(2) of the Constitution. In actuality, the decision of the 1st Respondent in removing the Petitioners from employment is evidently in accordance with the provisions prescribed by the P.A.C. 25/14.

In these circumstances, this Court declares that the Petitioners' Fundamental Tights under Article 12(2) of the Constitution have not been violated in the instant case.

Article 14(1)(g) of the Constitution

This Court shall now deal with the Petitioners' complaint of a violation of Article 14(1)(g) of the Constitution.

Article 14(1)(g) of the Constitution states as follows:

> "Every citizen is entitled to the freedom to engage by himself or in association with others in any lawful occupation, profession, trade, business or enterprise."

It must be noted that this is not an absolute right. It is subjected to Article 15(5), 15(7) and 15(8):

> "15(5) The exercise and operation of the fundamental right declared and recognized by Article 14(1)(g) shall be subject to such restrictions as may be prescribed by law in the interests of national economy or in relation to –

(a) the professional, technical, academic, financial and other qualifications necessary for practising any profession or carrying on any occupation, trade, business or enterprise and the licensing and disciplinary control of the person entitled to such fundamental right; and

(b) the carrying on by the State, a State agency or a public corporation of any trade, business, industry, service or enterprise whether to the exclusion, complete or partial, of citizens or otherwise.

15(7) The exercise and operation of all the Fundamental Rights declared and recognized by Articles 12, 13(1), 13(2) and 14 shall be subject to such restrictions as may be prescribed by law in the interests of national security, public order and the protection of public health or morality, or for the purpose of securing due recognition and respect for the rights and freedoms of others, or of meeting the just requirements of the general welfare of a democratic society. For the purposes of this paragraph "law" includes regulations made under the law for the time being relating to public security.

15(8) The exercise and operation of the Fundamental Rights declared and recognized by Articles 12(1), 13 and 14 shall, in their application to the members of the Armed Forces, Police Force and other Forces charged with the maintenance of public order, be subject to such restrictions as may be prescribed by law in the interests of the proper discharge of their duties and the maintenance of discipline among them."

Further, Article 28(c) of the Constitution lays down the following duty:

"(28) The exercise and enjoyment of rights and freedoms are inseparable from the performance of duties and obligations and accordingly it is the duty of every person in Sri Lanka –

(c) to work conscientiously in his chosen occupation."

Justice A.R.B. Amerasinghe in W.M.K. De Silva v. Chairman, Ceylon Fertilizer Corporation S.C. Application No.7/88 [1988] 2 Sri L.R. 393 observed as follows:

> "In an application for relief under Article 14(1)(g), the Petitioner must also show that her right to engage in any lawful occupation, profession, trade, business or enterprise was, unreasonably obstructed. The Petitioner must go further still and establish that the right claimed was (a) a legal right and that (b) it is a fundamental right."

He further added that:

> "Article 14(1)(g), recognizes the right of every citizen to use his powers of body and mind in any lawful calling: to pursue any livelihood and avocation. It confers no obligation to give any particular kind of work or indeed any right to be continued in employment at all."

It would thus be seen that Article 14(1)(g) of the Constitution confers on citizens of Sri Lanka the fundamental right to do work of any particular kind and of their choice. It does not, however, confer the right to hold a particular job or to occupy a particular post of one's choice.

The equivalent to Article 14(1)(g) of our Constitution is Article 19(1)(g) of the Indian Constitution, which states:

> "All citizens shall have the right to practice any profession, or to carry on any occupation, trade or business."

In Fertilizer Corporation v. Union of India (1981) AIR 344, 1981 SCR (2) 52, the Court held that Article 19(1)(g) of the Indian Constitution does not protect the right to work in a particular post under a contract or employment, and as such Article 19(1)(g) of the Indian Constitution cannot be invoked against the loss of a job or removal from service.

A similar view was taken in Elmore Perera v. Major Montague Jayawickrema, Minister of Public Administration and Plantation Industries [1985] S.C./Application No. 134/84, where Chief Justice Sharvananda stated as follows:

> "Article 14(1)(g) recognises a general right in every citizen to do work of a particular kind and of his choice. It does not confer the right to hold a particular job or to occupy a particular post of one's choice. The compulsory retirement complained of, may, at the highest affect his particular employment, but it does not affect his right to work as a Surveyor."

In the instant case, the Petitioners have failed to establish that their right to engage in any lawful occupation, profession, trade, business or enterprise was unreasonably obstructed by the Respondents. As this Court exhibited the view that the Petitioners are not eligible to be considered for permanent employment under the P.A.C. 25/14, the Petitioners have further failed to establish that the claimed right was a legal right. Correspondingly, this Court observes that the removal of employment of the Petitioners affects the Petitioners' particular status of employment but does not affect their right to work as "Labourers".

Hence, I am of the view that the Respondents have not infringed the Petitioners' Fundamental Rights guaranteed in terms of Article 14(1)(g) of the Constitution.

Time Bar

The Counsel for the Respondent took up a preliminary objection that the Petition has not been filed within the time frame stipulated in terms of Article 126(2) of the Constitution. As this Court observed, the impugned letters of termination were issued on 31st March 2017 and received by the Petitioners on 7th April 2017. Thereafter, the Petitioners filed the application for the instant case on 5th May 2017. It must be noted that the one-month time period prescribed by Article 126(2) of the Constitution does not commence from the date the right was violated upon, but instead commences from the date when either party is made aware of this violation or when one can feasibly take steps to come before this Court. Therefore, based on the facts and circumstances of this case, this Court takes the view that the application of the Petitioners in the instant case is not barred by time and accordingly, the preliminary objection raised by the Respondent is dismissed.

Decision

In view of the foregoing circumstances and reasons, I hold that the decisions and conduct of the 1st Respondent have not infringed the Fundamental Rights guaranteed by Articles 12(1), 12(2) and 14(1)(g) of the Constitution. Therefore, I proceed to dismiss this application.

Application Dismissed.

Vijith K. Malalgoda PC J

151 Co-operative Inspectors attached to the Department of Co-operative Development of the Western Province, had complained of the violation of their fundamental rights guaranteed under Article 12 (1) of the Constitution by the Executive or Administrative action taken by the 1st to the 7th Respondents.

When the matter was supported for leave on the 26th of August 2008, this Court having considered the material placed before the Court had granted leave to proceed for alleged infringement of Article 12 (1) of the Constitution. After the leave to proceed was granted and the matter was fixed for hearing, on 30th April 2009, an application was supported on behalf of 17 Intervenient Petitioners. The Petitioners did not object to the said intervention, and the request for intervention was permitted by this Court. The Intervenient Petitioners were named as 16th -32nd added respondents to the instant application.

As revealed before us the main grievance that was complained by the Petitioners, was the decision by the Western Provincial Council to place a group of Co-operative Inspectors at a higher salary step against the scheme of Recruitment (hereinafter referred to as SOR) applicable to the Co-operative Inspectors Service.

At the time the alleged violation took place the SOR to the post of Co-operative Inspectors Service consisted of 3 grades namely Class II-B, Class II-A, and Class I. In terms of the SOR, the recruitment Grade was Class II-B and the basic requirement for entry into Class II-B was Four passes at the GCE (Advance Level) Examination and a pass at the Co-operative Employees Certificate (Advance) Examination conducted by the Co-operative School Polgolla was considered as an added qualification.

As per the SOR Co-operative Inspectors in Class II-B who have been confirmed in that grade and have five years of satisfactory service and successfully completed the Second Examination held for Co-operative Inspectors by Co-operative College were eligible to be promoted to Class II- A of the Co-operative Inspectors Service.

Promotions to Class I was made on the availability of vacancies based on seniority from among Co-operative Inspectors who have completed 5 years of satisfactory service and successfully completed the 1st Examination held for Co-operative Inspectors by the Co-operative College.

As submitted before this Court, the Co-operative Inspectors considered their service above the Government Clerical Service or the Management Assistant Service that was introduced after Public Administration Circular 06/2006 since the basic qualification was the four passes at the G.C.E. (Advance Level) as against G.C.E. (Ordinary Level) for the Management Assistants. However Public Administration Circular 06/2006 placed the Co-operative Inspector's salary at MN I-2006 scale, whereas the Management Assistants were placed at MN 2 -2006 scale.

The Co-operative Inspectors were agitating against the said placement to the National Salaries and Cadre Commission and by letter dated 04.01.2008, their recommendation was communicated to the Secretary of the relevant Ministry by the said commission to place Co-operative Inspectors at MN 3-2006.

As further submitted by the Petitioners, the subject of Co-operative being a devolved subject under the 13th amendment to the Constitution, Provincial Co-operative Departments were functioning in the provinces with the implementation of the 13th Amendment and the Petitioners belonging to the Western Province Co-operative Department.

The Western Provincial Council had granted the MN I-2006 scale to the co-operative Inspectors in the Western Province prior to the salary revision recommended by the National Salaries and Cadre Commission and Placed Co-operative Inspectors in Class II-B at step-I, Class II-A at step 12 and Class I at step 23.

According to the Petitioners, although the entry-level qualifications for Co-operative Inspectors were G.C.E. (Advance Level) there were graduates serving as Co-operative Inspectors and at the time the instant application was filed, there were about 85 graduates serving as Co-operative Inspectors in the Department of Co-operative Development of the Western Province at different levels (i.e., Class II-B, II-A, and I) including 37th, 38th, 42nd, 93rd to 102nd, 135th and 138th Petitioners.

The Petitioners were unaware of any decisions by the Western Provincial Council or by the National Salaries and Cadre Commission to place a group of Co-operative Inspectors serving in the Western Provincial Council at MN4-2006 from April 2008, but they were surprised when they got to know that approximately 20 Co-operative Inspectors receiving a salary higher than the others for the month of April 2008, which they have subsequently complained to this Court by the instant application.

As further submitted by the Petitioners, the said salary increase was granted ignoring the class under which the recipient of the said increment was serving at that time but the only basis was that the recipient was a graduate employed after 1977 and had served for 15 years or more as a Co-operative Inspector. The said ad hoc increment granted to a small number of Co-operative Inspectors serving in the Western Province had created a salary anomaly among the Co-operative Inspectors since even a class I officer of the Co-operative Inspectors Service was entitled to an MN 3 salary.

The Petitioners when invoking the Jurisdiction of this Court had made the Chief Minister, the Board of Ministers of the Western Provincial Council, the Governor, the Secretary to the Co-operative Ministry- Western Province, and the Attorney General as Respondents. Among the Respondents, only the 7th Respondent the Secretary to the Co-operative Ministry Western Province filed objections before this Court justifying the decision impugned before this Court.

According to the 7th Respondent, graduate employment schemes were implemented as far back as year 1971 and before, but their grievances were not looked into until 1994. For the first time, Public Administration Circular 20/94 was issued in granting relief to certain categories of under-employed graduates identified by the circular as "රාජ්‍ය සේවයේ ලිපිකාර හා සමාන්තර සේවාවන්හි ඌන සේවා නියුක්ත උපාධිධාරීන්ට සහන සැලසීම සහ 1971-1976 දක්වා කාලය තුල උපාධිධාරී අභ්‍යාස යෝජනා ක්‍රමය යටතේ බඳවා ගනු ලැබූ නිලධාරීන්ට සහන සැලසීම" and as per the said circular (7R10) it was applicable to,

a) graduates who joined the Public Service under the graduate training scheme between 1971-1976

b) graduates who joined prior to 1971 to positions allied to plan implementation officers

c) graduates who joined outsides the graduate training scheme between 1971-1977

d) graduates who joined under the graduate placement scheme subsequent to 1977 and have completed 15 years of service in the Public Service

The next document the 7th Respondent relied upon in his objection was the Public Administration Circular 20/94 (II) issued on 15.07.2005, (7R 11) extending the relief granted to under-employed graduates in clerical and allied services who joined those services after 1977. The said circular was applicable to those who joined clerical and allied serviced between 01.01.1978 and 31.12.1980 and obtained the degree during this period or prior and served in the same capacity for 15 years as of 01.06.1994

Whilst referring to the above two circulars, the 7th Respondent had tried to explain that, even though there is no specific reference that, those circulars are applicable to the Co-operative Inspectors Service, those circulars apply to the Co-operative Inspectors service as well. In paragraph 16 of his affidavit the 7th Respondent referred to the above as follows;

> "16. Answering the averments contained in paragraph 12 of the said petition I admit that PA Circular 29/94 does not include Co-operative Inspectors as an allied service for the clerical service. However, I state that until the circular No. 06/2006 the Co-operative Inspectors were placed on the same salary scale as of the clerical and allied services. Accordingly, they were considered employees of a similar category until circular No. 6/2006. Further, I state that circular No. 2/97 classified the public service according to the salary scale, and accordingly, Co-operative Inspectors were also categorized among others, along with the clerical service according to their salary scale Rs. 45,900-14x320-6x 1,560-73,740 (salary Code T.2.1.-T.2.5) until the circular No. 6/2006 was implemented. The preamble to circular No. 2/97 is annexed herewith marked 7R4."

However, the above position is contradicted by his own document which was produced by him marked 7R 7(a). The above document is a memorandum submitted to the Provincial Board of Ministers of the Western Province to obtain approval to extend the relief granted to the under-employed graduates in clerical and allied service by Public Administration Circular 20/94 (original Circular) to the Co-operative Inspectors with similar qualification.

In the said provincial memorandum, the reason to obtain special approval was explained as follows;

2. 1994.06.15 දිනැති රාජ්‍ය පරිපාලන චක්‍රලේඛ 20/94 හි 2 (ආ) II වගන්තිය ප්‍රකාර රාජ්‍ය පරිපාලන චක්‍රලේඛ 37/92 හි එස් 3:8 මත 1994.06.01 දින සිට ක්‍රියාත්මක වන පරිදි මෙම නිලධාරීන්ගේ වැටුප් ප්‍රතිශෝධනය කිරීමට කටයුතු කර ඇත. ඉහත චක්‍රලේඛය ප්‍රකාරව මෙම නිලධාරීන්ගේ වැටුප් සකස් කිරීම පිළිබඳව යම් යම් මතභේද මතු වූ හෙයින් මේ සම්බන්ධයෙන් ගත යුතු ක්‍රියා මාර්ගය පිළිබඳව බස්නාහිර පළාතේ සමූපකාර සංවර්ධන කොමසාරිස් විසින් ආයතන අධ්‍යක්ෂකගෙන් උපදෙස් විමසා ඇත. රාජ්‍ය පරිපාලන චක්‍රලේඛ 20/94 හි 2 ආ II යටතේ සහන ලබා දී ඇත්තේ ලිපිකරු හා සමාන්තර සේවාවන්හි නියුතු ඌන සේවා නියුක්ත උපාධිධාරීන්ට පමණක් බවත් සමුපකාර සමිති පරීක්ෂක සේවයේ නිලධාරීන්ට එම චක්‍රලේඛයේ සහන ලබාදිය නොහැකි බවත් ආයතන අධ්‍යක්ෂ විසින් දන්වා ඇත.

As revealed before us the provincial Board of Ministers has approved the said memorandum and the Co-operative Inspectors who were eligible to come under the said decision were paid salaries according to the Public Administration Circular 20/94, even though the Director Establishment had taken a different view. However, there was no challenge to the implementation of the said decision by the rest of the Co-operative Inspectors at that time.

With regard to the implementation of the second circular issued in the Year 2005 (Public Administration Circular 20/94 (ii)), the 7th Respondent had taken up the position that Public Administration Circular 20/94 (ii) was issued in the year 2005 expanding the coverage of the original circular and the Governor of the Western Province, the 6th Respondent had approved the decision of the Board of Ministers to place the “Underemployed graduate Co-operative Inspectors” those who joined the service after 1977 and completed 15 years of service to be placed on a salary scale as referred to in the circular.

Even though the 7th Respondent had taken up the above position in his affidavit filed before this Court, he has failed to submit before this Court the decisions of the Board of Ministers and/or the Governor Western Province as referred to above. However, the justification he submitted before this court was twofold.

Firstly, he took up the position that it is correct to consider the graduate Co-operative Inspectors along with clerical and allied services since the Co-operative Inspectors were also drawing a salary equal to those grades and secondly, he justified the implementation of circular 20/94(ii) since the original circular 20/94 too was implemented without any objection in the Western Province in order to give effect to the state policy on resolving grievances of the underemployed graduates.

However, he was silent on the decision communicated to the provincial Co-operative Commissioner by the Director Establishment ruling out that Graduate Co-operative Inspectors were not belonging to clerical and allied services in order to get the benefit of the circular 20/94. In other words, the state policy implemented by circular 20/94 was to give relief only to under-employed graduates in clerical and allied services only and therefore those who do not belong to clerical and allied services are not entitled to the same benefit.

The same officer who issued the 20/94 circular in the year 1994, namely the Secretary to the Ministry of Public Administration had issued another circular subsequently bearing number 29/94, and in the said circular the clerical and allied services were identified as follows;

2-1 (අ) ලිපිකරු හා සමාන්තර ශ්‍රේණි යනු

1) සාමාන්‍ය ලිපිකාර සේවය

2) යතුරු ලේඛක සේවය

3) ලඝු ලේඛක සේවය

4) පොත් තබන්නන්ගේ සේවය

5) සරප් සේවක සහ

6) ගබඩා භාරකරුවන්ගේ සේවය වේ.

The Co-operative Inspectors Service was not included in the said circular. The Petitioners whilst referring to the above circular had taken up the position that the said interpretation was the result of the long-standing grievance complained on behalf of the Co-operative Inspectors.

Even though it was argued on behalf of the 7th Respondent that both Public Administration Circulars which provided relief to under-employed graduates in clerical and allied services had equally applicable to the under-employed graduates in the Co-operative Inspectors Service, Public Administrative Circular 29/1994 clearly leave out the Co-operative Inspectors from the clerical and allied services and therefore a question will arise as to the applicability of those circulars to a group of graduates outside the clerical and allied services.

As already observed in this judgment the wording of the two circulars (7R10 and 7 R 11) are very specific and the circulars do not provide provisions in grating any relief to other groups except those who are covered by the circulars.

As further observed by this Court the grievances and the anomalies complained by the Co-operative Inspectors were resolved by the National Salaries and Cadre Commission and the said decision was communicated by letter dated 04.01.2008 placing the Co-operative Inspectors at MN3-2006 scale. In those circumstances treating the Graduate Co-operative Inspectors on par with the underemployed Graduates in clerical and allied services and granting MN 4-2006 scale had created an anomaly in the Co-operative Inspectors Service by giving a wrong interpretation to the state policy in granting relief to underemployed graduates in clerical and allied services.

As already referred to by me the two circulars relied by the 7th Respondent are specific on their applicability and Circular 20/94 (ii) specifically identified the graduates to whom the said circular is applicable.

For clarity, I would like to once again refer to the second paragraph of the circular which clearly identifies the applicable groups as,

2. 1978.01.01. දින හා 1980.12.31. දින අතර කාලපරිච්ඡේදය තුල ලිපිකරු හා සමාන්තර සේවා වලට බඳවා ගන්නා ලදුව එම කාලපරිච්ඡේදය තුල හෝ ඊට පෙර උපාධිය ලබා මේ වන විටද එම තනතුරු වල සේවය කරණ උෆණ සේවා නියුක්ත උපාධිධාරීන්ට උපාධිය ලබා ගැනීමෙන් අනතුරුව එම තනතුරේ වසර 15 ක සේවා කාලයක සම්පූර්ණ කිරීම හෝ 1994.06.01 හෝ යන දින දෙකෙන් පසුව එළබෙන දින සිට පහත සඳහන් වැටුප් ගෙවීමට රජය තීරණය කර ඇත.

The two highlighted areas in the said paragraph require the graduate to obtain the degree either before or during the period relevant to the circular and should work for 15 years after obtaining the degree. If the degree was obtained in 1978, he needs to wait until 01.06.1994 and in those circumstances, the graduate will have to wait nearly 16 years to become eligible under the said circular.

A group of Graduate Co-operative Inspectors sought intervention in the instant application and as already referred to by me, the Petitioners did not object to the intervention, and the Intervenient Petitioners were added as 16th -32nd added Respondents. The papers that were filed by the Intervenient Petitioners before this Court includes the details of the Intervenient Petitioners and according to them, they were among the recipients who received the salary increment that was challenged before this Court. The details provided by the Intervenient Petitioners Respondents can be summarized as follows;

Out of the seventeen Intervenient Petitioners Respondents, only two had joined the Co-operative Inspectors Service (26th and 29th Respondents) between 01.01.1978 and 31.12.1980. But they were not degree holders at the time they joined the service. 26th had obtained the degree seven years after he joined the service and the 29th after five years. However as already observed above the under-employed graduates should possess the degree within the period referred to in the circular and the above Respondents does not come within the circular even if the circular is applicable to Co- operative Inspectors Service.

All the other Respondents had joined the Co-operative Inspector Service between 1981 and 1988 and except for six Respondents (17th, 19th, 25th, 28th, 31st, and 32nd), others were not degree holders at the time they joined the service. 21st Respondent had obtained the degree in 2001, 19 years after joining the service, and had completed only 07 years of service after obtaining the degree when he was given the salary increment. The 18th and 22nd Respondents were not degree holders but were holding diplomas obtained from Galle and Kandy Technical Colleges and there is no material to show that the Diplomas they possess are equal to a degree.

Even if the argument made on behalf of the 7th Respondent that 1994/20 (ii) circular is applicable to the under-employed Co-operative Inspectors who complete 15 years serving; as identified in the circular the 15 years period will only be applicable after obtaining the degree, and the officer should complete 15 years of service by 31.12.1995. In those circumstances, a further question arises as to the applicability of the said circular to the Intervenient Petitioners Respondents.

When considering the above matters, it is clear that no proper scheme was followed when granting the increments to a group of Co-operative Inspectors and the seventh Respondent had failed to produce before the Supreme Court the decision taken by the Board of Ministers of the Western Provincial Council or the directive said to have been signed by the 6th Respondent, Governor, Western Province.

In the absence of a specific decision, the 7th Respondent had heavily relied on the board paper and the decision by the Board of Ministers in implementing the provisions of the main circular, 20/1994 in favour of the Co-operative Inspectors Service in the year 1998 but as already referred to in this Judgment, the said decision was contrary to the state policy on granting relief to the under Employed Graduates in clerical and allied services.

The failure of the North-Western Provincial Public Service Commission to give effect to the "National Teachers Transfer Policy" identified in Circular 95/11 issued by the Ministry of Education and Higher Education was complained about in the case of Kamalawathy V. Provincial Public Service Commission of the North -Western Province [2001] 1 Sri LR 1 at 5 Mark Fernando (J) held, "while powers in respect of education have been devolved to Provincial Councils, those powers must be exercised in conformity with national policy. Once national policy has been duly formulated in respect of any subject there cannot be any conflicting provincial policy on the same subject."

When considering the material already discussed in this judgment, I hold that the Petitioners before this Court were successful in establishing the violation of their fundamental rights guaranteed under Article 12 (1) of the Constitution. Neither the Petitioners nor the 7th Respondent who filed an affidavit before this Court had been able to produce the impugned decision but it is admitted that a small group of Co-operative Inspectors belonging to the Western Provincial Council were placed at a higher salary scale based on a decision said to have taken by the Board of Ministers of the Western Provincial Council and approved by the Governor, which is implemented by the 7th and 8th Respondents.

In the said circumstances, I hold that the 1st to the 7th Respondents and the 8th Respondent have acted in violation of the Petitioners' fundamental rights guaranteed under Article 12 (1) of the Constitution.

We further direct the said Respondents or their successors to take necessary steps to alleviate the effects caused to the Petitioners by the impugned decision arrived in violation of the fundamental rights guaranteed under Article 12 (1) of the Constitution.

This judgment relates to an Application filed by the Petitioner in terms of Articles 17 read with Article 126 of the Constitution. Following the Application being supported, the Supreme Court granted leave to proceed in terms of Articles 12(1) and 14(1)(g) of the Constitution.

1. Introduction

Through this Application, the Petitioner – Vavuniya Solar Power (Pvt.) Ltd. complained to this Court that its fundamental rights guaranteed under Article 12(1) of the Constitution – the right to equality and equal protection of the law, and Article 14(1)(g) of the Constitution – the freedom to engage in any lawful occupation, profession, trade, business or enterprise, were infringed by the 1st and 2nd Respondents.

Albeit brief, the complaint of the Petitioner is that in April 2012 it presented to the 2nd Respondent – Sri Lanka Sustainable Energy Authority (hereinafter sometimes referred to as "the SLSEA"), an Application seeking approval to commission and operate a solar power electricity generation plant in Vavuniya. In May 2016, provisional approval for the project was granted by the 2nd Respondent. However, subsequently, as a result of a 'Letter of Intent' not being granted by the 1st Respondent – Ceylon Electricity Board (hereinafter sometimes referred to as "the CEB") indicating its intent to purchase electricity generated from the proposed plant, the Petitioner company did not receive the permit applied for from the 2nd Respondent. The Petitioner's position is that in view of the 'provisional approval' it received from the 2nd Respondent, it entertained a 'legitimate expectation' that it will receive a 'Letter of Intent' from the 1st Respondent (as it had previously obtained 'grid interconnection concurrence' from the 1st Respondent and had complied with all the other conditions laid down in the 'provisional approval') and thereafter, a permit be issued in terms of section 18 of the Sri Lanka Sustainable Energy Authority Act, to enable it to proceed with the project, commission the electricity generation plant in order to provide electricity to the national grid by selling such electricity to the CEB, and thereby secure its commercial objectives.

The position of the 1st Respondent – CEB is that in view of an amendment introduced to the Sri Lanka Electricity Act in 2013, it became no longer possible to issue a 'Letter of Intent' to the Petitioner.

Thus, it is to be noted that this is a matter that relates directly to the 1st Respondent – CEB and the 2nd Respondent – SLSEA. Though not a Respondent, this matter also indirectly relates to the functioning of the Public Utilities Commission of Sri Lanka (hereinafter sometimes referred to as "the PUCSL").

2. Applicable legislative framework and legal principles

Particularly as the area of statutory law relevant to this matter argued before the Supreme Court is not frequently referred to in judgments of this Court, this judgment will commence upon a consideration of the applicable provisions of the Sri Lanka Sustainable Energy Authority Act, No. 35 of 2007 (hereinafter sometimes referred to as "the SLSEA Act") and the Sri Lanka Electricity Act, No. 20 of 2009 (hereinafter sometimes referred to as "the SLE Act") as amended by Act No. 31 of 2013.

2.1 Sri Lanka Sustainable Energy Authority Act

The Sri Lanka Sustainable Energy Authority Act No. 35 of 2007, came into operation on 1st October 2007. The SLSEA is a body corporate that has been established under the SLSEA Act, No. 35 of 2007.

The SLSEA has been vested by the Act with the objects of inter-alia (i) identifying, assessing and developing renewable energy resources with a view to enhancing energy security and thereby deriving economic and social benefits to the country, and (ii) by promoting security, reliability and cost-effectiveness of energy delivery to the country by development and analysis of policy and related information management.

The SLSEA Act is an important statute aimed at creating necessary legal infrastructure for the purpose of harnessing and regulating the use of the available renewable energy resources in the country, and thereby enhancing and protecting energy security of Sri Lanka. That objective is sought to be achieved by the development and optimal utilization of renewable energy resources in the country, enabling sustainable development of energy generation, which is a much-needed essential resource not only for daily living, but for economic development of the country, as well.

With the view to achieving the objectives of the SLSEA Act, the SLSEA has been vested with certain powers and functions. In terms of section 13, the Authority has been vested with the responsibility of conserving and managing all renewable energy resources in Sri Lanka, and to take all necessary measures to promote and develop renewable energy resources, with the view to obtaining the maximum economic utilization of those resources.

The management and the administration of the SLSEA (2nd Respondent) has been vested by the Act in its Board of Management [vide section 3(1)]. The Board has been vested with the powers, duties and functions of inter-alia developing a conducive environment for encouraging and promoting investments in renewable energy development in the country, including the (i) development of guidelines on renewable energy projects and disseminating them among prospective investors, and (ii) development of guidelines in collaboration with relevant state agencies, on evaluation and approval of on-grid and off-grid renewable energy projects [vide section 5(c)]. In pursuance of that duty conferred on the SLSEA in terms of section 5(c) to create awareness and issue guidelines, the Authority has inter-alia issued a publication entitled "A guide to the project approval process for on-grid renewable project development" with the description "Policies and procedures to secure approvals to develop a renewable energy project to supply electricity to the national grid". A copy of this publication was produced by the Petitioner marked "P2C".

The Board has also been empowered to entertain Applications for carrying on on-grid and off-grid renewable energy projects [vide section 5(c)(iii)]. A template (prescribed form) of the Application Form to be submitted in this regard to the SLSEA has been issued by the Minister in terms of section 67 of the Act, and published in Government Gazette No. 1599/6 dated 27th April 2009 (produced by the Petitioner marked "P2A").

This template has been amended by Gazette No. 1705/22 dated 10th May 2011 (produced by the Petitioner marked "P2B").

The SLSEA Act stipulates that no person shall engage in or carry on an on-grid renewable energy project or the generation and supply of power within a 'Development Area' (the entire country has been declared a 'Development Area'), except under the authority of a permit issued in that behalf by the SLSEA [vide section 16(1)]. Thus, generation of electricity through an on-grid renewable project such as the project proposed by the Petitioner can be carried out only with the legal entitlement emanating from a permit issued by the 2nd Respondent in terms of section 18(2)(a) of the Act.

A person who is desirous of engaging in and carrying out an on-grid renewable energy project within a 'Development Area', is required to submit an Application to the Director-General of the SLSEA in the prescribed form, together with certain documents specified in the Act [vide section 16(2)]. At the time relevant to this Application, the prescribed form of the Application to be submitted was contained in the Gazette notification dated 10th May 2011 issued by the Minister of Power and Energy in terms of section 16(2) ("P2B"), which has amended the previous format of the Application form contained in the Gazette notification issued by the Minister, dated 27th April 2009 ("P2A").

Following the receipt of a perfected Application from a project proponent seeking a permit to commission an electricity generation plant using renewable energy, the Act requires the Director-General of the SLSEA to register the Application and issue a registration number [vide section 16(3)]. Further, the SLSEA shall carry out preliminary screening, and in consultation with the CEB, submit the Application to the Project Approving Committee (hereinafter sometimes referred to as 'the PAC').

The practice followed by the SLSEA is that prior to submitting an Application to the PAC, the SLSEA obtains grid concurrence of the CEB. This stage is referred to as the stage where the SLSEA obtains from the CEB, 'grid interconnection concurrence'. This process involves the CEB examining the proposed project and considering whether it would be technically feasible for the CEB to receive into the national electricity grid, electricity generated by the project. It is important to note that the 1st Respondent – CEB is represented at the PAC and hence is in a position to take cognizance of the submission of an Application by a project proponent and also submit its views at a meeting of the PAC towards the decision of the 2nd Respondent – SLSEA on whether or not 'provisional approval' should be granted to a particular applicant.

The PAC is an entity recognized by the Act and in terms of section 10, comprises of a number of ex-officio officials, including the General-Manager of the CEB and representatives of several other statutory bodies of the State performing functions relevant to renewable energy projects. It is the PAC that is empowered to, on behalf of the SLSEA grant 'provisional approval' and 'final approval' to an Application seeking authorization (a permit) to commission a renewable energy based on-grid electricity generation plant.

Should the PAC decide to grant 'provisional approval' for a particular project, it may require the applicant to submit within 6 months 'such documents and other information as shall be prescribed for the purpose'. The afore-stated period of 6 months granted to comply with this requirement can upon a request being made by the applicant, be extended by the Director-General of the SLSEA up to a maximum of a further 6 months [vide section 17(3)]. If within the initial period of 6 months or the extended period of 1 year from the original grant of provisional approval, the documents and other information referred to above (referred to above as 'conditions and information' and contained in the provisional approval) are not submitted, the provisional approval granted shall stand automatically cancelled [vide section 17(4)].

Once such conditions have been fulfilled by a project proponent, the PAC may grant 'provisional approval' to such an Application seeking authorization (a permit) to implement an on-grid renewable energy project, which decision shall be communicated to the applicant by the Director General of the SLSEA [vide section 17(2)(a)]. Once the necessary documents (including the authorizations specified in the provisional approval) referred to above are obtained by the applicant and submitted to the Director-General of the SLSEA, he shall forthwith place such material before the PAC, enabling the committee (PAC) to consider granting final approval for the proposed project [vide section 18]. In terms of section 18(2), the PAC is empowered to either approve or refuse the Application for a permit. It is only if the PAC approves the Application, that the SLSEA shall issue a permit to the applicant. If issued by the SLSEA, a permit will be initially valid for a period of 20 years. This would be, provided the developer commences the project and generates electricity within two years of being issued with the permit [vide section 18(4)].

2.2 Sri Lanka Electricity Act

There is another law, the provisions of which are equally relevant to this matter. That is the Sri Lanka Electricity Act, No. 20 of 2009. This law has been enacted for the regulation of the generation, distribution, transmission and supply of electricity. The provisions of the SLE Act relate to all types of electricity generation plants, including those powered by (i) non-renewable energy sources from which electricity may be generated, such as petroleum, and (ii) renewable energy sources from which electricity may be generated such as water, solar, wind and bio-mass. In terms of section 2(1) of the SLE Act, the administration of the provisions of the Act shall vest in the PUCSL.

An examination of the provisions of the SLE Act reveals that, a permit issued by the SLSEA in terms of section 18 of the SLSEA Act by itself would not confer sufficient legal authorisation for a project proponent to commission an on-grid renewable energy project and commence generating electricity. A project proponent needs to obtain an electricity generation license from the PUCSL (referred to as a 'generation license'), which the PUCSL is entitled to issue in terms of section 7(1) of the SLE Act. However, it is important to note that, in so far as renewable energy-based electricity generation plants are concerned, a condition precedent to applying to the PUCSL seeking an electricity generation license, is the obtaining of a permit from the SLSEA, issued under section 18 of the SLSEA Act. Thus, it would be seen that the law contemplates a two-tiered process for the grant of approval for an on-grid renewable energy-based electricity generation project. First, approval by the SLSEA and a permit. Secondly, approval by the PUCSL and a license. As was shown earlier, the CEB is involved in the grant of 'provisional approval' and 'final approval' and a permit by the SLSEA under section 18 of the SLSEA Act. As would be seen hereinafter, the CEB becomes once again involved in the grant of a generation license by the PUCSL. Thus, approval by the CEB is critical.

According to section 7(1) of the SLE Act, no person shall (a) generate, (b) transmit, (c) supply and or (d) distribute electricity for the purpose of giving a supply to any premises or enabling a supply to be given to any premises, unless he is authorized to do so by virtue of a license granted under the Act or is exempted from obtaining a license under section 10. Section 9 stipulates the category of persons who is entitled to apply for a license. However, in terms of section 9(2) of the Act, only the CEB shall be eligible to apply for and obtain a license for the transmission of electricity. In that regard, the CEB is referred to as the sole 'transmission licensee'. Further, section 9(1) inter-alia provides who would be entitled to apply for an electricity generation license. Similarly, in terms of section 9(3), only the CEB and three other categories are entitled to apply for and obtain a license for the distribution of electricity.

In terms of section 13 of the SLE Act, it is the PUCSL that is empowered to grant electricity generation, distribution and transmission licenses. However, as prescribed by sections 9 (1A) and 10 of the Act, the PUCSL may exempt certain persons or categories of persons from the requirement of obtaining a license to generate or distribute electricity. Upon an Application being made to it, having taken into consideration the manner in which or the quantity of electricity likely to be generated or distributed by such person or category of persons, the PUCSL may grant an exemption to such person or category.

Section 43 of the SLE Act provides a statutory scheme to be adhered to in relation to the procuring or operating a new electricity generation plant or the extension of electricity generation capacity of an existing electricity generation plant.

Section 43 of Act No. 20 of 2009 was amended by section 13 of the Sri Lanka Electricity (Amendment) Act No. 31 of 2013. It repealed the original section and caused the substitution therefor a new section. It is pertinent to note that in terms of section 21 of the SLE (Amendment) Act, No. 31 of 2013, the amendments made to the principal enactment by the amending Act shall be deemed for all purposes to have come into force, on 8th April, 2009. That is the date on which the principal enactment (SLE Act, No. 20 of 2009) had following its enactment been certified by the Speaker and thereby came into operation. Thus, the amendments introduced by provisions of Act No. 31 of 2013 including the amendment to section 43 (which is described in detail below), should be deemed to have been in force right from the beginning of Act No. 20 of 2009 having come into operation.

[I am acutely conscious that by the SLE (Amendment) Act No. 16 of 2022, the once amended section 43 was re-amended. Act No. 16 of 2022 was certified by the Speaker and came into operation on 15th June, 2022. However, as that amendment has no relevance to the manner in which the Application presented by the Petitioner for a solar power electricity generation permit was processed by the 1st and the 2nd Respondents, I do not propose to deal with provisions of Act No. 16 of 2022 for the purpose of determining the lawfulness or otherwise of the impugned conduct of the Respondents. [The said amendment does not have a bearing on the findings reached by this Court or to the reliefs ordered.]

According to the original section 43 of the Sri Lanka Electricity Act, subject to section 8, no person shall procure or operate a new electricity generation plant or extend the electricity generation capacity of any existing plant, except as authorized by the PUCSL [Section 43(1)]. According to section 43(2), with the approval of the PUCSL, a transmission licensee, shall in accordance with its license and guidelines relating to the procurement of electricity as may be prescribed by the PUCSL, call for tenders to provide a new electricity generation plant or to extend the generation capacity of an existing generation plant, as specified in a notice calling for tenders. According to section 43(3), a transmission licensee shall with the consent of the PUCSL, from amongst the persons who have submitted technically acceptable tenders in response to such notice, select a person to provide at least cost, the new generation plant or to extend the generation capacity of an existing generation plant specified in that notice.

As stated above, Act No. 31 of 2013, amongst others repealed section 43 of Act No. 20 of 2009, and substituted therefor a new section. In terms of section 43 (as introduced by Act No. 31 of 2013), no person shall proceed to procure or operate a new electricity generation plant or engage in the expansion of the electricity generation capacity of an existing plant, otherwise than in accordance with provisions of that section. In terms of section 43(1) read with section 43(2), to proceed with the procuring or operating of any new electricity generation plant or to expand the electricity generation capacity of an existing plant, a transmission licensee shall submit a proposal to that effect to the PUCSL, for its written approval. The proposal should be based on the future demand forecast of electricity as specified in the 'Least Cost Long-term Generation Expansion Plan' (as defined in section 43(2) of the Act) of such transmission licensee. However, in terms of the proviso to section 43(2), acting in terms of the afore-stated requirement contained in section 43(2) shall not be necessary, where on the day prior to the date of the coming into force of Act No. 31 of 2013 (that being 8th April 2009) - (a) the Cabinet of Ministers had granted approval for the development of a new generation plant or to expand the generation capacity of an existing plant, or (b) the SLSEA had issued a permit in terms of section 18 of the SLSEA Act to generate electricity through renewable energy resources, and as a consequence, the development of a new generation plant or expansion of an existing plant has become necessary. In these two situations, the transmission licensee will be entitled to obtain the approval from the PUCSL, without complying with section 43(2) of the SLE Act (as amended).

In terms of section 43(4) (as amended) of the SLE Act, after obtaining the approval of the PUCSL under section 43(2), the transmission licensee (CEB) shall in accordance with the conditions of its license and applicable rules made by the Commission relating to procurement, call for tenders by notice published in the Gazette to develop the envisaged new generation plant or for the expansion of the generation capacity of an existing plant. However, in terms of the proviso to section 43(4), subject to section 43(6), this requirement of calling for tenders shall not be applicable in respect of any new generation plant or to the expansion of any existing plant that is proposed to be developed, which falls into one of the following situations:

(a) in accordance with the 'Least Cost Long-Term Generation Expansion Plan' duly approved by the Commission and which has received the approval of the Cabinet of Ministers on the date preceding the date of the coming into operation of the Act and is required to be operated at least cost, or

(b) on a permit issued by the SLSEA and required to be operated at the standard tariff and is governed by a 'Standardised Power Purchase Agreement' (as defined in section 43(8) of the Act) approved by the Cabinet of Ministers, or

(c) in compliance with the 'Least Cost Long Term Generation Expansion Plan' duly approved by the Commission for which the approval of the Cabinet of Ministers has been received on the basis of - (i) an offer received from a foreign government to the Government of Sri Lanka for which the approval of the Cabinet of Ministers has been received, or (ii) to meet any emergency situation as determined by the Cabinet of Ministers during a national calamity or a long term forced outage of a major electricity generation plant, where a protracted bid inviting process outweigh the potential benefit or procuring emergency capacity required to be provided by any person at least cost.

The procedure to be followed after calling for tenders is provided for in section 43(5). It would be noted that the procedure contained in section 43 of the SLE Act, entails the following of a competitive procedure and the transmission licensee (CEB) recommending to the PUCSL the person best capable of developing the new generation plant or the expansion of the generation capacity of an existing plant, selling electrical energy or electricity generation capacity at least cost, and meeting the requirements of the 'Least Cost Long Term Generation Expansion Plan' of the transmission licensee (CEB). This recommendation should be made along with the draft 'Power Purchase Agreement'.

Section 43(6) provides that, (a) notwithstanding an exemption from the submission of a tender is granted to any person under section 43(4), or (b) a new electricity generation plant or an extension of an existing plant is being developed in accordance with the 'Least Cost Long Term Generation Expansion Plan' by a person who has obtained the approval of the Cabinet of Ministers (which approval was in force at the time of the coming into force of the Act), the transmission licensee shall engage in negotiations with such person and upon satisfying itself of the competence of such person to develop a generation plant and sell electricity at least cost, forward its recommendations along with the draft power purchase agreement to the PUCSL.

According to section 43(7), upon receipt of a recommendation either in terms of section 43(5) or 43(6) of the Act, the Commission shall grant its approval at its earliest convenience, provided it is satisfied that the recommended price for the purchase of electricity meets the principle of least cost and the requirements of the Least Cost Long Term Generation Expansion Plan and accepted technical and economical parameters of the transmission licensee.

2.3 Legitimate Expectations

In view of the importance placed by learned counsel for the Petitioner on the doctrine of 'legitimate expectations' and the response thereto displayed by the learned Solicitor General for the Respondents, incorporating into this judgement a somewhat detailed description of the doctrine is in my view necessary. The need to do so is augmented by some degree of ambiguity that seem to permeate across certain judgments of our Courts regarding the nature, scope, applicability and limitations of the doctrine of legitimate expectations and more particularly pertaining to the judicial response to a claim for relief based on the sub-doctrine of 'substantive legitimate expectations'. Thus, I propose to devote the following lengthy description of the doctrine, mainly for the purpose of highlighting the importance of the doctrine as a ground on which injustice emanating from unfairness and abuse of power can be remedied and as a legal justification for this judgment. The expansion of the length of this judgment to what it is, should therefore be justifiably excused.

2.3.1 Introduction to the doctrine of Legitimate Expectations and the underlying policy

The doctrine of legitimate expectations is founded upon the principle that an expectation generated due to representations made by or regular practices (procedures) of a public body, should be respected by such public body, and it should conduct itself in accordance with such representations made by itself and its own practices. Justice demands that a public authority be prevented from frustrating an expectation generated by it occasioned either by sudden changes to its governing policy or due to extraneous or collateral reasons. This concept also relates to the extent to which a public authority's administrative power and discretionary authority may be limited by law for the purpose of ensuring fairness. The imposition of such limitations would be justifiable due to (a) the representations made by a public authority to the public at large and more particularly to the persons who seek to either be regulated by or transact with such public authority, as to how it will act in the future, and or (b) its own previous related practices or procedures. In other words, the doctrine of legitimate expectations is a means of keeping a public body bound by its own representations and practices.

The recognition of this doctrine is founded upon the policy of the law of recognizing and protecting legitimate expectations, arising out of a public authority having undertaken expressly or impliedly, through representations made by itself or by its own practices, to take decisions and or conduct itself in a particular manner in the future. In effect, this doctrine requires public authorities to comply with its own undertakings, the failure of which gives rise to judicial review resulting in judicial pronouncements being made requiring the public authority to conduct itself in the prescribed manner, decide as directed by court and or sanctions being made for having frustrated legitimate expectations.

In R v. Secretary of State for Home Department, ex parte Behluli [(1998) Imm. AR 407, at 415] Beldam LJ, observed that "although legitimate expectation may in the past have been categorized as a catchphrase not be elevated into a principle, or as an easy cover for a general complaint about unfairness, it has nevertheless achieved an important place in developing the law of administrative fairness. It is an expectation which, although not amounting to an enforceable legal right, is founded on a reasonable assumption which is capable of being protected in public law. It enables a citizen to challenge a decision which deprives him of an expectation founded on a reasonable basis that his claim would be dealt with in a particular way".

Protecting expectations generated by public authorities through the doctrine of legitimate expectations and judicial insistence that expectations so generated be complied with by the relevant public authority is also fundamental to good governance. In the long-term, it would be dangerous to permit public authorities to freely renege on their undertakings, as it would pave the way to public authorities functioning in an unreasonable or arbitrary manner, or otherwise abusing power conferred on them. The public's trust and confidence in public authorities can be protected by requiring public authorities to comply with their own undertakings.

The doctrine of public trust inter-alia requires that public authorities who have been vested with statutorily conferred power to discharge public functions vested in them for the benefit of the sovereign of the Republic – the public at large, and for no other purpose. Public authorities must discharge such functions in accordance with the law and they must abide by the expectations generated by their own representations and practices. In a Republic, the trust conferred by the sovereign public on public authorities must be respected, unless there are justiciable reasons developed objectively, diligently and in good faith for the purpose of giving effect to wider public interests, that necessitate deviating from the previous policy based upon which the previous representations had been made.

The rationale of the doctrine of legitimate expectations is also that if a public authority has induced a person to rely upon its representations or practices on the premise that such reliance was a real possibility and would bear fruit, it is under a fiduciary duty to act in such a way that the reliance placed by such person will not result in detrimental outcomes to such person, who in good faith had placed reliance on the representations of a public authority and its practices. Public authorities must be required by law to honour expectations created by its own representations and practice. If unable to do so, the public authority concerned should compensate the person affected by having placed reliance on such representations and practices.

From the perspectives of the all-important and fundamental feature of our Republican Constitution – the rule of law, for the following reasons, recognition and the enforcement of the doctrine of legitimate expectations make good sense:

(i) Respect for an expectation created by a public authority makes the exercise of discretion by such authority more predictable. The rule of law presupposes the enforcement of formal equality. Without formal equality, the enforcement of the law can become arbitrary, unreasonable, unfair and uncertain. Thus, like cases must be decided upon in a like manner, by the correct and consistent application of the law.

(ii) The rule of law also presupposes a certain measure of consistency and uniformity in the application and the enforcement of the law. The law should provide for administrative action that is based upon a mix of short-term exigencies and long-term considerations. An individual's planning and preparation becomes difficult, if not impossible, if policy and procedure are changed too often or abruptly, and public authorities conduct themselves in an inconsistent manner and contrary to their own representations, undertakings and previous conduct.

(iii) The rule of law also demands that a person's legitimate expectation should not be frustrated without a justiciable cause generated by the desire to serve wider public interests.

Thus, from the perspective of the rule of law, recognition of the doctrine of legitimate expectations gives rise to predictability and certainty through consistency and uniformity, formal equality, reasonableness, fairness, and non-retroactivity, which as I have stated above are features of the rule of law. Therefore, this doctrine supports the recognition and enforcement of the rule of law.

However, it must also be noted that public authorities must be vested with discretionary authority with regard to the exercise of power vested in them. Without discretion, public authorities would not be able to successfully exercise power for the purpose for which such power has been vested in them. Exercise of discretion may entail changes to the applicable policy and criteria and the procedure to be followed in the exercise of power. In the circumstances, the exercise of discretion which results in certain changes to be made to policy and procedure, can create tension between 'administrative autonomy' and 'legal certainty'. There can be situations where a public authority may have to frustrate an expectation it has generated, due to justiciable reasons which are in the wider public interest. In such situations, it would be the duty of the public institutions to explain reasons for the deviation from the expectation it had generated and proceed to satisfy court regarding the lawfulness of the change and its justiciability. Prior to the change in policy, criteria and procedure, the relevant public authority should have informed those who may have by that time had a legitimate expectation that the previous policy, criteria and procedure would be applied, of the intended change, and afforded them an opportunity of being heard. Public authorities must bear in mind that, as held by Justice Dr. A.R.B. Amerasinghe in Dayarathna and Others v Minister of Health and Indigenous Medicine and Others [(1999) 1 Sri L.R. 393], although the Executive ought not in the exercise of its discretion be restricted to cause a change of policy, a public authority is not entirely free to overlook the existence of a legitimate expectation it has created.

The importance of legal certainty is for the benefit of not only the individual to whom the representation has been made, but also to the public at large. Further, maintenance of legal certainty is in the interest of public institutions as well, as it would generate public confidence in such institutions.

Representations by public authorities may create expectations regarding the criteria that would be applied and the manner in which it would apply such criteria when exercising discretionary authority. Representations by public authorities may also relate to assurances of specific outcomes. Respect to such expectations makes the exercise of discretion and its outcome predictable, thus, creating a degree of certainty with regard to possible outcomes.

Recognizing the doctrine of legitimate expectations is also a means of ensuring administrative fairness. It curtails the opportunity public authorities would otherwise have, to decide on matters subjectively, or in an arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable manner. Therefore, the exercise of administrative discretion is required by law to be subject to the legal duty cast on public authorities to honour legitimate expectations generated by it through its own representations and practices.

The principle of legitimate expectations is also supportive of administrative efficacy and legitimacy of the exercise of administrative power. The enforcement of statutorily conferred power is likely to be perceived as being legitimate, thus justifiable and in public interest, if exercised in a way that recognizes legitimate expectations. Thus, the recognition of the principle of legitimate expectations is in the best interests of not only individuals who transact with such public authorities and the general public, but also of the administration, itself.

2.3.2 Evolution of the doctrine of legitimate expectations and its present status

Though the actual origins of the doctrine of legitimate expectations can be traced to the 20th century developments of German administrative law, the formal recognition of this doctrine by English administrative law can be traced back to Schmidt and Another v. Secretary for Home Affairs [(1969) 1 All ER 904]. In that case, Lord Denning MR responding to an allegation that the Home Secretary had, without affording a student a fair hearing, refused an extension of a temporary permit previously granted to him to remain in the United Kingdom, observed that, the question of being entitled in law to a hearing prior to a decision being taken, depends on whether or not the claimant had some right or interest or a 'legitimate expectation' that a fair hearing would be afforded before a decision was taken. He further observed that, it would not be fair to take a decision without affording the person concerned a formal and fair hearing enabling him to make representations on his behalf. However, in his judgment, Lord Denning did not define the scope of the doctrine of legitimate expectations and the basis for it. Lord Denning also did not distinguish the doctrine from the right to a fair hearing (compliance with the rules of natural justice) pertaining to a right or a protectable interest.

In Regina v. Liverpool Corporation Ex Parte Liverpool Taxi Fleet Operators' Association and Another [(1972) 2QB 299], the Queen's Bench held that it was unfair to increase the number of taxi licenses without consulting the Taxi Fleet Operators' Association, as it was contrary to the earlier practice adopted by the Liverpool Corporation. In Attorney General of Hong Kong v. Ng Yuen Shiu [(1983) 2 AC 629], the Privy Council quashed a deportation order issued on a purported illegal immigrant on the footing that, taking the impugned decision without affording the immigrant an opportunity to present his case, was not in the 'interests of good administration'. In this matter too, the Court considered the need for the public authority to have afforded a fair hearing, independent of the duty to comply with the rules of natural justice.

In the leading case of Council of Civil Service Unions and others v. Minister for the Civil Service, [(1985) AC 374], famously known as the 'GCHQ Case', the issue confronted by the House of Lords, was whether the claimants were entitled to a 'legitimate expectation' of consultation, prior to a decision being taken by the Prime Minister to withdraw the entitlement of GCHQ employees to be members of national trade unions. It was not in dispute that prior to the impugned decision being taken, such a consultation process did not take place, notwithstanding on previous occasions such consultations having taken place.

Lord Fraser observed that a legitimate or reasonable expectation may arise either from an express promise given on behalf of a public authority or from the existence of a regular practice which the claimant can reasonably expect to continue. It is the latter criterion that was held to be applicable to the instant case. In the circumstances, Lord Fraser proceeded to hold that the test to be applied is whether the practice of prior consultation with regard to significant changes to the conditions of service of the employees was so well established by 1983, that it would be unfair or inconsistent with good administration for the government to have departed from that practice in this case. Lord Fraser noted that ever since the establishment of the GCHQ in 1947, prior consultation had been an invariable rule. Thus, if there was no question of national security involved, the appellants would have had a legitimate expectation that the Prime Minister accords them a consultation before changing the conditions of employment.

Lord Diplock observed that to qualify for judicial review, the impugned decision must have consequences which affect some person other than the decision-maker, though it can affect the decision-maker as well. It must affect the other person (claimant), either (a) by altering rights or obligations of that person which are enforceable by or against him in private law, or (b) deprive him of some benefit or advantage which either (i) he had in the past been permitted by the decision-maker to enjoy and which he can legitimately be expected to be permitted to continue until some rational ground for withdrawing it had been communicated to him, and he had been given an opportunity to comment, or (ii) he has received an assurance from the decision-maker that the benefit or advantage will not be withdrawn without giving him first an opportunity of advancing reasons for contending that they should not be withdrawn. [It is category (b) that can be referred to as giving rise to an 'legitimate expectation'.]

In R v Secretary of State for Home Department ex parte Khan [(1985) 1 All ER 40], the court indirectly recognized the sub-doctrine of substantive legitimate expectations. It held that, the Secretary of State should not be allowed to frustrate the applicant's legitimate expectation that, upon fulfillment of the stipulated conditions discretion would be exercised in his favour, without a hearing being given, unless there is an overriding public interest to have changed the policy.

Therefore, it is observable that it is the sub-doctrine of procedural legitimate expectations that was first recognized and developed in English Law. According to what has been developed by courts under this sub-doctrine, where a public authority has, acting in terms of the law, given an assurance to the claimant that it will afford him a hearing before a policy is changed as regards a matter that affects him, or made known its policy with regard to that matter or has an established practice of affording a hearing before a change of policy is effected, that claimant will entertain a procedural legitimate expectation that the public authority will give him reasonable and adequate opportunity to make representations and be heard before it changes its policy. A court may, by judicial review, enforce such a legitimate expectation other than in limited circumstances such as in instances where considerations of national security override the expectation of being consulted or heard [such as in the GCHQ case].

The sub-doctrine of substantive legitimate expectations on the other hand, emerged and developed more recently in English Law. In R v Secretary of State for the Home Department ex parte Ruddock and others [1987) 2 All ER 518], upon considering a long line of English cases, the court concluded that the need to ensure fairness had resulted in the recognition of a doctrine of substantive legitimate expectations. Justice Taylor's words in this regard were as follows:

> "…I conclude that the doctrine of legitimate expectation in essence imposes a duty to act fairly. While most of the cases are concerned…with a right to be heard, I do not think the doctrine is so confined. Indeed, in a case where ex hypothesi there is no right to be heard, it may be thought the more important to fair dealing that a promise or undertaking given by a minister as to how he will proceed should be kept. Of course, such promise or undertaking must not conflict with his statutory duty or his duty, as here, in the exercise of a prerogative power."

In R v Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, ex parte Hamble (Offshore) Fisheries Ltd [(1995) 2 All ER 714], the court adopted the approach taken by Justice Taylor in ex parte Ruddock, and held that the sub-doctrine of substantive legitimate expectations enabled a court to uphold a substantive legitimate expectation on broader grounds, than being confined to determining whether a public authority's decision to change its policy was unreasonable in the Wednesbury sense. Justice Sedley held as follows:

> "…The balance must in the first instance be for the policy-maker to strike; but if the outcome is challenged by way of judicial review, I do not consider that the court's criterion is the bare rationality of the policy-maker's conclusion. Where the policy is for the policy-maker alone, the fairness of his or her decision not to accommodate reasonable expectations which the policy will thwart remains the court's concern."

However, the case of R v Secretary of State for the Home Department and another, ex parte Hargreaves and others [(1997) 1 All ER 397], is said to have cast the existence of substantive legitimate expectations into doubt. It was held that the discretionary power of the Secretary of State to change his policy decision could not be challenged by judicial review, as it would amount to a fettering of discretion. It was held that it was not for the court determine the fairness of the Secretary of State's actions, as doing so would amount to looking into the merits of his decision. It was further held that the act of weighing and balancing between individual and public interest is for the decision-maker and that the court could only intervene where it could be shown that the Secretary's decision was unreasonable or perverse in the Wednesbury sense.

The sub-doctrine of substantive legitimate expectations once again gained momentum following the Court of Appeal decision in R v North and East Devon Health Authority ex parte Coughlan [(2000) All ER 850]. In recognizing the sub-doctrine of substantive legitimate expectations, it was held that "where the court considers that a lawful promise or practice has induced a legitimate expectation of a benefit which is substantive, not simply procedural, authority now establishes that here too, the court will in a proper case decide whether to frustrate the expectation is so unfair that to take a new and different course will amount to an abuse of power".

It was also held that once it is recognized that conduct which is an abuse of power is contrary to law, its existence must be for the court to determine, and that review in such instance is not limited to the test of Wednesbury unreasonableness. Ex parte Coughlan is regarded as a welcome development in settling the controversy over substantive legitimate expectations in English law. The subsequent decisions have followed this case in determining matters pertaining to substantive legitimate expectations.

The developments in English law on the doctrine of legitimate expectations have influenced the Sri Lankan administrative law jurisprudence on legitimate expectations. For instance, the earliest cases on legitimate expectations such as Dayaratne v Bandara [(1983) BLR vol. 1, part 1 p.23], Sundarkaran v Bharathi [(1989) 1 Sri.LR 46], Dissanayake v Kaleel [(1993) 2 Sri.LR 135] and Multinational Property Development Ltd v Urban Development Authority [(1996) 2 Sri.LR 51] have recognized and ensured the protection of procedural legitimate expectations.

With the increased recognition in English Law of the sub-doctrine of substantive legitimate expectations, our courts also have recognized the protection of substantive legitimate expectations. The first direct reference in Sri Lanka to 'legitimate expectations' of a substantive character is seen in the judgment of Sharvananda CJ in Mowjood v. Pussadeniya [(1987) 2 Sri LR 287] where the court held that the Petitioner – Appellants have a legitimate expectation that they would not be evicted from their present houses except after following the procedure stipulated in the Act and the grant of 'proper' alternate accommodation (as opposed to mere alternate accommodation). Court approached judicial review of the notification issued by the Commissioner of National Housing from the perspective of abuse of power. Court recognized that the Petitioner – Appellant had both a legitimate expectation as regards the procedure the Commission would follow as well as the nature of the decision he would take, thus, recognizing both procedural and substantive legitimate expectations.

A more progressive approach towards substantive legitimate expectations was adopted by this Court in the case of Dayarathna v Minister of Health and Indigenous Medicine [(1999) 1 Sri.LR 393], which followed the English case of R v Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, ex parte Hamble (Offshore) Fisheries Ltd. In his judgment, Justice Amerasinghe expressed the view that "although the executive ought not in the exercise of its discretion to be restricted so as to hamper or prevent change of policy, yet it is not entirely free to overlook the existence of a legitimate expectation. Each case must depend on its circumstances". Justice Amerasinghe further observed that "the Court's delicate and sensitive task is one of weighing genuine public interest against private interests and deciding on the legitimacy of an expectation having regard to the weight it carries in the face of the need for a policy change … The change of policy, in the circumstances, may nevertheless affect the future, having regard to the fact that the legislature and executive are free to formulate and reformulate policy; however, it is the duty of this Court to safeguard the rights and privileges, as well as interests deserving of protection such as those based on legitimate expectations, of individuals."

In Sirimal and others v Board of Directors of the Co-operative Wholesale Establishment and others [(2003) 2 Sri.LR 23], Justice Weerasuriya, while recognizing the fact that "the frontiers of legitimate expectations in Administrative law have been greatly expanded in recent years to admit of a substantive content", followed the narrow approach taken in the English case of *R v Secretary of State for the Home Department and another, ex parte Hargreaves and others, and expressed the view that the protection of a substantive legitimate expectation has to be sought on the more traditional approaches of English Law, i.e. protection in terms of Wednesbury Unreasonableness. He further expressed the view that it is for the decision-maker and not for the court to judge whether that expectation should be protected or whether broader public interest is so strong as to override that expectation. It was held in that case that the court would only intervene if the decision-maker's judgment was perverse or irrational. However, it must be noted that Justice Weerasuriya did not consider the more recent developments in the English Law's jurisprudence on legitimate expectations such as the principles contained in ex parte Coughlan, thus, compelling me to distance myself from the views expressed by Justice Weerasuriya as to the criteria based upon which substantive relief should be granted by court.

In the more recent case of M.R.C.C. Ariyarathne and others v N.K. Illangakoon, Inspector General of Police and others [SC FR 444/2012, SC Minutes of 30.07.2019], Justice Prasanna Jayawardane adopted the wider approach taken in Dayarathna case. His Lordship was of the view that a court is not confined in cases of substantive legitimate expectations, to reviewing the public authority's decision on the traditional test of unreasonableness described in the Wednesbury case. His Lordship identified that the test of Wednesbury unreasonableness is adequate in a case where there is a single exercise of power by a public authority. However, in a case where the petitioner claims a substantive legitimate expectation, there is a dual exercise of power and that his case is linked to both exercises of power. If a court confined itself to the test in Wednesbury, Justice Jayawardena expressed the view that the court would only be reviewing the second exercise of power, by asking whether it is unreasonable in the Wednesbury sense. He held that a court considering judicial review must consider and evaluate both competing interests, i.e. the assurance which created the expectation, and the reasons for the public authority's change of policy or decision which resulted in the negation of that expectation. His view was that considering only one of the two competing interests, would place the court in 'abhorrent realm of inequity'.

The decision in Ariyarathne was followed in the subsequent decisions of this Court on legitimate expectations including in the cases of Chanaka Harsha Talpahewa v Prasad Kariyawasam, Secretary to the Minister of Foreign Affairs and others [SC FR 378/2017, SCM 21.06.2022], and Werage Sunil Jayasekera and others v B.A.P. Ariyaratne, General Manager, Department of Railways [SC FR 64/2014, SCM 05.04.2022].

Therefore, it is seen that the criteria based upon which substantive relief is granted is no longer limited the instances where the claimant can successfully establish that the change of policy on the part of the concerned public authority is so very unreasonable that it satisfies the degree of unreasonableness contemplated in the Wednesbury's case.

2.3.3 Nature of the representation that should have been made or the practice of the public authority that would entitle a person to claim, founded upon the doctrine of legitimate expectations:

In order to obtain relief through judicial review on the footing that a legitimate expectation had arisen, the nature of the representation that should have been made by the public authority should be a promise or an undertaking or its own previous practice, both of which should meet the following principles:

(i) As held in The United Policyholders Group and Others v. The Attorney General of Trinidad and Tobago [(2016) UKPC 17], the representation should be clear, unambiguous and devoid of qualifications.

(ii) As observed by this Court in Pavithra Dananjanie De Alwis v. Anura Edirisinghe, Commissioner General of Examinations and 7 Others [(2011) 1 Sri L.R. 18], the undertaking given by the public authority need not be in written form, and it would be sufficient if the undertaking could be inferred through the surrounding attendant circumstances.

(iii) As held in the GCHQ Case the decision-maker must have made a specific announcement, or given an express promise or a specific undertaking, or impliedly generated a promise or undertaking by its unambiguous and consistent past practice.

(iv) If the representation was in the form of an announcement, promise or an undertaking, it should take the form of (a) a general representation made in rem (to the world at large) or to a specific class of persons, or (b) a specific representation addressed to the claimant or to a group of persons including the claimant who fall into the same category.

(v) A general representation can take the form of a formal announcement, a circular letter, or a statement of policy issued by the public authority concerned. It can also take the form of a publication containing the manner in which it proposes to deal with persons in the category of the claimant, or containing previous decisions or extra-statutory concessions that have been made in the past and will be granted in the future.

(vi) The representation relied upon by the claimant need not have been personally made to him. However, it should relate to the category of persons to whom the claimant belongs. Similarly, the past practice of the public authority need not necessarily be aimed at the claimant. However, the past practice should relate to the category of persons to whom the claimant belongs.

(vii) The claimant should belong to the class of persons to whom the representation made by the decision-maker was reasonably be expected to apply. Whether or not a particular representation by a public authority is to give rise to a legitimate expectation or not, is not to be decided based on the intention of the decision-maker. The question to be determined is whether the representation may reasonably have induced a person within the class of persons to whom it was addressed, to rely on it. It is the context of the representation that is important as opposed to the specific contents thereof.

(viii) The representation should relate to an undertaking or promise of a benefit or an advantage the public authority is expecting to give or a course of action it is expecting to take that would be in the interest of the claimant.

(ix) If the representation was specific to the claimant, it should have been in response to a full and accurate disclosure by the claimant. Thus, the claimant should have received the undertaking or promise after his having made a full and accurate disclosure of all the relevant facts.

(x) As held in Vasana v. Incorporated Council of Legal Education [2004 (1 SLR 154)], the representation made by the public authority, should not be based on a mistake of facts by itself.

(xi) As held in R v. Secretary of State for the Home Department ex parte Ruddock and Others (referred to above) the representation should have been made by officials on behalf of the public authority who had actual or ostensible legal or administrative authority to make such representation.

(xii) A public authority is generally not liable to give effect to unauthorized or unlawful representations made by its officials. If the claimant either knew or had reason to believe that the official who had made the representation did not have authority to make such a representation, or in the circumstances he ought to have known so, the public body will not be bound by such representation.

2.3.4 Detrimental reliance

When a public authority makes representations containing its policy or conducts itself in a particular manner, it is natural that persons who engage with such authority or have dealings relevant to such representations or conduct, would fashion their own conduct placing reliance on such representations or conduct, as the case may be. In that backdrop, when the public authority changes its policy, it may result to the detriment of those who placed reliance on the previous representations or conduct of such public authority. This would result in the frustration of the expectations of those who placed reliance. In other words, placing reliance has been to the detriment of the person who placed such reliance. This is referred to as 'detrimental reliance'. In most cases, it is such detrimental reliance which causes grievance to the claimant, resulting in his complaining to court that he had developed a legitimate expectation founded upon representations made or the past practices of a particular public authority, which was later frustrated by it.

However, in the case of Attorney General of Hong Kong v. Ng Yuen Shiu (referred to above), the Court held that a legitimate expectation may arise even in the absence of a detrimental reliance. Thus, detrimental reliance is not a sine qua non for legitimate expectations to be enforced. Actually, a detrimental reliance can arise only if the claimant knew of representations made or previous practice of the public authority, and if he acted upon the belief that it would continue to be applied. However, if he had no knowledge of previous representations made or past practices of the public authority, the issue of detrimental reliance would not even arise. Nevertheless, it must be borne in mind that by establishing detrimental reliance, the case for 'frustration of a legitimate expectation' can be strengthened and the court will then be more receptive to the claimant. This is seen in Wickremaratne v Jayaratne and another [(2001) 3 Sri L.R. 161], where Justice U. De Z. Gunawardane held as follows:

> "…In this case the petitioner's interest lay in some ultimate benefit which he hoped to attain or possibly retain… It is felt that acting to one's detriment in reliance upon a promise or undertaking given by a public authority or anyone else can strengthen or add to the weight of the legitimate expectation induced thereby, in such a situation, therefore, the counterbalancing public interest should be weightier than in a case where there had been no such detrimental reliance…"

Implications of the representation

In order to successfully claim relief on the basis of a legitimate expectation that has been frustrated, the claimant must establish that the representation made by the public authority or its past conduct generated an 'expectation' which is justiciable in the eyes of the law. As recognized in Desmond Perera and Others v. Karunaratne, Commissioner of National Housing and Others [(1994) 3 Sri L.R. 316], it was observed by the Court of Appeal that establishing that the claimant entertained a 'hope' or 'reasonable hope' was insufficient to successfully claim relief through the doctrine of legitimate expectation. I find myself in agreement with that view. The claimant must establish that he entertained or was entitled to entertain a well-founded expectation justiciable in law.

In R. v. Department of Education and Employment, ex parte Begbie [(2000) 1 WLR 1115], court observed that as the representations cited by the claimant had been made by certain politicians who were not officials of the relevant public authority, and though such representations would have given rise to an 'expectation' as claimed by the claimant, such expectation cannot be recognized as a 'legitimate expectation' which can be protected by law, and therefore, relief cannot be granted founded on the doctrine of legitimate expectations. Quoting from the GCHQ judgment, the court held that "legitimate or reasonable expectation may arise either from an express promise given on behalf of a public authority or from the existence of a regular practice which the claimant can reasonably expect to continue".

In Siriwardana v Seneviratne and others [(2011) 2 Sri.LR 1], Chief Justice Shirani Bandaranayake cited the following extract from the Indian case of India v Hindustan Development Corporation [(1993) 2 SCC 499] to hold that a mere expectation does not amount to it being legally protected:

> "However earnest and sincere a wish, a desire or a hope may be and however confidently one may look to them to be fulfilled, they by themselves cannot amount to an assertible expectation and a mere disappointment does not attract legal consequences…The legitimacy of an expectation can be inferred only if it is founded on the sanction of law or custom or an established procedure followed in natural and regular consequence. Again, it is distinguishable from a mere expectation. Such expectation should be justifiable, legitimate and protectable. Every such legitimate expectation does not by itself fructify into a right and, therefore, it does not amount to a right in a conventional sense."

It would thus be seen that, embodied in the doctrine of legitimate expectations, are three key variables. They are -

(i) a public authority having through representations made by it or by its conduct generated an expectation,

(ii) legitimacy of that expectation, and

(iii) the protection conferred by law on the expectation that had been generated.

As to legitimacy of the expectation arising out of a representation made or past practice of a public authority, the law is concerned only of the expectation the person concerned is entitled to develop, as opposed to the subjective expectation actually entertained in the mind of such person. Thus, the question to be asked is, what was the expectation the person concerned was entitled by law to develop in his mind by the representation or the conduct of the public authority concerned. Once the court identifies the legitimacy of the expectation generated by the public authority, the court needs to identify how that expectation needs to be protected, having regard to the competing interests of protecting discretionary freedom of the public authority versus maintaining legal certainty of its decisions.

2.3.5 Expectations generated through lawful & unlawful representations and practices of public authorities

Expectations attributed to representations and practices of public authorities can relate to two distinct situations. They are, expectations generated through (i) lawful presentations and practices, and (ii) unlawful representations and practices.

2.3.5.1 Expectations generated through lawful representations and practices

When a public authority has generated expectations through lawful representations or practices (which is a reference to situations where the representations or conduct cited by the claimant are lawful / intra-vires the powers of the relevant public authority), whether or not the claimant is entitled to claim a legitimate expectation will be governed by legal principles discussed in the other parts of this judgment under the title 'doctrine of legitimate expectations'.

2.3.5.2 Expectations generated through representations or practices which are unlawful and / or ultra-vires the powers of the public authority

Such expectations may relate to two situations:

(i) Where officials of the public authority concerned who generated the expectation through representations made by them had acted ultra-vires the authority conferred on them by the public authority, made representations which are unlawful, and the public authority now wishes to act intra-vires its legal authority;

(ii) where the public authority had itself acted ultra-vires its authority and made unlawful representations.

A public authority arguing that it did not have lawful authority to make the representations it did (which has given rise to the expectations of the claimant) is unattractive. Allowing a public body to avoid being bound by its own previous representations on that footing seems to be unfair. However, a court cannot compel a public body to do what it is not legally empowered to do. In Rowland v. Environment Agency [2005 Ch 1] , R (Bibi) v. Newnham London Borough Council [(2002) 1 WLR 237] and R (Bloggs 61) v. Secretary of State for the Home Department [(2003) 1 WLR 2724], court made it abundantly clear that the doctrine of legitimate expectations cannot operate so as to extend the powers of a public authority, by rendering enforceable, acts or decisions which are ultra vires the authority of the body itself. In Rowland v. Environment Agency (referred to above) it was held that the fundamental principle is that, a legitimate expectation can only arise on the basis of a lawful promise.

Court cannot order public authorities to fulfil promises which are beyond their powers or unlawful. In the event a court recognizes that a public body has made certain representations which are ultra vires its powers, which have given rise to an expectation, it will not recognize the existence of an enforceable substantive legitimate expectation and therefore will not require the public authority to act contrary to law. Such approach is founded on the following three reasons:

(i) a public body cannot enlarge its powers by making ultra vires representations. Thereby, the principle of legality is respected and thereby, the rule of law;

(ii) requiring a public body not to be bound by its own unlawful representations would facilitate the public body not acting contrary to law. Also, the public body will thereby not be forced to act contrary to law;

(iii) by not requiring a public body to act contrary to law, wider public interests are protected.

However, some amount of protection to unlawfully generated promises may be possible for bona-fide claimants. While a public body cannot be required to do what is legally impossible, it can be required by court to exercise its powers benevolently, so as to respect, as far as legally possible, the expectation generated (engendered) by it. (This is referred to as the 'doctrine of benevolent exercise of power'.) Compensation in lieu of the fulfilment of the unlawfully generated expectation, is one option available. By this approach, on the one hand, public interests in not compelling a public body to do what it is not empowered to do or to act contrary to law, is protected. On the other hand, the private interests of the claimant based on the doctrine of fairness is recognized and protected by ordering the payment of compensation.

2.3.8 Procedural and Substantive Legitimate Expectations

Based on the nature of the representation made or practices and conduct of public authorities and the expectations generated by them, the law recognizes two types of legitimate expectations. They are 'procedural legitimate expectations' and 'substantive legitimate expectations'. If what can be inferred by the representation made or the practices of the public authority is adherence to a particular procedure to be followed when taking a decision, then the court may, through the recognition of the doctrine of 'procedural legitimate expectation', require the public authority concerned to adhere to such procedure that was undertaken to be followed. The expectation generated by a public authority can also take a substantive character, in the nature of the public authority having through its representations or practices, given rise to a legitimate expectation that a particular outcome or benefit would be awarded. That situation is recognized as having given rise to a 'substantive legitimate expectation', and thus, the court can require the relevant public authority to respect the expectation that was generated by it, and grant to the claimant the expected outcome.

2.3.8.1 Procedural Legitimate Expectations

Generally, a court would protect an individual's expectation by requiring a fair procedure to be followed before the public authority makes the relevant decision. If the claimant expected procedural fairness, this approach of court would fulfil the claimant's expectation. Procedural fairness may also be conferred by court in a situation where even though the claimant expected a particular substantive outcome, the court has concluded that, when preserving discretionary freedom of the public authority, the authority should be required to adhere to procedural fairness (only), and that compliance with such procedural fairness would be sufficient. In situations where the court recognizes only procedural fairness, the public authority would be entitled to arrive at a lawful decision (having adhered to procedural fairness), though such decision may be contrary to the expectation of the claimant.

The duty to act fairly and procedural protection arising out of legitimate expectations are similar, yet, not identical. The duty to act fairly is a flexible concept based on the rules of natural justice. Its precise meaning and the manner in which audi alteram partem of the rules of natural justice must be given effect to, depend on the context. Thus, different situations will require different levels of fairness and procedure to be adopted. The principle of legitimate expectations can influence the degree of fairness and the exact nature of the procedure to be adopted. The existence of a legitimate expectation may require the public authority to confer on the claimant a more detailed (generous) and specific form of procedural fairness in line with previous practice of and representations made by the public authority, than what he would be entitled to if there was no legitimate expectation and the claimant sought only compliance with audi alteram partem. Therefore, should the claimant insist on the public authority having followed a detailed or specific procedure (in excess of what the rules of natural justice would require), he would need to establish that he had a procedural legitimate expectation in that regard. Such expectation may arise out of representations made or previous practices of the relevant public authority.

A frustration of procedural legitimate expectations can arise in the following situations:

(i) claimant relied on a policy or norm of general application, which had changed, and therefore applied differently;

(ii) the claimant relied on a declared policy or norm, which was not changed, but did not apply to the claimant;

(iii) the claimant received a promise or representation, which was not honoured in respect of the claimant, due to a change in policy or a norm pertaining to procedure;

(iv) the claimant received a promise or representation, which was dishonoured in respect of the claimant, not due to a general change in policy, but because the decision-maker has in the particular instance changed his mind.

In Attorney General of Hong Kong v. Ng Yuen Shiu (referred to above) while recognizing the doctrine of procedural legitimate expectation, the Privy Council held that when a public body has promised to follow a particular procedure, it is in the interests of good administration that it should act fairly and implement its promise, so long as the implementation does not interfere with its statutory duties.

In Sundarkaran v. Bharathi and Others [(1989) 1 Sri LR 46], the Petitioner – Appellant had a liquour license for the two preceding years, and applied for a license for the following year (1987). He was required by the relevant authorities to pay the license fee. When he attempted to do so at the office of the Government Agent, he was informed that a license could not be issued to him as he had failed to obtain the consent of all the Members of Parliament of the area, which was a requirement in terms of a circular issued in 1986 (which became applicable for the first time). He moved for a writ of Mandamus from the Court of Appeal, and having failed, appealed to this Court. This Court observed that the Respondents had failed to give the Petitioner a fair hearing of meeting the objections raised by the Members of Parliament. Court also held that, it has been repeatedly recognized that no man is to be deprived of his property without having an opportunity of being heard. The Supreme Court rejected the argument that the Petitioner was merely 'hoping against hope' of being granted a renewal of his license and held that he had a legitimate expectation of success, and therefore a right to a full and fair opportunity of being heard.

In M.R.C.C. Ariyarathne and Others v. N.K. Illangakoon, IGP and Others (referred to above), where a group of Development Assistants attached to the Police Department claimed that they had a legitimate expectation of being absorbed to the Sri Lanka Police Force or to one of its specialized units, Justice Prasanna Jayawardena provided the following general description of procedural legitimate expectations:

> "Where a public authority, acting intra vires, has given an assurance that it will hear a person before it changes its policy with regard to a matter which affects him or has stated or otherwise made known its policy with regard to that matter or has an established practice of holding a hearing before a change of policy is effected, that person will have a procedural legitimate expectation, that the public authority will give him notice and a reasonable and adequate opportunity to make representations and be heard before it decides whether to change its policy with regard to the matter which will affect him. A court will, by way of judicial review, enforce such a procedural legitimate expectation, other than in limited circumstances such as, for example, where considerations of national security override that expectation of being consulted or heard."

2.3.8.2 Substantive Legitimate Expectations

As the Petitioner in this matter is seeking relief on the premise that his substantive legitimate expectation to receive a 'Letter of Intent' from the 1st Respondent – CEB and a permit from the 2nd Respondent – SLSEA had been frustrated, I propose to deal with this area of law in some detail.

Recognition of 'substantive legitimate expectations' is an instance which enables court to review the decision which the public body was required to take (based on the expectations it had generated through its own representations and past practices), as opposed to procedure it should have followed when taking the decision. Thus, it goes beyond the traditional scope of judicial review of examining procedural propriety and enters into the controversial area of reviewing merits of the impugned decision.

After a period of uncertainty regarding the question as to whether the English law recognizes the doctrine of 'substantive legitimate expectations' as opposed to 'procedural legitimate expectations', in R. v. North and East Devon Health Authority ex parte Coughlan (referred to above), the Court of Appeal of England cleared the doubt recognizing the non-justiciable frustration of substantive legitimate expectation as a distinct ground for judicial review, resulting in the grant of relief aimed at quashing the impugned decision of the public authority, as opposed to the procedure adopted by it when arriving at the decision. This would result in the court being able to consider the grant of substantive relief.

Lord Justice Laws in R (Niazi) v. Secretary of State for the Home Department [(2008) EWCA Civ. 755], held that, a substantive legitimate expectation arises only if there has been a specific undertaking, directed at a particular individual or group, by which the relevant policy's continuance had been assured. He held that, a substantial legitimate expectation would arise when an individual or a group who have substantial grounds to expect that the substance of the relevant policy will continue to be in force for their particular benefit: not necessarily forever, but at least for a reasonable period of time, to provide a cushion against the change. In such situation, a change cannot lawfully be made, certainly not made abruptly, unless the authority notifies and consults those who would be adversely affected by such change.

The recognition of a substantive legitimate expectation offers not mere procedural protection. It provides a degree of legal certainty about the nature and the merits of the decision of the public authority which results in a particular outcome. The existence of a procedural legitimate expectation imposes a requirement on the decision-maker to take the decision in a particular manner. It does not impose a limitation on the exercise of discretion on the decision to be taken or on the decision itself. (It is a restriction on how to arrive at a decision and not a restriction on the decision itself.)

It must be noted that the recognition by court of substantive legitimate expectations has an impact on the exercise of discretion by public authorities. It can give rise to the decision-maker having to realize (give effect to) or honour the substantive expectation of the person who entertained such expectation. Thus, the expectation of the claimant would have to be realized. It may limit or completely take away discretion of the decision-maker. Some may even argue that, judicial enforcement of a substantive legitimate expectation of a claimant can result in the judiciary usurping the Executive's role. That is an argument sans merit, because when a court recognizes a substantive legitimate expectation, it does not require the public authority to give effect to the court's opinion on the matter. It merely requires the public authority to honour the expectation it generated by its own representations or past practice.

The concept of legal certainty provides a major justification for the recognition and enforcement of substantive legitimate expectations. As stated earlier, legal certainty is a component of the rule of law. The legal protection of expectations through the application of principles of administrative law such as the doctrine of legitimate expectations is a way of giving expression to the requirements of predictability, certainty, formal equality, fairness and consistency, which are all facets inherent in the rule of law, thus, its importance. However, legal certainty should be balanced with wider public interest. What will ultimately be sanctioned by court is what is in public interest.

The sub-doctrine of substantive legitimate expectations arises in the following two situations:

(i) A person who had been enjoying a benefit or advantage over a period of time, claims that such advantage or benefit had been withdrawn in frustration of his substantive legitimate expectation that the advantage or benefit will continue. In this instance, the recognition of the substantive legitimate expectation will preclude the decision-maker from exercising discretionary authority and changing the outcome legitimately expected by the party which entertained the expectation.

(ii) A person who is not presently enjoying a particular benefit or an advantage, claims that while he rightfully expected such benefit or advantage to be granted, in frustration of his expectation, the benefit or advantage he had applied for has been denied. In this instance too, the recognition of the substantive legitimate expectation will force the decision-maker to grant the particular benefit or advantage that was rightfully expected by such party. [The instant case falls into this category.]

Since the Coughlan case, the intensity with which courts have considered whether there existed a substantive legitimate expectation, has decreased. There exists only a very small category of cases where the stringent proportionality / balancing test applies. In those cases, the public authority can (is entitled to) frustrate the substantive legitimate expectation it created, only if the court is satisfied that the public interest in doing so (deviating from the undertaking given) outweighs the unfairness that will thereby be occasioned to the individual concerned. In such cases, a decision to frustrate a substantive legitimate expectation will be held to be lawful provided the decision-maker has (i) taken the expectation into account as part of its decision-making process, (ii) reached a reasonable conclusion concerning the balance between the public and private interests at stake, and (iii) respected any relevant conditions precedent, such as having given due notice where it would be unfair not to do so. Unless these grounds are satisfied, the public authority concerned will be required by court to honour its own undertaking / representations and its part practices.

However, in the cases that were decided after the decision in Coughlan which include the cases of R (Nadarajah) v. Secretary of State for the Home Department and R v Secretary of State for Education and Employment ex parte Begbie (both cited above), the court's view was that the test enumerated in Coughlan should be narrowly construed by court. While accepting the test in Coughlan, the subsequent cases identified that stringent criteria should be applied for the recognition by court of a substantive legitimate expectation. Courts will look for the existence of an individualized promise or a specific promised given to a small group, rather than a representation containing a general statement of policy. Thus, there should be a specific undertaking or other representation by the public authority to the claimant, such as in the nature of a specific promise or a contractual undertaking.

In R (Nadarajah) v. Secretary of State for the Home Department [(2005), EWCA Civil 1363], it was held that, a public body's promise or past practice as to future conduct may be denied, in circumstances where to do so is the public body's legal duty, or is otherwise, to use a now familiar vocabulary, a proportionate response (of which the court is the judge, or the last judge) having regard to a legitimate aim pursued by the public body in the public interest. The principle that good administration requires public authorities to be held to their promises would be undermined if the law did not insist that any failure or refusal to comply is objectively justified as a proportionate measure in the circumstances.

In United Policyholders Group v. Attorney General of Trinidad and Tobago (referred to above), Lord Carnwath while approving the tests in Coughlan*,* held that a claim for substantive legitimate expectations should be honoured only where the claimant can establish the following:

(i) That there was a promise or representation which is clear, unambiguous and devoid of relevant qualification;

(ii) The promise was given to an identifiable, defined person or to a group by a public authority;

(iii) The promise was given by the public authority for its own benefit, either in return for action by the relevant person or group or on the basis of which the person or group has acted to its detriment;

(iv) The authority cannot show good reasons, judged by the court to be proportionate, to resile from the promise.

2.3.8.4 Approach to be taken by Court when a claim of substantive legitimate expectation is raised and established

When a claim of the existence of a substantive legitimate expectation is raised, as observed in R. v. North and East Devon Health Authority, ex parte Coughlan, court may arrive at one out of the following three findings:

(i) though it has been submitted that the petitioner was entitled to a substantive legitimate expectation of some benefit being awarded or not withdrawn, what he was in fact entitled to was a procedural legitimate expectation (as opposed to a substantial legitimate expectation) such as the granting of a fair hearing or consultation before the impugned decision was taken. That is on the footing that the criterion of legitimacy requires only procedural protection. In other words, it is that all what the petitioner was legitimately entitled to was procedurally fair treatment [e.g. R. v. Secretary of State for the Home Department, ex parte Khan];

(ii) by holding that while the petitioner was entitled to a substantive legitimate expectation (such as a conferral of a benefit or non-withdrawal of it), that expectation should be protected only by requiring a fair procedure being followed. That amounts to procedural protection of a substantive legitimate expectation. This approach is adopted when there are countervailing factors which necessitate the court to only insist on procedural fairness. This is when the public interest favours the exercise of discretionary freedom;

(iii) situations where the court recognize the existence of an actual substantive legitimate expectation, which is what the petitioner expected, and is entitled to expect – namely a particular substantive and legitimate outcome. This results in the court requiring the decision-maker to confer on the petitioner a particular benefit. In this situation, the discretionary freedom of the decision-maker must give way to the principle of legal certainty. This will result in the decision-maker's discretion being removed completely. Thus, courts are cautious in applying this approach.

As stated previously, it is important to note that judicial thinking seems to recognize the importance of limiting the circumstances in which substantive legitimate expectations may arise. In the case of Ariyarathne, Justice Prasanna Jayawardane, expressing his agreement with the views taken in R. v. Department of Education and Employment, ex parte Begbie and R (Nadarajah) v. Secretary of State for the Home Department (both referred to above), held the following view:

"…In my view, these factors could make the doctrine of substantive legitimate expectation an unruly wayward horse if it is left to be guided only by the distinctly 'general' guidelines set out in Hamble (Offshore) Fisheries Ltd, Dayarathna and Coughlan*."*

In conclusion, it would be pertinent to note that, the essence of jurisprudence on this matter supports the view that, in a case of substantive legitimate expectations, the test of reviewing the decision of a public authority is no longer limited to the criteria of Wednesbury unreasonableness. The court's task is to weigh genuine public interest that would be protected by accommodating the personal interest of the claimant, and decide on the legitimacy and the weight of the expectation of the claimant in comparison with the reasons given by the public authority for the change of policy on its part which it would invariably claim to also be in public interest. The court must grant substantive relief, if in the opinion of the court, the public authority having changed its policy is lawful and in wider public interest. That is not a means of directing public institutions on what their policy ought to be. The approach of the court is a means of preventing abuse of power by public authorities, and thereby, protecting public interests, which is the bounden duty of courts.

3.8.5 Does the frustration of a legitimate expectation constitute an infringement of Article 12(1)?

The totality of the judicial precedent cited in this judgment and the available jurisprudence both in this country and found in English Law pertaining to the doctrine of legitimate expectations (both procedural and substantive) points towards one direction. That is the conceptual basis for judicial review of the impugned decision, that being the rationale that permitting the impugned decision to stand would be inconsistent with rule of law, overlooking an instance of abuse of power, allowing an unreasonable, arbitrary or capricious decision to stand, and contrary to the very foundation of the law – that being fairness. Time and again, this Court has observed that the recognition of the equal protection of the law – the right to equality would necessitate this Court to rule that such legally flawed decisions which are contrary to the rule of law, signify an instance of abuse of power, are irrational, capricious or arbitrary or are so fundamentally unfair that the very foundations of justice and the conscience of the court would be shockingly shaken, would amount to an infringement of that fundamental right recognized by Article 12 of the Constitution. Thus, the frustration of a legitimate expectation does amount to infringement of Article 12 and specifically Article 12(1). This view on the impact of the frustration of a legitimate expectation is recognized amongst others in Suranganie Marapana v. The Bank of Ceylon and Others [(1997) 3 Sri L.R. 156], Dayarathna and Others v. Minister of Health and Indigenous Medicine and Others (referred to above), Gunawardena v. Ceylon Petroleum Corporation and Others [(2001) 1 Sri L.R. 231], Weerasekara v. Director-General of Health Services and Others [(2003) 1 Sri L.R. 295], Sirimal and Others v. Board of Directors of the Co-operative Wholesale Establishment and Others (referred to above), Fernando and Others v. Associated Newspapers of Ceylon Ltd and Others [(2006) 3 Sri L.R. 141], and M.R.C.C. Ariyarathne and Others v. N.K. Illangakoon, IGP and Others (referred to above). Thus, it is now necessary to conclude that the 'frustration of a procedural or substantive legitimate expectation' is a sui generis ground to hold that an infringement of the fundamental right recognized by Article 12(1) of the Constitution has occurred.

3. Position of the Petitioner

Vidullanka PLC is a public company incorporated in Sri Lanka, registered with and approved by the Board of Investment, and is listed in the Colombo Stock Exchange. Vidullanka PLC is engaged in the business of generation of electrical power through renewable energy resources and selling such electricity to the 1st Respondent – CEB. The company has, directly and through subsidiary companies successfully completed implementing several mini-hydropower projects and one project using biomass. It claims without contest from the Respondents that it plays a significant role in the development of the renewable energy generation capacity in Sri Lanka and significantly contributing to the national electricity grid. On 14th May 2012, Vidullanka PLC incorporated the Petitioner company - Vavuniya Solar Power (Private) Limited, as a subsidiary. The purpose of incorporating this company was to carry out a solar energy-based electricity generation project in Vavuniya, in the Northern Province of Sri Lanka.

On 20th April 2012, the Petitioner had submitted an Application to the 2nd Respondent – SLSEA for the purpose of obtaining approval for a solar energy-based electricity generation plant (also referred to as a 'photovoltaic plant') to be commissioned in Vavuniya. The expectation of the Petitioner was to obtain a permit under section 18 of the SLSEA Act, to commission the electricity generation plant, and commence generating electricity to be supplied to the national grid.

The project proposed by the Petitioner was to commission an electricity generation plant (using solar energy) at the cost of the Petitioner, and for the electricity generated by the plant to be supplied to the 1st Respondent – CEB to be distributed via the national grid. The 1st Respondent was to pay an agreed amount for electricity supplied to it by the Petitioner. For that purpose, the Petitioner was to enter into an agreement with the CEB for the sale / purchase of electricity generated by the plant.

Learned President's Counsel for the Petitioner submitted that prior to the submission of this Application, a pre-feasibility study had been conducted and the Application for a permit was submitted to the SLSEA, as it was deemed to be a viable project. Learned President's Counsel also submitted that the Application ("P3A") had been submitted to the SLSEA in terms of section 16 of the SLSEA Act. The Application had been in conformity with (a) provisions of the SLSEA Act, (b) the 'On-grid Renewable Energy Projects Regulations' of 2009 ("P2A"), (c) the Regulations of 2011 promulgated by the Minister of Power and Energy in terms of section 67 read with 16(2), 17(2)(a) and 17(a)(2) of the SLSEA Act ("P2B"), and (d) the Guidelines issued by the SLSEA titled "A Guide to the Projects approval process for On-Grid Renewable Energy Project Development" ("P2C").

Following the registration of the Application in terms of section 16(3) of the SLSEA Act (Registration No. R 125550) and a preliminary screening of it by the SLSEA, by letter dated 18th May 2012 ("P3B") the Director General of SLSEA (5th Respondent) wrote to the General Manager of the CEB (4th Respondent) bringing to his attention information pertaining to 23 Applications received by the SLSEA seeking approval for renewable energy (solar) power projects, which included the project submitted by the Petitioner. While seeking information regarding the availability of 'grid capacity' on the part of the CEB (given the intended locations of the respective proposed electricity generation projects), he sought the concurrence of the CEB to table the Applications pertaining to the proposed projects at the forthcoming meeting of the PAC.

Learned President's Counsel for the Petitioner submitted that the afore-stated letter amounted to the 5th Respondent having sought from the CEB a 'grid interconnection concurrence' for several proposed projects, including the project for which the Petitioner had sought approval.

Subsequently, the Petitioner had been informed by the SLSEA that the CEB requires the project for which the Petitioner sought approval to contain a 'battery storage system'. Therefore, the Petitioner had made necessary changes to the proposed project, and by letter dated 19th November 2012 ("P3C") informed the Deputy General Manager (Energy Purchases) of the CEB, the Petitioner's willingness to include a '8 megawatts battery backup system' as a solution to the problem highlighted by the CEB. The problem was supposedly the short-term power variation in electricity generated by the proposed project. That problem was sought to be resolved by the addition of a battery system to ensure smooth power output at the grid end, so that sudden power drops could be avoided. Through the said letter, the Petitioner had requested the CEB to provide the 'grid interconnection concurrence' for the project proposed by the Petitioner. Receiving such concurrence would have enabled the SLSEA to consider granting 'provisional approval' for the project. By letter dated 21st November 2012 ("P3D"), without making any adverse comment, the Deputy General Manager (Energy Purchases) of the CEB has brought this matter to the attention of the Deputy General Manager (Transmission & Generation Planning) of the CEB. The Petitioner claims that notwithstanding the Petitioner having in November 2012 undertaken to amend the project specifications as required by the CEB to include a 'battery backup system' and several reminders having been submitted to the CEB, till 2016 the CEB failed to grant the 'grid interconnection concurrence' to the intended amended project of the Petitioner (Reminders sent to the CEB in this regard were produced by the Petitioner marked "P3F", "P3G" and "P3H").

On 15th February 2016, the SLSEA wrote to the CEB seeking 'grid interconnection approval' to the modified project proposed by the Petitioner. The modification (as proposed by the Petitioner) was to transfer a minimum of 25% of energy generated during the daytime to the night peak period via a battery storage system ("P4A"). By letter dated 9th May 2016, the CEB informed the SLSEA that having taken into consideration the innovative nature of the amended project, it has no objection for the consideration of the project for the issue of a 'provisional approval' by the SLSEA as a 'pilot project' ("P4B"). Learned President's Counsel for the Petitioner submitted that this letter amounted to the CEB having granted 'grid interconnection concurrence' for the Petitioner's project. Learned Solicitor General for the Respondent did not object to that contention.

Sequel thereto, on 19th May 2016, the SLSEA notified the Petitioner that in terms of section 17(2)(a) of the SLSEA Act, No. 35 of 2007, the PAC of the SLSEA had granted 'provisional approval' to the Petitioner to develop a '10 megawatts Solar PV Project with a battery storage system' to be located within the area coming within the Divisional Secretariat of Vavuniya South. The Petitioner was required within 6 months from the date of that notification, to submit the documents and information mentioned under items "A" and "B" of Annexure I to the said notification, which were the conditions of the provisional approval ("P5A"). For the provisional approval to be upgraded to the final or full approval and the grant of a permit under section 18 of the Act, these conditions had to be satisfied by the proponent of the project, (being the Petitioner). The notification contained a caution that provisional approval will stand automatically cancelled if the afore-stated requirements were not complied within 6 months or within a further period of 6 months which could be obtained by presenting a request to the SLSEA. The afore-stated 'conditions' of the provisional approval granted to the amended project proposed by the Petitioner contained inter alia a requirement that the Petitioner obtains from the 1st Respondent a "Letter of Intent" which would indicate its willingness to purchase electricity generated by the proposed project. That had been an administrative general and imperative requirement imposed by the SLSEA to all project proponents.

In view of the foregoing, the Petitioner applied for the issue of the several approvals stipulated as conditions of the 'provisional approval' issued by the SLSEA. On 26th July 2016, the Petitioner requested the CEB to issue a "Letter of Intent" ("P7A"). As the 1st Respondent did not respond, two further requests were made on 29th August and 7th November 2016 ("P7B" and "P7C"). As there was no response from the CEB notwithstanding reminders being sent, by letter dated 14th September 2016 ("P8A") the Petitioner requested the Minister of Power and Renewable Energy to intervene in the matter and advice the CEB to expedite the issuing of the 'Letter of Intent'. Since there was no positive outcome even from the Minister, yet another letter dated 10th November 2016 ("P8B") had been sent by the Petitioner. Sequel thereto, the Minister had by letter dated 18th November 2016 ("P8C") advised the CEB to expedite the issuing of the 'Letter of Intent' and the 'Electricity Purchase Agreement'. Nevertheless, there had been no positive response from the CEB notwithstanding the Minister's intervention.

As there was a delay in obtaining necessary approvals, including the 'Letter of Intent' from the CEB, by an Application to the SLSEA, the Petitioner had obtained an extension of the validity period of the provisional approval, up to 18th May 2017 ("P5B").

Learned President's Counsel submitted that the 'provisional approval' granted to the project by the SLSEA was a clear indication that the CEB had granted 'grid interconnection concurrence' and an indication that the CEB being the 'electricity transmission and bulk supply licensee' had been satisfied of its ability to accept electricity generated by the project proposed by the Petitioner. In terms of clause 2.3 of the Guidelines, such a decision would have been taken by the CEB upon a careful evaluation of technical factors such as the systemwide impacts, network typology and system stability, in addition to more commonly understood constraints such as local transmission grid limitations and limitations in capacity at the grid sub-station.

Subsequently, the Petitioner had obtained all the required approvals as contained in Annexure I of "P5A", except the "Letter of Intent" from the CEB. The Petitioner produced marked "P6A" to "P6H" the other approvals obtained by the Petitioner, as per the conditions contained in the 'provisional approval' issued by the SLSEA. Thus, the only requirement that stood in the way towards the Petitioner obtaining the final approval (a permit under section 18 of the SLSEA Act) from the SLSEA, was the "Letter of Intent" to be issued by the CEB.

In the meantime, in November 2016, at a meeting held with the 1st Respondent, it had been intimated to the Petitioner that the project would be accepted if the project is changed to its original form (i.e. solar power electricity generation without a battery storage system). The Petitioner agreed to do so. The CEB has not given any reason for the change in the technical requirement previously sanctioned by it. Consequently, by letter dated 17th November 2016 ("P9"), the Petitioner informed the SLSEA of the change of position by the CEB and requested the SLSEA to grant an 'extension as per the original Solar PV Application made'. The SLSEA refused to change the 'provisional approval' without a direction from the CEB. Therefore, by letter dated 1st December 2016 ("P10A"), the Petitioner requested the CEB to issue a directive to the SLSEA to issue an amended 'provisional approval' from a 'Solar PV with a Battery Storage System' to a 'Solar PV System' (which amounted to the original project proposal submitted by the Petitioner – a system without a battery backup). By letter dated 1st December 2016, the CEB informed the SLSEA that it has no objection to the project type being changed to a 'Solar PV project' ("P10B"). Sequel thereto, by letter dated 20th December 2016 ("P11"), the SLSEA notified the Petitioner the grant of an amended 'provisional approval' from a 'Solar PV with battery storage' to a 'Solar PV (without a battery storage system)' project.

By letter dated 26th December 2016 ("P12"), the Petitioner wrote to the CEB seeking a 'Letter of Intent' for the further revised project (original project proposal – a system without a battery backup). Since there was no response from the CEB, on 16th February 2017, the Petitioner in partial compliance with the conditions contained in the 'provisional approval', submitted the requisite approvals that were available (other than the 'Letter of Intent' to be issued by the CEB) to the SLSEA. This submission ("P13") contained a request that the 'final approval' for the project be issued along with a 'permit' in terms of section 18 of the SLSEA Act. While the 2nd Respondent did not issue a 'permit' to the Petitioner, by letter dated 1st March 2017 ("P14") addressed to the General Manager of the CEB (at the time the 4th Respondent), the SLSEA requested the CEB to issue a 'Letter of Intent' for the project of the Petitioner. As there was no response from the CEB, on 7th March 2017, the Petitioner once again urged the 4th Respondent to issue a 'Letter of Intent' ("P15"). In the said letter, the Petitioner sought reasons if any, for the delay in issuing the 'Letter of Intent'. In response, the Chairman of the CEB by letter dated 22nd March 2017 ("P16") informed the Petitioner that the Minister of Power and Renewable Energy had appointed a committee headed by the Secretary to the Ministry of Power and Energy to review and report on suitable decisions to be taken with regard to all matters pertaining to Applications for 'provisional approvals' and 'Letters of Intent' that are being processed either at the CEB or at the SLSEA, and that in the circumstances the project of the Petitioner would come within the scope of that committee. The Chairman of the CEB (3rd Respondent) had undertaken to revert to the Petitioner 'as soon as a direction is issued by the Ministry'.

The Petitioner claims that neither the said committee nor the CEB had thereafter informed the Petitioner of any reasons for the non-issuance of the 'Letter of Intent'. It is the Petitioner's position that there is no valid reason for the non-issuance of the said letter.

As opposed to the position taken up by the 1st Respondent (CEB) regarding the reason for the non-issuance of the 'Letter of Intent', the Petitioner has asserted that, in terms of section 6 of the Guidelines ("P2C") issued by the 2nd Respondent (SLSEA) there exists a 'Standardised Power Purchase Agreement (SPPA)' for renewable energy projects of the approved types, with an installed capacity of up to 10 MW. The SPPA is a standardised and non-negotiable Agreement that the CEB enters into with project proponents which stipulates the price at which the CEB will purchase electricity from the project proponent. This tariff has been approved by the PUCSL. The Petitioner's position is that the project proposed by the Petitioner comes within the scope of that Agreement. Therefore, the Petitioner's position is that, as the capacity of the Petitioner's project is 10 MW, there is no requirement to negotiate the terms and tariffs according to which electricity generated from the project is to be purchased by the 1st Respondent (CEB) as they are regulated in terms of the Standardised Power Purchase Agreement. Thus, the Petitioner claims that the 1st Respondent (CEB) does not have any discretion in the matter of granting the 'Letter of Intent' to the Petitioner, who had already obtained 'provisional approval' founded upon the 1st Respondent (CEB) issuing 'grid interconnection concurrence'.

4. Position of the Respondents

2nd Respondent – Sri Lanka Sustainable Energy Authority - According to the 5th Respondent (in his capacity as the Deputy Director General (Operations) of the Sri Lanka Sustainable Energy Authority – 2nd Respondent, in terms of section 13 of the Act, it is the Authority that is responsible for the development of all renewable energy resources in Sri Lanka, with the view to obtaining maximum economic utilization of those resources. With this objective, the Authority has published Regulations ("P2A" and "P2B") and Guidelines ("P2C") to regulate the procedure for application and the granting of approvals for renewable energy projects. In terms of section 16 of the Act, the Director General of the Authority is required to accept Applications for development of renewable energy projects and submit them to the PAC for its consideration. Up until 2018, the Authority had successfully achieved targets pertaining to sustainable energy projects, based on the 'least cost long-term generation expansion plan' of the government, which has been approved by the Cabinet of Ministers. When developing renewable energy projects, there are special considerations to be given by balancing environmental factors and social benefits. According to the SLSEA, it is awaiting 'grid concurrence' from the CEB for a number of Applications it had received.

The 5th Respondent has presented marked "2R1", minutes of the PAC meetings held on 19th May and 23rd June 2016. According to "2R1", at the meeting of the Committee held on 19th May 2016 (at which M.C. Wickramasekara, the then General Manager, CEB was present), the 'Solar PV Project with Battery Storage System' with a capacity of 10 megawatts submitted by the Petitioner has been approved for the issuance of a 'provisional approval'. At the subsequent meeting of the PAC held on 23rd June 2016, no decision had been taken pertaining to the project proposal submitted by the Petitioner.

According to the 5th Respondent, the 6th Respondent – Secretary to the Ministry has by letters dated 4th May 2016 ("2R2") and 20th July 2017 ("2R3") issued certain directives to the Authority. By "2R2" the Secretary has informed the Authority that the government has given high priority for the development of renewable energy envisaged for the future development of the country. He has highlighted the need to identify suitable methodologies to fast-track the development process. He has asserted the need to streamline the project approval process and immediate intervention of the Authority to speed up implementation of projects. By "2R3", the Secretary has notified the Authority that the Ministry intends to amend the SLE Act to enable the development of renewable energy projects under the SLSEA Act, and pending such action being taken, approval has been granted in terms of section 17(c) of the SLE Act to implement certain electricity generation programmes (specified in that letter).

1st Respondent – Ceylon Electricity Board - According to the 4th Respondent (General Manager, CEB), in terms of the SLE Act, the sole authority to offer the "Standardised Power Purchase Agreement" is the CEB, and the right to purchase generated electricity also lies solely with the CEB, which is recognized as the sole 'transmission licensee'.

Referring to the Application submitted by the Petitioner on or about the 20th April 2012 under section 16 of the Act, the 4th Respondent has asserted that the Petitioner has not complied with the requirement set-out in section 16 of the Act and in Gazette notifications bearing Nos. 1599/6 and 1705/22 (pertaining to 'on-grid Renewable Projects') dated 27th April 2009 and 10th May 2011, respectively. That is on the footing that as at the date of the Application, the Petitioner had not been incorporated as a company and thus was not in existence. Instead, the Application contained a reference to the fact that the company was 'in the process of incorporation'. According to the Certificate of Incorporation, the Petitioner company had been incorporated on 14th May 2012. Thus, the Petitioner had submitted an 'irregular Application'. Further, when the applicant is a company, it is incumbent on the company to tender a 'Resolution' of the company authorizing the applicant to submit an Application. This requirement had also not been complied with.

The 4th Respondent admits that, following the 1st Respondent issuing the 'Grid Interconnection Concurrence' in respect of the Application submitted by the Petitioner, on or about 19th May 2016, the 2nd Respondent issued the 'provisional approval' to the project of the Petitioner. The 4th Respondent agrees with the position taken up by the Petitioner that the grant of 'final approval' was contingent upon the submission of certain documents and information stipulated in Annexure I of the document containing the 'provisional approval'. Of such requirements, one was obtaining the 'Letter of Intent' from the 1st Respondent, and tendering it to the 2nd Respondent within 6 months from the issuance of the 'provisional approval'. If the requirements attached to the 'provisional approval' were not satisfied and submitted to the 2nd Respondent or the requirements contained in the 'provisional approval' were not satisfied at all, in terms of section 17(c) of the SLSEA Act, the 'provisional approval' will automatically stand cancelled at the end of the 6th months period, or a further 6 months period, which may be obtained upon a request being made in that regard. This position is also contained in page 12 of the "Guidelines to On-Grid Renewable Energy Development Projects" ("P2C"). The Petitioner is deemed to have been fully aware that the final approval and the permit will be contingent upon his obtaining inter-alia a 'Letter of Intent' from the 1st Respondent, which the Petitioner had failed to obtain.

On application by the Petitioner, the time period originally granted by the 2nd Respondent to comply with the requirements was extended by another 6 months, and the extended period was to expire on 18th May 2017. Three days prior to the expiry of the said period, on 15th May 2017 the Petitioner filed the instant Fundamental Rights Application in the Supreme Court in order to prevent the extended period of the 'provisional approval' granted by the 2nd Respondent from automatically lapsing.

The appropriate cause of action where a party fails to obtain a 'Letter of Intent' is to bring the matter to the attention of the 1st Respondent. The 4th Respondent admits that the Petitioner had done so by way of submitting a letter, to which the 1st Respondent had responded by letter dated 22nd March 2017, stating that the Minister of Power & Renewable Energy had appointed a committee to take a decision on the matter. The matter pertaining to the Petitioner was pending deliberation by the Committee as at the time the instant Application was filed. In terms of section 22(1)(b) of the SLSEA Act, any person aggrieved by a refusal to grant final approval to an Application may within one month of the receipt of such communication, appeal against the refusal to the Board of Management. Furthermore, in terms of section 28 of the Act, the Petitioner could have presented an appeal to the Board. By instituting this action, the Petitioner has circumvented the proper forum to obtain redress and has petitioned the Supreme Court, without seeking administrative relief.

In response to the allegation pertaining to the non-granting of the 'Letter of Intent' to the Petitioner, the 4th Respondent has taken up the following positions:

(i) Due to technical reasons that are common or specific to Solar PV and Wind Power electricity generation plants, the 1st Respondent has stopped issuing 'Letters of Intent'. There are constraints in interconnection of these power plants to the transmission system. Therefore, in 2012, the 1st Respondent did not issue to the 2nd Respondent (SLSEA) concurrence for grid interconnection in respect of the project of the Petitioner. However, with grid and system expansion, these constraints can be relaxed or changed.

(ii) The 1st Respondent (CEB) stopped issuing 'Letters of Intent' to wind and solar projects until the grid connection limitations and effects on the system were studied. A study in this regard was conducted by the 1st Respondent and its report is contained in the "Integration of non-conventional renewable energy-based generation into Sri Lanka Power-Grids". ("4R1") According to this study, only 10 MW solar projects have been considered viable for Vavuniya.

(iii) Following the amendment to the SLE Act by Act No. 31 of 2013, procurement of electricity should be done on a competitive basis. This encourages lower electricity cost, ultimately helping customers and the national economy.

(iv) The Ministry of Power and Renewable Energy has decided on a policy of calling for tenders for wind and solar power projects.

(v) No 'Letter of Intent' has been issued since August 2013, except for one project, that being a joint venture between a private project proponent and the CEB.

According to the 4th Respondent, (a) the 1st Respondent did not initially issue a 'grid connection concurrence' for the project of the Petitioner, since there was an issue of 'technical infeasibility in connecting', (b) the 1st Respondent thereafter issued the 'grid connection concurrence' as the technology was changed to 'battery storage' and as the 'system had expanded', and (c) the 1st Respondent did not issue the 'Letter of Intent' as (i) there were 'further issues to be reviewed in the technical matters with regard to the grid connections', (ii) due to the 'policy decision to go for tendering in solar power projects' and (iii) due to 'legal issues relating to the SLE Act'.

The 4th Respondent has taken up the position that in terms of the SLE Act, the sole authority for offering a 'Standardised Power Purchase Agreement' is the 1st Respondent (CEB). He further emphasizes that the right to purchase electricity lies solely with the electricity transmission licensee, being the CEB.

5. Submissions made on behalf of the Petitioner

Learned President's Counsel submitted that following certain preliminary work such as conducting a pre-feasibility study, on 20th April 2012 the Petitioner had submitted an Application to the Director General of SLSEA (5th Respondent) seeking approval for an on-grid electricity generation project. This Application had been in conformity with all the stipulations of the applicable provisions of the law and requirements contained in the guidelines.

Following a preliminary screening of the Application, the 2nd Respondent (SLSEA) in consultation with the 1st Respondent (CEB) registered the Application submitted by the Petitioner, and issued a registration number, being R 125550. This was in terms of section 16(3) of the SLSEA Act. He submitted that, this showed clearly that the Application submitted by the Petitioner was prima-facie valid and acceptable to the 2nd Respondent. On or about 18th May 2012, on behalf of the 2nd Respondent, the 5th Respondent (Director General, SLSEA) requested the 1st Respondent to provide 'grid interconnection concurrence' for the project proposed by the Petitioner and for several other projects. To facilitate the consideration of the Application for the issue of 'grid interconnection concurrence' and 'provisional approval' for the project, the 2nd Respondent had submitted the Application of the Petitioner to the PAC of the SLSEA. Contingent upon the 1st Respondent granting 'grid interconnection concurrence' to the project (which is an indication of the CEB's ability to accept to its grid, the electricity generated by the project), the project was to receive 'provisional approval'. Learned President's Counsel drew the attention of Court to section 2.3 of the afore-mentioned Guidelines ("P2C"), which provides that as the 'transmission and bulk supply licensee', the CEB will have to (based on a careful evaluation of system wide impacts, network topology and system stability, in addition to the more commonly understood constraints such as local transmission grid limitations and grid substation capacity limitations), be satisfied with the ability of the CEB to accept electricity produced by the proposed project.

He further submitted that the PAC comprises of several government officials (as specified in section 10 of the SLSEA Act), and includes the General Manager of the 1st Respondent -CEB.

Learned President's Counsel further submitted that, the original proposal was for the establishments of a Solar PV Power Generation Project. Following a response received from the 2nd Respondent, the Petitioner having consulted its technical partner, had converted the proposed project into a Solar PV Power Generation Project with a Battery Storage System. The Petitioner had verily believed that if the project was converted in that manner (i.e. the enhancement of the project to contain a battery storage system), approval would be given for the project. That the Petitioner would amend the proposed project to include a battery storage system was conveyed to the 1st Respondent by letter dated 19th November 2012 ("P3C").

Notwithstanding the Petitioner making a number of representations to the 1st Respondent, till 2016, no meaningful action was taken by the 1st Respondent. The post-argument written submissions of the Petitioner contain an allegation that notwithstanding the project proposal submitted by the Petitioner having been the only Solar PV power project proposal received by the 2nd Respondent for the Northern Province and ranked 'number one' in the Northern Province for grid interconnection, instead of granting grid interconnection concurrence for the project of the Petitioner, the 1st Respondent had granted approval for a solar - thermal project of 10 MW capacity for the Vavuniya district submitted by another applicant. After a long delay in processing the Application, and no reasons being given for the delay, on 9th May 2016 ("P4B") the 5th Respondent (on behalf of the CEB - 1st Respondent) informed the Director General of the SLSEA - 4th Respondent that the CEB had no objection for consideration of the project for the issue of 'provisional approval' which was understandably subject to the Petitioner complying with certain conditions. This amounted to the CEB - 1st Respondent granting 'grid interconnection concurrence' to the amended project submitted by the Petitioner. Accordingly, by letter dated 19th May 2016 ("P5A") the SLSEA - 2nd Respondent granted 'provisional approval'. As 'provisional approval' was granted, the Petitioner verily believed that upon satisfaction of the conditions attached to the 'provisional approval' the 1st and 2nd Respondents would give approval for the project. Originally, a period of 6 months was given to the Petitioner to comply with the requirements, and on request by the Petitioner, another period of 6 months was given.

It was contended on behalf of the Petitioner that in terms of section 6 of the Guidelines ("P2C"), a 'Standardised Power Purchase Agreement' (SPPA) is available for the renewable energy generation projects which have received approval, with an installed capacity of up to 10 megawatts. The proposed project of the Petitioner belongs to this category. This SPPA is standardised and non-negotiable, and is valid for 20 years from the date of the commencement of commercial operations. Such projects are also eligible to be paid under the Small Power Purchase Tariff (SPPT). The SPPT is an approved tariff published by the PUCSL.

Learned President's Counsel for the Petitioner submitted that where the capacity of a proposed electricity generation project (such as the project proposed by the Petitioner) is equal or less than 10 megawatts, there is no requirement to negotiate the terms and tariffs of the Standardised Power Purchase Agreement (SPPA). He further submitted that this position was evident by section 6 of the Guidelines ("P2C") which relates to 'Power Purchase Agreements and Tariffs'. Further, with the approval of the Cabinet of Ministers (approval granted on 7th March 2015) following the enactment of the SLE (Amendment) Act, No. 31 of 2013), a standardised tariff for solar power purchases under a Non-conventional Renewable Energy Tariff has been published by the 1st Respondent – CEB. Since the grid interconnection concurrence was given by the 1st Respondent – CEB to the Petitioner prior to the issuance of the 'provisional approval' by the 2nd Respondent – SLSEA, the 1st Respondent does not have in fact and in law a discretion in providing the 'Letter of Intent'. He further submitted that there is no Standardised Power Purchase Agreement for renewable energy generation projects which generate in excess of 10 megawatts, and thus, for those projects following a competitive bidding process based on the normal procurement policies is necessary.

It was submitted that the conduct of the Respondents coupled with the communications received from the Respondents and the Guidelines ("P2C"), gave rise to a legitimate expectation that the Petitioner would be entitled to receive a 'Letter of Intent' from the CEB – 1st Respondent, upon the Petitioner securing all the other approvals. It was therefore submitted that, even after fulfilling all the requirements contained in the 'provisional approval' ("P5A") (i.e. obtaining all the approvals listed as conditions to be satisfied in "P5A", other than the 'Letter of Intent') and the Petitioner having on 26th July 2016 ("P7A") requested the 1st / 4th Respondents to issue a 'Letter of Intent' (and thereafter having sent two reminders), the failure on the part of the 1st Respondent to issue the 'Letter of Intent' constitutes a breach of the legitimate expectation of the Petitioner.

He further submitted that under section 43(4) proviso (b) of the SLE Act (as amended by Act No. 31 of 2013), it was not necessary for the 1st Respondent – CEB to call for tenders with regard to projects in respect of which a permit has been issued under section 18 of the SLSEA Act. He also drew the attention of the Court to the contents of section 43(7) and 43(8) of the SLE Act (amended by Act No. 31 of 2013), which recognize a 'Standardised Power Purchase Agreement'.

In view of the foregoing, learned President's Counsel for the Petitioner submitted that, there was 'absolutely no restriction' for the 1st Respondent under the SLE Act (as amended) to purchase electricity from a developer approved under the SLSEA Act, as there is no legal requirement for tenders for such projects.

Learned President's Counsel for the Petitioner summed up his submissions by stating that the non-issuance of the 'Letter of Intent' to the Petitioner was wrongful and without justifiable reason. Learned President's Counsel reiterated that the conduct of the Respondents coupled with the communications received from the Respondents gave rise to a legitimate expectation that the Petitioner would be entitled to receive a 'Letter of Intent' upon the Petitioner securing all the other approvals. Learned President's Counsel submitted that the continuing failure which amounts to a refusal to issue the 'Letter of Intent' to the Petitioner is arbitrary, capricious, unreasonable and discriminatory. In the circumstances, he submitted that the Petitioner has been denied the equal protection of the law as envisaged by Article 12(1) of the Constitution. Thus, he submitted that the fundamental right guaranteed in terms of Article 12(1) had been infringed by the 1st Respondent.

6. Submissions made on behalf of the Respondents

On behalf of the Respondents, it was submitted by the learned Solicitor General that the instant Application alleging an infringement of the Fundamental Rights of the Petitioner, had been filed prematurely. He submitted that, initially a period of six months was given by the SLSEA for the Petitioner to comply with the conditions that were attached to the 'provisional approval' (which was issued on 19th May 2016). Subsequently, on a request made by the Petitioner, this period of time was extended by another six months. Accordingly, the extended period granted to the Petitioner to comply with the requirements was to end on 18th May 2017. Had the Petitioner failed to satisfy the conditions that were attached to the 'provisional approval' at the time of the expiry of this extended period, in terms of section 17(4) of the SLSEA Act, the 'provisional approval' granted to the Petitioner would have lapsed. This Application has been submitted to the Supreme Court on 15th May 2017, three days before the extended period was to have lapsed. Learned Solicitor General submitted that the Petitioner resorted to this move, in order to prevent the 'provisional approval' from lapsing. Therefore, he submitted that the instant Application had been filed to prevent the provisional approval from automatically lapsing and was also premature.

Learned Solicitor General also submitted that as the Petitioner has been unsuccessful in obtaining the 'Letter of Intent' from the CEB, he should have brought that matter to the attention of the CEB. That the Petitioner has done. The CEB responded explaining the reason which prevented the CEB from granting the 'Letter of Intent', i.e. the Minister of Power and Renewable Energy has appointed a committee headed by the Secretary to the Ministry of Power and Energy to determine the said matter. In terms of section 22(1)(b) of the SLSEA Act, any person who is aggrieved by a refusal to grant final approval to an Application may, within one month of the receipt of such communication informing him of such refusal, appeal against such refusal to the Board of Management of the SLSEA. This step has not been taken by the Petitioner. Thus, learned Solicitor General submitted that due to the afore-stated reasons, the instant Application is premature and should be dismissed.

Learned Solicitor General submitted that in 2012, it was due to 'grid interconnection issues' that concurrence for grid interconnection was not given by the 1st Respondent - CEB to the 2nd Respondent - SLSEA in respect of the Petitioner's project. The CEB stopped giving 'Letters of intent' to wind and solar projects until the grid connection limitations and effects on the system were studied. According to a study conducted by the CEB, only 10 MW solar projects had been considered viable for Vavuniya. He further submitted that with grid expansion and system expansion, these constraints can be relaxed or changed.

Learned counsel for the Respondents also submitted that, following the amendment to the SLE Act introduced by Act No. 31 of 2013, in terms of amended section 43 and in particular sub-sections 43(3) and 43(4), procurement of electricity by the CEB with regard to projects above 5 MW has to be done on a competitive basis by calling for tenders. He explained that the process of competitive bidding encourages lower electricity cost, which ultimately helps consumers and also the national economy. In the circumstances, the Ministry of Power and Renewable Energy had decided on a policy of calling for tenders for wind and solar electricity generation projects. Accordingly, tenders had been called for two 10 megawatts wind projects and contracts had been awarded. Tenders for sixty 10 megawatt solar projects had been called and award of tenders were being considered. Since 2013, no 'Letters of Intent' had been issued except for a single joint venture. It is the position of the Respondents that according to "4R2", with regard to projects which are to generate over 5 megawatts of electricity, project development has to take place through a tender process. Thus, a 'competitive bidding process' must be adhered to. As evident from "4R1", the Honourable Attorney General has expressed the opinion that when new electricity generation plants are required, in terms of the amended law, the price at which electricity is to be purchased by the CEB (in its capacity as the 'transmission licensee') must be determined by competitive bidding. In terms of section 43(3) of the Act, the selection of a person to provide electricity should be on the basis of least cost.

Learned Solicitor General submitted that the Application of the Petitioner was submitted to the SLSEA on 20th April 2012, well before Act No. 31 of 2013 amended section 43 of the Act. He stressed that though on 19th May 2016, 'provisional approval' was granted for the project proposed by the Petitioner, "the CEB was well within the scope of the said Amendment and the opinion expressed by the Honourable Attorney General to scrupulously adhere to the provisions of section 43(4) and not issue the letter of intent". He further submitted that the 'sole reason' for not issuing the 'Letter of Intent' was that amended section 43(4) of the Act required competitive bidding to take place prior to entering into an agreement between the CEB and the project proponent. He concluded his submission by asserting that "the CEB cannot be faulted or censured for obeying the law, as any contravention of it would entail legal sanctions and implications for the CEB'. There was no malicious intent on the part of the CEB in denying the Petitioner of the letter of intent. It was the supervening event of the law being amended, that prevented the CEB from performing the role envisaged by the Petitioner".

7. Analysis of the evidence, application of the law and conclusions

7.1 Would the Petitioner be disentitled to any relief on the footing that as at the time the Application for a permit was submitted to the SLSEA by the petitioner, it had not been incorporated as a company?

Section 16 of the SLSEA Act which provides for the submission of an Application to the SLSEA by a person who is desirous of engaging in and carrying on an on-grid renewable energy project, does not specify that such an applicant should be a company incorporated under the Companies Act. Thus, there is no statutory requirement to that effect, though the 4th Respondent has made such an assertion. However, Gazette notifications Nos. 1599/6 ("P2A") and 1705/22 ("P2B") dated 27th April 2009 and 10th May 2011, respectively, titled 'On-grid Renewable Energy Projects Regulations, 2009' issued by the Minister of Power and Energy under section 67 read with sections 16(2), 17(2)(a) and 18(2)(a) of the of the SLSEA Act, are relevant in this regard. Schedules A, B, C, and D of "P2A" issued in April 2009 had been replaced by four schedules contained in "P2B", which had been issued in May 2011. Thus, it would be "P2A" read with "P2B" that would be relevant to the instant matter. Regulation 2 of "P2A" provides that "an application for engaging in or carrying on of an on-grid renewable energy project within a Development Area, shall be submitted to the Director-General in such form as specified in Schedule "A" to these Regulations …". Schedule A of the said Regulations contain a template of the Application to be submitted. In item 4(ii) of Schedule A of "P2A", the applicant is required to disclose the "Company Name (if applicable)". In item 3 of "P2B" the applicant is required to disclose "If the applicant is a Company: Name, Registration No., Name of Directors of the Company, Address, Telephone Numbers, Email". It is thus apparent that the applicant being an incorporated company at the time of the submission of the Application is not an essential requirement imposed by law or through Regulations issued under the Act. Furthermore, Clause 2.1 of the guidelines issued by the SLSEA titled "A Guide to the Project Approval Process for On-grid Renewable Energy Project Development" ("P2C") provides that "Any person (an individual or a company) may apply for a renewable energy project anytime …". According to section 9(1)(c) of the SLE Act, a generation licensee is required to be an incorporated company, only if the project is to generate more than 25 megawatts of electricity. It is also pertinent to observe that, notwithstanding the alleged disqualification asserted to on behalf of the 1st Respondent – CEB and referred to in the submissions of the learned Solicitor General, the SLSEA had entertained the Application submitted by the Petitioner and processed it. Further, this objection was not raised by the 2nd Respondent – SLSEA, which not only accepted the Application, but processed it as well, and referred it to the PAC. Furthermore, in any event, even though the Petitioner had not been incorporated as a company as at the date on which the Application was submitted by it to the SLSEA (i.e. 20th April 2012), as apparent by "P1A" (Certificate of Incorporation), by 14th May 2012 it had been incorporated as a company. In fact, the Petitioner has revealed in the said Application ("P3A") that the company was 'in the process of incorporation'.

7.2 Would the Petitioner be disentitled to any relief on the footing that the Application submitted by the Petitioner to the SLSEA was not accompanied by a Resolution adopted by the Board of Directors of the Petitioner authorizing the person who submitted the Application, to submit it on behalf of the company?

Section 16 of the SLSEA Act does not impose a statutory requirement that if the applicant is a company, the Application should be accompanied by a Resolution adopted by the Board of Directors authorizing the person submitting the Application to the SLSEA to submit such an Application on behalf of the company. However, "P2B" contains the following: "Company resolution authorizing the applicant to submit the application (pls. attach)". As stated above, as at the time the Application was submitted, the Petitioner – company had not been incorporated. It was under incorporation. Thus, complying with the afore-stated requirement was not possible. "P2B" has been issued by the Minister under section 67 (power conferred on the Minister to make Regulations), read with section 16(2) (which provides that an Application should be in the prescribed form). While compliance with the requirements contained in these Regulations is necessary, acquiescence with a possible non-compliance will thereby prevent the party which acquiesced from subsequently raising any objection to the alleged non-compliance. As referred to above, it is seen that the 2nd Respondent – SLSEA has accepted the Application presented by the Petitioner ("P3A") and processed it. The 1st Respondent – CEB (which raised the objection referred to in this paragraph) took part in the further processing of the said Application and supported the granting of the 'provisional approval' to the Application. Thus, the 4th Respondent is disentitled in law to object to the Application submitted to the SLSEA by the Petitioner on the footing that the Application was 'irregular'.

Conclusions with regard to questions "7.1" and "7.2"

It is to be noted that, even according to the 4th Respondent, that the Petitioner was not issued with a permit under section 18 of the SLSEA Act, was not due to the alleged submission of an 'irregular Application'. Furthermore, in none of the correspondence either the 1st Respondent – CEB or the 2nd Respondent – SLSEA has had with the Petitioner, has either of the Respondents referred to the Petitioner having submitted an 'irregular Application'. At no point prior to this Application being filed in the Supreme Court has the 4th Respondent raised the issue that the Application presented to the 2nd Respondent - SLSEA was defective. In fact, it is astonishing that the 4th Respondent who served in the PAC which granted 'provisional approval' to the Petitioner did not raise this issue at that stage. In all these circumstances, it is my view that the afore-stated two objections raised on behalf of the 1st Respondent - CEB by the 4th Respondent are without merit, and must be ruled as futile attempts not made in good faith, to prevent the instant Application presented to this Court being adjudicated upon based on its merits and the applicable substantive law. In the circumstances, I must reject in-limine the assertions made by the 4th Respondent and the corresponding submissions made by the learned Solicitor General that the instant Application should be dismissed on the footing that the Application submitted to the SLSEA was an 'irregular Application'.

7.3 Did the Petitioner file the instant Application before the Supreme Court prematurely, without having sought administrative relief prior to filing the Application?

The extended period of the 'provisional approval' granted on 19th May 2016 by the SLSEA to the application for a permit under section 18 of the SLSEA Act, was to have lapsed on 18th May 2017. Prior to the said date, on 15th May 2017 the Petitioner filed the instant Application in this Court. On behalf of the 1st Respondent – CEB the 4th

Respondent alleges that on the one hand the instant Application was filed to prevent the extended period of the 'provisional approval' from lapsing and on the other hand without having recourse to administrative reliefs provided for in sections 22(1)(b) and 28 of the SLSEA Act.

Section 22(1)(b) of the SLSEA Act provides that "any person who is aggrieved by a refusal to grant final approval to an application … may, within one month of the receipt of the communication informing him of such refusal …, appeal against such refusal … to the Board". It is necessary to emphatically observe that, in the instant case, at no time did the SLSEA inform the Petitioner that it had taken a decision to refuse to grant final approval to the Application submitted to it by the Petitioner. Thus, the need to seek administrative relief in terms of section 22(1)(b) did not arise. In fact, the last communication received from the SLSEA ("P14" letter dated 1st March 2017 addressed to the General Manager of the CEB and copied to the Petitioner) gives a positive impression, in that the only requirement to be satisfied by the Petitioner to be issued with the final approval was the 'Letter of Intent' to be issued by the CEB, and requesting the CEB to issue such a letter in favour of the Petitioner. In the circumstances, the Petitioner had no reason to believe that the SLSEA had taken a decision or was going to 'refuse' to grant final approval to the Application submitted by the Petitioner seeking a permit under section 18 of the SLSEA Act. Thus, there is no basis in law to fault the Petitioner for not having sought administrative relief under section 22(1)(b) of the SLSEA Act.

"(1) Any person who is aggrieved by – (a) the refusal of the Committee to grant a permit for an off-grid renewable energy project; or (b) the cancellation under section 27 of a permit issued, may appeal against such decision to the Board.

(2) Any person who is aggrieved by the decision of the Board on any appeal made under subsection (1), may appeal against such decision to the Secretary to the Ministry of the Minister, whose decision thereon shall be final."

It is clearly observable that, the mechanism of addressing an administrative appeal provided for in section 28 pertains and is restricted to the two situations referred to in paragraphs "(a)" and "(b)" above. The instant Application presented by the Petitioner to the SLSEA pertains to an 'on-grid' renewable energy electricity generation project and not to an 'off-grid' project. Furthermore, the matter complained of to this Court by the Petitioner does not relate to a cancellation of a permit issued under section 27 of the SLSEA Act.

In the circumstances, I conclude that, there is no basis for the 4th Respondent whatsoever to complain that the Petitioner had filed the instant Application without having recourse to the administrative relief mechanisms provided in sections 22(1)(b) and 28 of the Act. I must express concern as to how such an objection entered the affidavit of the 4th Respondent, without legal scrutiny, which if took place, would not have resulted in permitting the 4th Respondent to take up such position.

Indeed, the Petitioner has filed the instant Application 3 days prior to the extended period of the 'provisional approval' from lapsing. That in my opinion is perfectly within the legitimate entitlement of the Petitioner. In a matter that has administratively dragged on since April 2012 up to May 2017, the Petitioner was perfectly within his entitlement to have preferred the instant Application on the date it did. The Petitioner has filed this Application sequel to the last communication received from the 1st Respondent CEB on 22nd March 2017 ("P16"), from which it appears that the Petitioner formed the view that, given the previous developments, no useful purpose would be met by pursuing any further, the administrative route to obtain a permit under section 18 of the SLSEA Act. Thus, there is no basis to allege that the Application has been filed prematurely. Therefore, I see no merit in that objection as well.

7.4 Did the 1st Respondent - CEB encounter technical reasons (technical difficulties) which justified the CEB refusing to grant the 'Letter of Intent'?

The 4th Respondent has on behalf of the 1st Respondent – CEB, cited several purported 'technical reasons' as to why the 1st Respondent – CEB was unable to grant the 'Letter of Intent' to the Petitioner. I have referred to those technical reasons in detail earlier in this judgment. Those reasons may be summarized as follows:

(i) problems arising due to constraints in the interconnection of electricity generated by renewable energy power plants to the transmission system (grid);

(ii) the need to refrain from granting the 'Letter of Intent' pending the study of grid connection limitations and effects on the system;

(iii) according to a study conducted, only 10 MW projects were viable for Vavuniya.

Though the 4th Respondent has on behalf of the 1st Respondent – CEB chosen to raise these technical issues as one justification for the non-issue of the 'Letter of Intent' to the Petitioner, the evidence placed before this Court reveals the following:

(a) the first two out of the three technical reasons were of generic character possibly applicable to all on-grid renewable energy-based electricity generation projects. As at April 2012 when the Application of the Petitioner was being tendered to the SLSEA, the CEB had not made a public announcement of such difficulties. Thus, the Petitioner had no basis to entertain a well-founded belief that the application for a permit under section 18 of the SLSEA Act will not be entertained positively due to such technical reasons. If in fact there were such technical reasons which necessitated the CEB not to grant 'grid interconnection concurrence' and 'Letter of Intent' to project proponents, it was incumbent on the CEB to have made an announcement to that effect;

(b) in this regard, the following paragraph in the Guidelines ("P2C") is of great relevance.

"As the single buyer of electricity produced by the NRE project, CEB Transmission and Bulk Supply Licensee will have to be satisfied with its ability to accept electricity produced by the proposed project. This will be based on careful evaluation of system wide impacts, network typology and system stability, in addition to the more commonly understood constraints such as local transmission grid limitations and grid substation capacity limitations. SEA will consult CEB in this regard upon receiving a complete application, before presenting it to the PAC for Provisional Approval. Hence the absence of the concurrence of CEB to grid connect the proposed project will result in refusal of provisional approval." (Section 2.3, 'Concurrence of the CEB', page 8 of "P2C")

On 18th May 2012 ("P3B") the 5th Respondent acting on behalf of the 2nd Respondent – SLSEA wrote to the 4th Respondent – General Manager of the CEB, providing information pertaining to 23 Applications received by the SLSEA, which included the Application submitted by the Petitioner. He sought information from the CEB regarding the availability of 'grid capacity' pertaining to the proposed projects. He also sought the concurrence of the CEB to table the corresponding Applications before the PAC for the grant of 'provisional approval'. It was the contention of the learned President's Counsel for the Petitioner that this letter amounted to the 2nd Respondent – SLSEA seeking 'grid interconnection concurrence' for the Petitioner's proposed project from the 1st Respondent. Learned Solicitor General for the Respondents did not express disagreement with that contention. In response to "P3B", the 1st Respondent required the Petitioner to change the design of the proposed project to include a 'battery storage system' due to 'short-term power variation in electricity generated by the proposed project'. This shows that at this stage itself, the 1st Respondent – CEB had addressed its mind to 'technical aspects' pertaining to the project proposed by the Petitioner. Furthermore, the Petitioner changed the design of the proposed project to include a 'battery storage system'. The Petitioner has adverted to the fact that this would ensure smooth power output at the grid end so that sudden power drops could be avoided. The Respondents have not countered this position. The amenability of the Petitioner to change the technical design of the proposed solar energy electricity generation plant to suit the requirement of the CEB was conveyed by the Petitioner to the 2nd Respondent – SLSEA, and the SLSEA informed the CEB in 2012 itself. From 2012 till 2016, the 1st Respondent – CEB remained silent. By "P4A" by letter dated 15th February 2016, the SLSEA wrote to the CEB specifically requesting from the latter, 'grid interconnection approval' for the Petitioner's project. Finally, by letter dated 9th May 2016 ("P4B", which has also been produced marked "P6J"), the CEB wrote to the SLSEA indicating that it had no objection to the SLSEA considering the Petitioner's Application for the grant of 'provisional approval'. Counsel agreed that this letter ("P4B") amounted to the CEB granting 'grid interconnection concurrence' to the Petitioner's project. Therefore, it concludes that certainly by May 2016, the 1st Respondent – CEB had cleared all possible technical concerns it may have entertained as regards the Petitioner's project.

It was in this backdrop that in May 2016, the PAC decided to grant 'provisional approval' to the project proposed by the Petitioner (a 10 megawatts Solar PV Project with a battery storage system). Learned President's Counsel for the Petitioner submitted that a decision to grant 'provisional approval' would have been taken upon a careful evaluation of technical factors such as the systemwide impacts, network typology, system typology, system stability, local transmission grid limitations and limitations in capacity at the grid end sub-station. Learned Solicitor General did not counter this submission. It is noteworthy that the General Manager of the CEB was a constituent member of the PAC, and hence if there were genuine technical reasons, he could have raised those reasons at the PAC and objected to the grant of 'provisional approval'.

Neither the 4th Respondent nor the learned Solicitor General explained to this Court reasons for that technical turn-around. Nor was this Court informed as to why even in November 2016, the CEB continued to indicate to the Petitioner of the possibility of proceeding with the project, if certain technical modifications were given effect to. If the two technical reasons cited by the 4th Respondent genuinely prevented to 1st Respondent – CEB from issuing the 'Letter of Intent' to the Petitioner, it could have raised such technical difficulties with the SLSEA and with the Petitioner well before such factors were raised in the pleadings filed in this Court.

Thus, the position taken up in the affidavit of the 4th Respondent is totally unacceptable.

(c) Letters issued by the 1st Respondent – CEB with regard to the Application submitted by the Petitioner for a permit, namely "P3D" dated 21st November 2012, "P6J" dated 9th May 2016, "P10B" dated 1st December 2016, and "P16" dated 22nd March 2017 make no reference to any of the purported technical difficulties cited by the 4th Respondent. The 4th Respondent has not taken up the position that Petitioner was not informed of the afore-stated purported technical difficulties, as reasons for the non-issue of the 'Letter of Intent'.

(d) Learned President's Counsel for the Petitioner submitted that the grant of the 'provisional approval' by the 2nd Respondent - SLSEA was a clear indication of the issue of 'grid interconnection concurrence' by the 1st Respondent – CEB. That such concurrence being issued is a clear indication that no technical difficulty exists with regard to the proposed project of the Petitioner. Learned Solicitor General for the Respondents did not counter this position.

(e) In terms of the findings of the study commissioned by the 1st Respondent – CEB ("4R1"), "… only 10 MW solar had been considered viable for Vavuniya." As stated above, the project proposed by the Petitioner was a renewable energy project which had the potential of generating 10 megawatts. Thus, the generation capacity of the proposed project of the Petitioner matched this requirement contained in the findings of the study. The affidavit of the 4th Respondent does not contain any reason why under the afore-stated circumstances the project proposed by the 4th Respondent was technically unsuitable.

In view of the foregoing circumstances, this Court is of the opinion that the 'technical reasons' cited by the 4th Respondent were in fact not the actual reason for the refusal on the part of the 1st Respondent – CEB to issue the 'Letter of Intent' to the Petitioner. The conduct of the CEB in granting 'grid interconnection concurrence' in May 2016 clearly shows that by that time the CEB had cleared whatever technical issues there may have been and the proposed project of the Petitioner was of such nature that electricity generated by it could be supplied to the national grid without encountering any technical glitch. Thus, the said purported 'technical reasons' cannot be accepted as valid grounds to refuse granting any relief to the Petitioner.

7.5 Do the provisions of section 43 of the Sri Lanka Electricity Act as amended by Act No. 31 of 2013 impose a legal compulsion on the CEB to call for tenders prior to issuing a 'Letter of Intent' to a solar powered electricity generation project which would generate up to 10 megawatts of electricity?

Paragraph 23(c) of the affidavit of the 4th Respondent – Aruna Kumara Samarasinghe, the General Manager of the CEB reads as follows:

"Following the amendment to the Electricity Act (Act No. 31 of 2013) procurement of electricity has to be done on a competitive basis. This process of utilizing competitive bidding encourages lower electricity cost, ultimately helping customer and national economy." [Emphasis added.]

Thus, the position of the 1st Respondent – CEB is that following the amendment introduced to the SLE Act by Act No. 31 of 2013, it became imperative for the CEB as a transmission licensee (the sole transmission licensee) to procure electricity from a person entitled to generate electricity and supply it to the national grid, based on the selection of such person on a competitive basis.

The learned Solicitor General submitted that the enactment of Act No. 31 of 2013 was a 'supervening event' which prevented the 1st Respondent – CEB from issuing a 'Letter of Intent' to the Petitioner. Referring to an opinion expressed by the 7th Respondent - Honourable Attorney General (AG) to the 6th Respondent – Secretary to the Ministry of Power and Energy ("4R1"), the learned Solicitor General submitted that the AG had expressed the view that where new electricity generation plants are required, the amended law stipulates that the selection of licensees to operate new electricity generation plants or for the expansion of existing generation plants and the price at which electricity is to be purchased from such electricity generation plants is to be determined by the selection of suitable persons based on competitive tenders to be submitted by them.

In view of the position taken up on behalf of the 1st Respondent – CEB in this regard, it is necessary to examine the law, prior to the enactment of Act No. 31 of 2013, and the changes introduced by the afore-stated amendment.

Section 43 (original section, prior to it being amended by Act No. 31 of 2013) of the SLE Act, No. 20 of 2009 provided as follows:

(1) Subject to section 8, no person shall operate or provide any new generation plant or extend any existing generation plant, except as authorized by the Commission under this section.

(2) Subject to the approval of the Commission, a transmission licensee shall, in accordance with the conditions of the transmission license and such guidelines relating to procurement as may be prescribed by regulation and by notice published in the Gazette, call for tenders to provide new generation plant or to extend existing generation plant, as specified in the notice.

(3) A transmission licensee shall with the consent of the Commission, select a person to provide at least cost*, the new generation plant or to extend the existing generation plant specified in the notice published under subsection (2), from amongst the persons who have submitted technically acceptable tenders in response to such notice."*
(Emphasis added).

[Section 8 provides as to who would be entitled to participate in a bidding process for the generation of electricity. Section 9 elaborates that position with regard to those who shall be eligible to apply for issue of a generation license with a generation capacity of 25 megawatts or more.]

Section 43 of the SLE Act (the original section) or any other provision of that Act (prior to the amendment introduced by Act No. 31 of 2013) does not exclude the applicability of section 43 to electricity generation plants which use renewable energy sources. Neither party presented evidence which shows that the PUCSL had exempted electricity generation projects which use renewable energy from provisions of the SLE Act. Nor did learned Counsel who appeared for the Petitioner and the Respondent took up the position that section 43 (in its original form) did not apply to electricity generation plants which use renewable energy. Nor do the provisions of the SLSEA Act exclude the application of the SLE Act to electricity generation plants which use renewable energy. Therefore, the inference to be drawn is that the provisions of the SLE Act (prior to the amendment) applied equally to electricity generation plants which use both renewable energy and non-renewable energy.

It would thus be seen that well before the enactment of Act No. 31 of 2013 (which amended provisions of the SLE Act, No. 20 of 2009 including section 43 thereof), the original law itself provided for a competitive bidding process to be followed to select project proponents of new electricity generation plants or to extend existing generation plants (generation licenses), enabling the transmission licensee to purchase electricity at the least cost from selected generation licensees. Thus, it would be incorrect to refer to the methodology of 'competitive bidding through the calling of tenders' as a 'supervening event' introduced to the law by Act No. 31 of 2013, as the original law itself provided for that methodology.

Neither the 1st or the 2nd Respondents refer as to why the competitive bidding methodology through the calling of tenders (which obviously is aimed at the CEB – sole transmission licensee purchasing electricity from electricity generation licensees at the least cost) was not embedded in the 'Guide to the project approval process for on-grid renewable energy projects development' ("P2C") issued by the 2nd Respondent – SLSEA and why such a procedure was not embedded in the procedure to be followed by project proponents who were interested in obtaining a permit under section 18 of the SLSEA Act to operate on-grid renewable energy based electricity generation projects.

From the evidence placed before this Court by the Petitioner and the 4th and 5th Respondents on behalf of the 1st and 2nd Respondents, respectively, the only inference this Court can arrive at, is that the 1st and 2nd Respondents have erroneously proceeded on the footing that section 43 of the SLE Act (prior to being amended in 2013) had no application to on-grid electricity generation plants which would utilize renewable energy sources. As I propose to explain shortly, it appears that the 1st and 2nd Respondents have proceeded with the same mindset till this Application was filed by the Petitioner, notwithstanding the Honourable Attorney General in November 2013 ("4R1 – Attachment - 2") (which opinion had been issued after Act No. 31 of 2013 came into operation) having expressed his opinion that "the Sri Lanka Electricity (Amendment) Act No. 31 of 2013 while repealing section 43 of the Principle Enactment, by section 43(4) of the Amending Act, maintains the general principle that the purchase of electricity by the Transmission licensee from new generation plants (and extensions thereto) shall be determined by way of open competitive bidding, by way of tender" [Emphasis added]. It would be seen that by the use of the terminology "… maintains the general principle …" the Attorney General has also noted that even prior to the amendment of section 43 by Act No. 31 of 2013, the principle of "… open competitive bidding by way of tender …" had been in existence.

I will now deal with the position advanced on behalf of the Petitioner, that following the amendment to the law introduced by Act No. 31 of 2013, section 43(4) read with section 43(2) does not require the 1st Respondent – CEB to call for tenders and cause competitive bidding for the purpose of purchasing electricity from those to whom an electricity generation license would be issued by the PUCSL and who would generate electricity not exceeding 10 megawatts utilizing renewable energy sources such as solar power. I propose to also deal with the other submission made on behalf of the Petitioner that there was no need for the 1st Respondent – CEB to negotiate the price at which electricity was to be purchased from the Petitioner, as there was a Standardised Power Purchase Agreement (SPPA) and a Small Power Purchase Tariff (SPPT) which had been approved by the PUCSL and which specified the price at which electricity should be purchased by the 1st Respondent – CEB.

In this regard, it would be necessary to consider the provisions of section 43 of the SLE Act, as amended by Act No. 31 of 2013. For ease of reference, the relevant provisions of section 43 are reproduced below:

"(1) Subject to the provisions of section 8 of this Act, no person shall proceed with the procuring or operating of any new generation plant or the expansion of the generation capacity of an existing plant, otherwise than in the manner authorized by the commission under this section.

(2) A transmission licensee shall, based on the future demand forecast as specified in the Lease Cost Long Term Generation Expansion Plan prepared by such licensee and as amended after considering the submissions of the distribution and generation licensees and approved by the Commission, submit proposals to proceed with the procuring of any new generation plant or for the expansion of the generation capacity of an existing plant, to the Commission for its written approval:

Provided however where on the day preceding the date of the coming into force of this Act:-

(a) an approval of the Cabinet of Ministers had been obtained to develop a new generation plant or to expand the generation capacity of an existing generation plant ; or

(b) a permit had been issued to generate electricity through renewable energy resources by the Sri Lanka Sustainable Energy Authority established by the Sri Lanka Sustainable Energy Authority Act, No. 35 of 2007 under section 18 of that Act, as a consequence of which the development of a new generation plant or the expansion of the generation capacity of an existing plant, has become necessary, the approval obtained or the permit issued, as the case may be, shall be referred to the Commission for its approval. The Commission shall, having considered the request made along with any supporting documents annexed thereto and on being satisfied that the necessary Cabinet approval has been obtained or a permit had been issued by the Sustainable Energy Authority, as the case may be, prior to the coming into force of this Act, grant approval to the transmission licensee to proceed with the procuring of the new generation plant or the expansion of the generation capacity of its existing plant, as the case may be.

(3) Where a person who is issued with a licence under section 13 of this Act to generate electricity of less than 25MW in capacity, proposes to expand its generation capacity of its generation plant as a consequence of which the generation of electricity would exceed 25MW in capacity, the approval of the Commission under subsection (1) for such proposal shall not be granted, unless such person is a person who is qualified under subsection (1) of section 9 of this Act, to be issued with a generation licence.

(4) Upon obtaining the approval of the Commission under subsection (2), the transmission licensee shall in accordance with the conditions of its transmission licencee shall in accordance with the conditions of its transmission licence and in compliance with any rules that may be made by the Commission relating to procurement, call for tenders by notice published in the Gazette, to develop a new generation plant or to expand the generation capacity of an existing generation plant, as the case may be, as shall be specified in the notice:

Provided however, subject to the provisions of subsection (6) of this section, the requirement to submit a tender on the publication of a notice under this subsection shall not be applicable in respect of any new generation plant or to the expansion of any existing generation plant that is being developed –

(a) in accordance with the Least Cost Long Term Generation Expansion Plan duly approved by the Commission and which has received the approval of the Cabinet of Ministers on the date preceding the date of the coming into force of this Act and is required to be operated at least cost;

(b) on a permit issued by the Sri Lanka Sustainable Energy Authority, established by the Sri Lanka Sustainable Energy Authority Act No. 35 of 2007 under section 18 of that Act for the generation of electricity through renewable energy sources and required to be operated at the standardized tariff and is governed by a Standardized Power Purchase Agreement approved by the Cabinet of Ministers; or

(c) in compliance with the Least Cost Long Term Generation Expansion Plan duly approved by the Commission having received the prior approval of the Commission, for which the approval of the Cabinet of Ministers has been received on the basis of : -

(i) an offer received from a foreign sovereign Government to the Government of Sri Lanka, for which the approval of the Cabinet of Ministers have been obtained ; or

(ii) to meet any emergency situation as determined by the Cabinet of Ministers during a national calamity or a long term forced outage of a major generation plant, where protracted bid inviting process outweigh the potential benefit or procuring emergency capacity required to be provided by any person at least cost.

(5) Upon the close of the tender, the transmission licensee shall through a properly constituted tender board, recommend to the Commission for its approval, the person who is best capable of –

(a) Developing the new generation plant or the expansion of the generation capacity of an existing generation plant, as the case may be, as specified in the notice published in the Gazette under subsection (4), in compliance with the technical and economic parameters of the transmission licensee:

(b) Selling electrical energy or electricity generating capacity at least cost; and

(c) Meeting the requirements of the Least Cost Long Term Generation Expansion Plan of the transmission licensee duly approved by the Commission, along with the draft Power Purchase Agreement, describing the terms and conditions of such purchase.

(6) Notwithstanding the fact that: -

(a) An exemption from the submission of a tender is granted to any person under paragraphs (a), (b) or (c) of the proviso to subsection (4); or

(b) A new generation plant or an expansion of the generating capacity of an existing generation plant is being developed in accordance with the Least Cost Long Term Generation Expansion Plan duly approved by the Commission, by a person who had obtained the approval of the Cabinet of Ministers and which approval is in force on the date of the coming into operation of this Act, the transmission licensee shall be required to negotiate with the person concerned to satisfy itself, that such person is capable of developing the new generation plant or the expansion of the generating capacity of an existing generation plant, as the case may be, in compliance with the technical and economical parameters of the transmission licensee and is capable of selling electrical energy or electricity generating capacity at least cost, and forward its recommendations for approval to the Commission, along with the draft Power Purchase Agreement or the draft Standardized Power Purchase Agreement, as the case may be, describing the terms and conditions of such purchase.

(7) The Commission shall be required on receipt of any recommendations of the transmission licensee under subsection (5) or subsection (6), as the case may be, to grant its approval at its earliest convenience, where the Commission is satisfied that the recommended price for the purchase of electrical energy or electricity generating capacity meets the principle of least cost and the requirements of the Least Cost Long Term Generation Expansion Plan and that the terms and conditions of such purchase is within the accepted technical and economical parameters of the transmission licensee.

(8) For the purpose of this section –

"Least Cost Long Term Generation Expansion Plan" means a plan prepared by the transmission licensee and amended and approved by the Commission on the basis of the submissions made by the licensees and published by the Commission, indicating the future electricity generation capacity requirements determined on the basis of least economic cost and meeting the technical and reliability requirements of the electricity network of Sri Lanka which is duly approved by the Commission and published in the Gazette from time to time; and

"Standardized Power Purchase Agreement" means an agreement entered into by the transmission licensee for the purchase of electrical energy or electricity generation capacity, generated using renewable energy resources under a permit issued by the Sri Lanka Sustainable Energy Authority Act, No. 35 of 2007, under section 18 of that Act."

From a plain reading of the section, it is clear that section 43 of the SLE Act inter-alia applies to (i) the procuring of a new electricity generating plant or the expansion of an existing plant by the transmission licensee (the CEB), and (ii) the operation of a new electricity generation plant or the expansion of an existing plant by a generation licensee. It is also apparent that, section 43 applies to both electricity generation plants using non-renewable energy sources as well as to those using renewable energy sources. Section 43(2) provides that the process of procurement of electricity by the transmission licensee (the CEB) shall commence with the latter preparing a 'Least Cost Long-Term Generation Expansion Plan' and getting it approved by the Commission. Procurement of electricity by the transmission licensee from a generation licensee shall be in accordance with such plan. Thus, it is evident that the procurement of electricity shall be based on the national need for electricity and the requirement of the transmission licensee to service that demand as provided in the Least Cost Long Term Generation Expansion Plan. Further, this plan should facilitate the purchase of electricity by the transmission licensee at the least cost, enabling the transmission licensee to provide electricity to consumers also at least cost. However, as stipulated in the proviso to subsection 43(2), following the afore-stated methodology shall not be necessary in the following two situations:

(i) instances where on the day preceding the date of coming into operation of the Act, an approval had been obtained from the Cabinet of Ministers to develop either a new electricity generation plant or to expand the generation capacity of an existing plant;

(ii) instances where on a day preceding the date of coming into operation of the Act, a permit had been issued by the SLSEA under section 18 of the SLSEA Act to generate electricity through renewable energy resources.

As stated earlier, in terms of section 21 of Act No. 31 of 2013, the amendments made to the principal enactment (SLE Act, No. 20 of 2009) by provisions of the amending Act shall be deemed for all purposes to have come into force on 8th April 2009. Therefore, the two exemptions stated above contained in the proviso to section 43(2) with regard to the requirement to follow the legislative scheme contained in section 43(2) would not be applicable, only if either the approval by the Cabinet of Ministers or a permit issued under section 18 of the SLSEA Act had been obtained prior to 8th April 2009. In the instant case, as at 8th April 2009, neither the approval of the Cabinet of Ministers nor a permit under section 18 of the SLSEA Act had been obtained for the project proposed by the Petitioner. Therefore, the proviso to subsection 43(2) would have no applicability to the instant case. Thus, it was incumbent on the transmission licensee – CEB to have complied with the procedural requirement contained in subsection 43(2). Neither party has placed before this Court any evidence in that regard. Nor has either party alleged that the 1st Respondent – CEB had failed to comply with subsection 43(2) of the SLE Act.

It would be seen that subsection 43(3) has no applicability to this case, as this instant case does not relate to the expansion of the electricity generation capacity of an existing plant.

In terms of section 43(4), after obtaining the approval from the PUCSL under section 43(2), the transmission licensee (CEB) is required to in accordance with the conditions of the transmission licence call for tenders by notice published in the Gazette. However, subject to the provisions of subsection (6), this requirement of calling for tenders shall not be applicable in three instances. One such instance is if the new electricity generation plant or the expansion of an existing plant is being developed on a permit issued by the SLSEA established under section 18 of the SLSEA Act for the generation of electricity through renewable energy sources and required to be operated at the standardized tariff and is governed by a Standardised Power Purchase Agreement approved by the Cabinet of Ministers. [paragraph (b) of the proviso to subsection 43(4)] However, notwithstanding that exemption, under subsection 43(6)(a), the transmission licensee is required to negotiate with the generation licensee for the purpose of satisfying itself of the capability of such person to develop the new generation plant in compliance with the technical and economical parameters of the transmission licensee and regarding its capability to sell electricity at least cost.

As pointed out by learned President's Counsel for the Petitioner, section 6 of the Guidelines ("P2C") issued by the SLSEA is of significance. Section 6 contains 3 parts. The first and third parts relate to projects which generate up to 10 megawatts of electricity (as in the case of the project proposed by the Petitioner). The second part relates to projects which generate electricity in excess of 10 megawatts, and thus is irrelevant in so far as the Petitioner's project is concerned. The first and third parts of section 6 are reproduced below:

> "For projects up to 10 MW: SEA and CEB offer a Standardised Power Purchase Agreement (SPPA) for renewable energy projects of the approved types, with an installed capacity up to 10 MW. The SPPA is standardized and non-negotiable, and is valid for twenty years from the commercial operation date. Projects eligible for the SPPA are also eligible to be paid under the Small Power Purchase Tariff (SPPT).
> Small Power Purchase Tariff: For renewable energy projects up to 10 MW, the standardized tariffs would apply. The tariff for projects that would enter into an SPPA is published at any given time, typically at the end of each calendar year. There will be a tariff review process conducted by the Public Utilities Commission of Sri Lanka typically once a year, where the following will be considered;

(a) Types of projects to be offered the standardized tariffs (whether any new types of projects have matured to an adequate level to be included in the tariff schedule.

(b) Tariffs to be offered to Developers entering into an SPPA in the coming year."

Thus, it would be seen that the Guidelines envisage the CEB entering into an Agreement with a person who generates electricity (mobilizing a renewable energy source) not exceeding 10 megawatts. The Agreement will be founded upon a uniform template which is referred to as the 'Standardised Power Purchase Agreement' (SPPA). The price at which electricity generated by the project will be purchased by the CEB will be governed by the clauses of the 'Small Power Purchase Tariff' (SPPT), which has received the approval of the PUCSL.

Therefore, had the SLSEA issued a permit to the Petitioner under section 18 of the SLSEA Act (following the CEB having issued a 'Letter of Intent' to the Petitioner), the situation of the Petitioner would have come under paragraph (b) of the proviso to section 43(4) of the SLE Act (as amended). In the circumstances, it would not have been necessary for the transmission licensee (the CEB) to have called for tenders for the development of a new electricity generation plant and for the Petitioner to have submitted a tender in response, prior to issuing a 'Letter of Intent' to the Petitioner.

In view of the foregoing, I hold that, in the circumstances of this case, provisions of section 43 of the SLE Act as amended by Act No. 31 of 2013 do not impose a legal compulsion on the CEB to call for tenders prior to issuing a 'Letter of Intent' to a solar powered electricity generation project which would generate up to 10 megawatts of electricity, if such person who proposes to commission a renewable energy-based electricity generation plant has received a permit under section 18 of the SLSEA Act.

Had the 1st Respondent – CEB (transmission licensee) have issued to the Petitioner a 'Letter of Intent' signaling its intention to procure electricity from the Petitioner at the Small Power Purchase Tariff after entering into a Standardised Power Purchase Agreement, that would have enabled the 2nd Respondent – SLSEA to issue a permit under section 18 of the SLSEA Act to the Petitioner, which would have in turn enabled the 1st Respondent to comply with subsections 43(6) and 43(7) of the SLE Act (as amended).

7.6 Is the Petitioner entitled in fact and in law to entertain a legitimate expectation that the CEB would have issued a 'Letter of Intent' and the SLSEA would have issued a permit to the Petitioner in terms of section 18 of the SLSEA Act, and have such legitimate expectations been frustrated by the CEB and the SLSEA?

In this regard, the Petitioner's claim for relief founded upon an alleged frustration of a substantive legitimate expectation is said to have been generated by the 1st Respondent – CEB and the 2nd Respondent – SLSEA. In order to establish that certain representations were made by the two Respondents which were relied upon by the Petitioner, he has based his case founded upon four sets of documents. They are –

(i) A publication containing a set of guidelines issued by the 2nd Respondent - SLSEA entitled "A Guide to the Project Approval Process for On-grid Renewable Energy Project Development" (hereinafter referred to as "the Guide") with the sub-title "Policies and procedures to secure approvals to develop a renewable energy project to supply electricity to the national grid" of July 2011 – "P2C"

(ii) Regulations dated 22nd April 2009 made by the Minister under and in terms of sections 67 read with sections 16(2), 17(2)(a) and section 18(2)(a) of the SLSEA Act - "P2A"and the amended Regulations dated 6th May 2011 – "P2B"

(iii) Correspondence the Petitioner has had with the 1st and 2nd Respondents, with special attention to letters received by the Petitioner from the 1st and 2nd Respondents. – "P3C", "P3E", "P3F", "P3G", "P3H", "P4A", "P5A" "P5B",

"P7A", "P7B", "P7C", "P9", "P10A", "P11", "P12", "P13"and "P15". [Printed in bold are letters received by the Petitioner.]

(iv) Correspondence between the 1st and 2nd Respondents pertaining to the Application presented by the Petitioner seeking a permit under section 18 of the SLSEA Act, to which the Petitioner has been privy to. – "P3B", "P3D", "P4B/P6J", "P10B", and "P14".

An examination of the Guide ("P2C") and its application to this matter reveal the following:

(a) The Guide had been issued by the 2nd Respondent – SLSEA in July 2011. There is no evidence placed before this Court that the Guide was amended after its original publication or that it was amended and re-published following the enactment of the SLE (Amendment) Act No. 31 of 2013.

(b) The Guide is aimed at several distinct groups of persons, which include those intending to develop and invest in projects for the generation of on-grid electricity generation projects using renewable energy. The Petitioner belongs to that category of persons to whom the guidelines issued by the 2nd Respondent – SLSEA relate;

(c) The Guide is also aimed at serving as a reference to institutions that would be reviewing Applications from investors seeking permits and approvals. The 1st Respondent – CEB is one such institution.

(d) The Guide is intended to provide a detailed explanation regarding the process to be followed as prescribed in the 'On-grid Renewable Energy Projects Regulations 2009' ("P2A"). The Petitioner claims to have followed the procedure contained in the Regulations ("P2A" and "P2B") and the Guide ("P2C").

(e) The Guide contains a set of detailed guidelines regarding the manner in which Applications seeking a permit under and in terms of section 18 of the SLSEA Act should be perfected, the method of submitting the Application to the SLSEA, and the manner in which it will be processed. There is a detailed reference in the guidelines to the two-tiered process of initially processing the Application and granting 'provisional approval', and upon conditions contained in the 'provisional approval' being satisfied by the applicant, the manner in which final approval and the permit will be granted. The scheme contained in the Guide is compatible with provisions of the SLSEA Act. Up to the stage where the 1st Respondent – CEB refrained from issuing a 'Letter of Intent' to the Petitioner, the procedure followed by the 2nd Respondent – SLSEA had been in compliance with the step by step approach contained in the Guide. Furthermore, up to that point of time when the 1st Respondent – CEB by implication refused to issue a 'Letter of Intent' it (the CEB) had also participated in this process in compliance with the provisions contained in the Guide. In this regard, I have given my particular attention to the 1st Respondent – CEB's participation in the grant of 'grid interconnection concurrence' and his having participated in the grant of 'provisional approval' to the Petitioner. Furthermore, under the title "Grant and Refusal of Provisional Approval" is a reference to the fact that all Applications received by the SLSEA will in consultation with the CEB be evaluated to ascertain the possibility of securing grid connection. Documentary evidence placed before this Court clearly reveals that the CEB did even after the enactment of the SLE (Amendment) Act No. 31 of 2013 act in terms of the Guide towards granting 'grid interconnection concurrence' and 'provisional approval' to the Application of the Petitioner. Thus, I conclude that through acquiescence, the 1st Respondent has also endorsed the Guide.

(f) Clause 2.2 of Appendix 4 of the Guide (at page 28) titled 'Letter of Intent' states that it will be issued by the CEB and signifies an assurance that the electricity generated by the project will be procured by the CEB. It further states that an application to the CEB to obtain a 'Letter of Intent' could yield one of the following two standard responses:

   a. that the CEB is willing to purchase electricity from the project as per attached grid connection proposal;

b. that the CEB is willing to purchase electricity from the project, but the grid proposal will be provided within one month.

The Guide does not contain any reference to the project proponent having to engage in a competitive bidding process for the purpose of obtaining the 'Letter of Intent' or the requirement to engage in any negotiation with the CEB pertaining to the tariff at which the electricity generated by the project will be sold to the CEB, provided however the output of electricity generated by the project does not exceed 10MW.

(g) As stated in a previous part of this judgment, under the title "Power Purchase Agreements and Tariffs" (page 16) there is reference to the fact that for projects up to 10 MW, the SLSEA and the CEB offer a 'Standardised Power Purchase Agreement'. This position is reiterated in clause 4.3 of Appendix 4 of the Guide (at page 30). The provisions of the relevant Agreement are standardized and non-negotiable and such projects are entitled to apply for the Small Power Purchase Tariff. Once a year there will be a review process of the applicable tariffs conducted by the PUCSL and published typically at the end of each calendar year. Thus, it is manifestly clear that the 'Letter of Intent' by the CEB to purchase electricity generated by the project' (referred to by the parties as well as in this judgment as a 'Letter of Intent') will for projects aimed at generating up to 10MW and no more (as in the case of the project of the Petitioner) be founded upon the standard power purchase tariff stipulated from time to time by the PUCSL. This scheme is in consonance with not only the status of the law prior to the enactment of the SLE (Amendment) Act No. 31 of 2013, but with the statutory scheme contained therein as well.

(h) Clause 4.1 of Appendix 4 of the Guide (at page 29) clearly states that following the obtaining of a 'provisional approval' by the project proponent and the satisfaction of all the conditions contained therein (which is clearly a reference to obtaining approvals from relevant external agencies and obtaining a 'Letter of Intent' from the CEB, the permit will be issued under and in terms of section 18 of the SLSEA Act sequel to a decision to be taken by the PAC. ["Once all other approvals are secured by a project developer, the PAC grants a 20 years permit (extendable by a further 20 years after successful operation of the project during the initial 20 year period) to the developer allowing him to use the resource under several conditions."] Thus, it is clear that, following the Petitioner having received the 'provisional approval' from the 2nd Respondent – SLSEA, the only condition the petitioner was required to satisfy for the purpose of obtaining a permit under and in terms of section 18 of the SLSEA Act, was a 'Letter of Intent' from the 1st Respondent – CEB.

I have examined the Regulations promulgated by the Minister under the SLSEA Act contained in "P2A" and "P2B", and have found nothing therein contrary to the contents of the Guidelines ("P2C").

I have also considered the contents of the letters sent by the 1st Respondent – CEB and 2nd Respondent (SLSEA) to the Petitioner and the correspondence between the 1st and 2nd Respondent pertaining to the Application of the Petitioner seeking a permit under and in terms of section 18 of the SLSEA Act, to which the Petitioner had been privy. It primarily reveals the following sequence of key events: By Application dated 20th April 2012 submitted by the Petitioner to the SLSEA ("P3A"), he sought a permit under section 18 of the 2nd Respondent - SLSEA to commission an on-grid renewable energy (solar) based electricity generation plant with an output not exceeding 10MW. The Application was in accordance with the provisions of the SLSEA Act, Regulations and the several clauses of the Guide, and was thus accepted by the 2nd Respondent. By letter dated 18th May 2012 ("P3B"), the 2nd Respondent sought the concurrence of the 1st Respondent – CEB to place the afore-stated Application before the PAC. Prior to granting its concurrence, the 1st Respondent – CEB required the project proponent (the Petitioner) to alter the technical design of the proposed project, which requirement was promptly accepted by the Petitioner ("P3C" dated 19th November 2012, "P3E" dated 24th November 2015 and "P3G" dated 1st December 2015). By letter dated 15th February 2016 ("P4A"), the 2nd Respondent – SLSEA once again sought from the 1st Respondent – CEB 'grid interconnection concurrence' to the Petitioner's project ("P4A"). Finally, by letter dated 9th May 2016 ("P4B"), the 1st Respondent – CEB granted its concurrence to the 1st Respondent – SLSEA to place the Petitioner's Application before the PAC of the SLSEA. By letter dated 19th May 2016 ("P5A"), the PAC of the SLSEA (which comprised of inter-alia the Director General of the PUCSL and the Deputy General Manager (Energy Purchase) of the 1st Respondent – CEB) granted 'provisional approval' to the on-grid renewable energy-based electricity generation project proposed by the Petitioner.

Upon a careful consideration of the four categories of material referred to above ["(i)" to "(iv)"] and the applicable law, I have arrived at the following conclusions:

1. The Guide ("P2C") prepared and published by the 2nd Respondent – SLSEA contains lawful and intra-vires representations of the SLSEA pertaining to inter-alia on-grid renewable energy-based electricity generation projects aimed at generating not more than 10 MW of electricity. The Guide contains unambiguous and specific content amounting to representations aimed at a specific group of persons, i.e. project proponents who propose to obtain a permit under and in terms section 18 of the SLSEA Act for the purpose of commissioning an on-grid renewable energy-based electricity generation project with an electricity output not exceeding 10MW. The 1st Respondent has by acquiescence with provisions of the Guide exhibited its willingness to abide by the provisions of the Guide pertaining to the CEB, and by its letters sent to the Petitioner (referred to above) impliedly represented to the Petitioner that following the Petitioner complying with the provisions of the Guide ("P2C"), it will issue a 'Letter of Intent' to the Petitioner company enabling it to obtain a permit under and in terms of section 18 of the SLSEA Act.

2. The 2nd Respondent – SLSEA has by the several correspondence sent to the Petitioner and letters exchanged with the 1st Respondent – CEB relating to the Petitioner's Application (to which the Petitioner was privy) has inter-alia generated an expectation in the mind of the Petitioner that upon the Petitioner satisfying the conditions contained in the 'provisional approval' issued by the SLSEA to the Petitioner (of which the only outstanding one is the 'Letter of Intent' to have been issued by the CEB), a permit will be issued to the Petitioner under and in terms of section 18 of the SLSEA Act.
3. The 1st Respondent – CEB has through its acquiescence with the provisions of the Guide ("P2C"), correspondence it had with the Petitioner and correspondence with the SLSEA pertaining to the Petitioner's Application (which the Petitioner was privy to) made implied representations to the Petitioner and thereby generated an expectation that following the Petitioner having obtained 'provisional approval' from the SLSEA (which was following the re-design of the project to suit the technical requirements of the 1st Respondent – CEB), it will grant a 'Letter of Intent' to the Petitioner, enabling the Petitioner to obtain a permit under and in terms of section 18 of the SLSEA Act.
4. In view of provisions of the contents of the Guide ("P2C") and the correspondence the 1st Respondent – CEB had with the Petitioner (even up to letter dated 1st December 2016 ("P10B") wherein the Petitioner was asked to revert to the original technical design of the project (to which the Petitioner promptly agreed), it is evident that at no previous time did the 1st Respondent – CEB make any representation to the Petitioner that the Petitioner had to engage in a competitive bidding process (by submitting a tender) for the purpose of obtaining a 'Letter of Intent' from the CEB. Through implication, the 1st Respondent – CEB also intimated to the Petitioner that if he were to comply with the several applicable clauses of the Guide ("P2C"), he will be entitled to obtain a 'Letter of Intent' from the 1st Respondent – CEB.

As explained by me in Part 7.5 of this judgment, for an on-grid electricity generation project using renewable energy with an electricity output not exceeding 10MW, it is not necessary for the CEB to call for tenders and for project proponents to submit tenders or to negotiate and agree on the price at which electricity generated by the project is to be sold to the CEB. Therefore, the reason cited by the 1st Respondent – CEB for having refused to issue a 'Letter of Intent' to the Petitioner is not justiciable, as the position taken up by the 1st Respondent – CEB is not in accordance with the law. Thus, the expectation entertained by the Petitioner to follow the path contained in the Guide ("P2C") and obtain a 'provisional approval', 'Letter of Intent' and a 'permit under and in terms of section 18' in that sequence, is legitimate, as it is in accordance with the law.

Due to the foregoing reasons, I hold that the expectation entertained by the Petitioner that it will be issued with a 'Letter of Intent' by the 1st Respondent – CEB and thereafter a permit under and in terms of section 18 of the SLSEA Act by the SLSEA are expectations the Petitioner was entitled in law and through the representations and conduct of the 1st and 2nd Respondents to entertain. By their very nature, the said expectations are not mere procedural expectations, but substantive expectations. The evidence placed before this Court clearly reveals that the afore-stated legitimate expectations of the Petitioner have been frustrated by the 1st Respondent – CEB initially by its inordinate delay and thereafter its refusal to issue the 'Letter of Intent', and by the 2nd Respondent – SLSEA by its inability to obtain the 'Letter of Intent' for the Petitioner on behalf of the Petitioner and by the non-issuance of the permit. In the circumstances of this case, the substantive legitimate expectations of the Petitioner should in my view be protected through relief granted by this Court.

7.7 Is the Petitioner entitled to any relief and if so, what reliefs should the Petitioner be entitled to?

Where a substantive legitimate expectation of a claimant has been frustrated by a decision-maker for a reason that is not in wider public interest justiciable, and the impugned decision is either perverse or irrational, the Court will and should not refrain from intervening in granting substantive protection to the claimant. Relief of substantive character should be granted in instances where the impugned decision has been taken contrary to expectations the public authority has generated and is therefore unlawful, and thus amounts to an abuse of power. It would also be available in instances where the change in policy, applicable criteria and procedure is not objectively and rationally aimed at serving wider public interests and is not proportionate to the intended goal of serving public interests.

Substantive relief will be granted by court for the purpose of protecting the substantive legitimate expectation of the claimant, as it is necessary to do so not only because doing so is in the interest of the claimant, but in public interests as well. As held by Justice Amerasinghe in Dayarathna and Others v. Minister of Indigenous Medicine and Others (referred to above), when taking a decision on whether or not substantive relief as opposed to procedural relief should be granted, the court should weigh genuine public interest against private interests, and decide on the legitimacy of the expectation of the claimant, having regard to the weight it carries in the face of the need for a change of policy which may also be in public interest.

It is in this regard necessary for me to observe that the belated position taken up by the 1st Respondent – CEB is contrary to law. The Respondents have not shown this Court any basis to conclude that the non-grant of either the 'Letter of Intent' or the permit to the Petitioner is in the wider interests of the public. In what is undoubtedly in public interest was for the 1st and 2nd Respondents to have expeditiously processed the Application of the Petitioner and grant the permit sought by the Petitioner. Both Respondents have unlawfully and miserably failed in the performance of their duty towards the public in encouraging project proponents to harvest green energy sources such as solar energy for the purpose of generating electricity which would be environmentally friendly. This case is a case study in itself exemplifying how two State agencies have floundered in the performance of their public duties.

The repercussions of the 1st Respondent - CEB and the 2nd Respondent - SLSEA in not having encouraged and facilitated entrepreneurs to, through private enterprise, generate electricity by tapping renewable energy sources and feed such electricity to the national grid, was only too evident in the year 2022, when the country and her people had to suffer severely due to the insufficiency of electricity generation and the over-dependency on petroleum as a means of generating electricity. This situation resulted in power outages of long duration, which affected the daily lives of the public at large and resulted in serious consequences to trade, industry and commerce. At the time of writing this judgment, the critical importance of generating electrical energy using sustainable and renewable energy resources available in abundance in Sri Lanka, and the devastating consequences that have arisen out of the failure on the part of agencies of the State to voluminously and efficiently mobilize new renewable energy generation projects for the generation of electricity using solar and wind power, and other renewable energy resources is felt unlike ever before. The incident referred to in this judgment is an unfortunate testament to the root causes of the prevailing situation to which I find the 1st and 2nd Respondents having to bear responsibility.

8. Orders of Court

For the reasons enumerated above, I hold that the Petitioner is entitled to the following reliefs:

(i) Due to the reasons set out in this judgment, I hold that in processing the Application submitted by the Petitioner for a permit under section 18 of the SLSEA Act, the 1st and 2nd Respondents have not acted in terms of the law. I note that the culpability of the 1st Respondent – CEB far exceeds the culpability of the 2nd Respondent - SLSEA. In the circumstances, I declare that the 1st and 2nd Respondents acting jointly have infringed the fundamental right of the Petitioner to the equal protection of the law guaranteed by Article 12(1) of the Constitution.

(ii) In view of the detailed analysis of the facts and the law contained in this judgment, it would not be necessary for me to delve in detail into the consequences arising out of the conduct of the 1st and 2nd Respondents to the fundamental right of the Petitioner to engage inter-alia in the lawful business which he had chosen, planned and applied for, namely the generation of solar powered electricity, providing such electricity to the national grid, and thereby generating income which would include profit. In the circumstances, I hold that the 1st and 2nd Respondents have jointly infringed the fundamental right of the Petitioner guaranteed by Article 14(1)(g) of the Constitution, which infringement had financial implications to the Petitioner.

(iii) The 1st Respondent – CEB shall forthwith issue a 'Letter of Intent' to the Petitioner in accordance with the law and the provisions of the Guide ("P2C").

(iv) Upon the Petitioner submitting to the 2nd Respondent – SLSEA proof of the satisfaction of the conditions contained in the 'provisional approval' including the afore-stated 'Letter of Intent', the 2nd Respondent shall within one month of the submission of such material, process the Application of the Petitioner in accordance with the law and the relevant provisions of the Guide ("P2C"), and issue a permit to the Petitioner under and in terms of section 18 of the SLSEA Act.

(v) I am acutely conscious that this infringement would have resulted in considerable financial loss to the Petitioner, which this Court is regrettably though, compelled not to fully compensate. Providing reparation for loss of profit suffered by the Petitioner arising out of the infringement of fundamental rights would be quite justified in the circumstances of this case. However, I am sensitive to the fact that making such an order for full reparation will only result in the Consolidated Fund having to bear such burden, which would eventually result in the tax paying public having to suffer further hardships.

However, the attendant circumstances of this case require this Court to make an order for the payment of a significant amount of damages. Such an order should have a deterrent effect on not only the 1st and the 2nd Respondents, the state as well. Therefore, I direct that the 1st Respondent who has been primarily responsible for the infringement of the fundamental rights of the Petitioner, shall pay the Petitioner a sum of Rs. 1,000,000.00 as damages.

(vi) Since the 1st Respondent through its officials has been primarily responsible for the infringement of the fundamental rights of the Petitioner, it would be the responsibility of the state to identify such individual officials of the 1st Respondent – CEB, and take appropriate action against them. This is a matter in respect of which I would have ordinarily ordered the payment of punitive damages by the individual officers who had been instrumental in the infringement of the fundamental rights of the Petitioner guaranteed by Articles 12(1) and 14(1)(g) of the Constitution, provided their identities transpired through the evidence placed before Court.

Accordingly, the Secretary to the Ministry of Power and Energy is hereby directed to cause the conduct of an investigation into this matter and take action according to law against those identified for having infringed the fundamental rights of the Petitioner. The findings and the action taken should be reported to this Court.

The Registrar of this Court is directed to forward copies of this Judgement to the Honourable Attorney General and to the Secretary to the Ministry of Power and Energy.

Judgement

This Fundamental Rights Application relates to the Petitioners' promotion to the post of Engineer – Class II of the 1st Respondent Board. The 1st Petitioner is presently in the post of Engineer Assistant-Special Class and the 2nd and 3rd Petitioners are presently in the post of Engineer Assistant – Class I of the 1st Respondent Board. The principal grievance of the Petitioners is that they were denied the opportunity to be promoted to the post of Engineer – Class II in violation of the Scheme of Recruitment and Promotion hence, the Petitioners' rights enshrined in Article 12(1) of the Constitution was breached by the arbitrary and/or unreasonable actions of the Respondents. On the 01.08.2014 the Court granted Leave to Proceed under Article 12(1) Constitution.

Service Record of the 1st Petitioner

The 1st Petitioner joined the Water Board on 10.08.1992 as an 'Electrician (Power) I' and obtained the National Certificate in Technology (Electrical) (hereinafter referred to as the NCT) on 24.02.1995. He was then appointed as 'Technical Assistant (Electrical)' on 15.05.1996. On 10.08.1997 he was promoted to 'Engineering Assistant-Class III' in consideration of his 5 years of service and the NCT qualification as well as his service as a 'Technical Assistant" as per the Letter of Promotion 'P5' dated 13.01.1998. After 2 years as an 'Engineering Assistant-Class III' the Petitioner was promoted to "Engineering Assistant-Class II" with effect from 10.08.1999 as per the Letter of Promotion 'P6' dated 26.06.2000. Thereafter, upon the completion of 2 years in the aforesaid position, the Petitioner was promoted to "Engineer Assistant-Class I" on 10.08.2001 as per the Letter of Promotion 'P7' dated 29.08.2006.

According to the Scheme of Recruitment a person with 12 years of experience of which 3 years of experience as an Engineering Assistant – Class I are entitled to be promoted to Engineering Assistant – Special Class. It is asserted by the 1st Petitioner that he was entitled to be promoted to that post on 10.08.2004 but his promotion to the post of Engineering Assistant – Special Class was effected only on 04.06.2008 as per the Letter of Promotion 'P8' dated 01.02.2010. The 1st Petitioner states that in promoting the 1st Petitioner, the 1st Respondent Board has failed to consider the 1st Petitioner's service as an Electrician and has only counted his service since he was promoted to a Technical Assistant in 1996. The 1st Petitioner's request to consider his service as an Electrician and backdate his appointment to the Special Class was rejected by the 1st Respondent Board by Letter dated 23.08.2011 marked 'P9'. Currently, the 1st Petitioner is covering duties in the post of Electrical Engineer as indicated by the letters dated 18.11.2011 and 14.06.2012 marked 'P10A' and 'P10B'.

Service Record of the 2nd Petitioner

The 2nd Petitioner obtained the NCT (Electrical) on 27.05.1992. He joined the 1st Respondent Board as an Electrician (Power) Grade 1 on 10.08.1992 and was confirmed in service with effect from the same date 'P12A' and 'P12B'. Thereafter, the 2nd Petitioner was promoted to the post of 'Technical Assistant (Electrical)-II' with effect from 15.03.1996 as per Letter of Appointment 'P13' dated 11. 03.1996. He was promoted to the post of 'Engineering Assistant (Electrical)-Class III' with effect from 27.05.1997 and then to the post of 'Engineering Assistant-Class II' with effect from 27.05.1999 as per the Letters of Appointment 'P14' and 'P15'. The 2nd Petitioner was promoted to the post of 'Engineering Assistant-Class I' with effect from 09.11.2007. Subsequently by letter dated 15.12.2008, the said promotion was backdated to 08.06.2007. True copies of the said letters dated 18.01.2008 and 15.12.2008 respectively, were marked 'P16A' and 'P16B'.

Service Record of the 3rd Petitioner

The 3rd Petitioner obtained the NCT (Electrical) on 27.06.1996 as evidenced by the certificate 'P17'. In addition to the aforesaid qualification, the 3rd Petitioner obtained the National Diploma in Engineering Technology (Electrical/Electronic Engineering) awarded by the University of Vocational Technology as indicated by 'P18'.

On 15.07.1996, the 3rd Petitioner joined the 1st Respondent Board as an 'Electrician (Power)-Grade I' as per the Letter of Appointment 'P19' and was promoted to the post of 'Technical Assistant (Electrical)' on 10.09.1999 as per the Letter of Appointment 'P20'. Thereafter, the 3rd Petitioner was promoted to the post of 'Engineering Assistant-Class III' with effect from 10.09.2002, and subsequently, to the post of 'Engineering Assistant-

Class II' with effect from 10.09.2004 as per the Letters of Appointment 'P21' and 'P22' respectively. The 3rd Petitioner was promoted to the post of 'Engineering Assistant-Class I' by Letter dated 15.12.2008 and the said promotion was subsequently backdated to 08.06.2007 by the said Letter dated 15.12.2008 marked 'P23'. The below table illustrates the employment history of the Petitioners at the 1st Respondent Board and the eligible dates for promotion to Engineer Class II as alleged by the Petitioners;

	Electrician	Technical Assistant	Engineering Assistant Class III	Engineering Assistant Class II	Engineering Assistant Class I	Engineering Assistant Special Class	Eligible date for promotion as Engineer Class II
1st Petitioner	10.08.1992	15.05.1996	10.08.1997	10.08.1999	10.08.2001	04.06.2008	10.08.2004
2nd Petitioner	10.08.1992	15.03.1996	27.05.1997	27.05.1999	08.06.2007		10.08.2004
3rd Petitioner	15.07.1996	10.09.1999	10.09.2002	10.09.2004	08.06.2007		15.07.2008

Promotion to the post of 'Engineer-Class II'

According to the Petitioners, the next promotion of the Petitioners is to the post of 'Engineer - Class II' as per the Scheme of Recruitment and Promotion marked 'P 1'. As per the Scheme of Recruitment and Promotion, applicants who possess the NCT and 12 years of experience of which 3 years of experience as an 'Engineering Assistant – Class I' are eligible to be promoted to the post of 'Engineer – Class II'. It appears from the service record that all three Petitioners fulfilled the requisite requirements.

By a notice dated 19.03.2012 marked 'P 24' applications for the post of Engineer – Class II were called. The applicants were required to possess NCT and 17 years of experience in the 1st Respondent Board of which 3 years as an Engineering Assistant – Class I. According to the Petitioners, they informed the 1st Respondent Board that the Scheme of Recruitment and Promotion only requires 12 years of experience, meanwhile, the notice marked 'P 24' requires 17 years of experience. However, the Petitioners were informed that a decision was taken by the Board of Directors of the 1st Respondent Board to increase the number of years of experience to 17 years. The Petitioners contend that the decision was not communicated to the employees of the 1st Respondent Board. The Petitioners further alleged that the notice marked 'P 24' is based on a proposed Scheme of Recruitment and Promotion, which was not duly approved by the relevant authorities or as per the established procedure. The 2nd Respondent denies this averment and states that the respective trade unions of which the Petitioners are members, were informed of the change effected in the eligibility criteria. The 2nd Respondent admits that although a copy of the relevant board decision was communicated it was not accompanied by a covering letter. In their counter-affidavit, the Petitioners deny that the trade unions were informed and state that the Respondents have failed to submit any proof of informing the trade unions. Furthermore, it was submitted that not being a member of any trade union, the 3rd Petitioner could not have known of the said Board Decision even if it was informed to the trade unions.

In any event, the Petitioners applied for the said post in terms of the Letter marked 'P 24' and according to the Petitioners as of the closing date of the application which is 05.04.2012, they possessed the NCT and had experience at the 1st Respondent Board in the following manner;

	Initial Appointment as Electrician	Eligible date for promotion as Engineer-Class II	Date of Appointment as	Total years of service as at

		(completion of 12 years)	Engineering Assistant-Class 1	closing date 05.04.2012
1st Petitioner	10.08.1992	10.08.2004	10.08.2001 -10 years as EA I	19 years
2nd Petitioner	10.08.1992	10.08.2004	08.06.2007 -4 years as EA I	19 years
3rd Petitioner	15.07.1996	15.07.2008	08.06.2007 -4 years as EA I	15 years

The Petitioners stated that they were called for an interview and that they faced the interview. The Petitioners submitted, marked 'P25', the 'Recommended Marking Scheme for Internal Promotions to the post of Engineer (Board Grade VII)' for awarding marks at the interview. According to the Petitioners, the Petitioners themselves and the 7th to 11th Respondents and one A.L. Kapila Bandu were called to the interview. The said Kapila Bandu was not named as a Respondent to the present application as he did not present himself at the interview to the best of the knowledge of the Petitioners.

The Petitioners state that on or about 05.02.2013, they became aware that the 7th to 10th Respondents had been promoted to the post of 'Engineer-Class II' with effect from 1st February 2013, and that upon further inquiry they learned that the said Respondents had obtained the following marks.

I. 7th Respondent - 66.5 marks

II. 8th Respondent - 66.5 marks

III. 9th Respondent - 61.5 marks

IV. 10th Respondent - 72 marks

The 2nd Respondent states that these marks are inaccurate. The 2nd Respondent further states that no marks were given at the interviews for the respective periods of service and in any event the Petitioners did not meet the eligibility criteria. The Petitioners contend as per their counter – affidavits that the 2nd Respondent willfully suppressed the interview marks schedule from this Court as the 2nd Respondent has not submitted the said schedule.

Regarding the marks awarded at the interview, the Petitioners submit that the 1st, 2nd and 3rd Petitioners, on the other hand, had been awarded only a total of 25 marks, 23 marks and 27 marks respectively. The Petitioners state that they made inquiries and discovered that no marks have been awarded to them for their service, although the 1st and 2nd Petitioners had 19 years of service and the 3rd Petitioner had 15 years of service at the closing date of applications. The Petitioners state that to the best of their knowledge, they have been denied marks for service on the basis that they are not eligible to apply, although the 1st and 2nd Petitioners have completed 19 years of service whereas the notice calling for applications requires only 17 years of service. Furthermore, the Petitioners contend that 'P24' is a proposed Scheme of Recruitment and Promotion, which requires 17 years of experience and is not duly approved by the relevant authorities. In contrast, the Approved Scheme of Recruitment 'P 1' requires 12 years of experience, hence, in the aforesaid circumstances, the Petitioners allege that the Interview Panel has acted arbitrarily in denying the Petitioners marks for seniority.

It was further contended that, even in the round of promotions to the post of 'Engineer-Class II' held in 2009 the 1st Petitioner's name was included in the waiting list indicating that the 1st Petitioner was duly awarded marks for his service in terms of the Approved Scheme of Recruitment. Therefore, there is no rationale on which the 1st Petitioner could be denied marks for service in the current round of interviews.

The Petitioners state that they would be entitled to be promoted if marks had been awarded for their service period, with the 1st Petitioner earning 70 marks, the 2nd Petitioner earning 63.5 marks and the 3rd Petitioner earning 50.5 marks. The Petitioners submitted in tabular form a calculation of the marks that they are entitled to receive according to the marking scheme as per their inquiries made at the 1st Respondent Board. The said table is produced below in the following manner however it should be emphasized by the Court that these marks are per the Petitioners' inquiries and no interview mark schedules were produced before the Court by the Respondents.

	1st Petitioner	2nd Petitioner	3rd Petitioner
Additional qualifications	2 marks	4 marks	4 marks
Performance Evaluations	10 marks	9 marks	10 marks
Management Experience/ Special Skills	3 marks	2 marks	3 marks
Interview	10 marks	8 marks	10 marks
Total Marks Awarded by the Interview Panel	25 marks	23 marks	27 marks
Marks Entitled for Service	45 marks	40.5 marks	23.5 marks
Total Marks Entitled	70 marks	63.5 marks	50.5 marks

Petitioners further submitted that 7 vacancies were available at the time of calling for applications by the 1st Respondent Board. However, the 2nd Respondent in paragraph 16 of his affidavit states that there were only 6 vacancies available at the time. In any event, the Petitioners illustrate the order of their promotions in the following manner if there were 7 impugned vacancies and if they were awarded the purported entitled marks for their service period;

(Table 4)

	Name	Marks Awarded/ Entitled
1	H.M.S Bandara (10th Respondent)	72 Marks
2	1st Petitioner	70 Marks
3	K.M.N Perera (7th Respondent)	66.5 Marks
4	A.S.B Weerasuriya (8th Respondent)	66.5 Marks
5	2nd Petitioner	63.5 Marks
6	P.A.M.R Sumanasekara	61.5 Marks
7	3rd Petitioner	50.5 Marks

Inquiry Before the Human Rights Commission

On becoming aware of the promotion of the 7th to 10th Respondents to the post of 'Engineer-Class II' the Petitioners lodged a complaint on 15.02.2013 before the Human Rights Commission (marked 'P26A', 'P26B' and 'P26C') bearing No. HRC/605/2003. In respect of the said complaint, the Respondents filed Observations before the Human Rights Commission 'P27' taking up the position that; at a meeting of the Board of Directors of the 1st Respondent Board held on 16.08.2010, the Scheme of Recruitment has been amended to require NCT and 17 years of experience as an Engineering Assistant including 3 years as a Board Grade 7 Engineering Assistant. Furthermore, regarding the 1st Petitioner, he was appointed as a Technical Assistant on 04.06.1996 and he completed 17 years of service on 04.06.2013, therefore has been considered by the Interview Panel as a candidate who has not fulfilled the required qualifications.

On 17.05.2013 the 1st Respondent Board filed Observations 'P28' with regard to the complaint made by the 2nd and 3rd Petitioners by which they took up the position that; the applications were called for the said post in terms of the Scheme of Recruitment applicable at the time, in terms of which the NCT and 12 years of experience of which 3 years' experience in a Board Grade 7 Engineering Assistant post was required, but the Board of Directors considered the representations made by Trade Unions that requiring 12 years of experience from both those possessing NCT and those possessing NDT (National Diploma in Technology) would have the effect of not giving the due recognition to the NDT qualification, and therefore increased the required number of years of service for NCT qualification holders to 17 years. The 2nd Respondent, in his objections, admitted these averments and further clarified that 12 years of experience was considered for applicants with NDT and that NCT cannot be equated with NDT.

A true copy of the purported Board Decision filed by the 1st Respondent before the Human Rights Commission 'P29' was submitted to this court by the Petitioners. The Petitioners, however, state that 'P29' is not a Board Decision as maintained by the 1st Respondent and merely a document containing the proposed Scheme of Recruitment and Promotion. The Petitioners point out that the document carries no indication that the Board of Directors of the 1st Respondent has approved the said proposed Scheme of Recruitment and Promotion. The Petitioners further state that the 1st Respondent failed to produce a certified copy of the purported Board Decision dated 16.08.2010 to the Human Rights Commission. In the circumstances, the Petitioners state that they verily believe that a decision to amend the Scheme of Recruitment was not taken.

In response, the 2nd Respondent states that the document 'P29' was consequent to a Board Decision dated 16.08.2010, a certified extract of which was submitted marked '2R1'. The contents of '2R1' are to the effect that the Board discussed the revision of the Scheme of Recruitment and Promotion with the General Manager and Deputy General Manager (Personnel and Administration) and approved to revise the tenure of experience of the NCT qualified personnel, as shown in the Annexures to the Board Paper when they apply for the posts of Engineering Assistants Class III-(Board Grade 10) and Engineering Assistants (Special)- (Board Grade 7) and Engineer Class II (Board Grade 7). The relevant annexure to '2R1' was submitted later by motion dated 10.02.2016 as the 2nd Respondent had failed to annex the same, along with the objections.

The Petitioners contend that the document '2R1' submitted by the Respondents purported to be the Board Decision to amend the Scheme of Recruitment and Promotion is not in a fit state to be accepted by the Court, stating that it is merely a paragraph printed on scrap paper with a handwritten date and bearing no signatures of the members of the Board of Directors or the Secretary of the Board.

The Petitioners state that the inquiry before the Human Rights Commission commenced on 02.08.2013 and was re-fixed for 16.09.2013. No representations were made on behalf of the 1st Respondent Board. The Petitioners state that thereafter, at the next date of inquiry 04.11.2013, an officer of the Personnel Department of the 1st Respondent Board appeared and admitted that the proposed revisions to the Scheme of Recruitment and Promotion contained in 'P29' have not been approved and that the approval of the Department of Management Services, Director General of Establishments and the then National Salaries and Cadre commission have not been obtained in respect of the same. The said officer is said to have further stated that 7 vacancies were available to the post in question at the time of calling for applications and that at the time of giving evidence at the inquiry three vacancies were remaining. However, as stated earlier the 2nd Respondent in his Statement of Objections denied these averments and maintained that there were only 6 vacancies.

The Petitioners state that these matters were recorded by the inquiring officer of the Human Rights Commission who advised the said officer of the 1st Respondent Board to settle the matter and report any settlement to the Human Rights Commission within 2 weeks. According to the Petitioners, their complaint was not taken up for inquiry thereafter and to the best of the Petitioners' knowledge, the Human Rights Commission has not made any further recommendations. The 2nd Respondent states that the matter was thereafter referred to the Department of Labour.

The Petitioners contend that in terms of the circulars issued by the Ministry of Finance, the 1st Respondent Board, being a statutory Board, is required to effect all promotions in terms of the approved Schemes of Recruitment and Promotions and obtain the necessary approvals from the Department of Management Services and the Treasury. The copies of Management Services Circulars No. 28 dated 10.04.2006 and 28(II) dated 01.08.2006 were submitted marked 'P31' and 'P32'. The 2nd Respondent states that the restructuring of the National Water Supply and Drainage Board commenced in late 2011 under the supervision of the Department of Management Services and was required to prepare a new scheme of recruitment. Prior to the said restructuring the then scheme of recruitment was amended pursuant to Board decisions.

The Petitioners further state that the 1st Respondent has acted contrary to the direction given by the Attorney General by letter dated November 2011 'P33' that all promotions of the 1st Respondent Board should be made in terms of the approved scheme of recruitment and by conducting interviews duly. The said letter marked 'P33' relates to a settlement reached in SC FR 103/2007 that the Water Board should follow the eligibility criteria in the Scheme of Recruitment in awarding promotions. In response to this contention, the 2nd Respondent maintains that the interviews were duly conducted. The said letter marked 'P33' states as follows;

"ඉදිරියේදී ජාතික ජල සම්පාදන හා ජලාපවහන මණ්ඩලය මගින්, තම ආයතනය තුල උසස්වීම් පිරිනැමීමේදී අදාල තනතුරට බලපවත්වන උසස්වීම් පරිපාටියට අනුකූලව උසස්වීම් පිරිනැමිය යුතු අතර, ඒ සම්බන්දයෙන් සම්මුක පරීක්ෂණ නිසි ආකාරයට පැවැත්වීමට අදාල සම්මුක පරීක්ෂණ මණ්ඩලයෙන් වග බලාගත යුතු බවද මාගේ මතය වේ."

Answering the 2nd Respondent's statement that no marks were given for the Petitioners' service as they had not met the eligibility criteria, the Petitioners point out that in paragraph 13 of his objections the 2nd Respondent has admitted that as the new Scheme of Recruitment and Promotion had not come into force, the existing scheme of recruitment was adopted. Whereas the existing scheme of recruitment required only 12 years of service and the Petitioners were all possessed of more than 12 years of experience at the closing date of applications, they were eligible for promotion and therefore could not have been denied marks for service by the Respondents on the basis that the Petitioners were not eligible.

Furthermore, the Petitioners state that the 2nd Respondent's objections are self-contradictory as the existing scheme of recruitment was adopted since the new scheme of recruitment had not come into force, but paragraph 14 of the statement of objections, states that the Petitioners were not eligible for the promotion in terms of the existing Scheme of Recruitment. Therefore, if the existing Scheme of Recruitment was followed, as submitted by the 2nd Respondent, the Petitioners would have been eligible as they had the requisite experience required as per the existing scheme of recruitment. The Petitioners state that this points to arbitrary action by the Respondents in denying them marks for service on the basis that they are not eligible.

Moreover, the 2nd Respondent contended that the 1st Petitioner is not eligible to apply as he does not possess the requisite experience having assumed duties in the post of 'Technical Assistant' only on 15.05.1996. The 2nd Respondent has not set out the reasons as to why the 2nd and 3rd Petitioners would be ineligible for promotion to "Engineer-Class II' except to state that the next promotion of the 2nd and 3rd Petitioners is to the post of 'Engineer Assistant-Special Grade'.

The Petitioners point out that the 2nd Respondent has failed to file the purported Board Decision amending the Scheme of Recruitment and the purported amended Scheme of Recruitment. At the inquiries before the Human Rights Commission and the Department of Labour, the Respondents had produced 'P29' as the purported Board Decision.

Although the 2nd Respondent states that the Petitioners were not eligible for the promotion, the Petitioners were called for the interview. According to the Petitioners, at the interview too they had not been informed that they were ineligible. Furthermore, the 1st Petitioner had even been appointed to cover the duties in the post of Electrical Engineer, as indicated by the documents 'P10A' and 'P10B' and was included in the waiting list. In response to an appeal submitted by the Petitioner dated 10.08.2010 ('CA3') seeking to be promoted to the post of Electrical Engineer, the then General Manager (Personnel) of the 1st Respondent had informed the 1st Petitioner by letter dated 29.09.2010 ('CA4') that there were no vacancies for the post of Electrical Engineer and requested the 1st Petitioner to apply for the post in the next round of promotions. At no time was the 1st Petitioner informed that he was not eligible for promotion to the impugned post (vide 'CA1' and 'CA2' letters sent by the 1st Respondent Board dated 24.06.2009 and 07.05.2008 respectively calling the 1st Petitioner for interviews for the post of 'Electrical Engineer Class II').

Alleged Violation of Article 12(1) of the Constitution

Applications for the post of 'Engineer-Class II' were called under the purported new Scheme of Recruitment and not under the existing Scheme of Recruitment (vide 'P24' letter calling for applications dated 19.03.2012 which requires 17 years of experience including 3 years' experience in the post of 'Engineer Assistant-Class 1' from those with the NCT qualification). The 2nd Respondent has taken up contradictory positions in stating which Scheme of Recruitment was resorted to in selecting the Petitioners for the interviews for promotion. By paragraph 13 of his statement of objections the 2nd Respondent has verily accepted that the Scheme of Recruitment resorted to with regard to the Petitioners was the existing Scheme of Recruitment as the purported new Scheme of Recruitment had not come into force by then.

As the 2nd Respondent himself has accepted that the existing Scheme of Recruitment was resorted to regarding the Petitioners, it only remains for this Court to consider whether the Petitioners were in fact possessed of the requisite eligibility to apply for the post of 'Engineer-Class II'. The Court's inquiry is made easier by the fact that all three Petitioners were called for interview by the 1st Respondent Board. The Court is inclined to consider the said fact as a prima facie indication that the 1st Respondent Board considered the Petitioners eligible, contrary to the 2nd Respondent's contention that the Petitioners were not eligible to apply. As held by His Lordship Justice Fernando's statement in Abeysinghe v. Central Engineering and Consultancy Bureau (1996) 2 SLR 36, at page 47 "…the fact that he was invited for the interview does suggest that he was, prima facie*, suitable*…"

regarding a situation where the Petitioners were invited to attend an interview to select a candidate for appointment as Deputy General Manager of the CECB.

The Petitioners submits that at the round of promotions held in 2009, the 1st Petitioner was duly awarded marks for his service and included in the waiting list for the post of 'Engineer-Class II', which further supports the finding that the 1st Petitioner was eligible to apply for the said post. Although the Petitioners have not submitted specific proof that the 1st Petitioner was included in the waiting list, the letter 'CA3' sent by the 1st Petitioner to the Chairman of the Water Board dated 10.08.2010 seeking a promotion to the post of 'Engineer-Class II' mentions that the 1st Petitioner is included in the waiting list. The said position is not contradicted by the Respondents.

However, the Court is mindful that a candidate who was called for an interview may well be found unsuitable for the position following the due completion of the interview process. This could be due to the candidate failing to score the number of marks needed due to various deficiencies in their suitability. In Abeysinghe v. Central Engineering and Consultancy Bureau (supra) it was observed that in certain circumstances even a candidate who possesses the requisite seniority and merit may be overlooked if it is demonstrated that such candidate does not possess the skills to meet the needs of the institution and the public.

"The principle of promotion by reference to seniority and merit does not mean that the needs of the Institution and the public, or the demands of the post in question, must be ignored (see Perera v. Ranatunga (1993) 1 SLR 39) Hence even if he had been given high marks, nevertheless the decision not to appoint him, to a post for which he was considered unsuitable, cannot be considered unlawful, unfair or unreasonable."

Therefore, although the Court is convinced that the Petitioners are possessed of the requisite qualifications to be called for interview, the Court does not hold the preconception that the Petitioners would score sufficient marks for appointment into the post of 'Engineer-Class II'. If the Respondents were able to demonstrate that the Petitioners were found unsuitable consequent to the interview it would have to be accepted that the Petitioners were indeed unsuitable and were not subjected to unequal treatment. Except for stating that the Petitioners do not possess the requisite experience for the post, the Respondents have submitted scant justification in support of their rejection of the Petitioners for the said post, leading to the conclusion that the Respondents were acting in an unreasonable and arbitrary manner by overlooking the Petitioners for promotion. Documents that can establish the bona fides of the interview process such as the mark sheets of the interviews and/or a marking scheme have not been submitted by the Respondents.

With regard to the period of experience, if the 'Recommended Marking Scheme' marked 'P25' was used to evaluate the Petitioners' suitability, the 2nd Respondent's contention, that marks were not awarded for the Petitioners' period of service, is untenable. It appears that the period of experience and period of service would mean one and the same when it comes to internal candidates of the 1st Respondent Water Board such as the Petitioners, as a specified number of marks are awarded for each year of experience in the respective posts of 'Technical Assistant', 'Engineering Assistant-Class II', 'Engineering Assistant-Class I' and 'Engineering Assistant Special Grade' with the possibility of earning a maximum of 50 marks for the period of experience. In that context, each of the Petitioners stands to earn a considerable number of marks given their service record in the Water Board, which was mentioned at the outset.

On the other hand, the Petitioners have not adduced evidence to demonstrate that the 7th to 10th Respondents possessed the same qualifications as the Petitioners, nor any mala fides on the part of the Respondents. The classification theory requires that a positive act of unequal treatment among subjects similarly circumstanced should be demonstrated, if a finding of unequal treatment is to be made. Despite its adoption by a Full Bench in Elmore Perera v. Montague Jayawickrama (1994) 2 SLR 90, this court has thereafter on many occasions sought to distance itself from the classification theory, in favour of the 'new doctrine' formulated in the Indian case of Royappa v. State of Tamil Nadu 1974 AIR SC 555. Relief is now freely granted in respect of arbitrary and mala fide exercise of executive power.

Although a trend of moving away from the classification theory emerged, the theory is not so faulty as to be completely discarded, given that it is not applied rigidly to mandatorily insist on evidence of differential treatment of similarly situate persons in all and every occasion, for a finding of inequal treatment to be made. Having made this observation, in the present case, we consider it more appropriate to apply the 'new doctrine' which focuses on whether the impugned act was contrary to the rule of law and reasonableness. After Shanmugam Sivarajah v. OIC, Terrorist Investigation Division SC FR 15/2010, (SC Minutes of 27.06.2017), it is now settled that 'classification' is not the only basis for relief under Article 12(1) of the Constitution. As held by the Court at p.12,

"Rule of Law dictates that every act that is not sanctioned by the law and every act that violates the law be struck down as illegal. It does not require positive discrimination or unequal treatment. An act that is prohibited by the law receives no legitimacy merely because it does not discriminate between people."

In Wickrematunga v. Anuruddha Ratwatte (1998) 1 SLR 201, His Lordship Justice A.R.B. Amerasinghe held that "'"Law" in Article 12 of the Constitution includes regulations, rules, directions, principles, guidelines and schemes that are designed to regulate public authorities in their conduct." Accordingly, the Scheme of Recruitment in question which sets out the manner of recruitment for 'Technical Assistants/Engineering Assistants and Engineers' falls within the umbrella of 'law' and should be followed as it is, without deviation by the Water Board.

Denying the Petitioners' eligibility to apply and receive the promotion to 'Engineer-Class II' is accordingly, contrary to law and defeats equality before the law. As elaborated in Royappa v. State of Tamil Nadu (supra) "From a positivistic point of view, equality is antithetic to arbitrariness. In fact equality and arbitrariness are sworn enemies; one belongs to the rule of law in the Republic while the other, to the whim and caprice of an absolute monarch... They require that State action must be based on valid, relevant principles applicable alike to all similarly situate and must not be guided by any extraneous or irrelevant considerations because that would be denial of equality"

Validity of the Purported New Scheme of Recruitment

It is noteworthy that although the call for applications 'P24' advertised the eligibility criteria introduced by the purported revised Scheme of Recruitment, the Respondents were unable to satisfactorily establish that the said Scheme of Recruitment had entered into force. The purported Board decision '2R1' submitted by the 2nd Respondent appears to be a single paragraph excerpted from a larger document. As submitted by the Petitioners as well, the document does not carry a proper date and signature of approval. Had the document been submitted in its entirety with the requisite features that indicate authenticity, its validity could have been accepted.

The annexure to '2R1' submitted subsequently by way of a motion is a document seeking approval "to revise the service of experience as 17 years instead of 12 years in the existing scheme of recruitment". Nowhere in the document is it stated that the recommendation to revise the tenure of experience of the NCT qualified Engineering Assistants when applying for the post of Engineer has been approved. Therefore, it cannot be accepted as evidence of due approval of the purported new Scheme of Recruitment. Furthermore, it can be seen that 'P29' the purported Board Decision filed before the Human Rights Commission by the 1st Respondent Board and submitted to the Court by the Petitioners, contains the existing scheme and the proposed scheme side-by-side and is not a finalized revision of the Scheme of Recruitment. Therefore, the Board's Decision to amend the scheme of recruitment and the amended scheme of recruitment has not been submitted to the Court in a plausible manner.

Restrictions on the Promotion of Internal Candidates to 'Engineer-Class II'

With regard to the 1st Petitioner, without ambiguity, the next promotion available to him is to the post of 'Engineer-Class II' as he is in the 'Engineering Assistant-Special Class'. A perusal of the Scheme of Recruitment 'P1' indicates that although the 2nd Respondent's contention, that the next promotion of the 2nd and 3rd Petitioners could be only to the 'Engineering Assistant (Special) Grade', is incorrect, there are indeed certain restrictions as to how promotions to 'Engineer-Class II' can be made. Those possessing the NCT together with 12 years of experience, including 3 years of experience as an 'Engineering Assistant-Class I' in Board Grade 8, are eligible to apply for the post of post of 'Engineering Assistant-Special Class' (vide page 20 of 'P1') as well as to the post of 'Engineer-Class II' (vide page 10 of 'P1'). However, with regard to the post of 'Engineer-Class II' internal candidates with a Government Technical Officers' 3rd Examination qualification together with experience in the relevant field in the NWSDB would have priority over candidates with the NCT qualification (per the note on page 10 of 'P1' and 'P24' Letter calling for applications dated 19.03.2012), whereas with regard to the 'Engineering Assistant-Special Class' there is no such priority explicitly stated. Furthermore, the note on page 20 of 'P1' which reads "As internal promotions to the Grade of Engineer have been limited to 25% of the total cadre of Engineer-Cl.II (Board Gr. 7), Cadre of Engineer Assistant- Special Class is to be kept opened without any restriction" evinces that only 25% of the Engineer-Class II vacancies can be filled with internal candidates, as submitted by the 2nd Respondent in his objections.

While it is evident that there are certain restrictions placed on the number of internal candidates that can be promoted to 'Engineer-Class II', the Respondents have not indicated that those restrictions were the cause for the Petitioners to be overlooked for the promotions.

Petitioners' Legitimate Expectations

It was contended by the Petitioners that their legitimate expectations were violated by the Respondents by subjecting the Petitioners to an ad hoc and unsanctioned Scheme of Recruitment and Promotion. In my opinion, the Petitioners had a legitimate expectation that the 1st Respondent Board would follow an established practice in the promotion of the applicants. This is not to state that public authorities cannot change their decisions or policies, but such changes must not be arbitrary or amount to an abuse of power. As His Lordship Justice Prasanna Jayawardena held in Ariyarathne and Others v N.K. Illangakoon (S.C F. R No. 444/2012, S.C Minutes 30.07.2019) at page 56;

"As evident from the principles I endeavoured to set out earlier, the first characteristic which will sustain a petitioner's claim that he has a substantive legitimate expectation the respondent public authority will act in a particular manner with regard to him, is that the petitioner must establish the public authority gave him a specific, unambiguous and unqualified assurance that it will act in that manner [or, alternatively, that the respondent public authority has followed an established and unambiguous practice which entitled the petitioner to have a legitimate expectation the public authority will continue to act in that manner or that the facts and circumstances of the dealings between the public authority and the petitioner have created such an expectation]."

I am of the view that the Petitioners had a legitimate expectation that the promotions would be effected as per the approved Scheme of Recruitment and that they would be granted marks for their period of service. In my opinion, for the reasons stated above, the Petitioners' legitimate expectations are violated.

Conclusion

For the reasons set above, I hold that the fundamental right of the Petitioners guaranteed by Article 12(1) of the Constitution was violated by the 1st and the 2nd Respondents. Regrettably, there is a lack of professional display by the Respondents in adhering to the applicable rules and regulations despite the communication of the Hon. Attorney General to the 1st Respondent Board way back in 2011. Needless to say, the 1st Respondent Board should adhere to approved Schemes of Recruitment and Promotions when awarding promotions. This Court observes that the 1st Respondent Board should firmly adhere to established schemes of promotion and requirements without subjecting applicants to arbitrary and ad hoc schemes. In my view, adherence to established schemes of recruitment and promotions is not a complicated task. Moreover, adherence to established schemes ensures a content public service as held by His Lordship Justice Kulatunga in Perera and Another v Cyril Ranatunga, Secretary Defence and Others Sri L.R 1 (1993) 39 at page 60;

The service of most public officers is life-time and the guarantee of fair treatment to them enshrined in Article 12 (1) of the Constitution would, if properly enforced, also help in maintaining a contented public service which is vital for its efficient functioning."

If the 1st Respondent Board is of the view that the Scheme of Retirement and Promotions should be streamlined, then it should be done in accordance and in compliance with the established procedure.

In those circumstances, I order the 1st Respondent Board that; the Petitioners forthwith be appointed to the position of Engineer – Class II, in the event their promotions have not been granted. However if they had been promoted subsequent to the filing of this application, their promotion should be back dated to the date on which promotions were granted to the 7th to the 10th Respondents to the post of Engineer- class II. The petitioners however, will not be entitled for any back wages.

We also direct the 1st Respondent Board to pay compensation in a sum of Rupees two hundred and fifty thousand to each of the Petitioners.

Order

Perusal of the Journal Entry dated 25.10.2022 shows that, the bench comprising Hon. E. A. G. R. Amarasekara, Hon. A. H. M. D. Nawaz, Hon. Achala Wengappuli had taken up the application made by the 10th and 11th Respondent-Petitioners together and it can also be seen that one Counsel, Faisz Musthapha PC, had appeared for both 10th and 11th Respondent-Petitioners. The Court on 25.10.2022 had directed that the application of the 10th Respondent-Petitioner would be considered by that bench on the next date i.e., 09.11.2022. As that bench decided to consider the said application it had directed the Registrar to constitute that bench for the next date i.e., 09.11.2022. and the bench has taken the view therefore that the Application of 10th Respondent should also be considered by the same bench.

On 09.11.2022, the same bench had refixed the case to be taken up on 15.02.2023 as the Court did not have adequate time to consider the said Application of the 10th Respondent- Petitioner.

It was in that backdrop, that this case had been listed inadvertently before the bench comprising Hon. P. Padman Surasena J, Hon. Shiran Gooneratne J, Hon. Mahinda Samayawardhena J on 15.02.2023.

As we have detected the above inadvertence, we direct the Registrar to constitute the bench comprising of Hon. E. A. G. R. Amarasekara J, Hon. A. H. M. D. Nawaz J, Hon. Achala Wengappuli J, as directed by the said bench on 25.10.2022, to consider the Application made by the 10th Respondent.

In view of the above, the bench comprising of Hon. P. Padman Surasena, Hon. Shiran Gooneratne, Hon. Mahinda Samayawardhena, although heard submissions on 15.02.2023, would not make any order on the Application of the 10th Respondent-Petitioner.

Mention this case on 06.07.2023, before a bench comprising Hon. E. A. G. R. Amarasekara J, Hon. A. H. M. D. Nawaz J, Hon. Achala Wengappuli J, as directed by the said bench on 25.10.2022. The 10th Respondent-Petitioner is directed to take steps to have notices served on all parties. Requisite notices should be tendered to the Registry within two weeks.

COUNSEL: Harsha Fernando with Chamith Senanayake and Yohan Cooray instructed by Jagath Talgaswattage for the Petitioner.

M. Gopallawa DSG for the 01st to 13th Respondents.

WRITTEN SUBMISSIONS: 09.07.2021 for the 1st -13th Respondents.
16.07.2021 for the Petitioner.

DECIDED ON: 31.10.2023

Judgement

Aluwihare, PC, J,

When the jurisdiction of this Court was invoked by the Petitioner, she was an officer in Grade I of the Sri Lanka Administrative Service (hereinafter 'SLAS'). The Petitioner sought leave to proceed under Articles 12(1) and 14(1)(g) of the Constitution. It was the contention of the Petitioner that her Fundamental Rights guaranteed under Articles 12(1) and 14(1)(g) of the Constitution had been infringed by the Respondents by their arbitrary and unlawful failure to call her for interview for promotion from Grade I to the Special Grade of the SLAS. Having formed the opinion that the application merits adjudication, this Court granted Leave to Proceed under Articles 12(1) and 14(1)(g) of the Constitution on 20th June 2019. The 1st to 13th Respondents were represented by the learned Deputy Solicitor General, the other Respondents, however, were absent and unrepresented.

The Facts

The merits of the instant case directly correlate to the factual circumstances of Petitioner's Service in the Sri Lanka Administrative Service. Therefore, the facts have been set out below in their warranted detail.

(1) The Petitioner joined the Public Service as a Science Teacher on 10th December 1986. Thereafter, the Petitioner was appointed to the SLAS Class II – Grade II with effect from 10th September 1990 (letter marked 'P1A'). The said appointment was made under and in terms of the 1988 Minutes of the SLAS. The Petitioner held the post of 'Assistant Divisional Secretary' in Ambagamuwa Korale, Ginigathhena.

(2) Thereafter, in October 1992, in terms of the 1988 SLAS Service Minutes (referred to above), the Petitioner duly completed the 1st Efficiency Bar Examination (letter 'P4'). In November 1992, the Petitioner married Mr. V. Krishnamoorthy, who at the time was a career officer of the Sri Lanka Foreign Service. In 1992, upon the Petitioner's Husband being posted as the Third Secretary to the Sri Lankan Embassy in Beijing, China, the Petitioner sought and obtained no pay leave from the SLAS under and in terms of Chapter XII-Section 36 of the Establishments Code to join her husband and relocate to Beijing, China. The said leave, to have effect from 1st December 1992 to 1st December 1995 was approved by letter dated 24th November 1992 (marked 'P5A'). The Petitioner therefore had actively served approximately 2 years and 3 months at the time of obtaining the said leave.

(3) While resident in China, the Petitioner gave birth to her two daughters, in August 1993 and December 1994 respectively. The Petitioner's Husband's period of service was extended by the Foreign Service to 31st December 1997. The Petitioner's no pay leave too, was extended till 31st December 1997 (marked 'P5B-P5D'). In the meantime, the Petitioner duly completed the 2nd Efficiency Bar Examination as stipulated in the 1988 SLAS Service Minutes. A copy of the results sheet dated 31st January 1996 was produced ('P6').

(4) In December 1997, the Petitioner's family returned to Sri Lanka as her Husband was attached to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Colombo. Thereafter, the Petitioner resumed actively working in the SLAS, and worked as an Assistant Secretary to the Judicial Service Commission and thereafter as Assistant Divisional Secretary, Thimbirigasyaya from 1st January 1998 to 4th March 2001, for a period of 3 years and 3 months.

(5) In 2001, the Petitioner's Husband was appointed to the Embassy of Sri Lanka in the Hague, the Netherlands. The Petitioner once again obtained no pay leave in terms of Chapter XII – Section 36 of the Establishments Code. The said no pay leave was obtained from 1st March 2001 to 31st August 2004. The relevant approval and extension letters were produced (marked 'P7A-P7D'). Upon completion of that assignment, the Petitioner's Husband was reassigned to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Colombo with effect from 1st September 2004. The Petitioner reported to work with effect from 1st September 2004 as the Assistant Secretary/Director of the Ministry of Social Services. The Petitioner served in this capacity for approximately 2 years.

(6) Thereafter, the Petitioner's Husband was once again posted to Bangladesh to serve as Sri Lanka's High Commissioner with effect from 1st June 2006. The Petitioner once again accompanied her Husband with her two daughters and relocated to Bangladesh. The Petitioner left the country utilising her accumulated leave under the Establishments Code. Upon arrival, the Petitioner was selected to follow a postgraduate program at Dhaka University, leading to a Master of Social Sciences in Public Administration. Upon completion of her Master's degree, as the Petitioner's Husband continued to serve as the Sri Lankan High Commissioner to Bangladesh, the Petitioner obtained no pay leave once more in terms of Chapter XII – Section 36 of the Establishments Code from 4th April 2008 to 16th June 2009. The letters of approval were produced (marked 'P8A and P8B').

(7) Upon conclusion of the Petitioner's Husband's term in Bangladesh, the Petitioner returned to Sri Lanka with her Eldest Daughter while the Husband and the Younger Daughter relocated to Chennai, India for the Husband's new posting. The Petitioner states that this was done because her children were then old enough to live with one of their parents and the Petitioner wished to return to active service in the SLAS. Upon her return, the Petitioner was appointed the Director, National Secretariat for Elders, Ministry of Social Services.

(8) On 27th April 2010, the Petitioner was promoted to SLAS Grade II (letter marked 'PIC') and on 01st July 2010, to SLAS Grade I (letter marked 'PID'). These appointments were made pursuant to the Sections of the 2005 Service Minute of the SLAS. Thereafter, the Petitioner served as the Director, Presidential Task Force for Trilingual Sri Lanka from 18th June 2012 to 23rd February 2013 and as Additional Director General (Admin and Finance) of the Department of Technical Education and Training from 27th February 2013 to 29th April 2016. From 2nd May 2016 to 1st November 2016, the Petitioner served as the Food Commissioner and thereafter, till 31st December 2018, she served as the Director (Acting) to Department of Textile Industries. On 1st January 2019, she was appointed as the Additional Secretary (Acting) to the Ministry of Public Enterprises, Kandyan Heritage and Kandy Development. At the time the present application was filed, on 23rd May 2019, the Petitioner was serving as the Food Commissioner as well as Additional Secretary (Acting) to the Ministry of Public Enterprises, Kandyan Heritage and Kandy Development. Accordingly, from July 2009 to May 2019, the Petitioner was in active service approximately 10 years in active service. In aggregate, the Petitioner has served approximately 19 years in active service. This fact is not disputed by the Respondents.

(9) Upon completion of 18 years in active service, the Petitioner had requested that she be appointed to the Special Grade of the SLAS [letter dated 14th March 2018 addressed to the Secretary, Public Services Commission (marked 'P10')]. This request received a response in the form of a letter dated 30th May 2018 from the Senior Assistant Secretary of the Ministry of National Policies and Economic Affairs (with the Secretary of the PSC being copied) stating that if the Petitioner so wishes to apply for the promotion, she can do so once applications are called by the SLAS for the promotion (marked 'P10B'). In a further letter dated 07th June 2018 and addressed to the Secretary, PSC through the Senior Assistant Secretary of the Ministry of National Policies and Economic Affairs, the Petitioner detailed the status of her eligibility for promotion to the Special Grade, in particular that she has completed 18 years of active service and as per the 2013 Service Minute of the SLAS, she is eligible for promotion to the Special Grade. The Petitioner further mentions that as per Section 36.4.1 of Chapter XII of the Establishments Code, the period of no pay leave taken by her should not have affected her seniority (marked 'P10C').

(10) On the 20th June 2018, the Senior Assistant Secretary of the PSC, on behalf of the Secretary, wrote to the Petitioner, and wrote to the Secretary of the Ministry of Public Administration, Law and Peace, stating that the Petitioner has indicated in her prior appeals that she has achieved the necessary qualifications for the promotion to the Special Grade as per the Extraordinary Gazette No. 1842/2 dated 23rd December 2013, and that she should be informed that she may apply for an interview for the said promotion (marked 'P10D'). Thereafter, the Additional Secretary of the Ministry of National Policies and Economic Affairs, on behalf of the Secretary wrote to the Petitioner, in a letter dated 03rd July 2018 (marked 'P10E') that she may apply for interview for the said promotion, as per the direction of the aforementioned letter from the PSC.

The Position of the Petitioner

The Petitioner filed the present application alleging that she was arbitrarily denied of her right to be called for interviews for promotion to the vacancies of the Special Grade of the SLAS on 1st July 2018, and that such denial was in violation of her Fundamental Rights Guaranteed under Article 12(1) and Article 14(1)(g). It must be noted that after the filing of the application, promotions were made to the Special Grade of SLAS on several occasions and the Petitioner too, was promoted to the Special Grade with effect from 1st January 2020. The Petitioner thereafter amended the relief sought to reflect her change in post and prayed for the date of her promotion the Special Grade of SLAS to be ante-dated to the 1st July 2018. Thus, the scope of the application was narrowed down to the issue of whether the failure to back-date the promotion to 1st July 2018 amounts to a violation of her fundamental rights, as alleged.

It is the Petitioner's position that Section 36 of Chapter XII of the Establishments Code applies to the Petitioner in a manner such that her seniority would not have been affected by the no-pay leave taken by her. The Petitioner also submitted that her 'seniority' should be assessed based on her total period of service, as 'period of active service' has a distinct existence. Consequently, it was argued that her eligibility for promotion would have been assessed based on her total period of service, and she would have been called for interview. Although the Petitioner submitted that there is a difference between "Seniority" and "Active service", the Petitioner did not specify the root of such difference or how such difference would have any pragmatic effect on promotions.

The Petitioner argued that under Section 36 of Chapter XII of the Establishments Code she entertained a legitimate expectation that her seniority would be safeguarded despite the no-pay leave taken. She further maintained that the 2013 SLAS Service Minute (marked '11R1' and '11R2'), persons will be called for interviews based on their seniority, and as such, the Petitioner should have been called for interviews. To further buttress this argument, the Petitioner noted that as per the Service Minute, the Interview Board was only required to satisfy themselves of the applicants 'eligibility and seniority' for affirmation of post. The Petitioner argued that, by extension, if there was an issue regarding her seniority, such issue should have been addressed by the Interview Board and not the Respondents who prepared the list of persons being called for interview.

The Petitioner also relied on the contention that Section 36 of the Establishments Code embodies the 'Right to Family' and the recognition of the Family as the fundamental unit in society as envisaged by Article 27(12) of the Constitution as a Directive Principle of State Policy. Citing dicta in Kirahandi Yeshin Nanduja De Silva and Another v. Principal of Dharmashoka Vidyalaya Ambalangoda and Others [2017] SC FR 50/2015, and Ravindra Gunawardena Kariyawasam v. Cnetral Environmental Authority & Others [2019] SC FR 141/2015, the Petitioner argued that this Directive Principle must be interpreted and upheld in favour of the Petitioner's position that the law does not permit the seniority of officers who are spouses of diplomats to be affected.

The Position of the 1st to 13th Respondents

It was the submission of the Respondents that the eligibility criteria and method of promotion to the Special Grade of the SLAS were prescribed in Clause 13.3 of the 2013 SLAS Service Minute (marked '11R1'), with the eligibility criteria being specified in Clause 13.3(a) and the method of promotion being in Clause 13.3(b). The Respondents adverted to the fact that the method of promotion (Clause 13.3(b)) was amended in 2018, and that at the time the promotion in question was being sought, the method of promotion was governed by Clause 13.3(b) as amended. The Clause is reproduced below prior to amendment, and as it appears after amendment for ease of reference.

Prior to amendment:

13.3.(b) Method of promotion:
An officer who completes the above qualifications will be promoted to the Special Grade by the Public Services Commission as per vacancies available as at 1st July and 1st January every year.
Recommendations for appointment to the Special Grade will be made following an evaluation made by a Board of Selection consisting of three members appointed by the Public Services Commission. In making its recommendations the said Board of Selection will act on the basis an overall evaluation of the seniority and merits of the officers concerned. For this purpose, officers who have obtained the qualifications stipulated in 13.3(a) above and whose number does not exceed twice the number of existing vacancies shall be subjected to the interview.

After amendment (as it presently appears):

'13.3 (b) Method of promotion :

An officer who completes the above qualifications will be promoted to the Special Grade by the Public Service Commission according to vacancies available as at the 1st of July and the 1st of January every year :

Notes

1. Only a number of officers in Grade I who have completed the qualifications in 13.3(a) not exceeding the aggregate of both the number of vacancies and a quantum of 25% of such vacancies will be called for the interview according to the seniority of such officers as at the date on which the vacancies are taken into account.
2. The Board of Interview will examine only the basic qualifications and seniority of the officers who are called for the interview.
3. The Public Service Commission will promote a number of officers equivalent to the number of vacancies existed in the Special Grade according to the order of seniority of officers in Grade I to the Special Grade as at the date on which the vacancies are taken into account on the recommendations made by the Board of Interview constituting three members appointed by the Public Service Commission.

In response to the Petitioner's contention that the 2013 SLAS Service Minute contemplated two types of service, being the 'total period of service' and 'period of active service', the Respondents submitted that as per Clauses 13.3(a)(ii) and (iii), the period of service required to be eligible for promotion is only computed in terms of 'period of active service' and no other criteria is used to measure period of service. Consequently, the learned Deputy Solicitor General argued that the differentiation sought to be established was misconceived and contrary to unambiguous language in Clause 13.3(a).

In lieu of the above, it was also submitted on behalf of the Respondents that it is the 'period of active service' which must be considered to determine the 'seniority' of officers when effecting promotions under Clause 13.3(b) of the Service Minute.

It was the Petitioner's contention that she had satisfied the minimum eligibility criteria stipulated in Clause 13.3(a) and that she was entitled to be interviewed. Responding to this contention, the Respondents argued that such position is untenable and misconceived, as there is no 'right' of being interviewed for the following reasons:

- The SLAS is a 'cadre-based service';
- As per Clause 8.2 of the Service Minute, the Special Grade had 301 assigned posts;
- At the time the impugned promotion was due, as per the Seniority List (marked '11R5'), there were 799 officers in Grade I;
- Promotions to the Special Grade are contingent upon vacancies available (vide Clause 13.3(b));
- Note No.1 to Clause 13.3(b) prescribes that "only a number of officers in Grade I who have completed the qualifications in 13.3(a) not exceeding the aggregate of both the number of vacancies and a quantum of 25% of such vacancies will be called for interview according to the seniority of such officers as at the date on which the vacancies are taken into account".

Additionally, the Respondents furnished the Court with the following information regarding the promotion:

Should the Petitioner have been called for Interview for promotion to the Special Grade?

The crux of the Petitioner's submission that her Fundamental Rights guaranteed under Article 12(1) were violated rests on the contention that the Respondents had arbitrarily and unlawfully failed to call the Petitioner for interviews. Therefore, the central question which warrants determination is whether the Respondents had acted as per the mandated procedures, specifically, as per the SLAS Service Minute and the Establishments Code, as applicable.

The SLAS Service Minute

Section 13. 3(b) of the Sri Lanka Administrative Service Minute, regarding the promotion of officers to the Special Grade states that a total aggregate of the vacancies available as at 01st January or 1st July, as well as 25% of persons fulfilling that aggregate shall be called for interviews based on seniority. Accordingly, although 128 applications were received, only 71 officers were called for interviews.

The Establishments Code

The Petitioner relies on Section 36:1:4 of Chapter XII of the Establishments Code to contend that she, as the Spouse of an Officer posted abroad, bore a Legitimate Expectation that her seniority would not be affected by virtue of any no-pay leave approved under the Section. Section 36:1:4 of Chapter XII of the Establishments Code reads as follows:

"Subject to the following provisions, the seniority of such an officer [an officer who is the Spouse of an Officer posted abroad] will not be affected as a result of obtaining this no pay leave.

i. An officer who is granted no-pay leave under this section should not be considered for any promotion to any vacancies which may arise during the period of his no pay leave.

ii. Where a scheme of recruitment specifies a minimum period of service as a qualification for promotion, the period of no-pay leave granted under this section should not be reckoned for computing the minimum period of service." [parenthesis and emphasis added]

It is correct to state therefore that Section 36:1:4 of Chapter XII of the Establishments Code provides that where a promotion to a specific grade is dependent on the completion of a minimum period of service, the period of no-pay leave taken by such officer should not be counted for the purposes of ascertaining the minimum period of service completed by such officer.

Process of Promotion

The Respondents provided the following details of the process of promotion to the Special Grade in July 2018.

1. By Notice dated 13th March 2018 (marked 'P11' and 'P11A'), the Secretary, Ministry of Public Administration and Disaster Management called for applications to the Special Grade of the SLAS.

2. As at 01st January there were 19 vacancies in the SLAS Special Grade and as at 01st July 2018 there were 38 vacancies, amounting to a total of 57 vacancies as at 01st July.
3. Applications were received from 128 Grade I officers of the SLAS, including that of the Petitioner (marked 'P12' and 'P12A').
4. Since the number of applications received exceeded the number of available vacancies, candidates were shortlisted for promotion interviews as specified in Note 1 to Clause 13.3(b) of the SLAS Service Minute, based on the seniority of the officers who had tendered applications.
5. Seniority of the officers was determined by the official 'Seniority List' maintained by the Secretary, Ministry of Public Administration (marked '11R5' and referred to above).
6. Accordingly, 71 officers were shortlisted for interviews and a notice listing the names of such officers was published on the 24th of April 2019 (letter marked 'P13A'). The list of names was revised by changing 4 names. The revised list (marked as 'P13C') contains 67 names as 4 officers were listed for both interviews in respect of vacancies available as at 01st January 2018 and 01st July 2018.
7. For the aforementioned reason, the list of names was once again revised by substituting the names of the 81st, 82nd, 83rd and 84th Respondents in place of the 4 officers who were double counted, the 77th to 80th Respondents. The Respondents submitted that the 81st and 82nd Respondents were included as the Administrative Appeals Tribunal had quashed the disciplinary orders made against them while the 83rd and 84th Respondents had been included subsequent to concessions being granted to them in respect of their Efficiency Bar Examinations from the Public Service Commission for the antedating of their appointment to SLAS Grade I.

8. Subsequently, interviews were conducted, and approval was granted by the Public Service Commission to promote 19 officers with effect from 1st January 2018 and 37 officers with effect from 01st July 2018.
9. The Respondents also submit that all the officers who were called for interviews and subsequently promoted were senior in service to the Petitioner for the reason that although most of them had joined the SLAS after the Petitioner, they had surpassed her in seniority at the time of her promotion to Grade II, due to their accumulation of service whilst the Petitioner had obtained an extensive period of no-pay leave. Accordingly, all such officers had secured their promotion to the Grade II by the 15th February 2010 while the petitioner had secured her promotion to Grade II by the 27th April 2010. The same officers had maintained such seniority above the Petitioner in Grade I.
10. The Petitioner was not considered for interviews even though she had tendered an application as she was ranked 208th in the Seniority List, which is considerably lower than the seniority ranks of the officers who had been called for interview.

The 'Seniority List'

The Seniority List (marked '11R5') lists the Petitioner at No. 208 and therefore places her far beyond the number of SLAS officers within contention of being called for interview for the promotion. The Petitioner disputes the veracity of the 'Seniority List' produced by the Respondents (vide para 25 of the written submission dated 12.08.2021). The Petitioner claims that although it is conceded that 11th Respondent is responsible for 'maintaining' the list, the author of the list is not revealed and therefore its originality or authenticity is unacceptable. The Respondents maintain that this list was maintained in documentary form since 1978 and since 2001, it was maintained in electronic form in the official website of the Ministry of Public Administration, which was publicly accessible and had been updated at least once every three months on the website, and functions as the central roll or register of SLAS officers.

Provided that this 'Seniority List' is key in determining whether the Petitioner was within the list of officers and applicants (an interviewee must be both) who could be called for interview, I find it prudent to reiterate the position in our Jurisprudence on who bears the Burden of Proof. Our Courts have strenuously followed the core maxim of 'affirmanti non neganti incumbit probatio' in holding that the burden of proof lies upon him who asserts and not who denies. This is trite law. Applying the principle to the present case, it becomes evident that the burden of proving that the 'Seniority List' cannot be accepted as an official record of the seniority of officers in the SLAS rests firmly with the Petitioner.

It is the Petitioners contention that her legitimate expectations and Fundamental Right to Equality before the Law guaranteed under Article 12(1) have been violated. It logically follows that it is the Petitioner who asserts that she was within the list of officers who were eligible for promotion to the Special Grade by 1st July 2018 and consequently, should have been called for interview. In effect, it is the Petitioner who must prove that she was in such a position. In order to do so, the Petitioner cannot merely dispute the veracity of the list produced to dispute the Petitioner's position by the Respondents, she must establish before court, on her own accord, independent to the material produced by the Respondents, that she was placed in the Seniority ist of the SLAS in a manner making her not eligible for promotion, but also that the Respondents were bound to call her for interview above and before other applicants. The position of the Petitioner falls further beyond the ambit of merit when considering that, as the Petitioner was a senior officer in the SLAS who had received promotions to Grade II and Grade I which were also conditioned on Seniority and therefore based on the same list, had there been any issue with regard to her positioning on the list, she could have raised the matter at any time prior the calling of applications for vacancies for the Special Grade.

Secondly, it is also worth noting that provisions of the Evidence Ordinance provide for producing duly certified copies of Public Documents as proof of the contents therein and the Court can presume that the Seniority List of the SLAS was produced as genuine. Once the contents therein were proven by operation of the law, the burden of showing its contents are not accurate fell on the Petitioner. Besides noting that no one officer has claimed responsibility for creating the list, the Petitioner has not produced any material which could establish why she should not have been placed 208th in such list by referring to her service record. The Court, therefore, can rely on the Seniority List that was produced by the Respondents as a genuine and accurate document, in the absence of any proof to the contrary.

Accordingly, the following facts must be observed in determining the Respondents compliance with the Establishments Code and the SLAS Service Minute:

The No. of Vacancies for the SLAS Special Grade as at 01st July 2018 = 57
The No. of Persons who were shortlisted for Interview [57 + (25% of 57)] = 71
The Seniority Rank of Petitioner according to the List = 208

Clause 13.3(a)(iii) of the SLAS Service Minute lists 'an active period of service not less than eighteen years as at the date of promotion' to be eligible for promotion to the SLAS Special Grade. Although the Petitioner sought to submit the view that the service minute contemplates the 'total period of service' and seniority, for the purpose of calling officers for interview, must be determined by such 'total period', and not 'active period', it must be observed that Clause 13.3 does not require an examination of the entire period of service. Therefore, it must be understood that any 'minimum period of service' contemplated under the Clause refers to 'active service' alone.

By extension, the aforementioned conclusion also leads to the view that Section 36 of the Establishments Code did affect the seniority of the Petitioner. Importantly, Section 36 begins by stating that "Subject to the following provisions, the seniority of such an officer [an officer who is the Spouse of an Officer posted abroad] will not be affected as a result of obtaining this no pay leave…" and the 2nd Proviso reads as follows:

"Where a scheme of recruitment specifies a minimum period of service as a qualification for promotion, the period of no-pay leave granted under this section should not be reckoned for computing the minimum period of service."

Accordingly, it can be understood that the 'minimum period of service' contemplated in Clause 13.3 of the Service Minute for the promotion of officers to the Special Grade is stated in Clause 13.3(a)(iii) wherein 'an active period of service not less than eighteen years as at the date of promotion' is required. I therefore subscribe to the view advanced on behalf of the Respondents, that the Petitioner's seniority was duly affected by operation of the law and that she was not arbitrarily or unlawfully denied an opportunity to interview for promotion to the Special Grade.

In the absence of any arbitrary or unlawful action by the Respondents, I hold that the Petitioner has failed to establish a violation of Fundamental Rights guaranteed in terms of Article 12(1) of the Constitution, and the Petitioner is not entitled to the relief prayed. Accordingly, the application is dismissed.

However, taking into account the circumstances of this case, I order no costs.

Petitioners in these two applications invoked the jurisdiction of this Court vested under Article 126 of the Constitution. Both these matters are public interest litigations. In both these matters petitioners are claiming violations of their rights too. This Court, having considered the material placed by all parties, granted leave to proceed in both matters. In SC FR 195/2022 leave to proceed was granted against 2nd, 2A, 2B, 3rd to 27th, 28th to 32nd, 32A and 38th respondents. Furthermore, petitioners were directed to add two members of the 28th respondent as 32B and 32C respondents. In SC FR 212/2022, the Court granted leave to proceed against 1(b), 2nd, 3rd, 6th, 7th, 9th, and 10th respondents.

The learned President's Counsel for the petitioners in both these applications drew the attention of the Court to the fact that Gotabaya Rajapaksa – the former President who is cited as 1(b) respondent in SC FR 212/2022 and who is cited as 32A respondent in SC FR 195/2022 (hereinafter referred to as "32A respondent") had neither filed objections nor has made arrangements for legal representation in Court even though notices were issued on him through Court. The learned President's Counsel further contended that the allegations made against the 32A respondent therefore remain uncontroverted.

The learned President's Counsel Chandaka Jayasundera in presenting his case in SC FR 212/2022 submitted that the petitioners do not challenge the policy of the government in these proceedings. In further elaborating this submission he contended that the conduct impugned in these proceedings include illegal, arbitrary, unreasonable or capricious executive and or administrative actions and or inactions. It is claimed that such actions and/or inactions arise from the implementation of arbitrary and/or capricious decisions, by the executive and/or administrative branches of the Government. It is his contention that the impugned conduct of the respondents breached the 'public trust' reposed in them. It is his position that the conduct impugned in these proceedings led to the economic collapse of an unprecedented magnitude. Acute shortages in essentials such as fuel and gas, food and medicine and prolonged power cuts became the regular pattern of life. Long queues for fuel and gas brought in severe hardships to the entire society and led to many deaths. This situation brought in a total breakdown of economic and social life of the entire society. Such breakdown ultimately led to the collapse of the public order and the complete undermining of the rule of law.

Petitioners contend that it is a series of decisions taken during the relevant period, including the decisions to revise taxes, artificial control of the exchange rate, failure to maintain official reserves leading to serious depletion of reserves, failure to seek assistance from the International Monetary Fund (IMF) in a timely manner and the failure to make necessary adjustments to the interest rates which were the main causes for this economic collapse.

It is further contended that the decision to reduce various taxes was taken without proper analysis and study of its possible repercussions to the government revenue. Furthermore, it was contended that no remedial measures were adopted even after the adverse repercussions were apparent. It was the "inaction to remedy" even after warnings by the officials brought in irreversible consequences. Mr Jayasundera PC further submitted that the respondent's claim, that the failure to honour the foreign debt repayment instalments in May 2022 is the cause for the economic debacle, is nothing but a futile attempt to absolve themselves from the responsibility arising from their own conduct. It is his contention that the impugned conduct of the respondents is the cause for the failure to honour the debt obligations of the State. It was further contended that the default of foreign debt repayment by the Government in May 2022 is nothing but an inevitable result of the conduct of the respondents that is impugned in these proceedings. The learned President's Counsel's position was that, if remedial measures were taken such as seeking assistance from the IMF in a timely manner, a crisis of this nature could have been averted.

The learned President's Counsel for the petitioners in SC FR 195/2022 Mr Upul Jayasuriya, fully associated himself with the aforementioned submissions of the learned President's Counsel for the petitioners in SC FR 212/2022. He further contended, that the failure to introduce tax revisions without a proper consideration of its impact to the government revenue triggered off a series of events that had a domino effect that caused the economic crisis. He further contended that introduction of tax revisions without setting up necessary effective mechanisms to ensure that the extra earnings accrued by persons due to tax revisions are invested to the benefit of the overall economic growth of the country demonstrate that such revisions were implemented to the benefit of a selected group of persons and not to the benefit of the society and hence amounts to corruption. It is his contention, that a proper investigation under the relevant laws relating to Bribery and Corruption will ensure due respect to accountability. The learned President's Counsel further contended that the downgrading of credit rating by international rating agencies that brought in severe impact on foreign investment and borrowings is a direct result of arbitrary tax revisions. Furthermore, direct consequences of the artificial pegging of foreign exchange rates further aggravated the depletion of foreign reserves. Under these circumstances, the failure to honour foreign debt obligations in the absence of any support mechanism such as an assistance scheme from the IMF was inevitable. Explaining the consequences of such a non-negotiated disorderly default – a hard default – the learned President's Counsel submitted that would have been disastrous and would have led to total collapse of the social life.

Learned President's Counsel for the petitioners further submitted that the failure to take remedial measures when the adverse consequences of the tax revisions were felt and the persistent reluctance to take remedial measures further aggravated the situation and brought in the most damaging result to the economy as well as social lives of the entire population. In his submissions averting to several remedial measures, the learned President's Counsel submitted that such measures ought to have been taken on a priority basis to avoid the crisis.

According to the Petitioners, the adverse impact on the economy was primarily due to the tax revisions. It further aggravated due to a few other measures including artificial fixing of the exchange rate and the interest rate, maintaining an open account for foreign exchange transactions and the failure to introduce proper mechanisms to ensure that the profits and/or revenue earned due to tax revisions are properly invested to bolster the economy. The learned Counsel submitted that the failures identified above made an environment for any person to convert the extra earnings due to tax revisions to foreign exchange at an artificial rate and engage in imports or any other overseas transactions to the detriment of official reserves. It was further submitted that the artificial exchange rate discouraged receipt of foreign exchange remittances through official financial institutions and thereby led to further depletion of official reserves.

It was further contended that the above situation fell well within a renowned concept in international economics – the "impossible trinity"-. It is an accepted theory that three main factors namely a fixed exchange rate, free capital flow across borders and an independent monetary policy should not co-exist. If such a situation is created, dire consequences to the economy are inevitable. The learned President's Counsel contended that the conduct of the respondents during the relevant period created such an environment in Sri Lanka, which brought in disastrous consequences. It was his contention that this situation was created due to the arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable conduct of the respondents. He contended that the impugned conduct of the respondents was not based on any scientific analysis or reasoning.

The learned President's Counsel submitted that constant and repeated concerns raised by the officials of the Central Bank on the overall situation and the need to seek assistance and initiate a programme with the International Monetary Fund (IMF) were ignored by the Government. It was further contended that the failure to take timely action on seeking IMF assistance heavily contributed to the downfall of the economy. It was their contention that the arbitrary, unreasonable, irrational and capricious conduct of the respondents led not only to the denial of the last tranche of the IMF programme commenced in 2016 but also refusal to grant a relief facility – Rapid Financing Instrument (RFI) - to overcome ill-effects of the pandemic. A facility that was made available to many other countries that helped them overcome difficulties caused due to the pandemic. It was further contended that the presence of an IMF assisted programme would not only have brought much needed foreign exchange but also credibility and confidence, enabling the government to attract foreign investment and assistance.

Both Mr Jayasundera and Mr Jayasuriya contended that the conduct of the respondents impugned in these proceedings amounts to a breach of the public trust and also had a direct impact on Rule of Law. They contended that the impugned conduct of the respondents resulted in the violation of the Fundamental Rights guaranteed under the Constitution. Both President's Counsel did concede that the pandemic had an adverse impact on the economy, but they claimed that the failure on the part of the respondents to take remedial measures, led to this crisis.

Mr Suren Gnanaraj, who represented W.D.Lakshman, the 6th respondent in SC FR 212/2022 and the 30th respondent in SC FR 195/2022 (hereinafter referred to as the "30th respondent") submitted that Professor Lakshman functioned as the Governor of the Central Bank for a period of less than two years namely from 24th December 2019 to 14th September 2021. The learned Counsel further contended that the conduct assailed in these proceedings relate to the performance of his duties as the Chairman of the Monetary Board. In this context it is his submission that none of the decisions of the Monetary Board can be attributed to any particular individual member of the Board but they are decisions of the Board. Therefore, it was his contention that no individual responsibility can be attached to a particular member or members in relation to any decision of the Board. In this context, he drew the attention of the Court to sections 8 and 9 of the Monetary Law, that stipulates that the Governor of the Central Bank be the Chairman of the Monetary Board and the Board is a body corporate with perpetual succession. It was his contention that none of the decisions of the Board is a decision of any particular individual member including the Chairman but remains a decision of the Board. However, the composition of the Board and the practice has made way for divergent views of the members to be considered and a final decision of the Board to be reached on consensus. Section 47 (1) of the Monetary Law Act grants protection to each member of the Board for acts done in good faith. It is his contention that none of the petitioners were able to establish that the 30th respondent acted in bad faith or his impugned conduct amounts to a misconduct or a wilful default. It was further contended that the said respondent cannot therefore be held liable to any breach of a Fundamental Right.

He also emphasized that the impugned conduct of the 30th respondent should be viewed in the proper context of the legal framework relating to the scope, functions and the relationship between the Central Bank and the Government. Legislative framework as recognized by the jurisprudence of this Court envisages "a continuous and constructive cooperation between the Central Bank and the Government " and the Central Bank is only an "agent of the Government".

The learned Counsel submitted that the petitioners have invoked the jurisdiction of this Court on an incorrect premise. Attributing to the three factors referred to by the petitioners namely the tax revisions introduced in 2019, pegging of the US Dollar and the delay to seek assistance from the IMF, as the only causes for the economic collapse, is a misconception. Mr Gnanaraj submitted that there were numerous other factors for the economic crisis other than the three factors referred to by the petitioners. On this basis Mr Gnanaraj submitted that the contention that downgrading by the international rating agencies for the reason of unsustainable debt is a result of the aforesaid factors is incorrect.

He contended that the unsustainability of debt was envisaged even in the year 2016 and the downgrading commenced in that year itself and therefore, the petitioners have failed to act bona fide by fixing the downgrading to the year 2019.

It was his contention that even though an IMF facility was obtained in 2016 there was no proper investment of such funds to uplift the economy but such funds were utilized for non-income generation projects. Furthermore, he contended that there was a failure to fulfil conditions on which such facility was granted and thereby failed to draw the last tranche of the said facility. He conceded that in the year 2019, diametrically opposed policy in the context of taxation was adopted. He emphasized that low level of reserves was observed even by October 2019.

It was his contention that the continued adverse conditions in the economy were further aggravated due to the onset of the pandemic in early 2020. The adverse impact on the economic activities and growth caused due to various steps taken by the Government to arrest the spread of the disease including lock downs and robust vaccination drives, further depleted reserves of an economy which was already ailing. He further submitted that the adverse conditions existed in the year 2020 due to the pandemic, impacted on the income and profits earned by most of the legal and natural persons other than public servants whose full salaries were continued to be paid by the Government. This situation was further compounded by the non-availability of the IMF assisted RFI.

Mr Gnanaraj further contended that at no instance fixing of the exchange rates as provided under sections 74 and 76 of the Monetary Law took place, during the relevant time. However, moral suasion is a legitimate tool available to the Central Bank and use of such tool is neither unlawful nor arbitrary. In this process the Central Bank uses influence by way of advice, suggestions, requests and persuasion extended to the commercial banks. It was his submission that the decision to seek IMF assistance is solely a prerogative of the Government and it is reflected through the statutory reports submitted as provided under the Monetary Law. The 30th respondent had briefed the Minister of Finance the benefit of reaching out to the IMF.

Mr Gnanaraj reiterated that no individual responsibility can be attributed to the 30th respondent as he had always acted in accordance with the law.

Mr Shavendra Fernando PC, representing Nivard Cabraal - the 29th respondent in SC FR 195/2022 who is also the 7th respondent in SC FR 212/2022 - (hereinafter referred to as the "29th respondent") who served as the Governor of the Central Bank from 15th September 2021 to 4th April 2022, associated himself with the submissions of Mr Gnanaraj in particular, the duties and responsibilities of the Chairman of the Monetary Board and the legal framework within which the Chairman and the other members of the Monetary Board discharge their duties and responsibilities. Furthermore, he contended that the petitioners are impugning the conduct of the 29th respondent qua Chairman of the Monetary Board. In this regard he emphasised that all the decisions of the Monetary Board are collective decisions of the Board and none of them could be classified as decisions of the individual members. On this basis, it was argued that as far as the decisions of the Board are concerned, no responsibility could be attached to any individual member by excluding one or several of other members, as all the members are bound by the principle of collective responsibility.

Mr Fernando PC also reiterated that the petitioners in both these applications are challenging the policy decisions of the Government and hence this Court lacks jurisdiction to entertain both these applications. Furthermore, he submitted that in SC FR 212/2022 necessary parties are not before Court and in SC FR 195/2022 the petitioners are attempting to attribute responsibility on a few public servants selectively, even though the entire Cabinet of Ministers are cited as respondents. He therefore contends that both these applications are politically motivated. He further contended that the responsibility of formulating the policies of the Government lies with the Executive.

It was Mr Fernando's submission that the 29th respondent had no role to play in relation to the impugned decisions on tax revisions. He contended that the responsibility on the decision whether to seek assistance from the IMF or not cannot be attributed to the Monetary Board or any of its members. It was his submission, that the said responsibility lies with the President. Even prior to the 29th respondent assuming office as Governor of the Central Bank, the Monetary Board in this regard [seeking IMF assistance] had expressed views on two options, namely; seeking IMF assistance or to rely on alternative "structural reforms".

Although the learned President's Counsel submitted that the Cabinet of Ministers had decided to adopt the option to work on a homegrown solution instead of seeking the assistance from the IMF, we observe that there is no such material before this Court of a Cabinet Decision on the said option up until 3rd January 2022.

Mr Fernando PC submitted that the Central Bank adopted a six-month road map as part of the home grown solution. It is to be noted that, at a point closer to the date the country declaring bankrupt, however, during the 29th respondent's tenure as Governor of the Central Bank / Chairman of the Monetary Board, the President did take a decision to seek the assistance of the IMF.

The Learned President's Counsel further submitted that the pegging of the US Dollar or fixing the exchange rate, were not based on a decision of the Central Bank but was a policy decision [of the Government]. The parity of the US Dollar was initially fixed at Rupees 203 on a directive of the Minister [of Finance] but thereafter the exchange rate was partially floated subject to a cap of Rupees 230 as the rate of exchange. This was achieved using a legitimate tool, "moral suasion".

It was further contended that honouring the ISB in January 2022 was nothing but discharging an obligation of the country and a failure of which could have brought in dire consequences. Any default could have triggered cross-default clauses and a demand on other commitments would have created an unmanageable situation. He submitted that the funds necessary for the repayment was already allocated by the Parliament by the annual budget.

Mr Fernando PC submitted that no responsibility can be attributed to the 29th respondent as at no stage the respondent had acted outside the legal framework but always had lawfully discharged duties as the Chairman of the Monetary Board as provided by law.

Mr Manohara de Silva PC, representing Samantha Kumarasinghe, an appointed member of the Monetary Board, the 32nd respondent in SC FR 195/2022, (hereinafter referred to as the "32nd respondent"), at the outset submitted that this application (SC FR 195/2022) should be dismissed as the petitioners have failed to cite all necessary parties as respondents. It was his contention, as far as the allegations, made against the 32nd respondent is concerned, they arise from and out of his conduct as a member of the Monetary Board and the petitioners have selectively made him and two others as respondents whereas two other members of the Monetary Board had been conveniently left out for inexplicable reasons. He further contended that the petitioners have abused the process by selectively targeting the 32nd respondent causing great inconvenience to him. The learned President's Counsel argued that there is no merit in the case against the 32nd respondent and the petitioners have clearly acted mala fide in citing him as a respondent in these proceedings. Mr de Silva PC further argued that the petitioners' attribution of the responsibility regarding the mismanagement of the economy is selective in that only selected persons such as the Prime Minister, Minister of Finance, and four others have been cited as respondents. He further contended that the petitioners are impugning the decisions of various persons that fall within the ambit of economic and political decisions. It is his contention that the Court is not equipped to examine merits or demerits of such decisions and therefore Court should refrain from making any attempt to tread into areas beyond its competency.

According to his submission the decision to honour the ISBs was a decision of the Government and the petitioners are acting maliciously by making an attempt to attribute responsibility on a few selected individuals, including the 32nd respondent.

Mr De Silva PC, further contended that the petitioners are maliciously claiming that the 32nd respondent was in control of the Monetary Board. Whilst pointing out that the previous sixteen programmes with the IMF has resulted in failures, the learned President's Counsel contended that the 32nd respondent always took up the stand that seeking IMF assistance, is not the best solution for the country and wanted to stop the leakage of foreign exchange and thereafter pursue other avenues.

Mr de Silva PC further submitted that in ascertaining the reasons for economic debacle, it is neither possible nor reasonable to confine to a few years, as to how the economy was managed (ie 2019-2022). The management of the economy during this period should not be considered in isolation for the reason that the sharp increase in the borrowings from 2017 to 2019 had placed an unbearable burden on the economy and the debt management.

He pointed out that the decisions of the sub-committee of the Monetary Board cannot be regarded as the decisions of the Board. The Monetary Board at no stage had delegated its authority to the sub-committee. Mr de Silva PC also submits that this application (SC FR 195/2022) is time barred.

On behalf of the 38th respondent in SC FR 195/2022 (P.B.Jayasundera) (hereinafter referred to as the "38th respondent") President's Counsel Mr. Anura Meddegoda, while associating himself fully with the submissions of Mr Gnanaraj in relation to the operation and applicability of the Monetary Law Act and the submissions of Mr de Silva PC on the jurisprudence relating to the extent to which the policy decisions should be examined by courts, submitted that the petitioners have not only failed to plead any specific allegation against Dr Jayasundera in the petition but also had failed to produce any material to establish a violation of any fundamental rights resulting from the conduct of this respondent. He submitted that the application is misconceived in law. The learned President's Counsel further contended that the petitioner's allegations are palpably untenable and the application should be dismissed. He further claimed that the 38th respondent had been added as a respondent maliciously and the application is devoid of any merit.

According to Mr Meddegoda PC, the 38th respondent at no stage acted arbitrarily, unreasonably or capriciously but performed the responsibilities and duties attached to the post of Secretary to the President lawfully. The 38th respondent accepted the post of Secretary to the President on 19th November 2019 and relinquished all duties on 14th January 2022. It was further submitted that the 38th respondent always acted according to the instructions, guidance and advise of the President (32A respondent). He facilitated national and international initiatives to give effect to the policies of the Government. It was also contended that allocation of funds through a proper annual budget took place only in 2020 and allocation of funds in the preceding two years was effected by votes on account. By the time the budget was presented in 2020 the adverse conditions due to the onset of pandemic had already made an impact on the economy and the Government adopted a policy prioritising solutions to public health issues. Implementation of such policy required a collective effort at national and international levels. Further, explaining the circumstances under which the 38th respondent sent the letter dated 21st June 2021 to the Governor of the Central Bank (the 30th respondent) the learned President's Counsel submitted that he conveyed to the Governor the policy of the Government while drawing his attention to the role and the scope of functions of the Monetary Board. He contended that a closer examination of this letter in its proper context clearly shows that the Governor was appraised with the suggestions and options enabling him to take decisions exercising his discretion as opposed to any directions compelling a particular course of action. In his submission the response of the Governor dated 13th July 2021 clarifies this position.

Mr Meddegoda PC drew the attention of this Court to paragraph 3(i) of the petition and submitted that the petition fails to substantiate the basis of the assertion that the 38th respondent is responsible for the decisions of the Monetary Board. He further submitted that the absence of a specific reference to the 38th respondent in the prayers (b), (c) and (d) reflects that the petitioners themselves accept that no responsibility could be attributed to the 38th respondent for infringement of any fundamental right. It is a futile attempt to argue that the Court could grant relief against the 38th respondent on the strength of the omnibus clause in the prayer of the petition.

Mr Nihal Jayawardena PC on behalf of S.R.Attygalle Secretary to the Treasury, the 31st respondent in SC FR 195/2022 - who is also cited as 10th respondent in SC FR 212/2022 – (hereinafter referred to as the "31st respondent") submitted that the 31st respondent functioned as Secretary to the Treasury from 13th November 2019 to end of March 2022. He submitted that the 31st respondent was the chief financial officer of the Ministry and an ex officio member of the Monetary Board. Therefore, this respondent had the duty to implement the government policy as well as appraise the Monetary Board on details of such policy. It was his submission that no responsibility could be attributed to the 31st respondent based on the change of tax policies introduced in 2019. He contended that such change did take place as a pledge to the people by the President (32A respondent) during his election campaign and subsequently adopted as the policy of the Government. In his capacity as the Secretary to the Treasury and the Ministry of Finance he was acting on the instructions and guidance of the Minister and taking necessary measures to implement policy decisions of the Government. Furthermore, the decision to seek assistance from the IMF or not was a decision that should have been taken by the Government and his function is only to make necessary administrative arrangements to implement the decision. Therefore, it was argued that the 31st respondent cannot be faulted on the basis of any delay in making the decision to seek assistance from the IMF.

It was the submission of the learned President's Counsel that the payments made to the investors on ISBs in early 2022 was nothing but honouring the commitment following the maturity of such ISBs. Any default could have brought about serious repercussions. Not only such a default would have created a deep dent on the reputation of the Country preserved over several decades since independence but also would have dried off all current and future avenues for foreign investments and borrowings. Furthermore, it was contended that the Parliament through the budget had already allocated funds necessary for the payment in issue and as such there was no reason for this respondent not to have made arrangements necessary to honour the pledge utilising available funds.

He further submitted that the adverse conditions to the economy is not due to the conduct of any of the respondents but due to the irresponsible borrowings and the depletion of reserves that took place prior to this respondent assuming duties as Secretary to the Treasury. He submitted that the reserves of USD 8.6 billion that existed in the year 2014, sharply declined to USD 6.3 billion within a period of five years due to mismanagement and irresponsible policies. It was further contended that the increase in the volume of borrowings during the same period also caused a serious impact on debt sustainability.

The learned President's Counsel submitted that the petitioners have failed to establish a case against this respondent and therefore urged the Court to dismiss both applications.

Sanjeeva Jayawardena, President's Counsel who was added as 32B respondent (hereinafter referred to as the "32B respondent") at the hearing appeared in person. Sanjeeva Jayawardena was added as a respondent pursuant to the Order of this Court at the point this Court granted leave to proceed. He was made a respondent in his capacity as a Member of the Monetary Board along with Ranee Jayamaha (who was also a member of the Monetary Board) who was added as 32C respondent. Both these said respondents filed affidavits jointly before this Court. It is to be noted however, that leave to proceed was not granted against either of them.

32B respondent at the outset submitted that the impact of the tax revisions introduced in the year 2019 removed 600 billion rupees from state coffers as taxes and fiscal revenue. Such depletion in Government revenue adversely impacted on the service of recurring domestic debt liabilities and the day to day running and management of the affairs of the State. It is his submission that the downgrading by the rating agencies on the basis of unsustainability of debts caused immense hardships to the economy. The failure to attract foreign direct investments due to downgrading and loss of confidence among the investors aggravated the balance of payment crisis. The inability to maintain the level of foreign reserves needed for three months of imports had a serious impact on the Government's capacity to import essential items such as fuel, gas, medicinal drugs and food. It was his submission, that the government failed to take necessary effective remedial measures even after realising the serious repercussions of the tax revision. The situation was further aggravated due to continued refusal and/or the resistance to seek an unqualified assistance programme from the IMF, in a timely manner. He contended that he along with the 32C responded repeatedly urged the importance of obtaining an IMF assisted programme at the meetings of the Monetary Board. Furthermore, he contended that upon his suggestion, a board level committee namely "Monetary Board External Debt Management Committee" – MBEDMC - was established within the Central Bank. The first meeting of the said Committee was held on 12th January 2021. Mr Jayawardena and the 32C respondent had functioned as the Chairman and Vice-Chairman of the committee which comprised of Deputy Governors, Assistant Governors, Heads of Departments as well as a senior officer from the Treasury as an ex officio member. However, the ex officio member – the officer from the treasury - had abstained from participating at these meetings other than on the very first day where he was requested to provide details of sources of inflow of foreign currency, claimed by the said official as "firmly expected sources of inflows of foreign currency", for reasons unknown. 32B respondent further submitted that the critical importance of the presence of an IMF programme was apparent; even friendly countries were reluctant to provide SWAP facilities or any other financial assistance in the absence of an IMF programme.

It is Mr Jayawardena's contention that no positive steps were taken due to the policy of the government, as made known to them, despite several discussions emphasising the need to seek IMF assistance. According to the minutes of the Monetary Board meeting held on 3rd February 2021 the 31st respondent had said "since the Government policy is not to go to the IMF, as officials we have to abide by it. Therefore (he stated) that other means of inflows need to be considered". Under these circumstances time passed by without any real solution to the crisis that was gradually reaching alarming levels. Repercussions were aggravated in the absence of any effective remedial measures in place.

On 6th April 2022, both the 32B & 32C respondents had presented themselves before the Parliamentary Committee on Public Finance. 32B respondent contended that following the revelations made before the said Parliamentary Committee at the request of one of the members of the said Committee, a one-on-one meeting took place between him and the President (32A respondent). In preparation of this meeting Mr Jayawardena had obtained statistics with regard to foreign reserves and the inflows expected and the outflows that would be imminent due to the upcoming debt service deadlines and the expected further decline of the reserves. Furthermore, he had been informed that a letter the President had sent to the IMF on 18th March 2022 was ambiguous and no request was made for a full programme but referred only to an engagement. Therefore, the IMF was not prepared to extend any meaningful assistance. At the meeting this respondent had briefed the President on all aspects and had stated to him that there is no other option but to reach out to the IMF for a fully pledged programme. At this discussion the President had revealed that he in fact had inquired as to how the country could recover without an IMF programme and whether promised influx of monies from foreign countries would actually materialise. The President himself has expressed serious scepticism on such assured inflows. Furthermore, the President had said that the impression given to him was that the Central Bank was against seeking assistance from the IMF. After this meeting on the suggestion of Mr Jayawardena, the President had communicated with the IMF with a request for a full IMF programme. Accordingly, on the 7th April 2022 a letter signed by the President (32A respondent) seeking a full IMF programme was prepared and on the following day a further communication to the IMF by the new Governor (who had assumed duties on 08th April 2022) was made, resulting a positive response from the IMF which facilitated the GOSL to formally announce on the debt standstill on 12th April 2022. He submitted that debt restructuring with the backing of a fully blown IMF programme has made a significant impact on the recovery process. He further submitted that the hardships the country was experiencing in the year 2021 could have been averted if the intervention of the IMF was sought in a timely manner.

In relation to the maintenance of the exchange rate, Mr Jayawaradena submitted, that the policy of the Government had been to maintain a fixed exchange rate. However, the dire situation did not permit the Central Bank to use reserves to defend the exchange rate but moral suasion was used to maintain the exchange rate without allowing a sudden spike, which could have serious repercussions. He pointed out, however, that the failure to impose effective restrictions on imports had a direct impact on the exchange rate. The Minister of Finance by his letter dated 12th August 2021 had called upon the Central Bank and the Monetary Board to initiate ten specific measures on an expeditious basis. One such measure was to release a total of USD 250 million to all commercial banks with the instructions not to exceed the parity of the exchange rate beyond Rs. 202 per 1 USD. The Monetary Board and the MBEDMC closely monitored the exchange rate continuously. The Monetary Board at the meeting of 7th March 2022 decided to allow the market to have a greater flexibility in the exchange rate with immediate effect. The Board further decided to communicate that decision by way of a notice informing that the Central Bank is of the view that forex transactions would take place at levels which are not more than Rs. 230 per US Dollar. However, the 29th respondent (Nivard Cabraal) at a meeting with the chief executive officers of the commercial banks and licenced specialised banks held on 09th March 2022 had informed that "certain trades may take place beyond the exchange rate stated by the Central Bank considering the greater flexibility that has been permitted". According to Mr Jayawardena, the abovementioned statement of the 29th respondent did completely subvert and over-ride the carefully considered decision of the Monetary Board and the banks felt free to take an exponential increase of the forex rate. This situation escalated the forex rate and resulted in the USD appreciating to Rs.365 (interbank) and in the informal banking (hawala) to around Rs. 420. He contended that the impact of this overshoot of the exchange rate, on inflation and the cost of essential imports like fuel, gas, coal, medicines and food, were unbearable. The Rupee cost of purchasing such items from international markets, was not something that the liquidity levels of the treasury could bear under any circumstances. He further contended that this had a deep impact on the cost of living and also created shortages of essential items needed as there was insufficient currency in Sri Lanka rupees to meet the costs of these purchases and no purchase of US dollars from the Central Bank was possible. This issue had been raised at the meeting of the Parliamentary Committee on Public Finance. He contended that the Monetary Board had to take various steps thereafter in order to resuscitate the situation. In his submission the conduct of the 29th respondent was not only a clear deviation from the well-considered decision of the Monetary Board but aggravated the economic crisis, further deepening the enormous hardships caused to the general public.

Mr Navin Marapana PC represented both, Mahinda Rajapaksa and Basil Rajapaksa who are cited as the 2nd and 2A respondents in SC FR 195/2022 and 2nd and 3rd respondents in SC FR 212/2022 (hereinafter referred to as "2nd respondent" and "2A respondent" respectively). Mr Marapana PC at the outset submitted that both these applications should be dismissed. He contended that the impugned conduct of the two respondents in these applications are arising from policy decisions of the Government. He contends that the case of the petitioners is based on the premise that the decisions of the respondents are not the best decisions and in hindsight, different decisions could have averted the economic crisis. It is his contention that the petitioners have failed to establish as to which fundamental right was infringed due to the conduct of the respondents. He further contended that if the Court grants relief in these applications, the Court will be recognising a right to have infallible decisions from the executive or administrative authorities. He submitted that no such right is recognised by the Constitution. He further contended that at no stage, the petitioners claim that the respondents could not have taken the impugned decisions nor they allege that the decisions they took are tainted with mala fide. Learned President's Counsel further submitted that the Court should desist from hearing these applications as a Parliamentary Select Committee is examining the same issues that the Court is invited to examine in these proceedings. In his submissions these decisions fall in the realm of public finance and it is the Parliament which has the sole jurisdiction to consider such matters.

In response to the contention of the petitioners that the tax revision was the root cause for the economic collapse, Mr Marapana PC submitted that the claim of the petitioners is misconceived. In his submission, attributing the sole responsibility to the tax revision not only is artificial but would be a complete disregard to many other factors that contributed to the economic collapse. It is his submission that the tax revisions were introduced with the expectation to revive the economic growth that was badly affected due to the easter attack in April 2019. It is common ground that one of the main avenues for foreign exchange earnings, tourism, was badly affected due to the unfortunate events that took place in April 2019. However, tax revisions that were introduced in late 2019 were with the expectation to help revive the economic growth. Unexpectedly however, within a very short period the global health crisis – Covid 19 pandemic – caused serious disruption to the day-to-day life of the entire society and continued to adversely impact on the economic growth. During the period of the pandemic, the main priority of the government was the safety of the people. This policy caused unexpected loss of revenue as well as the need to divert funds to protect peoples' lives. When tax revisions were introduced, several parties including Colombo Chamber of Commerce commended the move and expressed optimism. Furthermore, the decision to revise taxes was a lawful decision giving effect to the policy adopted by the Government in keeping with the promise in the election manifesto. He further contended that it is unrealistic to have reversed the tax revisions in the year 2020 as all the people were badly affected by the pandemic. However, in the first given opportunity, at the budget in 2021, steps were taken to bring in certain changes to the tax regime with the view to enhance government revenue. Furthermore, Mr Marapana PC contended that the claim the tax revisions caused a loss of Rs. 600 billion is a myth. He claims that the impact of the pandemic itself would have lowered the earnings of people and thereby reduced the tax income of the Government. Furthermore, Government earnings from excise duty and custom duties on imported vehicles dropped as the sales of excise items dropped and importation of vehicles was suspended by the Government. The learned President's Counsel contended that the petitioners have failed to demonstrate that these factors were taken into account in quantifying the loss of revenue due to tax revisions. It is only in hindsight that the tax revisions are criticised. He contends that the attempt to attribute sole responsibility on the decision for tax revisions as the cause for the economic collapse has no merit.

On behalf of the 2nd and 2A respondents, Mr Marapana PC conceded that the decision to seek or not to seek assistance from the IMF lies with the Government. In his submission, the decision on this matter at no stage ignored the advise and/or the recommendations of the Monetary Board. He submitted that all the cabinet papers submitted by the respondents in this regard were in line with the expert opinion of the Monetary Board as provided by its statutory reports in compliance with section 68 of the Monetary Law. He drew the attention of this Court to the fact that in none of the statutory reports the Monetary Board identifies seeking IMF assistance as the only available path to economic recovery. The Monetary Board in the statutory reports identified seeking assistance from the IMF as an option vis a vis the "home grown" solution that was also identified as an alternative option. He contended that all the cabinet memorandums submitted in this regard are based on the statutory reports provided by the Monetary Board. Therefore, no responsibility could be attributed to any particular individual or individuals in this regard. He drew the attention of this Court to nine such reports submitted by the Monetary Board to the Minister of Finance. He contends that in none of the reports, seeking assistance from the IMF is recognised as the only way forward to recover from the crisis. To the contrary, the Monetary Board had commended various steps taken by the Government, including the adoption of the "home grown solution" as opposed to seeking assistance from the IMF.

Dr Romesh de Silva PC representing the Monetary Board, cited as 28th respondent in SC FR 195/2022 and as 9th respondent in SC FR 212/2022 (hereinafter referred to as the "28th respondent") at the outset submitted that even if the Court accepts the submissions of the petitioners, no responsibility can be attributed to the Monetary Board. The 28th respondent had discharged all duties in accordance with the law and had taken all possible measures to avert the crisis, acting within the statutory powers vested on it. It was his submission that the impugned conduct and the decisions which the petitioners claim that their rights were breached, have been taken by the Government and not by the Monetary Board. Furthermore, he submitted that the Monetary Board by its statutory reports had informed the Minister of Finance the dire situation in the economy and the need to seek assistance from the IMF due to the situation that prevailed at the relevant period. It was his submission that these reports even though did not specifically mention that seeking assistance from the IMF as the only viable option available, provided a clear picture of the situation leaving for the Minister to take an informed decision in this regard. Furthermore, these reports themselves reflect that the Government was averse to seeking assistance from the IMF despite the critical condition in the economy. Therefore, as an agency of the Government the Monetary Board had to continue with the discharge of its duties while respecting the policy decisions of the Government. It was the responsibility of the Monetary Board to engage and discharge its duties at the best possible levels within the policy framework of the Government. Even under these constraints, the Monetary Board made all attempts to convey the importance of seeking an IMF programme to avert the crisis and overcome the difficulties.

In his submission Dr de Silva contended that the 28th respondent is vested with the powers, duties and functions of the Central Bank and be generally responsible for the management, operations and administration of the Central Bank. The Central Bank and the Monetary Board are created by the Monetary Law, Act No 58 of 1949 as amended from time to time. He submitted that within the statutory framework of the Monetary Law, the Central Bank is an agency of the Government and not an entirely independent entity. In this regard he drew the attention of this Court to the "Report on the Establishment of a Central Bank for Ceylon", Sessional Paper XIV-1949 (commonly known as Exter Report) and the determination of this Court in SC SD 6-12/2023 (determination on the Bill titled "Central Bank of Sri Lanka").

The learned President's Counsel further contended that the 28th respondent which operated under the Monetary Law Act has now ceased to operate. By virtue of section 125 of the Central Bank of Sri Lanka, Act No 16 of 2023, which came into operation on 15th September 2023, the Monetary Law Act has been repealed and the "Central Bank" and a "Governing Board of the Central Bank" are established under sections 2 and 8 respectively of the said Act. Governor and the Members of the Monetary Board who were holding office on the day immediately prior to the appointed date have now become the Governor of the Central Bank and members of the Governing Body, by the operation of a deeming provision in sections 126(1) and 126(2) of the Act No 16 of 2023. Furthermore, under section 134(h) of the Act, all applications instituted against the Central Bank, the Monetary Board, its members under the repealed Act, is deemed to be an application instituted against the Central Bank under the new Act.

Therefore, the learned President's Counsel submits that any finding by this Court against the 28th respondent will have serious repercussions on the Central Bank functioning under the new law. He submitted that it is just and equitable for this Court not to make any adverse finding on the agency which has ceased to exist, the Monetary Board. However, in the event the Court reaches the conclusion that the conduct of some of the members of the Monetary Board have resulted in the violation of any rights, such members cannot hide behind the corporate veil and the Court could find them individually responsible for such conduct.

Dr de Silva contended that the Monetary Board has discharged all its duties as required by law and hence no responsibility can be attributed for any violation of a Fundamental Right.

Additional Solicitor General Mr Nerin Pulle PC, represented the Attorney-General. At the outset Mr Pulle PC submitted that the Court should accord great weight to the two reports of the Auditor-General in considering economic, public finance auditing and related aspects raised in the two instant applications.

The learned Additional Solicitor General drew our attention to the observations and conclusions of the Auditor-General in these reports and submitted that the Auditor General has the legal competency to make such observations and express opinions having reviewed and examined all necessary material available at the Central Bank. He further contended that even though the Auditor-General has refrained from expressing an opinion as to whether or not any loss had been caused to the Central Bank, the report does show the background in which various issues occurred as well as the direct or indirect impact of each factor on the other.

In relation to the complaint of the petitioners that the revision of taxes had a direct impact on the subsequent events which led to the economic collapse, Mr Pulle PC submitted that there are several legal principles and legislative provisions that need to be considered when examining this issue. According to him the imposition of taxes is within the full control of Parliament and enactment of tax legislation with retrospective effect is a lawful exercise of such powers. The Constitution does not provide for post enactment judicial review of legislation. In this context the learned ASG posed the question, "would the exercise of wide sweeping powers of Parliament to impose taxes precludes the Court examining the merits or demerits of such legislation?"

The learned Additional Solicitor General contended that the formulation of national policy is a matter that is solely vested with the Central Government and the economic policy does form part and parcel of the national policy. He drew the attention of this Court to a series of judgements of this Court as well as judgments from foreign jurisdictions including the judgments of the Indian Supreme Court that recognises limitations on the power of judicial review on economic policy. It was his submission that the mere disagreement with a policy is not a ground on which courts could review economic policy and therefore, when there are various theories and hypotheses regarding the correct course of action it would not be possible to evaluate the correctness or otherwise of the policy. He contended that the Court should refrain from acting as a "super auditor". Mr Pulle PC further drew the attention of this Court to the scope of the "doctrine of political question" and submitted that courts have declined judicial review in instances where a political judgement has been made based on the assessment of diverse factors and varied factors, and there are no judicially discoverable and manageable standards other than in instances where the policy is mala fide and/or manifestly unreasonable and/or the policy is based on wholly extraneous and irrelevant grounds. Furthermore, he submitted that the Court should be mindful of the issue of whether the Court has the institutional capacity to examine the matters raised in the two instant applications. The doctrine of separation of powers is another matter he said that the Court needs to be mindful of when considering these two applications as matters of economic policy which are within the exclusive power of the Executive and taxation which is within the exclusive purview of the legislature.

The learned Additional Solicitor General having drawn our attention to the jurisprudence of this Court finally submitted that the Court has the power to make directions as it seems fit even if the Court decides that no violation of Fundamental Rights had been established.

REPORTS OF THE AUDITOR GENERAL

This Court when granting leave to proceed, directed the Auditor General to conduct an audit upon examining all relevant material and submit a report on (a) the decision made by the 28th respondent (Monetary Board) to set the value of the Sri Lanka Rupees at or around 203 as against the US Dollar and all matters connected to the said decision; (b) the delay in seeking facilities from the IMF by the Republic and (c) all matters relating to the settlement of International Sovereign Bond/s to the value of USD 500 million on 18.01.2022 utilising foreign reserves. In addition, the Auditor General was further directed that the said report should comprise observations, including whether any loss had been caused to the Central Bank due to one or more of the three matters referred to above.

The Auditor General in compliance with the said direction, submitted to this Court the report titled "Audit Report Including Observations of the Auditor-General pertaining to the Fundamental Rights Case No 195/2022", on 08th March 2023. Furthermore, a copy of the report titled "Special Audit Report on Financial Management and Public Debt Control in Sri Lanka 2018-2022" dated 04th July 2022 was also tendered along with the said report, as per the direction of this Court.

We accept the submission of the learned Additional Solicitor General that the two reports of the Auditor General provide material including views, observations and opinions that could be taken into account by this Court in examining the instant applications.

In this regard we note that the Auditor General has refrained from making any observations on the issue whether any loss has been caused to the Central Bank. The Auditor General has refrained from making any observations on this issue for the reasons, (a) examination on the positive or negative aspects of matters that are prima facie policies of the Government is open for challenge; (b) the inability to identify the loss caused that resulted from the specific issues referred to by this Court as the pandemic also could have had an adverse impact on the economy and (c) the difficulty of ascertaining what ought to have been the best decision the Government could have taken in the face of limited foreign resources available at the relevant time.

Nonetheless, the Auditor General states that the report sets out the background in which the matters under consideration had taken place and further goes on to state that the interconnection of such matters as well as the impact those factors had on each other can be observed by the examination of this report.

This Court had the benefit of both these reports in considering the material tendered by all parties and the submissions of Counsel.

The petition in SC FR 195/2022 is dated 3rd June 2022. The petition in SC FR 212/2022 is dated 16th June 2022. In both these applications, several respondents took up the preliminary objection that both applications were time-barred in that the applications were not in compliance with Article 126(2) of the Constitution, and they are therefore liable to be dismissed in limine. The learned President's Counsel for the 2nd and 2A respondents argued that in both applications, no act or omission on the part of the 2nd and 2A respondents are alleged to have been committed or occurred within one month of the date of the petitions, and that the said respondents, namely Mahinda Rajapaksa and Basil Rajapaksa had ceased to be the Ministers of Finance prior to one month of the dates of each petition. That is, the 2nd and 2A respondents had ceased to be the Ministers of Finance prior to 3rd May 2022 and 16th May 2022 respectively.

The learned President's Counsel for the 29th respondent argued that the applications were time-barred in respect of the 29th respondent too, as the 29th respondent had been named respondent qua Chairman of the Monetary Board and the Governor of the Central Bank, positions he had only held till 4th April 2022. Similarly, Counsel for several other respondents took up the objections on the basis that the applications were time-barred in respect of their clients, citing their final date in office as being beyond the reach of one month prior to the dates of the petitions. These objections will be addressed as a composite argument.

Each respondent claimed to have held office during a period of time beyond the reach of one month prior to the dates of the petitions. Essentially, Counsel for the respondents argued that by failing to name any act or omission committed or alleged to have occurred at the hands of the said respondents after either 3rd May 2022 or 16th May 2022, both sets of petitioners before this Court were not in compliance with Article 126(2) of the Constitution.

This Court cannot ex facie dismiss, nor has it considered it prudent to dismiss fundamental rights applications for their failure to conform to an arithmetic stricture of 30 days without first examining the context of such applications. The petitioners in both applications placed their grievances before this Court while stating that the matters impugned in both applications relate directly and greatly to the entire citizenry, and the consequences of decisions, actions, omissions or irregularities committed by the respondents have transpired over a period of time and at the time of filing their applications, appeared to be deep-set in a manner which may affect successive generations of Sri Lankans. The petitioners claimed to have filed their applications in the public interest. It would be correct to state that this Court has not previously been called upon to take cognizance of such a predicament.

It was submitted on behalf of the petitioners that the public was unaware of the contributory elements for the critical condition of the economy until the 4th Respondent in SC FR 212/2022 – the then Minister of Finance - conceded in parliament on 4th May 2022 that,

a) The reduction in income taxes reduced government revenue and resulted in grievous ramifications to the economy;
b) The rupee should have been 'floated' earlier and its depreciation should have been managed;
c) The assistance of the IMF should have been sought with greater promptitude;
d) The delay in rescheduling foreign loans resulted in severe ramifications to the economy;
e) There was a significant and rapid decrease in foreign reserves.

The Judgement in the case of Nanayakkara v Choksy (SLIC case) [2009] BLR 1 at 28-29 is particularly relevant here. The preliminary objection that the application (in that case) was time barred was overruled for the reason that the impugned transaction was an ongoing one and also since, "in applications which have been filed in the public interest", the Court can take cognizance of the time required to obtain relevant documents, study the subject matter of the impugned transaction and formulate the application to be submitted to this Court. Succinctly, his Lordship Justice Amaratunga held that the time period of one month should be deemed to commence only after the petitioners had a reasonable opportunity to complete the preparatory work which was essential to formulate and file their application.

> "…….when the Court has to deal with any objection to such application the Court has to consider Articles 12 (1), 17, 126 and 28 (d) in combination."
> "It must be remembered that these two applications have been filed in the public interest to make the fundamental right enshrined in article meaningful- that is to make it "tangible" and "palpable", and also to ensure that all officers of the State and its agencies entrusted with the duty to discharge their functions and obligations, do so in accordance with the law, bearing in mind the concept of equality enshrined in the Constitution and the basic tenet of the Rule of Law."

"The Petitioners have stated that they learnt about the alleged irregularities relating to the sale of SLIC after they read the COPE report tabled in Parliament. Thereafter, they had to obtain the relevant documents, which as revealed by this judgment itself, were in various government bodies not readily accessible to the public. Even after they managed to get the necessary documents, they have to study those documents to have a proper insight into the transaction to prepare their affidavits to be presented to this Court along with their applications."

As already observed, the petitioners in the present applications are public spirited persons and both these applications have been filed in the public interest. The alleged events, decisions, actions, omissions and irregularities complained of by the petitioners are matters connected with the mismanagement of the economy of the country. The events, decisions, actions, omissions and irregularities and the complaints which have flown from them are elaborate and complex in nature. The learned President's Counsel for the petitioners stated that relevant documents and material essential to obtain even a preliminary understanding of what had occurred and how the petitioners' fundamental rights were violated were difficult to discover, acquire and analyse. The voluminous court briefs and records which this Court scrutinised and examined over nearly a fortnight of hearings evidences the complexity of their claims. Therefore, considering the aforesaid circumstances and the inherent nature of the events, decisions, actions, omissions and irregularities impugned, it would be correct to state that the petitioners required additional time to reasonably complete the preparatory work which was essential to formulate and file their applications.

Furthermore, in the case of Sugathapala Mendis and Another v Chandrika Kunarathunga and Others (Waters Edge Case) [2008] 2 SLR 339,at pages 354, 355, in determining whether the application was time-barred (as this application too was filed in respect of a series of acts which ka Kunarathunga and Othershad occurred several years ago), Tilakawardane, J. considered the series of acts in totality, and in respect of the "particulars" which had changed over time which were "central to the case". Her Ladyship further held that "...For this Court to ignore the continuing nature of a large-scale development project would be to ignore it the continuing nature of any violations that stem out of such a project…".

Similarly, for this Court to ignore the long and sustained nature of the matters impugned in these present cases, would be to ignore any possible violations which may stem from these actions.

For the aforementioned reasons, the preliminary objection concerning the time-bar is overruled in respect of all respondents.

POLICY OF THE GOVERNMENT, ECONOMIC POLICY AND DOCTRINE OF "POLITICAL QUESTION"

One of the main contentions of the respondents, particularly the 29th,30th,31st,32nd,38th,2nd and 2A respondents was that this Court lacks jurisdiction to entertain, hear and determine these applications as the impugned mattes, cumulatively challenged by the petitioners before this Court are of fiscal, economic and political in nature and also are 'policy decisions of the Government'.

To substantiate the above argument, the respondents heavily relied upon the dicta of Sripavan, J. (as he then was) in the case of Sujeewa Senasinghe v. Ajith Nivard Cabraal (the Greek Bond Case) SC.FR 457/2012 S.C. Minutes 18-09-2014, wherein His Lordship observed;

> "We must not forget that in complex economic policy matters every decision is necessarily empiric and therefore its validity cannot be tested on any rigid formula or strict consideration. The Court while adjudicating the constitutional validity of the decision of the Governor or Members of the Monetary Board must grant a certain measure of freedom considering the complexity of the economic activities. The Court cannot strike down a decision merely because it feels another policy decision would have been fairer or wiser or more scientific or logical. The Court is not expected to express its opinion as to whether at a particular point of time or in a particular situation any such decision should have been adopted or not. It is best left to the discretion of the authority concerned."

Further, it was the contention of the respondents, that issues relating to policy or its appropriateness are not matters for consideration by the judicial branch of the Government. The respondents drew the attention of Court to the Statutory Determinations of this Court in the Nation Building Tax (Amendment) Bill SC.SD. 34/2016, [Decisions of the Supreme Court on Parliamentary Bills 2016-2017 Vol XIII 65], the Fiscal Management (Responsibility) (Amendment) Bill SC.SD. 28- 29/2016 [Decisions of the Supreme Court on Parliamentary Bills 2016-2017 Vol XIII 53] and The Inland Revenue (Amendment) Bill SC.SD. 17/1997 [Decisions of the Supreme Court on Parliamentary Bills 1991-2003 Vol VII 103] to bolster its argument.

The respondents also relied on the pronouncements made in the Special Goods and Services Tax Bill [SC.SD. 1-9/2022, Hansard of 22.02.2022] to propound that, formulation of policy is very much the prerogative of the Executive and the Legislature and converting the policies into legislation is within the exclusive domain of the legislative power of the Parliament and, that it is not prudent for the judiciary to comment upon policy formulation by the Executive.

Another judgement the learned Counsel for the respondents relied upon was Jathika Sevaka Sangamaya v. Sri Lanka Hadabima Authority SC/App 15/2013- S.C. Minutes 16.12.2015, a judgement of this Court, wherein it was observed;

> "The doctrine of separation of powers is based on the concept that concentration of the powers of Government in one body will lead to erosion of political freedom and liberty and abuse of power. Therefore, powers of Government are kept separated to prevent the erosion of political freedom and liberty and abuse of power. This will lead to controlling of one another.
> There are three distinct functions involved in a Government of a State, namely legislative, the executive and the judicial functions. Those three branches of Government are composed of different powers and functions as three separate organs of Government. Those three organs are constitutionally of equal status and also independent from one another. One organ should not control or interfere with the powers and functions of another branch of Government and should not be in a position to dominate the others and each branch operates as a check on the others. This is accomplished through a system of 'checks and balances', where each branch is given certain powers so as to check and balance the other branches"

Thus, the submission of the respondents was, since this Court has consistently recognized that the formulation of Government policy is very much the prerogative of the Executive and the Legislature elected by the People, that this Court should neither approve, critique or quash policies adopted by the Executive and the Legislature, or comment regarding its appropriateness in comparison with what the Court believes to be in national and public interests.

Additional Solicitor General Nerin Pulle PC in his submissions, responding to the petitioners contention that three main reasons contributed to the economic crisis, and one of which was arbitrary tax reductions, strenuously argued that the reduction and /or increase of taxes is a matter which is entirely within the purview of Parliament under Article 148 of the Constitution and this Court lacks jurisdiction to determine such matters and drew the attention of this Court to a number of tax revisions passed by Parliament in line with Article 148 of the Constitution.

The attention of the Court was also drawn to Article 80 (3) of the Constitution that prohibits post review of enactments and a plethora of Statutory Determinations of this Court, pertaining to fiscal statutes, to put forward the argument, that in tax matters, the legislator is the best judge and must benefit from greater freedom of classification and is at liberty to make reasonable classification and the Court lacks institutional capacity to assess or appraise such policy decisions and therefore, should not intervene in matters of policy unless such policy is found to be 'manifestly unreasonable.'[Vide Inland Revenue (Amendment) Bill SC.SD. 64-71/2022 Hansard of 17.11.2022]

Further, it was the contention of the learned ASG that the challenge by the petitioners to certain actions of the Executive which amounts to matters of economic policy, falls within the ambit of national policy and since national policy on all subjects and functions is listed under the 'reserved list' (List II of the 9th Schedule to the Constitution under Article 154 G (7) of the Constitution), the Central Government has sole control over such matters and thus the scope of judicial review of economic policy is limited and the Court cannot strike down a policy decision taken by the Government unless it is manifestly unreasonable and relied upon judicial dicta of the Indian Supreme Court to justify the said contention. [Vide - M/S Prag Ice and Oil Mills and another v. Union of India (1978) 3 SCC 459 and Balco Employees Union (Regd) v. Union of India and others [2002] AIR 350]

Another argument forcefully presented by the learned ASG is that certain narratives of the petitioners in these applications leading up to actions / inactions and the policies adopted by the Government would attract the application of the doctrine of political question- questions said to be 'non-justiciable' and as observed by the Supreme Court of the United States, the law is that the judiciary has no right to entertain the claim for unlawfulness, because such question is entrusted to one of the political branches and in view of a lack of judicially discoverable and manageable standards for resolving it and it involves no judicially enforceable rights.[Vide Baker v. Carr 369 US 186 (1962), Vieth and Furey v Jubelirer et al 541 US 267 (2004)] **.

He further submitted, that although the 'doctrine of political question' was considered and rejected in the case of Premachandra v Major Montegue Jayawickrema and another [1994] 2 SLR 90, the said judgement can be distinguished and the doctrine of political question could be applied in the matter under consideration. The argument presented by the learned ASG was that in Premachandra (supra) the doctrine was rejected, since the impugned decision was made by a Provincial Governor and the Provincial Councils which are a subordinate arm of the Government viś-â-vis the Superior Courts. The learned ASG further submitted that even if the Court decides to examine decisions of the Executive disregarding the doctrine of political question the Court should be cautious and should be mindful, whether the Court has the institutional capacity to review matters of economic policy and formulate standards for the management of economic policy. Hence, it was submitted that the case of the petitioners is 'non-justiciable' and should be dismissed.

The attention of this Court was drawn by the learned Counsel for the Respondents to the judicial pronouncements of the Indian Supreme Court, to contend that this Court lacks jurisdiction to review taxation policies unless it is in violation of a law or is done ultra vires; and also drew our attention to specific passages of the said judgements: -

Prag Ice & Oil Mills & another v. Union of India (1978) 3 SCC 459

> "We do not think that it is the function of this Court or of any Court to sit in judgment over such matters of economic policy as must necessarily be left to the Government of the day to decide. Many of them, as a measure of price fixation must necessarily be, are matters of prediction of ultimate results on which even experts can seriously err and doubtless differ. Courts can certainly not be expected to decide them without even the aid of experts."

Bharat Aluminium Company, Ltd. Employees Union v Union of India (2002) 2 SCC 333 (The BALCO case)

> "In a democracy, it is the prerogative of each elected Government to follow its own policy. Often a change in Government may result in the shift in focus or change in economic policies. Any such change may result in adversely affecting some vested interests. Unless any illegality is committed in the execution of the policy or the same is contrary to law or mala fide, a decision bringing about change cannot per se be interfered with by the court. […] Wisdom and advisability of economic policies are ordinarily not amenable to judicial review unless it can be demonstrated that the policy is contrary to any statutory provision or the Constitution."

Sidheswar Sahakari Sakhar Karkhana Ltd. v Union of India (2005) 3 SCC 369

> "Normally the Court should not interfere in policy matter which is within the purview of the government unless it is shown to be contrary to law or inconsistent with the provisions of the Constitution."

Ugar Sugar Works Ltd. v Delhi Administration and others (2001) 3 SCC 635

> "In tax and economic regulation cases, there are good reasons for judicial restraint, if not judicial deference to the Executive. The Courts are not expected to express their opinion as to whether at a particular point of time or in a particular situation any such policy should have been adopted or not. It is best left to the discretion of the State."

However, we are of the view that these passages cannot be taken in isolation. It must be considered and understood holistically. It must be examined with the narration of its facts.

In the Ugar Sugar case (supra) the Indian Supreme Court categorically observed:

> "It is well settled that the Courts, in exercise of their power of judicial review, do not ordinarily inter fere with the policy decisions of the Executive unless the policy can be faulted on grounds of mala fide, unreasonableness, arbitrariness or unfairness etc, Indeed, arbitrariness, irrationality, perversity and mala fide will render the policy unconstitutional. However, if the policy cannot be faulted on any of these grounds, the mere fact that it would hurt business interests of a party, does not justify invalidating the policy." (emphasis added).

Furthermore, this Court is conscious that the Indian Supreme Court in Delhi Development Authority v Joint Action Committee, Allottee of SFS Flats (2008) 2 SCC 672 t*he Court held as follows-*

> "An executive order termed as a policy decision is not beyond the pale of judicial review. Whereas the superior courts may not interfere with the nitty-gritty of the policy, or substitute one by the other but it will not be correct to contend that the court shall lay its judicial hands off, when a plea is raised that the impugned decision is a policy decision. Interference therewith on the part of the superior court would not be without jurisdiction as it is subject to judicial review." (emphasis added)

Similarly in the case, Centre for Public Interest Litigation v Union of India (2012) 3 SCC 1 (The 2G case) the Court observed as follows-

> "...The power of judicial review should be exercised with great care and circumspection and the Court should not ordinarily interfere with the policy decisions of the Government in financial matters. There cannot be any quarrel with the proposition that the Court cannot substitute its opinion for the one formed by the experts in the particular field and due respect should be given to the wisdom of those who are entrusted with the task of framing the policies. We are also conscious of the fact that the Court should not interfere with the fiscal policies of the State. However, when it is clearly demonstrated that the policy framed by the State or its agency/instrumentality and/or its implementation is contrary to public interest or is violative of the constitutional principles, it is the duty of the Court to exercise its jurisdiction in larger public interest and reject the stock plea of the State that the scope of judicial review should not be exceeded beyond the recognised parameters."
> "...When matters like these are brought before the judicial constituent of the State by public-spirited citizens, it becomes the duty of the Court to exercise its power in larger public interest and ensure that the institutional integrity is not compromised by those in whom the people have reposed trust and who have taken an oath to discharge duties in accordance with the Constitution and the law without fear or favour, affection or ill-will and who, as any other citizen, enjoy fundamental rights and, at the same time, are bound to perform the duties enumerated in Article 51-A." (emphasis added)

In contradistinction, to the contention of the respondents the main thrust of the case presented by the petitioners was the conduct of the 2nd,2A,29th,30th,31st,32nd, 32A and 38th respondents demonstrate a 'patent breach of public trust' and thereby a complete disregard of the 'rule of law'. The petitioners contend that in considering these applications the Court need not examine the policies adopted by the Government but focus on the failure to take necessary steps to remedy the situation which amounted to irrational and arbitrary conduct of the respondents. It was the position of the petitioners that even if this Court is to go into the policies of the State in determining whether any one or more of the Fundamental Rights of the petitioners had been violated as the law stands today, this Court is both empowered and has the jurisdiction to go into the policies adopted by the State in determining as to whether the Fundamental Rights of the petitioners have been violated by any of the respondents.

In the determination of the Appropriation Bill of 2012 [Decisions of the Supreme Court on Parliamentary Bills 2010-2012 Vol X] it was observed that 'due and proper fiscal accountability must be viewed as the bedrock of good governance by any Government and must at all times be balanced and viewed through the lens of intra and intergenerational responsibility and equity.'

This Court in its determination on the Inland Revenue (Amendment Bill) [SC SD 63-64/2023, Hansrad of 05.09.2023] in dealing with the issue of classifications in revenue matters recognized that "such measures would be considered as inconsistent with Article 12 of the Constitution only if they are manifestly unreasonable". Hence the Court in Statutory Determinations too recognized its jurisdiction even to examine matters relating to revenue, when such matters are manifestly unreasonable.

Indian authorities also provide that economic decisions are reviewable. Although an extent of judicial deference should be exercised in such review.

In Shri Sitaram Sugar Company v Union of India and Others (1990) AIR 1277 the price of levy on sugar was questioned. The Indian Supreme Court held that the doctrine of judicial review implies that the repository of power acts within the bounds of the power delegated, and he does not abuse his power. He must act reasonably and in good faith. It is not sufficient that the instrument is intra vires the parent Act but must also be consistent with the constitutional principles. It was held that;

> "The doctrine of judicial review implies that the repository of power acts within the bounds of the power delegated, and he does not abuse his power. He must act reasonably and in good faith. It is not only sufficient that an instrument is intra vires the parent Act, but it must also be consistent with the constitutional principles: Maneka Gandhi v. Union of India, [1978] 1 SCC 248, 314-315."
> "The true position, therefore, is that any act of the repository of power, whether legislative or administrative or quasi-judicial, is open to challenge if it is in conflict with the Constitution or the governing Act or the general principles of the law of the land or it is so arbitrary or unreasonable that no fair-minded authority could ever have made it"
> "Judicial review is not concerned with matters of economic policy. The court does not substitute its judgment for that of the legislature or its agents as to matters within the province of either. The court does not supplant the "feel of the expert" by its own views. When the legislature acts within the sphere of its authority and delegates power to an agent, it may empower the agent to make findings of fact which are conclusive provided such findings satisfy the test of reasonableness. In all such cases, judicial inquiry is confined to the question whether the findings of fact are reasonably based on evidence and whether such findings are consistent with the laws of the land."

Similarly, in Small Scale Industrial Manufactures Association (Registered) v Union of India and Others (2021) 8 SCC 511 the Indian Supreme Court observed that;

> "What is best in the national economy and in what manner and to what extent the financial reliefs/packages be formulated, offered and implemented is ultimately to be decided by the Government and RBI on the aid and advise of the experts. The same is a matter for decision exclusively within the province of the Central Government. Such matters do not ordinarily attract the power of judicial review. Merely because some class/sector may not be agreeable and/or satisfied with such packages/policy decisions, the courts, in exercise of the power of judicial review, do not ordinarily interfere with the policy decisions, unless such policy could be faulted on the ground of mala fides, arbitrariness, unfairness, etc."

In the recent judgement of Vivek Narayan Sharma v Union of India Writ petition (Civil) No. 906 of 2016 the Indian Supreme Court observed that the Court would not interfere with any opinion formed by the government if it is based on relevant factors. The judgement was concerned with the decision of the Central Government of India to demonetise certain legal tenders. In para 224 the Indian Supreme Court observed that;

> "This Court observed that the Court would not interfere with any opinion formed by the government if it is based on the relevant facts and circumstances or based on expert's advice. The Court would be entitled to interfere only when it is found that the action of the executive is arbitrary and violative of any constitutional, statutory or other provisions of law. It has been held that when the government forms its policy, it is based on a number of circumstances and it is also based on expert's opinion, which must not be interfered with, except on the ground of palpable arbitrariness. It is more than settled that the Court gives a large leeway to the executive and the legislature in matters of economic policy."

These series of Indian judgements demonstrate that the role of Courts is to expand and not to attenuate fundamental rights. This view is stated by Justice Y.V Chandrachud et.al in 'Commentary on the Constitution of India' 8th edn Vol. 1 at page 227 as follows;

> "Until recently, the Indian Supreme Court judges eschewed the policy approach as they treated the Indian Constitution as a statute and construed it according to the ordinary canon of statutory construction, except in one area, viz. The amenability of the Constitution and they usually stated that 'This Court is not concerned with policy or economic considerations' (vide State of Bombay v Bombay Education Society, AIR 1954 SC 561, 567).
> In Cooper's case the attitude was displayed, and it seems to continue. However, in recent times a 'policy' approach in interpreting constitutional interpretation is seen and emphasis is placed on a more creative law-making judicial role as regards to constitutional interpretation. In Maneka Gandhi it was openly declared that the role of the Courts is to expand not to attenuate the Fundamental Rights. This judicial policy has been translated into practical terms through a series of post-Maneka cases. Particularly in the order of personal liberty and freedom of speech."

Similar to Indian authorities, when we consider the jurisprudence of this Court it is clear that the scope and content of the Right to Equality guaranteed by Article 12 of the Constitution has evolved with the passage of time. Such evolution is in accord with the progressive changes that have taken place in other jurisdictions as well. To quote Justice Y.V Chandrachud (supra) at page 228:

"Judicial interpretation is a process of slow and gradual metamorphosis of Constitutional principles. Change caused thereby has to be deciphered by an analysis of a body of judicial precedents. This process is slow because it develops from case to case over a length of time and may take a long period for a view to crystalize. As per Dr Jain it is also somewhat haphazard because the Courts do not take initiative; they interpret the Constitution only when the question is raised before them, and the course of interpretation depends on the nature of cases and constitutional controversies which are presented to the Courts for adjudication."

In its current form the Right to Equality guarantees protection from arbitrary exercise of power and discretion by State functionaries and enhances the Rule of Law. It further requires State authorities to ensure that their conduct will not breach the trust placed on them and ensure that public resources placed in their custody are protected and preserved for the benefit of the people and not to exhaust for political or personal benefit. Exercise of discretionary powers in the decision-making process should be guided by the Directive Principles as recognized by the Constitution and callous disregard of such principles will pollute decisions with arbitrariness. Thus, the Rule of Law is not only rights and equality. The Rule of Law is also about functionality and efficiency for sustainable economic development of the nation and all of its People. Hence, the respondents will not be absolved of liability merely because the decision and/or decisions are concerned with economic policies. This is not to state that the Court will not provide a margin of deference to the relevant decision makers in implementing national economic policies. However, such decisions should be considered decisions, for the long-term sustainable development and for the public benefit.

This Court has considered the submissions made in respect of the "economic policy" and the "doctrine of political question", the judicial dicta of our Courts and other jurisdictions and we are convinced that this Court has jurisdiction to look into the grievances of the petitioners in these applications.

We are also of the view as laid down in the case of Jathika Sewaka Sangamaya v Sri Lanka Hadabima Authority (supra) one organ of a State should not dominate, control or interfere with the powers and functions of another branch of a government but operate as a check on the other through the mechanism of "checks and balances".

In coming to this conclusion, we are mindful that in the case of Sujeewa Senasinghe v Ajith Nivard Cabraal (supra) though leave to proceed was not granted the Court pronounced that it has to focus on the applicable law and ascertain whether the impugned decision to invest in Greek bonds was an arbitrary exercise of power serving a collateral purpose. The Court considered the totality of the circumstances, the risk management strategy in particular and the decisions complaint of in the said case viz. that the Central Bank investing in the bonds issued by the Hellanic Republic Ministry of Economy and Finance Public Debt Management Agency was based on the trade-off between the different risks faced and the Central Bank's tolerance for higher risks on a very small part of its portfolio (only 0.6 of its portfolio); and investing in high yielding Sovereign paper is an integral part of fund management of many funds in the world over and the Central Bank too had followed a similar practice in investing a tolerable proportion of its resources (0.6 percent) in Greek Bonds, The Court went on to observe when the euro zone took a turn for the worst several weeks later after the investment was made, the Central Bank sold a part of the Greek bonds at a loss of USD 6.6 million and this measure was taken to mitigate the risk of the Greek investment losing further value due to subsequent development in the euro zone and came to the conclusion, that it is neither possible nor desirable to hold that the Monetary Board in taking a decision to invest in Greek bonds have acted arbitrarily, unreasonably or in a fraudulent manner.

In view of the factors discussed above we see no merit in the submission of the learned Counsel for the respondents that the applications of the petitioners are non-justiciable or that this Court lacks jurisdiction to determine the impugned decisions of the Government.

RIGHT TO EQUALITY, RULE OF LAW AND 'PUBLIC TRUST'

Under Article 3 of the Constitution, the inalienable Sovereignty that is vested in the People includes powers of Government and Fundamental Rights. The Executive power of the People is exercised by the President who is the Head of the State, Head of the Government and the Head of the Executive. Within this Constitutional framework, The Cabinet of Ministers is charged with the direction and control of the Government and the President is the Head of the Cabinet of Ministers. The Constitution which is the Supreme Law recognises that FREEDOM, EQUALITY, JUSTICE, FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS and the INDEPENDENCE OF THE JUDICIARY as intangible heritage of succeeding generations of the People of Sri Lanka.

Article 3 of the Constitution reads as follows;

> "In the Republic of Sri Lanka sovereignly is in the People and is inalienable. Sovereignty includes the powers of Government, fundamental rights and the franchise."

Article 4 of the Constitution speaks of exercise of such power in the People and Article 4(d) of the Constitution declares;

> "the fundamental rights which are by the Constitution declared and recognized shall be respected, secured and advanced by all the organs of government and shall not be abridged, restricted or denied, save in the manner and extent hereinafter provided."

In Rajavarothiam Sampanthan v Attorney General (Dissolution Case) SC/FR/351 to 356 of 2018 and SC/FR/358 to 367 of 2018, SC minutes of 13-12-2018 at page 31, a Seven Judge Bench of this Court observed as follows;

> "It has been emphasised time and again by this Court that it is a foremost duty of the Supreme Court to protect, give full meaning to and enforce the fundamental rights which are listed in Chapter III of the Constitution. Thus, Sharvananda, CJ observed in Mutuweeran v The State - 5 Srikantha's Law Reports 126 at page 130, 'Because the remedy under Article 126 is thus guaranteed by the Constitution, a duty is imposed upon the Supreme Court to protect fundamental rights and ensure their vindication'. In the same vein, Ranasinghe, J stated in Edirisuriya v Navaratnam [1985 1 SLR 100 at page 106], that "A solemn and sacred duty has been imposed by the Constitution upon this Court, as the highest Court of the Republic, to safeguard the fundamental rights which have been assured to the citizens of the Republic as part of their intangible heritage. It therefore, behoves this Court to see that the full and free exercise of such rights is not impeded by any flimsy and unrealistic considerations.""

"In honouring this duty, the Supreme Court is giving tangible and effective life and meaning to the sovereignty of the people. The single and only instance specified in the Constitution where the exercise of these fundamental rights may be restricted is in circumstances falling within the ambit of Article 15 of the Constitution and the present application do not fall with the ambit of Article 15 in the absence of any laws which have been passed prescribing restricting the operation of Article 12(1) in the interests of national security, public order or any other of the specified grounds referred to in Article 15(7) of the Constitution [……] In the absence of a specific and express provision in the Constitution which strips the Supreme Court of jurisdiction under Article 118(b) read with Article 126 and Article 17 for the protection of fundamental rights, the provisions of Article 118(b) read with Article 126 and Article 17 will prevail. Therefore, this Court has the jurisdiction and, in fact a solemn duty to hear and determine these applications according to the law."

Thus, this Court is not fettered or precluded from exercising the fundamental rights jurisdiction and has a solemn and a bounden duty to uphold the rule of law and to safeguard the sovereignty of each and every citizen of this country.

Over the last period of forty-five years since the adoption of the Constitution in the year 1978, Right to Equality remains one of the mostly invoked rights by the People before the Supreme Court through the process provided under Article 126 of the Constitution.

The Right to Equality is guaranteed under Article 12(1) of the Constitution and it reads as follows:

"All persons are equal before the law and are entitled to the equal protection of the law".

The expression 'equality before the law' which is found in written Constitutions, originated from the English Law and the expression 'equal protection of the law' first appeared in the American jurisprudence. The Universal Declaration of Human Rights as well as the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights use the said expressions which exemplify that the object of these phrases is equal justice to mankind.

Sharvananda, J. (as he then was) in the case of Palihawadana v. Attorney General [1978]1 SLR 65, postulates that the Preamble to our Constitution recognizes that the People of Sri Lanka have ranked equality with justice and freedom and the notion of equality underlies all religious and political philosophies.

The Supreme Court which has the sole and exclusive jurisdiction to hear and determine any question relating to the infringement of fundamental rights in exercising this jurisdiction had examined and interpreted the scope and content of the right to equality as guaranteed by Article 12. The right to equality as guaranteed under Article 12 had evolved to its present form over a period of four decades. In this process the co-relationship between the Democracy, Rule of Law and the doctrine of Public Trust has been clearly recognised in the context of arbitrary and / or irrational exercise of power by Executive and / or Administrative authorities as well on violation of right to equality due to inaction of the Executive and / or Administrative authorities.

Equality is the corollary of the 'Rule of Law' and Sharvananda, J. in Sirisena & others v Kobbekaduwa, Minister of Agriculture and Lands 80 NLR 1 at 169-170 observed:

"Rule of law is the very foundation of our Constitution and the right of access to the Courts has always been jealously guarded. Rule of Law depends on the provision of adequate safeguards against abuse of power by the executive. Our Constitution promises to usher in a welfare state for our country. In such a state, the Legislature has necessarily to create innumerable administrative bodies and entrust them with multifarious functions. They will have power to interfere with every aspect of human activity. If their existence is necessary for the progress and development of the country the abuse of power by them, if unchecked, may defeat the legislative scheme and bring about an authoritarian or totalitarian state. The existence of the power of judicial review and the exercise of same effectively is a necessary safeguard against such abuse of power." (emphasis added)

In Visualingam and others v Liyanage and others [1983] 2 SLR 311 at page 380 it was observed that "...there is a firm judicial policy against allowing the 'Rule of Law' to be undermined by weakening of the power of the Courts".

In the year 1984, in Jayanetti v The Land Reform Commission and others [1984] 2 SLR 172, Wanasundera J with other four judges agreeing with him observed that:

"Article 12 of our Constitution is similar in content to Article 14 of the Indian Constitution. The Indian Supreme Court has held that Article 14 "combines the English doctrine of the rule of law with the equal protection clause of the 14th amendment to (the U.S.) Constitution". We all know that the rule of law was a fundamental principle of English Constitutional Law and it was a right of the subject to challenge any act of the State from whichever organ it emanated and compel it to justify its legality. It was not confined only to legislation, but extended to every class and category of acts done by or at the instance of the State. That concept is included and embodied in Article 12." (at 184-185).

In De Silva v Atukorale [1993] 1 SLR 283, Mark Fernando, J. in interpreting the term public purpose relied on the following opinion of H. W. Wade –

"... Statutory power conferred for public purposes is conferred as it were upon trust, not absolutely - that is to say, it can validly be used only in the right and proper way which Parliament when conferring it is presumed to have intended."(at 296)

Based on the said observation, the Court held that discretion of a public authority is not absolute, and that such discretion must be used exclusively for the public good, and went onto observe;

> "It was a power conferred solely to be used for the public good, and not for his personal benefit; it was held in trust for the public*; to be exercised reasonably and in good faith, and upon lawful and relevant grounds of public interest."* (emphasis added)(at 297)

The principle that there is no absolute or unfettered power is also recognized in Marie Indira Fernandopulle and Another v E.L Senanayake, Minister of Lands and Agriculture 79 2 N.L.R 115 at page 120 wherein the Court held that;

> "...Are the Courts obliged to turn a deaf ear merely because some statutory officer is able to proclaim, "I alone decide". "When I open my mouth let no dog bark"? If that be the position when the rights of the subject are involved, then the Court would have abdicated its powers necessary to safeguard the rights of the individual."

Another case wherein the public interest was considered is Bandara v Premachandra [1994] 1 SLR 301. In this case Fernando, J. at page 318 reasoned that;

> "The State must, in the public interest, expect high standards of efficiency and service from public officers in their dealings with the administration and the public. In the exercise of Constitutional and statuary powers and jurisdictions, the Judiciary must endeavour to ensure that this expectation is realised."

In Heather Mundy v Central Environmental Authority and Others SC Appeal 58 60/2003 - SC Minutes 20.01.2004- Fernando, J. reiterated that powers vested in public authorities are not absolute and unfettered;

> "...Further, this Court itself has long recognized and applied the "public trust" doctrine: that powers vested in public authorities are not absolute or unfettered but are held in trust for the public, to be exercised for the purposes for which they have been conferred, and that their exercise is subject to judicial review by reference to those purposes" (page 13)

Similarly, in Premachandra v Major Montague Jayawickrema and another [1994] 2 SLR 90 G.P.S. de Silva, C.J. held;

"There are no absolute and unfettered discretions in public Law; discretions are conferred on public functionaries in trust for the public, to be used for the public good, and the propriety of the exercise of such discretions is to be judged by reference to the purposes for which they were so entrusted." (page 105)

Further, Shirani Bandaranayake, J. (as she then was) in Azath Salley v Colombo Municipal Council S.C. (FR) Application No. 252/2007 -S.C Minutes 04.03.2009- referring to the above position, states as follows;

"It is therefore apparent that a public authority has no absolute or unfettered discretion. Referring to this position, Professor Wade (supra pgs. 354 - 355) had stated that,

'Statutory power conferred for public purposes is conferred as it were upon trust, not absolutely - that is to say, it can validly be used only in the right and proper way which Parliament when conferring it is presumed to have intended'(emphasis added)."* (page 30)

Fernando, J. in Priyangani v Nanayakkara and others [1996] 1 SLR 399 at 404-405 reiterated the interrelationship between the Right to Equality guaranteed by Article 12 of the Constitution and Rule of Law. Furthermore, the Court held that

"We are not concerned with contractual duties, but with the safeguards based on the Rule of Law which Article 12 provides against the arbitrary and unreasonable exercise of discretionary powers. Discretionary powers can never be treated as absolute and unfettered unless there is compelling language; when reposed in public functionaries, such powers are held in trust, to be used for the benefit of the public, and for the purpose for which they have been conferred - not at the whim and fancy of officials for political advantage or personal gain". (emphasis added)

In Bulankulama v Secretary, Ministry of Industrial Development (Eppawela case) [2000] 3 SLR 243 a case involving an imminent infringement of fundamental rights, the respondents sought to argue that the government and not this Court is the trustee of the natural resources of the country and as long as the government acts correctly the Courts will not put itself in the shoes of the government and the Court could not 'interfere' in the exercise of discretion of the Government in situations where the Government acts as a 'trustee'. This Court rejected the argument and Amerasinghe, J. held that under Articles 4, 17 and 126 of the Constitution, the Court is expressly authorised to exercise its jurisdiction where the actions / omissions of the executive, violates fundamental rights of the people and that such jurisdiction applies even in situations where the Government exercises its powers as a 'trustee'.

Amerasinghe, J. at page 253 and 257 further observes:

> "The Constitution declares that sovereignly is in the People and is inalienable (Article 3). Being a representative democracy, the powers of the People are exercised through persons who are for the time being entrusted with certain functions"
> "The Executive does have a significant role in resource management conferred by law, yet the management of natural resources has not been placed exclusively in the hands of the Executive. The exercise of Executive power is subject to judicial review. Moreover, Parliament may, as it has done on many occasions, legislate on matters concerning natural resources and the Courts have the task of interpreting such legislation in giving effect to the will of the People as expressed by Parliament."

The above dicta of this Court amply demonstrate that during the last few decades, the Public Trust Doctrine has been applied by this Court when violations of the fundamental rights of People were considered. Furthermore, in relation to powers, functions and duties which are public in nature, this Court has always had respect for the Rule of Law and specifically to the principles of openness, fairness and accountability and observed that process of making a decision should not be shrouded in secrecy and that the powers are conferred upon the Executive in the public interest and in trust for the public and these powers must be governed by reason.

In Vasudeva Nanayakkara v Choksy (Lanka Marine Case) [2008] 1 SLR 134 at 181 Sarath N Silva, CJ. held as follows:

"...As firmly laid down in the Determination of the Divisional Bench of Seven Judges of this Court in regard to the constitutionality of the proposed 19th Amendment to the Constitution (2002 3 SLR page 85) the principle enunciated in Articles 3 and 4 of our Constitution is that the respective organs of Government, the Legislature, the Executive, and the Judiciary are reposed power as custodians for the time being to be exercised for the people. In Bulankulame and others v Secretary, Ministry of Industrial Development (2000 3 SLR 243) this Court has observed that the resources of the State are the "resources of the People" and the Organs of the State are "guardians to whom the people have committed the care and preservation" of these resources (p.253). That, there is a confident expectation (trust) that the Executive will act in accordance with the law and accountably in the best interests of the people of Sri Lanka (p 258)".

In Sugathapala Mendis and another (Waters Edge Case) [2008] 2 SLR 339 Tilakawardane, J. elaborated the Public Interest Doctrine as follows;

"The principle that those charged with the upholding the Constitution- be it a police officers of the lowest rank or the President- are to do so in a way that does not "violate the Doctrine of Public Trust" by state action / inaction is a basic tenet of the Constitution which upholds the legitimacy of Government and the Sovereignty of the People. The "Public trust Doctrine" is based on the concept that the powers held by the organs of the government are, in fact, powers that originate with the People, and are entrusted to the Legislature, the Executive and the Judiciary only as a means of exercising governance and with the sole objective that such powers will be exercised in good faith for the benefit of the People of Sri Lanka. Public power is not for personal gain, favour, but always to be used to optimize the benefit of the People. To do otherwise would be to betray the trust reposed by the People within whom, in terms of the Constitution the Sovereignty reposes. Power exercised contrary to the Public Trust Doctrine would be an abuse of such power and in contravention of the Rule of Law. This Court has long recognized and applied the Public Trust Doctrine, establishing that the exercise of such powers is subject to judicial review".

"The Public Trust Doctrine, taken together with the Constitutional Directives of Article 27, reveal that all state actors are so principally obliged to act in furtherance of the trust of the People that they must follow this duty even when a furtherance of this trust necessarily renders inadequate an act or omission that would otherwise legally suffice." (Vide pages 352-353).

"The oral arguments and written submissions presented on behalf of the principal respondents in this case engage in precisely this abdication of responsibility, that have come to be seen as a hallmark of Sri Lanka's governmental bureaucracy. Following Bandara v Premachandra in which the Court held that "….the State must, in the public interest, expect high standards of efficiency and service from public officers in their dealings with the administration and the public. In the exercise of constitutional and statutory powers and jurisdictions, the judiciary must endeavour to ensure that this expectation is realized…" we recognize that this duty has to be upheld not only in the name of good governance but also for sustainable economic development of the nation and all of its People, especially the economically challenged, the disadvantaged and the marginalised. In time this will empower the marginalised and disempowered members of our society, and will in due course establish a true Democratic Socialist Republic with equality for all." (vide page 354) (emphasis added)

In Vasudeva Nanayakkara v K.N. Choksy and others (SLIC Case) [2009] BLR 1 at page 56 and 57 Amaratunga, J. observed as follows:

"Fundamental rights jurisdiction forms a part of the equitable jurisdiction of the Supreme Court which exercises, at the highest level, the judicial power of the people according to the Rule of Law and the fundamental rights provisions enshrined in the Constitution."

"The petitioners have filed this application in public interest alleging that the executive power of the people, delegated to the Executive by the Constitution, to exercise in good faith and according to law have been wrongfully and illegally exercised, to the prejudice of the people. The trust reposed on the executive to which the peoples' executive power has been delegated is, in the words of Amarasinghe J in Bulankulama Case," the confident expectation (trust) that the executive will act in accordance with the law and accountability, in the best interest of the people" (2000 3 SLR 243 at 258). The ruler's trusteeship of the resources of the State which belong to the people is a part of the legal heritage of Sri Lanka dating back at least to the third century BC as pointed out by Justice Weeramantry in his separate opinion in the International Court of Justice in the Danube Case, by quoting the sermon of Arahath Mahinda to King Devanampiyatissa as recorded in the Great Chronicle-Mahawamsa."

"This concept of the public trust which curtailed the absolute power of the monarch is in perfect harmony with the doctrine of public trust developed by the Supreme Court on the basis of sovereignty of the people set out in Articles 3 and 4 of the Constitution, Article 12(1) and the principle of the Rule of law, which is the basis of our Constitution. The Rule of Law is the principle which keep all organs of the State within the limits of the law and the public trust doctrine operates as a check to ensure that the powers delegated to the organs of the government are held in trust and properly exercised to the benefit of the people and not to their detriment. When the Executive which is the custodian of the People's Executive Power act "ultra vires" and in derogation of the law and procedures that are intended to safeguard the resources of the State, it is in the public interest to implead such action before Court." (emphasis added)

Furthermore, in Sugathapala Mendis and another (supra) Tilakawardane, J., at page 374 elaborated that public officials must exercise executive and administrative power subject to the Rule of Law and for the long-term sustainable development of the country and for the larger benefit of the People;

"…any person who is elected to the Presidency or appointed to ministerial services [….] are so chosen because they are deemed able to embrace, uphold and set example as a follower of the Rule of Law created pursuant to the Constitution and they hold in trust the executive power of the People acquired through the Sovereignty of the People. while the exercise of Presidential power is a duty that must accord with the Rule of Law, such compliance should also come from one's own conscience and sense of integrity as owed to its People. This means that whilst they can use their private power and their private property in an unfettered manner when granting any privileges or favours and, even in an overwhelming act of great generosity, give all their private property away, their public power must only be used strictly for the larger benefit of the People, the long-term sustainable development of the country and in accordance with the Rule of Law*."*

"Consequent to this framework it is to be noted for our purposes that all facets of the country - its land, economic opportunities or other assets - are to be handled and administered under the stringent limitations of the trusteeship posed by the public trust doctrine and must be used in a manner for economic growth and always for the benefit of the entirety of the citizenry of the country," (emphasis added)

In the more recent past, in Wijeratne v Warnapala SC.FR 305/2008 (S.C. Minutes 22-09-2009), Sripavan J., (as he then was) quoting Bhawati, J. in S.P.Gupta v Union of India and others 1982AIR (SC) 149 observed;

"It has been firmly stated in several judgements of this Court that the "Rule of Law" is the basis of our Constitution [....] 'If there is one principle that runs through the entire fabric of the Constitution, it is the principle of the Rule of Law and under the Constitution, it is the judiciary which is entrusted with the task of keeping every organ of the State within the limits of the law and thereby making the Rule of Law meaningful and effective'"

Similarly, in Jayawardena v Wijayatilake [2001] 1 Sri LR 132; Senarath and others v Chandrika Bandaranayake Kumaratunga and others SCFR 503/2005 - S.C. Minutes 03.05.2007; Hapuarachchi and others v Commissioner of Elections and Another [2009] 1 SLR 1; Watte Gedera Wijebanda v Conservator General of Forests [2009] 1 SLR 337; and Environmental Foundation Ltd. v Mahaweli Authority of Sri Lanka [2010] 1 SLR 1, the concept of the 'Public Trust Doctrine' and the 'Rule of Law' was recognized and applied. Furthermore, this Court went onto hold, that administrative acts and decisions contrary to 'public trust' would be in excess and/or abuse of power by the Executive and therefore, violative of the fundamental rights in general and Article 12(1) of the Constitution in particular, which guarantees equality before the law and equal protection of the law.

The above position is explicitly recognized by Fernando J, in Heather Mundy v Central Environmental Authority and Others (supra) at page 13;

> "Besides, executive power is also necessarily subject to the fundamental rights in general, and to Article 12(1) in particular which guarantees equality before the law and the equal protection of the law. For the purposes of the appeals now under consideration, the "protection of the law" would include the right to notice and to be heard. Administrative acts and decisions contrary to the "public trust" doctrine and/or violative of fundamental rights would be in excess or abuse of power, and therefore void or voidable."

Commenting on the unfettered discretion, this Court in Premalal Perera v Tissa Karaliyadda SC FR 891/2009 - SC Minutes 31.03.2016, categorically held, quoting many judgements of this Court, that;

> "The said authorities have specifically rejected the notion of unfettered discretion given to those who are empowered to act in such capacity and held that discretions are conferred on public functionaries in trust for the public, to be used for the good of the public, and propriety of the exercise of such discretions is to be judged by reference to the purposes for which they were entrusted". (emphasis added)

In Shanmugam Sivaraja and another v OIC Terrorist Investigation Division and others, SC FR 15/2010, SC Minutes of 27.07.2017, Aluwihare, J. cited with approval the dicta of Wanasundera, J. in Jayanetti v Land Reform Commission (supra) and re-iterated that it was a right of the subject to challenge any act of the State from whichever organ it emanated and compel it to justify its legality.

H.N.J.Perera, CJ. in the Full Bench decision of this Court in R Sampanthan and others v Attorney-General and others, [SC FR 351/2018 and other applications SC minutes of 13th

December 2018] agreeing with the jurisprudence of this Court in Wijeyratne v Warnapala [SC FR 305/2008 SC minutes of 22.9.2009], Premachandra v Major Montegu Jayawickrema [1994 2 SLR 90], Vasudeva Nanayakkara v Choksy [2008 1 SLR 134], Sugathapala Mendis v Chandrika Kumaratunga [2008 2 SLR 339], Jayanetti v Land Reform Commission [1984 2 SLR 172] and Shanmugam Sivaraja v OIC Terrorisdt Investigation Division and others SC FR 15/2010, SC minutes of 27.07.2017 recognized that the jurisprudence of this Court under Article 12 of the Constitution had extended the scope of the said guarantee to encompass the protection of Rule of Law.

Thus, this Court has recognized that when different organs of the State exercise the respective powers attributed to them as the Sovereignty of the People, such organs exercise such powers on behalf of the People and therefore, a duty is cast on State organs not to use such powers arbitrarily or irrationally. This Court has through its decisions had developed the "Public Trust Doctrine" by examining use of the discretionary power vested on executive and / or administrative authorities, initially focusing on the protection of natural resources and subsequently expanded to exclude arbitrariness in decisions where public authorities exercise powers vested on the said organs, to ensure the said bodies exercise such powers to the ultimate benefit of the people.

In Ravindra Kariyawasam v Central Environment Authority (Chunnakam case) - SC FR 141/2015 – SC minutes of 04.04.2019, where the petitioner alleged, pollution of the groundwater making it unfit for human use, the Court held that the failure of the State agencies, i.e., CEA and BOI to fulfil its statutory obligations was 'a breach of the public trust' reposed in them and the Court held that the said agencies have violated the fundamental rights guaranteed by Article 12(1) of the Constitution, of the residents of Chunnakam as well as the Petitioner, a member of the public.

Noble Resources International Pte Limited v. Minister of Power and Renewable Energy - SC FR 394/2015 SC Minutes of 24.06.2016, is a unique case in which the Public Trust Doctrine was applied by this Court, as the events that transpired, literally and metaphorically "shocked the conscience of court". The Petitioner claimed that the decision of the Standing Cabinet Appointed Procurement Committee (SCAPC) not to award the tender for the supply of coal, to the petitioner was unlawful and violative of petitioner's fundamental rights and the Court granted the Petitioner Leave to Proceed for the alleged violation of the petitioner's fundamental rights guaranteed in terms of Articles 12(1) and 14(1)(g) of the Constitution.

When the application was taken up for hearing, a preliminary objection was raised by the respondents, that the petitioner company is a company registered in Singapore and was not a registered company in Sri Lanka and has invoked the jurisdiction of this Court by itself without a local agent, representative or an Attorney-at-Law enjoining him as a petitioner. The Court nevertheless, decided to go into the merits of the case as 'some of the events that took place in the award of the tender shocked the conscience of the Court' and the Court pronounced as follows;

> "The Court is mindful that the fundamental rights provisions in the Constitution must be interpreted having regard to the constitutional objectives and goals and in the light of the action taken by the Governmental Authority at a given point of time. As it is essential to the maintenance of the rule of law that every organ of the State must act within the limits of its power and carry out the duty imposed upon it in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution and the law, the Court cannot close its eyes and allow the actions of the State or the Public Authority to go unchecked in its operations, in the public interest. If the Petitioner with a good case is turned away, merely because he is not sufficiently affected or the Petitioner has no "locus standi" to maintain this application, that means that some Government Agency is left free to violate the law and this is not only contrary to the public interest but also violate the Rule of Law, the object of which is to protect the citizens from unlawful governmental actions. It will be a travesty of justice if, having found as a fact that a fundamental right has been infringed or is threatened to be infringed, the Court yet dismisses the application on a preliminary objection raised by the Respondents. This Court has been given power to grant relief as it may deem just and equitable*. The Court therefore decided to go into the merits of the case as some of the events that took place, in the award of the tender to the 22nd Respondent shocks the conscience of the* Court, especially when the awarding of the tender involves public funds*."* (emphasis added)

Having considered the merits of the case, the Court came to the finding that the decisions made by the SCAPC was outside its jurisdiction and therefore cannot be considered as a valid decision and Sripavan, J. (as he then was) opined;

> "The power of the State is conferred on the Members of the SCAPC and the PAB to be held in trust for the benefit of the public. The Supreme Court being the protector and guarantor of the fundamental rights cannot refuse to entertain an application seeking protection against infringement of such rights. The Court must regard it as its solemn duty to protect the fundamental rights jealously and vigilantly. It has an important role to play not only preventing or remedying the wrong or illegal exercise of power by the authority but has a duty to protect the nation in directing it to act within the framework of the law and the Constitution*."* (emphasis added)

Though this Court dismissed this application in limine on the preliminary objection raised, pertaining to maintainability of the application Sripavan, J. quoted with approval the words of Md Faizal Karim J, in the case of SSA Bangladesh Ltd. v Engineer, Mahmudul Islam 9 BLC (AD)(2004), that;

> *"The judiciary has an important role to play not only preventing or remedying the wrong or illegal exercise of power by the authority but has a duty to guide the nation in shaping its destiny within the framework of the law and the Constitution. The Court of Law would always jealously guard against any abuse or misuse of power/authority by the State functionary in dealing with the State property." a*nd went on to make directions, considering the procedural flaws in the award of tender upon the basis, "...the award of tender involved public funds, and the solemn duty of the Court to protect the Rule of Law embodied in the Constitution in order to ensure its credibility in the faith of the people." (emphasis added)

Similarly, in the words of Tilakawardane, J. in her dissenting opinion in Vasudeva Nanayakkara v Choksy and Others [2009] 2 SLR 1;

> "The entire fabric of the Constitution mandates that the Rule of Law be the ultimate framework of all acts carried out under the Constitution, including the acts of the executive, the legislature and the judiciary.".(at page 5)

The foregoing exemplifies the bounden duty that is cast on this Court to protect the Rule of Law and jealously guard against the abuse and misuse of power and authority by the State and its functionaries in dealing with public funds.

In Ajith C.S. Perera v Daya Gamage SC FR 273/2018, SC Minutes of 18.04.2019, the petitioner complained to this Court of 'continued inaction' of the authorities to give effect to the regulations made under the Protection of Rights of Persons with Disabilities Act No 28 of 1996. The Court having been satisfied that there was no satisfactory or meaningful compliance with the said regulations held, that the rights guaranteed under Article 12 (1) of the Constitution of the petitioners and other persons with disability rights, have been violated by the State and its agencies and opined as follows;

> "…that the concept of human dignity, which is the entitlement of every human being, is at the core of the fundamental rights enshrined in our Constitution. It is a fountainhead from which these fundamental rights spring forth and array themselves in the Constitution, for the protection of all the people of the country"

It is also pertinent to observe that Article 27(1) of the Constitution requires the President and the Cabinet of Ministers in the governance of Sri Lanka to be guided by the Directive principles of State Policy including (a) the full realization of the fundamental rights and freedom of all persons and (b) realization by all citizens of an adequate standard of living for themselves and their families including adequate food, clothing and housing, the continuous improvement of living conditions and the full enjoyment of leisure and social and cultural opportunities.

In Sri Lanka the Supreme Court recognized that when the different organs of the State exercise the respective powers attributed to them as the Sovereignty of the People such organs exercise such powers on behalf of the People. Therefore, a duty is cast on State organs not to use such powers arbitrarily or irrationally. This Court through its decisions had developed the "Public Trust Doctrine" in examining use of discretionary power vested on executive and / or administrative authorities. Initially the Court focused on the protection of natural resources as in the Indian Supreme Court in M.C.Mehta v Kamal Nath [1997] 1 SCC 388. In the said case it was observed that:

> "The State is the trustee of all natural resources which are by nature meant for public use and enjoyment. Public at large is the beneficiary of the sea-shore, running waters, air, forests and ecological fragile lands. The State as a trustee is under a legal duty to protect the natural resources. These resources meant for public use cannot be converted into private ownership".

The Supreme Court later expanded to exclude arbitrariness in decisions in instances where public authorities exercise powers vested on them and ensure that they exercise such powers to the ultimate benefit of the people. [vide Bandara and another v Premachandra and others (1994) 1 SLR 301, Jayawardena v Wijayatilake – (2001) 1 SLR 132]. It is also pertinent that this Court had extended the doctrine of Public Trust to protect national resources from use of arbitrary power. [vide Fernando v Sri Lanka Broadcasting Corporation (1996) 1 SLR 157, Mundy v Central Environmental Authority (SC Appeal 58/2003, SC minutes of 20.01.2004, Watte Gedara Wijebanda v Conservator General of Forests (2009) 1 SLR 337]

There is no dispute that the 'corner stone' or the 'Grundnorm' of our Constitution is the Sovereignty of its People and this Court has time and time again held that unfettered discretion is anathema to the Rule of Law on which our Constitution is founded.

In the case of Premachandra v Major Montague Jayawickrema (supra) at page 111, this Court succinctly held "In Sri Lanka, however it is the Constitution which is supreme, and a violation of the Constitution is prima facie a matter to be remedied by the Judiciary."

In R Sampanthan and others (supra) having considered curses curiae and jurisprudence of this Court it was held that in interpreting the provisions in the Constitution, the Court should adopt an approach which enforces the Rule of Law. Furthermore, the Court held that our law does not recognize that any public authority, whether they be President or an officer of the State or organ of State, has unfettered or absolute discretion of power.

Whilst this Court in Fundamental Rights applications have always safeguarded and preserved the relationship between Democracy, Rule of Law, Public Trust and Human Dignity this Court in its Statutory Determinations too have recognised the said relationship.

In the Appropriation Bill of 2008, [Decisions of the Supreme Court on Parliamentary Bills 2007-2009 Vol IX] this Court went onto hold that Parliament's power of control over public finance is exercised 'in trust for the People' and therefore 'the process should be transparent and in the public domain, so that People who remain Sovereign are informed as to the manner of control exercised.'

In Assistance to and Protection of Victims of Crime and Witnesses Bill SC SD 1-6/2014 [Decisions of the Supreme Court on Parliamentary Bills 2014 Vol XII – 3] this Court opined that "When considering the exercise of statutory power certain fundamental principles can never be overlooked. The first is that our Constitution and System of Courts are founded on the rule of law; secondly statutory power conferred for public purposes is conferred as if it were upon trust and not absolutely".

In the Inland Revenue (Amendment Bill) SC SD 63-64/2023, Hansard 05-09-2023 in dealing with the issue of classifications in revenue matters, this Court recognized that "such measures would be considered as inconsistent with Article 12 of the Constitution only if they are manifestly unreasonable" and thus recognized its jurisdiction even to examine matters relating to revenue, when such matters are based upon the principles of Public Trust.

Furthermore, this Court concluded its determination by observing as follows;

> "[…] It was submitted that there had been corruption and mismanagement of public funds which had led to the present economic predicament. […] This Court is exercising its constitutional jurisdiction over the Bill. These are not matters which we can take into consideration in this exercise. Nevertheless, we are mindful that this Court is the last bulwark to protect the Rule of Law and prevent any breach of public trust. […] In order to do so, the jurisdiction of this Court must be properly invoked in the appropriate proceedings." (emphasis added)

In the Value Added Tax (Amendment) Bill [SC SD 62-63/2023 Hansard of 10.11.2022] it was opined,

"This Court shall continue to exercise its Constitutional role as the sentinel on the qui vive over executive and administrative action." (at page 22)

When we consider the jurisprudence of this Court it is clear that the scope and content of the Right to Equality guaranteed by Article 12 of the Constitution has evolved with the passage of time. Such evolution is in accord with the progressive changes that had taken place in other jurisdictions such as in India. In its current form this Right guarantees a protection from arbitrary exercise of power and discretion by state functionaries and enhances the Rule of Law. It further requires State authorities to ensure that their conduct will not breach the trust placed on them and make certain that public resources in their custody are protected and preserved for the benefit of the people and not to be exhausted for political or personal benefit. Furthermore, the exercise of discretionary powers in the decision-making process, should be guided by the Directive Principles as recognized by the Constitution and callous disregard of such principles will pollute decisions with arbitrariness. Thus, Rule of Law is not only rights and equality. It's about functionality and efficiency for sustainable economic development of the nation and all of its People.

INACTION AND / OR OMMISSION TO ACT

In Janath S Vidanage and others v Pujith Jayasundara and others (Easter Sunday case), SC FR 163/2019 and other applications (SC minutes of 12.01.2023) a full Bench of this Court considered the Constitutional framework within which the Executive branch of the Government performs its duties and responsibilities while examining the complaint of the petitioners that the inaction of the President and other State officials led to the disastrous consequences including destruction to life and property. Having examined the statutory frame work and the common law principles governing the obligations of a Minister attached to his supervisory role over the institutions assigned to him, the Court held that the inaction on the part of the Minister as well as the State Officials, that led to the serious impact on the entire society, violated the rights guaranteed under Article 12(1) of the Constitution.

In the Easter Sunday Case (supra) this Court observed that

> "The heads of Department and responsible officers remain liable for the infractions of not performing their duties assigned to them to safeguard the security and integrity of the nation. The Minister becomes liable when he fails in his constitutional and common law duties to have robust systems and mechanisms to protect and promote national security. It is for this reason that there has to be constant supervision and control of his officials. There must be structures and mechanisms which facilitate transparent exchange of intelligence and information. A proper mechanism to acquaint himself with intelligence and information would serve the Minister proper notice of intelligence and information and such an absence of supervisory mechanism will expose the Minister to allegations of failure of his constitutional, statutory and common law duties". (at page 89)

This Court further proceeded to consider the relevant factors in deciding the required standard of care when the liability is attributed due to inaction or omission. Court recognised inter alia factors such as the magnitude of the risk, the cost and practicability of precautions, the social value of the respondent's activities and what reasonable man would have foreseen. The Court cited with approval the following dictum in Blyth v Birmingham Waterworks [(1856) 11 Exch 781]

> "the omission to do something which a reasonable man guided upon those considerations which ordinarily regulate the conduct human affairs would do, or doing something which a prudent and reasonable man would not do".

PARLIAMENTARY SELECT COMMITTEE

The learned President's Counsel for the 2nd and 2A respondents submitted that the instant applications are futile and ought to be dismissed by this Court as a Parliamentary Select Committee had been appointed to investigate into the matters that are also the subject matters relating to which this Court will examine in determining these two applications. It is his contention that it is the Parliament, which has full control over public finance, is now investigating into the reasons for the economic setback through this select committee process and such select committee is empowered to submit proposals and recommendations.

In this regard it is pertinent to observe that the petitioners in these two applications invoked the jurisdiction of this Court as provided under Article 17 read with Article 126 of the Constitution. Article 118 (b) of the Constitution recognises the Supreme Court's jurisdiction to protect fundamental rights. The Supreme Court is the highest and final Superior Court of record of the Republic. Article 4(c) of the Constitution recognizes that the Parliament exercises people's judicial power through courts created and established or recognized by the Constitution or created and established by law. However, the Parliament is empowered to exercise People's judicial power, directly, in regard to matters relating to the privileges, immunities and powers of Parliament and of its Members, according to law. Therefore, there is no doubt or ambiguity as to the power of Courts to exercise judicial power of the People in regard to all matters that are recognized by law other than the specific instance excluded by Article 4(c). The Constitution which is the Supreme law of the Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka assures that independence of the judiciary as an intangible heritage that guarantees the dignity and well-being of succeeding generations of the People of Sri Lanka.

This Court in its Determination in "*Industrial Disputes (Special Provisions) Bill", SC SD 30/2022, cited with approval the following passage from Blackstone (Blackstone's Commentaries Vol. 1 at p. 269):

> "In this distinct and separate existence of the judicial power in a peculiar body of men, nominated indeed, but not removable at pleasure by the Crown, consists one main preservative of the public liberty which cannot subsist long in any state, unless the administration of common justice be, in some degree, separated both from the legislative and also from the executive power. Were it joined with the legislative, the life, liberty and property of the subject would be in the hands of arbitrary judges, whose decisions would be then regulated only by their opinions, and not by any fundamental principles of law; which though legislators may depart from, yet judges are bound to observe. Were it joined with the executive, this union might soon be an overbalance for the legislative."

This Court, further observed that:

> "....except in regard to matters relating to the privileges, immunities and powers of Parliament and of its Members, Parliament has only the power to provide for the creation of courts, tribunals and institutions for the exercise of the judicial power of the people. This judicial power can only be exercised by a judicial officer duly appointed under the law."

The manner in which the Parliament could replace or abolish or amend the powers, the jurisdiction of any court other than of the Supreme Court is recognised by Article 105(2).

This Court in Ratnasiri Perera v Dissanayake [1992] 1 SLR 286 at 300 held:

> "The Constitution now entrenches some of the jurisdictions of the Supreme Court and of the Court of Appeal, precluding an erosion of such jurisdictions by ordinary law. Other jurisdictions, however, can be taken away by ordinary law, provided of course that if they are transferred to other bodies, the officers or members thereof must be appointed in terms of Articles 114 and 170."

Therefore, the only manner in which the Parliament could change the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court is by way of an amendment to the Constitution and any deviation is a breach of the doctrine of separation of powers. In this regard it is also pertinent to note that Standing Order 91(f) recognises the "sub judice" Rule in relation to proceedings in Parliament. Paragraphs 20.11 and 21.19 of Erskin May, online edition of the 25th print edition[1] provides inter alia

Para 20.11 "The House has resolved that no matter awaiting adjudication by a court of law (including a coroner's court or a Fatal Accident Inquiry) – ie matters sub judice – should be brought before it. This covers both the content of Members' speeches and the subject matter of motions and questions. The resolution means that matters currently before the courts cannot be raised in a motion or amendment save where legislation is under consideration".

Para 21.19 "Subject to the discretion of the Chair and to the right of the House to legislate on any matter or to discuss any matters of delegated legislation, matters awaiting the adjudication of a court of law should not be brought forward in debate."

[1] (https://erskinemay.parliament.uk/)

The applicability of this Rule to the select committees in the United Kingdom is discussed in para 38.25 which reads:

> "The resolution of the House prescribing its practice with regard to matters that are awaiting judgment in the courts (see paras 20.11, 21.19) includes proceedings in select committees. The discretion available to the Chair should be exercised only in exceptional circumstances and, if time allows, following consultation with the Speaker. Committees have suspended inquiries in progress because a witness had been charged with criminal offences related to the subject-matter of the inquiry or have decided not to take evidence from particular witnesses in the course of an inquiry because the committee had been informed that the witnesses would also be witnesses in impending criminal or civil proceedings. The bar does not, however, operate when committees are deliberating, since they do so in private, nor when evidence is being taken in private and, since there is no restriction on the right of the House to legislate, the proceedings of a select committee on a bill need not be affected by it"

According to the material submitted to this Court, the "Select Committee of Parliament to Investigate Causes for Financial Bankruptcy declared by the Government and to report to Parliament and submit its proposals and recommendations in this regard" had been appointed by Parliament on 19th January 2023 whereas the petitioners, invoked the jurisdiction of this Court in June 2022 and this Court having heard all parties granted leave to proceed on 7th October 2022. Therefore, by the time the select committee was appointed in Parliament, the petitioners had already invoked the jurisdiction of this Court and leave to proceed had been granted. As discussed hereinbefore, the jurisdiction vested by the Constitution on this Court under no circumstances could be curtailed or abridged by the Select Committee process of Parliament. Hence, we are of the view that the submission of the learned President's Counsel on this issue is devoid of any merit.

JURISDICTION OF THE COURT

One of the main complaints of the petitioners in these instant applications is that one or more of the respondents failed to take necessary remedial measures having come to know the adverse consequences to the economy due to the tax revisions introduced in December 2019. They contend that such inaction on the part of the State functionaries taken together with the inaction to seek assistance from the IMF in a timely manner contributed heavily to the economic collapse which caused immense hardships and damage to persons and property, including death of persons. They contend that such inaction infringed the Right to Equality guaranteed under Article 12 of the Constitution.

In our view the examination of this contention of the petitioners does not amount to an examination of the policies of the Government. In our view the jurisprudence developed with the passage of time as discussed hereinbefore requires the Court to exercise its jurisdiction vested under Article 126 of the Constitution and examine whether the executive and/or administrative authorities have acted arbitrarily and / or irrationally and / or with manifest unreasonableness and thereby breached the Public Trust and Rule of Law, in situations where the petitioners allege an infringement of the right to equality guaranteed by Article 12 of the Constitution. Therefore, we are not inclined to accept the submission that the Court lacks jurisdiction on the basis of "public policy", "economic policy" or "doctrine of political question".

In addition to the main objections raised on behalf of the respondents, that are discussed hereinbefore, regarding the maintainability of these applications, several other objections were raised, which the learned counsel argued, had made the petitions misconceived in law and should be dismissed for those reasons. This Court gave its mind to those objections and finds no merit in any of them. Accordingly, we are of the view that the petitions are valid and can be proceeded with.

RESPONDENTS AGAINST WHOM LEAVE TO PROCEED GRANTED

Gotabaya Rajapaksa - 32A respondent – assumed duties as the President on 18th November 2019, after being declared elected to the Office of the President following the resounding victory at the election held on 16th November 2019. Under Article 4(b) of the Constitution the executive power of the People, including the defence of Sri Lanka, is exercised by the President, elected by the People. As held by this Court, it is the People's executive power that the President is exercising on behalf of the People. The President holds executive powers in trust for the People and needs to exercise such powers with due regard to rule of law. The President is the Head of the Cabinet of Ministers which is charged with the direction and control of the Government. Among the powers and functions of the President, the act of appointing the Prime Minister and other Ministers of the Cabinet of Ministers is recognised under Article 33(f) of the Constitution. On 21st November 2019, a new Government was formed by the 32A respondent. Mahinda Rajapakse – 2nd respondent - was appointed as the Prime Minister of the new Government on 21st November 2019 and the Cabinet of Ministers of the new Government was appointed on the 22nd November 2019. Cabinet portfolio of Defence in the newly formed Government was held by the 32A respondent.

P.B.Jayasundera – 38th respondent – assumed duties as the Secretary to the President on 19th November 2019 and he resigned on 22nd January 2022. The President is empowered to appoint the Secretary, as provided under Article 41 (1) of the Constitution.

Mahinda Rajapaksa – 2nd respondent - was appointed Minister of Finance, Economy and Policy Development on 21st November 2019. Scope of responsibilities attached to the Minister can be derived from the subjects and functions assigned by the President in accordance with the Constitution. Once the subjects and functions are assigned, the responsibility lies with the Minister to ensure that the relevant duties are performed and goals are achieved through the institutions that are placed under the supervision and control of the Minister. The Central Bank of Sri Lanka is one of the institutions that is placed under the supervision of the Minister of Finance. Some of the duties and functions attributed to the Minister of Finance include:

- Formulation, implementation, monitoring and evaluation of policies, programmes and projects; in relation to Public Finance, Taxation and Economic Affairs in accordance with the National Policy Plan and the subject of the departments, specified statutory institutions and laws and regulations
- Formulation of policies relating to public finance and national revenue preparation of the legal framework and operation of the other programmes

- Formulation of public finance and macro finance management policies and their operation and co-ordination
- Liaison with international development finance institutions, organizations and international financial market.
- Preparation of Annual Budget, implementation, enforcement of financial control, implementation and financial resources management.
- Implementation of National Taxation policies, strengthening the institutional structure and effective utilization of state revenue
- Formulating National Policies in order to achieve National Economic and Social Development Goals
- Supervising all specified institutions and matters relating to all subjects assigned to such institutions.

It is also pertinent to note that the Monetary Law Act No 58 of 1949 and several other fiscal statutes including Value Added Tax Act No 14 of 2002 and Inland Revenue Act No 10 of 2006 are among the statutes that are to be implemented by the Minister of Finance. (vide Gazette Extraordinary No 2153/12 dated 10 December 2019).

Examination of these duties and functions clearly show that key features in economic development and financial management are placed under the responsibility of the Minister of Finance. This responsibility requires the Minister to establish proper mechanisms of supervision and to obtain necessary data and information from the institutions that are placed under his supervision. Such flow of data and information is of utmost importance to ensure that the powers vested on him are exercised to the benefit of the people and desist from arbitrary exercise of power. Even though, the duties and functions assigned to the Minister of Finance have been revised time to time during the period relevant to these applications, core duties, institutions placed under the supervision of the Minister including the Central Bank of Sri Lanka and core statutes including Monetary Law Act and other fiscal statutes had remained under him without a change.

Basil Rajapaksa – 2A respondent – replaced the 2nd respondent and assumed duties on 08th July 2021 as the Minister of Finance. Mahinda Rajapaksa (2nd respondent) was sworn in as Minister of Economic Policies and Planning on the same day. The 2A respondent functioned as the Minister of Finance till 04th April 2022. It is pertinent to note that the 2A respondent prior to assuming duties as the Minister of Finance in July 2021, functioned as the Chairman of the Presidential Task Force on Economic Revival and Poverty Alleviation.

Members of the Cabinet of Ministers – 03rd to the 27th respondents in SC FR 195/2022

S.R.Attygalle – 31st respondent – was appointed Secretary to the Treasury and Ministry of Finance on 19th November 2019. Ex Officio he is a member of the Monetary Board as per section 8(2) of the Monetary Law. Under Article 51(2)(b) of the Constitution the Secretary exercises supervision over the Departments and other institutions in charge of the Minister, subject to direction and control of the Minister. Being an ex officio member of the Monetary Board, his responsibility is explained in the Exter Report. Accordingly, it is observed that:

> "The ideal which it is hoped that the proposed law will achieve is one in which there will be continuous and constructive co-operation between the Monetary Board and the Government. The principal instrument for achieving this co-operation should be the Permanent Secretary to the Ministry of Finance whose membership on the Board will ensure at all times that his Minister's views will be made known to the other members of the Board. The effectiveness of the co-operation and co-ordination between the Board and the Government will depend more upon the men occupying the key positions at particular times than upon any legal formula no matter how carefully or elaborately it might be worked out. A relationship as complex and sometimes as delicate as this one is certain to be, cannot be established full-blown by a piece of legislation. It must be the result as in other countries of years of experience and the slow growth of political conventions" (page 13 Exter Report).

W.D.Lakshman – 30th respondent – assumed duties as Governor of the Central Bank on 24th December 2019 and resigned on 14th September 2021. Section 8(1) of the Monetary Law Act provides for the Governor of the Central Bank to be the Chairman of the Monetary Board.

Ajith Nivard Cabraal – 29th respondent – assumed duties as Governor of the Central Bank on 15th September 2021 and resigned on 04th April 2022. Prior to him assuming duties as the Governor this respondent functioned as the State Minister of Finance, Capital Markets and State Enterprise Reforms.

Samantha Kumarasinghe – 32nd respondent – was an appointed member of the Monetary Board. He functioned in this capacity from 29th June 2020 to 31st March 2022.

The Monetary Board of the Central Bank– 28th respondent – is a statutory body created under the Monetary Law Act. Section 9(1) recognizes that the Monetary Board is a body corporate with perpetual succession. Under section 5 of the Monetary Law Act, the Central Bank is established as the authority responsible for the administration and regulation of the monetary and banking system. The Central Bank is charged with the duty of regulating the supply, availability, cost and international exchange of money to secure objects including the stabilization of domestic monetary values, determining the par value of the Sri Lankan Rupee and the preservation of the par value and preservation of the stability of the exchange rate when there is no determination on the par value. Furthermore, the Central Bank is recognized as the fiscal agent, banker and financial adviser of the Government.

One of the main duties of the Central bank in the context of its duty to secure international monetary stabilization is the duty to endeavor to maintain among the assets of the Central Bank an international reserve adequate to meet any foreseeable deficits in the international balance of payments. Section 66(2) of the Monetary Law Act provides that

> "In judging the adequacy of the International Reserve, the Monetary Board shall be guided by the estimates of prospective receipts and payments of foreign exchange by Sri Lanka; by the volume and maturity of the Central Bank's own liabilities in foreign currencies; and, in so far as they are known or can be estimated, by the volume and maturity of the foreign exchange assets and liabilities of the Government and of banking institutions and other persons in Sri Lanka. So long as any part of the foreign currency assets of Sri Lanka are held in currencies which are not freely convertible by the Central Bank, whether directly or indirectly, into special drawing rights or such other common denominator prescribed by the International Monetary Fund or into foreign currencies freely usable in international transactions, or are frozen, the Monetary Board shall also take this factor into account in judging the adequacy of the International Reserve of the Central Bank".

TAX REVISION AND DOWNGRADING BY RATING AGENCIES

In a note to the Cabinet by the 32A respondent on 26th November 2019, had recommended implementation as a matter of priority a series of measures to revise taxes. These proposals to lower taxes had been introduced to give effect to an election pledge to "restructure and introduce a simplified tax mechanism". In the note to the Cabinet, it was acknowledged that a reduction of Government revenue would take place as a result of such revisions. However, the 32A respondent had expressed the view that "potential benefit from re-engineering the tax system will eventually revive revenue". In the same note, the 32A respondent had urged the line ministries and agencies to go slow on public spending to manage fiscal imbalance. He also urged that the government expenditure incurred by semi government agencies and State Owned Enterprises (SOEs) should also be curtailed as taxes on goods and services are to be lowered. The 32A respondent in this Note to the Cabinet titled "An Economic Revival Initiative" recommended implementation of a series of measures as a matter of priority "pending parliamentary approval for amendments to the relevant tax statutes". These measures included inter alia bringing down the rate of VAT from 15% to 8% and to do away the 2% NBT with effect from 1st December 2019. In addition, the threshold for VAT liability was raised from 12 million per annum to 300 million per annum on the turnover. Further, tourism business was to be treated as an export and VAT would be zero rated provided 60 % of the turnover is sourced from locally. Further tax concessions were offered to the construction industry by reducing the tax liability to 14% from the existing rate of 28%. Religious institutions were removed from tax liability and further the threshold for collection of tax through PAYE was raised from all inclusive monthly income of Rs 150,000.00 to Rs 250,000/-.

The 32A respondent requested the Minister of Finance, Economy and Policy Development to take appropriate action to implement this programme. The 2nd respondent, who held the portfolio of Finance, Economy and Policy Development by his observations to the Cabinet agreed with the said proposals. It was envisaged that such tax revisions would create a conducive environment for businesses and a positive impact on all prices. It is pertinent to note that the 38th respondent had been present on invitation at the deliberations of the Cabinet and had explained the desirable immediate impact on the economy and the well-being of the People by the implementation of the proposed measures. The Cabinet of Ministers had granted the approval to implement these proposals.

It is pertinent to observe that Article 148 of the Constitution provides that "Parliament shall have full control over public finance. No tax, rate or any other levy shall be imposed by any local authority or any other public authority, except by or under the authority of a law passed by Parliament or of any existing law". However, these proposals had been implemented through an administrative mechanism by way of public notices released by the Commissioner General of Inland Revenue in early 2020 whereas the necessary legislation had been introduced only in mid 2021. It is significant to note that the Commissioner General of Inland Revenue has failed to identify the basis on which he derived authority to issue such notices but merely states that such notices were issued either on the instructions of the Ministry of Finance or as instructed by the Ministry of Finance as approved by the Cabinet of Ministers.

The income from taxes remains a significant portion of government revenue and the reduction of taxes would inevitably result in depletion of government revenue. Therefore, an important issue that arises in this regard is whether a credible mechanism was introduced parallel to the introduction of tax reductions and whether the reductions did in fact bring in the expected results. The Auditor-General observes, that the statistics does not show such a positive change in prices indices and inflation rate, as expected by these changes. The Inland Revenue Department had estimated the potential loss from tax income resulting from the proposed tax for the year 2020 amounts to 493,394 million rupees. The loss of government revenue due to the measures referred to resulted in an unmanageable budget deficit. It is to be noted that the country had been facing the phenomenon of budget deficits over a considerable period and the respondents should have been aware of this fact.

Furthermore, a major adverse consequence that resulted directly from the tax revisions was lowering of the country's credit rating by the international agencies. This remains an immediate outcome from the tax revisions introduced in late 2019. Fitch Ratings downgraded Sri Lanka from B stable to B negative on 18th December 2019. It is uncontroverted that the Fitch Rating by 27th September 2019 remained B Stable. Standard & Poor's downgraded the country rating from B stable to B negative on 14th January 2020. Fitch Ratings, directly attributed the downgrading to the sweeping tax cuts introduced in late 2019. It is recognised that such downgrading reflects the debt sustainability position of the country. This trend continued unabated, throughout the next two years (2020 and 2021) resulting in further gradual downgrading of credit rating from CCC to CC and finally reaching C. On 19th May 2022 it culminated in a "restricted default". According to the Fitch Ratings "B" represents the presence of material default with a limited margin of safety, "CCC" represents a substantial credit risk with a very low margin for safety and default is a real possibility, "CC" reflects a very high levels of credit risk and a default of some kind appears probable and "C" reflects "a default or default like process had begun, or the issuer is in standstill, or for a closed funding vehicle, payment capacity is irrevocably impaired". Ratings by two other agencies namely Moody's Investor Service and Standard & Poor's also reflect a similar pattern of downgrading. The main impact of such downgrading was the loss of access to capital markets at reasonable costs which resulted in drying up foreign exchange inflows from such sources.

When one examines the trend in downgrading by foreign rating agencies, it makes clear that remedial measures were mandatory, if the trend was to be reversed and to take control of the situation. These downgradings by multiple agencies have had a serious impact on the strength and the capacity to obtain foreign assistance and to attract foreign investment. The situation that prevailed had the obvious result in the depletion of foreign reserves deeply, affecting the capacity of importation of essentials such as fuel, gas, medicines and food. Therefore, taking remedial measures to reverse the trend of downgrading was of paramount importance. However, the reaction to these downgradings reflect the resistance to accept the errors or the mistakes and to take immediate steps to remedy the situation. The response of the Government to the downgradings had been confrontational without seeking a way out. The Ministry of Finance and the Central Bank through public statements released from September 2020 had made an attempt to criticise these downgradings and had refused to accept them. It is pertinent to note at this point that the Gross Official Reserves which stood at USD 7,780.08 million as at 31st October 2019 had decreased to USD 5,555 million by November 2020. It had further depleted to USD 2362 million in January 2022.

It is apparent that the continued inaction to reintroduce and/or to raise taxes and regain the government revenue that was lost, brought about an adverse impact on the economy which had a domino effect on the entire social fabric.

It is also important to examine these events in the context of another factor. The Government of Sri Lanka in June 2016 had entered into an agreement with the International Monetary Fund (IMF) for an Extended Fund Facility (EFF). Through this process the total funds that were made available amounts to USD 1.5 billion. In May 2019, the Executive Board of the IMF approved an extension of the arrangement by an additional year spanning up to June 2020 with rephasing of remaining disbursements. In October 2019, by a letter of intent signed by the Minister of Finance and the Governor of the Central Bank had requested the completion of the sixth review and the disbursement of the 7th instalment under the programme. Through this letter of intent, a request was also made for waivers on non-observance of certain targets. Furthermore, it was emphasised that the Government will continue to consult in advance with the Fund on adoption of new measures or revisions of the policies. On 01st November 2019, the Executive Board of the IMF completed the sixth review of economic performance under the programme and the 7th instalment of USD 164 million was released making a total of USD 1.31 billion under the arrangement. The final instalment was expected to be released on 03rd April 2020 upon the completion of the seventh review and continuous performance criteria. However, there is no material available to indicate that the Government pursued the final instalment scheduled to be disbursed in April 2020. There had been a visit to Sri Lanka by the IMF Staff during the period 29th January 2020 to 7th February 2020 to meet with the new administration and to discuss its policy agenda. Through a press release the preliminary findings of the visit were conveyed. One of the findings of the visit was that the primary deficit could widen further in 2020 due to newly implemented tax cuts and exemptions and two other factors. In view of the risks to debt sustainability and large refinancing needs it was recognised that renewed efforts to advance fiscal consolidation was essential.

In this context we will examine the submissions of the learned Counsel for the respondents. They contended that reversing tax cuts was delayed due to the adverse impact of the pandemic. It was their contention that it was impractical to have raised taxes at a time there were restricted economic activity due to the pandemic. Furthermore, they contended that no extra revenue could have been collected even if taxes were revised. However, it is pertinent to observe that the Parliamentary authority for most of the tax revisions introduced in late December 2019 was granted by way of legislation one and half years after the tax revisions were introduced. [Value Added Tax (Amendment) Act no 9 of 2021 and Inland Revenue (Amendment) Act no 10 of 2021]. Therefore, by the time these Bills were presented in Parliament by the Executive, the adverse repercussions on the economy due to the pandemic as well as due to the tax revisions that took place in December 2019 were apparent. Yet, no steps were taken to reassess and reconsider the grave repercussions of the tax revisions on the economy. Continued efforts to move forward ignoring the adverse repercussions, in our view is both irrational and arbitrary.

We observe that no adequate steps had been taken to remedy the adverse repercussions on the deficit due to loss of revenue following the tax revisions, in a timely manner even when it was apparent that the changes failed to bring the expected positive outcomes. Such failure heavily contributed and had a domino effect on the economy which ultimately collapsed bringing in serious hardships to the entire society. The Governor of the Central Bank in his report submitted to the Minister of Finance on 15th September 2020 had drawn the attention of the Minister to the fact that the IMF raised concerns on debt sustainability during the discussions to obtain emergency financing and had proposed certain revisions in the tax regime with a view to enhance government revenue while highlighting the negative results following the changes made to collection of tax through PAYE.

It is pertinent to note, that when the tax revisions were introduced in December 2019, there had been no consultations or discussions with the officials of the Central Bank or the Monetary Board. Failure to embark on a study relating to the tax revisions and the possible adverse impact it would have on the ongoing Extended Fund Facility arrangement with the IMF, cannot be comprehended. The responsibility for the failure to complete the IMF facility that was in force from 2016 rests on the introduction of tax revisions in late 2019. The Government failed to engage in any consultation with the IMF as agreed upon through its letter of intent based on which the 7th EFF instalment was released, before introducing sweeping tax reforms.

We are of the view that the 32A respondent as the person who introduced these tax revisions as one of his election pledges and the 2nd respondent who undertook the responsibility to implement those proposals in his capacity as the Minister of Finance, Economy and Policy Development had the responsibility to follow up and examine whether the changes made have produced the results envisaged. When the 2nd respondent relinquished duties as Minister of Finance and the 2A respondent assumed duties as the Minister of Finance on 08th July 2022, this responsibility shifted to him. We also observe that the 38th respondent who had played a major role in introducing the proposal for tax revision to the Cabinet of Ministers also had a duty to follow up to see whether the tax revisions have brought in the desired results or whether any adverse impact was caused to the economy. If they embarked on such an inquiry, they would have had the opportunity to observe the adverse consequences that had flown as a result of these changes. In our view they also had the responsibility to take remedial measures on priority basis without letting the situation aggravate. Furthermore, as observed hereinbefore, by the Governor's report submitted to the 2nd respondent (15th September 2020) the attention of the 2nd respondent was drawn on the grave consequences of the tax revisions and the need to bring in changes to increase government revenue.

In our view, the continued inaction and callous disregard to take remedial measures on the part of the 2nd (Mahinda Rajapaksa), 2A (Basil Rajapaksa), 32A (Gotabaya Rajapaksa) and 38th (P.B.Jayasundera) respondents is arbitrary and irrational and they had breached the public trust reposed in them by the People.

DEPLETION OF GROSS OFFICIAL RESERVES AND SEEKING ASSISTENCE FROM THE IMF

As discussed hereinbefore, the Government had entered into an Extended Fund Facility programme with the IMF in 2016 and the penultimate tranche was received in early November 2019. The last tranche was due in April 2020 after a review in December 2019. It was in October 2019 the Minister of Finance and the Governor of the Central Bank in the letter of intent signed by them stated that the Government will continue to consult in advance with the IMF, if any new measures or a change or revision of the policies are to be adopted. The Executive Board of the IMF thereafter approved the release of the penultimate tranche having satisfied with the progress made by Sri Lanka. The Governor of the Central Bank in the "Road Map 2020" delivered on 06th January 2020 had recognised "the continuation of the EFF programme with the IMF is likely to be instrumental in supporting external sector stability in the medium term". However, in December 2019, no steps had been taken to request the release of the last tranche or to engage in negotiations and/or any consultation with the IMF after the introduction of tax revisions. No such steps had been taken even at the IMF staff visit from January 29th to 7th February, 2020.

In this background on 08th April 2020 the 38th respondent had communicated with the Managing Director of the IMF and had requested assistance in the form of Rapid Financing Instrument (RFI). In this letter the adverse impact on the economy due to the pandemic was highlighted and it was acknowledged that the "sharp decline in the economic growth, fiscal revenue and foreign exchange receipts would create a large and urgent fiscal and balance of payment needs". Furthermore, a suggestion to replace the current Extended Fund Facility arrangement with the requested Rapid Financing Instrument was also made. In the same letter it was said that Sri Lanka will be requesting additional support from other development partners, particularly Japan, the People's Republic of China, the World Bank and the Asian Development Bank.

In response to the request made by the 38th Respondent, the Director of the Asia Pacific Department of the IMF while reaffirming the commitment to support Sri Lanka had observed that the particular economic challenges may require additional time and coordination among relevant parties including other International Financing Institutions. He had further said that he and his staff would do their utmost to process the request and to follow up on the intention to replace the current Extended Fund Facility arrangement with the Rapid Finance Instrument. The Auditor General has not found any material indicating a follow up on this request by the Government. However, the 38th respondent had referred to a series of meetings and correspondence as follow up steps to the initial request. Nonetheless, this request had not brought any positive results as there was no follow up response acceptable to the IMF on their concerns as to how the key requirements including policies to continue ensuring debt sustainability, concerns on balance of payment challenges and preserving international reserves, would be fulfilled.

The Auditor General had observed that a major change had taken place to the economic policies relating to the Government's tax income set out in the letter of intent sent to the IMF in October 2019 under the hands of the Minister of Finance and the Governor of Central Bank, within a month. This is a clear instance where the sudden departure or deviation of commitments and undertakings with the international organisation resulted in consequences detrimental to the country.

It is pertinent to observe that the last tranche of the EFF that was due in April 2020 could have been secured if either the policies agreed with the IMF in obtaining the EFF in 2016 and reiterated in the October 2019 letter of intent were carried forward as agreed or if the tax revisions had been introduced in consultation with the IMF, as assured by the letter of intent. Such a scenario would not only have paved the way for the inflow of foreign exchange and enhance foreign reserves but have preserved ratings without being downgraded. This would have created an environment conducive for foreign investment and other sources of foreign funds.

The Auditor General had observed that there is no material to indicate whether any discussion and/or deliberations took place between the President, Finance Minister, Central Bank and its officials as to whether the Government is continuing with the EFF or not. It appears that there had been no decision based on a proper study on the possible repercussions of abandoning the programme. There is no indication that any discussion had taken place on any reasons as to why the continuation up to obtaining the last tranche has adverse consequences or possible ill-effects to the economy. In this background the inaction to take necessary steps to obtain the last tranche of the IMF facility which was in operation since 2016 is irrational and arbitrary. In this regard it is also pertinent to observe that since 1965 Sri Lanka had entered into agreements with the IMF to obtain funds from its Extended Fund Facility Programme in 1979, 1991, 2003 and in 2016 and the Government had drawn funds agreed in the said programmes and completed them other than in 2016. Furthermore, in 2003 funds from an Extended Fund Facility as well as from an Extended Credit Facility have been drawn fully.

On 4th August 2020, the 30th respondent by his report has drawn the attention of the 2nd respondent on multiple issues relating to the status of the economy and challenges envisaged due to many reasons. Downgrading by the rating agencies due to the growing concerns on debt sustainability, possibility of further downgrading on the basis that the economic growth and the growth of foreign currency earnings are not on par with the rising debt stock, in the event planned funding did not materialize were highlighted in the said report. Furthermore, the importance of active engagement with major multilateral and bilateral agencies was highlighted while observing that loans from such agencies are likely to follow an IMF facility. This report further predicted the depletion of foreign reserves to critical levels in 2020 due to large foreign debt service payments falling due in the period ahead and deterioration of confidence and appetite for Sri Lanka's equity and bond markets. This report further highlighted the urgent need to secure foreign financing in two months and the possibility of triggering the automatic prepayment clauses in project loan agreements in the event of a failure to secure such financing in a timely manner.

This report had been compiled by the 30th Respondent in compliance with section 68 (1) (b) of the Monetary Law. Section 68(1)(b) reads as follows:

> Section 68 (1) Whenever the Monetary Board anticipates that there may develop a deficit in the international balance of payments of such magnitude as to cause a serious decline in the international Reserve, or whenever there is an imminent threat of a serious decline in the International Reserve, or whenever the International Reserve actually falls to a level which the board considers to be a threat to the international stability of the Sri Lanka rupee, or whenever international payments or remittances are being made which in the opinion of the board constitute an actual or a potential threat to such stability or are prejudicial to the national welfare, it shall be the duty of the board ……..
> (b) To submit to the Minister in Charge of the Subject of Finance a detailed report which shall include, as a minimum, an analysis of
> i. The nature, causes, and magnitude of the actual or potential threat to the international stability of the Sri Lanka rupee; and > ii. The measure which the board has already taken, and the further monetary, fiscal or administrative measures which it proposes to take or recommends for adoption by the Government.

Eight months from the initial report, on 06th April 2021, the 30th respondent has submitted another report to the 2nd respondent under section 64(3) and 68(2) of the Monetary Law. In the said report the 30th respondent had set out the challenges due to the pandemic as well as the bleak situation in the domestic economy. In the said report challenges faced by the Central Bank due to decline of official reserves were described and emphasised the need for the Government to secure adequate foreign financing on an urgent basis.

Furthermore, it is said that the Central Bank is actively working with the Government to facilitate enhancing non-debt sources of foreign exchange inflow in view of "the Government's stance not to approach the International Monetary Fund (IMF) for emergency financing." (emphasis added). This report further provided a detailed account on the depleted foreign exchange reserves and the need to secure sufficient inflows. While recognizing positive results of facilities provided by certain agencies such as People's Bank of China, Asian Infrastructure Investment Bank, China Development Bank, Reserve Bank of India and SAARCFINANCE in foreign exchange inflows, the report in no uncertain terms emphasised that;

> "these inflows are barely sufficient to finance the remaining debt service obligations and the likely deficit in the balance of payments in 2021. Furthermore, these facilities provide only temporary relief, as debt service payments remain large over the near to medium term. Therefore, the Government's foreign currency debt service challenge is considerable, particularly in the context of sovereign rating downgrades by all three credit rating agencies in 2020. These downgrades have reduced country's ability to access the international capital markets at a reasonable cost".

This statutory report from the 30th respondent to the 2nd respondent dated 06th April 2021, needs to be examined along with a development that had taken place within the Monetary Board. The Monetary Board had established two Committees to monitor the external debt situation. One such committee namely External Debt Monitoring Committee (DEDMC) was led by the Deputy Governor and the other namely Monetary Board External Debt Monitoring Committee (MBEDMC) was chaired by the 32B respondent and 32C respondent has functioned as the Vice Chairman. This Committee comprised of three Deputy Governors and five other officers of the Central Bank. The MBEDMC after its first two meetings had submitted a report titled "Note on the views of the Monetary Board Level External Debt Monitoring Committee on the Need for a Close Engagement with the International Monetary Fund" to the 30th respondent on 02nd February 2021. In this report having set out the decline of foreign reserves to USD 4.8 billion by end January had predicted that the reserves will further decline to USD 4 billion by end March based on the confirmed projected inflows and outflows. It is the first time that reserves had declined below USD 5 billion after 2009. The report had further detailed the concerns raised by and the reluctance showed by different sources of foreign funding agencies to continue with any funding facilities to Sri Lanka, in the absence of an IMF intervention. Having set out the actual situation the Committee has said "initiating active negotiations with IMF may well be necessary to rebuild the confidence of the international investor and financial sector community on Sri Lanka". Having expressed this view the Committee had observed a possible change of policy approaches by the IMF and commented that "it may be possible to arrive at an agreement with the IMF to allow the new economic model that is currently being pursued by the Government to continue with little adjustment and without being subject to standard IMF conditionality and policy prescriptions".

Having laid out all these background facts, the Committee in no uncertain terms had highlighted the need for an early engagement with the IMF. It had further said that "the MBEDMC and DEDMC strongly agree on this requirement in order to ensure that external debt service obligations are met while maintaining adequate levels of gross official reserves and exchange rate stability, thereby preserving macroeconomic stability and financial system stability".

The 30th respondent at the Monetary Board meeting held on 03rd February 2021 at the discussion on "The impending acute foreign exchange shortfall as reflected in the estimated steady decline in official reserves and related challenges" had informed the Board the fact that the MBEDMC has submitted a report with several suggestions. However, he had suggested considering a few other measures relating to forex inflows. Furthermore, he had requested the 31st respondent, (the Secretary to the Treasury who was an, ex-officio member of the Monetary Board) to outline the sources of foreign exchange inflows that are in the pipeline. The 31st respondent thereafter had listed out five expected sources of inflows including divesting of EPF holding in West Coast Power (Pvt) Ltd, another investment in a hotel project and facilities from China Development Bank, People's Bank of China and Asian Infrastructure Investment Bank.

The 30th respondent thereafter had suggested to review the progress in those anticipated inflows by the end of March 2021 and thereafter to consider making appropriate proposals to the Government, if necessary. However, the Deputy Governor(S) observed the difficulty to accurately estimate the volume of inflows due to the exceptional global situation and he expressed the view that negotiations for borrowing facilities should commence without delay if funds are to be received in a few months. Both the 32C respondent and Deputy Governor(N) had emphasised that it is not the quantum of funding that can be obtained from the IMF but the restoration of the investor confidence due to an engagement with the IMF is the key factor. It was further pointed out that even inflows from many bilateral agencies are also conditional upon Sri Lanka having an engagement with the IMF. Furthermore, the 32C respondent had said that necessary measures should be taken as a matter of urgency without deferring the process to end of March. However, at these discussions the 31st respondent had remarked that "obtaining USD 165 million from IMF will not be the final solution" and had further said that "since the Government policy is not to go to the IMF, as officials we have to abide by it". He had emphasised that other means of inflows need to be considered.

These discussions that took place at the Monetary Board meeting held on 03rd February 2021 explains the position taken up by the 30th respondent in his statutory report dated 06th April 2021. It is reasonable to conclude that the 30th respondent had been influenced by the comments made by the 31st respondent that the Government's policy is not to seek the assistance of the IMF. Therefore, the 30th respondent had formulated his recommendations on the premise that there is a Government Policy not to seek assistance from the IMF. However, in this regard, it is pertinent to observe that there had been no cabinet decision by April 2021 not to seek assistance from the IMF. There is no material before this Court to conclude that such policy had been developed as the policy of the Government having considered advantages and disadvantages based on all material facts. It is the Cabinet of Ministers who is charged with the duty of direction and control of the Government.

Minutes of the meeting of the Monetary Board held on 21st April 2021 reveal that both the 30th and the 32nd respondent had expressed the view that their personal opinion as well as the policy of the Government is to move away from the IMF.

At the said meeting the 32nd respondent remarked that he personally felt that "majority of the Central Bank officials feel that we should go to the IMF". The 32C respondent while noting that 170 countries have already gone to the IMF to overcome the impact of pandemic that several Central Banks that were approached by the Central Bank of Sri Lanka have indicated that Sri Lanka should negotiate with the IMF. The 32C respondent at the Monetary Board meeting held on 11th May 2021 also had reiterated the difficulty for the Central Bank to release foreign currency to commercial banks to meet their import bills. She had also remarked that the Commercial Banks wasted USD 200 million of funds received from the China Development Bank by spending on non-essential imports such as telephones, sugar and garments.

It is in this backdrop the 30th respondent submitted the statutory report dated 30th June 2021, to the 2nd respondent.

In this report while recognising that the pandemic exacerbated the vulnerabilities and challenges to the economy, the 30th respondent recognised that the opportunities to access international financial markets were restricted due to downgrading of sovereign credit ratings. This report further provides details on further depletion of reserves. By May 2021 reserves had come down to USD 04 billion which was equivalent only to 2.7 months of imports whereas the minimum international standard is to maintain three months imports. In this report the 30th respondent reiterates that the Central Bank has been actively working with the Government to facilitate enhancing non-debt sources of foreign exchange inflows as the Government's stance is not to approach the International Monetary Fund. Further, the report predicted that the reserves would deplete to USD 2.5 – 3 billion by end July 2021.This report further goes on to state that "by way of an advance warning, it is the duty of the Monetary Board to keep the Honourable Prime Miniter informed of debt service obligations falling due in 2022. There are Government foreign currency debt service obligations of around USD 6.6 billion….. Significant foreign exchange inflows have to be secured, to maintain reserves in 2022".

However, on 8th July 2021, within a week of the said report the 2nd respondent had relinquished duties as Minister of Finance and the 2A respondent assumed duties as Minister of Finance.

The next report of the 30th respondent dated 26th July 2021 which is addressed to the 2A respondent who had assumed duties as the Minister of Finance by then makes reference to his earlier reports submitted to the 2nd respondent and copies of them had been annexed. In this report the 30th respondent reiterates the dire state of the economy and the challenges faced due to the pandemic. It recognises with all the guaranteed foreign exchange inflows, the gross official reserves "are projected to remain at a critically low level of around USD 3.3 billion by end 2021". The report predicts that the reserves will be further depleted to around USD 1.5 billion by end March 2022, "without any further significant foreign exchange inflows in the pipeline". The above clearly indicated that the 2A respondent was put on notice that the reserves would deplete to around USD 1.5 billion by March 2022 [roughly about one month's imports] and there were no foreign exchange inflows forthcoming. Thus, 2A respondent would have been alive to the precarious situation of the economy at that point of time.

This report further draws attention to the need to address the concerns raised by the rating agencies. It states "The rating agencies have raised their concern on the ability of servicing Sri Lanka's foreign currency debt in the period ahead. Most recently, on 19 July 2021, Moody's Investor Service placed Sri Lanka's sovereign credit rating 'under review for downgrade'……It is important that the concerns of rating agencies are addressed urgently to prevent any further rating downgrades in the near future, failing which would keep international investors further away from Sri Lanka and would further reduce the possibility of accessing international capital markets. The decline in reserves below the critical levels would also prompt the friendly nations and central banks to reconsider the provision of financing that are being negotiated at present".

In its concluding remarks interalia the report says: "In the context of extremely challenging economic conditions, the Monetary Board is of the view that recent regulatory and policy measures to stabilise the external sector have helped to arrest the situation to a certain extent. However there is dire need of urgent implementation of drastic policy measures as proposed above aiming at resorting the stability of the external sector of the economy to reduce foreign exchange outflows and increase foreign exchange inflows, avoiding the sharp depletion of gross official reserves of the country and a resultant loss in confidence on the macroeconomic stability by key stakeholders including foreign lenders, potential investors, corresponding foreign banks of local banking sector. The Government may alternatively consider approaching the globally accepted lender of last resort for balance of payment needs, the International Monetary Fund (IMF). The intervention of the IMF, whilst bolstering the confidence of international investors on Sri Lankan economy, may on the other hand require aggressive reforms in the fiscal sector, interest rates and the exchange rate, and even restructuring of the debt stock of the Government".

This report, compared to the earlier reports submitted since August 2020, reflects a change of stance / strategy in relation to the need to seek assistance from the IMF. In this report, as it appears to us, the 30th respondent had recommended to the Government (2A respondent) to seek assistance from the IMF as an alternative to other possibilities. In this regard it is pertinent to note that at a meeting of the Monetary Board held on 04th August 2021 the 32C respondent had remarked; that it will be the Monetary Board that will be summoned before a Commission of Inquiry in the event the Government or the CBSL defaults, in a backdrop where even China had reached out to IMF for assistance due to the situation caused following the COVID-19 pandemic. In response to the above remark, the 30th respondent had said that "he is flexible on seeking IMF assistance if considered necessary and the Government also will have to be convinced if that option is to be pursued"

However, the 2A respondent has not accepted this proposal - seeking IMF assistance - as a viable solution. The 2A respondent whilst noting the contents of the report dated 26th July 2021 has made the following observation in his letter addressed to the 30th respondent, dated 12th August 2021.

"Your report suggests to consider approaching IMF to address these challenges. It indicates that such involvement of IMF requires aggressive reforms in the fiscal sector, interest rates, exchange rate and even restructuring of debt stock of the Government. I would like the Central Bank of Sri Lanka to clearly advise me why such reforms cannot be done without resorting to IMF loan programme, for instance as Malaysia did, to manage the challenge of Asian Financial Crisis. The country may need a fresh thinking altogether as Sri Lanka has had 16 IMF programmes since 1965"

The 2A Respondent inter alia observes that "There is also a shortage of foreign exchange in the Forex Market as has been reported by shipping lines, the business community and the media. This has resulted in a large number of containers at the Colombo port not being cleared. I have also noted that most of the cargo comprises of essential food and raw material which are essential for the smooth functioning of day-to-day life and country's economy".

The above observation of the 2A respondent clearly demonstrates that the 2A respondent is fully aware of the critical status of the social and economic situation that prevailed by August 2021. It is pertinent to observe that the continued warnings sounded by the 30th respondent from his initial report to the 2nd respondent one year ago (04th August 2020) and repercussions predicted due to severe depletion of gross official reserves, have become the reality by this time.

The 2A respondent in the same letter had identified certain measures as necessary to be initiated by the Central Bank to "signal market to move on to a stabilization path". Despite the difficulties expressed by the 30th respondent in his earlier reports to continue providing foreign exchange to meet the Government's import bills, the 2A respondent has required the Central Bank to "release of USD 250 million immediately to all Commercial Banks, since they are in need urgent foreign exchange to honour payments on account of imports under various trade instruments (DP term of payment, Sight LCs etc). This will enable all cargo currently at the ports to be cleared". Furthermore, the 2A respondent had wanted the Central Bank to release another USD 250 million in early September 2021, to meet petroleum and LP gas financing.

The 30th respondent by his letter dated 14th September 2021, whilst acknowledging series of discussions and the close dialogue he had with the 2A respondent and officials of the Ministry of Finance, has observed that the gross official reserves had declined significantly as large external debt servicing requirements were met in the absence of adequate financial inflows. The 30th Respondent also observed that "the recent interventions in the foreign exchange market by the Central Bank at the request of the Government has helped to ease conditions in the supply of essential imports, but could also weaken the country's external position further, if the expected inflows are further delayed".

In relation to the 2A respondent's views on seeking assistance from the IMF, the 30th respondent while emphasising the need to implement an agenda of structural reforms to achieve economic prosperity have welcomed a reform package without the IMF, and had described it as the most preferred way forward as a country, as many other countries have graduated by implementing far-reaching economic reforms. However, having made this observation, the 30th respondent had further said that "we are prepared to work with you, learning from past experiences of our own and other country experiences to get out of the present difficulties through required structural reforms. Although under totally different domestic and international conditions, Sri Lanka also achieved external sector stability without an IMF intervention during early 1970s. In 2009, we obtained an IMF programme which was negotiated within the broader frame work of the Government Policy agenda of the time, Mahinda Chinthana".

The 30th respondent had further stated that "While the Government with a strong commitment to long lasting structural reforms, may consider a decisive reform agenda to be implemented gradually, there are advantages of maintaining links with the IMF, backed by a well-structured policy. The countries which obtain financial assistance from the IMF are increasingly encouraged to implement home grown reforms. Accordingly, if Sri Lanka decides to obtain an IMF programme in 2021 as well, negotiations could be based on Government's policy framework "Vistas of Prosperity". The advantages that would be gained by indicating to the market that we are closely working with the IMF, even without any commitment to an IMF stabilisation programme, could boost confidence among international financial community, so that conditions for borrowing, if the need arises, could be made easy. Even a home-grown reform programme may entail significant sacrifices to be made".

As a concluding remark, the 30th respondent inter alia had stated that "some countries in the world even Sri Lanka, in some past occasions have successfully steered through crisis without the IMF support in the past. But as different country experience show, being engaged with the IMF even without an agreed programme would bring in much needed investor confidence and improve the sentiments of all other stakeholders, including multilateral and bilateral lenders and Sovereign rating agencies. This could prevent any further credit rating downgrades and may pave the way to attract foreign exchange inflows while helping to unlock the access to international markets gradually. This point is presented for the consideration of the Government".

Ironically, the 30th respondent had resigned from the post of Governor Central Bank on the same day he sent the above report to the 2A respondent. In our view this report sent by the 30th respondent sufficiently demonstrates the advantages of seeking the assistance of the IMF in stabilising the critical condition in the economy.

In all the reports submitted by the 30th respondent to the Minister of Finance under section 68 of the Monetary Law, he had clearly set out the critical condition of the economy and the challenges to remedy the situation. The adverse consequences due to down-grades by the international agencies and the need to address their concerns were highlighted. While recognising the adverse impact the pandemic caused to the economy, they recognised the immediate need to secure foreign exchange inflows to curtail the depletion of gross official reserves and maintain the internationally accepted ratio between the gross official reserves and the foreign exchange requirement of import bills. Even though they do not contain a specific recommendation to seek IMF assistance describing it as the only way out, they have provided material emphasising the critical condition and the advantages in seeking assistance from the IMF to mitigate the situation.

On 15th September 2021, the 29th respondent had assumed duties as Governor of the Central Bank.

The continued deterioration of the economy and the status it has reached by December 2021 is succinctly described by the 29th respondent in his statutory report to the 2A respondent submitted on 09th December 2021. The report states:

"The urgent attention of the Government is crucial to resolve the foreign currency liquidity issues faced by the state banks as well as the entire economy in order to prevent a banking and a sovereign default in the immediate future. Their continuous reliance on the Central Bank to honour payment obligations on essential imports has caused a severe stress on gross official reserves, which have already declined to a critical level at present with inadequate coverage for upcoming debt servicing or to finance essential imports".

The report further says that "the shortage of foreign currency inflows to the government amidst the sovereign rating down grade aggravated the decline of gross official reserves. The Central Bank continued to provide foreign exchange to maturing debt obligations of the Government". Having set out these factors and while reiterating the immediate and critical need of securing sizeable amount of foreign financing to maintain the macro-economic and financial system stability, the 29th respondent had expressed hope that the efforts the 2A respondent has currently undertaken, would bring necessary foreign financing through Government to Government collaboration, syndicated loan arrangements, credit lines for essential imports and monetisation of underutilised and non-strategic state assets. The specific details of these avenues, however, are not referred to in this report.

It is also interesting to note that the 29th respondent had expressed the view that this situation may not have arisen if envisaged inflows to the Government such as the monetisation of identified assets, including the shares of West Coast Power, East Container Terminal of the Colombo Port etc. Apart from this bare statement, this report does not further elaborate the reasons for such non-materialisation of such avenues. The critical situation in which the economy was facing is further demonstrated by the fact that the Monetary Board at its meeting on 08th December 2021 has granted its approval to proceed with the disposal of gold on a staggered basis and had predicted the maximum amount that could be derived from disposal of gold would be USD 350-400 million.

The 29th respondent in his next report to the 2A respondent dated 31st December 2021 had drawn the attention of the 2A respondent the critical level to which Gross Official Reserves had depleted and had projected the foreign currency debt service payments for 2022 to be USD 7.3 billion which includes repayment of ISB of USD 500 million in January 2022. This report further reflects that the Net Foreign Assets of the Central Bank has deteriorated to negative levels of around Rs. 330 billion by end November 2021 mainly due to meeting the foreign currency debt service obligations of the Government and financing essential imports using the foreign exchange reserves of the Central Bank. According to this report Gross Official Reserves had depleted to USD 1.6 billion by November 2021 and recognises that such reserves were equivalent only to around one month of imports. The report claims that this amount was augmented to USD 3.1 billion by end 2021 with the activation of SWAP facility of People's Bank of China. However, he fails to disclose the conditions on which the SWAP facility was initiated and the inability to draw it unless the Gross Official Reserves would grow to the equivalent of three months of import. Even though the 29th respondent had observed the steps taken by the rating agencies which resulted in a significant loss of investor confidence, he has failed to make any recommendations to remedy this situation and win the investor confidence in order to obtain more investments to overcome the crisis situation.

Immediately after the said report, 2A respondent submitted a Cabinet Memorandum to the Cabinet of Ministers dated 03rd January2022 where he referred to the said SWAP facility as an opportunity the Government had got to strengthen the foreign reserves of the Country.

In the said Cabinet paper, the Minister, explaining the ill effects of an IMF programme had invited the Cabinet of Ministers to deliberate on a home-grown solution.

The Cabinet of Ministers after considering the said Cabinet Memorandum had decided as follows;

> ''සංදේශයේ 4 ඡේදයෙහි දක්වා ඇති කරුණු සැලකිල්ලට ගෙන දැනට ශ්‍රී ලංකාව මුහුණ දී ඇති ගැටලු සඳහා රටතුලම හඳුනා ගනු ලබන විසඳුමක් ක්‍රියාත්මක කිරීම සඳහා''

However, when considering the critical level of the Sri Lankan Economy as of 01st January 2022, with foreign reserves only to meet its import bill for only one month, a serious issue arises whether the Cabinet of Ministers were properly briefed or appraised of the critical situation of the economy in the said Cabinet paper in order to obtain objective views of the policy makers whether it is viable to resolve the economic ills by adopting a "home grown solution". Specially so when mechanics of a home grown solution were not placed before the Cabinet. It is to be noted that the Cabinet of Ministers were starved of the critical information relating to foreign reserves, a vital factor that ought to have been taken into account in deciding the viability of a home grown solution as an alternative to seeking IMF assistance. Question arises whether the Cabinet of Ministers was properly briefed of the said position in the said Cabinet Paper to obtain the decision to "identify a home-grown solution" without knowing what is the "so-called home-grown solution" that is going to bail out the Sri Lankan economy from its critical condition. It is also pertinent to observe that the Cabinet Memorandum dated 03rd January 2021 in which the 2A respondent invited the Cabinet of Ministers to deliberate on the issue whether to seek the assistance of the IMF, had not set out one of the most important factors enabling the Ministers of the Cabinet to take a well-considered decision. The Cabinet paper is silent on the critical situation in the Gross Official Reserves and the ill effects on the failure to secure inflow of foreign exchange on an urgent basis. As it was discussed herein before, the report of the 29th respondent dated 31st December 2021 clearly sets out that "Gross Official Reserves had depleted to a critical level of USD 1.6 billion by end November 2021 which was equivalent only to around 1month imports". In this report, the 29th respondent had proceeded to say that the reserves were augmented by USD 3.1 billion by end 2021 with the activation of the SWAP facility of the People's Republic of China.

In this regard it is also important to note that the pros and cons of adopting any measures to overcome the critical economic conditions need to be assessed in the proper context in a given situation, when a decision is to be taken on the viability of such measures. This was not a straightforward case of assessing the suitability of seeking IMF assistance under normal circumstances but the call to seek IMF assistance was critically relevant given the unique circumstances our economy was placed in. The depleted official reserves; the need to secure foreign exchange on an urgent basis; the reluctance of the other agencies to extend support without an IMF programme were critical factors in deciding whether seeking assistance was in the best interest of the country at the relevant time.

In this backdrop was it not the duty or the responsibility of the 2A respondent to place all relevant factors referred to above before the Cabinet of Ministers when they were invited to deliberate and decide on matters that were so serious as they had a direct impact on the entire society?

In our view the 2A respondent has breached the public trust deposed in him in exercising his executive powers of the people in his capacity as the Minister of Finance in this regard by his failure to place all relevant facts with sufficient details in the Cabinet Memorandum when he invited the Cabinet of Ministers to make a choice between seeking assistance from the IMF and adopting a "home grown solution" at the given situation. As elaborated before, the following comment of the 30th respondent in his letter dated 14th September 2021 addressed to the 2A respondent reiterates this position:

> "Although under totally different domestic and international conditions, Sri Lanka also achieved external sector stability without an IMF intervention during early 1970s"

The report of the 29th respondent dated 27th January 2022 also sets out the critical condition in which the economy is ailing. Even though he emphasises the need to secure foreign currency inflows to avert an economic crisis, he maintains a stoic silence on the possibility of any engagement with the IMF for assistance.

The report of the 29th respondent dated 28th February 2022 describes the status of reserves and its' potential impact on the economy in the following manner: "As the current reserve level is inadequate to meet this significant debt serving requirements, not having new foreign currency inflows into official reserves would result in a default by the Central Bank as well as the Government of Sri Lanka in the immediate future in which eventuality the economic management of the country will experience severe repercussions in the future. Such an event would be catastrophic, resulting in a serious loss of confidence in the Sri Lankan economy, including the rupee and it would even be developed to serious and far reaching social and political implications as well".

According to the material presented before this Court, the payment of ISB of USD 500 million took place before the February 2022 report was presented. By this time the Gross Official Reserves had come down to a critical level of USD 2.4 billion including the SWAP facility of USD 1500 million from the People's Bank of China, SWAP facility of USD 400 million from Reserve Bank of India and another SWAP facility of USD 200 million from the Bangladesh Bank.

Even though there is no reference to the restrictions imposed in the Chinese SWAP facility, in the said report, it appears that the Gross Official Reserves of Sri Lanka were only USD 300 million when the SWAP facilities referred to above are not factored in. This reserve was not sufficient to meet Sri Lanka's foreign expenditure even for one week, but this report except for the recommendation for import restrictions on non-essential goods and revision of energy prices, failed to make any recommendations to overcome the critical situation the country faced at that time, specially, in the context of there being no avenues for foreign exchange inflows.

It is surprising and hard to comprehend the reason for the 29th respondent to maintain a complete silence in all these reports on the possibility of remedying this situation by initiating a programme with the IMF. The 29th respondent has been fully aware of the critical condition in the Gross Official Reserves and the disaster the entire country would face without taking immediate steps to secure sufficient foreign funding inflows. However, he failed to make this recommendation without any justification whatsoever.

In this regard it is also pertinent to note that the Monetary Policy Committee of the Central Bank by a Board Paper titled "Review of the Monetary Policy Stance Monetary Policy Cycle No 2 – March 2022" had recommended to the Monetary Board for its consideration at its meeting on 03rd March 2022 inter alia to "initiate discussions with the IMF to have a credible anchor: Announce immediately to the public that the Monetary Board is prepared to propose to the Government to commence discussions with the IMF". At the Monetary Board meeting of 03rd March 2022, Director of Economic Research while summarising the contents of the aforementioned Board Paper had inter alia invited the Monetary Board to approve the recommendations of the Monetary Policy Committee including the recommendation to initiate discussions with the IMF to have a credible anchor and to immediately make a public announcement that the Monetary Board is prepared to propose to the Government to commence discussions with the IMF. However, it is surprising and extremely difficult to comprehend the complete silence the Monetary Board maintained in regard to this recommendation. Records do not show that they at least considered this recommendation by the Monetary Policy Committee.

The learned President's Counsel who represented the 2nd and 2A respondents, whilst referring to some of the recommendations made in the reports submitted in terms of sections 64 and 68 by the Monetary Board, to the Minister, took up the position that it was the duty of the Monetary Board to advice the Minister, but the Monetary Board had failed to advice the Minister with the steps that should be followed to get over from the critical condition of the Sri Lankan economy. As already referred to, even though the few reports submitted by the 29th respondent do not explain the real situation the country was facing, the two detailed reports the 2A respondent received from the 30th respondent had placed the 2A respondent on notice of the critical condition of the Sri Lankan economy at that time. The 2A respondent had in fact responded strongly to the report submitted on 26th July 2021 by his letter dated 12th August 2021.

As already referred to above, the 30th respondent has submitted reports under Sections 64 and 68 to the 2nd respondent on 4th August 2020, 6th April 2021, and 30th June 2021 explaining the challenges faced by the Sri Lankan economy at that time. In the report, the 30th Respondent sent to the 2nd respondent on 4th August 2020, whilst explaining the sharp drop of international reserves, low level of Gross Official Reserves and urgent need to make available the foreign financing for the upcoming ISB payment, had said, a) Most of the loans from the multilateral sources referred to above are likely to follow an IMF facility for which the IMF has indicated debt sustainability to be a significant impediment.

b) In the absence of an IMF program in the near future the options available are to seek bilateral financial assistance from friendly nations and to explore avenues of commercial borrowings.

In addition to the above 30th Respondent had further advised the 2nd Respondent,

a) The Monetary Board is of the view that the country's external sector stability remains vulnerable, necessitating corrective measures without delay.
b) Every possible initiative should be taken by all stakeholders in real, financial and fiscal sectors to prevent further depletion of the country's official reserves.

If the above recommendation of the Monetary Board is properly understood, it is clear that the Monetary Board wanted the 2nd respondent to consider the Government economic policy seriously in order to prevent further depletion of the country's official reserves.

During his submissions before this Court the 32B respondent referred to a meeting with the 2nd respondent by the Monetary Board. On a request made by the Monetary Board the said meeting was arranged on 1st July 2021 and all the members of the Monetary Board along with senior officials of the Central Bank had participated at the meeting. At the said meeting a presentation was made in Sinhala by the Central Bank and the critical condition of the Sri Lankan economy was explained. The said presentation specifically referred to an engagement with the IMF as the final resort in the following terms;

> ''එවැනි හදිසි ක්‍රියාමාර්ග ක්‍රියාත්මක නොවන්නේ නම් ජාත්‍යන්තර මට්ටමින් අවසාන ණය දෙන්නා වශයෙන් පිලිගත් ජාත්‍යන්තර මූල්‍ය අරමුදලින් සහාය ලබා ගැනීම අවශ්‍ය වනු ඇත''

According to the minutes of the said meeting Superintendent of Public Debt had explained the need for an internationally accepted anchor and the points referred to by him at the meeting was recorded under paragraph 3.7 of the said meeting as follows;

> "3.7 Superintendent of Public Debt stated that in the recent discussions with Sovereign rating agencies they have highlighted concerns about the current situation, and there is a likelihood of such rating agencies issuing further adverse comments on the Sri Lankan economy. Rating agencies as well as foreign investors also constantly inquire about possible engagement with the International Monetary Fund (IMF) or the submission of a credible repayment plan from the Government".

On behalf of the 28th Respondent the Monetary Board, it was submitted that "it is the Government which has the responsibility to approach the IMF and agree on a programme, if any, with the IMF. The agreements must be concluded by the Government and no other. It is not possible for the Central Bank (Monetary Board) to approach the IMF if the Government is unwilling."

With regard to the above submission, it is necessary to consider the provisions in Sections 64 (1) and 68 (1) (2) of the Monetary Law.

As per the said provisions,

a) Whenever the Monetary Board anticipates economic disturbances that are likely to threaten domestic monetary stability or whenever abnormal movements in the money supply or in the price level are actually endangering such stability;
b) Whenever the Monetary Board anticipates that there may develop a deficit in the international balance of payment that cause a serious, decline in the international reserve or there is an imminent threat of such decline;

The Monetary Board has a duty to submit reports to the Minister explaining and making recommendations and the steps the Government should adopt.

As already observed in this judgement, during the period the 30th respondent was functioning as the Governor of the Central Bank and in that capacity heading the Monetary Board, several reports had been submitted explaining to the 2nd and 2A respondents the magnitude of the crisis faced by the Government of Sri Lanka.

However, when the 29th respondent was appointed the Governor, a significant difference was observed in the reports submitted to the 2A Respondent and a question arises whether the 29th respondent fulfilled his responsibilities as the Chairman of the Monetary Board in discharging the duty of the Monetary Board when submitting statutory reports to the 2A respondent.

The petitioners have produced several statements issued by the 29th respondent in his capacity as the Governor Central Bank, where he assured the public that the country is moving towards the correct path and it will recover soon.

According to the material available a decision to seek assistance from the IMF, was ultimately taken by the 32A respondent on 16th March 2022. On the 14th March 2022 the Cabinet of Ministers had decided "to authorise the Minister of Finance to take necessary action to obtain technical assistance of the International Monetary Fund with a view to resolving the current situation encountered by the Sri Lankan economy" (emphasis added). The Cabinet of Ministers had taken this decision having given their mind to the note [to the Cabinet] of the 2A respondent on "Staff Report Recommendations for the 2021 Article IV Consultation of the International Monetary Fund (IMF)". The note of the 2A respondent was critical of the findings of the IMF after Article IV consultation and had observed that "some of these risks are overstated in the press release and the efforts of the authorities to address these challenges are understated". It is to be observed that the engagement with the IMF referred to in the Cabinet Decision in March 2022 was only "to obtain technical advise and the assistance of the IMF" which appears to be noncommittal and tentative as opposed to the request made by the 32A respondent in April 2022 for an appropriate fund supported programme to address the economic challenges the country was facing mainly from the balance of payment difficulties and broader macro-economic issues the country was confronted with at the time. It is to be noted the said letter was sent to the IMF with an assurance by the Government of Sri Lanka of its full commitment to achieve the objectives of such a programme. In the course of the submissions of the 32B respondent it was brought to the attention of Court that the sending of letter by 32A respondent in April 2022 was facilitated by him sequel to a one-on-one meeting he had with the 32A respondent.

Even Though, there were reports (referred to above) recommending an engagement with the IMF on an urgent basis from the two subcommittees (MBEDMC and DEDMC) and other officers of the Central Bank, the Monetary Board (28th respondent) failed to take a firm decision in this regard. The Monetary Board was fully aware of the crisis resulting from the continued depletion of Gross Official Reserves as well as the reserves of the Central Bank which reached critically low levels, yet no consensus could be reached by the members. The situation that prevailed within the Monetary Board is aptly reflected in the comments made by the 32nd respondent (Kumarasinghe) at the meeting held on 21st March 2022 and the views of the Deputy Governor (S) on the comments of the 32nd respondent. The 32nd respondent had said "From the day I joined the Monetary Board in July 2020, for almost two years Dr Ranee Jayamaha and DG(S) have been tirelessly pushing the Monetary Board to go for an IMF programme but the majority including the past and present Governors were not willing to accept the path till the MB meeting held on 07.03.2022. However, now with the MB decisions taken on 07.03.2022, Dr Ranee Jayamaha and DG(S) have won the long fought battle on IMF within the MB meetings and I and the Governor(s) have been defeated".

These comments referred to above demonstrate the exact situation that prevailed within the Monetary Board. As discussed hereinbefore the 30th, and 31st respondents have continuously maintained that there was a government policy not to reach out to the IMF. However, there is no material before this Court as to the existence of any such policy prior to January 2022. The Cabinet of Ministers, however, approved the 2A respondent's proposal for a home grown solution without seeking the IMF assistance. During the course of this period, the Members of the Monetary Board were put on notice of the critical situation that prevailed in the Gross Official Reserves and the need to secure foreign exchange inflows on an urgent basis. They were also aware of the unlikelihood of receiving such inflows from other sources and further certain sources from which inflows could be obtained were insisting on an IMF anchor if they were to provide assistance. Severe hardships people underwent over this period was mainly due to the scarcity in essential items such as fuel and gas. The depletion of foreign reserves to meet the import bill was the main hurdle to secure such essentials.

The continued reluctance for a specific recommendation to the Government to seek assistance from the IMF by the majority of the members of the Monetary Board in these circumstances, in our view is a violation of public trust reposed in the Monetary Board as a collective body as well as on individual members who maintained such continued resistance despite severe depletion of Gross Official Reserves in the absence of any viable alternative to overcome this predicament. It also appears that their reluctance was not based solely on the purported policy of the Government but also due to their personal views and/or beliefs. The 32nd respondent having considered the decision of the Monetary Board to recommend to the government to seek IMF assistance as a personal defeat in a long fought battle had suggested that "the best persons to get involved in way-forward discussions with the IMF are Dr Ranee Jayamaha and DG(S) who have the best relationships and influence with IMF". On the following day (22nd March 2022) the said respondent had tendered his resignation from the Monetary Board. This conduct mirrors the aversion this respondent had towards reaching out to the IMF and the reluctance to consider issues objectively in the larger interest of the people who had deposed trust on him. When one accepts public office, they should have the capacity to look at issues objectively and resolve them in the best interest of the people rather than being obsessed with their personal beliefs. Comments and the conduct of the officials of the Central Bank over this period clearly points to the direction that the need to seek assistance from IMF did exist over a period of time and any prudent person who did not act arbitrarily would have foreseen the serious repercussions in the failure to act swiftly to remedy the situation. Deputy Governor (S) in his comments says that "the little experience I had in working with macroeconomic policy making enabled me to foresee well in advance the economic crisis that the country is experiencing at present. This is the exact reason for me to recommend and emphasize to the MB to approach IMF". He further said "It appears that at least at this very late stage, the Government has finally realized that there is no other option but to approach IMF. The pain to the economy and the people of Sri Lanka would have been less if this decision was taken at least one year ago" (emphasis added). K.M.M.Siriwardane – Deputy Governor (S) in his note to the Monetary Board dated 04.04.2022 had listed out the board papers and submissions made to the Monetary Board since 11.11.2020 on "Macroeconomic development and foreign exchange reserves".

In this regard it is also pertinent to note that the Board Paper dated 11th November 2020 titled "Challenges in Government foreign currency debt service payments in 2021 and beyond" discusses the status of Gross Official Reserves as it stood by October 2020, the probability of the reserves dropping to critical levels in 2021, the advantages of an IMF assisted programme and the sentiments of other funding agencies on the absence of such programme. None of these matters, however, were taken up for discussion at the Monetary Board. The main reason for the non-discussion, appears to be the insistence of the 31st respondent to defer the discussion to a date after the presentation of the Budget speech in Parliament; this is despite the fact that the 32C respondent is urging paying urgent attention to the said issues.

In this regard it is also pertinent to note the conduct of the 38th respondent (Jayasundera) as revealed in the minutes of the Monetary Board meeting held on 21st April 2021. The Deputy Governor (S) has placed on record an incident that took place in the morning of that day. According to him there had been a meeting at the Presidential Secretariat chaired by the 38th respondent. This meeting was attended by the officials from the Ministry of Finance including the 31st Respondent, officials of the Central Bank including the 30th respondent, officials from the two state banks and officials from the Board of Investment. At this meeting the 38th respondent had been critical of the officials of the Central Bank with an allegation of misleading the Monetary Board and their inability to send statutory reports required under sections 64 and 68 of the Monetary Law Act. Furthermore the 38th respondent had questioned the conduct of DG (S) at the Central Bank with insinuations that the latter is a person who tries to serve as per the needs of IMF. Two other Deputy Governors, DG(N) and DG(F) also have placed on record that at several occasions, the 38th respondent reprimands officials of the Central Bank in the presence of officials of the state banks and neither minutes of such meetings nor any official documents were shared of such meetings. The 38th respondent, however, had denied that he had caused "any intimidation" as alleged by the Central Bank officials who attended meetings chaired by him. The 30th respondent also had acknowledged that the 38th respondent was speaking to the Central Bank officials in a critical manner questioning their competencies and allegiances. Furthermore, the 30th respondent had observed that "the interpretations given by officials of the Central Bank on matters relating to banks and market operations vary with that of market participants and Government authorities such as Dr Jayasundera".

Learned President's Counsel for the Petitioners submitted that this conduct of the 38th respondent clearly exceeds the boundaries of the legitimate exercise of powers of the Secretary to the President. This conduct is a clear interference with the discharge of duties of public officials. In their submissions this arbitrary use of power is a breach of public trust placed on the 38th respondent.

All factors referred to above clearly establishes that the relevant state organs / officials demonstrated reluctance to reach out to the IMF in the face of the critical situation the country's economy was facing in spite of the fact there was no other viable alternative. This position, namely, the delay on the part of the Government and the Monetary Board in seeking assistance from the IMF has been commented upon by the Auditor-General as well.

It is apt to reiterate that the persons holding public office have a duty to ensure that they exercise due diligence and discharge their duties and responsibilities reasonably and rationally without acting arbitrarily. In our view, 2nd (Mahinda Rajapaksa), 2A (Basil Rajapaksa) 28th (Monetary Board), 29th (Ajith Nivard Cabraal), 30th, (W.D.Lakshman), 31st (S.R.Attygalle) and 32nd (Samantha Kumarasinghe) respondents failed to take remedial action, when the option to take such action was available, namely by not taking measures to seek assistance from the IMF in a timely manner when they were under a duty to do so. The said inaction on the part of the said respondents, in our opinion was not only manifestly unreasonable but also irrational and arbitrary. Thus, the said respondents in our view had breached public trust reposed in them by the inaction referred to.

EXCHANGE RATE AND OUTFLOW OF FOREIGN EXCHANGE

The relevant provisions of the Monetary Law with regard to determining the par value of Sri Lanka Rupee, International Reserve and International stability of Sri Lanka Rupee reads as follows;

> Section 3. (1) The Monetary Board shall by unanimous decision, recommend to the Minister in charge of the subject of Finance that the par value of the Sri Lanka rupee be determined in terms of special drawing rights or in terms of such other common denominator as may be prescribed by the International Monetary Fund, and upon such recommendation, the Minister in charge of the subject of Finance shall, by Order published in the Gazette, determine and declare the par value of the Sri Lanka rupee in accordance with the terms specified in such recommendation:
> Provided, however, that if the Monetary Board is of the view that international economic conditions do not warrant the introduction or maintenance of exchange arrangements based on stable but adjustable par values, it may, by unanimous decision, recommend to the Minister in charge of the subject of Finance that no determination be made under the preceding provisions of this section or that any Order made under this section be revoked, and upon any such recommendation, the Minister in charge of the subject of Finance shall desist from making an Order under this section, or, as the case may be, revoke an Order made under this section.
> (2) The Monetary Board may by unanimous decision recommend to the Minister in charge of the subject of Finance the alteration of the par value of the Sri Lanka rupee, if the Board is of the opinion that such alteration of the par value of the Sri Lanka rupee is rendered necessary in any of the following circumstances, that is to say–

(a) If the continuance of the existing par value hinders or is likely to hinder unduly, the achievement and maintenance of a high level of production, employment and real income and the full development of the productive resources of Sri Lanka, or results, or is likely to result, in a serious decline in the International Reserve of the Central Bank or in other utilizable external assets of Sri Lanka or if such decline cannot be prevented except by–

(i) a large scale increase in the external liabilities of Sri Lanka;

(ii) the persistent use of restrictions on the convertibility of the rupee into foreign currencies in settlement of current transactions; or

(iii) Undue or sustained Government assistance to one or more of the major export industries; or

(iv) Prolonged use of measures designed to restrict the volume of imports of essential commodities; or

(b) If the maintenance of the existing par value is producing, or is likely to produce, a persisting surplus in the balance of payments on current account and a monetary disequilibrium which cannot be adequately corrected by other Government or by Central Bank action authorized by this Act; or

(c) If uniform proportionate changes in the par values of currencies of its members are made by the International Monetary Fund, and upon such recommendation, the Minister in charge of the subject of Finance may, by Order published in the Gazette, amend, in accordance with the terms specified in such recommendation, any Order made under subsection (1).

(3) Any Order made under subsection (1) or subsection (2) shall cease to have effect after a period of ten days from the date of publication thereof, unless such Order is approved by Parliament within that period:

Provided however, that if Parliament is not in session on the date of publication of the Order, the Order shall cease to have effect after a period of ten days from the date of the next meeting of Parliament, unless such Order is approved by Parliament within that period.

Section 65. In determining its international monetary policy the Monetary Board shall endeavour to maintain the par value of the Sri Lanka rupee, or where no determination of such par value has been made under section 3, maintain such exchange arrangements as are consistent with the underlying trends in the country and so relate its exchange with other currencies as to assure its free use for current international transactions.

Section 66. (1) In order to maintain the international stability of the Sri Lanka rupee and to assure the greatest possible freedom of its current international transactions, the Monetary Board shall endeavour to maintain among the assets of the Central Bank an international reserve adequate to meet any foreseeable deficits in the international balance of payments.

(2) In judging the adequacy of the International Reserve, the Monetary Board shall be guided by the estimates of prospective receipts and payments of foreign exchange by Sri Lanka; by the volume and maturity of the Central Bank's own liabilities in foreign currencies; and, in so far as they are known or can be estimated, by the volume and maturity of the foreign exchange assets and liabilities of the Government and of banking institutions and other persons in Sri Lanka. So long as any part of the foreign currency assets of Sri Lanka are held in currencies which are not freely convertible by the Central Bank, whether directly or indirectly, into special drawing rights or such other common denominator prescribed by the International Monetary Fund or into foreign currencies freely usable in international transactions, or are frozen, the Monetary Board shall also take this factor into account in judging the adequacy of the International Reserve of the Central Bank.

Section 68. (1) Whenever the Monetary Board anticipates that there may develop a deficit in the international balance of payments of such magnitude as to cause a serious decline in the International Reserve, or whenever there is an imminent threat of a serious decline in the International Reserve, or whenever the International Reserve actually falls to a level which the board considers to be a threat to the international stability of the Sri Lanka rupee, or whenever international payments or remittances are being made which in the opinion of the board constitute an actual or a potential threat to such stability or are prejudicial to the national welfare, it shall be the duty of the board–

(a) To adopt such policies, and to cause such remedial measures to be taken, as are appropriate to the circumstances and authorized by this Act, and

(b) To submit to the Minister in charge of the subject of Finance a detailed report which shall include, as a minimum, an analysis of–

(i) The nature, causes, and magnitude of the actual or potential threat to the international stability of the Sri Lanka rupee; and

(ii) The measures which the board has already taken, and the further monetary, fiscal or administrative measures which it proposes to take or recommends for adoption by the Government.

(2) The Monetary Board shall submit further periodical reports to the Minister in charge of the subject of Finance until the threat to the international stability of the rupee has disappeared.

Section 3 (1) and (2) of the Monetary Law empower the Monetary Board, by a unanimous decision to recommend to the Minister with specified terms, to declare the par value of the Sri Lanka Rupee.

However according to the proviso to subsection (1) of section 3 of the Monetary Law, if the Monetary Board decides that the economic conditions do not warrant introducing par value, the said decision too may be communicated to the Minister.

As per the provisions in section 65 of the law it is the duty of the Monetary Board to maintain the international stability of the Sri Lanka Rupee and in order to maintain stability, there is a duty cast under Section 66 (of the said law) for the Monetary Board, to endeavour to maintain among the assets of the Central Bank an international reserve adequate to meet any foreseeable deficit in the international balance of payment.

Other than reporting and submitting periodic reports to the Minister when there is a potential threat to the international stability of Sri Lanka Rupee the Monetary Board is required under Section 68 (1) of the Monetary Law to adopt policies and remedial measures as are appropriate.

The case for the petitioners before this Court was that the Monetary Board as well as the Minister had failed to take correct decisions at the relevant time to float the rupee and thereby caused a loss to the Government.

As revealed before us, the exchange rate regime in Sri Lanka had gradually evolved from a fixed exchange regime in 1948 to an independently floating regime in 2002. However, at the time relevant to these applications Sri Lanka had a flexible exchange regime.

Export proceeds, worker remittances, tourist earnings, foreign direct investments, and foreign loans were the main sources of inflow to the country whereas import payments and loan repayments are the major outflows of foreign exchange.

One salient feature observed in our economy was the current account deficit due to the excessive outflow of foreign currency as opposed to the inflow of foreign exchange to the Country. In the said circumstances the exchange rate is expected to be an automatic adjuster under the flexible exchange rate regime, but if the exchange rate is to be maintained at a stable rate, then a depletion of reserves would take place as foreign exchange will have to be pumped to the market to meet the demand.

As revealed before us the average exchange rate was around Rs. 185.00 per US Dollar towards the end of 2019 and was fluctuating between Rs.180.00-200.00 during 2020-2021. According to the reports published by the Central Bank, the buying rate of the US Dollar between 29.04.2021 and 06.09.2021 was between Rs. 195.0848- Rs.198.9023, and the selling rate was between Rs. 199.8700- Rs.204.8977.

As observed by the Auditor General, few members of the Monetary Board and some high-ranking Central Bank officials were not supportive of maintaining a fixed exchange rate at the cost of the foreign reserves of the country and were of the view that the exchange rate should be decided by the supply and demand for foreign exchange.

The Auditor General had observed, that the Central Bank however had made efforts to control the exchange rate using moral suasion, which was confirmed before us by several respondents.

During the period 2019 and 2021 (especially after March 2020) Sri Lankan economy experienced a drop in foreign remittances by Sri Lankan workers abroad due to the COVID-19 pandemic. There was a significant drop in Foreign Direct Investment and the inflow of foreign earnings from export markets too.

As revealed before us, it appears that although the need was to retain the meagre remittances received and creating a conducive environment to enhance the inflow, the Finance Ministry and the Central Bank however worked towards maintaining the exchange rate at around Rs 200 which mainly benefitted the importers. This is amply reflected in the letter sent by the 38th respondent to the Governor (30th respondent) requiring the Central Bank to maintain the exchange rate at Rs 185, which would have contributed towards the outflow of foreign exchange rather than boosting the inflows. In the said letter (dated 23rd March 2020), the 30th respondent had been directed to "take immediate steps to stabilse exchange rate preferably around Rs 185/USD (commercial bank selling rate) to prevent uncertainties to the business community and unwarranted speculation." The 38th respondent, having given the said direction, has stated that the depreciation of the Sri Lanka Rupee will not help export promotion, import substitution and debt servicing. The said respondent in giving these directions stated that it was the President who directed him to take said measures referred to above.

The argument placed before us, in favour of not to depreciate the Sri Lanka Rupee was the additional fiscal burden that would result in debt servicing if the rupee was to depreciate. The Auditor General has opined, however, that it is a misconception that it would significantly increase the debt burden of the government due to the depreciation of the rupee. The comments of the Auditor General are reproduced below:

> "Therefore, comments that the external debt burden of the government has increased significantly due to the depreciation of the rupee are misinterpretation of facts. The comments that if such depreciation of the rupee did not arise, the government could have saved billions and this money could have been used for other mega developments projects are not correct. If the exchange rate is overvalued/appreciated especially for a country like Sri Lanka, which continues to record a budget deficit and imposes significant tariffs on foreign trade, the budget deficit would further expand and this would necessitate to borrow more from domestic and external sources to finance the budget deficit."

The Auditor General had referred to a meeting between the Governor and the licensed banks on 11th May 2021 where the banks had informed that due to the increase in imports and reluctance of exporters to convert foreign exchange, the outflow of foreign exchange remained high while inflows were low.

This matter was raised at the Monetary Board meeting held on the same day (i.e. on 11th May 2021) by the 30th respondent who chaired the meeting. He had informed the Board that the 10% conversion imposed on the exporters were insufficient and to enhance it to 25% in order to increase the liquidity situation in the forex market. Appointed member, Jayawardena (32B respondent) agreed with the said proposal but it was strongly objected to by the Secretary to the Treasury (31st respondent). The position he has taken at the said meeting was that, without ensuring the conversion of the 10 percent margin of exports, increasing the percentage of the conversion is futile. Appointed member Kumarasinghe (32nd respondent) too had agreed with the view expressed by the 31st respondent. At this stage 32B respondent whilst disagreeing with the 31st respondent had taken up the position, merely because 10% cannot be enforced, the decision to increase the margin to 25% should not be taken, is not rational. The 32B respondent has emphasised the importance of ensuring the enforcement while increasing the conversion percentage to an appropriate amount in order to improve the liquidity in the market; which was the most burning issue at that point of time.

In addition to the above discussion, the Monetary Board had made a strong plea to the 31st respondent to impose import duties on non-essential items or to agree to the Central Bank imposing LC margins on non-essential imports.

In this respect, a meeting was held at Temple Trees with the Prime Minister (2nd respondent) on 16th June 2021, to discuss the liquidity issues. The Central Bank had submitted a proposal to introduce LC margins, between 100%-150 % until 31st December 2021 as a temporary measure to resolve the liquidity crisis faced by the country. The 29th respondent as the State Minister of Finance (as he then was) had requested the Central Bank to implement the said proposal without delay.

However, even before the implementation of any decision of the Monetary Board, the 38th respondent addressing a letter to the 30th Respondent dated 21st June 2021 under the heading "Proposal to impose 150 percent deposit margin on letters of credit" had referred to the following matters:

> "Secretary to the Treasury has brought to my notice that despite his objection the members of Monetary Board are pursuing a proposal to impose a 150 percent deposit margin on letters of credit to curtail imports to manage international reserves. [..]"
> "Furthermore, Government policy initiatives has put significant emphasis to curtail imports through the encouragement of viable import substitution production activities with food production including dairy, grains, fish and dried fish, organic fertilizer manufacturing, essential drugs and vaccines, renewable energy sources, IT and enabling services which are on the top of the list. These import substitutions are being pursued through rigorous and front loaded policy initiatives and actions. The targeted import is around USD 17,000Mn. to keep trade deficit below USD 5,000Mn.

In this background, imposition of 150 percent deposit margin without clearly defined items being identified, may have serious repercussions on a much needed economic recovery in both domestic and in export industries and recreating employment and livelihood opportunities to the people."

Having referred to the above matter the 38th respondent had reproduced "Report on the Establishment of the Central Bank of Ceylon; Sessional paper XIV- explanatory note given to paragraph 08 in order to emphasize the importance of close working relation with the Government and had finally informed the 30th respondent in the final paragraph,

"Therefore, it is advisable that the Monetary Board refrains from the imposition of deposit margins on LC's without proper appraisal and approval of the Cabinet of Ministers."

We observe that the 38th respondent had generated the above letter neither on instructions nor on directions of the President as opposed to the letter of 23rd March 2020 referred to above. From the tenor of this letter (21st June 2021) it is apparent that the reason to generate this communication is the information conveyed to him by the 31st respondent. This Court also observes that this communication is a clear attempt by the 38th respondent to interfere with the functions of the Monetary Board / Central Bank without any authority whatsoever at a time the country was facing a major crisis due to lack of liquidity.

In this regard it is pertinent to note that at all times relevant to these applications, the Central Bank was placed as an institution coming within the purview of the Finance Minister and at no stage the portfolio of the Finance Minister was held by the President. In fact, the 38th respondent emphasises this fact in presenting his argument to counter the allegation that he interfered with the affairs of the Central Bank and/or the Monetary Board.

We further observe that the minutes of the Monetary Board meeting dated 07th July 2021 reveal that no approval to introduce LC margins as proposed by the Monetary Board had been received. The 30th respondent in his letter addressed to the 38th respondent on 13th July 2021 having described the circumstances under which the introduction of LC margins was proposed had confirmed that the said proposal was not given effect to as the Central Bank did not receive the approval of the Cabinet.

According to the reports of the Central Bank, there is a significant drop in foreign remittances from workers abroad and it came down from USD 580.9 million in January 2020 to USD 204.9 million in February 2022. However, a significant increase in the use of informal methods in transferring money such as Hawala / Undial by Sri Lankan workers abroad was observed mainly due to the high exchange rates offered in the "Gray market" compared to the exchange rate maintained by the Central Bank. Additional few rupees offered by the banks to encourage foreign remittances through the banking system showed no results.

As found out by the Auditor General, by April 2021 the Monetary Policy Committee (MPC) had observed the potential risks associated with foreign currency debt service payments and had recommended to take expeditious measures to attract financial flows through government intervention.

The Auditor General had not found in his report any meaningful decision taken by the Government to recover from this position until March 2022.

As further observed by the Auditor General under paragraph 3.1.35 of his report, the Central Bank, had maintained Sri Lanka Rupee at a static position using moral suasion for the period April 2021 to 5th September 2021 and 6th September 2021 to 7th March 2022. During this period the Central Bank had sold USD 1773.8 million and purchased USD 746.2 million from the Domestic Exchange Market making a net sale of USD 1,027.6 million. This outflow of USD had led to further depletion of the reserves.

There is also an observation by the Auditor General with regard to the interference by the 38th respondent P.B. Jayasundera in deciding the exchange rate even though he had absolutely no role to play under the Monetary Law. As observed in paragraph 3.2.1 there is reference to a discussion having taken place at the Monetary Board meeting on 21st April 2021 regarding carrying out a directive given by the 38th respondent to utilize 100 million USD out of a loan of 500 million USD received from the Chinese Development Bank. These monies were released mainly for the purpose of maintaining the rupee at the rate of Rs.192.00. The above instructions were given by the 38th respondent at a meeting where the Central Bank Officials were present at his office on 16th April 2021. They had been further instructed that in implementing the said directive, to issue to the two state banks USD 75 million each and the State Banks in turn had been instructed to sell USD 50 million at the domestic interbank Forex market at the rate of Rs.

192. Due to the above sale Sri Lanka Rupee appreciated to Rs 191.97 (on 19.04.2021) from Rs. 200 (on 12.04.2021). An appreciation by Rs. 8.03.

In this regard it is pertinent to note that on 20th April 2021, the 30th respondent in a note addressed to the 38th respondent had conveyed the observations of the Central Bank relating to the release of USD 150 million to two state banks and the appreciation of the rupee in the manner referred to above. According to these observations the sudden appreciation of the Rupee had resulted in an outflow of foreign exchange greater than the average customer foreign exchange outflows reported by the banks. Whereas outflows on 16th April 2021 remained at USD 92 million however, on 19th April 2021 it had increased to USD 137 million. They further observed that "CBSL is of the view that it will be utmost difficult to maintain the exchange rate at around Rs 192.00 levels immediately without allowing gradual appreciation of LKR in a sustainable manner while creating sizable FX inflows to the banking system to ensure the smooth behaviour of the domestic FX market with a view to curb an undue volatility in the exchange rate".

However, the response of the 38th respondent to these observations suggest that he disagrees with these views of the Central Bank. The 38th respondent in a note dated 27th April 2021 to the 30th respondent had observed that "I am of the view that the release of USD 150 million to two state banks have worked well to ease the undue market scarcity. Further, infusion could have stabilized the rate since a US $ 175 Mn is expected by AIIB by this week to enhance forex cover of the two state banks". He further observes that "however you seem to believe "gradualism" and "moral suasion" will stabilize the market. Since this is your subject, I do not wish to discuss this matter. However, I request a clarification as to how "gradualism" works and what and how the "moral suasion" is carried out by the CBSL to raise official reserve position of the country". Furthermore the 38th respondent had observed that "The management of external stability within Government Policy Framework is a responsibility of the Monetary Board and the Governor of the Central Bank of Sri Lanka".

Even though the Monetary Board was using moral suasion in controlling the depreciation of Sri Lanka Rupee, the Board had finally observed the danger in continuing it for a longer period and in the report submitted to the Finance Minister (2A respondent) under section 64 and 68 of the Monetary Law dated 14th April 2021 had stated that;

"Exchange rate adjustment: After following various types of exchange rate regimes in the world, we have moved to a flexible exchange rate regime since 2001, in which the rupee has been allowed to fluctuate according to market forces. Because of the extensive adverse side effects (on government debt, domestic price level, etc.) we have attempted over the last few months to maintain the exchange rate at around Rs. 202.00 per US dollar. To do this effectively for a long period of time, the Central Bank does not have the intervention strength in terms of reserves to be supplied to the market, and moral suasion on banks alone is unable to sustain exchange rate stability. If exchange rate stability could be maintained, it is better than continuous depreciation as it happened since late 1970s. To maintain such a policy;

a) The policies being taken to achieve a current account balance (if not a surplus) need to indicate a gradual success and

b) A large replenishment of reserves through a significant inflow of funds is needed.

If these do not take place, then some sacrifice in the exchange rate stability objective of the Government may have to be made."

However, no progress was made in achieving the recommendations made in order to protect the official reserves until the official reserves dropped to a point that it was only sufficient for two weeks of imports. Finally, the Monetary Board floated the exchange rate with effect from 08th March 2022 and informed the public that "greater flexibility in the exchange rate will be allowed to the markets with immediate effect. The Central Bank is also of the view that forex transactions would take place at levels which are not more than Rs. 230 per US dollar". The 29th respondent at a meeting of the CEOs of Licensed Commercial Banks and Licensed Specialised Banks on 9th March 2022 had stated that "certain trades may take place beyond the exchange rate stated by CBSL considering the greater flexibility that has been permitted". 32B respondent submitted that the above statement of the 29th respondent resulted in the sudden depreciation of the rupee between 225 to 364 (buying rate) and 229 to 377 (selling rate).

Within the statutory scheme of Monetary Law, the Central Bank is responsible for securing economic and price stability and mapping out the monetary policy. However, if a difference of opinion between the Minister of Finance and the Monetary Board exists as to whether the monetary policy of the Monetary Board is directed to the greatest advantage of the people, the Minister and the Board shall endeavour to reach an agreement. In the event such agreement cannot be reached, the Minister may direct the Board to follow the policy in accordance with the opinion of the Government. In such situations the Minister should inform the Board that the Government accepts the responsibility for adoption of such policy. According to the Auditor-General there had been no such direction made by the Minister in relation to the manner in which exchange rate should be determined. He had expressed the view that until the Minister makes such a direction, the Monetary Board has the statutory power to decide on this issue. However, the Monetary Board had not taken a decision on this matter until 08th March 2022.

The situation that prevailed at the Monetary Board and surrounding circumstances is reflected in the minutes of the Monetary Board meeting held on 04th August 2021. These minutes relate to the discussions of the Monetary Board on the Board Paper titled "Performance of Foreign reserve management activities for the six months ended on 30th June 2021". At this meeting 32C respondent (Ranee Jayamaha) had said "it is time for the Monetary Board to assess its own performance" and had noted that by law, the Monetary Board had been given instruments to deal with situations like what prevailed at that time and had further observed that "over the last one and half years the Monetary Board has only been debating about using these instruments". Further elaborating on this the 32C respondent had identified the "exchange rate" as one such instrument and had said that the Monetary Board did not use it. The 32C respondent had observed that "the exchange rate is fixed by moral suasion and it is currently at an unrealistic level with hardly any transactions taking place at that rate". She had further stated that the Monetary Board had not used these instruments given by the statute and thereby has brought the Central Bank reserves to a negative level. At the same meeting the 30th respondent (W.D.Lakshman) had observed that the government fears a political backlash due to the impact on the prices following an upward adjustment to the exchange rate. The DG(S) had observed that the Monetary Board and the Government must understand and act swiftly as time is very critical. He had further said that "these issues have been repeatedly brought to the attention of the Monetary Board by himself as well as by many departments over and over again and no tangible decisions have been taken by the Monetary Board". The 30th respondent had said that the 2A respondent (Basil Rajapaksa) is not in favour of any adjustment to the exchange rate, but agreed to discuss the issue with the other members of the Cabinet. However, the 29th respondent in his capacity as the State Minister, was strongly against any adjustment being made to the exchange rate.

This Court observes, that the Monetary Board is empowered to intervene and take necessary measures in the face of a deficit in the international balance of payment by virtue of the provisions in the Monetary Law and is also under a duty to report to the Minister the steps so taken by virtue of Section 68 of the said Law. When we consider the material placed before us, this Court did not, however, observe any proactive measures taken by the Monetary Board to the challenges it faced either in bolstering the foreign reserves or preserving the meagre foreign reserve the country had during the period in question. Considering the sequence of events, it appears that the Monetary Board had succumbed to the dictates of officials who had no authority to intervene in the affairs of the Central Bank. We were also privy to material that disclosed that a series of discussions had been held with a view to permit the exchange rate to be determined by market forces, supply and demand of USD, but we note with dismay that no positive steps were taken to implement a 'moderate method' to protect the reserves and stem the depletion when the need to do so was felt but waited till the 11th hour to take the decision to float the Sri Lanka Rupee, by which time the reserves had dipped to such critical level and reserves were barely sufficient only for the purchases required for two weeks.

There is no material before us to draw the conclusion that the Monetary Board had acted in terms of Section 3 of the Monetary Law regarding the determination of the par value of the Sri Lanka Rupee. What can be seen from the available facts is that the Monetary Board had taken steps to maintain the Rupee value through 'moral suasion' which does not appear to have been effective in stemming the depletion of foreign reserves.

Apart from the failures referred to on the part of the Monetary Board, which is a pivotal institution in shaping the monetary policy of the country, this Court also cannot condone the conduct of the 31st and 38th respondents. The 31st respondent (S.R.Attygalle) being a top level senior public servant, as the Secretary of the Treasury having the full knowledge of the bleak situation in which the economy of the country was, yet stood in the way of the Monetary Board taking decisions which might have had a positive effect on the fiscal position. We also note with dismay the conduct of the 38th respondent (P.B.Jayasundera) who appears to have had considerable clout on the public servants. From the material placed before us it is clear that he had interfered with the functions of the Monetary Board and had prevailed upon the decision making process of the Monetary Board. The directives he had given to the treasury officials and the Central Bank to use USD 100 million out of the USD 500 million loan received from the Chinese Bank and to maintain the par value of the Sri Lanka Rupee at Rs.192.00 as against the US Dollar and the directive on the Governor not to pursue the proposal to enhance the LC margin to 150 percent without Cabinet approval are two such instances, both of which are arbitrary and ultra vires of his powers.

In view of findings of this Court as elaborated hereinbefore, we observe that the Monetary Board (28th respondent) that has the statutory duty to take necessary initiatives regarding the par value and the exchange rate of the Sri Lanka Rupee and the power to determine international monetary policy, maintaining international stability of the Sri Lanka Rupee and to adopt necessary policies to cause remedial measures to remedy serious decline in the international reserves have failed to take meaningful measures in a timely manner. This inaction in our view breaches the public trust reposed on the 28th respondent. Furthermore, the arbitrary and irrational conduct of the 31st and 38th respondents as discussed hereinbefore had contributed to the aforementioned inaction of the 28th respondent. This conduct of the 31st and 38th respondents in our view breaches the public trust reposed in them.

CONCLUSION

When we considered these two applications, the main focus was on the economic situation of the country between November 2019 and April 2022. The reason for this focus was that the core issue the Court was invited to consider was whether the impact of the unprecedented economic crisis on the society resulted in the infringement of fundamental rights of the people and if so, whether any one or more of the respondents were responsible for such infringements due to their actions and / or inaction during this period, while holding office in executive and/or administrative branches of the Government. Many of the respondents argued that the root causes for this debacle spread well beyond this time period and therefore no responsibility could be attributed to these respondents in the manner alleged by the petitioners. They claimed that heavy borrowings of previous Governments and the mismanagement of such funds had a direct impact on the debt sustainability of the country. While we take note of this argument, in considering the responsibility of the respondents, our attention was drawn to the issue as to whether the conduct of the respondents during the relevant period directly contributed to the economic crisis.

In deciding this issue, we are of the view that the respondents ought to have known the factual situation that prevailed when they assumed public office and they should have fashioned their acts and efforts to ensure that the situation is not further aggravated but resolved. On assumption of public office, it was their duty to ensure that the existing issues were addressed and resolved in the best interest of the country and take every possible measure to avoid an aggravation to the detriment of the people.

Public trust reposed on them demands resolving of issues. Any conduct which is manifestly unreasonable, arbitrary or irrational that would lead to further aggravation of issues which are detrimental to the public, tantamount a breach of the trust bestowed on them. This is not the recognition of a 'new right' – a right to infallible decisions by the public authorities – but recognition of public officers requiring to discharge their duties to the satisfaction of their inherent core obligations, with due respect to the public trust reposed on them.

It is common ground that the country's economy deteriorated not overnight but over a period of time under consideration in the matters before us. It was evident from the material placed before us that the Gross Official Reserves and the Reserves of the Central Bank were depleted and had reached unprecedented low levels, creating a situation of which the effects were devastating on the entire citizenry without exception. The severe hardships the people had to suffer due to scarcities in essentials such as fuel, gas and medicines coupled with long hours of power shortages brought the lives of people to a standstill and the suffering the public had to undergo was undoubtedly immeasurable.

The respondents holding high public offices bestowed with powers which bear a direct impact on the lives of the people, we presume, were alive to the Directive Principles of State Policy and Fundamental Duties. They were duty bound to discharge in the manner spelt out in the directive principles in our Constitution.

"The directive principles of State policy are not wasted ink in the pages of the Constitution. They are a living set of guidelines which the State and its agencies should give effect to" per Prasanna Jayawardena, PCJ. in Ravindra Gunawaradane Kariyawasam v CEA, SC FR 141/2015 Sc minutes of 4.4.2019.

They cannot shirk their responsibilities by merely claiming that the decisions that were taken were "policy decisions" they were entitled to take. We note that Article 27 of the Constitution pledges a democratic socialist society the objectives of which include the realisation by all citizens of an adequate standard of living for themselves and their families including adequate food, clothing and housing, the continuous improvement of living conditions and the full enjoyment of leisure and social and cultural opportunities, which the public were deprived of during this unfortunate period due to mishandling of the economy when it was within the full power of the respondents to take meaningful action to prevent such a calamity. From the material placed before this Court it is as clear as can be, that the respondents had failed to act when they were not only put on notice but were fully alive to the predicament the country would face.

The respondents argued that they took all possible measures within their purview to remedy the situation. They further argued that the time period under consideration overlapped with the time period where serious challenges that resulted due to the COVID-19 pandemic that had to be overcome. As we have discussed hereinbefore, prolonged inaction due to arbitrary, irrational and/or manifestly unreasonable decisions and inadequate measures over the period under consideration had heavily contributed to disastrous consequences.

The following observations and/or comments as recorded in the minutes of the Monetary Board meeting held on 4th August 2021 shed light on the situation which prevailed at the relevant time. During the period between January and June 2021 – within a short period of six months - reserves of the Central Bank and Gross Official Reserves had decreased by 35 and 28 percent respectively. For the first time in the history of our country the net Central Bank foreign reserves recorded a negative balance of USD 78 million. As at 03rd August 2021 net Central Bank assets were negative by USD 124 million and net Gross Official Reserves remained at USD 155 million. The Deputy Governor (S) had observed that "Government does not have foreign exchange and the Gross Official Reserves has declined to critical levels, government has no rupees either, government is depending on the CBSL for the foreign exchange as well as rupees for its domestic and foreign financing and very soon the CBSL will be required to meet the obligations of state banks and state entities such as CPC as well. Sri Lanka cannot go to the international market and borrow, foreign governments are not lending to Sri Lanka because of the credit ratings of the country and its high default risk". The DG(N) had noted that the "Minister himself (2A respondent) stated that it is difficult to expect any sizeable funds coming into the country at this stage".

The above quote aptly depicts the bleak picture and the disastrous state of our economy even by August 2021.

It is also pertinent to observe that in deciding the issues before us, this Court while considering each matter separately, had to consider all matters together in a holistic manner to decide the core issue, whether there was any infringement of fundamental rights. The reason being, the matters we considered are intrinsically interwoven and a focus on issues in isolation would fail to capture reality. In this regard, we are mindful of one of the arguments of the petitioners that the purported imprudent decision brought about a domino effect and led to a series of events to which we paid attention. Such an event being the tax revision introduced in December 2019, which resulted in downgrading by rating agencies, depletion of foreign reserves, losing access to international financing institutions and single digit inflation spiralling to double digits. Additionally, the continued maintenance of an artificial exchange rate and the failure to reverse tax reliefs and seek assistance from the IMF in a timely manner collectively, contributed towards the rapid deterioration of the economy. The cumulative effect of the conduct of the respondents, in our view, is what contributed to the ultimate debacle. Gross Official Reserves which stood at USD 7,642 million by end 2019 had depleted to USD 155 million by August 2021. The scarcity of foreign exchange with the Government and the Central Bank brought about severe hardships to the people.

The trust reposed in the respondents was not a higher principle or epithet unique to their offices. 'Public trust' is an inherent responsibility bestowed on all officers who exercise powers which emanate from the sovereignty of the People. Therefore, as public officers, the respondents were obliged, at all times, to act in a manner which honoured the trust reposed in them. We are of the view that by the actions, omissions, decisions and conduct hereinbefore identified to have demonstrably contributed to the economic crisis and we are of the view that the 2nd (Mahinda Rajapaksa), 2A (Basil Rajapaksa), 28th (Monetary Board), 29th (Nivard Cabraal), 30th (W.D.Lakshman), 31st (S.R.Attygalle), 32nd (Samantha Kumarasinghe), 32A (Gotabaya Rajapaksa) and 38th (P.B.Jayasundra) respondents had violated the Public Trust reposed in them and we hold that they were in breach of the fundamental right to equal protection of the law ordained by Article 12(1) of the Constitution.

These petitioners both in applications SC FR 195/2022 and SC FR 212/2022 have invoked the fundamental rights jurisdiction of this Court in the interest of the public. We note that none of the petitioners are claiming any loss had impacted on the petitioners on an individual basis but their assertion is as a result of the conduct of the respondents the entire citizenry had to undergo hardships which could have been avoided. In the circumstances aforesaid, we are of the view that it would not be appropriate to order the respondents to pay compensation to the petitioners and as such we are not inclined to order compensation. We order however that each petitioner in both applications would be entitled to costs in sum of rupees 150,000.00 each.

Both the aforementioned applications were taken up together for hearing. Accordingly, one judgment is delivered in respect of both applications. I am afraid I am not in agreement with the majority judgment.

The petitioners in both applications stated that they filed the instant applications on behalf of their own interests and on behalf of the interests of the public.

SC/FR/Application No. 195/2022

The Fundamental Rights Application No. 195/2022 was filed on the 3rd of June, 2022 and an amended application was filed on the 18th of July, 2022.

In the said application, inter alia, the following persons were made respondents;

(a) The 2nd, 2A, and 2B respondents are the former Cabinet Ministers charged with the subject of Finance,
(b) The 3rd to the 27th respondents are the remaining members of the Cabinet of Ministers at the time the Cabinet made the decision to reduce taxes,
(c) The 28th respondent is the Monetary Board of the Central Bank. The 29th to 31st respondents are the former Governors of the Central Bank and the Secretary to the Treasury of the Republic, who were members of the 28th respondent. The 32nd respondent is a former appointed member of the 28th respondent,
(d) The 38th respondent is the former Secretary to the President,
(e) The 32A respondent is the former President of the Republic (hereinafter referred to as the "former President"), and the Head of State, Head of Executive, the Cabinet of Ministers, and the Government at the time material to this application.

Later, two members of the Monetary board were added as the 32B and 32C respondents. However, leave was not granted against them.

Facts averred in the SC/FR/Application No. 195/2022

In the said petition, under the heading "The petitioners' application in a nutshell", the petitioners stated that a significant economic hardship was faced by the citizens of the Republic, including high levels of inflation, the non-availability of vital resources, goods, commodities and other essential items, including fuel, liquid petroleum gas, medicine and food, and the dearth of foreign currency, all of which arose consequent to the mismanagement of the economy of the Republic by the respondents to the said application.

Furthermore, the acts of the 29th to 32nd respondents in their official capacities as members of the 28th respondent, by neglect and wilful default, caused loss and damage to the Central Bank of Sri Lanka and consequently, to the citizens of Sri Lanka at large.

The petitioners further stated that since 2008, the various governments of the Republic have increased their reliance on foreign sources for financing the debt of the Republic. Further, between the years 2015 and 2019, 46% of the Republic's fiscal debt was financed by foreign financing means. Consequently, the exposure to foreign debt commensurately increased.

Moreover, the policy decisions taken by consecutive governments resulted in the foreign debt owed by the Republic to foreign nations being almost equivalent to the local debt when the 1st respondent was appointed as the Prime Minister of the Republic in 2019.

Further, when the former President was elected in 2019 as the President of the Republic, the fiscal debt of the Republic had risen to a proportion as high as 86.6% of the Republic's GDP. Furthermore, he was also faced with increasing foreign debt.

The petitioners stated that the former President Gotabaya Rajapaksa published an election manifesto titled "Vistas of Prosperity and Splendour", containing several policy changes, inter alia, for the purpose of providing "emergency relief" to people and local ventures who were suffering under the policies of the previous government. Further, he promised to deliver a "new people-oriented policy on economics focused on reducing the cost of living and taxes imposed". Moreover, in the said Manifesto, the former President undertook to replace the Inland Revenue Act with a system that would achieve an economic revival of the country.

Further, after the former President assumed duties as the President of the Republic, the government reduced the taxes payable by the people of the country. Accordingly, the petitioners stated that the former President, together with the 2nd respondent, reduced the taxes for the sole purpose of delivering the election promises made. Hence, the decision to reduce taxes was purely politically motivated. Furthermore, due to the said reduction in taxation, the Republic suffered enormous and unprecedented economic damage.

The petitioners further stated that at the time the instant application was filed, the people of the Republic were facing unprecedented economic hardships, with extreme levels of inflation causing the prices of essential goods and services to increase at extreme rates. In particular, the petitioners stated that in April 2022, the price of essential goods had increased from the previous year. Thus, people are unable to buy basic commodities. Moreover, because of the high levels of inflation, a large portion of the public staged protests throughout the country.

Furthermore, the severity of the Republic's intentional depletion of foreign currency reserves under the watch of the 28th to the 32nd respondents, the 2nd and the 2A respondents and/or one or more of them is evident by default in servicing foreign debt.

The petitioners stated that the aforementioned circumstances, effecting the economic situation, can be attributed to the wilful mismanagement of the economy by the 38th, 2nd, 2A, and the 29th to the 32nd respondents, who were in control of the 28th respondent at the time material to the instant application.

Further, the petitioners stated that the 2B respondent, during his brief tenure as the Cabinet Minister of Finance of the Republic, provided in his speech a realistic and transparent overview of the state of the economy of the country on the 4th of May, 2022.

The petitioners further stated that it was only on the 25th of May, 2022 that they became aware of the acts perpetuated by the 29th to the 32nd, and 38th respondents, which caused the mismanagement of the economy of the Republic.

Moreover, the Central Bank of Sri Lanka is the apex body and authority of the Republic, responsible for the administration, supervision and regulation of the monetary, financial, and payment systems of Sri Lanka, and is charged with the duty of securing economic and price stability, as well as financial system stability, with a view to encouraging and promoting the development of productive resources belonging to the Republic. The 28th respondent is vested with the powers, duties, and functions of the Central Bank and is responsible for the management, operations, and administration of the Central Bank.

Accordingly, the 28th respondent failed and/or neglected to maintain an international reserve adequate to meet any foreseeable deficits in the international balance of payments, so as to maintain the international stability of the rupee, and thus acted in contravention of section 66 of the Monetary Law Act.

Furthermore, in January 2022, the Republic took steps to pay an International Sovereign Bond in a sum of US$ 500,000,000/-, notwithstanding the depleting foreign reserves available to the Republic.

Moreover, fixing the exchange rate to a value below Rs. 203 to the US$ caused loss and damage to the Central Bank of Sri Lanka and irreparable loss and damage to the citizens of the Republic.

The petitioners stated that, as far as the petitioners are aware, the 28th respondent has not sought to pursue any form of legal proceedings and/or disciplinary action against the 29th to 32nd respondents and/or any one or more of them, despite their contravention of the provisions of the Monetary Law Act and by wilful default and/or by misconduct causing loss and damage to the Central Bank of Sri Lanka.

The petitioners further stated that the actions and decisions of the former President, and/or the 2nd to 27th respondents, and/or the 28th to the 32nd respondents and/or the 33rd respondent and/or any one or more of them in mismanaging the economy of the Republic and failing to abide by the mandatory provisions of the Monetary Law Act have violated and/or imminently violated and/or continuously violated the Fundamental Right to equality and equal protection of the Law guaranteed to the petitioners and to the people of the Republic under Article 12(1) of the Constitution. Further, the said decisions violated the Fundamental Right to the freedom to engage by himself or in association with others in any lawful occupation, profession, trade, business or enterprise guaranteed to the citizens of the Republic under Article 14(1)(g) of the Constitution.

In the circumstances, petitioners prayed for the following;

(a) Grant Leave to Proceed with this Application;

(b) Declare that the Fundamental Right guaranteed to the petitioners under Article 12(1) of the Constitution is being imminently infringed and/or has been infringed and/or is continuously being infringed by the 1st to 32nd Respondents (save and except for the 2B Respondent) and/or the 33rd Respondent (in his representative capacity) and/or any one or more of the Respondents;

(c) Declare that the Fundamental Right guaranteed to the Petitioner under Article 14(1)(g) of the Constitution is being imminently infringed and/or has been infringed and/or is continuously being infringed by the 1st to 32nd Respondents (save and except for the 2B Respondent) and/or the 33rd Respondent (in his representative capacity) and/or any one or more of the Respondents;

(d) Declare that the Fundamental Right guaranteed to the Petitioner under Article 14(1)(g) of the Constitution is being imminently infringed and/or has been infringed and/or is continuously being infringed by the 28th, 29th, 31st and 32nd Respondent by causing the Republic to settle the International Sovereign Bond in January 2022 as evinced by P21(a);

Facts averred in the SC/FR Application No. 212/2022

The SC/FR Application No. 212/2022 was made on the 17th of June, 2022. Thereafter, an amended petition was filed on the 15th of July, 2022, naming, inter alia, the following respondents;

a) the 1(b) respondent is the former President of Sri Lanka and was the President of the Republic at all times material to the instant application,

b) the 2nd respondent is the former Prime Minister and the former Minister of Finance, inter alia, from the 21st of November, 2019 to the 2nd of March, 2020, from the 9th of August, 2020 to the 8th of July, 2021,

c) the 3rd respondent was the Minister of Finance from the 28th of July, 2021 to the 3rd of April, 2022,

d) the 6th respondent was the Governor of the Central Bank from December, 2019 to September, 2021 and the Chief Executive Officer of the Central Bank and the Head of the Monetary Board of the Central Bank,

e) the 7th respondent was the Governor of the Central Bank from the 15th of September, 2021 to the 4th of April, 2022 and the Chief Executive Officer of the Central Bank and the Head of the Monetary Board of the Central Bank,

f) the 9th respondent is the Monetary Board of the Central Bank of Sri Lanka which has the power to do and perform all such acts as maybe necessary for carrying out the duties under the Monetary Law Act,

g) the 10th respondent was the Secretary to the Ministry of Finance of Sri Lanka from the 20th of November, 2019 to the 7th of April, 2022.

The petitioners in SC/FR/Application No. 212/2022 stated that the former President and the 2nd, 3rd, 6th, 7th, 9th and 10th respondents made a series of irrational, arbitrary, patently illegal and wrongful decisions in complete dereliction of their statutory duties and fiduciary responsibility, for collateral and extraneous purposes, during the years 2019 to 2022. As a result, the petitioners and the public were denied their right to equality, equal protection of the law, and their right to life as guaranteed by the Constitution.

The petitioners further stated that the aforesaid series of irrational, arbitrary, patently illegal, and wrongful acts on the part of the former President and the 2nd, 3rd, 6th, 7th, 9th and 10th respondents resulted in catastrophic long-term and short-term ramifications to the economy, caused the country to default on the repayment of foreign debts for the first time in its history, and relegated Sri Lanka to declare bankruptcy.

Further, the actions and/or inaction and gross mismanagement of the economy by the former President of the Republic and the 2nd, 3rd, 6th, 7th, 9th and 10th respondents have resulted in an unprecedented economic crisis driven by debt unsustainability.

Moreover, the International Monetary Fund (hereinafter referred to as the "IMF"), in its IMF-Sri Lanka Staff Report for the 2021 Article IV Consultation dated 10th of February, 2022, categorised, for the first time, the sovereign debt of Sri Lanka as "unsustainable" in general and the external debt portfolio in particular. Thereafter, Sri Lanka issued a Notice of Default dated 12th of April, 2022 whereby Sri Lanka informed its creditors that all foreign debt repayments would be suspended, which included the following categories of debt;

(a) all outstanding series of bonds issued in international capital markets,
(b) certain bilateral (government to government) credit,
(c) all foreign-currency denominated loan agreements or credit facilities with commercial banks or institutional lenders, including those owned by foreign governments, and
(d) all amounts payable following a call during the said interim period upon a guarantee issued in respect of a debt of a third party.

Furthermore, on or around the 19th of May, 2022, Sri Lanka defaulted on loans that fell due and was downgraded by rating agencies as a defaulting nation.

The petitioners further stated that they invoked the Fundamental Rights jurisdiction of this court on the basis that the former President of the Republic and the 2nd, 3rd, 6th, 7th, 9th and 10th respondents, by a series of actions commencing from 2019 and continuing to date, including acts that have necessitated the defaulting of Sovereign debt, have infringed and/or violated and continue to infringe and/or violate the Fundamental Rights of the petitioners and of all citizens of Sri Lanka.

Moreover, at the Committee on Public Enterprises (COPE) meeting held on or about the 25th of May, 2022, it transpired that the actions of the said respondents, inter alia, the RFI facility (Rapid Financing Instrument) of the IMF and the management of the rupee, had engendered the present crisis.

Further, the petitioners stated that the actions and/or inactions of the former President of the Republic and the 2nd, 3rd, 6th, 7th, 9th and 10th respondents can be broadly categorised as follows;

(i) the illegal, arbitrary and unreasonable abolition, removal and/or reduction of taxes effected in the year 2019 and the consequent reduction in government revenue,

(ii) the refusal to change the aforesaid illegal, irrational and arbitrary decisions to reduce taxes despite the consequent downgrading of Sri Lanka's credit rating and the emergence of the COVID-19 Pandemic,

(iii) the failures and/or omissions to take remedial measures subsequent to rating downgrade caused, inter alia, by the illegal, arbitrary and unlawful actions of the 2nd, 3rd, 6th, 7th, 9th and 10th respondents,

(iv) the refusal and failure of the 2nd, 3rd, 6th, 7th, 9th and 10th respondents to ensure conditions were met in a manner that would permit Sri Lanka to avail itself of the sum of money agreed to be given to Sri Lanka by the IMF in terms of the Extended Fund Facility agreement as set out hereinafter,

(v) the failure to obtain available aid to combat the economic hardships faced as a consequence of COVID-19, especially in the face of a lack of government revenue,

(vi) the failure to act in terms of the Monetary Law of Sri Lanka, to maintain international reserves and the international stability of the rupee,

(vii) the failure to devalue the Sri Lankan rupee in a timely, orderly and appropriate manner, despite widespread calls and demands to do so,

(viii) the failure and/or omissions to appropriately devalue the rupee which resulted in fluctuations in worker remittances, and subsequently, the country's foreign reserves and Sri Lanka's balance of payment,

(ix) the decision to continue to service Sovereign debt without any restructuring, despite the futility and grievous prejudice in doing so,

(x) the continued refusal to seek the assistance of the IMF, despite widespread calls and demands to do so,

(xi) the subsequent admission by the former President of the Republic that the aforementioned refusal to seek the assistance of the IMF was wrong and misconceived, and

(xii) the unreasonable, arbitrary actions and / or omissions which resulted in a default of the country's foreign debt.

As such, the petitioners stated that the aforementioned respondents are directly responsible, inter alia, for the unsustainability of Sri Lanka's foreign debt, its default on foreign loan repayments, and the current state of the economy of Sri Lanka, and must be held accountable for the illegal, arbitrary and unreasonable acts and/or omissions that culminated in the above.

Thus, the respondents have violated the Fundamental Rights guaranteed to the citizens of Sri Lanka under Articles 12(1) and 14(1)(g) of the Constitution.

In the circumstances, the petitioners prayed for the following;

1. Grant the petitioners, Leave to Proceed;

2. Declare that the Fundamental Rights of the Petitioners and / or the citizens of Sri Lanka to Equality and Equal Protection of the Law, as guaranteed by Article 12 (1), 14(1)(g) and 14A of the Constitution, have been infringed by the 1(b) Respondent and the 2nd, 3rd, 6th, 7th, 9th and 10th Respondents, and/or their servants or their agents, and that there is a continuing violation of their said rights;

[emphasis added]

Main issues raised by the petitioners in both applications are as follows;

The grounds urged by the petitioners can be broadly set out as follows;

(i) the introduction of tax cuts and the failure to reverse them,

(ii) delay in seeking assistance from the IMF,

(iii) the decision by the Monetary Board not to float the rupee, and thereafter floating the same without any safeguards, and

(iv) the pay out of International Sovereign Bond of US$ 500 million on the 18th of January, 2022.

Granting of leave to proceed by the Supreme Court

After the aforementioned applications were supported in court by the counsel for the petitioners and after the hearing of the counsel for the respondents, the court made the following Orders on the 7th of October, 2022;

> "The court is inclined to grant leave to proceed in both applications for alleged violations of Fundamental Rights guaranteed under Articles 12(1) and 14(1)(g) of the Constitution. Accordingly, leave to proceed is granted for the said violations in terms of Article 126(2) of the Constitution in both applications.

Court made the following orders in SC/FR/195/2022:

1. Leave to proceed is granted against 2nd, 2A, 2B, 3rd to 27th, 28th to 32nd, 32A and 38th respondents;

2. In view of Court's decision to grant leave to proceed against the 28th respondent board and the fact that two of former Governors of the Central Bank and two of the members who served in the 28th respondent board during the period relevant to this application have been cited as respondents in this application, Court is of the view that the remaining members of the 28th respondent board who served during the said period should also be made respondents.

   Hence, petitioners are directed to add Dr. Sanjeewa Jayawardane P.C and Dr. Ranee Jayamaha who are current members of the 28th respondent board, as 32B & 32C respondents. Petitioners are further

3. 34th respondent - Auditor General - is directed to conduct an audit upon examining all relevant material and submit a report on the following:
    a. the decision made by the 28th respondent (Monetary Board) to set the value of the Sri Lankan Rupee at or around 203/- as against the US Dollar and all matters connected to the said decision;
    b. the delay in seeking facilities from the IMF by the Republic;
    c. all matters relating to the settlement of International Sovereign Bond/s to the value of US$ 500 million on 18.01.2022, utilising foreign reserves;

The said report should comprise observations, including whether any loss has been caused to the Central Bank due to one or more of the three matters referred to above. 34th respondent is further directed to submit to this court the report titled "Special Audit Report on Financial Management and Public Debt Control in Sri Lanka 2018-2022" dated 4th July 2022.

34th respondent is further required to comply with the above directions not later than 2nd January 2023;

4. 28th respondent - The Monetary Board of the Central Bank of Sri Lanka - is directed to produce all documents, relating to matters referred to by Dr. Sanjeewa Jayawardane P.C and Dr. Ranee Jayamaha, at the meeting of the Committee on Public Enterprise held on 25.05.2022, specifically;
    a. the suggestion said to have been made, that the Republic should seek relief and / or other financial assistance from the International Monetary Fund,
    b. objection to and/or otherwise disagreement expressed regarding the artificial maintenance of exchange rate of the Sri Lankan Rupee at / or at a level below 203/- as against the US Dollar.

Said documents are required to be submitted to this Court not later than 30th November 2022

5. Petitioners are directed to issue notices through the Registrar of this Court on all the respondents against whom leave to proceed is granted and 32B and 32C respondents within one week of filing the further amended caption as per the direction (2) above.*

6. Registrar is directed to communicate this order to the 28th and 34th respondents forthwith.*

7. Leave to proceed is granted against 1(b), 2nd, 3rd, 6th, 7th, 9th and 10th respondents;

8. 8th respondent - Governor of the Central Bank - is directed to produce copies of communications and recommendations given to the 1(b), 2nd, 3rd, 6th, 7th, 9th and 10th respondents by the Central Bank with regard to the matters impugned in this application during the time material to this application, not later than 30th November 2022;*

9. 9th respondent - The Monetary Board of the Central Bank of Sri Lanka - is directed to produce copies of all reports given to the 2nd and 3rd respondents in terms of sections 64 and 68 of the Monetary Law Act, No 37 of 1974, during the time relevant to this application, not later than 30th November 2022*

10. Petitioners are directed to issue notices through the Registrar of this Court on all the respondents against whom leave to proceed is granted within one week.*

11. Registrar is directed to communicate this order to the 8th and 9th respondents, forthwith…"

Objections filed by the respondents

Thereafter, the 28th, 32B, 32C, 29th to 34th, 38th and 39th respondents of SC/FR Application No. 195/2022 and the 1(a), 2nd, 3rd, 6th, 7th, 9th, 10th and 11th respondents of SC/FR Application No. 212/2022 filed objections denying responsibility with regard to the allegations set out in both petitions and proceeded to justify their actions during the time material to the instant application. Further, some of the respondents raised the following objections to the maintainability of the instant applications;

(a) the Applications are misconceived in law,

(b) the subject matter of both the applications relates to policy of the government and thus, this Court has no jurisdiction to hear and determine the said applications,

(c) the reliefs sought in both the Applications are beyond the scope of the Fundamental Rights jurisdiction of this Court and contrary to the doctrine of Separation of Powers enshrined in Articles 3 and 4 of the Constitution,

(d) there is no evidence whatsoever to show that the respondents have carried out any act ultra vires or in violation of any law during their tenure,

(e) the petitions do not disclose any specific infringement of any particular Fundamental Right of the petitioners by any particular executive or administrative act within the meaning of the Constitution,

(f) the petitioners have not disclosed whether they are citizens of Sri Lanka in the petition and therefore, are not entitled to any relief prayed for in terms of Article 14(1)(g) of the Constitution,

(g) institutional incapacity,

(h) the doctrine of political question and judicially discoverable and manageable standards,

(i) the applications are out of time and ought to be dismissed in limine in terms of Article 126(2) of the Constitution,

(j) the Parliament of Sri Lanka has now appointed a Select Committee to look into the same matters that have been urged by the petitioners in both the Applications, and therefore this court has no jurisdiction to entertain the applications.

Did the respondents violate the Fundamental Rights of the petitioners by introducing tax cuts and thereafter failing to revive them?

Events Leading to the Introduction of the New Tax Policy

The 32A respondent (in SR/FR/195/22 application) and the 1(b) respondent (in SR/FR/212/22 application), the former President published an election manifesto titled "Vistas of Prosperity and Splendour", containing several policy changes, inter alia, for the purpose of providing "emergency relief" to the people and local ventures who were suffering under the previous government's policies. Further, he promised to deliver a "new people oriented policy on economics focused on reducing the cost of living and taxes imposed".

The said Manifesto stated;

> "The prevailing tax system has contributed to the collapse of the domestic economy by entirely discouraging domestic entrepreneur. We would instead, introduce a tax system that would help promote production in the country.
>
> The current Inland Revenue Act will be replaced by a new tax law. A new taxpayer friendly simple tax system will be introduced so that it will remain active for several years without changing haphazardly and frequently."

Thus, a new tax regime with the following would be introduced;

(a) Income tax on productive enterprises will be reduced from 28 to 18 percent,

(b) The Economic Service Charge (ESC) and Withholding Tax (WHT) will be scrapped,

(c) A simple value added tax of 8 percent will be introduced replacing both the current VAT of 15 percent and the Nation Building Tax (NBT) of 2 percent,

(d) PAYE tax will be scrapped and personal income tax will be subject to a ceiling of 15 percent,

(e) A five year moratorium will be granted on taxes payable by agriculturists and small and medium enterprises,

(f) Various taxes that contribute to the inefficiency, irregularities, corruption and lack of transparency of the tax system will be abandoned. Instead, a special tax will be introduced for different categories of goods and services,

(g) Import tariff on goods competing with domestically produced substitutes will be raised,

(h) A simple taxation system will be introduced to cover annual vehicle registrations and charges for relevant annual services, replacing the cumbersome systems that prevails now,

(i) Various taxes imposed on religious institutions will be scrapped,

(j) A zero VAT scheme will be adopted in the case of businesses providing services to Tourist hotels and tourists, if they purchase over 60% of the food, raw materials, cloths and other consumer items locally,

(k) Service charges levied on telephones and Internet will be reduced by 50%,

(l) Special promotional schemes will be implemented to encourage foreign investments,

(m) A tax free package will be introduced to promote investment in identified subject areas,

(n) A clear and uncomplicated system of taxing will be in place with the use of internet facilities, special software and other technological services,

(o) Information Technology (IT) services, will be totally free from taxes (Zero Tax), considering said industry as a major force in the national manufacturing process,

(p) All the Sri Lankans and Foreigners, who bring foreign exchange to Sri Lanka through consultancy services are exempted from income tax."

At the Presidential Elections held on the 16th of November, 2019, the former President was elected by the people, by a majority vote, as the President of the Republic.

On the 21st of November, 2019, the 2nd respondent was appointed as the Minister of Finance. Thereafter, the former President forwarded a note to the Cabinet of Ministers dated 26th of November, 2019 under the heading "An Economic Revival Initiative". It stated, inter alia, that the tax system of the country will be restructured as follows;

"As a matter of priority, I recommend the implementation of following measures pending parliamentary approval for amendments to the relevant tax statutes.

(i) Replace the 15 per cent VAT and 2 per cent NBT on Goods and Services at 8 per cent with effect from 1st December, 2019.

(ii) VAT on banking, financial services and insurance to be maintained at 15 per cent and NBT on such services to be removed along with the proposal No. 1.

(iii) Tax free threshold for turnover for VAT to be raised from Rs. 1 Mn per month to Rs. 25 million per month or Rs. 300Mn per annum along with the implementation of proposal 1 to provide immediate relief particularly to small and medium businesses in all sectors in the economy.

(iv) Tourism business will be treated as export for zero rate provided that 60 per cent of turnover is sourced from local supplies. Tourism industry will be beneficial to local agriculture and locally made manufacturing businesses.

(v) Construction Industry to be placed on 14 per cent income tax instead of 28 per cent.

(vi) Farm income from agriculture, fishing & livestock to be made income tax free to motivate those engaged in agricultural farming including fish and livestock farming to get the maximum production from the already commenced 2019/2020 Maha season which has been blessed by favourable weather.

(viii) Pay As You Earn (PAYE) taxes to be removed for these earnings on all inclusive monthly income of Rs. 250,000/= in place of current ceiling of Rs. 125,000/= per month for all public and private sector employees with effect from 1st January 2020.

(ix) Withholding Tax on interest income to be removed for those monthly interest income less than Rs. 250,000/=.

(x) Monthly income in excess of Rs. 250,000/- in any source of income will be liable to pay personal income tax at progressive weights of 6 per cent, 12 per cent, 18 per cent for every Rs. 250,000/= tax slabs.

(xi) Sri Lankans providing professional services for the receipt of foreign currency, the foreign currency earnings to be exempted from income tax with effect from 1st December 2019.

(xii) IT and enabling services to be made tax free from all taxes.

(xiii) Telecommunication Levy to be reduced by 25 per cent.

It is possible that the proposed measures will have some reduction in revenue. However, potential benefits from re-engineering the tax system will eventually revive revenue.

As it will take some time to recoup Government revenue, it is necessary to go-slow on public spending in order to manage fiscal imbalances. I urge the line Ministries and agencies to curtail all non-essential and non-priority expenditure including those spent on vehicles, travel, building, facilities etc. The Government expenditure including those incurred by semi-Government agencies and SOEs should also decline as taxes on goods and services are to be lower.

Therefore, I request the Minister of Finance, Economy & Policy Development to take appropriate action to implement this programme."

[emphasis added]

At the Cabinet meeting held on the 27th of November, 2019, the Cabinet Paper No.19/3337/201/001 and a Note to the Cabinet dated 26th of November, 2019, by the former President on "An Economic Revival Initiative" were considered, along with the "desirability of the immediate impact on the economy and the well-being of the people" in the country. After discussion, the Cabinet of Ministers decided, inter alia;

"1) to grant approval-

(a) to implement the proposals as stated in the above Note by the President;

(b) for the implementation of the proposals to cut taxes pending Parliamentary approval;

2) to instruct the Legal Draftsman to draft amending legislation for the respective laws and legislation for new laws to implement the said proposals in the above Note;

3) to direct the Secretary, Ministry of Finance, Economy and Policy Development

(i) to take expeditious action for the implementation of the decision,

(ii) to submit the draft legislation prepared by the Legal Draftsman together with the clearance of the Attorney General for the same, to the Cabinet through the Minister for consideration, and

(iii) to issue circular instructions to all Secretaries to Ministries and other relevant authorities, to curtail all non-essential and non-priority expenditure."

On the 4th of December, 2019, the former Minister of Finance, the 2nd respondent, submitted a Memorandum to the Cabinet of Ministers with the heading "National Policy Framework of the Government: A Reconstructed Country with a Future Vistas of Prosperity and Splendour".

In the said Memorandum, it was stated that the former President "took office as the 7th Executive President of the Republic on the 18th of November, 2019". In his manifesto, it was stated;

> "Gotabaya Presents to you a Reconstructed Country with a Future, Vistas of Prosperity and Splendour."

It was further stated that "the President's objective was to convert the above manifesto into a reality and achieve the outcome forthwith. Hence, it was imperative for all Ministries, Departments, Public Institutions, Provincial Councils and Local Authorities etc. to accept the above manifesto as the national policy framework of the government in their functions and duties and take maximum effort to make it a reality".

Having considered the said Memorandum, the Cabinet of Ministers granted approval to accept "A Reconstructed Country with a Future-Vistas of Prosperity and Splendour" as the national policy framework of the government.

Thereafter, on the instructions of the Minister of Finance, the Commissioner General of Inland Revenue published notices in the newspapers informing the public of the reduction of taxes and the new taxes that were to be implemented, subject to the approval of Parliament.

It is pertinent to note that, at the time of the implementation of the said taxes, Parliament had not enacted the necessary legislation to implement the newly introduced taxes.

Thereafter, the General Election was held on the 5th of August, 2020 to elect the members of Parliament. At the said election, Sri Lanka Podujana Peramuna (SLPP) won the majority seats in Parliament and formed a government. At the inaugural meeting of the ninth (9th) Parliament held on the 9th of August, 2020, the former President stated in his Policy Statement, inter alia;

> "To develop the country, the right vision and plans are needed. The Policy statement, "Vistas of Prosperity and Splendour", placed before the people at the Presidential Election by me contains a national programme that was crafted during a period of nearly four years by incorporating my vision with the ideas and recommendations of national organisations such as Viyathmaga, the findings of the "Conversation with the Village" programme conducted by the Sri Lanka Podujana Peramuna, the discussions held with other political parties, and the ideas contributed by the general public.
>
> In accordance with that programme, we have already taken several steps including the easing of taxes that were unduly burdening the public, introducing a high degree of transparency and efficiency to the Government administration, and curtailing unnecessary Government expenditure.
>
> After we assumed office, we provided tax concessions targeting local entrepreneurs. Interest rates were brought down to encourage businesses. Competitive imports were restricted in order to protect local entrepreneurs and industrialists."
>

Further, such reductions were detailed by the 2nd respondent during the Budget Speech made on the 17th of November, 2020, for the year 2021. At the aforementioned Budget Speech, the 2nd respondent stated as follows;

> "(a) As stated in "Vistas of Prosperity and Splendour", the government simplified the tax policy with effect from January 2020 in order to better facilitate tax payers and to make the tax administration more efficient;
> (b) I propose to maintain the VAT unchanged at 8 percent, for businesses with a turnover of more than Rs. 25 million per month engaged in the import and manufacture of goods or provision of services, except in the case of banking, financial and insurance sectors;

Personal Income Tax will apply on earnings from employment, rent, interest, dividends or any other source only if it exceeds Rs.250,000 per month. Withholding tax on rent, interest or dividends and the PAYE tax (Pay As You Earn) and taxes on interest have been abolished;"

Furthermore, the 2nd respondent proposed to effect further reductions in taxes in the aforementioned Budget Speech, in the following manner;

(a) Individuals and companies engaged in farming, including agriculture, fisheries and livestock farming will be exempted from taxes in the next 5 years. Earnings from both domestic and foreign sources by those engaged in businesses in Information Technology and enabling services and also their earnings when made while being resident or non-resident will also be exempted from income taxes,

(b) So as to promote the listing of local companies with the Colombo Stock Exchange, I propose to provide a 50 percent tax concession for the years 2021/2022 for such companies that are listed before 31 December 2021 and to maintain a corporate tax rate of 14 percent for the subsequent three years,

(c)I propose to simplify the Taxes on Capital Gains, where such taxes will be calculated based on the sale price of a property or the assessed value of a property whichever is higher. I propose to exempt the tax on dividends of foreign companies for three years if such dividends are reinvested on expansion of their businesses or in the money or stock market or in Sri Lanka International sovereign bonds,

(d) In order to promote the Colombo and Hambanthota ports as commodity trading hubs in international trading, and to encourage investments in bonded warehouses and warehouses related to offshore business I propose to exempt such investments from all taxes."

Moreover, the new government took steps to enact new legislation with retrospective effect in respect of the tax cuts introduced after the said Presidential election.

Accordingly, the approval of the Cabinet of Ministers was obtained to enact the said legislation, and the Legal Draftsman drafted the necessary Bills.

On the 12th of March, 2021, the Minister of Finance presented to the Cabinet of Ministers a Cabinet Paper No.21/0475/304/033-1 under the heading "Implementation of New Tax Proposals", which was considered by the Cabinet of Ministers along with Cabinet decisions dated 26th of August and 27th of November, 2019 and the certificates issued by the Attorney General inferring Article 77(1) of the Constitution with regard to the constitutionality of the draft Bills.

After discussion, the Cabinet of Ministers decided to grant approval to publish the necessary Bills in the government *Gazette*s, subject to the amendments proposed by the Attorney General, and to place them in Parliament in order to enact the necessary fiscal legislation to reduce taxes. Accordingly, the said Bills were published in the government Gazettes and tabled in Parliament.

It is pertinent to note that after the said Bills were tabled in Parliament, the Value Added Tax Bill and the Inland Revenue (Amendment) Bill were challenged in the Supreme Court under Article 121(1) of the Constitution. After the hearing, the Supreme Court determined that the said Bills can be passed in Parliament, subject to the amendments suggested by the court.

Paragraph 2.9.2 of the Auditor General's Report stated;

"The following matters are included in the Road map 2020 delivered by the Governor of the Central Bank, Prof. W D Lakshman on 06 January 2020.

a) Recent tax reform initiatives constitute a much needed transformation of country's tax system towards greater simplicity. The already announced tax relief measures are expected to stimulate the economy while actively contributing to improve business confidence. Any revenue shortfall due to the changes in taxes announced recently is expected to be largely offset by action taken to eliminate unproductive current expenditures and to priorities capital expenditure.

b) It is expected that the fiscal consolidation path remains intact and level of public debt stock remains sustainable.

c) The central Bank will continue to allow greater flexibility in determining the exchange rate based on market forces and will allow the exchange rate to act as shock absorber in the envisaged monetary policy framework. Accordingly, Central Bank's intervention in the domestic foreign exchange market will be limited only to curtail any excessive volatility in the exchange rate.

d) The continuation of the EFF program with the IMF is likely to be instrumental in supporting external sector stability in the medium term. A sustained improvement in the external sector requires policies aimed at promoting domestic production and exports of goods and services and inflows of the non-debt creating types.

e) External borrowing contributes to widen the deficit in the external current account further. In addition, the increased foreign debt service payments drain the country's international reserves, which serve as a buffer for external shocks. Therefore, while fiscal consolidation efforts continue, it is important to maintain the current account deficit in the balance of payments at sustainable levels by strengthening the trade sector."

Fiscal Policy

Fiscal policy consists of the government's income and spending, which influence economic conditions, especially macroeconomic conditions such as demand for goods and services, employment, inflation, and economic growth. Further, fiscal policy is decided by the government. During a recession, governments may lower tax rates or increase spending to encourage demand and increase economic activity. Tax cuts boost demand by increasing disposable income and by encouraging businesses to hire and invest more. In contrast, tax increases do the reverse. Thus, to combat inflation, governments raise taxes or cut government spending to stabilise the economy.

Economic activity reflects a balance between what people, businesses, and governments want to buy and what they want to sell. When the economy is weak, governments try to boost consumer and business demand by cutting interest rates or purchasing financial securities. Further, such demand is boosted by increasing spending and cutting taxes. Tax cuts increase household demand by increasing workers' take-home pay. Moreover, it can boost business demand by increasing the after-tax cash flow of business enterprises, which can be used to pay dividends, expand activity, recruit new employees, expand investments, etc.

The effect of tax cuts depends on the sensitivity of households and businesses. Further, households divide increased income between consumption and saving, and businesses choose to hire and invest more. Tax cuts are expected to free up disposable income and the circulation of money in the economy and push positive growth values in the medium and long term. Furthermore, reducing taxes improves the economy by boosting spending. Moreover, a corporate income tax cut leads to a sustained increase in Gross Domestic Product (GDP) and productivity. Tax cuts also increase funding available for businesses and may increase production and investment.

Moreover, high taxes discourage work and investment. Taxes create a "wedge" between what the employer pays and what the employee receives, so some jobs are not created. High marginal tax rates also discourage people from working overtime or from making new investments. However, tax cuts reduce government revenue and lead to budget deficits or growth in government debt.

In his first address to the Congress on the 28th of February, 2001, George W. Bush said, "To create economic growth and opportunity, we must put money back into the hands of the people who buy goods and create jobs."

Do courts interfere with the fiscal policy of the government?

The petitioners alleged that the reduction of taxes by the government was a contributing factor to the economic crisis. In particular, the petitioners complained of the following three acts and/or inactions related to taxation, i.e.,

(i) arbitrary tax reductions based on the election manifesto without adequate consideration as to the consequences of such reductions,

(ii) failure to make and/or recommend timely changes to tax policy despite clear evidence as to the failure of the said policy and of the negative effects of such tax policy, and

(iii) arbitrary financial decisions without obtaining or giving effect to the advice of the Central Bank and without adequate plans or forecasts as to the result of the said decisions.

Article 148 of the Constitution reads as follows;

> "*Parliament shall have full control over public finance. No tax, rate or any other levy shall be imposed by any local authority or any other public authority except by or under the authority of a law passed by Parliament or of any existing law."
>

Hence, it is clear that the taxes which fall within the scope of public finance comes within the purview of Parliament. A similar view was expressed in the determination of the Value Added Tax (Amendment) Bill (2016) S.C. (S.D.) No. 30/2016 to S.C. (S.D.) No. 33/2016, where it was observed;

> "Article 148 makes it mandatory that no tax, rate or any other levy shall be imposed by any local authority or any other public authority, except by or under the authority of a law passed by Parliament or of any existing law.
> Accordingly, Article 152 is a special provision dealing with the manner in which a Bill affecting public revenue shall be introduced in Parliament."

8th of April, 2022 Surcharge tax was introduced

Surcharge Tax Act, No. 14 of 2022

Further, the Telecommunication Levy was reduced from 15% to 11.25% by a Gazette Notification with effect from the 1st of December, 2019. Moreover, on or about the 6th of December, 2019, concessionary rates and exemptions were granted for the importation of some items.

Thus, it is evident that the said fiscal legislation was passed in Parliament under Article 148 of the Constitution with retrospective effect.

Legislative Power of Parliament

Enacting legislation is the function of Parliament in terms of and under Chapters X and XI of the Constitution.

Article 1 of the Constitution states that Sri Lanka is a Free, Sovereign, Independent and Democratic Socialist Republic. Further, Article 3 states that the sovereignty is in the People and is inalienable. Article 4 states how the said sovereignty of the People is exercised and enjoyed.

Accordingly, the legislative power is exercised by Parliament and by the People at a Referendum, the executive power, including the defence of the Republic, is exercised by the President, and the judicial power is exercised by Parliament through courts, tribunals, and institutions created and established, or recognised, by the Constitution or created and established by law, except in regard to matters relating to the privileges, immunities, and powers of Parliament and of its Members, wherein the judicial power of the People may be exercised directly by Parliament according to law.

A critical analysis of the Constitution shows that there is a separation of powers between the legislature, executive and the judiciary. Therefore, the aforementioned three organs act independently from each other in their own sphere. Hence, none of the said organs of the State have authority to supervise or interfere with the other organs except as permitted by law.

It is pertinent to note that while Article 118 of the Constitution deals with the general constitutional jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, Articles 120, 121 and 122 refer to the ordinary and special exercise of the constitutional jurisdiction in respect of parliamentary Bills. Further, Article 123 has conferred jurisdiction on the Supreme Court to determine any question as to whether any Bill or any provision thereof is inconsistent with the Constitution. In addition to the aforementioned powers, Article 124 of the Constitution has conferred jurisdiction on the Supreme Court to determine the legislative process in respect of Bills.

Post legislative review and the jurisdiction of courts

Article 80(3) of the Constitution reads as follows;

> "Where a Bill becomes law upon the certificate of the President or the Speaker, as the case may be, being endorsed thereon, no court or tribunal shall inquire into, pronounce upon or in any manner call in question, the validity of such Act on any ground whatsoever."
>

Accordingly, Article 80(3) of the Constitution has ousted the jurisdiction of courts and tribunals in considering the validity of the Acts passed by Parliament once they are certified by the President of the Republic or the Speaker of Parliament.

Legislative Process

Our Constitution and the Standing Orders of Parliament provides to present two types of Bills in Parliament. Namely, Private Member's Bills and government Bills. (Only government Bills are discussed in this judgment) A government Bill is initiated by the line Ministry, and the Minister in charge of the subject presenting a Memorandum to the Cabinet of Ministers setting out the policy and the justification to enact legislation and seeking approval from the Cabinet of Ministers to enact the necessary legislation, and to request the Legal Draftsman to draft the Bill. If the Cabinet of Ministers consents to the enacting of the law, they will authorise the line Ministry to request the Legal Draftsman to draft the necessary legislation.

Once the Legal Draftsman prepares the Bill, it will be sent to the Attorney General to consider the constitutionality of the Bill. Thereafter, the said Minister will present the draft Bill to the Cabinet of Ministers along with the 'certificate' issued by the Attorney General in terms of Article 77(1) of the Constitution and seek the approval to publish the Bill in the government Gazette and to table it in Parliament.

However, the Constitution sets out certain steps that are required to be followed by the Cabinet of Ministers and also before a Bill is placed on the Order Paper in Parliament. Particularly, in respect of fiscal matters, urgent Bills and Bills that are applicable to the subjects in the 9th Schedule to the Constitution.

Further, Article 124 of the Constitution states;

> "Save as otherwise provided in Articles 120, 121 and 122, no court or tribunal created and established for the administration of justice, or other institution, person or body of persons shall in relation to any Bill, have power or jurisdiction to inquire into, or pronounce upon, the constitutionality of such Bill or its due compliance with the legislative process, on any ground whatsoever."

A careful consideration of the phrase 'its due compliance with the legislative process' in Article 124 shows that the Supreme Court has the jurisdiction to consider the legislative process applicable to Bills subject to Articles 120, 121 and 122 of the Constitution. As stated above, in terms of Article 4(a) of the Constitution, the legislative power of the People is exercised by Parliament and by the People at a Referendum. Further, another instance where people exercise legislative power is when a Bill is considered by the Supreme Court in terms of and under the aforementioned Articles in the Constitution. This was discussed in the determination in the Municipal Councils (Amendment) Bill, Urban Councils (Amendment) Bill, and Pradeshiya Sabha (Amendment) Bill S.C. (S.D.) Nos. 25-33, 36-41, 43-52, 54, 56/ 2023.

Thus, when the constitutional jurisdiction of the Supreme Court is invoked under Articles 120, 121 and 122 in respect of a Bill, the Supreme Court will consider not only the constitutionality of the Bill but also its due compliance with the legislative process.

Similar views were expressed in the Divineguma Bill S.C. (S.D.) No. 04/2012 to S.C. (S.D.) No. 14/2012, where the Supreme Court observed;

> "... In such circumstances, we determine that the Supreme Court has the sole and exclusive jurisdiction to inquire into or pronounce upon, the Constitutionality of a Bill and its procedural compliance, before such Bill is placed on the Order Paper of Parliament."
>

Further, the Water Services Reform Bill S.C. (S.D.) Nos. 24 and 25/2023 considered the requirement to comply with Article 154G of the Constitution and observed;

> "For the reasons set out above we make a determination in terms of Article 120 read with Article 123 and 154G of the Constitution that the Bill is in respect of a matter set out in the Provincial Council List and shall not become law unless it has been referred by the President to every Provincial Council as required by Article 154G(3)G of the Constitution. Since the Bill has been placed on the Order Paper of Parliament without compliance with provisions of Article 154G(3) we would not at this stage make a determination as to the other two grounds of challenge referred to above."

Moreover, in the Value Added Tax (Amendment) Bill S.C. (S.D.) No. 30/2016 to S.C. (S.D.) No. 33/2016 the Supreme Court observed;

"... Thus, in the same way Article 148 had to be complied with, Article 152 too should be strictly complied with and the Court can't brush aside the words used in Article 152 as being inappropriate or surplus.

Since the due process had not been complied with in terms of Article 78 (2) and 152 of the Constitution before the Bill was introduced in Parliament, we make a determination in terms of Articles 120 and 121 read with Article 123 and 152 of the Constitution that no determination would be made at this stage on the other grounds of challenge raised by the Petitioners."

[emphasis added]

Further, in urgent Bills, the Supreme Court will inquire into whether there was a decision of the Cabinet of Ministers to consider the Bill as an urgent Bill.

In the Nominations Commission Bill S.C. (S.D.) No. 1/91, it was observed;

"A Bill titled "An Act to establish a Nominations Commission; and to provide for matters connected therewith or incidental thereto" ["the Nominations Commission Act, No. of 1990"] was referred to this Court by His Excellency the President, in terms of Article 122(1)(b) of the Constitution, for the special determination of this Court whether the Bill or any provision thereof is inconsistent with the Constitution. The Bill contains a certificate to the effect that in view of the Cabinet of Minister the Bill is urgent in the national interest."

Thus, it shows that though the legislative power is vested with Parliament in terms of Article 4(a) of the Constitution and the said power begins with a Member of Parliament presenting a Bill to Parliament, the legislative process commences with a Minister submitting a Cabinet Memorandum to the Cabinet of Ministers setting out the policy and the justification for the need to enact legislation in respect of a particular matter.

Further, matters of finance, initiation and administration are within the purview of the executive, while control is vested with Parliament. A similar observation was made in the Appropriation Bill (1986) 29;

> "The machinery of national finance is based on the fundamental distinction between the functions of initiation and administration which are vested in the Executive*, and of control which is vested in Parliament. To keep intact the principle of the financial initiate of the Executive there developed the restrictions on the power of amendment…"*
>

Hence, I am also of the opinion that the legislative process commences not from the time a Bill is placed on the Order Paper in Parliament but from the time a Cabinet Memorandum is submitted to the Cabinet of Ministers seeking approval to commence drafting the Bill.

In the circumstances, once a Bill becomes a law upon the certification of the President or the Speaker, in terms of Article 80(3) of the Constitution, no court or tribunal can inquire into, pronounce upon or call into question the validity of such Act or its due compliance with the legislative process on any ground whatsoever.

Further, the scope of Article 124 of the Constitution was discussed by a full bench of the Supreme Court in Wijewickrema v. Attorney General (1982) 2 SLR 775 where it was held;

> "On the alleged ground that 144 members of Parliament had signed and delivered undated letters resigning their office to His Excellency the President, the plaintiff contends that "the said 144 members of Parliament were incapable of voting according to the law and the Constitution for the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution on the 4th November, 1982, and that notwithstanding the purported certification of the Speaker of the Parliament that the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution has been duly passed by a two-thirds majority of Parliament, the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution is not a Bill that has been duly passed by the Parliament at all and cannot therefore be submitted to the People at a Referendum.

The fundamental question involved in this action is whether Article 124 of the Constitution bars the jurisdiction of any Court to decide the constitutional issue raised by plaintiff.

In our view the plaintiff's action involves basically the question whether the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution has been validly voted upon as a Bill for the amendment of the Constitution. Our unanimous decision in this basic question is that the Court is barred by the provisions of Article 124 of the Constitution which provides:

> "Save as otherwise provided in Article 120, 121 and 122 no Court ……shall in relation to any Bill, have power or jurisdiction to inquire into, or pronounce upon, the constitutionality of such Bill or its due compliance with the legislative process, on any ground whatsoever."

from inquiring into or pronouncing upon the validity of the Bill for the amendment of the Constitution, referred to in the plaint."

A careful consideration of Articles 80(3) and 124 of the Constitution show that Article 80(3) is applicable to the Bills passed by Parliament, and the certificate is issued by the President of the Republic or the Speaker. On the converse, Article 124 applies to, inter alia, the legislative process which takes place prior to a Bill being presented to Parliament by a Member of Parliament.

In the circumstances, I am of the view that the policy decision taken by the Cabinet of Ministers to enact legislation with retrospective effect to reduce taxes cannot be challenged in courts now as the said decision forms part of the legislative process in enacting the Acts that are under reference.

Further, though at the time of introducing the tax cuts there was no legislation in place, subsequently the legislation was enacted with retrospective effect to cover the said period. Hence, this court lacks jurisdiction to review the policy of the government to reduce taxes prior to the enactment of legislation applicable to the said period.

However, the issues with policy or its appropriateness are not matters for consideration by the judicial branch of government. In the Nation Building Tax (Amendment) Bill S.C. (S.D.) No. 34/2016 it was observed;

> *"As Warrington L.J. in Short Vs. Poole Corp (1926) C.H. Division 60(91) stated that "With the question whether a particular policy is wise or foolish the Court is not concerned; it can only interfere if to pursue it is beyond the powers of the authority."
>

Further in the Fiscal Management (Responsibility) (Amendment) Bill S.C. (S.D.) No. 28/2016 and S.C. (S.D.) No. 29/2016 this court observed;

> *"Thus, it becomes the policy decision of the Government to increase the Government guarantee limit from 7 percent to 10 percent. The Court cannot strike down a policy decision taken by the Government merely because it feels another policy decision would be wiser or logical. The Courts is not expected to express its opinion as to whether at a particular situation any such policy should have been adopted or not. It is best left to the Government to decide on such matters which affects the interests of the economic progress and fiscal management of the country."
>

The reviewability of policy was also adverted to in the Special Goods and Service Tax Bill S.C. (S.D.) Nos. 1-9/2022 where it was observed;

> "Following on with the comment made by the Supreme Court in the Nation Building Tax (Amendment) Bill, [SC SD 34/2016], it is necessary for this Court to observe that this Court is devoid of jurisdiction to comment on the prudence or otherwise of a particular policy formulated by the Executive and sought to be converted into legislation by the enactment of a law by Parliament. Thus, this Court will refrain from doing so, even in instances where there appears to be compelling public and national interest considerations which may warrant an adverse comment being made."

However, if an Act requires the executive to promulgate subordinate legislation and the executive fails and/or neglects to do so, courts have the power to compel the executive to promulgate the necessary subordinate legislation that are required to be made under the Act.

A careful consideration of the reduced taxes, the Note to the Cabinet dated 26th of November, 2019 under the title "An Economic Revival Initiative" shows that the sole purpose of the reduction of taxes was to resurrect the economy that was adversely affected by the Easter Sunday bombings in the year, 2019. Moreover, the said policy to reduce taxes benefited the workforce in this country, business enterprises and the public in general. Thus, it is apparent that the policy of the then government to reduce taxes was mainly a people-centric move and in line with one of the accepted economic policies of the world in addressing recession.

Does the court have jurisdiction to pronounce on the failure to enact legislation by the executive?

As stated above, the legislative process commences by a Minister submitting a Memorandum to the Cabinet of Ministers seeking approval to enact legislation. However, in terms of Article 4(a) of the Constitution, the legislative power of the people shall be exercised by the Parliament. Thus, enacting legislation fairly and squarely falls within the purview of Parliament and not within the powers of the executive.

Erskine May Parliamentary Practice (Twenty-fourth edition) at page 183 states;

> "The authority of Parliament over all matters and persons within its jurisdiction was formally unlimited. A law might be unjust or contrary to sound principles of government; but Parliament was not controlled its discretion, and when it erred, its errors could be corrected only by itself."
>

Hence, in view of the separation of powers enshrined in the Constitution, the courts cannot compel either the executive, the Cabinet of Ministers, or Parliament to enact legislation or to pronounce on the failure to enact legislation by any of the said organs of the State.

In any event, even if (in a hypothetical situation) the courts were to direct the executive to enact legislation, Parliament is not bound to give effect to such a direction. Hence, no purpose could be achieved by such a direction or observation issued by court. It is pertinent to note that Sri Lanka has experienced two instances where the court granted directions to Parliament and on both occasions, Parliament refused to comply with the same, citing separation of powers set out in Article 4 of the Constitution.

Further, enacting, amending or repealing laws falls within the scope of the legislature, and therefore, even the executive cannot compel Parliament to enact legislation.

Furthermore, any pronouncement by the courts with regard to the legislative procedure in respect of an Act passed by Parliament is a collateral attack on the said Act, which is excluded from the jurisdiction of court by Article 80(3) of the Constitution.

Hence, I am of the view that the respondents cannot be held responsible for the introduction of tax cuts and not enacting, repealing or amending the legislation brought to reduce taxes.

Moreover, any pronouncement of the legislative process or the failure to repeal or amend an Act by court would violate Article 80(3) of the Constitution as it would be a collateral attack on the existing Act.

In any event, it is evident from the Cabinet Memorandum dated 3rd of January, 2022 and the Note to the Cabinet dated 6th of March, 2022, the government had taken steps to introduce fiscal legislation in respect of Surcharge Tax and to increase Value Added Tax.

Was There A Delay In Seeking Assistance From The International Monetary Fund?

Events leading to the decision of the Cabinet of Ministers not to seek the assistance of the IMF

The IMF was created in the wake of World War II to manage the global regime of exchange rates and international payments. Since the collapse of fixed exchange rates in the year 1973, the fund has taken on a more active role. The IMF assists member nations in different capacities. Its most important function is the ability to provide loans to member nations in need of bailouts. Further, if a country has a deficit in its balance of payments, the IMF can step in to fill the gap. However, borrowing governments must adhere to the conditions attached to these loans by the IMF, including prescribing economic and fiscal policies.

Moreover, such conditions may cause severe hardships to the general public of the country that seeks assistance from the IMF. Hence, some countries are reluctant to seek the assistance of the IMF. Furthermore, there are instances where countries seek the assistance of the IMF as a last resort and may give up the IMF programmes without completing them due to their inability to comply with the stringent conditions imposed by the IMF. In fact, on several occasions, Sri Lanka has discontinued IMF programmes due to its inability to comply with the conditions laid down by the IMF.

The staff of the IMF visited Sri Lanka from 29th of January, 2020 to 7th of February, 2020. Afterwards, the press release issued by them on the 7th of February, 2020 stated, inter alia, that the economy is gradually recovering from the terrorist attacks, the recovery is supported by a solid performance of the manufacturing sector and a rebound in tourism and related services in the second half of the year, high frequency indicators continue to improve, and growth is projected to rebound to 3.7 percent in 2020 as a result of the recovery in tourism, and inflation is projected to remain at 4.5 percent in line with the Central Bank of Sri Lanka, etc.

The IMF-Sri Lanka Staff Report for the 2021 Article IV Consultation dated 10th of February, 2022, categorised, for the first time, the sovereign debt of Sri Lanka as "unsustainable" in general and the external debt portfolio in particular.

Further, after the Executive Board of the IMF concluded the Article IV consultation with Sri Lanka on the 25th of February, 2022, it released a press release on the 2nd of March, 2022.

Policy decision of the Cabinet of Ministers in respect of seeking IMF assistance

Memorandum

It is pertinent to note that when the Central Bank and the government became aware of the financial and economic difficulties that the government had to face, particularly in repayment of local and international loans obtained by Sri Lanka, the Minister of Finance submitted a Cabinet Memorandum dated 2nd of January, 2022 under the heading "Economy 2022 and the way forward" to the Cabinet of Ministers and stated, inter alia, "while the budget for 2022 has been approved, the external outlook remains a matter of concern and requires careful analysis".

Moreover, the said Memorandum stated that the expected outflows of the country are;

- "Total debt servicing payments in 2022, inclusive of debt stock of Sri Lanka Development Bonds and Foreign Currency Banking Units, approximately is USD 6.9 billion. Further, it includes international sovereign bonds maturing in January, amounting to USD 500 million international sovereign bonds maturing in July, amounting to USD 1,000 million.

- USD 1,300 million is needed in January, 2022 itself for foreign debt servicing payments with USD 3,100 million being required for foreign debt servicing payments during the first quarter of 2022.

- Goods imports expected to be approximately USD 22 billion."

Further, expected inflows to the country during 2022 are;

"Approximately USD 32 billion is expected as total foreign currency inflows from goods and services exports. i.e.,

- Exports of goods that are expected to reach around USD 20.7 billion, while export income from services are expected to yield USD 7 billion. Export income from apparels alone is expected to reach around USD 6.8 billion. In the case of services IT and related services are expected to yield an income of around USD 2.3 billion.
- Tourism is showing signs of returning to normalcy and inflows from tourism is expected to be around USD 1.8 billion. While all effort should be taken to ensure that number of tourists exceed 2 million, and it is important that new regulations, insurance schemes that discourages such influx of tourist not be pursued.

- During 2020, around $3,000 had pursued employment opportunities overseas while in 2021, it had been around 116,000. It is expected to increase to 300,000, broaden job opportunities, that is, by new jobs with higher salaries and focus on new job markets to increase foreign remittance to USD 7.5 billion level.

- Foreign Direct Investment should increase up to USD 1 billion."

Furthermore, in the said Cabinet Memorandum, it was stated that the short and medium-term proposals are;

"The Budget 2022 outlined clearly the state of the economy since independence, including the issues that have arisen due to foreign commercial borrowings, the highly bureaucratic and outdated systems that have been inimical not only in attracting foreign investments but also in encouraging local entrepreneurs to operate, and the impact of the non-implementation of reforms compared to peer countries in the Asian region. It is apparent that although the short term issues could be resolved, there is a significant requirement to engage in long term strategies and reforms in all sectors that address the structural issues in the economy to create a more sustainable path.

(i) In this context, a package which addresses the liquidity issues and provides direct support for import was discussed during my visit to India. Annual imports from India is approximately USD 3,000 million on average and includes about 70% of country's requirement of imported medicine and food items. Postponement of payments on imports from India facilitates easy financing of other imports.

(ii) Government has also been supported by China with the extension of a SWAP facility amounting to USD 1,500 million has had a significant impact in helping to strengthen the CBSL reserve position by the end of 2021.

(iii) It is required to engage with both China and Japan is negotiating a package similar to India given that 20% of the outstanding foreign debt of the government is attributable to both China and Japan. At the same time given the imports from both countries exceed the exports, i.e., the Terms of Trade with both China and Japan are not favourable to Sri Lanka, the government should engage with China and Japan to create a facility that supports trade and repayment of their debt. Such support will further enhance the liquidity position. As such, it was proposed to appoint Members of the Cabinet of Ministers to engage discussion with China and Japan to engage in discussion as noted.

(iv) Apart from the inflows from export of goods and services, remittances and FDI's, during 2022 if the high end real estate and lands identified by the Urban Development Authority (UDA) could be given on long term lease, another USD 1-1.5 billion could be raised.

(v) In this regard, a sustainable strategy will have to be implemented to address the issues emanating from the debt stock exceeding the GDP where the ISB's are expected to mature every year until 2029 at around USD 1,000- 1,500 million per annum. The government will work with Multilateral and Bilateral Agencies and investment Banks to exploit the green financing market to raise debt at a lower interest rate and create the space to manage the stock of debt leveraging on the interest rate differential.

(vi) The space available to finance large infrastructure financed by debt is limited. As such, infrastructure requirements with in particular with commercial value specially in the electricity and energy sectors, the port sector requires to attract investments into such sectors. This requires the government to be in possession of such investment attracting strategies.

(vii) The renewable energy sector in particular has seen significant number of inquiries from top credible investors and it is regrettable that in the last 24 months only 15 MW of renewable energy had been added to the main grid. It is therefore clear that the line Ministry nor the CEB is yet in possession of a cohesive strategy to attract investments. The Budget 2020 required idle land belonging to the government and Mahaweli was to be given to the investors to engage in agriculture and other activities. It appears that this process has not been implemented as expected. Hence, the entire government machinery needs to turn around their operations to facilitate a more efficient and effective investment climate."

(I) To provide Public Servants with a monthly allowance of Rs. 5,000 from January. From January employees in corporates and boards will also be entitled to this. Given that there are 1,450,450 employees currently in the public sector, such payment of allowance will result in the incurring of an additional expenditure of Rs. 87 billion.

(II) To provide to the pensioners a monthly allowance of Rs. 5,000. Given that 666,480 pensioners are already in the system, the Government will incur an additional cost of Rs. 40 billion.

(III) To request the Hon. Minister of Labour to engage in discussion with the required parties to extend the aforementioned benefits to the employees in the private sector as well.

(IV) To provide an extra monthly allowance of Rs. 1,000 to Samurdhi beneficiaries receiving Rs. 3,500 per month. This extra allowance will also be made available to other Samurdhi beneficiaries as appropriate.

(V) To secure the incomes or to mitigate any loss of income that may occur due to a decline in harvest of rice farmers, the government will provide an additional Rs. 25 per kilogramme in addition to the Rs. 50 per kilogramme i.e., the guaranteed price. It is expected that such assistance to farmers will have no impact on the retail prices paid by the consumer.

(VI) Conduct a home gardening program to encourage growing of vegetables and fruits for self-consumption. To support such programme which includes the preparation of land, obtaining seeds, and other inputs required home gardens up to 20 perches will be provided with of Rs. 5,000 while those between 20 perches and less than 1 acre will be provided Rs. 10,000. The total cost to the government will be around Rs. 31 billion.

(VII) Flour Subsidy- It is decided to provide 15Kg wheat flour monthly at Rs. 80 to plantation worker families. It is further expected that such support will be provided to those plantation workers already registered with the Employees Provident Fund (EPF).

(VIII) The import taxes on potatoes and big onions have been reduced by Rs.30/Kg with effect from January 2022.

(IX) To completely exempt import of essential food and medicines taxes. These taxes will be revised only in instances where it is necessary to protect the local farmer and producer."

Further, it stated;

> "interest costs, wages and salaries of public servants, and transfers to the vulnerable, including Samurdhi and pensions for the elderly, account for the recurrent expenditures, which will be difficult to curtail. As such, it would require capital expenditures to be curtailed. This would mean that to accommodate the direct costs, as noted alone, around 30% of the capital expenditure will have to be reduced. The impact of the course would be that the government's envisaged growth and development objectives will not be met."
>

Moreover, it stated;

> "import of consumer goods which include food, wheat and maize, medicines, sugar, pulses, etc and fuel, coal, fertilizer accounts for almost 40% of the total imports or around USD 8 billion in a year. This would mean, that around an extra Rs. 240 billion will have to be spent on imports, which will also mean that on average, the cost of food stuff will have to increase at the minimum by 20% or so. e.g.;
>
> - Price of Dhal which has no tax except a Special Commodity Levy (SCL) of Rs 25 cents will see an increase in the prices to almost Rs. 350- 400 a Kilogramme from the existing Rs. 280 a Kilogramme.
>
> - The impact on fuel prices will be such that the cost reflective price of Diesel will mean that diesel prices will increase by around Rs.25 per litre to Rs. 146 per litre.
> The impact on the entire economy will be enormous. It is also important to take into account the fact that Sri Lanka, like many other countries, is faced with supply side disruptions, which are also likely to continue into 2022 as well. The impact of such disruptions will further push the price of staples and essentials and increase the cost of living at a faster rate than experienced now, and inflation on food items alone will remain at elevated levels.

The direct beneficiaries of a currency depreciation will be the exporters and the overseas workers remitting foreign funds into the country. While exports of primary products such as tea in bulk form will experience an increase in their income in local currency, the bulk of the other exporters, including exporters of value-added tea, apparels will have a sizable import content, cost of which could increase with a depreciation of the currency, resulting in redactions in profit margins. Local exporters, especially those with significant import components will find that their competitiveness is somewhat compromised."

The said Cabinet Memorandum further stated;

"The impact of an increase in taxes, especially the indirect taxes such as VAT, will be instantaneous and will immediately have an impact on the cost of goods and services to the end consumer. An increase in VAT, since it is a final tax on the retail consumer, will see the retail consumers being subjected to a price increase in excess of 10%. At the same time, apart from the revision in fuel prices as noted above, electricity tariff revisions will also have to be affected. This requires the average revenue per unit of electricity to increase to Rs. 25 per unit from the existing Rs. 16 per unit. Water tariffs too will have to be revised on average by at least Rs. 10 per unit.

While it is ideal to have cost reflective prices, it should also be complemented by a mechanism to buffer the impact of such increased prices on the vulnerable in society through a direct, targeted transfer of assistance. But we have still not been able to put in place the electronic Identity card system (e-ID) that would have supported the identification of the most vulnerable and the most deserved, although it was envisaged to be there by at least December 2021. The absence of such a mechanism to enable the Government to provide assistance in a targeted manner to the most vulnerable will compromise the effectiveness of such targeted support.

It would not be incorrect to state that an IMF programme will require the country to accept conditions that will further disrupt the social fabric of the country. While it is acknowledged that an IMF programme will enable the country to access the capital markets with better ease, it is our experience that none of the IMF programmes since the late 60's, have resulted in any lasting reforms being implemented in the country.

In fact, it would be pertinent to note that the economic challenges of today are due to two key decisions of the Yahapalana Government, which are;

- The aggressive borrowing in the International Bond markets resulted in the country borrowing USD 12 billion dollars during 2015-2019 with USD 6.9 billion being borrowed during a 14 months period of April 2018 to May 2019. As a result, the country's foreign currency debt stock reached almost 50% of the total debt stock at the end of 2019 with the stock of ISB's at wound USD 15 billion. This has now reduced to USD 13 billion.

- Reduction in the price of Petrol and Diesel in 2015, without any thought to recouping the losses of Ceylon Petroleum Corporation (CPC) or the Ceylon Electricity Board (CEB) or to the possibility of an increase in global oil prices.

- It is noted that of the USD 12 billion so raised only around USD 2 billion had been utilized to settle ISBs, while the bulk seems to have been utilized to finance the imports, especially cars and other passenger vehicles. In fact consumption of fuel which had decreased by end 2014 has increased surpassing the previous consumption volumes, although economic growth saw a steady decline. The shortsighted decisions taken for political expediency and the failure of the Yahapalana government to aggressively implement a renewable and a clean energy strategy to use solar and wind in particular as sources of energy together with LNG, complemented by a robust mechanism to support the exporters country's has resulted in the country facing the liquidity crunch that is faced with at present."

In the circumstances, the said Cabinet Memorandum invited the "*Cabinet of Ministers to deliberate on the aforementioned, bearing in mind that the Government has the capacity to implement a home-grown solution to the issues that the country is faced with".

The Cabinet of Ministers considered the said Cabinet Memorandum, the clarifications made by the Minister of Finance on the matters stated in the Memorandum, the views expressed by the Minister of Industries stating that the appropriateness of exploring the possibility of obtaining a Credit Line for the importation of essential raw materials required for industries after negotiating with the countries from where such raw materials are imported, the views expressed by the Minister of Trade stating the appropriateness of introducing a mechanism whereby Sri Lankans serving in foreign countries could remit a certain amount of foreign currency monthly to their foreign currency accounts maintained in Sri Lanka and also introducing a special loan scheme either for the construction of a house or for the purchase of other property based on the savings in the account, with a view to encouraging such account holders; and the views expressed by several other Members of the Cabinet pertaining to the course of action proposed in the Memorandum.

Decision of the Cabinet of Ministers

Thereafter, on the 3rd of January, 2022 the Cabinet of Ministers decided, inter alia;

"(i) to grant the concurrence of the Cabinet-

(a) to take the necessary action in implement the proposals in the Memorandum with immediate effect;
(b) to take the necessary action on the short term and medium term proposals referred to in the Memorandum;
(c) to implement a home grown solution for the economic issues currently encountered by Sri Lanka, taking into consideration the matters stated in the Memorandum;

and, "to request the Secretary to the President to take necessary action to nominate Ministers in consultation with H.E. the President, to negotiate with the relevant countries as proposed in the Memorandum".

[emphasis added]

Accordingly, it is clear that the Cabinet of Ministers took a policy decision not to seek the assistance of the IMF but to implement a home-grown plan to address the issues that the country was facing. Similarly, as stated above, the Cabinet of Ministers took a policy decision to reduce the taxes referred to above. Thus, in terms of Article 43(1) of the Constitution, all members of the Cabinet of Ministers are collectively responsible for the said decisions and are answerable to Parliament.

Should policy decisions of the government be disturbed or interfered with unless they are found to be grossly arbitrary or irrational?

As stated above, our Constitution is based on the principle of separation of powers, though there are some overlapping Articles in the Constitution with regard to executive and legislative powers. In terms of the Constitution, the three branches of the State are: the legislature, the executive and the judiciary. Separation of powers enshrined in the Constitution was discussed in detail in the judgment delivered in Hadabima Authority v. Jathika Seveka Sangamaya (SC Appeal 15/2013) (SC Minutes dated 26th of February, 2015). Further, each branch of the State has the power to act in its own sphere of activity. The legislature is entrusted with the power to make laws, the executive is to make policies and implement them, and the judiciary is to apply laws, including Fundamental Rights, and interpret laws.

Therefore, making policies and executing them fall within the sphere of activities of the executive and are not within the power of the legislature or the judiciary. Moreover, other than the executive, the other two organs do not have the expertise and knowledge required to make policies. On the other hand, the executive has experts, professionals, administrators, advisors, etc., in a given field and has the expertise to make policies after taking into consideration all aspects of a matter. Hence, the court would leave policy matters for those who are qualified to address the issues, unless the policy or action is inconsistent with the Constitution and laws, grossly arbitrary or irrational.

A similar view was expressed in Film Festivals & Ors. v Gaurav Ashwin Jain & Ors*. (2007) 4 SCC 737, where the court held;

> "The scope of judicial review of governmental policy is now well defined. Courts do not and cannot act as Appellate Authorities examining the correctness, suitability and appropriateness of a policy. Nor are courts Advisors to the executive on matters of policy which the executive is entitled to formulate. The scope of judicial review when examining a policy of the Government is to check whether it violates the fundamental rights of the citizens or is opposed to the provisions of the Constitution, or opposed to any statutory provision or manifestly arbitrary. Courts cannot interfere with policy either on the ground that it is erroneous or on the ground that a better, fairer or wiser alternative is available. Legality of the policy, and not the wisdom or soundness of the policy, is the subject of judicial review."
>

Further, in State of Punjab & Ors. Vs Ram Lubhaya Bagga & Ors*. (1998) 4 SCC 117, it was held;

> ".....When Government forms its policy, it is based on number of circumstances on facts, law including constraints based on its resources. It is also based on expert opinion. It would be dangerous if court is asked to test the utility, beneficial effect of the policy or its appraisal based on facts set out on affidavits. The Court would dissuade itself from entering into this realm which belongs to the executive."
>

Furthermore, the courts cannot express their opinion as to whether, at a particular point in time or in a particular situation, any such policy should have been introduced or not, or repealed, particularly when a policy is accepted by Parliament either at reading of the budget or in any other instances. Hence, it should be left to the discretion of the government.

A similar view was expressed in Delhi Science Forum v. Union of India (AIR 1996 SC 1356) at 1359, where it was held;

> "What has been said in respect of legislations is applicable even in respect of policies which have been adopted by the Parliament. They cannot be tested in Court of Law. The courts cannot express their opinion as to whether at a particular juncture or under a particular situation prevailing in the country any such national policy should have been adopted or not .... Courts have their limitations - because these issues rest with the policy makers for the nation. No direction can be given or is expected from the courts unless while implementing such policies, there is violation or infringement of any of the Constitutional or statutory provision... This Court cannot review and examine as to whether said policy should have been adopted. Of course, whether there is any legal or Constitutional bar in adopting such policy can certainly be examined by the court."

Further, the power of judicial review would not extend to determining the correctness of a policy or to indulge in the exercise of finding out whether there could be more appropriate or better alternatives. As policymaking is within the domain of the executive, the courts, under the garb of judicial review, cannot usurp the jurisdiction of the decision-maker and make the decision itself. Neither can it act as an appellate authority.

Moreover, complex executive decisions in economic matters may be empirical or based on experimentation. Its validity cannot be tested on rigid principles or the application of any straitjacket formula. In such matters, even experts may seriously or doubtlessly differ. Courts cannot be expected to decide them, even with the aid of experts.

Thus, the courts do not interfere with policy matters or economic decisions, as such matters are highly technical and even experts in that field hold different opinions on the same point. Similar views were expressed in the following judgments.

In M/s. Prag Ice & Oil Mills and Another v. Union of India (AIR 1978 SC 1296) at 1305 the Indian Supreme Court held;

> "We do not think that it is the function of this Court or of any Court to sit in judgment over such matters of economic policy as must necessarily be left to the Government of the day to decide. Many of them, as a measure of price fixation must necessarily be, are matters of prediction of ultimate results on which even experts can seriously err and doubtlessly differ. Courts can certainly not be expected to decide them without even the aid of experts."
>

Moreover, in Shri Sitaram Sugar Company Limited v. Union of India (AIR 1990 SC 1277) at 1299, it was held;

> "Judicial review is not concerned with matters of economic policy. The Court does not substitute its judgment for that of the legislature or its agents as to matters within the province of either. The Court does not supplant the "feel of the experts" by its own views. When the legislature acts within the sphere of its authority and delegates power to an agent, it may empower the agent to make findings of fact which are conclusive provided such findings satisfy the test of reasonableness... and whether such findings are consistent with the laws of the land."
>

Further, in Sujeewa Arjune Senasinghe v. Ajith Nivard Cabraal and others (SC/FR/457/2012) (SC Minutes dated 18th of September, 2014) it was held; or strict consideration. The Court while adjudicating the constitutional validity of the decision of the Governor or Members of the Monetary Board must grant a certain measure of freedom considering the complexity of the economic activities. The Court cannot strike down a decision merely because it feels another policy decision would have been fairer or wiser or more scientific or logical. The Court is not expected to express its opinion as to whether at a particular point of time or in a particular situation any such decision should have been adopted or not. It is best left to the discretion of the authority concerned."

> "We must not forget that in complex economic policy matters every decision is necessarily empiric and therefore its validity cannot be tested on any rigid formula

[emphasis added]

It is pertinent to note that the aforementioned two IMF press releases did not recommend or advise the government to seek its assistance to address possible financial and economic issues.

The aforementioned IMF findings were reproduced in the Auditor General's Report furnished to court. It stated;

"2.7.6 IMF Staff had concluded its visit to Sri Lanka during January 29 to February 7, 2020 to meet with the new administration and discuss its policy agenda. The press release No. 20/42 including statements of IMF staff teams that convey preliminary findings after a visit to a country had been issued on 07 February 2020. Highlights of the preliminary findings of the visit are as follows.

a) The economy is gradually recovering from the terrorist attacks last April. Real GDP growth is estimated at 2.6 percent in 2019.
b) The recovery is supported by a solid performance of the manufacturing sector and a rebound in tourism and related services in the second half of the year.
c) High frequency indicators continue to improve and growth is projected to rebound to 3.7 percent in 2020*, on the back of the recovery in tourism, and assuming that the Novel Coronavirus will have only limited negative effect on tourism arrivals and other economic activities.*

d) Inflation is projected to remain at around 4½ percent, in line with the Central Bank of Sri Lanka (CBSL) target. After a sharp import contraction in 2019, the current account deficit is expected to widen to nearly 3 percent of GDP in 2020.

e) Preliminary data indicate that the primary surplus target under the program supported by the Extended Fund Facility (EFF) was missed by a sizable margin in 2019 with a recorded deficit of 0.3 percent of GDP, due to weak revenue performance and expenditure overruns.

f) Under current policies, as discussed with the authorities during the visit, the primary deficit could widen further to 1.9 percent of GDP in 2020, due to newly implemented tax cuts and exemptions, clearance of domestic arrears, and backloaded capital spending from 2019.

g) Given risks to debt sustainability and large refinancing needs over the medium term, renewed efforts to advance fiscal consolidation will be essential for macroeconomic stability.

h) Measures to improve efficiency in the public administration and strengthen revenue mobilization can help reduce the high public debt, while preserving space for critical social and investment needs. Advancing relevant legislation to strengthen fiscal rules would anchor policy commitments, restore confidence, and safeguard sustainability over the medium term.

i) The CBSL should continue to follow a prudent and data-dependent monetary policy and stand ready to adjust rates to evolving macroeconomic conditions.

j) Net International Reserves fell short of the end-December target under the EFF supported program in 2019 by about $100 million amid market pressures after the Presidential elections and announced tax cuts. However, conditions have since stabilized. Renewed efforts are needed to rebuild reserve buffers to safeguard resilience to shocks, under a flexible exchange rate.

k) Approval of the new Central Bank Law in line with international best practices is a critical step to further strengthen the independence and governance of the CBSL and support the adoption of flexible inflation targeting.

2.7.7 The Executive Board of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) concluded the Article IV consultation with Sri Lanka on 25 February 2022. The press release No. 22/54 in this regard had been issued on 02 March 2022. Highlights of the press release are as follows.

a) Sri Lanka has been hit hard by COVID-19. On the eve of the pandemic, the country was highly vulnerable to external shocks owing to inadequate external buffers and high risks to public debt sustainability, exacerbated by the Easter Sunday terrorist attacks in 2019 and major policy changes including large tax cuts at late 2019. Real GDP contracted by 3.6 percent in 2020, due to a loss of tourism receipts and necessary lockdown measures. Sri Lanka lost access to international sovereign bond market at the onset of the pandemic.

b) The authorities deployed a prompt and broad-based set of relief measures to cope with the impact of the pandemic, including macroeconomic policy stimulus, an increase in social safety net spending, and loan repayment moratoria for affected businesses. These measures were complemented by a strong vaccination drive. GDP growth is projected to have recovered to 3.6 percent in 2021, with mobility indicators largely back to their pre-pandemic levels and tourist arrivals starting to recover in late 2021.

c) Nonetheless, annual fiscal deficits exceeded 10 percent of GDP in 2020 and 2021, due to the pre-pandemic tax cuts, weak revenue performance in the wake of the pandemic, and expenditure measures to combat the pandemic. Limited availability of external financing for the government has resulted in a large amount of central bank direct financing of the budget. Public debt is projected to have risen from 94 percent of GDP in 2019 to 119 percent of GDP in 2021. Large foreign exchange (FX) debt service payments by the government and a wider current account deficit have led to a significant FX shortage in the economy. The official exchange rate has been effectively pegged to the U.S. dollar since April 2021.

d) The economic outlook is constrained by Sri Lanka's debt overhang as well as persistently large fiscal and balance-of-payments financing needs. GDP growth is projected to be negatively affected by the impact of the FX shortage and macroeconomic imbalances on economic activities and business confidence. Inflation recently accelerated to 14 percent (y/y) in January 2022 and is projected to remain double-digit in the coming quarters, exceeding the target band of 4–6 percent, as strong inflationary pressures have built up from both supply and demand sides sincemid- 2021. Under current policies and the authorities' commitment to preserve the tax cuts, fiscal deficit is projected to remain large over 2022–26, raising public debt further over the medium term. Due to persistent external debt service burden, international reserves would remain inadequate, despite the authorities' ongoing efforts to secure FX financing from external sources.

e) The outlook is subject to large uncertainties with risks tilted to the downside. Unless the fiscal and balance-of-payments financing needs are met, the country could experience significant contractions in imports and private credit growth, or monetary instability in case of further central bank financing of fiscal deficits. Additional downside risks include a COVID-19 resurgence, rising commodity prices, worse-than-expected agricultural production, a potential deterioration in banks' asset quality, and extreme weather events. Upside risks include a faster than-expected tourism recovery and stronger-than-projected FDI inflows.

f) Executive Directors commended the Sri Lankan authorities for the prompt policy response and successful vaccination drive, which have cushioned the impact of the pandemic. Despite the ongoing economic recovery, Directors noted that the country faces mounting challenges, including public debt that has risen to unsustainable levels, low international reserves, and persistently large financing needs in the coming years. Against this backdrop, they stressed the urgency of implementing a credible and coherent strategy to restore macroeconomic stability and debt sustainability, while protecting vulnerable groups and reducing poverty through strengthened, well-targeted social safety nets.

g) Directors emphasized the need for an ambitious fiscal consolidation that is based on high-quality revenue measures. Noting Sri Lanka's low tax-to-GDP ratio, they saw scope for raising income tax and VAT rates and minimizing exemptions, complemented with revenue administration reform. Directors encouraged continued improvements to expenditure rationalization, budget formulation and execution, and the fiscal rule. They also encouraged the authorities to reform state-owned enterprises and adopt cost-recovery energy pricing.

h) Directors agreed that a tighter monetary policy stance is needed to contain rising inflationary pressures, while phasing out the central bank's direct financing of budget deficits. They also recommended a gradual return to a market-determined and flexible exchange rate to facilitate external adjustment and rebuild international reserves. Directors called on the authorities to gradually unwind capital flow management measures as conditions permit.

i) Directors welcomed the policy actions that helped mitigate the impact of the pandemic on the financial sector. Noting financial stability risks from the public debt overhang and sovereign-bank nexus, they recommended close monitoring of underlying asset quality and identifying vulnerabilities through stress testing. Directors welcomed ongoing legislative reforms to strengthen the regulatory, supervisory, and resolution frameworks.

j) Directors called for renewed efforts on growth-enhancing structural reforms. They stressed the importance of increasing female labor force participation and reducing youth unemployment. Further efforts are needed to diversify the economy, phase out import restrictions, and improve the business and investment climate in general. Directors also called for a prudent management of the Colombo Port City project, and continued efforts to strengthen governance and fight corruption. They noted the country's vulnerability to climate change and welcomed efforts to increase resilience."

Conclusion of the Auditor General

Further, the Auditor General's Report states (page 439);

Accordingly, the Auditor General stated that he is unable to decide whether there is any loss to the Central Bank of Sri Lanka. However, though the said report stated there are delays in taking decisions by the Monetary Board and the government, it does not set out any specific violations of the law by the respondents. Hence, I am of the view that there is no expert evidence before this court to decide on the economic and fiscal issues raised in the said two applications.

Moreover, it is pertinent to note that the effects of COVID-19 were similar or more adverse to the effects that were caused during the ‘Great Depression’ economic crisis in 1929. It adversely affected our export income, which brought forex to the country. Similarly, the said pandemic reduced foreign employment opportunities and thereby adversely affected one of Sri Lanka’s main foreign earnings.

In fact, the effects of the Easter Sunday bombings and the adverse effects of COVID-19, particularly, the unexpectedly large expenditure incurred for island-wide vaccination programmes and quarantine centres, long periods of lockdowns, island-wide curfews, political uncertainty and rivalry, public protests against implementing the economic policies of the government, specifically with regard to privatisation, litigation challenging the privatisation of State entites and geopolitical issues, disturbed the implementation of the policies of the government. Further, such matters adversely affected the income from tourism and witnessed the withdrawal of overseas and local investors from Sri Lanka. Hence, all such unexpected intervening factors immensely contributed to the economic and financial collapse in Sri Lanka.

Conclusion

In the circumstances, I am of the view that the petitioners have not established that the policy decision of the government not to go to the IMF was grossly arbitrary or irrational. On the contrary, the Auditor General's Report tendered to court, and the material filed by the respondents, particularly the aforementioned Cabinet Memoranda and the decisions of the Cabinet of Ministers, show that the government has considered the pros and cons of going to the IMF, the past experiences with the IMF, the effects of obtaining assistance from the IMF will have on the economy and the people, and thereafter taken the policy decision not to go to the IMF. Moreover, the Cabinet of Ministers and the Monetary Board of the Central Bank of Sri Lanka had taken all possible steps to address economic and fiscal matters to avert a possible crisis. Further, it is common ground that the impugned decisions are policy decisions of the government, except the decision of the Monetary Board. However, the petitioners did not establish that any of those policy decisions violated the law or were grossly arbitrary. Furthermore, as stated in the Auditor General's Report, such decisions were based on various economic theories applicable to macroeconomics. Hence, it is not possible to come to a finding in respect of the issues referred to him by the court.

Did the government take steps to manage the economy without going to the IMF?

Decisions taken by the Cabinet of Ministers under Article 43 of the Constitution to improve the fiscal and economic status of the country

The former Minister of Finance presented Cabinet Memorandum No.20/0804/204/078, on "Foreign Resource Mobilization 2020-2025", dated 13th of May, 2020, to the Cabinet of Ministers, seeking approval for the following proposals;

1. The proposed external resource mobilization strategy and recommendations,

2. Authorize Secretary to the Treasury to appoint a Project Evaluation Committee headed by Dr Lalithasiri Gunaruwan,

3. Authorize Secretary Power and Energy, Chairman BOI, and Chainman CEB to ensure the implementation of construction of fourth unit of 300 MW coal power plant as an extension of the Lakvijaya Power Plant as a joint investment by a Chinese investor and Ceylon Electricity Board (CEB) as a foreign investment project under which the equity contribution of CEB is also arranged by the investing Company,

4. Authorize Chairman BOI and Secretary to the Ministry of Highways to finalize the investment proposal received on Construction of Elevated Expressway from Athurigiriya Interchange of Outer Circular Expressway to New Kelaniya Bridge via Rajagiriya to be done as a foreign investment project to be structured by the BOI, RDA and UDA on a BOT basis,

5. Authorize Secretary to the Treasury and Secretary Ministry of Highways to conduct contract negotiation on Central Expressway Section 3 and Section 4 as hundred percent foreign funded Turnkey projects with at least two local contractors' involvement in such projects and report to the Cabinet,

6. Any deviation from this policy framework requires prior Cabinet approval."

Further, the background and reasonings for these proposals were stated in detail in the said Memorandum.

It was stated that "at present about forty percent of the public investment expenditure is financed through external financing". In this background, it was encouraged that foreign direct investment and sustainable financial arrangements should be implemented to reduce pressure on public investment. Moreover, the need to repay foreign debt service obligations was also stressed upon.

Furthermore, the impact of the "forced global shut down" due to COVID-19 was referred to in the said Memorandum. It was pointed out that it resulted in a significant impact on all countries, especially countries such as Sri Lanka, which experienced a substantial dip in foreign currency inflows due to the reduction of tourism, exports, and remittances. In fact, preliminary estimates indicated a decline in both exports and remittances by almost 50 percent. It was stated that it would create significant pressure on the foreign currency reserves, which at the time stood at only around US$ 7.1 billion.

In view of the above, it was pointed out that further accumulation of foreign debt would have serious ramifications on the country's capacity to service and repay such loans, with rating agencies taking a less positive outlook on the country.

In this background, with the impact of COVID-19 and with fiscal space being limited and government revenues being almost 25-30 percent less than expected in normal situations, the increase in foreign currency debt needed to be managed prudently. The new foreign currency borrowings that the country can accommodate per annum will have to be limited to less than US$ 2.5 billion per annum, out of which US$ 1 billion for project loans, bearing in mind that if programme loans are not forthcoming in large quantities, then commercial borrowings will have to be accommodated at least for refinancing arrangements. There were almost another US$ 9 billion of loans with committed undisbursed amounts yet to be disbursed within the next 5-6 years, and the project pipeline worth US$ 8 billion must be revisited to ensure these projects are well within the priorities of the government's policy after the outbreak of COVID-19.

The said Memorandum further stated that the government should shift to a long-term maturity structure for commercial foreign loans while focusing on efficiency in resource utilisation with selected projects and programmes. Furthermore, the government would explore other liability management options as well as the cost of borrowing and incorporate reasonable grace periods. In the meantime, the government should take further steps to diversify its external debt portfolio to accommodate a sizable portion of Asian currencies and maintain an evenly distributed risk profile. It would be prudent to invite Asian-based rating agencies to the country for a better and more balanced risk assessment.

Moreover, the public investment strategy of the country should be governed by a debt reduction investment approach with an increase in foreign investments in commercial projects. The rate of domestic savings and investment supplemented with foreign direct investment will be the most pertinent determinants to achieve sustained economic growth. Hence, it is imperative to increase domestic savings and attract higher amounts of foreign investments in commercial infrastructure development projects such as ports, airports, refineries, power generation, etc., which can generate substantial economic value addition to the nation to achieve the desired growth rate. Thus, by adopting such a strategy, the national budget has the space to accommodate non-commercial financing from multilateral and bilateral sources for economic sectors such as health, education, skill development, agriculture, rural infrastructure, etc.

Further, other topics that were discussed included foreign funding for development, the project pipeline for foreign financing for the forthcoming three years, and how financing modality could be implemented.

After discussion, the Cabinet of Ministers granted approval to those proposals and authorised the Secretary to the Cabinet of Ministers to convey the decision to the relevant authorities to carry out the necessary actions accordingly.

Furthermore, the Minister of Finance, Economic, and Policy Development chaired a meeting on the 22nd of July, 2021 to discuss the Credit Ratings of the country, the possible impacts of the downgrade on the credit ratings given by the rating agencies, ways of managing such impacts and how it could be addressed. The Ministers, Members of Parliament, the Central Bank of Sri Lanka, the Ministry of Finance, and other organisations, including the Presidential Task Force for Economic Revival and Poverty Alleviation, participated at the said meeting.

Moreover, at the said meeting, the Central Bank of Sri Lanka made a presentation on "Recent Development Sovereign Ratings and its Macroeconomic Challenges" and stated, inter alia;

"There had been 124 downgrades across the globe in 2020 and 16 downgrades in 2021.

Major factors considered for a downgrade were;

a. Low and declining foreign exchange reserves adequacy
b. Limited and narrow external financing options
c. Extremely weak debt affordability
d. Unavailability of a credible and sustainable debt servicing plan in the medium term

The following will be the immediate challenges of a downgrade;

- Withdrawing of portfolio investment by investors
- Further constraining of market access
- Challenges to financial institutions in terms of mobilizing funds from abroad
- Requests to repay the existing debt obligations prematurely
- Spillover to other sectors including exchange rate

For ratings to be improved, it is required to

- Improve the fiscal outlook (through sustainable debt practices, reducing the burden on public finance from business ventures and correlating public investments with private capital or new revenue possibilities).
- Gradual build-up of reserves in the light of short-term obligations
- Near-term plan of external financing options and realizing sizable volume inflows/financing in the immediate term
- Adhering and effectively implementing Medium Term Debt Management Strategy (MTDS)"

Further, at the said meeting*;*

(a) The Governor of CBSL highlighted key steps undertaken to mitigate the negative effects to the economy including;

i) "The foreign reserves can be fortified through the SWAP agreements (USD 600 million) and SDR facility of the IMF (around USD 700-800 million)

ii) Foreign exposure of debt has been contained to 40 percent"

(b) "Steps to be taken to avoid a downgrade",

(c) "the impact of economic variables on the economy;

i) Vaccination programme will ease the pressures on the economy with the reduction of risk of the disease.

ii) There needs to be a detailed plan for financing the budget deficit 2022.

iii) Foreign debt accounts for about USD 35 billion. DG/ERD will submit a detailed list of foreign funded projects.

iv) The perception that the Sri Lanka is in a position to honour all its debt obligations should be upheld."

Once again on the 17th of August, 2021, the Minister of Finance submitted a Note to the Cabinet of Ministers with the title of *"Short Term Macro Economic Policy Initiatives" and requested the Cabinet of Ministers to consider it and take an appropriate decision. The said Cabinet Memorandum, inter alia, stated;

> "The Governor of the Central Bank of Sri Lanka, submitting a report as required under Section 64 and 68 of the Monetary Law Act has brought to my notice some of the important economic challenges the country is currently facing, including the following;
> - Continuously increasing debt service payments due to rolling over of large external debt of the country and the increasing dependence in external debt creating sources on financing the budget deficit over the past several decades.
> - Vulnerabilities stemming from COVID 19 pandemic; loss of earning from tourism as well as some moderation of exports, limited foreign investment inflows and intensified portfolio outflows, particularly foreign investment to the government securities market.

- Country's access to international financial markets remains restricted with the severing credit rating downgrading.
- Declining of gross official reserves and challenges relating to defending the Exchange Rate

In this context, I would like to highlight that the Government is in a critical juncture since the country is confronted with the COVID 19, 3rd wave having implications on all aspects of socio economic life. The Government has devoted its attention and resources to undertake an intensified vaccination programme which envisages to vaccinate 100% of the target group by end of 2021, enabling the country to operate in the "new normal" environment."

It further stated;

"The Government has already taken steps to avoid external debt creating financing for development activities and relying on investments as well as expanding foreign earning avenues. In this regard, the Government has taken serious measures including the following to increase Capital inflow through Foreign Direct Investment.

1. Treasury is on a constant dialog with the Chinese Authorities to get them to expeditiously disburse the loan of RMB 2,000 million (USD 350 Million) from China Development Bank towards end august 2021.
2. Foreign investment agreement for West Coast Power Project is been finalized. The investment agreement for West Terminal of Colombo port and the Athurugiriya Expressway have been executed to raise USD 1500 FDI over next three years.
3. The Colombo Port City Economic Commission Act was enacted paving way to create an impetus of FDIs within the special Economic zone - Colombo Port City.
4. Tax/Foreign Exchange Amnesty Bill and the Special Goods and Services Tax legislation are expected to take up in Parliament.

5. Actions have taken to curtail non-priority public spending and costly Capital Projects.
6. Several legislation including emigration and immigration laws to relax restrictions to attract foreign inflows and legislative changes to improve doing business have been lined up to place before Parliament.
7. Steps have been taken to regain tourism based on bubble concept applicable for hotels above 3 stars category."

Moreover, it will prevent speculations that have created a situation where exporters are not converting their export proceeds and importers are engaged in panic buying and selling as well as piling stocks.

Further, it stated;

> "In this background, it was suggested that the following measures would be necessary to be initiated by the Central Bank of Sri Lanka, to signal market to move on to a stabilization path.
>
> 1. Release total of USD 250 Mn immediately to all Commercial Banks, enabling all cargo currently at the ports to be cleared. This should be subject to the CBSL instructing that selling rate of each Commercial Bank shall not exceed LKR 202 per USD. A further USD 250 Mn be released in early September 2021, to meet petroleum and LP gas financing.
> 2. Increase the present policy rate by 50 basis points to raise the prevailing Central Bank deposit rate and lending rate from 4.5% and 5.5% to 5.5% and 6% respectively.
> 3. Conduct open market operations aggressively to reduce its Treasury Bills holdings while allowing the maximum Treasury Bill rate to increase by 75-100 basis points.
> 4. Increase the interest rate on local overdraft and term loan facility of BOI Companies from domestic Banking Systems to encourage the inflow of foreign remittance and prevent interest rate arbitrage.

5. Impose and interest rate celling on interest payable on Forex Deposits by Commercial Banks.
6. Introduce letters of credit as a mandatory requirement for all imports (in place of imports being made under various trade instruments) till 31 December 2021 and impose a 2% tax on LC's other than medicine, essential food items and raw materials.
7. Increase the statutory reserve ratio by 2 percentage points to 4 percent and earmark such funds (approximately LKR 250 Bn) to set up a "Green Finance facility" (GFF) to lend through Commercial Banks at 4% for organic fertilizer manufacturing, renewable energy projects, forestry and organic agricultural development.
8. Increase the limit of inward cash declaration at customs from USD 10,000 to USD 25,000 for visiting travellers and Sri Lankan arriving the country from overseas travel.
9. The Ministry of Finance will request all major import companies to organize USD 15 Mn to 250 Mn medium term Credit Lines from the respective countries that they import, so that heavy import payments will not exert pressure on the FOREX market."

Moreover, on the 23rd of November, 2021, the Minister of Finance presented to the Cabinet of Ministers a Cabinet Memorandum seeking approval to proceed with the "Proposed Senior Secured Revolving Credit Facility Offered by the Bank of China Limited to the Central Bank of Sri Lanka".

The said Cabinet Memorandum, inter alia, stated;

"1. Bank of China Limited (BoCL) has submitted a proposal of a Senior Secured Revolving Credit facility to the Central Bank of Sri Lanka (CBSL) up to 02 billion Chinese yuan (CNY), also known as renminbi (RMB), (equivalent to USD 300 million approximately), with the possibility of increasing in the event of an over subscription depending on the syndication demand.

2. Following multiple rounds of discussions and negotiations, BoCL agreed that the full amount (equivalent to USD 300 million approximately) can be drawn on the day the facility is available for the CBSL and maintain in a nostro account opened in BoCL Mainland China.

   Hence, those funds will be considered as a part of the CBSL foreign reserves from the date of withdrawal."

As the earlier decision of the Cabinet of Ministers to sell shares to the Chinese Company did not materialise, the Minister of Finance submitted a Cabinet Memorandum dated 23rd of November, 2021 to the Cabinet of Ministers with the title "Investments into the West Coast Power (Private) Limited (WCPL), to reduce the cost of Electricity Generation" to sell shares of the said company to a company based in the United States.

Having considered the said Memorandum and the decision by the Cabinet of Ministers dated 6th of September, 2021, the Cabinet of Ministers approved the said Memorandum and authorised the Secretary to the Treasury to enter into a Share Sale and Purchase Agreement (SSPA) with New Fortress Energy Limited (NFE) with the clearance of the Attorney General.

Once again, on the 4th of December, 2021, another Cabinet Memorandum was submitted by the Minister of Finance to the Cabinet of Ministers, seeking their approval to obtain the "Approval of Parliament to issue an Order to extend the validity period of the Order issued under section 22 of Foreign Exchange Act No. 12 of 2017 on Restriction of Foreign Exchange Outflows".

In the said Cabinet Memorandum, it was stated, inter alia;

> "As the Order in force is to be expired on January 01, 2022, the Central Bank of Sri Lanka is of the view that regulatory measures to limit / restrict outward remittance of foreign exchange are continued to be implemented in order to minimize the potential risks in the foreign exchange market. Some of the potential risks appeared in the foreign exchange market are;

- Pressure on exchange rate and foreign exchange reserves emerged with negative impact on tourism and exports due to continuation of the COVID-19 pandemic.
- Several foreign debt payments due during the rest of the year while significant foreign debt service requirements falling due in 2022.
- Continuous demand for foreign exchange, arising from repayments of foreign currency debt and payments on imports of essential goods.
- Such risks may ultimately be transmitted to the financial system causing threats to the financial system, thereby overall economic stability as well."

Further, it stated;

> "Approval of the Cabinet of Ministers is sought to place the Resolution before the Parliament for its approval to make an Order in terms of section 22 (3) of the FEA to extend the validity of the Order issued under section 22 of the FEA published in the Gazette No. 2234/49 of 2nd July, 2021, for a period of six months from January 01, 2022."

Accordingly, with the approval of the Cabinet of Ministers, the said Gazette was placed before Parliament for approval.

Moreover, on the 5th of December, 2021, the Minister of Finance submitted a Note to the Cabinet of Ministers titled "Official Visit to India", stating that they discussed four pillars for short and medium-term corporation in this regard;

1. "Ensure the Food and health security it was agreed to extend a line of credit facilities for food, medicine and other essential items import from India.
2. Energy security package that would include a line of credit to cover import of oil from India and early modernization Trincomalee Oil tank farm
3. Offer of a currency Swap to help Sri Lanka address the currant balance of payment issues.
4. Facilitating India investments in different sectors in Sri Lanka that would contribute to growth & explained employment."

Furthermore, as stated above, the Cabinet Paper No. 22/0009/304/002, dated 3rd of January, 2022, was presented to the Cabinet of Ministers by the Minister of Finance regarding "Economy 2022 and the Way Forward" and the Cabinet of Ministers took a policy decision not to seek the advice of the IMF.

Once again, on the 24th of January, 2022, the Minister of Finance presented a Cabinet Memorandum titled "Surcharge Tax Bill" to the Cabinet of Ministers, seeking approval to publish the said Bill in the government Gazette to present it to Parliament.

> "Budget 2022 introduced a number of proposals to strengthen the fiscal position of the country and help regain the economic activities that were affected by the COVID-19 pandemic. As such, a onetime surcharge tax of 25 percent on taxable income is proposed to be imposed on persons or companies with taxable income over Rs. 2,000 million for the year of assessment 2020/2021."

Further, the said Memorandum stated;

> "The approval of the Cabinet of Ministers is sought to:
>
> (I) Publish the Draft Surcharge Tax Bill prepared by the Legal Draftsman attached to this Memorandum as Annexure I in the Government Gazette, and > (II) Submit the said Bill for the approval of Parliament."

Moreover, after the Cabinet of Ministers approved the said Memorandum, the government took steps to enact the Surcharge Tax Act, No. 14 of 2022, which was certified by the Speaker on the 8th of April, 2022.

Furthermore, the Minister of Finance submitted to the Cabinet of Ministers, a Cabinet Memorandum dated 31st of January, 2022, titled "Prudent Control of Public Expenditure".

In the said Cabinet Memorandum, it was stated;

> "I wish to point out the need of paying close attention towards minimizing public expenditure as a country in the way most countries in the world follow for speedy results.
> I have imposed certain orders to control expenditure by budget proposals 2022, the budget circular No. 03/2021 dated 21.12.2021 issued providing guidelines to incur expenditure and Public Finance Circular 01/2020(1) dated 12.01.2022."

Further, in said Cabinet Memorandum, it was stated;

> "As a considerable cost has to be incurred for the implementation of the proposals made by me providing relief to minimize the economic difficulties that the public is faced with due to the above circumstances and the rising prices at present, all ministers are requested to direct their Secretaries to Ministries to thoroughly follow the below mentioned activities to restrict expenditure that have been already introduced.

1. Implementing the following instructions on the public expenditure management set out in the Budget Circular No. 03/2021 dated 21.12.2021 with strict supervision.

    i. Expenditure should be managed within the limits of the Appropriation Act for the year 2022 and requests for additional allocations should not be made.

    ii. Reduce the fuel allowance provided to Hon. Ministers/Members of Parliament and all Government officers who are paid fuel allowance through the Consolidated Fund by 5 litres or an equivalent amount in cash per month.

    iii. Prepare methods to reduce electricity cost by 10 percent

iv. Suspend the construction of new office buildings except the buildings which are being constructed for a period of two years as proposed by budget proposals.

v. Suspend the purchasing of vehicles for Government institutions during the year 2022.

vi. Suspend the recruitment of new staff for institutions for which expenditure is incurred by the Consolidated Fund except to fill vacancies required for the wellbeing of the institution.

vii. New buildings should not be obtained on rent and additional allocations will not be provided to pay rents for buildings which are obtained without provisions viii. Foreign study tours should not be organized by using local funds and officers should not be encouraged to participate in seminars/workshops etc. by using local funds unless any official/ Government participation is required on behalf of Sri Lanka.

ix. Various allowances should not be paid upon internal instructions issued at ministerial or institutional level without a proper authority.

x. New projects should not be commenced without allocating provisions for the settlement of bills in hand or unsettled bills regarding ongoing projects

xi. State institution of the commercial nature which are not financed through the annual budget should take every possible step to cover their expenditure and provisions should not be requested from the Treasury considering the deficit of revenue. State institutions financed through the budget should manage commitments upon the limits of provisions provided to them. Action should be taken to obtain prior approval for capital expenditure without delay.

2. Controlling telephone expenditure through implementation of the Public Finance Circular 01/2020(1) dated 12.01.2022."

[emphasis added]

Moreover, on the 11th of February, 2022, the Minister of Finance submitted a Note to the Cabinet of Ministers on "Economy 2022 and Way Forward" to supplement the Cabinet Memorandum dated 3rd of January, 2022. The following documents were furnished to the Cabinet of Ministers along with the said Note;

1. Foreign Currency Outflows

2. Distribution of responsibility on Foreign Currency Inflow

Once again, a Cabinet Memorandum was presented to the Cabinet of Ministers by the Minister of Finance, dated 19th of February, 2022 regarding the *"Indian Credit Line for Importation of Essential Commodities". It stated, inter alia;

> "The Government of India has agreed to provide its assistance import essential food commodities, medicinal drugs, fuel oils, Portland cement and industrial raw materials under an Indian Credit Line as a result of discussions had with the Indian authorities during my recent visit to India.
> The Government of India has agreed to grant a loan of US $1 billion under a Credit Line to import identified essential food commodities including the aforementioned food items, medicinal drugs, fuel oils, Portland cement and industrial raw materials and the Department of External Resources will negotiate with the Indian Authorities on the loan conditions to make the repayment in three 3 years.

> To get the approval of the Government of Sri Lanka to obtain the loan amount of US$ 1 billion from India under the Indian Credit Line towards importation of essential food commodities, medicinal drugs, fuel oils, Portland cement and industrial raw materials.

To finalize the loan conditions pertaining to repayment of the said loan amount of US$ one billion in 3 years with the Indian Authorities by the Department of External Resources."

Moreover, on the 28th of February, 2022, the Minister of Finance submitted a Cabinet Memorandum to the Cabinet of Ministers, seeking the "Withdrawal of the Bill for the Imposition of the Special Goods and Services Tax and Committee Stage Amendments to the Bill to amend Value Added Tax Act, No. 14 of 2002". In the said Memorandum it was stated;

"The Budgets 2021 and 2022 proposed an online-managed single Special Goods and Services Tax (SGST) in place of multiple taxes and levies imposed under several legal statutes on (i) Liquor, (ii) Cigarette, (iii) Telecommunication, (iv) Betting and Gaming and (v) Vehicles to improve the efficiency of tax collection."

Further, on the 4th of March, 2022, the Minister of Labour submitted a Cabinet Memorandum to the Cabinet of Ministers seeking approval for "Granting Incentives for the Promotion of Remittances from Migrant Workers". In the said Memorandum it was stated;

"Approximately 7 to 8 billion United State of America (US) dollars is remitted annually to this country by the foreign employment sector, which is a major sector through which Sri Lanka receives foreign exchange. At a time when Sri Lanka had faced a severe foreign exchange crisis due to setbacks in the apparel and other export sectors and the collapse of tourism due to restrictions imposed on movement and air navigation faced because of the COVID-19 global pandemic that prevailed during the last two years, the contribution made by the remittances by migrant workers towards strengthening the economy of this country to an extent was immense.

Therefore, steps have been taken to send a large number of Sri Lankan workers to foreign jobs following various strategies with the full intervention by the Sri Lanka

Bureau of Foreign Employment in collaboration with the Ministry of Labour, the Central Bank of Sri Lanka, the Ministry of Sports and Youth, the State Ministry of Foreign Employment Promotion and Market Diversification and the State Ministry of Skills Development, Vocational Education, Research and New Inventions for the purpose of promoting the foreign employment sector and thereby enhancing remittances by migrant workers.

I expect the foreign exchange remitted to this country could be increased by increasing the incentive given for each dollar from Rs.10/- at present to Rs. 38/- in order to encourage and appreciate remitting to this country the foreign exchange earned by migrant workers who shoulder the strengthening of this country's economy by shedding their sweat and hard work and ensure more economic benefits to dependents and family members of migrant workers during this coming New Year Season. In addition, I observe that some support will be given to minimize the dollar crisis which prevails in the country at present by giving this concession for remitting foreign exchange received by foreign employment agents of this country as broker charges from employers in foreign countries.

Further, this kind of processes will also enable us to minimize foreign exchange frauds that are illegally committed.

Therefore, banking all the above-mentioned facts into consideration, I wish to propose to the Cabinet of Ministers that it is suitable to increase the incentive given for remittances from the present rate of Rs. 10 per dollar to Rs. 38/- per dollar when remitting

a. foreign exchange earned by engaging in migrant work and
b. foreign exchange received by foreign employment agents as broker fees from employers in oversees to this country."

Having considered the said Memorandum, the Cabinet of Ministers approved the same.

Moreover, the Ministry of Finance, ERD – ME & SA Division on the 4th of March, 2022 presented to the Cabinet of Ministers, a Cabinet Memorandum with the title "USD 1000 Million Credit Line Facility Agreement between the Government of Sri Lanka and State Bank of India for Import of Essential Goods from India".

Thereafter, on the 5th of March, 2022, the Minister of Finance submitted a Cabinet Memorandum titled "Importation of Essential Commodities for year 2022 under Indian Credit Facility", to the Cabinet of Ministers.

It stated, inter alia;

> "Indian Credit Line for Importation of Essential Commodities" and the decision of the Cabinet of Ministers dated 21st February, 2022. Accordingly, the GOSL has decided to obtain a USD 1 billion loan facility from the Government of India for the importation of essential commodities for the year 2022.
>
> This will enable registered importers to import essential food items, essential pharmaceuticals and raw materials for local production based etc. on monthly requirement, and Government will take steps to implement a proper program to ensure the market consumer needs without shortage, even during the festive season.
>
> The credit facility will be beneficial in terms of meeting the external resource gap for the time being until the foreign currency inflows to the country become favorable during the recovery process.
> Accordingly, approval of the Cabinet of Ministers is sought to authorize the Secretary Ministry of Finance to sign the Credit Facility Agreement according to the format attached as Annex-1 with State Bank of India to borrow USD 1,000 million for importation of essential commodities."

After deliberating the said Memorandum, the Cabinet of Ministers has authorised the Secretary to the Ministry of Finance to sign the said agreement.

Moreover, a Cabinet Memorandum was submitted to the Cabinet of Ministers by the Minister of Finance on the 5th of March, 2022 seeking the *"Implementation of an Incentive Scheme based on Progress of Export".

The said Memorandum stated;

> "Cabinet Meeting held on 14.02.2022 regarding the Note to the Cabinet Paper No.22/0228/301/002 dated 11.02.2022 submitted by His Excellency the President under the title "2022 Economic and the way Forward" and the Cabinet Paper No. 22/0231/304/002-IV dated 11.02.2022 submitted by the Hon. Minister of Finance under the title "2022 Economic and the way Forward.
> I propose to implement an incentive scheme though Sri Lanka Export Development Board for development and promotion of exports to achieve the expected foreign exchange inflow of the Sri Lanka Export Development Board and the Department of Commerce which comes under the Ministry of Trade were also entrusted responsibilities as mentioned in Annexure I to the Cabinet Paper No. 22/0231/304/002-IV dated 11.022022."

The said Memorandum was also approved by the Cabinet of Ministers.

Further, on the 6th of March, 2022 the Minister of Finance submitted a Note titled "Economy 2022 and Way Forward" to the Cabinet of Ministers. The said Note, inter alia, stated;

> "The impact of the COVID-19 pandemic was largely felt by all sectors of the economy and affected the lives of the people particularly during the year of 2020. However, the country is on its path to recovery with economic growth expected to be above 4 percent in 2021 with the committed aggressive vaccination drive of the Government. Exports have risen significantly considerably recording over USD 1 billion continuously since June 2021 up to February 2022. The economy is poised to take off with a growth over 5 percent in 2022.

However, the external sector suffered due to setbacks in the tourism sector, the drop in workers' remittances and the decline in foreign direct investments. In addition, inflation as per the Colombo Consumer Price Index (CCPI) has risen 15.1 percent in February due to both supply and demand side shocks emanating from the increase in fuel and world commodity prices, supply chain disruptions and increased demand.

Workers' Remittances

As the largest single source of foreign exchange inflow in Sri Lanka of over the past decades, workers' remittances play a vital role by contributing to offset BOP deficits, improved liquidity conditions in the domestic foreign exchange market, augment the international reserve levels and thereby improving the country's credit worthiness, poverty reduction and promotion of savings and investments.

Amidst the pandemic, workers' remittances which stood at USD 6.7 billion in 2019, increased by 5.75 percent to USD 7.1 billion in 2020. However, the number of departures for foreign employment has declined heavily 73 percent to 38,875 in 2020 from 203,075 in 2019. In 2021, although the number of departures increased to 122,263 showing signs of recovery, the workers' remittances declined by 22 percent to USD 5.5 billion in 2021 in comparison to 2020 mainly due to foreign currency being remitted via informal channels.

By facilitating foreign employment opportunities, it is expected to send over 300,000 employees for foreign employment in 2022 and 35,892 departures for foreign employment have been recorded up to mid-February. Accordingly, it is expected to earn up to USD 7.5 billion in workers' remittances in 2022.

In order to maximize the positive effects of remittances on economic growth and development, the Government is in the process of implementing the following policy initiatives in this regard.

Pharmaceutical Production

The pharmaceutical zones are established with the view of expanding the local manufacturing of pharmaceuticals and facilitating investments therein with the ultimate objective of reducing pharmaceutical imports and promote exports in the long run, while also contributing the economy through job creation.

Port and Shipping Services

Earnings from sea transport services, recorded as USD 318 Mn in 2020 from Sri Lanka Ports Authority (5LPA), South Asia Gateway Terminals (SAGT), Colombo International Container Terminals (CICT) and other maritime services, declined marginally to 315 USD Mn in 2021. Earnings from ports and shipping services expect to Increase up to USD 350 Mn in 2022.

Earnings from Ports and Shipping is further expected to increase with the following policy measures:

- Development of East Container Terminal (ECT) second Phase expected to be completed by 2024 with
- 12 giant cranes and 40 normal cranes. West Container Terminal (WCT)- Cabinet of Ministers has granted approval to develop the WCT with Public Private Partnership (PPP) arrangement and Agreement has been signed between SLPA, Adani Group of India and John Keels Holdings PLC.

- Development of Kakesanthurai Port-Feasibility study completed
- Trincomalee-Approval of Cabinet of Ministers has been granted and Expression of Interest (EOI) is being developed.
- Galle-EOS/Request for Proposals (RFPs) are called

Non-debt creating inflows such as earnings from tourism, workers' remittances, import substitutive industries such as pharmaceuticals, earnings from sources including ports and shipping together with the details on strategic interventions to increase foreign currency inflows and to reduce foreign currency outflows aimed at improving the external sector outlook of the country, are submitted for the information of the Cabinet of Ministers.

Accordingly, the approval of the Cabinet of Ministers was sought;

- To provide public servants with monthly allowance of Rs. 5,000/- from January.
- To provide to the pensioners a monthly allowance of Rs. 5,000/-.
- To provide extra monthly allowance of Rs. 1,000/- to Samurdhi beneficiaries.
- To support the programme that to conduct home gardening programme to encourage growing of vegetables and fruits for self-consumptions.
- Flour Subsidy – To provide 15Kg wheat flour monthly at Rs. 80 to plantation worker families.
- To completely exempt import of essential food and medicines taxes."

The Cabinet of Ministers approved the said Memorandum having considered the hardships faced by the general public in this country.

Thereafter, the Minister of Finance, on the 6th of March, 2022 submitted a Note to the Cabinet of Ministers, detailing the *"Staff Report Recommendations for the 2021 Article IV Consultation of the International Monetary Fund (IMF)". The said report stated;

"Usually every year, under Article IV of the IMF's Articles of Agreement, the IMF holds bilateral discussions with member countries including Sri Lanka. A staff team visits the member country, gathers economic and financial data, and discusses the country's economic developments and policies with authorities. On return to headquarters, the staff prepares a report, which forms the basis for discussions by the Executive Board. Accordingly, the 2021 Article IV discussions with Sri Lankan authorities took place in Colombo during December 7-20, 2021."

Summary of Key Recommendations as per the Press Release on the 2nd of March, 2022, by the staff of the IMF stated;

i. Urgently implementing a credible and coherent strategy to restore macroeconomic stability and debt sustainability, while protecting vulnerable groups and reducing poverty through strengthened, well-targeted social safety nets.

ii. Fiscal consolidation based on high-quality revenue measures through raising income tax and VAT rates, minimizing exemptions together with revenue administration reforms.

iii. Continuously improving expenditure rationalization, budget formulation, and execution and the fiscal rule.

iv. Reforming State-Owned Enterprises and adopting cost-recovery energy pricing,

v. Implementing a tighter monetary policy stance to contain rising inflationary pressures and phasing out Central Bank's direct financing of budget deficits.

vi. Gradually returning to a market-determined and flexible exchange rate to facilitate external adjustment and rebuild international reserves.

vii. Gradually unwinding capital flow management measures as conditions permit.

viii. Closely monitoring of underlying asset quality and identifying vulnerabilities through stress testing to mitigate financial stability risks while strengthening the regulatory, supervision and resolution frameworks.

ix. Renewed efforts on growth-enhancing structural reforms such as increasing female labour force participation and reducing youth unemployment.

x. Diversifying the economy, phasing out import restrictions, and improving the business and investment climate in general.

xi. Prudent management of the Colombo Port City project, and continued efforts to strengthen governance and fight corruption.

xii. Increase climate resilience."

[emphasis added]

Further, the Note included the following observations made by the Minister of Finance;

> "The Sri Lankan economy was not in a healthy position when the COVID-19 pandemic hit the country. The economy was crippled by the Easter Sunday Attacks which adversely affected tourism and investor confidence. The improvement in business sentiments following the Presidential elections held in November 2019 and the implementation of the new policy agenda of the Government were disturbed by the pandemic and the required containment and remedial measures. The Government embarked on a reform agenda to strengthen non-debt foreign exchange inflows such as exports, remittances and foreign direct investments and to absorb a part of such inflows towards rebuilding foreign exchange reserves. Exports recorded a historic high in 2021 and surpassed over USD 1 Billion exports consecutively since June 2021 upto February 2022 with an ongoing rebound in tourism.
> The government remains committed to ensuring medium term fiscal consolidation. Efforts are underway to recoup revenue losses observed during the pandemic, particularly through a one-time surcharge tax, social security contribution levy and increasing the Value Added Tax (VAT) on financial services while strengthening the tax administration in line with digitalization drive of the Government. Expenditure management has been strengthened by the introduction of quarterly commitment ceilings in the Budget 2022. Ongoing digitalization of the economy including in delivery public services is expected to support both revenue enhancement and expenditure management.

Reforms to State Owned Enterprises (SOEs) are also being carried out, albeit under difficult circumstances caused by rising energy prices and other pandemic related effects on key SOES. Revision of domestic petroleum prices in June and December 2021 helped improve the balance sheet of Ceylon Petroleum Corporation (CPC), and the Government stands ready to revise prices to reflect international market trends while minimizing the adverse effect of such revision on the economy.

A gradual reduction In the Government's external debt exposure is already observed, and the exposure to the International Sovereign Debt market is expected to decline from US$ 14.55 billion at end 2019 to US 11.55 by end 2022. Sri Lanka commits to maintaining its impeccable track record of debt servicing.

I acknowledge that the recent rise in inflation, driven mainly by food inflation (latest at 25 percent), rising petroleum prices, and supply chain disruptions, remains a major concern. The Government has taken measures to mitigate the impact of rising cost of living on the general public, while the Central Bank has tightened monetary policy to dampen demand driven pressures on inflation.

The Sri Lankan economy is going through one of the most difficult episodes in its long history, and I am confident that Sri Lanka will rebound, as it has done in the past, as the effects of the pandemic subside, aided by policies that are being put in place to strengthen its resilience and uplift the lives of our people on a sustainable basis." (It is pertinent to note that these observations are similar to the views expressed by the IMF team in the year 2020.)

I wish to inform the Cabinet of Ministers the key recommendations made by the Executive Board of the IMF concluded the Article IV consultation with Sri Lanka on February 25, 2022 and my observations.

The Cabinet Paper No.22/0404/304/028 dated 14th of March, 2022 and the Note presented to the Cabinet of Ministers dated 6th of March, 2022 by the Minister of Finance on "Staff Report Recommendations for the 2021 Article IV Consultation of the International Monetary Fund (IMF)" were considered by the Cabinet of Ministers along with further clarifications made by the Minister of Finance. After discussion, the Cabinet of Ministers decided to authorise the Minister of Finance to take the necessary steps to obtain technical advice and the assistance of the IMF to resolve the current situation encountered by the Sri Lankan economy.

Thereafter, the Minister of Finance on the 7th of March, 2022 submitted a Cabinet Memorandum seeking the approval of the Cabinet of Ministers, for the "Allocation of the required budgetary provisions for fulfilment of the Energy requirement". It was stated, inter alia;

"The Covid-19 pandemic has affected not only the Sri Lankan economy but economy of the entire world which has led to a highest crude oil prices during the last ten years which severely affected the economy of the country and lead to severe fuel crises. However, the Government has taken some control measures without shifting entire burden to the general public.

Furthermore, due to the above fuel crises, the Government of Sri Lanka has made arrangement to obtain a loan facility USD 500 million through the Exim Bank of India for fuel supply."

Accordingly, the approval of Cabinet of Ministers was sought for the following;

"To obtain the covering approval for Rs. 15 billion which has been provided by General Treasury to the CPC as CEB equity infusion.

To grant the authority to the General Treasury for the allocation of Rs. 86.7 billion including Rs. 15 billion as a capital infusion to meet the financial requirements of the CEB and empower the Director General of the Department of National Budget to provide necessary additional allocation for this purpose and authority to collect through Treasury Bills issued by the Central Bank of Sri Lanka."

The said Memorandum was also approved by the Cabinet of Ministers.

Further, the Minister of Finance submitted a Note to the Cabinet of Ministers dated 10th of March, 2022, with the title *"General Direction to Accept Bona - Fide Investment of Non-Resident Companies by Resident Companies". The said Note stated, inter alia;

"Accordingly, approval has been granted as recommended by the Monetary Board of the Central Bank of Sri Lanka, to issue a direction under Section 7 (10) of the Foreign Exchange Act No. 12 of 2017 as follows:

(a) Grant permission on case by case basis to the request of Resident Companies to issue shares to Non-Resident investors, who have remitted funds directly to the account of such resident companies instead of remitting through the Inward Investment account of such Non-Resident Investors"

(b) "Grant permission to the relevant dealers to credit any income and capital proceeds of the shares to be issued by Resident Companies to Non- Resident Investors under the permission granted by the Monetary Board"

On the 11th of March, 2022 the Minister of Finance submitted another Cabinet Memorandum to the Cabinet of Ministers to consider implementing decisions regarding "Managing Foreign Exchange Inflows through Banks and Registered Financial Institutions".

The said Memorandum stated, inter alia;

> "Due to Covid-19 pandemic, Sri Lanka faced a severe foreign exchange crisis due to the collapse in the tourism sector and the downturn of foreign employment sector, which is a main source of foreign exchange earnings of Sri Lanka. This foreign exchange crisis in the country further intensified with the migrant workers and exporters, in particular, resorted to using illegal money transfer methods to get a higher rupee value for foreign exchange and delaying the remittances into the country in the hope that the United State Dollar (USD) would appreciate further against the rupee.
>
> Taking these factors into consideration, the Central Bank of Sri Lanka has allowed the exchange rate to be determined on the market forces with effect from 07.03.2022. Since it is guaranteed to provide greater economic returns on the foreign exchange earned by migrant workers, who are committed to strengthening the economy of Sri Lanka, through this decision, there is no need to further implement the Government's incentive programme to promote migrant workers' remittances at a cost of over Rs. 20 billion per month. Also, foreign exchange earnings of exporters also have high economic benefits through determining exchange rates based on market mechanisms, they are no longer encourage to delay the remittances of foreign exchange assuming the dollar continues to appreciate or to exchange foreign earnings through risky illegal means. Therefore, there is no need to further implement the incentive scheme to bring in the foreign exchange earned by exporters.

(a) to provide incentives to encourage remittances of migrant workers and brokerage fees receive to foreign employment agents as foreign currencies, and

(b) to implement an incentive scheme based on export progress to encourage short-term repatriation of foreign exchange earned by exporters."

Thereafter, the said incentive programme was discontinued with the approval of the Cabinet of Ministers.

Moreover, the Minister of Finance submitted to the Cabinet of Ministers on the 18th of March, 2022, a Cabinet Memorandum seeking *"Approval for Promulgation of Regulation to extend the Validity Period to open Special Deposit Accounts introduced under the Foreign Exchange Act No. 12 of 2017". It was, inter alia, stated*;*

> "Purpose of this Cabinet Memorandum is to obtain approval of the Cabinet of Ministers to promulgate Regulations to further extend the validity period of the "Special Deposit Accounts" introduced under the Foreign Exchange Act, No. 12 of 2017.
>
> Given the above, it is proposed to promulgate Regulations made under Section 7 (1) of Foreign Exchange Act, No. 12 of 2017 as described in the Annexure II, to extend the validly period for opening and maintaining of Special Deposit Accounts for another year, which will be recorded as 36 months from April 08, 2020."

Accordingly, the approval of the Cabinet of Ministers was sought to;

(a) Promulgate Regulations under Section 7 (1) of Foreign Exchange Act, No. 12 of 2017

(b) Submit the Regulations for approval of Parliament"

Once again, on the 21st of March, 2022, a Cabinet Memorandum seeking approval to issue *"Foreign Exchange Regulations to facilitate Investments in the Colombo Port City" was submitted to the Cabinet of Ministers by the Minister of Finance. It stated, inter alia;

> "The purpose of this Cabinet Memorandum is to obtain approval of the Cabinet of Ministers to issue Regulations under the Foreign Exchange Act. No. 12 of 2017 in respect of foreign exchange transactions relating to the investments in the area of authority of the Colombo Port City Economic Commission.
>
> Colombo Port City Economic Commission (the Commission) and M/s CHEC Port City Colombo (Pvt.) Ltd (the Company) have made a request to the Central Bank of Sri Lanka (Central Bank) to issue Regulations and Directions under the provisions of the Foreign Exchange Act (the Act), as an interim measure until the necessary Rules and Regulations are issued/promulgated by the Commission.
>
> Given the above, approval of the Cabinet of Ministers is sought to:
>
> (a) Promulgate Regulations under Section 7(1) of the Foreign Exchange Act No. 12 of 2017, as largely set out in the Annexure I and Annexure II as described in the Paragraph No. 4 above.

Furthermore, on the 25th of March, 2022, the Minister of Finance submitted to the Cabinet of Ministers, a Cabinet Memorandum titled "Rapid Action Plan for Economic Revival". The said Memorandum, inter alia, stated*;*

> "As approved by the Cabinet of Ministers by their decision dated 21st March, 2022 and as noted under proposal 2 (1) of the Cabinet Memorandum titled "Rapid Action Plan for Economic Revival"; a Technical Committee comprising of officers from the Central Bank of Sri Lanka and the General Treasury, was appointed to engage with the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and this Committee comprises of the following members. (Annexure 01)"

The above Memorandum was considered by the Cabinet of Ministers and approved the same.

On the 26th of March, 2022, another Cabinet Memorandum was submitted to the Cabinet of Ministers by the Minister of Finance seeking approval for the *"Submission of the 2021 Article IV Report of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) to the Parliament". The said Memorandum stated, inter alia;

> "Accordingly, the 2021 Article IV discussions with Sri Lankan authorities took place in Colombo during December 7-20, 2021.
> ...
>
>
> The key recommendations include revenue-based fiscal consolidation, restoring debt sustainability, near-term monetary policy tightening, restoring market-determined and flexible exchange rate and strengthening social safety net programmes. My observations on the commendations have already been informed to the Cabinet of Ministers through Note to the Cabinet bearing No. 22/0404/304/028 dated March 06, 2022, which has been noted by the Cabinet of Ministers as per the Cabinet Decision dated March 14, 2022.
>
> ...
>
> ...
> Approval of the Cabinet of Ministers is sought to submit the 2021 Article IV report prepared by the International Monetary Fund (Annexure) to the Parliament for information."

On the 28th of March, 2022, after the discussion regarding the Cabinet Memorandum was submitted to the Cabinet of Ministers by the Minister of Finance on the 26th of March, 2022, "it was decided to grant approval to submit the 2021 Article IV report prepared by the International Monetary Fund in respect of Sri Lanka, attached to the Memorandum, to Parliament".

Further, the Cabinet Memorandum dated 26th of March, 2022, submitted by the Minister of Finance on "Expeditious Measures for Economic Revival" was considered by the Cabinet of Ministers.

After discussion, the Cabinet noted the measures taken by the Minister of Finance for the appointment of the Technical Committee comprising of Officials of the Central Bank of Sri Lanka and the General Treasury to arrange the programme to engage with the IMF and for the appointment of the Committee for Sustainable Management of Public Debt, as per the Cabinet decision dated 21st of March, 2022 on CP No. 22/0477/304/036. Hence, it was decided to authorise the Secretary to the Cabinet of Ministers to convey the said decision immediately to the relevant authorities for necessary action.

On the 3rd of April, 2022 the Minister of Finance submitted a Cabinet Memorandum to the Cabinet of Ministers, detailing the *"Proposed Emergency Crisis Response Package to be funded by World Bank". He stated, inter alia;

> "I will be having discussions with the World Bank on 11 April 2022 on strengthening social protection system in Sri Lanka and also the liquidity crisis faced by the country. I expect to provide emergency support for households affected by the pandemic situation in the country and to help them cope with the effects of the economic crisis and also for laying the ground for the strengthening of the country's social protection system for increased future resilience.
>
>
> Proposed Financing Arrangement
>
> The total estimated financing envelope of the proposed Emergency Crisis Response Package is USS 340 million, of which;
>
> (i) USS 40 million would be secured through the repurposing from the existing loans and

(ii) US$ 300 million would be obtained as a new IBRD loan to implement the proposed, Emergency Social Safety Net Project (ESSNP).”

In the above context, the approval of the Cabinet of Ministers was sought to;

1. Make necessary arrangements to repurpose US$ 40 million from the identified ongoing Projects in the World Bank portfolio;

2. Initiate discussion with the World Bank to formulate and negotiate Emergency Social Safety Net Project (ESSNP) and borrow US$ 300 million from the IBRD.

3. Authorize Secretary, Ministry of Finance to enter into a loan agreement, once the discussions are concluded with the World Bank, to borrow USS 300 million from the 18RO to implement the proposed Emergency Social Safety Net Project (ESSNP)”

Some of the steps that were taken by the Central Bank of Sri Lanka and the Ministry of Finance to improve the economy of the country -

The Auditor General's Report states;

"2.9.8 Secretary to the President, Dr. P B Jayasundera had sent a letter on 08 April 2020 to the Managing Director of IMF, Ms.Kristalina Georgieva requesting a Rapid Financing Instrument – RFI. A summary of the content of the said letter is as follows.

a) The Sri Lanka economy is experiencing the devastating impact of the novel coronavirus (covid -19) pandemic.
b) Lower tourist arrivals due to international travel bans have reduced economic activities in hotel, restaurant, trade, transport, and other sectors, with large impact on growth, employment, and income.
c) The disruption in global supply chain have affected our exports and imports, reducing our foreign exchange receipts and fiscal revenues.
d) The slowdown in major overseas employment markets for Sri Lankan workers and disruption to remit their funds have substantially lowered our remittance inflows.

e) Our preliminary estimates suggests that sharp decline in our economic growth, fiscal revenues, and foreign exchange receipts would create large and urgent fiscal and balance of payment needs.

f) Against this background, we would like to request emergency financing from the IMF under the Rapid Financing Instrument (RFI). At this stage, we would like to replace the current Extended Fund Facility (EFF) arrangement with RFI, but we are open to your suggestion.

g) We are also requesting additional support from other development partners, particularly Japan, the Peoples' Republic of China, the world Bank and Asian Development Bank (ADB)."

Moreover, the Auditor General in the Audit Report produced marked as 'Z' has evaluated the three issues on which he was directed to report to this court. In his report, he has stated that it is not possible to determine whether a loss had been caused to the Central Bank. Further, he has not specified any violations with regard to any of the matters that were referred to him by the court.

Therefore, I am further of the opinion that the petitioners did not establish any violations of the laws by the respondents. Hence, it is not possible to hold that the respondents have violated the Fundamental Rights of the petitioners guaranteed by the Constitution as pleaded in the two petitions. A similar view was expressed in Wijesinghe v. Attorney General and Others (1978-79-80) 1 SLR 102 at 106 where it was held;

> "Every wrong decision or breach of the law does not attract the constitutional remedies relating to fundamental rights. Where a transgression of the law takes place, due to some corruption, negligence or error of judgment, I do not think a person can be allowed to come under Article 126 and allege that there has been a violation of constitutional guarantees. There may also be other instances where mistakes or wrongful acts are done in the course of proceedings for which ordinarily there are built-in safe-guards or adequate procedures for obtaining relief."
>

Time Bar Objection

As stated above, some of the respondents pleaded that the two applications were not filed within the period of one month stipulated in Article 126(2) of the Constitution.

Article 17 of the Constitution states;

> "Every person shall be entitled to apply to the Supreme Court, as provided by Article 126, in respect of the infringement or imminent infringement*, by executive or administrative action, of a fundamental right to which such person is entitled under the provisions of this Chapter."*
>

Further, Article 126 (1) and (2) of the Constitution states;

> "(1) The Supreme Court shall have sole and executive jurisdiction to hear and determine any question relating to the infringement or imminent infringement by executive or administrative action of any fundamental right or language right declared and recognized by Chapter III or Chapter IV.

Moreover, Supreme Court Rule 44 states:

> "44. (1) Where any person applies to the Supreme Court by a petition in writing, under and in terms of Article 126 (2) of the Constitution, for relief or redress in respect of an infringement or an imminent infringement*, of any fundamental right or language right, by executive or administrative action, he shall –*

He shall, also refer to the specific provisions of the Constitution under which any such right is claimed."*
> [emphasis added]

A careful consideration of the two petitions show that the petitioners allege different infringements in each of those petitions, though some are identical. Further, both petitions do not specifically set out the dates on which each of the alleged infringements occurred. Thus, it is necessary to consider the averments in the two petitions to ascertain the alleged dates of the infringements in order to decide on the objection on time bar.

High Levels of Inflation

22. The Petitioners state that the citizenry of the Republic at present is facing unprecedent economic hardship, with extreme levels inflation causing the price essential goods and services to increase at extreme rates. In particular, the Petitioners state that as at April 2022, the price of essential goods had increased from the previous year in the following extents:

(a) The price of Petrol had increased by 85%;

(b) The price of Diesel had increased by 69%;

(c) The price of a cylinder of Liquid Petroleum Gas had increased by 84%;

(d) The price of Turmeric had increased by 443%,

(e) The price of Bread had increased by 433%;

(f) The price of Rice had increased by 93%;

(g) The price of Dhal had increased by 171%

23. The Petitioners further state that since such article was published, the price of several and/or all of the aforementioned goods has further increased, to wit:

(b) On the 27th of April 2022, the price of Gas Cylinders was further increased, causing a 12.5kg cylinder of Liquid Petroleum Gas to cost Rs. 4,860/-;

(c) On the 19th of May 2022, the price of a loaf of bread was increased by Rs. 30/-, to Rs. 170/

(d) On the 2nd of May 2022, the Consumer Affairs Authority impose a Maximum Retail Price on certain varieties of rice, setting the maximum price at which a kilogram of "Red Nadu Rice", "Red and White Samba" and "Keen Samba" could be sold at Rs. 220/-, Rs. 230/, and Rs. 260/- respectively;

(e) On the 19th of April 2022, the Ceylon Petroleum Corporation increased the price of Petrol (92 Octane) to Rs. 338 per liter

True copies of article published in the Island Online dated 23rd May 2022. NewsFirst.lk dated 19th May 2022, NewsFirst.lk dated 3rd May 2022, and Outlook India dated 23rd May 2022 are annexed hereto marked as P6(a), P6(b), P6(c), and P6(d), respectively and are pleaded as part and parcel hereof.

36. The Petitioners further state that the overall rate of inflation as measured by the National Consumer Price Index on a year on year basis is 33.8% in April 2022, which is the highest recorded in the history of the Republic, and the South Asian Region.

37. However, the Petitioners state that since 2019, the foreign currency reserves available to the Republic were intentionally depleted by the 28th Respondent, to wit, the value of the usable Foreign Exchange reserves maintained by the Republic:

(a) As at February 2022 amounted to USD 2,300,000,000/-;
(b) As at March 2022 amounted to USD 1,930,000,000/-;
(c) As at May 2022 amounted to a sum below USD 50,000,000/-;"

40. Furthermore, the Petitioners state that at the COPE Committee Meeting held on 25.05.2022, Dr. Nandalal Weerasinghe, the Governor of the Central Bank of Sri Lanka and member of the 28th Respondent stated that the Republic does not possess any and/ or sufficient liquid foreign currency reserves to pay its foreign debts or to purchase necessary imported goods, and the assistance of the International Monetary Fund and foreign nations is required to assist the Republic in this regard (vide P20(a) and P20(b) below).

45. The Petitioners state that the views expressed by the Hon. 2B Respondent have further been reiterated by the officials of the International Monetary Fund (hereinafter referred to as the "IMF") who have been liaising with the Republic for the purpose of alleviating the present economic crisis faced thereby. Specifically, the Managing Director of the IMF, Mrs. Kristalina Georgieva when speaking to NDTV stated as follows:

"It is breaking my heart to watch the pictures of what is happening in the country that was once quite prosperous. It is a result of mismanagement and therefore the most important thing to be done is to put the country back on a sound microeconomic footing"

A true copy of the article published on the Daily FT on 27.05.2022 is annexed hereto marked as P15, and is pleaded as part and parcel hereof."

INVOCATION OF THE JURISDICTION OF YOUR LORDSHIPS' COURT

76. In the circumstances aforesaid, the Petitioners state that the actions and decision of His Excellency the President, and/or the 2nd to 27th Respondents, and/or the 28th to the 32nd Respondents and/or the 33rd Respondent (in his representative capacity) and/or any one or more of them in mismanaging the economy of the Republic in the manner morefully set out above, and failing to abide by the mandatory provisions of the Monetary Law Act has violated and /or imminently violates and/or continuously violates the Fundamental Right to Equality and Equal Protection of the Law guaranteed to the Petitioner and to the citizens of the Republic under Article 12(1) of the Constitution and further violates the Fundamental Right to the freedom to engage by himself or in association with others in any lawful occupation, profession, trade, business or enterprise guaranteed to the citizens of the Republic under Article 14(1)(g) of the Constitution, in as much as:

(a) The mismanagement of the economy of the Republic and the acts of the 2nd, 2A, 29th to 32nd Respondents, and 38th Respondents set out above have caused high levels of inflation to arise, preventing and/ or hindering the performance of lawful trade and occupation inasmuch as the citizens of the Republic may not be able to afford the essential raw materials used for such business/trade;

(b) The scarcity of essential imported items including petrol and diesel has prevented and/or hindered the ability of citizens of the Republic to attend to their business and/or trade, inasmuch as the same are prevented and/ or hindered from travelling thereto,

(c) The sharp rise in the cost of living caused by the high levels of inflation referred to above has rendered several businesses commercially unviable, and/or have caused the said businesses/trades to be rendered insolvent and/or approach insolvency,

(d) The citizens of the Republic are vulnerable to succumbing to illness and/ or are denied access to effective healthcare due and owing the inability of the Republic to import vital medicines which are used to healthcare professionals and hospitals when treating patients;

(e) The 28th, 29th, 30th, 31st and 32nd Respondents and/ or any one or more of them have failed and / or neglected to abide by the mandatory provisions contained in Section 66 of the Monetary Law Act, and have by willful default and/or by misconduct have caused loss and damage to the Central Bank of Sri Lanka and consequently to the citizens at large, by failing to maintain any exchange arrangements as are consistent with the underlying trends in the country, by artificially causing the exchange rate of the rupee to be held at arbitrary values;

(f) The 28th, 29th, 30th, 31st and 32nd Respondents and/or any one or more of them have failed and/or neglected to abide by the mandatory provisions contained in Section 68 of the Monetary Law Act, and have by willful default and/or by misconduct have caused loss and damage to the Central Bank of Sri Lanka and consequently to the citizens at large, by settling and /or failing to prevent the settlement of the International Sovereign Bond payment due in January 2022 notwithstanding the lack of foreign exchange reserves with the 28th Respondent;

(g) The 28th Respondent has failed to take any necessary steps to recover any loss and/or damage suffered by the Central Bank of Sri Lanka consequent to the decisions made by the 29th, 30th, 31st and 32nd Respondent, and has therefore allowed any losses sustained thereby to remain;

(h) His Excellency the President, and the 1st to 27th Respondents and/or any one or more of them have acted arbitrarily in reducing the tax revenue available to the Republic by reducing the levels of taxation imposed on the citizens;

(i) The lack of essential imports, high levels of inflation, and depletion of foreign currency reserves was caused by the arbitrary and misconceived acts of the 1st to 32nd Respondents and the 38th Respondent and/or any one or more of them;

(j) His Excellency the President, and the 1st to 27th Respondents and the 38th Respondent and/or any one or more of them have taken into account irrelevant considerations and failed to take into account relevant considerations inter alia by effecting reductions in tax on the sole premise of the election promise made by His Excellency the President,

(k) His Excellency the President, and the 1st to 27th Respondents, and the 38th Respondent and/or any one or more of them are in beach of the principles of natural justice and fairness;

(l) The said the 1st to 27th Respondents and the 38th Respondent and / or any one or more of them have acted in breach of public trust and confidence reposed in them.

77. In all the aforesaid circumstances, the Petitioner states that the conduct of His Excellency the President, and the 1st to 32nd Respondents and any one or more of them are thus and otherwise ultra vires, illegal, irrational, unjustifiable, ad hoc, arbitrary and capricious. The aforesaid conduct offends the principles of natural justice, rule of law, transparency, and good governance."

Averments relating to the alleged infringements in* SC/FR Application No. 212/2022

The following averments in the petition of the said application stated;

"8. The Petitioners state that the 1(b) Respondent and the 2nd, 3rd, 6th, 7th, 9th and 10th Respondents made a series of irrational, arbitrary, patently illegal, wrongful decisions, in complete dereliction of their statutory duties and fiduciary responsibility, for collateral and extraneous purposes, during the years 2019 to 2022, which has resulted in the Petitioners and the public of Sri Lanka being denied their right to equality, equal protection of the law and their right to life as guaranteed by the Constitution of Sri Lanka.

9. (a) The Petitioners state that the aforesaid series of irrational, arbitrary, patently illegal, and wrongful acts on the part of the 1(b) Respondent and the 2nd, 3rd, 6th, 7th, 9th and 10th Respondents, has resulted in catastrophic long-term and short-term ramifications to the economy, and caused the country to default on the repayment of foreign debts, for the first time in its history, and has relegated Sri Lanka to a state of bankruptcy / insolvency, as will be morefully elaborated in this Application.

10. (a)The Petitioners state that, as morefully set out in this Application, the said actions / inaction and gross mismanagement of the economy by the 1(b)

Respondent and the 2nd, 3rd, 6th, 7th, 9th and 10th Respondents, have resulted in an unprecedented economic crisis driven by debt unsustainability, which has garnered the attention of the world at large

(b) The Petitioners state that the International Monetary Fund (hereinafter referred to as the "IMF") by its IMF-Sri Lanka Staff Report for the 2021 Article IV Consultation dated 10/02/2022, categorized, for the first time the sovereign debt of Sri Lanka as "unsustainable" thereby bringing into effect a cascade of inimical repercussions to the economy of Sri Lanka in general and the external debt portfolio in particular, and thereby leading the State to issue a Notice of Default dated 12/04/2022 (P-2(a)), whereby the State of Sri Lanka informed all its creditors that all foreign debt repayment would be suspended, which debt repayments included the following categories of debt:

b. All outstanding series of bonds issued in international capital markets

c. Certain bilateral (government to government) credits

d. All foreign currency denominated loan agreements or credit facilities with commercial banks or institutional lenders, including those owned by foreign governments

e. All amounts payable following a call during the said interim period upon a guarantee issued in respect of a debt of a third party.

A true copy of the IMF Country Report No.22/91 (2021 Article IV consultation Press Release: Staff Report and Statement by the Executive Director for Sri Lanka) is annexed to the original Petition filed in this Application dated 16 June 2022, marked as "P-3" and is pleaded as part and parcel hereof.

11. The Petitioner states that thereafter, on or around the 19th of May 2022, Sri Lanka defaulted on loans that fell due and has now been downgraded by rating agencies as a defaulting nation, as will be morefully elaborated on in this Application.

12. The Petitioners state that the Petitioners are invoking the fundamental rights jurisdiction of Your Lordships' Court on the basis that the 1(b) Respondent and the 2nd, 3rd, 6th, 7th, 9th and 10th Respondents by a series of actions, commencing in 2019 and continuing to date, (as morefully set out hereinafter) including acts that have necessitated the defaulting of Sovereign debt, have infringed and/or violates and continue to infringe and/or violate the fundamental rights of the Petitioners and of all citizens of Sri Lanka, as made abundantly clear at the recent meeting of the Committee on Public Enterprises (COPE) on or about 25% May 2020, where it transpired that the actions of the said Respondents in respect of inter alia, the RFI facility (Rapid Financing Instrument) of the IME and the management of the rupee, had engendered the present crisis, as will be morefully elaborated in this Application.

13. The Petitioners state that such actions and/or inactions of the 1(b) Respondent and the 2nd, 3rd, 6th, 7th, 9th and 10th Respondents, are broadly categorized as follows:

    (i) the illegal, arbitrary and unreasonable abolition, removal and/or reduction of taxes effected in the year 2019 and the consequent reduction in government revenue,

    (ii) the refusal to change the aforesaid illegal, irrational and arbitrary decisions to reduce taxes despite the consequent downgrading of Sri Lanka's credit rating and the emergence of the COVID-19 Pandemic,

    (iii) the failures and/or omissions to take remedial measures subsequent to rating downgrade caused*, inter alia, by the illegal, arbitrary and unlawful actions of the 2nd, 3rd, 6th, 7th, 9th and 10th respondents,*

    (iv) the refusal and failure of the 2nd, 3rd, 6th, 7th, 9th and 10th respondents to ensure conditions were met in a manner that would permit Sri Lanka to avail itself of the sum of money agreed to be given to Sri Lanka by the IMF in terms of the Extended Fund Facility agreement as set out hereinafter,

(v) the failure to obtain available aid to combat the economic hardships faced as a consequence of COVID-19, especially in the face of a lack of government revenue,

(vi) the failure to act in terms of the Monetary Law of Sri Lanka*, to maintain international reserves and the international stability of the rupee,*

(vii) the failure to devalue the Sri Lankan rupee in a timely, orderly and appropriate manner*, despite widespread calls and demands to do so,*

(viii) the failure and / or omissions to appropriately devalue the rupee which resulted in fluctuations in worker remittances, and subsequently, the country's foreign reserves and Sri Lanka's balance of payment,

(ix) the decision to continue to service Sovereign debt without any restructuring*, despite the futility and grievous prejudice in doing so,*

(x) the continued refusal to seek the assistance of the IMF*, despite widespread calls and demands to do so,*

(xi) the subsequent admission by the former President of the Republic that the aforementioned refusal to seek the assistance of the IMF was wrong and misconceived, and

(xii) the unreasonable, arbitrary actions and / or omissions which resulted in a default of the country's foreign debt.

16. The Petitioners state that in or around November/December 2019, the Commissioner General of Inland Revenue issued a number of notices on the instructions of the 2nd Respondent which sought to reduce a number of taxes [hereinafter referred to as 'tax revisions'] by inter alia:

a. Removing/abolishing the Taxes set out by Parliament under the Nation Building Tax Act, No. 9 of 2009 as last amended by Act, No. 20 of 2019

Facts relevant to the time bar objection

As stated above, after the former President assumed duties as the President of the Republic in November 2019, the government reduced the taxes payable by the people of the country. The petitioners stated that the former President, together with the 2nd respondent, reduced the taxes for the sole purpose of delivering the election promises made. Hence, it was submitted that the decision to reduce taxes was purely politically motivated. Further, due to the said reduction in taxation, the Republic suffered enormous and unprecedented economic damage.

The petitioners further stated that at the time the instant application was filed, the people of the Republic were facing unprecedented economic hardships, with extreme levels of inflation causing the price of essential goods and services to increase at extreme rates. Thus, people were unable to buy basic commodities. Moreover, because of the high levels of inflation, a large portion of the public staged protests throughout the country.

Furthermore, the severity of the Republic's intentional depletion of foreign currency reserves under the watch of the 28th to the 32nd respondents, the 2nd and the 2A respondents and/or one or more of them is evident by default in servicing foreign debt. Accordingly, the petitioners stated that the aforementioned circumstances effecting the economic situation can be attributed to the wilful mismanagement of the economy by the 38th, 2nd, 2A, and the 29th to the 32nd respondents, who were in control of the 28th respondent at the time material to the instant application.

Dates of filling the Fundamental Rights Applications

The SC/FR Application No. 195/2022 was filed in the Supreme Court on the 3rd of June, 2022 and the amended petition was filed on the 18th of July, 2022. Further, the SC/FR Application No. 212/2022 was filed in the Supreme Court on the 17th of June, 2022. Thereafter, an amended petition was filed on the 15th of July, 2022.

As stated above, the petitioners in their petitions stated that the taxes were reduced with effect from November, 2019 and the tax cuts were informed to the general public by the Commissioner General of the Inland Revenue Department by public notice in the same month. Further, the petitioners alleged that their Fundamental Rights guaranteed by Articles 12(1) and 14(1)(g) of the Constitution were infringed by the respondents reducing taxes when the financial status of the country was not stable.

Moreover, it was stated that as soon as the tax cuts were introduced, the rating agencies downgraded Sri Lanka on the basis that the country would not be able to honour its liabilities to the creditors. Further, at the Committee on Public Enterprises (COPE) meeting held on or about the 25th of May, 2022, it transpired that the actions of the said respondents, inter alia, the RFI facility (Rapid Financing Instrument) of the IMF and the management of the rupee, had led to the present crisis.

The petitioners stated that the former President and the 2nd, 3rd, 6th, 7th, 9th and 10th respondents (in SC/FR/212/2022) made a series of irrational, arbitrary, patently illegal and wrongful decisions in complete dereliction of their statutory duties and fiduciary responsibility, for collateral and extraneous purposes, during the years 2019 to 2022, which has resulted in the petitioners and the public being denied of their right to equality, equal protection of the law, and their right to life as guaranteed by the Constitution.

Moreover, the petitioners stated that the aforementioned respondents are directly responsible, inter alia, for the unsustainability of Sri Lanka's foreign debt, its default on foreign loan repayments, and the current state of the economy of Sri Lanka at the time of filing the two applications, and must be held accountable for the illegal, arbitrary, and unreasonable acts and/or omissions that culminated in the above.

Further, the petitioners stated that they became aware of the real economic situation of the country only after the Finance Minister, 2nd respondent, made a statement in Parliament on the 4th of May, 2022 and when the facts were revealed at the COPE meeting on the 25th of May, 2022.

Thus, it was stated that the respondents have violated the Fundamental Rights guaranteed to the citizens of Sri Lanka under Articles 12(1) and 14(1)(g) of the Constitution.

The learned President's Counsel for the 2nd respondent and 2A respondent in SC/FR/195/22 (and 3rd respondent in SC/FR/212/2022) submitted that the 2nd respondent ceased to hold office as the Minister of Finance on the 8th of July, 2021 and the 2A respondent ceased to hold office as the Minister of Finance on the 4th of April, 2022. Thus, as the 2nd respondent and the 2A respondent resigned from their portfolios of Minister of Finance more than one month prior to the filing of the instant applications, the applications are out of time and ought to be dismissed in limine in terms of Article 126(2) of the Constitution. It was also submitted that, in any event, the aforesaid alleged events took place prior to one month from the date of filing the two applications in this court.

The learned Additional Solicitor General submitted the following table, which contains significant dates and events involved in the instant applications based on the petitions and the Auditor General's report furnished to court.

(a) the introduction of tax cuts and the failure to reverse them

According to the Auditor General's Report filed in court, the downgrading of the sovereign credit ratings of Sri Lanka by the credit rating agencies commenced on the 18th of December, 2019 and thereafter continued to downgrade the sovereign credit rating of Sri Lanka.

In terms of Article 126(2) of the Constitution, where a person alleges that his Fundamental Rights have been infringed or are about to be infringed by an executive or administrative action, he must invoke the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court within one month from such infringement or such an application may be made to court within one month of the petitioner becoming aware of the act of the infringement alleged by him.

A similar view was expressed in Siriwardena v. Brigadier J. Rodrigo (1986) 1 SLR 384 at 387 where it was held;

> "The period of one month specified in Sub-Article (2) of Article 126 of the Constitution would ordinarily begin to run from the very date the executive or administrative act, which is said to constitute the infringement, or the imminent infringement as the case may be, of the Fundamental Right relied on, was in fact committed. Where, however, a petitioner establishes that he became aware of such infringement, or the imminent infringement, not on the very day the act complained of was so committed, but only subsequently on a later date, then, in such a case, the said period of one month will be computed only from the date on which such petitioner did in fact become aware of such infringement and was in a position to take effective steps to come before this Court …"

It is paramount to adhere to the time limit stipulated in the aforesaid Article because the more time that passes after an event occurs, the more difficult it is to ascertain the truth and come to a clear and correct decision about what did and did not happen. Moreover, documents or other essential evidence might not be available with certain parties to an application. Further, people's memories of events fade away, and therefore, the court will not be able to deliver a 'just and equitable' judgment in the case.

However, our courts have entertained applications filed after 30 days from the alleged violation if there is material to satisfy court that there was an inability to invoke the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court due to reasons beyond the control of the person invoking the jurisdiction court and it is 'just and equitable' to entertain such an application due to the facts and circumstances of the application. This view was expressed in Namasivayam v. Gunawardena (1989) 1 SLR 394 where the court held;

> "The one month prescribed by Article 126(2) for making an application for relief by a person for infraction of his fundamental right applies to the case of the applicant having free access to his lawyer and to the Supreme Court. Hence, if the Petitioner was obstructed by reason of his detention from having access to his lawyer and to the Supreme Court and thus prevented from making his application within the one month of the infraction complained of his delayed application for relief under Article 126 should not be ruled out, if he made his application as soon as he was free from that constraint to make the application."

On the contrary, it is not possible to exercise such discretion in litigation other than in a Fundamental Rights Application, as such matters are not decided on a 'just and equitable' basis.

In Fundamental Rights Applications, the court is required to consider not only the rights of the petitioner but also the rights of the respondent when making an order granting 'just and equitable' relief. This is particularly difficult if the facts are not straightforward and are interwoven with each other.

Further, when the alleged infringement was published in notice boards, newspapers, regulations, circulations, etc., the petitioners cannot plead ignorance of such publications. The sole purpose of such publications is to inform the general public of an administrative decision. Hence, the computation of time should be considered from the date of such publications.

Furthermore, there was a significant disclosure of information by the government on the state of the economy. In fact, the Parliament was informed by the Minister of Finance on the 10th of December, 2021 that Sri Lanka will not be seeking the assistance of the IMF. Moreover, section 35 of the Monetary Law Act provides for the publication of the annual report of the Central Bank within four months after the end of each financial year. Thus, this information was made available to the public.

Further, according to the petitioners, the rating agencies downgraded Sri Lanka immediately after the tax cuts were announced. Hence, according to the petitioners own showing, the alleged infringement took place on the day that the Commissioner General of the Inland Revenue published the public notices informing the tax cuts in the years 2019 and 2020.

As stated earlier, in this judgment. the tax reductions referred to in the two petitions were implemented pursuant to a policy decision taken by the Cabinet of Ministers, which, in turn, has been enacted into law in terms of the Inland Revenue Act of 2021, the Value Added Tax Act of 2021, the Economic Service Charge Act of 2021 and the Nation Building Tax Act of 2021, etc., by Parliament, by virtue of the power vested in Parliament in terms of Chapters X and XVII of the Constitution. Moreover, the petitioners stated that, in this regard, it is pertinent to note that some of the Bills relating to fiscal legislation were challenged in the Supreme Court.

However, the petitioners did not challenge any of the said legislation during the legislative process, though the Inland Revenue (Amendment) Bill 2021 was challenged in the Supreme Court. Hence, they are now estopped from challenging the legislative process. In any event, anyone who sleeps over their rights is not entitled to challenge any decisions after the stipulated time period imposed by law.

(b) Delay in going to the IMF

Similarly, as evident from the Cabinet Memorandum dated 2nd of January, 2022 and the decision of the Cabinet of Ministers dated 3rd of January, 2022, it shows that the Cabinet of Ministers has taken a decision not to get the assistance of the IMF. Instead, it was decided to have a home-grown solution to the fiscal and economic issues that were faced by the country at the time. Moreover, the said decision had been informed to the Parliament on the 10th of December, 2021 by the 2A (3rd) respondent.

Furthermore, the IMF, in its IMF-Sri Lanka Staff Report for the 2021 Article IV Consultation dated 10th of February, 2022, stated that the sovereign debt of Sri Lanka was unsustainable. Thereafter, on the 12th of April, 2022 the government of Sri Lanka issued an official notice informing all its creditors that all repayment of loans would be suspended until all debts are restructured and the notice was published in local and foreign media. Thereafter, Sri Lanka defaulted on its payment of the Sovereign Bond on the 19th of May, 2022.

Hence, when the government informed the Parliament that it will not be seeking the assistance of the IMF on the 10th of December, 2022, the alleged violation had taken place on the said date.

Furthermore, according to the Auditor General's Report filed in court, the Central Bank floated the rupee on the 8th of March, 2022. The details of its effects are stated in paragraph 56 of the petition filed in SC/FR Application No. 212/2022.

Moreover, the Central Bank of Sri Lanka honoured the payment of International Sovereign Bond of US $ 500 million on the 18th of January, 2022.

A close scrutiny of the materials filed by all the parties and the Auditor General's Report filed in court relating to the said events shows that the reduction of taxes, the decision of the Monetary Board not to float the rupee, and thereafter, floating of the same, payment of International Sovereign Bonds and the delay in seeking assistance from the IMF are separate and distinct decisions. Particularly, the decision not to go to the IMF had been taken by the Cabinet of Ministers in terms of and under Article 43 of the Constitution, which was later informed to Parliament. Further, according to the Auditor General's Report, the decision to float the rupee was taken by the Monetary Board, and later, it was informed to the Cabinet of Ministers on the 11th of March, 2022 by the Minister of Finance that the decision to pay the International Sovereign Bond was taken by the government to prevent a hard default of International Sovereign Bonds and the secretary to the Ministry informed it to the Governor of the Central Bank, and the decision to reduce taxes was taken consequent to a Cabinet Memorandum submitted by the former President.

Furthermore, the dates and events referred to above in this judgment show that the said events took place long before the two Fundamental Rights Applications were filed in court.

Was there a continuing violation of the Fundamental Rights enshrined in the Constitution?

In addition to the prayer that the petitioner's Fundamental Rights were infringed by the respondents, the petitioners pleaded that there were continuing violations of their Fundamental Rights at the time the two applications were filed in court. Hence, it is necessary to ascertain -

(a) whether there was a continuing violation at the time the two applications were filed in this court,

(b) whether the alleged continuing violations ceased within one month from the filling of the two applications, or

(c) whether the alleged continuing violation ceased one month prior to filling the two applications.

Wharton's Concise Law Dictionary (Fifteenth Edition, 2009 – Reprint 2010) defines a 'Continuing wrong' as;

> "If a duty continues from day to day, the non-performance from day to day, the non-performance of that duty from day to day is a continuing wrong."

A continuing violation consists of multiple wrongful acts, failures to act, or taking wrongful decisions contrary to law. However, a continuing violation ceases either when the alleged violation is rectified or the alleged violation ceases or the alleged violator is no longer in a position to continue with the violation.

The 'Continuing Violation Doctrine' may extend beyond the one-month time limitation if it can be shown that the acts complained of are sufficiently linked to an unlawful act within the limitation period.

The said doctrine also requires a showing of –

(1) the acts occurring within the limitations period is similar,

(2) the conduct was frequent, and

(3) the alleged conduct is continuing even at the time the jurisdiction of court is invoked.

Hence, if an aggrieved party fails to challenge the violation when and where it occurs, it is not possible to seek the benefit of the 'doctrine of continuing violation/infringement'.

As pointed out by the learned Additional Solicitor General and the Auditor General in his Report filed in this court, some of the alleged wrongdoers named as respondents in both petitions have ceased to hold office one month prior to invoking the jurisdiction of this court under Article 126(2) of the Constitution. Thus, the said respondents were not holding any positions that can reverse the alleged 'continuing violations'. In any event, it is the Cabinet of Ministers who are empowered to take decisions on behalf of the government in terms of and under Article 43(1) of the Constitution, other than the decision taken by the Monetary Board of Sri Lanka prior to the institution of both applications.

In the circumstances, I hold that there was no 'continuing infringement' of the alleged violations referred to in the petitions within the meaning of Article 126 of the Constitution.

Reliefs that can be granted by court in a Fundamental Rights Application

(a) Just and equitable remedy

Article 126(4) of the Constitution states;

> "The Supreme Court shall have power to grant such relief or make such directions as it may deem just and equitable in the circumstance in respect of any petition or reference referred to in paragraphs (2) and (3) of this Article or refer the matter back to the Court of Appeal if in its opinion there is no infringement of a fundamental right or language right."

The phrase 'just and equitable' allows the court to consider relevant factors connected with the averments in the petition and the prayer to the petition. The word 'just' denotes fairness and reasonableness, and not arbitrariness. The word 'equitable' has the meaning of 'just'. The phrase 'just and equitable' falls within the branch of civil law that is connected with fairness and justness. It ensures that the law will not impose unnecessary or unintended harsh outcomes which unfairly prejudice some of the parties in a case. Further, it provides to grant reliefs that are not strict orders of the law but comply with the principles of justice. Accordingly, as stated above, 'just and equitable' reliefs referred to in Article 126(4) of the Constitution should not apply only to the petitioners but also to the respondents.

Further, due process and the applicable law should be followed in granting 'just and equitable' reliefs. Any reliefs that have not been pleaded in the petition filed in a Fundamental Rights Application cannot be granted as it violates the principles of natural justice, which is contrary to the 'doctrine of just and equitable remedy'. In this regard, the court is mindful of the need to follow due process and fair play in granting relief in Fundamental Right Applications.

A similar view was expressed in Dayaratne v. National Savings Bank (2002) 3 SLR 116 at 132 to 133;

> "In the alternative, the petitioners have prayed for quashing, not of all, but only the promotions of the 7th, 12th, 16th, 19th, 20th, 21st, 23rd, 25th, 27th, 40th, 41st, 42nd, and 46th respondents – on the basis that there were all junior to the petitioners. While the entire process was flawed, I do not consider it just and equitable to quash the other promotions, as the petitioners have not sought that relief*. The petitioners have also asked for an order directing the 1st respondent to promote them to Grade III-II. However, the circumstances do not justify such an order."*
>

When making a just and equitable order, the court is required to follow the principles of natural justice too. Thus, in making a just and equitable order, the court should take the following into consideration;

i. No amount of evidence can be looked into which was never put forward in the pleadings filed in court. A question which did not arise from the pleadings cannot be decided by the court.
ii. The court cannot make out a case not pleaded by the parties. The court should confine its decision to the pleadings and the prayer.
iii. The court cannot grant the relief which is not pleaded in the prayer to the petition.
iv. Parties shall not be allowed to change the scope of the application after the pleadings are completed. Particularly, at the time of hearing of an application.

Further, the object and purpose of filing pleadings in court are to ensure that litigants come to court after identifying the case put forward by the opposing party. Furthermore, it gives an indication that the orders will be made by the court at the end of the hearing.

Moreover, when there is no prayer for a particular relief, the court will not grant any reliefs that have not been prayed for, as it will lead to a miscarriage of justice. Thus, no amount of evidence will justify granting relief that has not been prayed for in the petition. Further, granting any relief that has not been prayed for would be contrary to the doctrine of 'just and equitable' enshrined in Article 126(4) of the Constitution. Similarly, if a petitioner fails to prove the alleged infringement by adducing evidence before the court, the court cannot grant any relief to the petitioner.

A careful consideration of the two petitions, particularly the specific time period applicable to the subject matter of the said applications, shows that the petitioners are focusing on a particular period where the respondents were in office, as disclosed in the Auditor General's Report filed in court. The IMF country reports and the Cabinet Memorandums filed in court show that the fiscal and economic issues that arose in the year 2022 were partly as a result of accumulated debts that have taken place for several decades. Thus, it is not 'just and equitable' to hold the respondents responsible for violations of Fundamental Rights only by considering limited materials filed in court for the period commencing from 2019. Hence, the court could have granted a 'just and equitable relief' if all the materials were available to consider the economic situation in the country prior to 2019.

(b) Prayer to the petition in a Fundamental Rights Application

As stated above, Fundamental Rights Applications fall within the realm of civil law. As held in the case of Dayaratne v. National Savings Bank (supra), it is settled law that the courts cannot grant reliefs not prayed for in the pleadings or in excess of what is being sought by the petitioner. The due process considerations require the judgments to conform to the pleadings filed in court and the evidence presented in court.

Further, the word "relief" in the phrase "to grant such relief or make such directions as it may deem just and equitable in the circumstances in respect of any petition…" in Article 126(4) of the Constitution refers to the word "relief" in the phrase "praying for relief or redress in respect of such infringement …" in Articles 126(1) of the Constitution.

Thus, the court cannot grant any relief that has not been prayed for in the petition filed in court.

A similar provision is found in section 40(e) of the Civil Procedure Code where it states;

> "A demand of the relief which the plaintiff claims;"

Moreover, it is necessary to give reasons in the judgment for the reliefs granted by court.

Furthermore, unlike in the Indian Constitution, the Supreme Court of Sri Lanka is not conferred with the powers to supervise the implementation of its orders or judgments. Hence, it is not possible to make orders directing the parties to comply with the orders or judgments pronounced by the Supreme Court and report back to the Supreme Court. The finality of the judgments delivered by the Supreme Court was discussed in the judgment delivered in Jeyaraj Fernandopulle v. Premachandra de Silva (1996) 1 SLR 70. However, non-compliance with the orders or judgments of the Supreme Court would give rise to a charge of contempt of court.

Moreover, the due process considerations shall not exceed the scope of the reliefs sought in the prayer. Further, granting reliefs that have not been prayed for in the prayer violates the principles of natural justice, which requires all the parties to be given an opportunity to be heard prior to granting reliefs against a party.

Furthermore, in SC/FR Application No. 195/2022, the petitioners have prayed, inter alia, for "Such other and further relief as Your Lordships Court shall seem meet". Further, in SC/FR Application 212/2022, the petitioners have prayed, inter alia, to "Grant further and such other relief as Your Lordships Court may seem meet".

The aforementioned prayers are similar to the prayer set out in Form No. 14 of the Civil Procedure Code, which sets out the formal parts of the plaint. It states "and for such further or other relief as to the court shall seem meet". However, the courts have held that the said prayer does not confer jurisdiction on the courts to grant reliefs that have not been specifically prayed for in the "prayer" to the petition or plaint filed in court.

In Sirinivasa Thero v. Sudassi Thero 63 NLR 31 at 33 it was held;

> "Since the decree was on in respect of which, under the Code, the judgment-creditor could not ask for, and the Court had not power to issue, a writ of possession, it seems to me that the Court was acting without jurisdiction in issuing such a writ*. The foundation of a writ of possession is a decree for possession, and a* writ of possession which is not founded on such a decree is a nullity, because in issuing it the Court acts in excess of its jurisdiction*. Where a Court make an order without jurisdiction, as in this case, it has inherent power to set it aside; and the person affected by the order is entitled ex debito justitiae to have it set aside. It is not necessary to appeal from such an order, which is a nullity: see the judgment of the Privy Council in Kofi Forfie v Seifah."*
>

Further, in Surangi v. Rodrigo (2003) 3 SLR 35 at 38 it was held;

> "No court is entitled or has jurisdiction to grant reliefs to a party which are not prayed for in the prayer to the plaint."
>

Moreover, in Pathmawathie v. Jayasekare (1997) 1 SLR 248 at 250 it was held;

> "It must always be remembered by judges that the systems of Civil Law that prevail in our country is confrontational and therefore the jurisdiction of the judge is circumscribed and limited to the dispute presented to him for adjudication by the contesting parties. For example, the plaintiff presents to Court a dispute and prays for adjudication and the defendant or party from whom a relief is sought denies or opposes the claim of the plaintiff. The adjudicator or judge thereafter proceeds to determine the issues in conflict. After deciding as to who should prove what is asserted he proceeds to receive evidence viva voce and/or documentary and thereafter evaluate the evidence of facts and law and proceeds to give his finding. In that situation our Civil Law does not in any way permit the adjudicator or judge the freedom of the wild ass to go on a voyage of discovery and make as he pleases may be on what he thinks is right or wrong, moral or immoral or what should be the correct situation. The adjudicator or judge is duty bound to determine the dispute presented to his and his jurisdiction is circumscribed by that dispute and no more*."*

(c) The need to support the prayer by evidence

The petitioners in SC/FR Application No. 212/2022 pleaded, inter alia, as follows;

"5. Upon the submission of a report by the said Committee (appointed under the auspices of Your Lordships' Court) to direct the Hon. Attorney General or any other appropriate authorities or officers of the State to consider initiation of investigations and prosecutions against any persons (as necessary) based on the findings from the said report.

6. Make such further and other just and equitable orders as Your Lordship's Court shall seem fit in the circumstances of this Application, under and in terms of Article 126(4) of the Constitution;"

However, there is no iota of evidence to warrant institution of criminal proceedings against the respondents. Further, the said matter was not argued by the parties at the time of the hearing. Hence, the question of directing either the Attorney General or any other authority to institute criminal proceedings will not arise.

As stated above, this court cannot grant any relief other than the reliefs specifically pleaded in the prayer under Article 126(4) of the Constitution. The aforementioned prayer is too vague and not borne out by the averments in the petition.

Furthermore, as Fundamental Rights Applications fall within the realm of civil law, it is not 'just and equitable' to grant relief or make orders that are available in criminal law and the criminal procedure or other remedies available in other laws, such as in the Companies Act No. 7 of 2007, etc. Moreover, no petitioner is entitled to obtain the remedies that are available in civil law or criminal law in a Fundamental Rights Application. For instance, a party who is entitled in law to claim damages for losses from a respondent is not entitled to obtain such damages in a Fundamental Rights Application. Hence, the Supreme Court will only grant a relief which is 'just and equitable' taking into consideration the facts and circumstances of each case. Accordingly, it could not be 'just and equitable' to award a relief or interim relief that should be obtained by a civil or criminal court in a Fundamental Rights Application.

Appointment of a Select Committee to investigate the economic setback

The Parliament has appointed a Select Committee to investigate the economic setbacks and report to Parliament, and submit its proposals and recommendations in that regard. Hence, the learned President's Counsel appearing for the 2 and 2A respondents in SC/FR Application No. 195/2022 submitted that this court has no jurisdiction to entertain the two applications under consideration as Parliament is vested with full control over public finance and the said Select Committee was looking into the same issues that have been urged by the petitioners before this court.

However, in view of the findings already made in this judgment, it is not necessary to consider the aforementioned objections placed by the learned President's Counsel.

Conclusion

It is pertinent to note that;

(a) in January 2022, India pledged a total of US$2.415 billion to overcome dire financial constraints caused by external debt payments and a lack of US dollars in Sri Lanka for business. Under SAARC currency swap arrangement, India extended a $400 million and also deferred an Asian Clearing Union settlement of around $500 million. India granted a new line of credit worth $500 million for the purchase of petroleum products.

(b) in March 2022, spontaneous and organised protests by political parties and non-partisan groups over the government's mishandling of the economy were reported from several areas in the country. Several protests were staged by the opposition demanding the then administration to solve the financial crisis and to immediately resign in wake of the economic crisis.

(c) on the 17th of March, 2022, Sri Lanka received a $1 billion credit line as a lifeline from India in order to buy urgently needed essential items such as food and medicine. The credit line was activated after India and Sri Lanka formally entered into a credit agreement during the 2A respondent's (in SC/FR/195/2022) visit to New Delhi.

(d) on the 22nd of March, 2022, the government posted soldiers at various gas and fuel filling stations to curb the tensions among people who line up in queues and to ease the fuel distribution. Power cuts were seen throughout March, 2022.

(e) on the 6th of April, 2022 the Sri Lankan Rupee plunged to a record low to become the worst performing currency in the world with US$1 trading at Rs. 355/-.

(f) on the 12th of April, 2022 the Government of Sri Lanka declared that it has taken a decision to default all of its debts in order to avoid the hard default.

(g) Fuel queues continued even till the 23rd of May, 2022.

In addition to the above, I have considered all the materials filed in court along with the Auditor General's Report and particularly, the two applications filed in court, and I am unable to agree with the said position of the petitioners that they became aware of the alleged infringement of their rights on the 4th of May, 2022, when the former Minister of Finance, the 2B respondent, made the statement in Parliament and also when the Governor of the Central Bank made the statement before COPE on the 25th of May, 2022. It is pertinent to note that on their own showing, the petitioners stated that they came to know that the reduction of taxes were implemented in November, 2019 and the alleged adverse effects took place immediately after the rating agencies downgraded Sri Lanka on the 19th of May, 2022.

Further, the country had to undergo unprecedented hardships during the years 2019 to 2022 due to a lack of essential items and the escalation of fuel and gas prices. However, the petitioners filed SC/FR Application No. 195/2022 and SC/FR Application No. 212/2022 on the 3rd of June, 2022 and 17th of June, 2022, respectively.

Article 126(2) of the Constitution states that a person should invoke the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court within one month from the date of the infringement of the Fundamental Rights.

A careful consideration of the two applications and the materials filed in court show that the alleged infringements took place on the dates specified in the aforementioned two charts furnished to court by the Auditor General and the learned Additional Solicitor General.

Moreover, as stated above, all the facts and circumstances show that the alleged infringements are not continuing infringements. On the contrary, they are specific decisions and acts, either taken or implemented by the Cabinet of Ministers or by the Monetary Board of Sri Lanka.

Furthermore, a critical analysis of the averments in both petitions shows that the petitioners did not invoke the jurisdiction of this court within one month of the alleged violations that have been pleaded in the two petitions. Hence, I am of the opinion that in light of the aforementioned overwhelming evidence with regard to the public awareness of the fiscal and economic crisis in Sri Lanka, it would not be 'just and equitable' to hold that the petitioners became aware of the said infringements within 30 days of the filing of the two applications in court or that there were continuing infringements of the Fundamental Rights of the petitioners at the time the two applications were filed in court. Hence, I hold that the parties have not invoked the jurisdiction of this court within one month of the alleged infringements as required by Article 126(2) of the Constitution.

Further, I am of the view that the petitioners have not established on a balance of probability that the respondents have infringed the Fundamental Rights of the petitioners guaranteed by Article 12(1) and 14(1) (g) of the Constitution. Hence, I dismiss the SC/FR/Application No. 195/2022 and SC/FR/Application/212/2022.

I order no costs.

Introduction

The Petitioner filed this application on the basis that the refusal to admit her daughter to Visakha Vidyalaya, Colombo, by the 1st Respondent principal and the 2nd Respondent Chairman of the Appeal Board is a violation of her fundamental right guaranteed by Article 12(1) of the Constitution.

The Petitioner's application pertains to grade 1 admission for the year 2022 under the close proximity category – vide R1. There is no dispute about the applicable circulars issued by the Ministry of Education in this regard. They were marked by the Petitioner P4(a)-(f).

The Petitioner's application was summarily rejected even without calling the Petitioner for an interview stating that "the religious quota vacancies had already been filled" – vide P8. This is on the erroneous assumption that the child's religion is Hinduism (vide P21) despite the Petitioner stating in the application that the child is a Buddhist. The mother of the child is a Buddhist and the father a Hindu. In any event, the admission was sought not under the religious percentage category but under the close proximity category.

Upon the Petitioner taking up this arbitrary decision with the principal, the Human Rights Commission etc., the application was reconsidered by the School Appeal Board. However, the Petitioner says that the Appeal Board did not make an independent decision; instead, it acted in accordance with the directives of the school authorities.

According to the decision of the Appeal Board marked P14, the Petitioner obtained a total of 47 marks:

Main documents in proof of residence	02
Additional documents in proof of residence	00
Electoral registers in proof of residence	25
Proximity to the school	20
Total	47

The Petitioner says she should have been awarded 69 marks instead of 47 marks:

Main documents in proof of residence	10
Additional documents in proof of residence	04
Electoral registers in proof of residence	25
Proximity to the school	30
Total	69

Main documents

At the time of tendering the application, the Petitioner was residing as a lessee at No. 312/3/2, Orchid Apartments, Havelock Road, Colombo 5.

In terms of Clause 6.1.I of the Public Notice issued by the Secretary of the Ministry of Education relating to the admission of children to grade one in government schools for the year 2022 marked P4(f), Lease Agreements fall into the category of main documents to prove residence, and a maximum of 10 marks can be earned based on the length of occupation. To clarify, if the period of occupation exceeds 5 years, the applicant is entitled to the full marks (10 marks).

The first Lease Agreement pertaining to No. 312/3/2, Orchid Apartments, Havelock Road, Colombo 5 marked P7(q) is valid from 11.06.2020 to 10.06.2022. The second Lease Agreement pertaining to No. 312/3/2 marked P7(r) is valid from 11.06.2022 to 10.06.2023. The other Lease Agreements marked P7(m)-(p) covering the period of 10.12.2015 to 10.07.2020 are not relevant to No. 312/3/2, but to No. 312/3/3.

In addition to the aforesaid Lease Agreements, the Petitioner has tendered the following documents as proof of residence at both No. 312/3/2 and No. 312/3/3 for more than 5 years.

1. The Petitioner's National Identity Card
2. The Petitioner's husband's (child's father) National Identity Card
3. Child's birth certificate
4. Grama Niladhari Certificate
5. Petitioner's Bank Account at the Commercial Bank
6. Dialog Bills
7. Child's Father's HSBC Credit Card
8. Child's Father's Bank Account at Commercial Bank
9. Child's Father's Bank Account at BOC
10. Parent's Joint Account at Commercial Bank
11. Life Insurance Policy at SLI
12. Certificate of Registration of a Vehicle
13. Revenue Licences relevant to the Vehicle
14. Vehicle Insurance Certificate
15. SLT telephone bills
16. Electoral Registration Certificates

The Appeal Board has awarded only 2 marks for the main documents (Lease Agreements) because 5 years of residence was established by Lease Agreements relevant to both No. 312/3/2 and No. 312/3/3 (not only to No. 312/3/2).

The Petitioner's submission is that these two units (No. 312/3/2 and No. 312/3/3) are adjoining units separated by a wall and therefore she should have been awarded full marks (10 marks) as she had been living in these adjoining units for over 5 years (from 10.12.2015 to 11.07.2020 at No. 312/3/2 and thereafter at No. 312/3/2 from 10.07.2020) at the time of submitting the application to the school. This position of the Petitioner has been amply supported by the Grama Niladhari in his certificate of residence marked P7(l) and the letter issued by a Licensed Surveyor marked P6.

The Petitioner has applied to several other schools and Sirimavo Bandaranayake Vidyalaya has awarded full marks (10 marks) for the same Lease Agreements – vide P15. Both these schools are governed by the same circulars.

The Respondents do not challenge this factual position that No. 312/3/2 and No. 312/3/3 are adjoining units separated by a wall, but their position is that according to clause 6.0(ඊ), the documents tendered as proof of residence should be relevant to the place of residence at the time of submitting the application (i.e. strictly to No. 312/3/2) and therefore documents relevant to No. 312/3/3 cannot be taken into account.

In my view, the Appeal Board has viewed the concept of residence in an abstract sense and has given an overly literal interpretation to that clause. I acknowledge that granting interview panels the authority to interpret clauses of the circulars based on their own discretion or preferences might result in impropriety. However, it does not mean that they are debarred from giving a purposive interpretation to clauses to give effect to the intention of the drafter of the circulars. If I may give an example, circular 13/2021 marked by the Petitioner P4(d) has a clause empowering the interview board to decide on the distance to school depending on the unique facts of the case before the board: "ඉහත මාර්ග දුර ගණනයේදී ප්‍රායෝගිකව ගැටලු සහගත අවස්ථා විසඳාගැනීම සඳහා අවස්ථානුකූලව සාධාරණ හා පොදු තීරණයක් ගැනීමට සම්මුඛ පරීක්ෂණ මණ්ඩලවලට බලතල හිමිවන අතර, එම තීරණ හේතු සහිතව සටහන් තබා ගත යුතු ය." The petitioner is not challenging the circular; her complaint is that the application of that circular to the facts of this case by the Appeal Board is wrong. There is merit in this complaint.

Based on the documents placed before the Appeal Board, I take the view that the Appeal Board should have awarded the Petitioner 10 marks for those main documents.

Additional documents

No marks were awarded for the additional documents (documents other than Lease Agreements) mentioned above on the basis that "the Petitioner failed to fulfil the requirement of residing at the given address continuously for a period of 6 years". However, the relevant circulars do not state that marks for additional documents can be given only if 6-year period of residence is established. Applicants who are entitled to marks on main documents can claim marks for additional documents – vide last paragraph of 6.1. I (අ) of P4(f).

> මෙම ගණය යටතේ ඉහත කරුණුවලට අදාල ව පදිංචිය තහවුරු කිරීම සඳහා හිමිවන ලකුණු උපයා ඇති අයදුම්කරුවන්ට පමණක් මින් ඉදිරියට ඇති කොටස් සඳහා ලකුණු ලබා දිය යුතු ය.

The Appeal Board at least awarded 2 marks for the main documents. Therefore they cannot totally reject additional documents.

In terms of clause 6.1.I (ආ) of P4(f), the Petitioner can receive a maximum of 5 marks for the additional documents.

The Petitioner claims that she is entitled to 4 marks for the additional documents and the Respondents have not disputed this claim except to argue that a 6-year period of residence is required to award marks for additional documents.

The Petitioner is entitled to 4 marks for additional documents.

Proximity to the school

The Petitioner also argues that she is entitled to receive 30 marks for their proximity to the school, rather than the 20 marks that were initially given. The Petitioner claims that out of the 6 schools within the aerial distance, the aerial distance of St. Clare Primary School and Mahamathya Maha Vidyalaya falls over the Kirulapana canal, which should be considered a natural barrier and therefore the actual road distance to those two schools should be considered rather than the aerial distance. Hence the Petitioner says 10 marks should not have been deducted to those two schools.

Circular 13/2021 marked by the Petitioner P4(d) was issued after the Supreme Court judgment in the case of Lyensa Fernando (Minor) and Another v. S.A.S.U. Dissanayake and Others, (SC/FRA/17/2019, SC Minutes of 23.03.2021) marked P19. However, circular 13/2021 did not abolish aerial distance method in calculating the distance from the place of residence to schools but stated inter alia "යම් පාසලක් ඉහත වෘත්ත සීමාව තුළ පිහිටිය ද ගංගා, කලපු, වගුරුබිම්, රක්ෂිත වනාන්තර ආදී ස්වභාවික බාධාවන් හෝ අධිවේගී මාර්ග පවතින අවස්ථාවලදී පමණක් නිවසේ සිට එම පාසලට ගමන් කල හැකි කෙටිම මාර්ග දුර ඉල්ලුම් කරන පාසලට ඇති කෙටිම මාර්ග දුරට වඩා වැඩි නම් ලකුණු අඩු නොකෙරේ. එහිදී දෙමාපියන් පිළිගත හැකි සාක්ෂි සහිතව මාර්ග සිතියම සම්මුඛ පරීක්ෂණ මණ්ඩලයට ඉදිරිපත් කළ යුතු ය." This is repeated in clause 6.0 (ඉ) of P4(f).

The Petitioner in her post argument written submissions defining the term "natural barrier" states "a natural object that effectively precludes or deters access." However, Kirulapana canal does not effectively precludes or deters access as there is a bridge over the canal facilitating access to the other side. If this is interpreted in the way the Petitioner now suggests, that would in my view be discriminatory against all other similarly circumstanced applicants.

I am not inclined to accept this argument.

Conclusion

On the facts and circumstances of this case, I hold that the decision of the principal to reject the application on a wrong basis at the threshold level and thereafter the refusal by the Appeal Board to award the Petitioner the marks she was entitled to, was arbitrary, irrational and is inconsistent with the fundamental right to equality before the law and the equal protection of the law guaranteed by Article 12(1) of the Constitution.

The principal admits that cut off mark was 53. The Petitioner ought to have received 59 marks.

Argued on: 18th October 2021

Written Submissions: Tendered on behalf of the Petitioners on 18th September 2020 and 29th November 2021

Tendered on behalf of the 1st – 10th Respondents on 7th September 2020 and 29th October 2021

Tendered on behalf of the 12th – 18th Respondents on 25th February 2021 and 22nd November 2021

Decided on: 2nd August 2023

Obeyesekere, J

The Petitioners are officers of the Co-operative Development Department of the Southern Province. In January 2015, the 1st Respondent – i.e., the Governor of the Southern Province – acting in terms of the powers vested in him by Section 32(3) of the Provincial Councils Act, No. 42 of 1987 as amended, introduced new Schemes of Recruitment and Promotion for the following posts in the Co-operative Service of the Southern Province:

(a) Co-operative Development Officer [CDO];

(b) District Officer for Co-operative Development [DOCD]; and

(c) Assistant Commissioner for Co-operative Development [ACCD].

The marking schemes attached to the said Schemes of Recruitment for the posts of DOCD and ACCD sought to confer inter alia:

a) 15 marks and 10 marks respectively, for educational qualifications – i.e., a Bachelor's degree from a university recognized by the Government or an equivalent qualification;

b) 10 marks for professional qualifications and training – i.e., a higher diploma of a duration of one year or more in the fields of Management, Social Sciences, Auditing etc;

c) 5 marks and 10 marks respectively, for foreign training.

The 1st – 4th Petitioners who were serving as DOCDs and the 5th – 19th Petitioners who were serving as CDO's at the time of the filing of this application, did not possess any of the above qualifications, with the result that the said marking schemes severely affected their promotional prospects. Having made representations to the 1st Respondent and the Provincial Public Service Commission of the Southern Province [the Provincial Public Service Commission] and having faced the selection interview unsuccessfully, the Petitioners filed this application on 21st June 2016 complaining that the allotment of marks for additional educational and professional qualifications is arbitrary, irrational and violative of their fundamental rights guaranteed by Articles 12(1) and 14(1)(g) of the Constitution. Leave to proceed for the alleged infringement of the said Articles had been granted on 23rd September 2016.

Background facts

The Petitioners had been appointed as Co-operative Inspectors in the Department of Co-operative Development during the period 1981 – 1988. With the subject of Co-operative Development being devolved to the Provincial Councils pursuant to the enactment of the 13th Amendment to the Constitution, the Petitioners had been appointed, with their consent, as Co-operative Inspectors by the Provincial Public Service Commission. The post of Co-operative Inspector has subsequently been re-designated as Co-operative Development Officer.

The entry point to the Co-operative Service was as Co-operative Inspector/CDO, with the basic educational qualification required for entry being four passes at the General Certificate of Education (Advanced Level) Examination. There were two promotional grades within the CDO service, with further promotion to the aforementioned post of DOCD and thereafter to the post of ACCD.

The Schemes of Recruitment that prevailed at the time the Petitioners joined the Service in the 1980's as well as the Schemes of Recruitment for the posts of DOCD and ACCD introduced in 1996 provided that promotion from CDO to DOCD and from DOCD to ACCD shall be on seniority and satisfactory service, with satisfactory service being determined on confidential assessment reports. The said Schemes did not require a CDO or a DOCD to obtain any further educational qualifications over and above the aforementioned qualifications at the General Certificate of Education (Advanced Level) Examination in order to be eligible for promotion to the next grade in the CDO service or as DOCD's or ACCD's.

The proposed Schemes of Recruitment

The Respondents state that as a result of the new salary grades introduced by the Public Administration Circular No. 6 of 2006, the necessity had arisen to introduce a new Scheme of Recruitment for each of the above three posts of CDO, DOCD and ACCD and match each of the said posts with the relevant salary grades stipulated in the said Circular. In 2014, the Provincial Public Service Commission had circulated the proposed schemes, with Clause 7.4.4 in each of the Schemes reading as follows:

> "ව්‍යුහගත සම්මුඛ පරීක්ෂණයක ප්‍රතිඵල මත එහිදි ලබාගන්නා ලකුණු වල කුසලතා පිළිවෙල අනුව සුදුසුකම් ලත් අපෙක්ෂකයින් අතුරෙන් බඳවා ගැනීමට අපේක්ෂිත නිලධාරීන් සංඛ්‍යාව බඳවා ගනු ලැබේ"

The marking schemes to which I have already referred to provided inter alia that 30 marks shall be allocated for the additional professional and educational qualifications while 60 marks were allocated for seniority, 5 marks for language proficiency and the balance 5 marks for performance at the interview. The Petitioners did not possess any educational qualifications over and above the four passes obtained at the General Certificate of Education (Advanced Level) Examination nor had the Petitioners received any training opportunities, either local or foreign. The proposed marking schemes were therefore clearly to the detriment of the Petitioners.

The Petitioners and the Union to which they belonged to had made representations with regard to the proposed allocation of marks for educational and professional qualifications, and discussions had taken place in that regard with the 1st – 10th Respondents in 2014. The Petitioners claim that at these discussions, they received an assurance that their grievances would be considered. Notwithstanding such assurances, the proposed Schemes of Recruitment had been adopted and thereafter published by the Southern Provincial Council, with the 1st Respondent granting his approval on 19th January 2015. It must be noted at this stage that the Petitioners did not seek to challenge in a Court of law, the said Schemes of Recruitment including the marking schemes attached thereto, soon after its approval by the 1st Respondent, and that this application, filed in June 2016, is the first occasion that the said Schemes of Recruitment have been challenged in Court. Instead, the Petitioners and their Unions had continued to make representations to the 1st Respondent and the Provincial Public Service Commission to exempt the Petitioners from the requirement to possess the aforementioned additional qualifications.

Applications to fill vacancies in the posts of DOCD and ACCD

By letter dated 3rd March 2016, the Provincial Public Service Commission had directed the Commissioner of Co-operative Development to call for applications in terms of the Schemes of Recruitment approved in January 2015, from those who possessed the qualifications set out in the said Schemes, to fill the vacancies that had arisen in the posts of DOCD and ACCD after the introduction of the said Schemes. Applications had accordingly been called on 15th March 2016 with the closing date for applications being 28th March 2016.

Having submitted their applications, the Petitioners had presented themselves for an interview on 31st May 2016 and 7th June 2016, together with the 12th – 18th Respondents, who, although said to be junior to the Petitioners in service, possessed the additional qualifications stipulated in the impugned marking schemes. While the Petitioners were unsuccessful at the interview, the 12th – 18th Respondents had received appointments as DOCD/ACCD based on their performance at the interview. I must note at this stage that the Respondents have not placed before this Court the results of the interviews or details of the educational and professional qualifications that the 12th – 18th Respondents are said to have possessed which accrued to their advantage and ensured their selection over the Petitioners.

Application to this Court

It is only after participating at the above interviews that the Petitioners invoked the jurisdiction conferred on this Court by Article 126(1) of the Constitution, alleging inter alia that the allocation of marks for the aforementioned additional educational and professional qualifications, and that too without any prior intimation is an infringement of the Petitioners' fundamental right to equality before the law and the equal protection of the law enshrined in Article 12(1) of the Constitution, and the freedom to engage in a lawful occupation guaranteed by Article 14(1)(g) of the Constitution.

In addition to the above relief, the Petitioners have also sought the following:

a) Quash the results of the interviews held on 31st May 2016 and 7th June 2016 under the 2015 Schemes of Recruitment and any appointments made consequent to such interviews;

b) Quash the 2015 Schemes of Recruitment for DOCD and ACCD and direct the Provincial Public Service Commission to reformulate new schemes of recruitment without allocating any marks for additional educational and professional qualifications;

c) In the alternative, to direct that the implementation of the marking scheme attached to the said schemes be deferred for a period of five years, thereby affording the Petitioners a reasonable opportunity of acquiring the necessary qualifications.

The basis of the Petitioners case

The basis of the Petitioners case, as presented by the learned Counsel for the Petitioners at the hearing of this application, is three-fold. The first is that the Petitioners had a legitimate expectation at the time they joined the Service way back in the 1980's that no further educational qualifications would be required for their promotions as DOCD/ACCD. The second is that the marking scheme is illogical and arbitrary, in that there is no rational nexus between the scope of work/duties of a DOCD and ACCD and the need to obtain or possess additional educational and professional qualifications. The third is that in any event, the Provincial Public Service Commission ought to have given prior intimation of the proposed amendment, as well as granted a realistic period of time after the introduction of the Schemes of Recruitment to enable the Petitioners the opportunity to acquire the additional qualifications.

I must state at the outset that an employee cannot expect the criteria applicable for promotion that prevailed when he or she joined a particular Service to remain static right throughout his or her career in the Public Service. An employer certainly has a right to introduce new and innovative criteria with a view to improving the quality of the service that it provides to the public and in keeping with the rapid changes taking place in this technological era. However, it is critical to ensure inter alia that such changes (a) bear a rational nexus to the object that is sought to be achieved, (b) are implemented with adequate notice to those who would be affected, (c) do not discriminate between persons who are similarly circumstanced, and (d) do not violate the equal protection of the law guaranteed by Article 12(1).

It would perhaps be appropriate to refer to the judgment of this Court in Guneratne and Others v Sri Lanka Telecom and Others [(1993) 1 Sri LR 109], where, as in this application, the petitioners complained that the stipulated revised schemes for recruitment afford more favoured treatment to graduates and that the preferential treatment sought to be given to graduates has no rational basis and hence amounted to discrimination violative of Article 12 (1) . Kulatunga J, having considered the said argument, summarised the applicable position in the following manner:

> "In the result, I am satisfied that the classification of graduate clerks for preferential treatment under the impugned schemes is unreasonable because it is not based on criteria having a rational relation to the object sought to be achieved namely, the efficient functioning of the Telecommunications Service. If it is desired to give preferential treatment to them in the interest of the service and for utilising their skills, the Corporation may do so on the basis of relevant qualifications, with reasonable notice to those affected and without prejudicing the legitimate expectations of clerks who are on the verge of promotion under the previous schemes*. The identification of relevent qualifications, the preparation of fresh schemes of recruitment and the period of notice to be given are matters for the Corporation to determine, after considering the total effect of such schemes on the officers who are presently in service and the needs of the Corporation*." [emphasis added]

The learned Counsel for the Respondents, while explaining the rationale for the allocation of marks for additional educational and professional qualifications, raised two preliminary objections at the hearing of this application. Although the three arguments presented by the learned Counsel for the Petitioners raise several issues that arise in the preparation of schemes of recruitment and deserve a closer examination upon its merits, I am inclined to first consider the said preliminary objections.

The first objection is that this application is futile, as the impugned appointments of the 12th – 18th Respondents have been cancelled.

The learned Deputy Solicitor General appearing for the 1st – 10th Respondents submitted that Clause 8 of the 2015 Scheme of Recruitment for CDOs makes it mandatory for each CDO to complete three Efficiency Bar Examinations at the times specified therein, with the 3rd Efficiency Bar Examination having to be completed within five years of being promoted to Grade I of the CDO service. Such a requirement did not exist under the previous schemes. Clause 7.4.2.5 of the 2015 Schemes of Recruitment for DOCDs and ACCDs stipulates that an applicant must have passed the 3rd Efficiency Bar Examination in order to be eligible for promotion to the post of DOCD or ACCD. It must be noted that with the introduction of the new Schemes of Recruitment in 2015, the Petitioners were absorbed to Grade I of the CDO service and that paragraph 4 of the letter informing them of such absorption specifically referred to the fact that the Petitioners must pass all Efficiency Bar Examinations in the CDO service to be eligible for promotion, thus placing the Petitioners on notice of that fact.

It is admitted that the 3rd Efficiency Bar Examination had not been conducted until the interviews were held in June 2016, although the said Schemes required that such examinations be conducted at least once every year. Therefore, neither the 12th – 18th Respondents nor the Petitioners were afforded any opportunity to comply with this requirement, with the result that it was impossible for any of the CDOs in service at that time to be eligible for promotion to the post of DOCD or ACCD.

The learned Deputy Solicitor General, while submitting that none of the three Schemes of Recruitment introduced in 2015 contained any transitional provisions addressing this issue, drew the attention of this Court to Paragraph 15 of the said Schemes which reads as follows:

> "මෙම බඳවා ගැනීමේ පටිපාටියේ විධිවිධාන සලසා නොමැති යම් කරුනක් වෙතොත් ඒ සම්බන්ධයෙන් දකුණු පළාත් රාජ්‍ය සේවා කොමිෂන් සභාව විමසා ආණ්ඩුකාරතුමා විසින් තීරනය කරනු ලැබේ."

It was therefore the position of the learned Deputy Solicitor General that in the absence of any of the applicants having passed the 3rd Efficiency Bar Examination, it was imperative upon the Provincial Public Service Commission to have sought a decision from the 1st Respondent whether an exemption could be granted from the said requirement and/or whether appointments could be made in the aforementioned circumstances, taking into consideration that the said requirement had only been introduced in 2015 and that no examinations had yet been conducted.

Notwithstanding the fact that none of the CDOs had passed the 3rd Efficiency Bar Examination, and without having obtained a decision of the 1st Respondent, the Provincial Public Service Commission had proceeded to call for applications to fill the vacancies, conducted the interviews and proceeded to appoint the 12th – 18th Respondents to the applicable posts in June/July 2016. After it transpired that none of the applicants had passed the 3rd Efficiency Bar Examination and therefore were not eligible for promotion either as DOCD or ACCD, the promotions of the 12th – 18th Respondents to the posts of DOCD/ACCD based on the results of the aforementioned interviews held in May and June 2016 had been cancelled in December 2016 by the Provincial Public Service Commission with the approval of the 1st Respondent. Fresh applications had been called to fill the vacancies, only after the 3rd Efficiency Bar Examination had been conducted. It must be stated that the 12th – 18th Respondents have challenged the cancellation of their appointments in SC (FR) Application No. 41/2017. That application was taken up for argument together with this application.

It is in the above factual circumstances that the learned Counsel for the Respondents submitted that as the said promotions granted pursuant to the said interviews have been cancelled, the necessity for this Court to make an order quashing the results of the interviews and directing that the Petitioners be appointed to the said posts does not arise. In a separate judgment delivered in SC (FR) Application No. 41/2017, I have held that the cancellation of the promotions granted to the 12th – 18th Respondents is not arbitrary. I am therefore in agreement with the learned Counsel for the Respondents that the Petitioners are not entitled to the relief claimed by them with regard to the cancellation of the interviews and the subsequent appointments. However, the matter does not end there as the Petitioners are also challenging the said Schemes and in particular the marking scheme attached thereto. Hence, I am of the view that the cancellation of the results of the interviews and the appointments does not render futile the entire application nor does it prevent this Court from considering whether the marking scheme attached to the said Schemes of Recruitment infringes the fundamental rights of the Petitioners.

Application is time barred

The second preliminary objection that was raised is that this application has been filed outside the one-month time period stipulated in Article 126(2) of the Constitution and is liable to be rejected in limine as this Court lacks the jurisdiction to hear and determine this matter.

Article 126(2) of the Constitution stipulates that, "Where any person alleges that any such fundamental right or language right relating to such person has been infringed or is about to be infringed by executive or administrative action, he may himself or by an attorney-at-law on his behalf, within one month thereof*, in accordance with such rules of court as may be in force, apply to the Supreme Court by way of petition in writing addressed to such Court …*" [emphasis added].

In Gamaethige v Siriwardena [(1988) 1 Sri LR 384] Mark Fernando, J stated that:

> "[T]he remedy under Article 126 must be availed of at the earliest possible opportunity, within the prescribed time, and if not so availed of, the remedy ceases to be available."
>
> "Three principles are thus discernible in regard to the operation of the time limit prescribed by Article 126(2): Time begins to run when the infringement takes place*;* if knowledge on the part of the petitioner is required (e.g of other instances by comparison with which the treatment meted out to him becomes discriminatory), time begins to run only when both infringement and knowledge exist*. (Siriwardena v. Rodrigo (1986) 1 Sri LR 384).* The pursuit of other remedies, judicial or administrative, does not prevent or interrupt the operation of the time limit*. While the time limit is mandatory, in exceptional cases, on the application of the principle*

lex non cogit ad impossibilia, if there is no lapse, fault or, delay on the part of the petitioner, this Court has a discretion to entertain an application made out of time." [emphasis added]

"The question whether there is a similar discretion where the petitioner's failure to apply in time is on account of the act of a third party, or some natural or man–made disaster, would have to be considered in an appropriate case when it arises.".

The imposition of a time limit in Article 126(2) demonstrates with certainty the need for the prompt invocation of the jurisdiction of this Court – vide Kumarasiri and Others v Bandara and Others [SC (FR) Application No. 277/2009; SC minutes of 28th March 2014]. The consequence of not complying with this requirement is that a petition which is filed after the expiry of the period of one month from the time when the alleged infringement occurred, would be time-barred, thus depriving this Court of jurisdiction to entertain and/or of proceeding further with the application.

In Demuni Sriyani De Soyza and Others v Dharmasena Dissanayake, Chairman, Public Service Commission and Others [SC (FR) Application No. 206/2008; SC minutes of 9th December 2016] Prasanna Jayawardena, PC, J considered a long line of jurisprudence on this matter, including Edirisuriya v Navaratnam and Others [1985 (1) Sri LR 100] and held as follows:

"The rule that, an application under Article 126 which has not been filed within one month of the occurrence of the alleged infringement will make that application unmaintainable, has been enunciated time and again from the time this Court exercised the Fundamental Rights jurisdiction conferred upon it by the 1978 Constitution."

"[T]he general rule is clearly that, this Court will regard compliance with the 'one month limit' stipulated by Article 126(2) of the Constitution as being mandatory and refuse to entertain or further proceed with an application under Article 126(1) of the Constitution, which has been filed after the expiry of one month from the occurrence of the alleged infringement or imminent infringement" [emphasis added].

While the infringement complained of in this application revolves around the marking scheme and arose upon the publication of the Schemes of Recruitment on 19th January 2015, the objection that this application is time-barred revolves around two principal events. The first is of course the publication of the 2015 Schemes of Recruitment, and the events that preceded and followed its approval and publication. The second is the notices dated 15th March 2016 and 1st March 2016 calling for applications to fill the vacancies that existed in the posts of DOCD and ACCD, respectively and which referred to the fact that applications will be assessed in accordance with the 2015 Schemes of Recruitment.

The need to introduce new Schemes of Recruitment can be traced back to the introduction of Public Administration Circular No. 6/2006 in terms of which the salaries of public servants were re-structured based on the Budget proposals of 2006. In 2010, those in the CDO, DOCD and ACCD services were categorised as Management Assistants (Supervisory), Management Assistants (Supra Grade) and Executive Grade, respectively, and placed on the corresponding salary scales of MN3-2006A, MN7-2006A and SL1-2006. It is the position of the Respondents that (a) the Petitioners were placed in the said salary scales in 2010 and were thereafter paid according to the new salary structure set out in the said Circular; (b) the categorization of DOCDs and ACCDs in terms of the said Circular required those being appointed to possess the qualifications referred to in the marking scheme in order to be promoted; and (c) the necessity had therefore arisen to prepare new schemes of recruitment to address the above. I must however state that the Respondents have not referred to any specific provisions of the said Circular in support of the matters set out in (b) above.

Discussions to amend the schemes of recruitment had been initiated in 2012, with the relevant Union of which the Petitioners were members being apprised of the amendments that were to be effected. The fact that the Petitioners were gravely concerned that the proposed introduction of the requirement to possess additional educational and professional qualifications would affect their promotional prospects is evident from the representations made on their behalf to the 1st Respondent and the Provincial Public Service Commission by letters dated 21st July 2014 and 28th November 2014. I have examined these letters and it is clear that while the Petitioners had no objection to the schemes of recruitment being amended, they had sought an interim period prior to the implementation of the proposed schemes to enable them to obtain the required qualifications. In spite of these representations, the 1st Respondent had proceeded to approve the new Schemes of Recruitment on 19th January 2015.

Kulatunga, J in Guneratne and Others v Sri Lanka Telecom and Others [supra; at page 115] explains the criteria for deciding the stage at which a scheme of recruitment must be challenged as follows:

> "… If a scheme is prima facie non- discriminatory, it cannot be challenged in limine on the ground of possible discrimination in its application. In such a case, relief may be sought only upon the occurrence of discrimination. However, if a scheme, such as the one before us, affecting promotions in an existing service is inherently discriminatory, the right to relief accrues immediately upon the adoption of such scheme and prospective candidates for promotion under such scheme may apply for a declaration that such scheme is invalid on the ground that it constitutes an infringement or an imminent infringement of their rights under Article 12 (1)." [emphasis added]

The Petitioners come within the latter category and were therefore required to challenge the Schemes of Recruitment within one month of 19th January 2015, which admittedly the Petitioners did not do. However, being disturbed by the fact that the Schemes had been approved in spite of their objections, by letter dated 13th February 2015 the Petitioners and their Union had sought an audience with the 1st Respondent to discuss this issue. The fact that the 1st Respondent undertook to consider the grievances of the Petitioners and until then to place on hold the implementation of the said Schemes, is borne out by the minutes of the meeting that was held between the 1st Respondent and the 9th and 15th Petitioners on 26th February 2015, and the letters dated 4th June 2015 and 2nd July 2015 that followed the said meeting.

It is in this background that the Petitioners claim that (a) they were assured that the said Schemes would not be made applicable in a manner that would affect their career prospects, and (b) the necessity for them to mount a legal challenge at that stage did not therefore arise. The 1st Respondent has not filed an affidavit before this Court explaining the steps that he took in this regard pursuant to the said meeting and whether the Petitioners were informed at any stage that their representations have been rejected. I have already referred to Gamaethige v Siriwardena [supra] where Mark Fernando, J stated that the pursuit of other remedies, judicial or administrative, does not prevent or interrupt the operation of the time limit. While I am in full agreement with that view, I am also of the view that the question of time bar must not be applied mechanically and is an issue that would depend on the circumstances of each case. What has taken place in this application can be distinguished on the basis that the Petitioners received an assurance that their grievances would be considered, and until then, the scheme would not be implemented. The failure on the part of the Petitioner to come to Court within one month of the publication of the said schemes was therefore not due to any lapse on their part.

In Alawala v The Inspector General of Police [SC (FR) 219/2015; SC minutes of 15th February 2016], Aluwihare, PC, J stated that, "Even though the time limit of one month is mandatory in ordinary circumstances, in exceptional circumstances, the Court has discretion to entertain a fundamental rights application where the delay in invoking the jurisdiction of the Court under Article 126 is not due to a lapse on the part of the Petitioner."

In Demuni Sriyani De Soyza and Others v Dharmasena Dissanayake, Chairman, Public Service Commission and Others [supra], Jayawardena, PC, J went on to state as follows:

> "However, this Court has consistently recognized the fact that, the duty entrusted to this Court by the Constitution to give relief to and protect a person whose Fundamental Rights have been infringed by executive or administrative action, requires Article 126(2) of the Constitution to be interpreted and applied in a manner which takes into account the reality of the facts and circumstances which found the application. This Court has recognized that it would fail to fulfill its guardianship if the time limit of one month is applied by rote and the Court remains blind to facts and circumstances which have denied a Petitioner of an opportunity to invoke the jurisdiction of Court earlier*"* [emphasis added].

In these circumstances, the explanation of the Petitioners as to why they did not challenge the said Schemes of Recruitment as soon as they were published or as soon as the alleged infringement took place is accepted, with the result that this application cannot be rejected due to the failure to file action within one month of the approval and publication of the 2015 Schemes of Recruitment on 19th January 2015.

One month from the date of applications being called

The second event that relates to the objection that this application is time barred revolves around the letters dated 15th March 2016 and 1st March 2016, by which the Department of Co-operative Development called for applications to fill the vacancies in the post of DOCD and ACCD, respectively. While the first paragraph of the letter dated 15th March 2016 states that applications are being called in terms of the Scheme of Recruitment dated 19th January 2015, the second paragraph of both letters specifically state that educational and professional qualifications will be considered as special qualifications. This notice thus serves as the intimation by the Respondents that the representations made on behalf of the Petitioners have been disregarded and that the Provincial Public Service Commission would proceed to apply the 2015 Schemes of Recruitment when promoting officers to the post of DOCD/ACCD. This application should therefore have been filed within one month of 15th March 2016 and 1st March 2016, which is the date on which the Petitioners had full knowledge that the 2015 Schemes of Recruitment would apply in the promotion of officers to the posts of DOCDs and ACCDs. Instead of invoking the jurisdiction of this Court within one month of the said letters, the Petitioners submitted their applications and faced the interviews on 31st May 2016 and 7th June 2016. Probably having become aware of their non-selection, the Petitioners invoked the jurisdiction of this Court on 21st June 2016.

A similar situation arose in Kumarasiri and Others v Bandara and Others [supra] where Sripavan, J (as he then was) observed as follows:

> "It is necessary to state at the outset that I am not inclined to favour the conduct of the Petitioners who participated at the interview without any protest, fully availed themselves to the interview process and then when they observed that selection had gone against them, came forward to challenge the addendum P6 [N.B. this was the amended marking scheme] on the ground of unknown disability on their part. The participation, without challenging the addendum P6 with full knowledge of all the circumstances, preclude the Petitioners from objecting to the selection process embodied in P1 and P6 by an application filed seven months thereafter, namely, on 07.04.2009. The conferment of exclusive jurisdiction in terms of Article 126(1) and the imposition of a time-limit in Article 126(2) demonstrate with certainty the need for the prompt invocation of the jurisdiction of this Court. The addendum embodied in P6 therefore cannot be challenged in the proceedings."

The explanation offered by the Petitioners is that even at the time of calling for interviews, the 2015 Schemes of Recruitment were under consideration and therefore the Petitioners faced the interview on 31st May 2016 and 7th June 2016 on the understanding that the said Schemes would not be applied to them, and that it was only at the interview that they got to know that the said Schemes would be applied. This explanation cannot however be accepted as the notice calling for applications specifically provided that selections would be made in terms of the 2015 Schemes of Recruitment in respect of vacancies that had arisen after the introduction of the said Scheme. I am therefore of the view that this application has been made outside the time period stipulated in Article 126(2) of the Constitution, thus depriving this Court of the jurisdiction to hear this matter.

This application is accordingly dismissed, without costs.

Judgement

Aluwihare, PC, J.

The Petitioner was an employee of Colombo Montessori Teacher Training Center (Pvt) Ltd. and complained that her Fundamental Rights enshrined in the Constitution were violated by arbitrary, unlawful and overzealous actions of the 1st to 4th Respondents. On 28.04.2016, the Court granted Leave to Proceed for the alleged infringement of the Petitioner's Fundamental Rights under Articles 12(1), and 13(1) of the Constitution.

The Petitioner's Occupation & Employer

The Petitioner completed several professional qualifications in Pre-School Education and was employed as a kindergarten teacher. Subsequently, she was employed in Colombo Montessori Teacher Training Center (Pvt) Ltd (hereinafter Training Center) from 24th July 2014 onwards, as an Instructor - Training Method of Education. According to the Petitioner, she was requested to act the Office Coordinator/Manager at the Training Center from September 2014, on a temporary basis – duties she had performed until her resignation from the post on 13th January 2015. The Petitioner states however, that she was requested by the Chairman of the Training Center to attend to the duties of the Office upto March 2015, until her replacement candidate is adequately trained and would be familiar with the management of the Office. From that point onwards, the Petitioner was employed as a casual employee in the capacity of an Instructor Training Method of Education. However, the Respondents allege that at the time material to the incident, which will be referred to in detail below, the Petitioner acted as the Office Coordinator/Manager and as a teacher as well.

The Training Center is a registered Company under and in terms of the Companies Act No.07 of 2007 and was registered with the Tertiary and Vocational Education Commission (hereinafter TVEC) and the Chairman and the Directors of the Company reside abroad, which is admitted by the Petitioner and the 1st to 3rd Respondents. The Petitioner's position is that the Training Center renewed the registration till 2015, and thereafter requests were made to renew the registration from the TVEC. However, the Respondents state as per the letters dated 12.05.2015 and 15.09.2015, issued by the Acting Director (Standards and Accreditation) of the Tertiary and Vocational Education Commission marked "3R1 and 3R1a", the registration of the Training Center stood terminated since 20.12.2013. The Respondents further state that, although assessments to renew registrations were made by the TVEC, the Training Center failed to satisfy the requisite requirements, therefore the renewal was not granted. Hence, the Respondents' position is that from 20.12.2013 onwards, the conduct of business by the Centre was not lawful.

It is also pertinent that according to the Petitioner, the Training Center maintains two accounts with the Commercial Bank of Mount Lavinia and the usual practice adopted is for the students to pay the fees directly into these accounts. When the deposit slips are presented, the date and amount is inserted into the Students' Record Sheets by the attendant present at the Office. The only monies that are accepted are the fees paid by certain students who are not aware of the payment method adopted by the Training Center. Such fees are collected by the Office attendant and then credited to the bank accounts by the Office staff. This position is also accepted by the 1st to 3rd Respondents.

The Incident

On 22nd April 2015, the Petitioner received a Telephone call, and the caller had alleged that the Training Center was not registered with the TVEC. Thereafter the Petitioner allegedly informed the caller that she was merely a teacher and to raise the concern with the Directors of the Training Center. The identity of the caller is disputed. According to the Petitioner, the caller was unknown to her, but the Respondents state that the caller was a complainant by the name of N.A.D Eranga Nishshanka, (hereinafter 'Nishshanka') who lodged a complaint marked "3R5j" on the 26.04.2015 at the Mount Lavinia Police.

According to the version of the Respondents she was a student at the Training Center and presented the certificates she obtained from the Training Center to the TVEC for due certification, upon which she was informed that the Training Center's registration was terminated. Thereafter, Nishshanka phoned and informed the Petitioner regarding the termination and allegedly, the Petitioner brushed aside the concern stating they were acts of "political vindication".

The Petitioner's avers that on 25.04.2015 she headed to the Office to conduct her lectures in the capacity of a teacher and that at the Training Center, she was confined, detained and intimidated by a mob of students that claimed the Training Center was illegally conducting training courses and receiving payments. The Petitioner attempted to explain to the students that she was merely a teacher and phoned the Chairman of the Training Center, a person by the name of Ranjith Bandra Thalakiriyawe. The Chairman informed her that he had submitted the Prospectus to the TVEC and that necessary steps will be taken to have the registration of the Training Center renewed.

The students had, however, refused to disperse and demanded refunds. Thereafter, on the instructions of the Chairman, at around 4.00 p.m., she phoned the Mount Lavinia Police Station to resolve the issue. According to the Petitioner, by that time students had lodged individual complaints at the Police Station and the 1st Respondent (Sergeant Atapattu) along with another unknown policewoman arrived at the Training Center to escort the Petitioner to the Mount Lavinia Police Station. Thereafter, she was produced before the O.I.C, Minor Offences Branch (2nd Respondent), and it is alleged that the 2nd Respondent accused the Petitioner of deceiving the students and obtaining payments illegally, to which the Petitioner had responded that the payments made by the students are deposited in the bank account of the Training Center and that she is merely a teacher of the said Center.

The Arrest

As asserted by the Petitioner, the 2nd Respondent disregarded the explanation given by her, and instead threatened to arrest the Petitioner. Around that time the Petitioner's husband arrived at the Police Station being informed of the situation by her and when her husband attempted to intervene the 2nd Respondent had berated and had chased him away. Allegedly, the 2nd Respondent could not be reasoned with and had refused to speak with the Chairman of the Training Center, and instead dictated several letters to the Petitioner. Purportedly 2nd Respondent made the Petitioner draft a letter stating she accepted payments illegally from the students and credited the funds to the Company account and that she will coordinate the refunds for the students. The 2nd Respondent supposedly accompanied the Petitioner to the Office of the Training Center around 10.15 p.m and directed her to affix the seal of the "Manager" on the letter. The 2nd Respondent thereafter provided the photocopies of the letter to the students.

The Petitioner states that the 2nd Respondent was not satisfied even with the letter that was allegedly coerced. Thereafter, the 2nd Respondent informed the Petitioner to notify the Chairman to draft individual letters for the students and attend the Mount Lavinia Police Station on the 28.04.2015 to handover the said letters. It is further alleged by the Petitioner that the 2nd Respondent recorded a statement from her, this alleged statement was not produced before the Court. Subsequently, she was permitted to leave the Police Station at about 11.00 p.m on 25.04.2015 but the 2nd Respondent informed her husband to visit the Police Station the following day. Shortly thereafter, the Petitioner emailed the Chairman of the Training Center and informed him of the demand of the 2nd Respondent and requested him to return to Sri Lanka.

The Respondents deny the above events, and according to their version of events, the 1st Respondent and another unknown female police officer never went to the Training Center on the 25.04.2015. As per the contention of the 1st Respondent, he never visited the Training Center and, in any event, the Respondetn states that he could not visit the Training Center as he was on duty wearing civilian clothing, and that due to health conditions prevailing at the time, he could not adorn the uniform and in those circumstances, he would not have been able to escort the Petitioner to the Police Station. The 1st Respondent provided a medical report marked "1R2" as proof of this position.

The 1st Respondent, however, admits that the Petitioner approached him at the Police Station and that he was delegated the duty to record complaints, subsequent to which, he had produced the Petitioner before the 2nd Respondent. The 2nd Respondent denies that he harassed, intimidated, or threatened the Petitioner. Instead, the 2nd Respondent states that he informed her that "if it transpires that the offence of cheating had in fact been committed, action would be taken in respect of the party responsible for same". The 2nd Respondent further denies the alleged incident with the husband of the Petitioner and the events relating to the letters and her alleged coerced statement. He further denies ordering the Petitioner to visit the Police Station on the 28.04.2015 and that he informed her husband to visit the Police Station the following day. His version is that he terminated his duties on the 25.04.2015 at 08.42 p.m and left the Police Station as per the Routine Information Book (hereinafter RIB) extract marked "2R2".

The Subsequent Visit to the Police Station

In any event, the Petitioner states that her husband visited the Mount Lavinia Police Station the next day, which was on the 26.04.2015. It is alleged by the Petitioner that when her husband visited the Police Station, the 2nd Respondent sought a bribe to delay the complaints till 18th of May. The Petitioner's husband had avoided the payment of the bribe, avoided the issue and has produced an affidavit ("P 40(x)") as proof. Meanwhile, the 2nd Respondent denies the alleged incident and states that he never met the Petitioner's husband on that day or that he informed the Petitioner's husband to visit the Police Station.

Thereafter, the Petitioner states that the Chairman of the Training Center emailed a letter on the morning of 28.04.2014 to be given to the students as ordered by the 2nd Respondent. The Petitioner made copies of the letters and inserted the individual details of the students and went to the Mount Lavinia Police Station with an Attorney–at–Law to hand over the letters to the students ("P32(a) – P 32(t)"). The 2nd Respondent allegedly made her write on each letter that she will individually coordinate with the Chairman and ensure to refund the students. Further, the Petitioner states that the 2nd Respondent made her write another letter ("P 32(u)") addressed to the students who made complaints after 25.05.2015 to the effect that the Petitioner had charged fees from the students and credited the fees to the Training Center's Company account and will coordinate with the Chairman to refund the said funds. Moreover, the Petitioner states that she was informed that 26 students made complaints against her, and the 1st and 2nd Respondents ordered her to visit the Police Station on the 29th, 30th of April and 1st, 3rd, and 4th of May to give statements. The Petitioner states she was compelled to provide individual statements and in all her statements she categorically denied that she was responsible for the management of the Training Center and that she was not allowed to read the statements before signing them.

It is further contended by the Petitioner that the Chairman of the Training Center sent the 3rd Respondent, the Officer-in-Charge of the Mount Lavinia Police Station a letter dated 28.04.2015 ("P 33") and certain documents attached to the letter by registered post. The said letter sets out the facts regarding the registration of the Training Center and states that the Training Center was duly registered till 2014 and that in January 2015, the Training Center received notice to renew registration for the year 2015, and that the Chairman faxed the necessary information to renew registration to TVEC. The documents annexed to the said letter were proof of these facts. It is further contended by the letter that there is confusion between the two directors of the TVEC, regarding the registration of the Training Center.

The events of 28.04.2014 as narrated by the Petitioner are disputed by the Respondents. The 3rd Respondent admits that the Petitioner visited the Police Station on that day with an Attorney-at-Law. The 3rd Respondent states that "it was my considered view that there should be deliberations between the complainants and the Petitioner on the matter in issue and also that accordingly I instructed the 2nd Respondent to instruct the Petitioner to come to the Police station to explore the same and record statements of her" (per paragraph 14 of the Statement of Objections). Accordingly, the 3rd Respondent states that deliberations did take place and her statement was recorded on 30th April ("1R3 to 1R3h) and on 4th May ("1R3i").

Meanwhile the 2nd Respondent states that he requested the Petitioner to visit the Police Station on 28.04.2014 as per the directions of the 3rd Respondent but denies that he attempted to bring about a settlement between the Petitioner and the students and that the Petitioner by her own volition attempted to reach a settlement (vide paragraph 14 of his Statement of Objections).

It is further disputed by the Respondents the receipt of "P 33" and the documents attached to that letter. The 3rd Respondent states that he did not receive the said letter and annexed the leaves of the Register for the period 21st April to 5th May 2015 ("3R2"), maintained by the Mount Lavinia Police Station as proof. The said document provides the details of the Registered Post Articles received by the Mount Lavinia Police Station. Further, the 2nd Respondent denies dictating letters marked "P 32(a) to P32(u)" and that he coerced the Petitioner to endorse the said letters.

Thereafter, on 06.05.2015 the Petitioner received a telephone call from the 1st Respondent, instructing her to visit the Mount Lavinia Police Station. On arrival at the Police Station, the Petitioner alleges that 1st Respondent stated that she was being arrested on the instructions of the 4th Respondent. Immediately, the Petitioner contacted her husband and the Chairman of the Training Center, and her husband attempted to intervene by explaining to the 3rd Respondent that the Petitioner is merely a teacher of the Training Center.

Proceedings before the Magistrate's Court

The next day (07.05.2015), the Petitioner was produced before the Learned Magistrate of Mount Lavinia and the 3rd Respondent requested that the Petitioner be remanded till 21.05.2015 on the basis that she committed the Offences punishable by Sections 386, 389 and 403 of the Penal Code.

The Petitioner states that on 24.05.2015, she visited the Mount Lavinia Police Station accompanied by her husband in compliance with the bail conditions. Thereafter, the Petitioner signed the registry and then the 2nd Respondent informed the Petitioner's husband to revisit the Police Station to discuss the progress of the investigation. According to the Petitioner, following her husband's visit to the Police Station, the 2nd Respondent purportedly made an effort to pressure her husband into providing transportation for a visit to a funeral in Kirindiwela. This funeral was for a deceased relative of a Police Officer associated with the Mount Lavinia Police Station. However, the husband refused the demand. A transcript and recording of this alleged conversation were marked "P 40(y) and P40(z)" and produced before this Court the Court granted permission to the Petitioner to produce the said transcript and recording. The 2nd Respondent, however, takes up the position that he never informed the husband to revisit the Police Station on 24.05.2015 and denied that he attempted to coerce transportation from the husband. He further refuted the authenticity of his voice in the recording marked "P40(y)" produced by the Petitioner.

In relation to the above events, the 3rd Respondent states that he directed the 2nd Respondent to arrest the Petitioner on 14.05.2015 and denies that he was acting on the orders of the 4th Respondent. The 3rd Respondent produced the arrest notes marked "3R3" as proof of this position. The Respondents further alleged that the Student Record Sheets and the bank slips were not produced by the Petitioner for them to peruse. On 27.05.2015 the Petitioner made a complaint to the Human Rights Commission marked "P 41", stating that her arrest was arbitrary, illegal, unreasonable and male fide. The present application relates to the above events. I will now consider the alleged violations.

Alleged Violation of Article 12(1) of the Constitution

Article 12(1) protects persons from any unlawful, arbitrary or mala fide executive or administrative actions or omissions. The Petitioner states that the Respondents actions from 25.04.2015 to 07.05.2015, resulted in a continuous infringement and/or infringement of her rights enshrined in Article 12(1) of the Constitution.

The Petitioner alleges that on 25.04.2015 the 1st to 3rd Respondents failed to act promptly to contain the situation at the Training Center and alleged that the 2nd Respondent threatened to arrest the Petitioner, and that therefore, the Respondents had acted arbitrarily. However, the 1st Respondent denies visiting the Training Center due to his health condition. As proof he provided a medical report marked "1R2". The Petitioner argues in her Counter Affidavit that the medical report relates to injuries sustained by the 1st Respondent in November 2011, which is more than 3 years before the arrest, therefore, is irrelevant and of no evidentiary value. Although the medical report relates to incidents in November 2011, the report is dated 23.07.2013, the time in which the medical evaluations were done. Moreover, it appears that the injury the 1st Respondent had sustained were quite serious and he had to seek leave of absence for nearly two months. In those circumstances I am inclined to agree that the 1st Respondent did not effect the arrest of the Petitioner.

The allegation that the 2nd Respondent dictated several letters and harassed the Petitioner on that day should also be considered in this background. The contention is that the 2nd Respondent escorted the Petitioner to the Training Center around 10.00 p.m, however, RIB extract marked "2R2" states that the 2nd Respondent terminated his duties at 08.42 p.m and left the Police Station. Although the Petitioner in her Counter Affidavit argued that the RIB extract was a "self-serving" document, this Court cannot doubt its credibility, and on the face of the document, it appears genuine. Therefore, I am not inclined to agree with the events on that day as stated by the Petitioner.

The Petitioner had further alleged that the 2nd Respondent attempted to solicit multiple favours or bribes from the Petitioner and acted for a collateral purpose. In particular, the Petitioner states that the 2nd Responded attempted to solicit a bribe from her husband on 26.04.2015. This allegation, on a scrutiny of all the material before the Court, is an allegation of "word against word" and in these circumstances, in arriving at a just and equitable decision in the realm of the fundamental rights jurisdiction, this Court necessarily has to apply the test of probability to the factual matters placed before us.

In this regard, I wish to cite with approval the opinion expressed by His Lordship Justice Wanasundera in the case of Velmurugu v The Attorney General and Others [1981] 1 SLR 406, where his Lordship stated that the test applicable is a "preponderance of probability" adopted in civil cases. It was stated that although the standard is not as high as that required in criminal cases, there can be different standards of probability within that standard and the degree applicable would depend on the subject-matter. Further, His Lordship Justice Soza in Vivienne Goonewardene v Hector Perera [1983] SLR 1 V 305 stated;

"The degree of probability required should be commensurate with the gravity of the allegation sought to be proved. This court when called upon to determine questions of infringement of fundamental rights will insist on a high degree of probability as for instance a Court having to decide a question of fraud in a civil suit would. The conscience of the court must be satisfied that there has been an infringement."

An allegation of bribery, if proved, is a significant blow to the reputation of any person and would also result in criminal liability. Therefore, the allegation will require a high degree of probability to be established, and an allegation based on the word of the Petitioner alone may not suffice. It was also alleged by the Petitioner that the 2nd Respondent sought a "favour" on 24.05.2015 and requested transport to visit a funeral. The alleged transcript and the voice recording marked "P 40(y)" and "P 40(z)" are denied by the 2nd Respondent. In the absence of any voice comparison, specialist comparison or expert evidence to corroborate the alleged "favour", the Court is hesitant to rely on the recording alone produced by the Petitioner.

Moreover, if the 2nd Respondent attempted to solicit a bribe, the Petitioner could have made a complaint to the relevant authorities, but no such attempt was made. Further, the alleged bribe is not mentioned in the complaint made by the Petitioner to the Human Rights Commission marked "P 41", and in fact, the alleged events of 26.04.2015 and 24.05.2015 are completely omitted from the complaint. Although the complaint on its face is dated 24.05.2015, even the Petitioner accepts that the complaint was made on the 27.05.2015. The Petitioner has not provided reason as to why the Petitioner omitted to state these events. In those circumstances, I find that the Petitioner has failed to establish a violation of Article 12(1) of the Constitution.

Alleged Violation of Article 13(1) of the Constitution

Article 13(1) of the Constitution ensures that the personal liberties of a person are protected from arbitrary arrest. The obligations enshrined in Article 13(1) are twofold. First, is that an arrest must be made in accordance with the procedure established by law and secondly, every person arrested must be informed of the reason for the arrest.

Justice Sharvananda states the purpose to inform the reason for the arrest in his treatise, "Fundamental Rights in Sri Lanka" on page 141 as;

"…Meant to afford the earliest opportunity to him to remove any mistake, misapprehension or misunderstanding in the mind of the arresting authority and to disabuse the latter's mind of the suspicion which triggered the arrest and also for the arrested person to know exactly what allegation or accusation against him is so that he can consult his attorney-at-law and be advised by him."

A particular form is not required for the notification, nor does it require a complete or detailed description of the charges against the suspect. The requirement is for the arrested person to be told in simple, non-technical language the essential legal and factual grounds for the arrest at the earliest reasonable opportunity. It is apparent that the Respondents informed the Petitioner the reasons for the arrest vide the arrest notes marked "3R3" which state that the Petitioner was arrested for committing the Offence of Criminal Breach of Trust and that she was informed of the reasons. However, the crux of the Petitioner's argument is that the arrest was not according to the procedure established by law.

The procedure established by law for arresting a person without a Warrant is set out in Chapter IV B (Sections 32-43) of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Section 32(1)(b) of the Code of Criminal Procedure Code provides that;

"(1) Any peace officer may without an order from a Magistrate and without a warrant, arrest any person-

(a) who in his presence commits any breach of the peace;

(b) who has been concerned in any cognizable offence or against whom a reasonable complaint has been made or credible information has been received or a reasonable suspicion exists of his having been so concerned;"

The Petitioner submits that she was arrested on a vague and general suspicion and that the Respondents arrested the Petitioner without forming a reasonable suspicion to charge the Petitioner for an Offence in terms of Section 32 of the Criminal Procedure Code or Tertiary and Vocational Education Act No.20 of 1990. The Petitioner further contends that the Respondents were overzealous as well as despotic in arresting her.

In order to effect an arrest, a reasonable suspicion must be in entertained in the mind of the Police Officer. The test is objective, and an arrest made purely on subjective grounds or on a general or vague suspicion would be arbitrary. The requirement is limited and is not equated with prima facie proof of the commission of the Offence. As observed by Lord Devlin in Hussein v. Chong Fook Kam [1970] AC 942 at 948, "Suspicion in its ordinary meaning is a state of conjecture or surmise where proof is lacking: 'I suspect but I cannot prove'. Suspicion arises at or near the starting point of an investigation of which the obtaining of prima facie proof is the end".

However, the suspicion of the Police Officer must be reasonable, and a Police Officer cannot act on mere conjecture or surmise. As stated by His Lordship Justice Amarasinghe in Channa Pieris and Others v. Attorney General and Others [1994] 1 Sri L.R 1 at p. 46 - 47

"A reasonable suspicion may be based either upon matters within the officer's knowledge or upon credible information furnished to him, or upon a combination of both sources."

"However, the officer making an arrest cannot act on a suspicion founded on mere conjecture or vague surmise. His information must give rise to a reasonable suspicion that the suspect was concerned in the commission of an offence for which he could have arrested a person without a warrant. The suspicion must not be of an uncertain and vague nature but of a positive and definite character providing reasonable ground for suspecting that the person arrested was concerned in the commission of an offence".

Similarly, in Gamlath v Neville Silva and Others [1991] 2 Sri L.R 267 it was held by His Lordship Justice Kulatunga that;

"A suspicion is proved to be reasonable if the facts disclose that it was founded on matters within the Police Officer's own knowledge or on statements made by other persons in a way which justify him giving them credit."

A Police Officer must form a reasonable suspicion founded upon his own knowledge such as personally observing the commission of an Offence or by statements made by others in a manner which justifies him giving credit to those statements. For instance, if the statements are corroborated by additional evidence or if there are a number of complaints received by the Police Officer corroborating the same events, or by a combination of both personal knowledge of the Police Officer and credible statements made by others.

Plainly, the threshold for the foundation of a reasonable suspicion is limited and must be assessed on the facts of each case and suspecting a person of having committed an Offence falls a short of having demonstrable proof of the commission of the Offence.

It was held in Piyasiri v Fernando [1981]1 Sri L.R 173 at 184 that an arrest would be illegal if the arrest was based on speculation or a vague and general suspicion or effected to ascertain whether some offence was committed. His Lordship Justice H.A.G De Silva held that;

"The arrest of the Petitioners in my view was highly speculative and was for the purpose of ascertaining whether any of them-could be detected to, have committed a bribery offence. No Police Officer has the right to arrest a person on vague general suspicion, not knowing -the precise crime suspected but hoping to obtain evidence of the commission of some crime for which they have the power to arrest."

In Piyasiri v Fernando [Supra], the Bribery Commissioner received a complaint alleging that the Customs Officers at the airport were soliciting bribes. It was a general complaint without identifying any particular Customs Officers and the Respondent Police Officers effected the arrest once the Customs Officers were leaving the airport. Therefore, the Court held that the Police Officers acted on a vague and general suspicion.

However, in the instant Application, the Mount Lavinia Police Station received 24 complaints from 25.04.2015 to 28.04.2015 marked "3R5 to 3Rw" and all the complaints alleged that the Training Center ceased to be duly registered with TVEC and stood terminated since 20.12.2013, and that the monies of the students were misappropriated. The letters dated 12.05.2015 and 15.09.2015, provided by the Acting Director (Standards and Accreditation) of the TVEC, although issued after the Petitioner's arrest, marked as "3R1 and 3R1a" provide credit to the Respondents' stance that the Training Center's valid registration had ceased.

While I would not definitively settle the matter that the Training Center was conducting its business illegally, within the context of this case, the Court concurs that the Respondents held a reasonable suspicion that the Training Center was engaged in unlawful operations. It is also pertinent that of the 24 complaints, the complaints marked "3R5f, 3R5h, 3R5j to 3R5n, 3R5p, 3R5q, 3R5u, 3R5v" made specific references to the Petitioner by name and identified her as the Office Coordinator/Manager or as an employee of the Training Center.

The complaints also alleged that she received the receipts and monies that were deposited into the Training Center's account. On that basis, I cannot agree that the Respondents arrested the Petitioner on a vague and general suspicion which was speculative. As admitted by the Petitioner, even on the day she was placed in custody (06.05.2015), the Police were in the process of recording statements from three former students of the institute.

Even if the Respondents did not effect the arrest on a vague general suspicion, did the Respondents act overzealously? In this regard the Petitioner states that the Respondents admit that she functioned as a teacher and that the Petitioner is not a director of the said Training Center. Moreover, the Petitioner alleged that the Respondents admit that fees of the students are credited to the accounts of the Training Center maintained with the Commercial Bank branch in Mount Lavinia and that she produced the relevant bank deposits along with the Student Record Sheets (although the Respondents dispute the production of the bank deposit slips and the Student Record Sheets) as proof that none of the monies were deposited in her personal account. Hence, the Petitioner states that any suspicion would have been purged from the minds of the Respondents and the arrest was overzealous.

In response the Respondents state that the complaint made by Nishshanka, marked "3R5j" explicitly mentions that the Petitioner brushed aside the concerns of Nishshanka, when she called the Petitioner. The Petitioner's response was that these are merely acts of "political vindication" and that the Training Center was duly registered. The Respondents argue that the response given by the Petitioner demonstrate the means rea of the Petitioner since she was well aware of the fact that the Training Center was not duly registered and remained to function as an Office Coordinator/Manager and colluded with the Chairman by receiving funds and conducting the management of the Training Center.

The Respondents further state that had the Petitioner been a victim of circumstances, she would have immediately terminated her employment and ascertained the veracity of the allegation.

In Ganeshan Samson Roy v M.M. Janaka Marasinghe (S.C (F/R) 405/2018, S.C Minutes of 20.09.2023), I emphasized that 'reasonable suspicion' entails an executive discretion and that an element of prudence is required when making an arrest for 'white collar' crimes. The reason being, it needs to be ascertained whether the impugned transaction is purely a commercial transaction which had gone awry or whether the suspect bore the intent to defraud. I stated in Ganeshan Samson Roy v M.M. Janaka Marasinghe [supra] that;

"…..the principle laid by Lord Devlin in Shaaban Bin Hussien v Chong Fook Kam [1969] 3 All ER 1626 at 1630 is relevant to the instant case. As a general rule, an arrest should not be made until the investigation is complete. Still, the legislature allows police officers to affect an arrest before the completion of the investigation in certain circumstances; this is to avoid the investigation process being hampered and in order to maintain the law and order in the country. But to give the power to arrest on a reasonable suspicion does not mean that it should always be or even ordinarily be exercised. It means that there is executive discretion. In the exercise of such discretion, many factors must be considered. Besides the strength of the case, the possibility of escape, obstruction of the investigation, prevention of further crimes, and the threat of the accused to the public are some of the factors a police officer may consider. Thus, it appears the 'strength of the case' is a critical factor in making an arrest."

The exercise of executive discretion upon a reasonable suspicion entails a dual obligation for a Police Officer. On one hand, it involves the responsibility to detect and prevent crimes, while on the other, it entails a duty to be cautious in order to avoid mistaking the innocent for the guilty. Even when an arrest is made upon a reasonable suspicion, the presumption of innocence operates to a modified degree. In the word of Lord Scott in Dumbell v Roberts [1944] 1 All ER at 329;

"The duty of the police when they arrest without warrant is, no doubt, to be quick to see the possibility of crime, but equally they ought to be anxious to avoid mistaking the innocent for the guilty. The British principle of personal freedom, that every man should be presumed innocent until he is proved guilty, applies also to the police function of arrest – in a very modified degree, it is true, but at least to the extent requiring them to be observant, receptive and open-minded and to notice any relevant circumstances which points either way, either to innocence or to guilt. They may have to act on the spur of the moment and have no time to reflect and be bound, therefore, to arrest to prevent escape; but where there is no danger of the person who has ex hypothesi aroused their suspicion, the he probably is an "offender" attempting to escape, they should make all presently practicable enquiries from persons present or immediately accessible who are likely to be able to answer their enquiries forthwith. I am not suggesting a duty on the police to try to prove innocence; that is not their function; but that they should act on the assumption that their prima facie suspicion may be ill-founded. The duty attaches particularly where slight delay does not matter because there is no probability, in the circumstances of the arrest or intended arrest, of the suspect person running away".

I am unable to agree that the Respondents acted overzealously in arresting the Petitioner. The Respondents had received numerous complaints to justifiably bear a suspicion that an offence was committed at the Training Center, and as admitted by the Petitioner, the Respondents were recording complaints from former students even on the day she attended the Police Station. Although the Petitioner states that she resigned as the Office Coordinator/Manager around January 2015, at the time of the complaints, the complainants identified the Petitioner as the Office Manager/Coordinator, and the Respondents cannot be faulted for relying on the complaints which were credible.

I also do not doubt the credibility of the complaint made by Nishshanka ("3R5j"), and it appears from the response of the Petitioner that she had the knowledge that the Training Center's registration was dubious. Although the Respondents should have acquired the letters issued by the TVEC before effecting the Petitioner's arrest, the letters procured in the course of investigations indicate that the registration of the Training Center stood terminated from 2013. Given those circumstances, it is reasonable to infer that the Petitioner should have harbored suspicions regarding the questionable activities of the Training Center at some point after 2013, considering her role as the Office Manager/Coordinator of the Center. Therefore, the Petitioner cannot claim ignorance.

However, it is reasonable to presume that the Petitioner produced the bank deposits and Student Sheet Record for the Respondents to peruse, which would have been the natural reaction of a person innocent of the alleged misappropriation of monies, I am unable to agree that the production of the documents would have purged a reasonable suspicion of the Respondents. It is evident that the Petitioner acted as a liaison of the Chairman who was residing abroad in America. The statement of the Petitioner dated 30.04.2015 marked "1R3" states that;

"අප ආයතනයේ හිමිකරු වන්නේ රන්ජිත් කල්කිරියාගම යන අයයි. ඔහු දැනට ඇමෙරිකාවේ ඉන්නේ ඔහුගේ ලිපිනය මා දන්නේ නැහැ. 2014 ඔක්තෝම්බර් 01 දින ඔහු විසින් මා හට කිව්වා ආයතනයේ තිබෙන වැඩ මම දුරකථනයෙන් හෝ විද්‍යුත් තැපෑලෙන් දැනුම් දෙනවා ඒවා මගේ උපදෙස් පරිදි කරන්න කියල. ඒ අනුව ඔහු කියන ඒවා මම ඒ විදිහට ඉටු කලා"

Even though the Petitioner asserts that she was denied the opportunity to review the statements provided to the Respondents, before affixing her signature, the above facts in the statement marked "1R3" are not disputed. The Petitioner also admits that the Chairman and the Directors of the Training Center reside abroad, and it logically follows that if the Directors resided abroad, the Petitioner would act as the local liaison for the Training Center.

Although according to the Petitioner she resigned from her position in January 2015, her own admission states that she was engaged in the administrative duties of the Office Coordinator/Manager at least till March 2015, which was one month before the arrest. As the Office Coordinator/Manager she would have naturally been delegated the administrative tasks of the Center. In those circumstances, it is difficult to state that it was unreasonable for the Respondents to suspect that the Petitioner was colluding with the Chairman and the Directors at least till a point of time recent to the incident.

Therefore, considering the Petitioner's degree of involvement in the organization, and the suspected collusion with the Directors resident abroad, arresting the Petitioner, to prevent the investigation from being hampered is, in my view, reasonable. Hence, I declare that the Petitioner has failed to establish that the Respondents violated her fundamental rights enshrined in Article 13(1) of the Constitution.

Conclusion

Considering the totality of the evidence I hold that the Petitioner has failed to establish a violation of Article 12(1) and 13(1) of the Constitution.
Application dismissed.

Obeyesekere, J

The 1st Petitioner and her daughter, the 2nd Petitioner, filed this application on 19th July 2018 alleging that their fundamental rights guaranteed by Articles 11, 12(1), 12(2), 13(1), 13(2) and 13(5) of the Constitution have been infringed by the 1st – 6th Respondents [the Respondents], who are officers of the Excise Department, by their actions in a series of incidents that occurred on 19th December 2017. Leave to proceed was granted on 2nd November 2018 but only in respect of the alleged infringement of the 2nd Petitioner's fundamental rights guaranteed by Article 11.

Although this application has been filed seven months after the alleged infringement, the Petitioners have filed a complaint with the Human Rights Commission of Sri Lanka the day after the occurrence of the incidents complained of. Article 126(2) of the Constitution stipulates that an application must be filed within one month of the alleged infringement, and on the face of it, it is clear that the Petitioners have not complied with such requirement. However, Section 13(1) of the Human Rights Commission of Sri Lanka Act, No. 21 of 1996 provides that, "Where a complaint is made by an aggrieved party in terms of section 14, to the Commission, within one month of the alleged infringement or imminent infringement of a fundamental right by executive or administrative action, the period within which the inquiry into such complaint is pending before the Commission, shall not be taken into account in computing the period of one month within which an application may be made to the Supreme Court by such person in terms of Article 126(2) of the Constitution." The learned Counsel for the Respondents did not raise any objection with regard to the maintainability of this application for non-compliance with the provisions of Article 126(2) probably in view of the said provision and for that reason, the necessity for this Court to go into the issue of time bar or whether Section 13(1) applies to this application, does not arise.

The complaint of the 2nd Petitioner – the first stage

The incidents complained of by the 2nd Petitioner took place during two stages on 19th December 2017. The first was at the boutique operated by the 1st Petitioner and the sister of the 2nd Petitioner, Damayanthi. The second was at the office of the Excise Department at Kuliyapitiya.

The Petitioners state that the 1st Petitioner, who was 70 years old at the time of the alleged incident, is carrying on a small boutique at her residence situated in Nagollagoda together with Damayanthi. The 2nd Petitioner lives approximately 300 metres away, together with her husband and two children. The 2nd Petitioner states that at about 9.45am on 19th December 2017, she had walked across to the said boutique to "purchase" breakfast for herself, despite this being her own mother's boutique, when at about this time, a group of six persons – i.e., the Respondents – arrived at the boutique in a blue pick-up lorry. The Petitioners claim that while one of the group was dressed in what appeared to be a Police uniform, the manner in which these individuals conducted themselves and the repeated references they made to kasippu gave rise to a reasonable apprehension on their part that the said individuals were from the Excise Department.

The Petitioners state that the Respondents had thereafter suggested to the 2nd Petitioner that she consent to criminal charges being filed against her for possession of kasippu on the assurance that any action to be filed in a Court of law can be amicably resolved by the 2nd Petitioner pleading guilty to such charge and paying a fine. The 2nd Petitioner claims that as neither she nor her mother agreed to the suggested course of action, the Respondents had become aggressive and attempted to assault her sister, Damayanthi. The 2nd Petitioner had intervened only to have been slapped by the officer who was dressed in what appeared to be Police uniform. The 2nd Petitioner admits that she had then held onto the said officer to prevent herself from falling to the ground and claims that thereafter the other officers had dragged her out of the boutique and across the garden's gravel driveway and forced her into the back of the lorry, in the process of which, the draped cloth that she was wearing had come off.

The Petitioners claim that the 1st Petitioner too had been assaulted by the officer in uniform when she pleaded with the officers not to arrest the 2nd Petitioner. The 2nd Petitioner claims further that she was manhandled by the Respondents, who were all male, whilst being shouted at in obscene language in the presence of several villagers who had gathered by then, and that this caused her intense emotional suffering and humiliation. This is the first and the most critical stage of the incidents complained of by the 2nd Petitioner, as the alleged assault and the subsequent dragging of the 2nd Petitioner out of the boutique, across the gravel driveway and into the lorry, as well as the witnessing of these incidents by the other villagers, took place during this stage. The Petitioners have submitted three video recordings marked P1a, to which I shall advert to later, which the Petitioners claim support the 2nd Petitioner's position.

The complaint of the 2nd Petitioner – the second stage

The 2nd Petitioner states that she was thereafter taken to the office of the Excise Department at Kuliyapitiya, where the second stage of the incidents complained of took place, with the 2nd Petitioner once again being urged to agree to charges being framed against her and that the fine would be paid by the Respondents. The 2nd Petitioner states that she was surrounded by approximately ten officers, including the Respondents, and had been threatened by them as she had refused to comply with the said suggestion. The 2nd Petitioner states further that there were no female officers present at the time.

The 2nd Petitioner had thereafter been taken to the Bingiriya Police Station where it transpired that her sister Damayanthi had already lodged a complaint against the said Respondents. A copy of this complaint has however not been placed before this Court. The 2nd Petitioner had thereafter been taken to the Hettipola Police Station and had later been produced before the Acting Magistrate at about 6.30pm that day, at a place situated on the Kuliyapitiya – Hettipola main road and thereafter enlarged on bail. As adverted to earlier, the 2nd Petitioner states that she lodged a complaint with the Human Rights Commission the next day and has produced two letters dated 10th January 2018 [P7b] and 23rd January 2018 [P7a] issued by the Human Rights Commission acknowledging receipt of the said complaint and informing the 2nd Petitioner that the said complaint has been referred for further investigation. The 2nd Petitioner has however failed to produce a copy of the said complaint nor has she made an effort to apprise this Court of the status of that inquiry, although this application and the counter affidavit were filed well after P7a and P7b had been issued.

Medical treatment

The 2nd Petitioner states further that as she was feeling unwell and due to several aches and pains following the alleged assault, she sought medical treatment the day after the incident. She had initially visited the Bingiriya Hospital but due to the lack of resources at Bingiriya, she had visited the General Hospital, Chilaw, where she had received in-house treatment for one day. According to the entry card P3a, the 2nd Petitioner had complained of an impact on her left eye, headache, dizziness and pain on the right side of the chest. No injuries suggestive of the 2nd Petitioner having been dragged along the ground or of any assault or for that matter, indicative of there having been a scuffle, have been noted. Although in the prayer to this application, the Petitioners had prayed for a direction on the Medical Superintendent of the General Hospital, Chilaw to produce the bed head ticket and other medical records pertaining to the 2nd Petitioner's medical condition and the treatment carried out on her, the Petitioners have not pursued the said prayer. As a result, there is no medical evidence of any injuries caused to the 2nd Petitioner to support her version of the incident.

Version of the Respondents

The Respondents admit that they were attached to the Kuliyapitiya office of the Excise Department. They state that they left the office at about 7.40am that morning to carry out a detection of illicit alcohol and that on their return, the 2nd Respondent received information that Ranasinghe Bandara, the husband of the 2nd Petitioner, had stored barrels of kasippu for sale at the 1st Petitioner's boutique. The Respondents state that both Petitioners as well as Ranasinghe have previously been convicted for possession and sale of illegal alcohol, a fact which had not been disclosed in the petition, but which gives context to the arrival of the Respondents at the boutique that morning, as well as to their version of the events that transpired thereafter. The Respondents have tendered to this Court the case records pertaining to seven cases where the 2nd Petitioner had been charged for the possession and sale of illegal alcohol during the period 2012 – 2017 and where the 2nd Petitioner had pleaded guilty on each occasion.

I am mindful that any previous convictions of the 2nd Petitioner for similar offences are immaterial as far as the alleged violation of her fundamental rights are concerned, for as stated in Amal Sudath Silva v Kodituwakku, Inspector of Police and Others [(1987) 2 Sri LR 119 at page 127], "The petitioner may be a hard-core criminal whose tribe deserve no sympathy. But if constitutional guarantees are to have any meaning or value in our democratic set-up, it is essential that he be not denied the protection guaranteed by our Constitution."

However, it must be noted that, (a) the 2nd Petitioner had been charged in the Magistrate's Court for an incident that involved her being in possession of 15 litres of kasippu on 7th November 2017, which is just six weeks prior to the alleged incident, and (b) the detection that led to the filing of the above case had been carried out by the 2nd Respondent. This revelation cannot escape the raising of a doubt in the 2nd Petitioner's version of events, in particular, that she did not know that the persons who arrived at the boutique were officers attached to the Excise Department, and that it is only the 'manner in which such individuals conducted themselves, and the repeated references to kasippu (that) engendered in them the reasonable apprehension that such individuals were all Excise Officers.'

The version of the Respondents is that having received the abovementioned information, they had proceeded towards the said boutique, arriving there at about 10.05am. Having entered the boutique, they had seen the 2nd Petitioner with a container filled with a yellow colour liquid. The Respondents claim that the 2nd Petitioner had attempted to throw away the said liquid upon her seeing the Respondents, but had been prevented by the Respondents, who had thereafter proceeded to take the 2nd Petitioner into their custody. The Respondents claim that the detection of what was immediately perceived by them to be illicit alcohol had prompted the Petitioners and Damayanthi to behave in an aggressive manner towards them, which necessitated the Respondents using minimum force to compel the 2nd Petitioner to get into the lorry. The Respondents claim that the Petitioners as well as Damayanthi used abusive language on them and attempted to prevent them from discharging their duty.

The Respondents have denied assaulting the 2nd Petitioner, but claim that she resisted arrest and that as a result, they were compelled to use minimum force. While the Respondents have not elaborated on the minimum force they claim to have used, I wish to place emphasis on the cardinal rule of law enforcement that law enforcement officials should only use force in exceptional circumstances where no other option is available, and even then, no amount of force beyond that which is reasonably necessary under the circumstances, for the prevention of crime or in effecting or assisting in the lawful arrest of offenders or suspected offenders, can be used.

This position is reflected in, (a) the fundamental right of freedom from arbitrary arrest and detention, guaranteed to all persons, whether a citizen or not, by Article 13(1) of the Constitution, read with Section 23 of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act, No 15 of 1979 (as amended), and (b) the judgment in Kumara v Silva, Sub-Inspector of Police, Welipenna and Others [(2006) 2 Sri LR 236 at page 245] where Shirani Bandaranayake, J [as she then was] stated that 'It is not disputed that use of minimum force will be justified in the lawful exercise of police powers. However, the force used in effecting an arrest should be proportionate to the mischief it is intended to prevent.' [emphasis added].

In her counter affidavit, the 2nd Petitioner contends that she was determined to turn a new leaf and hence had given up the brewing and sale of illicit alcohol, and that for this reason, the allegation of the Respondents that she was found in possession of illicit alcohol at the said premises is false.

Çases filed in the Magistrate's Court

I must note that the incidents that occurred during the first stage on 19th December 2017 have given rise to three cases before the Magistrate's Court. The first is where the Excise Department has instituted action against the 2nd Petitioner for the possession of illicit alcohol, the second is where the Bingiriya Police has instituted action against the 2nd Petitioner for interfering with the duties of public officers and the third is the plaint filed by the Bingiriya Police against the 1st – 6th Respondents on the complaint of Damayanthi. While all three cases were pending at the time of the institution of this action, neither the Petitioners nor the Respondents have apprised this Court of the present status of these cases, which could have been useful in placing in context the facts relating to the present application. Be that as it may, this Court would only be adjudicating on whether the 2nd Petitioner's fundamental rights guaranteed by Article 11 have been infringed during the course of the incidents that are alleged to have occurred on 19th December 2017 and not on the merits of any of the above cases, which would be the function of the learned Magistrate.

Article 11 of the Constitution

It is clear that human dignity underpins the application of all fundamental rights, and is the fundamental virtue sought to be protected through the securement of fundamental rights and the Rule of Law, as demonstrated by the Svasti to our Constitution.

Prasanna Jayawardena, PC, J in Ajith C. S. Perera v. Minister of Social Services and Social Welfare and Others [(2019) 3 Sri LR 275 at page 300] mentioned " … that it seems to me that the concept of human dignity, which is the entitlement of every human being, is at the core of the fundamental rights enshrined in our Constitution. It is a fountainhead from which these fundamental rights spring forth and array themselves in the Constitution, for the protection of all the people of the country. As Aharon Barak, former Chief Justice of Israel has commented [Human Dignity – The Constitutional Value and the Constitutional Right (2015)]:

'Human dignity is the central argument for the existence of human rights. It is the rationale for them all. It is the justification for the existence of rights.' 'The constitutional value of human dignity has a central normative role. Human dignity as a constitutional value is the factor that united the human rights into one whole. It ensures the normative unity of human rights.'' [emphasis added]

In Kandawalage Don Samantha Perera v Officer in Charge, Hettipola Police Station and Others [SC (FR) Application No. 296/2014; SC Minutes of 16th June 2020] Thurairaja, PC, J referring to the above passage stated that, "I am in respectful agreement with his Lordship that 'Human Dignity' is a constitutional value that underpins the Fundamental Rights jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. I am of the view that 'Human Dignity' as a normative value should buttress and inform our decisions on Fundamental Rights."

Article 11 provides that, "No person shall be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment."

In Kumara v Silva, Sub-Inspector of Police, Welipenna and Others [supra; at page 244] this Court noted that, "Article 11 refers to torture separately from cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment similarly to Article 5 of the Universal Declaration of Human rights, Article 7 of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights as well as Article 3 of the European Convention which had referred to torture separately from inhuman, degrading treatment or punishment. The importance of the right to protection from torture has been further recognized and steps had been taken to give effect to the universally accepted safeguards by the Convention Against Torture And Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment signed in New York in 1984, which has been accepted in Sri Lanka by the enactment of Act No. 22 of 1994 on the Convention Against Torture And Other Cruel, Inhuman Or Degrading Treatment Or Punishment."

Chief Justice Sharvananda in his treatise, Fundamental Rights in Sri Lanka (A Commentary) [(1993) at page 69] has pointed out that, "The fundamental nature of the right of freedom from torture or inhuman treatment is emphasized by the fact that it is an absolute right subject to no restriction or derogation under any condition, even in times of war, public danger or other emergency. This human right from cruel or inhumane treatment is vouched not only to citizens, but to all persons, whether citizens or not, irrespective of the question whether the victim is a hard-core, criminal or not." [emphasis added]

In Velmurugu v Attorney General and Another [(1981) 1 Sri LR 406 at page 453] Wanasundera, J stated as follows:

> "Article 11 which gives protection from torture and ill-treatment has a number of features which distinguish it from the other fundamental rights. Its singularity lies in the fact that it is the only fundamental right that is entrenched in the Constitution in the sense that an amendment of this clause would need not only a two-thirds majority but also a Referendum. It is also the only right in the catalogue of rights set out in Chapter III that is of equal application to everybody and which is (sic) no way can be restricted or diminished. Whatever one may say of the other rights, this right undoubtedly occupies a preferred position.
>
> Having regard to its importance, its effect and consequences to society, it should rightly be singled out for special treatment. It is therefore the duty of this Court to give it full play and see that its provisions enjoy the maximum application."

Atukorale, J in Amal Sudath Silva v Kodituwakku Inspector of Police and Others [supra; at page 126] held as follows:

> "Article 11 of our Constitution mandates that no person shall be subjected to torture, or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. It prohibits every person from inflicting torturesome, cruel or inhuman treatment on another. It is an absolute fundamental right subject to no restrictions or limitations whatsoever. Every person in this country, be he a criminal or not, is entitled to this right to the fullest content of its guarantee." [emphasis added]

Although said in the context of Police officers, the following passage by Atukorale, J is equally applicable to this application:

> "Constitutional safeguards are generally directed against the State and its organs. The police force, being an organ of the State, is enjoined by the Constitution to secure and advance this right and not to deny, abridge or restrict the same in any manner and under any circumstances. Just as much as this right is enjoyed by every member of the police force, so is he prohibited from denying the same to others, irrespective of their standing*, their* beliefs or antecedents*. It is therefore the duty of this court to protect and defend this right jealously to its fullest measure with a view to ensuring that this right which is declared and intended to be fundamental is always kept fundamental and that the executive by its action does not reduce it to a mere illusion*." [emphasis added]

In Mrs W M K De Silva v Chairman, Ceylon Fertilizer Corporation [(1989) 2 Sri LR 393 at page 403], Amerasinghe, J opined that "… the torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment contemplated in Article 11 of our Constitution is not confined to the realm of physical violence" and "… would embrace the sphere of the soul or mind, as well."

Amerasinghe, J went onto state at page 405 that:

"In my view Article 11 of the Constitution prohibits any act by which severe pain or suffering, whether physical or mental is, without lawful sanction in accordance with a procedure established by law, intentionally inflicted on a person (whom I shall refer to as 'the victim') by a public official acting in the discharge of his executive or administrative duties or under colour of office, for such purposes as obtaining from the victim or a third person a confession or information, such information being actually or supposedly required for official purposes, imposing a penalty upon the victim for an offence or breach or a rule he or a third person has committed or is suspected of having committed, or intimidating or coercing the victim or a third person to do or refrain from doing something which the official concerned believes the victim or the third person ought to do or refrain from doing, as the case may be."

However, as pointed out by A.R.B. Amerasinghe in Our Fundamental Rights of Personal Security and Physical Liberty [(1995) Sarvodaya – at page 37], "Torture, cruel, inhuman degrading treatment or punishment may take many forms, psychological and physical, but whether the relevant criteria have been satisfied must depend on the circumstances of each case."

Of the three general observations made by Amerasinghe, J in Channa Pieris and Others v Attorney General and Others (Ratawesi Peramuna Case) [(1994) 1 Sri LR 1 at page 105] with regard to an Article 11 infringement, the first was that "… the acts or conduct complained of must be qualitatively of a kind that the Court can take cognizance of." At page 106, Amerasinghe, J further noted that where physical harm is concerned, a long line of cases have adopted the criteria set out in Mrs W M K De Silva v Chairman, Ceylon Fertilizer Corporation [supra; at page 401], where it was held that for there to be an Article 11 infringement the degree of mental or physical coerciveness or viciousness must be such as to occasion not mere ill-treatment, but maltreatment of a very high degree. This has been emphasised in Our Fundamental Rights of Personal Security and Physical Liberty [supra; at page 29], where the author states that, "'Torture' implies that the suffering occasioned must be of a particular intensity or cruelty. In order that ill-treatment may be regarded as inhuman or degrading it must be 'severe'. There must be the attainment of a 'minimum level of severity'. There must (be) the crossing of the 'threshold' set by the prohibition. There must be an attainment of 'the seriousness of treatment envisaged by the prohibition in order to sustain a case based on torture or inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment."

Accordingly, in determining whether Article 11 has been infringed, this Court will consider whether the level of 'intensity', 'cruelty' and 'severity' of suffering implied by and inherent to the notion of 'torture' and 'inhuman', and 'degrading' treatment has been satisfied.

The position is therefore clear. Every human being is entitled to live with dignity and not be subject to any torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. It is the duty of this Court, as the guardian of the fundamental rights of our People, to foster and protect these rights. Whenever a complaint alleging the infringement of Article 11 is made to this Court, it is our duty to examine thoroughly the facts relating to such complaint, the corroborative evidence, if any, tendered by the Petitioner in support of such complaint, the version of the Respondents and arrive at a considered decision.

Standard of proof that must be satisfied

I shall now turn to the standard of proof that a Petitioner who alleges an infringement of Article 11 must discharge.

In Goonewardene v Perera [(1983) 1 Sri LR 305 at page 313], Soza, J observed thus:

> "Before I deal with the facts a word about the burden of proof. There can be no doubt that the burden is on the petitioner to establish the facts on which she invites the court to grant her the relief she seeks. This leads to the next question. What is the standard of proof expected of her? Wanasundera, J. considered the question in the case of Velmurugu v. The Attorney-General and another and held that the standard of proof that is required in cases filed under Article 126 of the Constitution for infringement of fundamental rights is proof by a preponderance of probabilities as in a civil case and not proof beyond reasonable doubt. I agree with Wanasundera, J. that the standard of proof should be preponderance of probabilities as in a civil case. It is generally accepted that within this standard there could be varying degrees of probability. The degree of probability required should be commensurate with the gravity of the allegation sought to be proved. This court when called upon to determine questions of infringement of fundamental rights will insist on a high degree of probability as for instance a court having to decide a question of fraud in a civil suit would. The conscience of the court must be satisfied that there has been an infringement." [emphasis added]

Wimalaratne, J In Kapugeekiyana v Hettiarachchi and Others [(1984) 2 Sri LR 153 at page 165] stated that, "In deciding whether any particular fundamental right has been infringed I would apply the test laid down in Velmurugu that the civil, and not the criminal standard of persuasion applies, with this observation, that the nature and gravity of an issue must necessarily determine the manner of attaining reasonable satisfaction of the truth of that issue."

In Channa Pieris and Others v Attorney General and Others (Ratawesi Peramuna Case) [supra; at page 107], referring to the third general observation made with regard to an Article 11 infringement, Amerasinghe, J stated as follows:

"… having regard to the nature and gravity of the issue, a high degree of certainty is required before the balance of probability might be said to tilt in favour of a Petitioner endeavouring to discharge his burden of proving that he was subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment*; and unless the Petitioner has adduced sufficient evidence to satisfy the Court that an act in violation of Article 11 took place, it will not make a declaration that (a violation of) Article 11 of the Constitution did take place.*" [emphasis added]

"Would 'the guarded discretion of a reasonable and just man lead him to the conclusion'? is the test I would apply in deciding the matter. If I am in real and substantial doubt, that is if there is a degree of doubt that would prevent a reasonable and just man from coming to the conclusion, I would hold that the allegation has not been established." [emphasis added]

Similar sentiments were expressed by my sister, Murdu N. B. Fernando, PC, J in Ratnayaka Weerakoonge Sandya Kumari v Weerasinghe, Sub Inspector of Police [SC (FR) Application No. 75/2012; SC minutes of 18th December 2019 at page 10] where, having considered the above cases, it was concluded that, "The foregoing judicial decisions of this Court has clearly identified and laid down that a high degree of certainty is required before the balance of probability would tilt in favour of a petitioner endeavoring to discharge the burden of proof with regard to an allegation of torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment."

In Edward Sivalingam v Sub Inspector Jayasekara & Others (SC (FR) Application No. 326/2008; SC minutes of 10th November 2010), which has been referred to with approval by Shiran Gooneratne, J in Kumarihami v Officer-in-Charge, Mahiyanganaya Police Station and Others [(2021) 2 Sri LR 464 at page 469], Tilakawardane, J held that, "When considering the allegations made by the Petitioner against officers of the CID it is important to bear in mind that the burden of proving these allegations lies with the Petitioner. This court has held repeatedly that the standard required is not proof beyond reasonable doubt but must be of a higher threshold than mere satisfaction. The standard of proof employed is on a balance of probabilities test and as such must have a high degree of probability and where corroborative evidence is not available it would depend on the testimonial creditworthiness of the Petitioner." [emphasis added]

Amerasinghe, J however added a word of caution in Samanthilaka v Ernest Perera [(1990) 1 Sri LR 318; at page 319], which he reiterated in Channa Pieris and Others v Attorney-General and Others (Ratawesi Peramuna Case) [supra; at page 108], when he stated that he is conscious of the difficulties faced by a petitioner in proving allegations of torture and that therefore, due regard must be had to the circumstances of the particular case so as not to impose an undue burden on a petitioner, and thereby impede access to justice. As correctly acknowledged in Weerasinghe v Premaratne, Police Sergeant and Others [(1998) 1 Sri LR 127 at page 133], this Court must also be alert to the tendency of State officials to act in an 'esprit de corps' in protecting their own and covering up their wrongs, such as through falsified medical reports and police records.

Thus, while the burden of proof of establishing allegations of torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment shall remain with a petitioner to be satisfied on a balance of probability with a high degree of certainty, the Court must be guided by the facts of the particular case and the difficulties and disadvantages that a petitioner could face in proving such allegations.

Allegations of the 2nd Petitioner – revisited

It is in the above factual and legal background that I must consider the several complaints of the 2nd Petitioner and determine whether the 2nd Petitioner has proved that the Respondents committed any act amounting to an infringement of her fundamental rights guaranteed by Article 11.

In her affidavit, the 2nd Petitioner has made four allegations of which three took place during stage one, at the premises of the boutique. The first is the physical assault, including a slap across her face and her being dragged along the ground. The second is the humiliation she suffered in front of the villagers who had gathered and the abusive language used on her. The third is her draped cloth being ripped off her as she was dragged out of the boutique and into the lorry. The fourth is the intimidation and threats made to her at the Excise Department office at Kuliyapitiya, which took place during stage two.

The 2nd Petitioner has lodged a complaint with the Human Rights Commission on the day after the incident, as borne out by the acknowledgment issued – vide P7a – but she has failed to produce a copy of the said complaint before this Court. The 2nd Petitioner has also made a complaint on the same date to the Bingiriya Police Station and on the strength of which, the Bingiriya Police has filed the 'B' report P6. The 2nd Petitioner has neglected to tender a copy of this complaint as well. The 2nd Petitioner has stated further that the Police Post at the General Hospital, Chilaw recorded a statement from her, but this statement has also not been tendered. The 2nd Petitioner had additionally sent a complaint on the day after the incident to the Minister under whose purview the Excise Department functioned at the time and on the strength of which, an inquiry was held by the Excise Department. Regrettably, a copy of this complaint too has not been tendered. In my view, these four complaints / statements could have served as contemporaneous evidence of the incidents that took place on 19th December 2017 and would have shed more light on what actually transpired, especially since this application has been filed seven months after the occurrence of the alleged incidents. The failure to file the said complaints / statements before Court in an action filed to vindicate one's fundamental rights is difficult to comprehend given the enthusiasm with which the 2nd Petitioner invoked the law enforcement machinery soon after the occurrence of the said incidents. Such failure gives rise to a substantial doubt in my mind with regard to the testimonial creditworthiness of the 2nd Petitioner.

Affidavit of Damayanthi

The 2nd Petitioner has tendered affidavits of two others to support her version. The first is that of her sister, Damayanthi, and the second is that of one Lekamlage Dayaratne who claims he was at a nearby bus halt and saw the incident at the boutique. The Petitioners have not produced statements or affidavits from the villagers who are said to have gathered and witnessed the incidents that took place at the boutique on 19th December 2017, and therefore the allegation that they were humiliated in front of the villagers has not been substantiated.

I approach with caution the affidavit of Damayanthi, who, being the 2nd Petitioner's sister, is not a disinterested witness. Damayanthi has stated as follows in her affidavit signed on 24th July 2018:

"03. අපගේ පුදුමයට මෙන් සුරාබදු, නිලධාරීන් 06 දෙනෙකු පමණ එතනට කඩා වැදී මාගේ සොහොයුරිය හට පවසා සිටියේ සාපරාධී ක්‍රියාවක් පිළිබඳව නඩුවක් පැවරීමට කරුණු ඉල්ලා සිටියද, එකී කරුණු කුමක්දැයි කියා ඔවුන් විසින් ඇයට පැවසුවේ නැත.

04. ඉහත අංක 02 ජේදයේ සඳහන් පරිදි එය ප්‍රතික්ෂේප කළ බැවින් 2017.12.19 වන දින උදේ 10.30 ට පමණ එකී නිලධාරීන් පිරිස විසින් මට පහර දීමට උත්සහ කරන විට මාගේ සොහොයුරිය එය වැළැක්වීමට උත්සාහ කළ විටදී එකී නිළධාරීන් විසින් ඇය හට පහර දෙන ලදී. ඔවුන් විසින් ඇයගේ වම් කම්මුලට අතුල් පහරක්ද දෙන ලදී. එවිට ඇය බිමට ඇද වැටුණි. එවිට එකී සියළුම නිලදාරීන් විසින් ඇයට අමානුෂික ලෙස පහර දී ඇයව අප වෙළඳසැලෙන් එළියට ඇදගෙන විත් බිම දිගේ නැවත ඇදගෙන ගොස් අත්අඩංගුවට ගන්නා ලදී. මෙම හේතුවෙන් ඇයගේ ඇඳුම් ඉතා අධික ලෙස ඉරී තිබුණි. ඉන්පසු ඔවුන් විසින් ඇයව නිල් පැහැති කැබ් රථයකට ඇද දමා කුලියාපිටිය සුරාබදු කාර්යාලයට රැගෙන යන ලදී.

05. මෙම සිද්ධිය අපගේ අසල්වාසින් විසින්ද දක්නා ලදුව, සොයුරියගේ ඇඳුම්ද බරපතල ලෙස ඉරී ගොස් තිබුණි. තවද, එකී නිලධාරීන් විසින් අපට පරුෂ වචනයෙන් ඉතා නින්දිත ලෙස බැණ වැදිනි. නමුත් අපට ඇයව බේරා ගැනීමට නොහැකි විය.

07. කිසිම හේතුවක් නොමැතිව එකී සුරාබදු, නිලධාරීන් විසින් සිදු කරන ලද මෙම මිලේච්ඡ පහර දීම පිලිබඳව මා විසින් බිංගිරිය පොලිස් ස්ථානයට ගොස් අංක බී 852/17 යටතේ පැමිණිල්ලක්ද සිදු කරන ලදී. ඒ අනුව පුද්ගලයන් භයදෙනෙක් මේ දක්වා අත්අඩංගුවට ගෙන ඇත."

Neither the 2nd Petitioner nor Damayanthi have produced photographs of the draped cloth that the 2nd Petitioner was said to have been wearing on the said date to prove the assertion that her clothing had been torn, thus embarrassing her in front of the villagers who had gathered at the scene. Furthermore, as I have previously noted, a copy of the complaint that Damayanthi claims she made to the Bingiriya Police Station in Case No. B 852/2017 has not been tendered to this Court, even though the 'B' report P6 itself has been tendered by the Petitioners. Once again, the contents of this complaint could have served as contemporaneous evidence of Damayanthi's version to this Court. It would also be pertinent to note that Damayanthi failed to appear at the inquiry conducted by the Excise Department on the complaint made by the 2nd Petitioner. Thus, Damayanthi's version is also replete with infirmities and therefore it may not be safe to rely on her evidence.

Affidavit of Dayaratne

I must nonetheless consider if the allegations of brutal assault that Damayanthi claims the 2nd Petitioner was subjected to, can yet be established. In that regard, there are two matters that I must consider. The first is the affidavit of Lekamlage Dayaratne, which had only been tendered with the counter affidavit of the 2nd Petitioner, although it had been affirmed one month prior to the filing of this application and was available to the Petitioners at the time this application was filed.

In his affidavit, Dayaratne has stated as follows:

"02. මා ඉහත ලිපිනයේ පදිංචිව සිටින අතර, වර්ෂ 2017.12.19 වන දින පෙ. ව. 09.00 ට පමණ මා සුරියහෙට්ට මුදියන්සේලාගේ මල්ලිකා දමයන්ති යන අයට අයත් වෙළඳසැල අසල පිහිට බස් හෝල්ට් එකේ සිටින විට නිල්පාට කැබ් රථයක් පැමිණ එකී වෙළඳසැල ඉදිරිපිට නවත්වා නිල ඇඳුමෙන් සැරසි සිට නිලධාරියෙකු ඇතුළු කිහිප දෙනෙකු බැස එකී වෙළඳසැල ඇතුලට ගිය බවත් මා කියා සිටිමි.

03. ඉන්පසු එකී වෙළඳසැල ඇතුලෙන් ගැහැණු පිරිසක් ගහන්න එපා යනුවෙන් කෑගසන ශබ්දයක් ඇසි මා වෙළඳසැල ඉදිරිපිටට පැමිණ බලන විට සුරියහෙට්ට මුදියන්සේලාගේ සුමනාවති මැණිකේ යන අයට කැබ් රථයෙන් පැමිණි නිලධාරියෙකු සහ තවත් කිහිප දෙනෙකු පහර දුන් අතර ඇයගේ කෙස් වලින් අල්ලා ඇදගෙන ඇයව එකී කැබ් රථය තුළට දැමූ බව මා දුටුව බවත් එසේ ඇදගෙන යන අවස්ථාවේ දී ඇයගේ ඇඳුම් ද ගැලවී තිබූ බවත් මා ප්‍රකාශ කර සිටිමි.

04. එසේ ඇයව ඇදගෙන යන අවස්ථාවේ දී අසල තිබූ කණුවක ආධාරයෙන් ඇය එම නිලධාරීන්ගෙන් බේරීමට උත්සහ ගත් බව මා දුටු බවත් නමුත් එම අය ඇයට පහර දී ඇයව එකී කැබ් රථයට දැමූ බවත් මා කියා සිටිමි. "

No explanation has been tendered by either Dayaratne or the Petitioners with regard to the following:

(a) Whether Dayaratne lives close by to the said boutique, which in turn would have explained his presence at the bus halt at the time of the incident at the boutique;

(b) Whether the 2nd Petitioner is someone who was previously known to him and if so, in what way, especially since he has referred to the 2nd Petitioner by her full name; and

(c) Whether he made a statement to the Bingiriya Police as to what he witnessed that day at the boutique.

While the affidavit of Dayaratne contains the above infirmities, his version also appears to be an exaggeration of what took place, as neither the 2nd Petitioner nor Damayanthi refer to the 2nd Petitioner having been dragged by her hair or the 2nd Petitioner holding on to a post to prevent herself from being dragged by the Respondents. Perhaps these matters could well have been addressed had the Petitioners disclosed to this Court the complaints / statements made to the Human Rights Commission, the Bingiriya Police or at the Police Post at the Chilaw Hospital. Thus, in light of these observations, I am of the view that this Court cannot place much reliance on the affidavit of Dayaratne, either.

Medical evidence

The second matter that I wish to consider in examining if the allegations of brutal assault have been established, is the availability of medical evidence. Before I do so however, I wish to emphasise that there may be instances where medical evidence is not available and therefore it would not be reasonable for this Court to insist upon medical evidence. In fact, in Ansalin Fernando v Sarath Perera, Officer-in-Charge, Police Station, Chilaw [(1992) 1 Sri LR 411 at page 419], Kulatunga, J pointed out that, "Whilst I shall not accept each and every allegation of assault/ill-treatment against the police unless it is supported by cogent evidence I do not consider it proper to reject such an allegation merely because the police deny it or because the aggrieved party cannot produce medical evidence of injuries. Whether any particular treatment is violative of Article 11 of the Constitution would depend on the facts of each case. The allegation can be established even in the absence of medically supported injuries." Although from a practical point of view, it may be that only medical evidence could afford corroboration, as noted by Dheeraratne, J in Weerasinghe v Premaratne, Police Sergeant and Others [supra; at page 134], the facts and circumstances may be such that 'One does not require medical evidence to prove the intensity of the pain which would have been caused to the body of a person (…)'.

The 2nd Petitioner states that she sought medical assistance the very next day after the incident. As I have already stated, what has been produced are (a) the entry card [P3a] which only sets out the history given by the 2nd Petitioner– i.e., assault by a gang of people, impact and pain on the left eye, headache, dizziness and right side chest pain, and, (b) the requisition for an X-ray examination [P3b]. The Medical Officer who examined the 2nd Petitioner has not mentioned in P3a whether the 2nd Petitioner had any injuries on her body arising from the brutal assault that Damayanthi claims the 2nd

Petitioner was subjected to. Although the Petitioners have pleaded in the prayer to the application that a copy of the bed head ticket, the treatment sheet and the medical reports in respect of the 2nd Petitioner be called for from the Medical Superintendent, General Hospital, Chilaw, the Petitioners have not pursued this prayer. Yet again, this lacuna may have been overcome, at least to some extent, had the 2nd Petitioner produced the four complaints / statements that she made on 20th December 2017, where she may have referred to the assault and the injuries she alleges she sustained as a result of the incidents that took place the day before. The failure to produce any form of medical evidence to support the allegation of assault or take meaningful steps to procure such material, in spite of the 2nd Petitioner claiming that such material is available is a cause for concern.

Video evidence

This brings me to the final item of evidence tendered by the Petitioners with regard to the incidents that occurred during stage one, namely, the three video clips that have been produced with the petition, marked P1a. I have watched them carefully, but did not observe (a) any assault of the 2nd Petitioner, (b) any indication of the 2nd Petitioner being dragged along the ground, (c) the 2nd Petitioner being held by her hair, or (d) the cloth worn by the 2nd Petitioner being torn or coming off her in the process. What I did observe however, was the 1st Petitioner's abusive threats to the Respondents and the officer in uniform slapping the 1st Petitioner. As mentioned at the outset, leave has not been granted in respect of the alleged infringement of the 1st Petitioner's fundamental rights guaranteed by Article 11 and therefore I will proceed no further in this regard. I do however wish to firmly state that this amply documented aggression at the hands of a public servant is in no way condoned by this Court.

What is left to be considered is whether the 2nd Petitioner has established that the Respondents subjected her to humiliation and intimidation at the Excise Department office at Kuliyapitiya. While, as already acknowledged, Article 11 includes mental, emotional and psychological suffering, I reiterate that such suffering must also be qualitatively of the kind that this Court can take cognizance of, and must thereafter be proved on a balance of probability with a high degree of certainty, all things considered. Answering this question attracts the same infirmities observed above, regarding the evidence placed before this Court. There is an abject lack of corroborative evidence in proof of humiliation, intimidation and threats amounting to an infringement of Article 11. Accordingly, I am of the view that the 2nd Petitioner has not proved her allegation with regard to the incidents that occurred during stage two.

Inquiry carried out by the Excise Department

For the sake of completeness, I must state that following the complaint made by the 2nd Petitioner to the Minister, the 7th Respondent, the Commissioner General of Excise had proceeded to hold an inquiry into the conduct of the 1st – 6th Respondents, especially with regard to the absence of a female officer during the raid. Pursuant to the recommendation of the Commissioner of Excise (Human Resources) who conducted the inquiry, the 1st – 5th Respondents have been issued with letters of warning [7R3(A) - 7R3(E)] that they must comply with the requirements of the relevant Circulars and Departmental Orders and ensure the presence of female officers when conducting raids.

Conclusion

Taking into consideration all of the above facts and circumstances, I am of the view that the 2nd Petitioner has failed to adduce sufficient evidence to satisfy this Court that her fundamental rights guaranteed by Article 11 of the Constitution have been infringed by the Respondents during either of the two stages. The acts complained of have not been sufficiently proved for this Court to take cognizance of as constituting torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment.

This application is accordingly dismissed, without costs.

Out of the two Fundamental Rights Applications argued before us, in SC FR 236/2008 the Petitioners were the then President, Vice President, Secretary and Several Members of the Sri Lanka Planning Service Association and in SC FR 237/2008 the Petitioners were 19 successful candidates who got through the open competitive examination to be recruited to Class II Grade II of the Sri Lanka Planning Service (hereinafter referred to as SLPS).

Petitioners in both applications in common had challenged a decision of the Public Service Commission dated 28th May 2008, communicated to the Secretary Finance and Planning (P-10 and P-6 respectively) In addition to the above, guide lines attached to the above letter (P-11) was also challenged in SC FR 236/2008 and a Cabinet Decision (P-5) dated 24.10.2007 was challenged in SC FR 237.

Since the Petitioners in both applications had challenged the appointments made to Class II Grade II of the SLPS on supernumerary basis, based on the above documents, parties agreed to argue both matters together and to abide by one judgment.

As submitted by the Petitioners, SLPS was established by Government Gazette Extraordinary No. 345/40 of 19.04.1985 with effect from 01.01.1985. The service minute for the said service was amended a few times and the service minute that was relevant to the instant case was published in the Government Gazette Extraordinary 1134/5 dated 30th May 2000. According to the said service minute, SLPS is an all-Island service and its structure consists of Class II Grade II (recruitment Grade) Class II Grade I, and Class I officers. Recruitments to SLPS are made to Class II Grade II and it can only be made except as provided in the service minute consequent to the Relevant Competitive Examinations.

According to Clause 6.4, not more than 75% of the recruitment made to Class II Grade II of SLPS will be made on the results of an Open Competitive Examination conducted by the Commissioner of Examination, and Clause 6.5 provides for appointment not more than 25% of the vacancies in Class II Grade II be made by the results of a Limited Competitive Examination.

In addition to the above, Clause 9 of the service minute provided certain categories of officers to be absorbed into the SLPS at a different level. Clause 9.1 provides the absorption as follows;

9.1 Officers holding non-combined service posts of planning officer, Assistant Director, Deputy Director, Advisor, Additional Director, and Director and incomparable grades engaged in planning functions in Ministries where the Planning Service is effective will be absorbed into Class 1, Class II Grade I and Class II Grade II of the Planning Service in the following manner

9.1.1. Into Class I of the Planning Service will be absorbed officers in the categories referred to in paragraph 9.1 appointments on the salary scale Rs. 72,000-10x3600-108,000 per annum.

9.1.2. Into Class II Grade I of the Planning Service Will be absorbed officers in the categories referred to in paragraph 9.1. above who on the prescribed date hold appointments on the salary scale Rs. 48,000-4x1,800-7x2,400-72,000 per annum.

9.1.3. (i) Officer in categories referred to in paragraph 9.1 above who hold appointments on the salary scale Rs. 40,800-11x1,200- Rs. 54,000 per annum. (Such officers will be allowed to retain the same salary scale as personal to them on absorption into the Planning Service).

(ii) Officers in the categories referred to in paragraph 9.1 above, who hold appointments on the salary scale Rs. 36,000-15x1,200-54,000 per annum (Such officers will rant lower in seniority to those officers who are absorbed into Class II Grade II under subparagraph 9 (1) above).

However, officers referred to in Appendix 'E' to the service minute including the Development officers are not entitled to the absorption referred to in Clause 9 above but are entitled to sit for the Limited Competitive Examination of the SLPS.

The 60th Respondent, Secretary to the Ministry of Plan Implementation by letter dated 23.02.2007 called for applications from officers who are eligible for absorption under Clause 9.1 of the service minute of the SLPS but, the heading of the said letter referred to as "Absorption of Development Officers attached to the Ministry of Plan Implementation to the Sri Lanka Planning Service."

Even though Clause 9.1 of the service minute had provided for the absorption of certain categories of officers into the SLPS as referred to above, the service minute had not provided for the absorption of the Development Officer as referred to in the above letter. Some of the Petitioners before this court had challenged the vires of the said decision before the Court of Appeal in CA Writ 329/2007 and the proceedings of the said application were terminated on certain undertakings given to courts by the Respondents. Proceeding before the Court of Appeal on 16.06.2007 reads thus;

> "Learned Senior State Counsel appearing for the 1st, 2nd and 4th Respondents informs the court that according to the instructions received from the Public Service Commission, the Commission will not make any appointments based on the document marked P-8 and decides to follow the procedure laid down in the service minute. In view of the said undertaking given by the learned Senior State Counsel, Counsel for the Petitioner states that no purpose would be served in proceeding with this application. Proceedings are therefore terminated."

However, a Cabinet Memorandum dated 14th August 2007 was submitted to the Cabinet of Ministers by the then Minister of Plan Implementation recommending that,

> "A special examination be conducted by SLIDA to the Development Officers who were eligible under the service minute of the SLPS to sit for the competitive examination, in > order to assess their suitability for absorption of those officers into SLPS and to absorb those who were successful at the said examination to Class II Grade II of SLPS on the supernumerary basis," and the said memorandum was approved by the Cabinet of Ministers at the Cabinet meeting held on 15.08.2007.

Since the said Cabinet Decision was contrary to the undertaking given before the Court of Appeal, that, "steps would only be made under the service minute of SLPS to recruit Development Officers," the said Cabinet Decision was challenged before the Supreme Court under SC FR 317/2007 by some of the Petitioners'. The proceedings before the Supreme Court in the said application were also terminated since the learned Deputy Solicitor General who represented the Respondents before the court informed that "on the basis of the representation made, a note had been submitted to the Cabinet of Ministers to reconsider the decision made on the memorandum P-6. Thus, no firm decision has been made in regard to the special examination that is complained in the application."

As submitted by the Petitioners in 237/2008, while the above process to absorb Development Officers was pending, 75% of the remaining vacancies in the SLPS (i.e., 300 vacancies out of 400 vacancies) were to be filed under Clause 6.4 of the service minute by an Open Competitive Examination and the said examination was held on 05.05.2007. Applications were also called from those who were eligible under the service minute of SLPS, by Government Gazette 1513 dated 31.08.2007 to sit for the Limited Competitive Examination to fill the balance vacancies and the said examination was held in 08.03,2008.

Whilst the results of the said examination were pending, the Petitioners (in both applications) came to know of a decision by the Public Service Commission communicated to the Secretary to the Ministry of Finance and Plan implementation by letter dated 23rd May 2008 directing him to absorb the category of officers who are eligible to sit for the Limited Competitive Examination as at 01.01.2007 under the schedule to the service minute of SLPS, to the post of planning officer Class II Grade II on the supernumerary basis on the results of a special examination held by the Commissioner of Examination.

The letter and guidelines issued by the Public Service Commission were marked as P-6 to the Petition in SC FR 237/2008. As per the said guidelines;

> "All the officers referred to in Schedule "E" to the service minute of the SLPS who are eligible to sit for the Limited Competitive Examination as at 01.01.2007 were eligible to sit for a paper on "plan implementation and assessment of projects" at an examination conducted by the Commissioner of Examination and obtain 40 marks, for the said candidate to be appointed to the Post of Planning Officer Class II Grade II on the supernumerary basis personal to the officer.

An officer who is appointed to the above post is only entitled to the salary of the Class II Grade II officer but not entitled to any other privileges or promotions and to obtain such privileges or promotions the officer should follow the service minute and sit for the Open or Limited Competitive Examination.

The number of posts available for the above scheme is 526."

The Petitioners in SC FR 237/2008 were able to find the Cabinet Decision with regard to the above direction by the Public Service Commission and produced marked P-5. As observed by this court the said decision has arrived at the meeting of the Cabinet of Ministers held on 24.10.2007 based on a note to Cabinet dated 23.10.2007 and the said decision reads thus;

"Cabinet having considered the report of the Committee of officials appointed by the Cabinet decision of 10.10.2007 decided to grant approval to the following promotional scheme recommended by the officials' committee, to be implemented through Public Service Commission."

a) These officers be granted the opportunity which they have been deprived of, i.e., to be recruited to Class II Grade II of the SLPS, and for this purpose, a special examination be held at which their suitability will be tested;
b) This opportunity be made available to officers who qualified to sit the Competitive Limited Examination referred to in the SLPS minute, as of January 1st, 2007; and,
c) The successful candidates be recruited to the SLPS on a supernumerary basis.

The Petitioners before this court, including the members of the Sri Lanka Planning Service Association and a group of candidates selected through the Competitive Examination to Class II Grade II of the SLPS who were dissatisfied and aggrieved by the said Cabinet Decision to which they had no access until the directive of the Public Service Commission in implementing the said decision was communicated by its letter dated 23rd May 2008, had invoked the jurisdiction of this court challenging the Cabinet Decision dated 10.10.2007 and the Directive issued by the Public Service Commission on 23rd May 2008, had further submitted that;

As per the service minute of the SLPS, 25% of the vacancies are to be filled by a Limited Competitive Examination which is open to the category of officers identified in Appendix 'E' to the service minute, and an examination was held on 08.03.2007 to fill 100 vacancies which is 25% of the remaining vacancies and therefore conducting a special examination after conducting the Limited Competitive Examination had provided for,

i) An opportunity for those who failed the Limited Examination to enter the SLPS in violation of the service minute of the SLPS

ii) To conduct an examination in violation of the provisions of the service minute of the SLPS when the service minute had identified the areas under which the Competitive Examination should conduct, but the guidelines provided by the Public Service Commission had only provided to conduct the special examination with one subject on "Plan implementation and assessment of projects" in contravention of the provisions of the service minute.

iii) To create an imbalance in the service by allowing 526 Class II Grade II officers to be recruited to the SLPS when in fact only 100 vacancies were available for those who come within Appendix 'E' of the service minute and a Competitive Examination had already being conducted to fill those 100 vacancies.

iv) To create an excess of Class II Grade II officers when the cadre for Class II Grade II is only 553 officers island-wide.

v) An opportunity that would result in a parallel group of officers outside the approved cadre carrying out the same functions as the officers holding substantive cadre positions, which will have an adverse impact on the functioning of SLPS.

and argued that it would violate and continue to violate the Fundamental Rights of the Petitioners guaranteed under Article 12 (1) of the Constitution.

Petitioners in both applications had moved for interim relief to suspend the implementation of the Cabinet Decision/ directive by the Public Service Commission pending the applications before this court but when both matters were supported for leave to proceed on 02.09.2008, leave to proceed for alleged violation of the Fundamental Rights guaranteed under Article 12 (1) was granted by this court without granting any interim relief as prayed for.

On behalf of the Respondents, the 17th and 50th Respondents in SC FR 237/2008, the Minister of Plan Implementation and the Chairman Public Service Commission respectively had submitted the following before this Court.

a) Post of Project Officer was created in the year 1996 with a Cabinet approval granted on 20th November 1996 in order to recruit unemployed graduates. In the year 1997, and in 1998, the Post of Development Assistant was created and two batches were recruited under the Graduate Scheme Officers.

b) The designation of the Development Assistant was changed to Development Officer in the year 2000 on a Cabinet Decision that was taken based on a Cabinet Memorandum dated 15.09.2000.

c) Subsequent to the said decision, a scheme of recruitment was also approved for the Post of Development Officer and in the said Scheme of recruitment, Efficiency Bar and Promotional aspects had been identified under Clause 6 and under note (iii) to the said clause, promotional aspects had been referred to as follows;

> iii. වසර 05 ක සතුටුදායක සේවා කාලයකින් පසුව ශ්‍රී ලංකා ක්‍රමසම්පාදන සේවයේ II/II තනතුරු සඳහා ඉල්ලීම් කිරීමට හැකිවන පරිදි කටයුතු කරනු ලැබේ

d) In the meantime, the minute on the Sri Lanka Planning Service was approved and published in the Government Gazette Extraordinary 1134/5 dated 30.05.2000, and Clause 6.5.1 of the said minute had provided for the appointment of not more than 25% of the vacancies in Class II Grade II of SLPS by way of a Limited Competitive Examination conducted among the officers identified in Appendix 'E' to the minute and as already noted in this judgment, Post of Development Officer is included to Appendix 'E'

e) Even though the service minute for the SLPS had provided for the Limited Competitive Examination as referred to above, the said examination was not conducted for several years and the Development Officers who completed 05 years of service were agitating for their promotions by the year 2007

f) The secretary to the Ministry of Plan Implementation in consultation with some authorities decide to absorb Development Officers who had completed 05 years satisfactory service to SLPS Class II Grade II considering the provisions in the scheme of recruitment of the Development Officers (P-7)

g) The said decision was challenged before the Court of Appeal in CA 329/2007 and in the meantime Secretary to the Ministry of Plan Implementation wrote to the Public Service Commission seeking approval for the absorption 349 Development officers to Class II Grade II of SLPS

h) However, by letter dated 4th June 2007, the Public Service Commission refused to consent the above request and also informed its decision to the Court of Appeal

i) A Cabinet Memorandum titled "strengthening the Sri Lanka Planning Service with special emphasis to plan implementation" dated 14th August 2007 was submitted to the Cabinet by the 17th Respondent

j) In the said Cabinet Memorandum, it was recommended that,

   a) a special examination be conducted (by the Sri Lanka Institute of Development Administration) for these officers to assess their suitability for absorption;

   b) the examination focuses primarily on an assessment of applying knowledge relating to field-level experience in planning and plan implementation.

   c) those who are successful at the examination be absorbed into supernumerary Class II Grade II posts in the SLPS with effect from a prospective date, provided they have completed five years of continuous active service, been confirmed in the post, and have passed the first Efficiency Bar examination specified in the scheme of recruitment;

   d) those who are successful at the examination but have not passed the first Efficiency Bar examination at that time, but complete that examination subsequently, be absorbed as set out above, with effect from a prospective date after they pass the First Efficiency Bar Examination;

   e) such number of supernumerary posts as are equivalent to the number of successful candidates be specially created at Class II Grade II level to enable these appointments to be made and that simultaneously the posts currently held by those officers are suppressed;

k) The Cabinet of Ministers had approved the said recommendation and the said decision was communicated to the Public Service Commission in order to grant relief as proposed in the Cabinet Memorandum

l) By letter dated 28th September 2007 the Public Service Commission had voiced its disagreement to the implementation of the said Cabinet Decision

m) On 10th October 2007 the Cabinet of Ministers rescinded its earlier decision and appointed an official committee comprised of the Secretary to the Ministry of Finance, Secretary to the Ministry of Plan Implementation, Secretary to the Ministry of Urban Development, Director General Management Services, Director General Department of Establishment and Director General (Administration) Ministry of Finance and Planning to formulate a common promotional scheme and the report of the said committee recommending;

a) that these officers be granted the opportunity which they have been deprived of, i.e., to be recruited to Class II Grade II of the SLPS, and that, for this purpose, a special examination be held at which their suitability will be tested.

b) that this opportunity is made available to officers who qualified to sit the Limited Competitive Examination referred to in SLPS minute as of January 1, 2007.

c) that the successful candidates be recruited to the SLPS on a supernumerary basis.

was submitted to the cabinet on 23.10. 2007 along with a note to Cabinet by the 17th Respondent.

n) The said note to Cabinet and the recommendation of the official committee, were once again considered by the Cabinet of Ministers on 24.10.2007 and approved the said recommendations (P-5) and referred to the Public Service Commission for its implementation.

o) Public Service Commission having considered the said decision, had issued necessary instructions to the Secretary to the Ministry of Finance and Plan Implementation to implement the said Cabinet Decision (P-10 and P-5) along with guidelines from the Public Service Commission (P-11 and P-6) which is challenged before this court

p) The Public Service Commission, has emphasized the fact that appointments to the Public Service are vested with the Public Service Commission, had taken up the position that it is for the Cabinet of Ministers to decide the policy behind recruitment to the Public Service and therefore its decision to implement the Cabinet Decision dated 24.10.2007 was not in violation of Article 55 (1) of the Constitution.

As further submitted by the Respondents, Article 55(4) of the Constitution which reads as, "subject to the provisions of the Constitution, the Cabinet of Ministers shall provide for and determine all matters of policy relating to the public officers" had provided for the Cabinet of Ministers to decide the polity relating to public officers.

However, with regard to the Cabinet Decision dated 24.10.2007 which was carried out by the Public Service Commission by its letter dated 28th May 2008 the Petitioners argued that, in the absence of an amendment to the service minute the Cabinet of Ministers cannot take a policy decision contrary to the provisions in a service minute, that has been properly adopted and in force at a given time.

In this regard the Petitioners relied on the observation of Prasanna Jayawardena J in the case of K.W.S.P. Jayawardena V. Gotabhaya Jayarathne and Others SC FR 338/2012 SC minute dated 30.01.2018 to the effect that "…… the Cabinet of Ministers would be expected to act in terms of the existing service minute marked P-2 other than in instances where a lacuna in P-2 is detected that and the Cabinet of Ministers act specifically for the purposes of addressing that lacuna…."

However, it is observed, that the said observation was made by His Lordship in obiter, since His Lordship had made the following observation prior to his conclusion referred to above.

> "Therefore, the aforesaid question of whether the Public Service Commission and the Ministry of Education are entitled to implement the aforesaid proposal and act outside the scheme set out in the service minute marked 'P-2' on the basis of giving effect to a 'policy decision' taken by the Cabinet of Ministers, does not arise for consideration."

Whilst referring to Article 55 (1) of the Constitution his Lordship had further observed in the said Judgment that;

> "Authorize the Cabinet of Ministers to direct that a Service Minute be amended or scrapped altogether and replace with another or to direct that a specific procedure be adopted to meet the needs of specific circumstances, which are outside the compass of a service minute or are not met by the provisions of a Service Minute. In Hettiarachchi V. Senevirathne [1994 3 SLR 290] Fernando J in a very brief judgment, expressed the view that the Cabinet of Ministers is not necessarily bound to act in terms of Service Minutes such as "P2" (emphasis added)

Petitioners further relied on the judgment in Public Services United Nurses Union V. Montague Jayawickrema 1988 1 SLR 229 and argued that the Cabinet Decision granting an ad hoc promotion to a limited class of officers violates the equality provisions contained in Article 12 of the Constitution.

Since a Cabinet Decision to grant an addition salary increment to a class of officers was declared as violation of the Fundamental Rights of the Petitioners in the said case it is my duty to consider the relevancy of the said Judgment to the instant case.

In the said case a proposal was made to the Cabinet of Ministers to pay a group of non-striking workers;

a) Two increments to all nursing personal who worked during the full period of the strike

b) One increment to those nursing personal who reported for duty at various stages before 16.04.1986

The said proposal was approval by the Cabinet of Ministers but was challenged before the Supreme Court.

When considering the matter before the Supreme Court, Wanasundera J whilst referring to the decision by Sharvananda CJ in the case of Abeywickrema V. Pathirana (1986) 1 Sri LR 120 had observed the following,

> "Although one cannot altogether rule out a few matters in which, *ad ho*c determinations may be made by the Cabinet, it is however essential, as Sharvananda, C.J, states, that "provisions as to salary increments, leave, gratuity, pension and of super annuity, promotion and every termination of employment and removal from service" should be in the form of rules "which are general in operation though they may be applied to a particular class of public officers." Further, when existing general rules are sought to be altered, this too must be done in the same manner and following the identical procedure as for their formulation, namely, by enacting an amending rule. Could one say that this procedure has been followed in the present case?
>
> When the proposal for the payment of the increments came up for consideration, two Ministers- the Minister of Finance and the Minister of Public Administration (the two Ministers most connected with this subject)- were against it. Their views are informative. The Minister of Public Administration observed:
> i) While some recognition may be called for, for reporting for duty and doing their normal quote of work, it would not be justifiable to pay extra increments with its continuing cumulative benefit.
> ii) An ex-gratia payment of an extra day's wage to each, in respect of each such day could be more "appropriate."
>
> The Minister of Finance was of the view that the proposal was wrong in principle. He stated;
> "The payment of additional increments, as proposed would set a precedent which would have to be followed in future by all Government Departments and Corporations. The payment of increments would also involve additional remuneration to the officers concerned for many years until they reach the maxima of their salary scales. I would suggest that instead of paying additional increments, these nurses should be paid a once-> and-for-all honorarium. The quantum of the honorarium should be determined in consultation with the Ministry of Public Administration, and the honorarium should be paid from savings in the votes of the Ministry of Health."

> These perceptive comments point to the basic objections that lie in the way of such a proposal. When Article 55 of the Constitution vests authority over public affairs in the Cabinet and makes it mandatory for the Cabinet to formulate schemes of recruitment, and codes of conduct for public officers, the principles to be followed in making promotions and transfers etc., The Constitution contemplates fair, and uniform provisions in the nature of general rules and regulations and not an action that is arbitrary or ad hoc or savoring of bias discrimination."

As observed by this court the basis for the above decision was the arbitrary nature, the Cabinet had decided to grant an ad hoc increment to a group of public servants when the proposal was objected to by the most important Ministers, the Minister of Finance and Minister of Public Administration.

However, the circumstance under which the Cabinet of Ministers reached a decision to conduct the special examination for those officers who are qualified to sit for the Limited Competitive Examination and to make the appointments to those who got through the special examination on a supernumerary basis was different to the decision referred to in the said case. In this regard, the court is further mindful of Article 55 (4) of the Constitution (the text that was operative at the time the Cabinet of Ministers took the decision) which I have already referred to in this judgment.

As already referred to in this judgment, the Public Service Commission had initially turned down the recommendation to recruit the Development Officers to the SLPS Class II Grade II by the Secretary to the Ministry of Plan Implementation and once again voiced its disagreement with the Cabinet of Ministers when the Cabinet of Ministers approved a Cabinet Paper to recruit Development Officers to Class II Grade II of SLPS based on the results of a special examination on supernumerary basis. The Cabinet of Ministers considered the matter further on 10th October 2007 and appointed an "official committee," comprising three Ministry Secretaries and the Director General of Management Services to reconsider the recommendation already before the Cabinet and thereafter gave the approval to the recommendations made by the official committee. In these circumstances, it is clear that the decision of the Cabinet of Ministers reached on 24.10.2007 was a well-considered decision by the Cabinet of Ministers and the said decision comes well within Sub-Article 4 to Article 55 of the Constitution. Therefore, the policy on the absorption of Development officers to Class II Grade II of SLPS was resolved by the Cabinet Decision dated 24.10.2007. (P-10)

In the case of Samastha Lanka Nidahas Grama Niladhari Sangamaya and Others V. D. Dissanayake, Secretary, Public Administration and Ministry of Home Affairs, and Others SC Appeal 158/2010 SC minute 14.06.2013 this court observed;

> "The first substantive question that has to be determined on appeal, in this case, is purely one of the vires and arises in the context of certain constitutional provisions which seek to distinguish between two categories of decisions that can be made by the executive arm of Government. The first of these are decisions relating to "the appointment, transfer, dismissal and disciplinary control" of public officers, which was vested in the Public Service Commission by Article 55 (1) of the Constitution of the Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka (hereinafter referred to as "the Constitution of Sri Lanka") as amended by the Seventeenth Amendment thereto, which was in force at the time of the pronouncement of the impugned judgment of the Court of Appeal the second of these categories are decisions pertaining to policy, which in the context of the public service are exclusively vested in the Cabinet of Ministers by Article 55 (4) of the Constitution of Sri Lanka, as amended by the Seventeenth Amendment."

In the case of Jathika Sevaka Sangamaya V. Sri Lanka Hadabima Authority SC Appeal 15/2013 Supreme Court minute 16.12.2015 this court further observed that;

> "As pointed out earlier under Article 42 and 55 of the Constitution, the Cabinet of Ministers are performing executive functions under the Constitution and their decisions can be either policy decisions or administrative decisions or both. Accordingly, the decisions of the Cabinet of Ministers other than the policy decisions are amenable to judicial review."

In Deawoo Engineering and Construction Co. Ltd V. Amarasekera (2006) 2 Sri LR 232 it was observed that;

> "Equally, the court is ill equipped to pronounce that the decision of the cabinet is Arbitrary, illegal or unreasonable unless there is concrete evidence to establish that the cabinet in taking such a decision has violated and acted contrary to the laws of the land."

When considering the material that has already discussed in my judgment and the decisions referred to above, I see no merit in the two applications considered by me in this judgment. The Petitioners in both applications have failed to establish the violation of their Fundamental Rights guaranteed under Article 12 (1) of the Constitution.

Both Applications are accordingly dismissed. I make no order with regard to costs.

Applications are dismissed.

ARGUED ON : 21st October, 2021

ACHALA WENGAPPULI, J.

The Petitioner in SC (FR) No. 236 of 2013, Surendrani Amirthanathan, is alleging continued infringement of her fundamental rights guaranteed to her under Articles 12(1) and 14(1)(h) of the Constitution. The impugned act of administrative or executive action is that one or more of the Respondents forcefully and illegally seized her property located in Jaffna town, over which she has paper title.

It was stated by the Petitioner that her father bought the said property in 1969 and built a dwelling house on it. She lived in that house with her parents until her marriage in 1987, after which she moved to Peradeniya with her husband. In 1988, her parents too had come to live with her after renting out their house in Jaffna to an elderly couple. In 1990, their house became uninhabitable due to damages it had sustained consequent to the war situation that erupted between the LTTE and Sri Lanka Army. With hostilities continuing unabated, it was not possible for the Petitioner to repair their house at that point of time. The Petitioner further states that due to the situation that prevailed at the time in the Jaffna peninsula, she and her family had moved to Australia in 2003, but her father had arranged a caretaker to look after the said property during their absence.

The Petitioner alleges that in October 2012, the Sri Lanka Army had illegally entered into her property and occupied same by erecting a fence around the property denying any access to the land by her agent. The Petitioner claims that her property had not been acquired by the State in terms of law and therefore asserts that she still is its lawful owner. It is also alleged by the Petitioner in SC (FR) No. 236/2013 that, in addition to her property, the Army had fenced off two other allotments of land that abuts her land. These two allotments of land are also depicted in Plan No. 665A by T. Candiah, as lot Nos. 2B and 3 respectively (said plan was annexed to the petition marked "P1(b)").

The Petitioners in SC (FR) Nos. 237 of 2013 and 238 of 2013, Constance Selvaranee Niles and Thevanayaki Kunanayagam, made similar allegation in their respective petitions claiming that the Army had unlawfully seized their lands by fencing off them. These Petitioners further allege that the Army, with its continued illegal occupation of their lands, infringed fundamental rights guaranteed to them under Article 12(1) of the Constitution.

The Petitioner in SC (FR) No. 237 of 2013, Constance Selvaranee Niles claims that she and her late husband, Rev. Wesley Dayalagunan Niles, purchased lot No 2B (as depicted in Plan No. 665A dated 9th July 1969 (drawn by Tirunavukarasu Candiah, Licensed Surveyor and also depicted in Plan No. 2021 by Perimpanayagam Licensed Surveyor dated 23rd June 1973), which is in an extent of about 17 perches, on Deed of Transfer No. 810 attested by Gnanapragasam Notary Public on 26th October 1970. The Petitioner, Thevanayaki Kunanayagam, had purchased the southern half of lot No 3 on Deed of Transfer No. 801, attested by Devarajan Notary Public on 3rd August 1969. Northern half of the same Lot was purchased on Deed of Transfer No. 1351, attested by Notary Public Saravanamuttu Selvarajah on 27th November 1961 and thus became the owner of Lot No. 3, which is in an extent of about 40 perches, in its entirety. These two Petitioners support the claim of the Petitioner in SC (FR) No. 236/2013, that in 2012, the Army had illegally entered their lands and continued to occupy them.

After hearing the parties, this Court granted leave to proceed under Article 12(1) of the Constitution, in respect of SC(FR) No. 236 of 2013 and fixed the matter for hearing along with the other two applications. On 21st October 2021, when the three applications were taken up for hearing, learned Counsel who represented the three Petitioners as well as the learned Senior State Counsel, who represented the Respondents, invited this Court to amalgamate the three applications and to pronounce a common Judgment in respect of them, in view of the fact that the attendant circumstances are almost identical to each other, except for the three separate allotment of lands in respect of which the three Petitioners claim title.

The Respondents have resisted the three applications and in the Statement of Objections of the 1st Respondent, it is stated after 1996, the year in which Operation Riviresa was conducted by Sri Lanka Army, Jaffna Town was liberated from the clutches of LTTE and civil administration in Jaffna peninsula was restored. It is further averred by the 1st Respondent that, after the termination of military operations against LTTE on 19th May 2009, the Army had periodically released such private lands it had to occupy for strategic reasons in order to minimize inconvenience caused to those land owners, but, it did so only after conducting threat assessments and redeployment of its troops to other locations.

However, it was decided by the Army that the Jaffna town had to be secured with deployment of military units stationed at strategic locations and, with a view to achieve this objective, an abandoned land near Jaffna Hospital, that adjoins the playground of Sinhala Maha Vidyalaya, was occupied. The said occupied parcel of land which is in an extent of about 20 perches is located within the larger land depicted in Plan No. 665A dated 09.07.1969 and situated within the Grama Niladhari division of J 73 Jaffna. After occupying the land, it was utilised by constructing a building on it, which is being used as the official residence of the 512 Brigade Commander of the 51 Division.

The 1st Respondent also disclosed that the Minister of Land and Land Development had, by letter dated 7th May 2014, directed the 6th Respondent, Divisional Secretary of Jaffna, to publish a public notice in terms of Section 2 of the Land Acquisition Act with a view to acquire the said parcel of land for the public purpose described therein. It is asserted by the 1st Respondent that once the acquisition process is completed in terms of law, compensation would be paid to the rightful owner of the land under the occupation of the Army.

The Petitioners in their counter affidavits, denied of any pending acquisition process in respect of their lands and further asserted that they had not received any such notice.

At the hearing, it was contended by the learned Counsel for the Petitioners that the material presented by them clearly established that the lands belong to them were illegally occupied by the Army in view of the fact that there was no legally sanctioned process of acquisition. It was therefore submitted that the continued illegal occupation of their lands is an infringement of their fundamental rights under Article 12(1) of the Constitution. Learned Counsel further submitted that if the lands under occupation of the Respondents could not be released back to the Petitioners, they must at least be compensated adequately in order to mitigate the loss of their property.

Learned Senior State Counsel sought to counter the said contention by submitting that the Petitioners could have vindicated their rights before the District Court by instituting action, which is the proper legal remedy in a situation where any one of them were denied of their rights to property, consequent to an act of illegal occupation. It appears that, in advancing the said contention, the Petitioners seek to differentiate themselves from a litigant, who had been illegally dispossessed from his or her property by a trespasser, by placing reliance on the fact that the Respondents, in depriving them of their rights, had acted under the colour of office.

The three Petitioners, in the prayer to their respective petitions, had prayed for the grant of following reliefs;

a. declare that any one or more of the Respondents violated their fundamental rights guaranteed to them under Articles 12(1) and or 14(1)(h) of the Constitution,
b. direct any one or more of the Respondents to release the property reflected in the respective petitions with vacant possession forthwith.

In view of the allegation of the Petitioners of an illegal denial of their right to property, I wish to quote from the judgment of Manawadu v The Attorney General (1987) 2 Sri L.R. 30, where Sharvananda CJ held that (at p. 43) "[A]mong the important rights which individuals traditionally have enjoyed is the right to own property. This right is recognised in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (1948). Article 17 (1) of which states that everyone has the right to own property and Article 17(2) guarantees that no one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his property." Thus, this Court had recognised the traditional right to own property, although not included in Chapter III of the Constitution as a fundamental right, and it could only be denied by a process prescribed by law.

In view of the nature of the declaratory reliefs sought by the Petitioners, it becomes their responsibility to satisfy this Court on a balance of probability that they hold valid legal title to the individual tenements in respect of which such declarations were sought, and that one or more Respondents are in illegal occupation of each of these specific parcels of land. If those factors had been established to the required degree of proof, the Petitioners are entitled to a declaration that they were arbitrary deprived of their right to property in denial of equal protection of law, a fundamental right guaranteed to them by Article 12(1).

The Petitioners had relied on their title deeds to establish ownership over the three individual tenements referred to in them. The Petitioner in SC (FR) No. 236/2013, Surendrani Amirthanathan, had relied on Deed of Gift No. 107, executed by her father Reginald Jeremiah Dharmaratnam Ariyaratnam and attested by Sharmini Mecheta Dushanthi Kamaragoda, Notary Public on 1st March 1991, in proof of her legal ownership to a parcel of land in an extent of two Lachcham (20 perches), described in its schedule as lot No. 2A of Plan No. 665A, drawn by Tirunavukarasu Candiah, Licensed Surveyor, on 9th July 1969.

Land claimed to be owned by Constance Selvaranee Niles (the Petitioner in SC (FR) No. 237/2013) and her late husband, Rev. Wesley Dayalagunan Niles, is depicted as Lot No. 2B in Plan No. 665A, together with rights over the road reservations depicted therein as Lot Nos. 1C and 2C. She relied on Deed of Transfer No. 810, attested by David Gnanapragasam, Notary Public, on 26th October 1970, in proof of her title to the said land. The Petitioner in SC (FR) No. 238/2013, Thevanayaki Kunanayagam, also claims that her land is occupied by the Sri Lanka Army and relied on Deeds of Transfer Nos. 1351 and 801, through which she received title to both northern and southern half of lot No. 3, as depicted in the Plan No. 665A. The said Deed of Transfer No. 1351 was attested by S. Selvarajah, Notary Public, on 27th November 1961. The said Deed conferred title to the said lot in favour of her father Mylvaganam Sabaratnam, who died without leaving a will. The Petitioner, being the only child of Mylvaganam Sabaratnam, claims to be his sole heir.

In his Statement of Objections, the 1st Respondent specifically denied the claim of title made by the Petitioners to the three allotments of lands and put them in strict proof of same. The title deeds that were relied upon by the three Petitioners were notarially executed instruments and registered in the relevant Land Registries. Except for the Deed of Gift No. 107 (relied on by the Petitioner in SC (FR) No.236/2013), other deeds were executed more than thirty years ago. Therefore, the Petitioners have placed material before this Court seeking to establish title to the individual allotments of lands referred to in their respective petitions.

Perusal of plan No. 665A, relied on by both parties, indicate that it had been drawn for the purpose of subdivision of a larger land, which was in an extent of 13 Lachchams and 06 Kulies (over 130 perches). The said larger land was since subdivided into six individual allotments consisting of lot Nos. 1A, 1B, 2A, 2B, and 3, along with the road reservation shown as Lot Nos. 1C and 2C. The three Petitioners claim title to Lot Nos. 2A, 2B and 3, that are located adjacent to each other and separated by a common boundary, forming the southern part of the said larger land, while lot Nos. 1A, 1B consists of the northern part. The Lot No. 2A is about 20 perches in extent, Lot No. 2B is about 17 perches and Lot No. 3 is about 40 perches. Collectively these three allotments form a land area of 77 perches from the total extent of the said larger land of over 130 perches.

The 1st Respondent admitted in his Statement of Objections that a building was constructed by the Army on the 20 perch parcel of land it occupied. The 1st Respondent further stated that the said 20 perch land is located within the Grama Niladhari Division of J 73 Jaffna–West, and depicted in Plan No. 665A, marked as "RX-1". This is the identical plan relied on by the three Petitioners in support of their claims. The 1st Respondent, despite making a reference to Plan No. 665A, did not make any reference to a particular lot number, in order to denote a particular parcel of land under occupation, in relation to the said plan.

The three Petitioners collectively assert that the Army had occupied their land and erected fences around them. It is observed that the Petitioners did not carry out any survey in order to indicate the exact location of these fences in relation to their respective lands vis a vis the 20 perch land occupied by the Army. The difficulties of the Petitioners in making out such a survey plan, demarcating the exact location of the fences, is understandable given the practicalities involved in such an exercise.

However, none of the Petitioners thought it fit to indicate the location of the fences that have been erected around their properties or to the location of the buildings put up by the Army in relation to their respective lots, either by way of a sketch or an indication of same on Plan No. 665A itself, in view of the bare admission made by the 1st Respondent in his Statement of Objections. The Petitioner in SC (FR) No. 236/2013, in fact did refer to a sketch in her letters P2 to P5 but did not think it necessary to annex same to the instant petition. When the Respondents claim that they built a residence for the Brigade Commander on that 20 perch land, the Petitioners have merely reiterated what they alleged in the petitions in their counter affidavits that the land was fenced off and did not make any reference to a building erected on any of their lands.

With the said admission of the 1st Respondent in his Statement of Objections, it becomes clear that the Army is in fact occupying a parcel of land in extent of 20 perches within the larger land depicted in Plan No. 665A, with a building constructed by it. The fact of Army occupying a land in extent of only 20 perches from the said larger land is supported by the direction issued by the Minister of Lands to the 6th Respondent, directing the latter to initiate acquisition process. Each of the three Petitioners claim that the Army is occupying their lands. The question whether the land admittedly occupied by the Army belong to any of the three Petitioners.

In the absence of a specific admission to that effect, a question necessarily arises whether the land occupied by the Army belongs to any one or more of the Petitioners. The determination of the exact location of the said occupied land in relation to the three parcels of land to which the Petitioners individually claim title could be one way of determining that issue. It must be noted that the admission made by the 1st Respondent in turn give rise to several probabilities that this Court should consider before it ventures to answer the said question.

Lot No. 2A consists of 20 perches in extent and accordingly the occupied land could well fit into that parcel of land. That is one probability. The occupied 20 perch could also be located completely within the demarcated Lot No. 3, which is over 40 perches in extent and thus presents another probability. The occupied land could also be located in lot No. 2B consuming it in totality as the said parcel of land is only about 17 perches. There exists another probability that the 20 perch land is located well within land area covered by all three lots. It appears that the likelihood of occurring any one of these probabilities are of equal in value.

In addition to the probabilities that are referred to, there is yet another probability that exists. The larger land, as per Plan No. 665A, consists of about 130 perches in total. As already noted, the three lots to which the Petitioners claim ownership, forms the southern part of the said larger land. The said three allotments are about 77 perches in its total extent, leaving a balance of 53 perches for the remaining lot Nos. 1A and 1B, which forms its northern part. It could well be that the said 20 perch lot with a building standing on it is located within the land area forming the said northern part, to which none of the Petitioners could claim title to. If the 20 perch land, occupied by the Army, is located within the said northern part of the larger land, then none of the Petitioners are entitled to the declaration they sought from this Court.

The 1st Respondent specifically avers that the Army had carried out construction work on the said occupied land and had annexed building plans and several photographs of the buildings that had been put up on that land to his Statement of Objections (photographs marked RX2 to RX5). The photographic evidence tends to indicate that the construction activities of the building are already completed. The building plan of the said construction is annexed to the Statement of Objections as RX-8 and is indicative of the fact that the Army had constructed the said building from its foundation level as totally a new construction and not merely repaired a damaged or an uninhabitable building that stood on the occupied land.

Strangely, none of the Petitioners did offer any additional material to indicate that the 20 perch land occupied by the Army with a building on it falls within the boundaries of any or more of the three lots to which they claim title. In other words, it was imperative for the Petitioners to satisfy this Court that any one or more of them had title to the 20 perch land occupied by the Army. The Petitioners have filed their petitions in 2013. Statement of Objections of the 1st Respondent were tendered to Court in 2017 and the Petitioners countered the assertions made in the objections with their counter affidavits filed in 2018.

Given the fact that the existence of a building is clearly visible through a fence, unlike a building constructed within a premises surrounded by high parapet walls and thereby totally blocking any visual access, the reason as to why none of the Petitioners referred to a building put up by the Army on their lands and thus limiting their allegation only to the act of fencing is somewhat intriguing. If the building was constructed after the petitions were tendered to this Court, the Petitioners could have easily clarified that position, despite the absence to any reference to a construction in their original petitions.

In these circumstances, I am of the considered view that each of the Petitioners have failed to satisfy this Court on a balance of probabilities that their lands were occupied by one or more of the Respondents as alleged. Their failure to exclude the probability of the location of the 20 perch land under occupation within the northern part of the larger land depicted in plan No. 665A, makes the 1st Respondent's claim that no land belonged to any of the Petitioners is being occupied by Army, a more probable one when compared with the others.

In view of the above considerations, the Petitioners in SC (FR) Nos. 236/2013, 237/2013 and 238/2013, have either individually or collectively failed to satisfy their allegation that the Respondents have deprived their rights to property by illegally occupying their lands infringing their fundamental rights, guaranteed under Article 12(1) of the Constitution, as described in the three petitions.

Accordingly, I dismiss the said three petitions without costs.

ACHALA WENGAPPULI, J.

The Petitioner in SC (FR) No. 236 of 2013, Surendrani Amirthanathan, is alleging continued infringement of her fundamental rights guaranteed to her under Articles 12(1) and 14(1)(h) of the Constitution. The impugned act of administrative or executive action is that one or more of the Respondents forcefully and illegally seized her property located in Jaffna town, over which she has paper title.

It was stated by the Petitioner that her father bought the said property in 1969 and built a dwelling house on it. She lived in that house with her parents until her marriage in 1987, after which she moved to Peradeniya with her husband. In 1988, her parents too had come to live with her after renting out their house in Jaffna to an elderly couple. In 1990, their house became uninhabitable due to damages it had sustained consequent to the war situation that erupted between the LTTE and Sri Lanka Army. With hostilities continuing unabated, it was not possible for the Petitioner to repair their house at that point of time. The Petitioner further states that due to the situation that prevailed at the time in the Jaffna peninsula, she and her family had moved to Australia in 2003, but her father had arranged a caretaker to look after the said property during their absence.

The Petitioner alleges that in October 2012, the Sri Lanka Army had illegally entered into her property and occupied same by erecting a fence around the property denying any access to the land by her agent. The Petitioner claims that her property had not been acquired by the State in terms of law and therefore asserts that she still is its lawful owner. It is also alleged by the Petitioner in SC (FR) No. 236/2013 that, in addition to her property, the Army had fenced off two other allotments of land that abuts her land. These two allotments of land are also depicted in Plan No. 665A by T. Candiah, as lot Nos. 2B and 3 respectively (said plan was annexed to the petition marked "P1(b)").

The Petitioners in SC (FR) Nos. 237 of 2013 and 238 of 2013, Constance Selvaranee Niles and Thevanayaki Kunanayagam, made similar allegation in their respective petitions claiming that the Army had unlawfully seized their lands by fencing off them. These Petitioners further allege that the Army, with its continued illegal occupation of their lands, infringed fundamental rights guaranteed to them under Article 12(1) of the Constitution.

The Petitioner in SC (FR) No. 237 of 2013, Constance Selvaranee Niles claims that she and her late husband, Rev. Wesley Dayalagunan Niles, purchased lot No 2B (as depicted in Plan No. 665A dated 9th July 1969 (drawn by Tirunavukarasu Candiah, Licensed Surveyor and also depicted in Plan No. 2021 by Perimpanayagam Licensed Surveyor dated 23rd June 1973), which is in an extent of about 17 perches, on Deed of Transfer No. 810 attested by Gnanapragasam Notary Public on 26th October 1970. The Petitioner, Thevanayaki Kunanayagam, had purchased the southern half of lot No 3 on Deed of Transfer No. 801, attested by Devarajan Notary Public on 3rd August 1969. Northern half of the same Lot was purchased on Deed of Transfer No. 1351, attested by Notary Public Saravanamuttu Selvarajah on 27th November 1961 and thus became the owner of Lot No. 3, which is in an extent of about 40 perches, in its entirety. These two Petitioners support the claim of the Petitioner in SC (FR) No. 236/2013, that in 2012, the Army had illegally entered their lands and continued to occupy them.

After hearing the parties, this Court granted leave to proceed under Article 12(1) of the Constitution, in respect of SC(FR) No. 236 of 2013 and fixed the matter for hearing along with the other two applications. On 21st October 2021, when the three applications were taken up for hearing, learned Counsel who represented the three Petitioners as well as the learned Senior State Counsel, who represented the Respondents, invited this Court to amalgamate the three applications and to pronounce a common Judgment in respect of them, in view of the fact that the attendant circumstances are almost identical to each other, except for the three separate allotment of lands in respect of which the three Petitioners claim title.

The Respondents have resisted the three applications and in the Statement of Objections of the 1st Respondent, it is stated after 1996, the year in which Operation Riviresa was conducted by Sri Lanka Army, Jaffna Town was liberated from the clutches of LTTE and civil administration in Jaffna peninsula was restored. It is further averred by the 1st Respondent that, after the termination of military operations against LTTE on 19th May 2009, the Army had periodically released such private lands it had to occupy for strategic reasons in order to minimize inconvenience caused to those land owners, but, it did so only after conducting threat assessments and redeployment of its troops to other locations.

However, it was decided by the Army that the Jaffna town had to be secured with deployment of military units stationed at strategic locations and, with a view to achieve this objective, an abandoned land near Jaffna Hospital, that adjoins the playground of Sinhala Maha Vidyalaya, was occupied. The said occupied parcel of land which is in an extent of about 20 perches is located within the larger land depicted in Plan No. 665A dated 09.07.1969 and situated within the Grama Niladhari division of J 73 Jaffna. After occupying the land, it was utilised by constructing a building on it, which is being used as the official residence of the 512 Brigade Commander of the 51 Division.

The 1st Respondent also disclosed that the Minister of Land and Land Development had, by letter dated 7th May 2014, directed the 6th Respondent, Divisional Secretary of Jaffna, to publish a public notice in terms of Section 2 of the Land Acquisition Act with a view to acquire the said parcel of land for the public purpose described therein. It is asserted by the 1st Respondent that once the acquisition process is completed in terms of law, compensation would be paid to the rightful owner of the land under the occupation of the Army.

The Petitioners in their counter affidavits, denied of any pending acquisition process in respect of their lands and further asserted that they had not received any such notice.

At the hearing, it was contended by the learned Counsel for the Petitioners that the material presented by them clearly established that the lands belong to them were illegally occupied by the Army in view of the fact that there was no legally sanctioned process of acquisition. It was therefore submitted that the continued illegal occupation of their lands is an infringement of their fundamental rights under Article 12(1) of the Constitution. Learned Counsel further submitted that if the lands under occupation of the Respondents could not be released back to the Petitioners, they must at least be compensated adequately in order to mitigate the loss of their property.

Learned Senior State Counsel sought to counter the said contention by submitting that the Petitioners could have vindicated their rights before the District Court by instituting action, which is the proper legal remedy in a situation where any one of them were denied of their rights to property, consequent to an act of illegal occupation. It appears that, in advancing the said contention, the Petitioners seek to differentiate themselves from a litigant, who had been illegally dispossessed from his or her property by a trespasser, by placing reliance on the fact that the Respondents, in depriving them of their rights, had acted under the colour of office.

The three Petitioners, in the prayer to their respective petitions, had prayed for the grant of following reliefs;

a. declare that any one or more of the Respondents violated their fundamental rights guaranteed to them under Articles 12(1) and or 14(1)(h) of the Constitution,
b. direct any one or more of the Respondents to release the property reflected in the respective petitions with vacant possession forthwith.

In view of the allegation of the Petitioners of an illegal denial of their right to property, I wish to quote from the judgment of Manawadu v The Attorney General (1987) 2 Sri L.R. 30, where Sharvananda CJ held that (at p. 43) "[A]mong the important rights which individuals traditionally have enjoyed is the right to own property. This right is recognised in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (1948). Article 17 (1) of which states that everyone has the right to own property and Article 17(2) guarantees that no one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his property." Thus, this Court had recognised the traditional right to own property, although not included in Chapter III of the Constitution as a fundamental right, and it could only be denied by a process prescribed by law.

In view of the nature of the declaratory reliefs sought by the Petitioners, it becomes their responsibility to satisfy this Court on a balance of probability that they hold valid legal title to the individual tenements in respect of which such declarations were sought, and that one or more Respondents are in illegal occupation of each of these specific parcels of land. If those factors had been established to the required degree of proof, the Petitioners are entitled to a declaration that they were arbitrary deprived of their right to property in denial of equal protection of law, a fundamental right guaranteed to them by Article 12(1).

The Petitioners had relied on their title deeds to establish ownership over the three individual tenements referred to in them. The Petitioner in SC (FR) No. 236/2013, Surendrani Amirthanathan, had relied on Deed of Gift No. 107, executed by her father Reginald Jeremiah Dharmaratnam Ariyaratnam and attested by Sharmini Mecheta Dushanthi Kamaragoda, Notary Public on 1st March 1991, in proof of her legal ownership to a parcel of land in an extent of two Lachcham (20 perches), described in its schedule as lot No. 2A of Plan No. 665A, drawn by Tirunavukarasu Candiah, Licensed Surveyor, on 9th July 1969.

Land claimed to be owned by Constance Selvaranee Niles (the Petitioner in SC (FR) No. 237/2013) and her late husband, Rev. Wesley Dayalagunan Niles, is depicted as Lot No. 2B in Plan No. 665A, together with rights over the road reservations depicted therein as Lot Nos. 1C and 2C. She relied on Deed of Transfer No. 810, attested by David Gnanapragasam, Notary Public, on 26th October 1970, in proof of her title to the said land. The Petitioner in SC (FR) No. 238/2013, Thevanayaki Kunanayagam, also claims that her land is occupied by the Sri Lanka Army and relied on Deeds of Transfer Nos. 1351 and 801, through which she received title to both northern and southern half of lot No. 3, as depicted in the Plan No. 665A. The said Deed of Transfer No. 1351 was attested by S. Selvarajah, Notary Public, on 27th November 1961. The said Deed conferred title to the said lot in favour of her father Mylvaganam Sabaratnam, who died without leaving a will. The Petitioner, being the only child of Mylvaganam Sabaratnam, claims to be his sole heir.

In his Statement of Objections, the 1st Respondent specifically denied the claim of title made by the Petitioners to the three allotments of lands and put them in strict proof of same. The title deeds that were relied upon by the three Petitioners were notarially executed instruments and registered in the relevant Land Registries. Except for the Deed of Gift No. 107 (relied on by the Petitioner in SC (FR) No.236/2013), other deeds were executed more than thirty years ago. Therefore, the Petitioners have placed material before this Court seeking to establish title to the individual allotments of lands referred to in their respective petitions.

Perusal of plan No. 665A, relied on by both parties, indicate that it had been drawn for the purpose of subdivision of a larger land, which was in an extent of 13 Lachchams and 06 Kulies (over 130 perches). The said larger land was since subdivided into six individual allotments consisting of lot Nos. 1A, 1B, 2A, 2B, and 3, along with the road reservation shown as Lot Nos. 1C and 2C. The three Petitioners claim title to Lot Nos. 2A, 2B and 3, that are located adjacent to each other and separated by a common boundary, forming the southern part of the said larger land, while lot Nos. 1A, 1B consists of the northern part. The Lot No. 2A is about 20 perches in extent, Lot No. 2B is about 17 perches and Lot No. 3 is about 40 perches.

Collectively these three allotments form a land area of 77 perches from the total extent of the said larger land of over 130 perches.

The 1st Respondent admitted in his Statement of Objections that a building was constructed by the Army on the 20 perch parcel of land it occupied. The 1st Respondent further stated that the said 20 perch land is located within the Grama Niladhari Division of J 73 Jaffna–West, and depicted in Plan No. 665A, marked as "RX-1". This is the identical plan relied on by the three Petitioners in support of their claims. The 1st Respondent, despite making a reference to Plan No. 665A, did not make any reference to a particular lot number, in order to denote a particular parcel of land under occupation, in relation to the said plan.

The three Petitioners collectively assert that the Army had occupied their land and erected fences around them. It is observed that the Petitioners did not carry out any survey in order to indicate the exact location of these fences in relation to their respective lands vis a vis the 20 perch land occupied by the Army. The difficulties of the Petitioners in making out such a survey plan, demarcating the exact location of the fences, is understandable given the practicalities involved in such an exercise.

However, none of the Petitioners thought it fit to indicate the location of the fences that have been erected around their properties or to the location of the buildings put up by the Army in relation to their respective lots, either by way of a sketch or an indication of same on Plan No. 665A itself, in view of the bare admission made by the 1st Respondent in his Statement of Objections. The Petitioner in SC (FR) No. 236/2013, in fact did refer to a sketch in her letters P2 to P5 but did not think it necessary to annex same to the instant petition. When the Respondents claim that they built a residence for the Brigade Commander on that 20 perch land, the Petitioners have merely reiterated what they alleged in the petitions in their counter affidavits that the land was fenced off and did not make any reference to a building erected on any of their lands.

With the said admission of the 1st Respondent in his Statement of Objections, it becomes clear that the Army is in fact occupying a parcel of land in extent of 20 perches within the larger land depicted in Plan No. 665A, with a building constructed by it. The fact of Army occupying a land in extent of only 20 perches from the said larger land is supported by the direction issued by the Minister of Lands to the 6th Respondent, directing the latter to initiate acquisition process. Each of the three Petitioners claim that the Army is occupying their lands. The question whether the land admittedly occupied by the Army belong to any of the three Petitioners.

In the absence of a specific admission to that effect, a question necessarily arises whether the land occupied by the Army belongs to any one or more of the Petitioners. The determination of the exact location of the said occupied land in relation to the three parcels of land to which the Petitioners individually claim title could be one way of determining that issue. It must be noted that the admission made by the 1st Respondent in turn give rise to several probabilities that this Court should consider before it ventures to answer the said question.

Lot No. 2A consists of 20 perches in extent and accordingly the occupied land could well fit into that parcel of land. That is one probability. The occupied 20 perch could also be located completely within the demarcated Lot No. 3, which is over 40 perches in extent and thus presents another probability. The occupied land could also be located in lot No. 2B consuming it in totality as the said parcel of land is only about 17 perches. There exists another probability that the 20 perch land is located well within land area covered by all three lots. It appears that the likelihood of occurring any one of these probabilities are of equal in value.

In addition to the probabilities that are referred to, there is yet another probability that exists. The larger land, as per Plan No. 665A, consists of about 130 perches in total. As already noted, the three lots to which the Petitioners claim ownership, forms the southern part of the said larger land. The said three allotments are about 77 perches in its total extent, leaving a balance of 53 perches for the remaining lot Nos. 1A and 1B, which forms its northern part. It could well be that the said 20 perch lot with a building standing on it is located within the land area forming the said northern part, to which none of the Petitioners could claim title to. If the 20 perch land, occupied by the Army, is located within the said northern part of the larger land, then none of the Petitioners are entitled to the declaration they sought from this Court.

The 1st Respondent specifically avers that the Army had carried out construction work on the said occupied land and had annexed building plans and several photographs of the buildings that had been put up on that land to his Statement of Objections (photographs marked RX2 to RX5). The photographic evidence tends to indicate that the construction activities of the building are already completed. The building plan of the said construction is annexed to the Statement of Objections as RX-8 and is indicative of the fact that the Army had constructed the said building from its foundation level as totally a new construction and not merely repaired a damaged or an uninhabitable building that stood on the occupied land.

Strangely, none of the Petitioners did offer any additional material to indicate that the 20 perch land occupied by the Army with a building on it falls within the boundaries of any or more of the three lots to which they claim title. In other words, it was imperative for the Petitioners to satisfy this Court that any one or more of them had title to the 20 perch land occupied by the Army. The Petitioners have filed their petitions in 2013. Statement of Objections of the 1st Respondent were tendered to Court in 2017 and the Petitioners countered the assertions made in the objections with their counter affidavits filed in 2018.

Given the fact that the existence of a building is clearly visible through a fence, unlike a building constructed within a premises surrounded by high parapet walls and thereby totally blocking any visual access, the reason as to why none of the Petitioners referred to a building put up by the Army on their lands and thus limiting their allegation only to the act of fencing is somewhat intriguing. If the building was constructed after the petitions were tendered to this Court, the Petitioners could have easily clarified that position, despite the absence to any reference to a construction in their original petitions.

In these circumstances, I am of the considered view that each of the Petitioners have failed to satisfy this Court on a balance of probabilities that their lands were occupied by one or more of the Respondents as alleged. Their failure to exclude the probability of the location of the 20 perch land under occupation within the northern part of the larger land depicted in plan No. 665A, makes the 1st Respondent's claim that no land belonged to any of the Petitioners is being occupied by Army, a more probable one when compared with the others.

In view of the above considerations, the Petitioners in SC (FR) Nos. 236/2013, 237/2013 and 238/2013, have either individually or collectively failed to satisfy their allegation that the Respondents have deprived their rights to property by illegally occupying their lands infringing their fundamental rights, guaranteed under Article 12(1) of the Constitution, as described in the three petitions.

Accordingly, I dismiss the said three petitions without costs.

ACHALA WENGAPPULI, J.

The Petitioner in SC (FR) No. 236 of 2013, Surendrani Amirthanathan, is alleging continued infringement of her fundamental rights guaranteed to her under Articles 12(1) and 14(1)(h) of the Constitution. The impugned act of administrative or executive action is that one or more of the Respondents forcefully and illegally seized her property located in Jaffna town, over which she has paper title.

It was stated by the Petitioner that her father bought the said property in 1969 and built a dwelling house on it. She lived in that house with her parents until her marriage in 1987, after which she moved to Peradeniya with her husband. In 1988, her parents too had come to live with her after renting out their house in Jaffna to an elderly couple. In 1990, their house became uninhabitable due to damages it had sustained consequent to the war situation that erupted between the LTTE and Sri Lanka Army. With hostilities continuing unabated, it was not possible for the Petitioner to repair their house at that point of time. The Petitioner further states that due to the situation that prevailed at the time in the Jaffna peninsula, she and her family had moved to Australia in 2003, but her father had arranged a caretaker to look after the said property during their absence.

The Petitioner alleges that in October 2012, the Sri Lanka Army had illegally entered into her property and occupied same by erecting a fence around the property denying any access to the land by her agent. The Petitioner claims that her property had not been acquired by the State in terms of law and therefore asserts that she still is its lawful owner. It is also alleged by the Petitioner in SC (FR) No. 236/2013 that, in addition to her property, the Army had fenced off two other allotments of land that abuts her land. These two allotments of land are also depicted in Plan No. 665A by T. Candiah, as lot Nos. 2B and 3 respectively (said plan was annexed to the petition marked "P1(b)").

The Petitioners in SC (FR) Nos. 237 of 2013 and 238 of 2013, Constance Selvaranee Niles and Thevanayaki Kunanayagam, made similar allegation in their respective petitions claiming that the Army had unlawfully seized their lands by fencing off them. These Petitioners further allege that the Army, with its continued illegal occupation of their lands, infringed fundamental rights guaranteed to them under Article 12(1) of the Constitution.

The Petitioner in SC (FR) No. 237 of 2013, Constance Selvaranee Niles claims that she and her late husband, Rev. Wesley Dayalagunan Niles, purchased lot No 2B (as depicted in Plan No. 665A dated 9th July 1969 (drawn by Tirunavukarasu Candiah, Licensed Surveyor and also depicted in Plan No. 2021 by Perimpanayagam Licensed Surveyor dated 23rd June 1973), which is in an extent of about 17 perches, on Deed of Transfer No. 810 attested by Gnanapragasam Notary Public on 26th October 1970. The Petitioner, Thevanayaki Kunanayagam, had purchased the southern half of lot No 3 on Deed of Transfer No. 801, attested by Devarajan Notary Public on 3rd August 1969. Northern half of the same Lot was purchased on Deed of Transfer No. 1351, attested by Notary Public Saravanamuttu Selvarajah on 27th November 1961 and thus became the owner of Lot No. 3, which is in an extent of about 40 perches, in its entirety. These two Petitioners support the claim of the Petitioner in SC (FR) No. 236/2013, that in 2012, the Army had illegally entered their lands and continued to occupy them.

After hearing the parties, this Court granted leave to proceed under Article 12(1) of the Constitution, in respect of SC(FR) No. 236 of 2013 and fixed the matter for hearing along with the other two applications. On 21st October 2021, when the three applications were taken up for hearing, learned Counsel who represented the three Petitioners as well as the learned Senior State Counsel, who represented the Respondents, invited this Court to amalgamate the three applications and to pronounce a common Judgment in respect of them, in view of the fact that the attendant circumstances are almost identical to each other, except for the three separate allotment of lands in respect of which the three Petitioners claim title.

The Respondents have resisted the three applications and in the Statement of Objections of the 1st Respondent, it is stated after 1996, the year in which Operation Riviresa was conducted by Sri Lanka Army, Jaffna Town was liberated from the clutches of LTTE and civil administration in Jaffna peninsula was restored. It is further averred by the 1st Respondent that, after the termination of military operations against LTTE on 19th May 2009, the Army had periodically released such private lands it had to occupy for strategic reasons in order to minimize inconvenience caused to those land owners, but, it did so only after conducting threat assessments and redeployment of its troops to other locations.

However, it was decided by the Army that the Jaffna town had to be secured with deployment of military units stationed at strategic locations and, with a view to achieve this objective, an abandoned land near Jaffna Hospital, that adjoins the playground of Sinhala Maha Vidyalaya, was occupied. The said occupied parcel of land which is in an extent of about 20 perches is located within the larger land depicted in Plan No. 665A dated 09.07.1969 and situated within the Grama Niladhari division of J 73 Jaffna. After occupying the land, it was utilised by constructing a building on it, which is being used as the official residence of the 512 Brigade Commander of the 51 Division.

The 1st Respondent also disclosed that the Minister of Land and Land Development had, by letter dated 7th May 2014, directed the 6th Respondent, Divisional Secretary of Jaffna, to publish a public notice in terms of Section 2 of the Land Acquisition Act with a view to acquire the said parcel of land for the public purpose described therein. It is asserted by the 1st Respondent that once the acquisition process is completed in terms of law, compensation would be paid to the rightful owner of the land under the occupation of the Army.

The Petitioners in their counter affidavits, denied of any pending acquisition process in respect of their lands and further asserted that they had not received any such notice.

At the hearing, it was contended by the learned Counsel for the Petitioners that the material presented by them clearly established that the lands belong to them were illegally occupied by the Army in view of the fact that there was no legally sanctioned process of acquisition. It was therefore submitted that the continued illegal occupation of their lands is an infringement of their fundamental rights under Article 12(1) of the Constitution. Learned Counsel further submitted that if the lands under occupation of the Respondents could not be released back to the Petitioners, they must at least be compensated adequately in order to mitigate the loss of their property.

Learned Senior State Counsel sought to counter the said contention by submitting that the Petitioners could have vindicated their rights before the District Court by instituting action, which is the proper legal remedy in a situation where any one of them were denied of their rights to property, consequent to an act of illegal occupation. It appears that, in advancing the said contention, the Petitioners seek to differentiate themselves from a litigant, who had been illegally dispossessed from his or her property by a trespasser, by placing reliance on the fact that the Respondents, in depriving them of their rights, had acted under the colour of office.

The three Petitioners, in the prayer to their respective petitions, had prayed for the grant of following reliefs;

a. declare that any one or more of the Respondents violated their fundamental rights guaranteed to them under Articles 12(1) and or 14(1)(h) of the Constitution,
b. direct any one or more of the Respondents to release the property reflected in the respective petitions with vacant possession forthwith.

In view of the allegation of the Petitioners of an illegal denial of their right to property, I wish to quote from the judgment of Manawadu v The Attorney General (1987) 2 Sri L.R. 30, where Sharvananda CJ held that (at p. 43) "[A]mong the important rights which individuals traditionally have enjoyed is the right to own property. This right is recognised in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (1948). Article 17 (1) of which states that everyone has the right to own property and Article 17(2) guarantees that no one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his property." Thus, this Court had recognised the traditional right to own property, although not included in Chapter III of the Constitution as a fundamental right, and it could only be denied by a process prescribed by law.

In view of the nature of the declaratory reliefs sought by the Petitioners, it becomes their responsibility to satisfy this Court on a balance of probability that they hold valid legal title to the individual tenements in respect of which such declarations were sought, and that one or more Respondents are in illegal occupation of each of these specific parcels of land. If those factors had been established to the required degree of proof, the Petitioners are entitled to a declaration that they were arbitrary deprived of their right to property in denial of equal protection of law, a fundamental right guaranteed to them by Article 12(1).

The Petitioners had relied on their title deeds to establish ownership over the three individual tenements referred to in them. The Petitioner in SC (FR) No. 236/2013, Surendrani Amirthanathan, had relied on Deed of Gift No. 107, executed by her father Reginald Jeremiah Dharmaratnam Ariyaratnam and attested by Sharmini Mecheta Dushanthi Kamaragoda, Notary Public on 1st March 1991, in proof of her legal ownership to a parcel of land in an extent of two Lachcham (20 perches), described in its schedule as lot No. 2A of Plan No. 665A, drawn by Tirunavukarasu Candiah, Licensed Surveyor, on 9th July 1969.

Land claimed to be owned by Constance Selvaranee Niles (the Petitioner in SC (FR) No. 237/2013) and her late husband, Rev. Wesley Dayalagunan Niles, is depicted as Lot No. 2B in Plan No. 665A, together with rights over the road reservations depicted therein as Lot Nos. 1C and 2C. She relied on Deed of Transfer No. 810, attested by David Gnanapragasam, Notary Public, on 26th October 1970, in proof of her title to the said land. The Petitioner in SC (FR) No. 238/2013, Thevanayaki Kunanayagam, also claims that her land is occupied by the Sri Lanka Army and relied on Deeds of Transfer Nos. 1351 and 801, through which she received title to both northern and southern half of lot No. 3, as depicted in the Plan No. 665A. The said Deed of Transfer No. 1351 was attested by S. Selvarajah, Notary Public, on 27th November 1961. The said Deed conferred title to the said lot in favour of her father Mylvaganam Sabaratnam, who died without leaving a will. The Petitioner, being the only child of Mylvaganam Sabaratnam, claims to be his sole heir.

In his Statement of Objections, the 1st Respondent specifically denied the claim of title made by the Petitioners to the three allotments of lands and put them in strict proof of same. The title deeds that were relied upon by the three Petitioners were notarially executed instruments and registered in the relevant Land Registries. Except for the Deed of Gift No. 107 (relied on by the Petitioner in SC (FR) No.236/2013), other deeds were executed more than thirty years ago. Therefore, the Petitioners have placed material before this Court seeking to establish title to the individual allotments of lands referred to in their respective petitions.

Perusal of plan No. 665A, relied on by both parties, indicate that it had been drawn for the purpose of subdivision of a larger land, which was in an extent of 13 Lachchams and 06 Kulies (over 130 perches). The said larger land was since subdivided into six individual allotments consisting of lot Nos. 1A, 1B, 2A, 2B, and 3, along with the road reservation shown as Lot Nos. 1C and 2C. The three Petitioners claim title to Lot Nos. 2A, 2B and 3, that are located adjacent to each other and separated by a common boundary, forming the southern part of the said larger land, while lot Nos. 1A, 1B consists of the northern part. The Lot No. 2A is about 20 perches in extent, Lot No. 2B is about 17 perches and Lot No. 3 is about 40 perches.

Collectively these three allotments form a land area of 77 perches from the total extent of the said larger land of over 130 perches.

The 1st Respondent admitted in his Statement of Objections that a building was constructed by the Army on the 20 perch parcel of land it occupied. The 1st Respondent further stated that the said 20 perch land is located within the Grama Niladhari Division of J 73 Jaffna–West, and depicted in Plan No. 665A, marked as "RX-1". This is the identical plan relied on by the three Petitioners in support of their claims. The 1st Respondent, despite making a reference to Plan No. 665A, did not make any reference to a particular lot number, in order to denote a particular parcel of land under occupation, in relation to the said plan.

The three Petitioners collectively assert that the Army had occupied their land and erected fences around them. It is observed that the Petitioners did not carry out any survey in order to indicate the exact location of these fences in relation to their respective lands vis a vis the 20 perch land occupied by the Army. The difficulties of the Petitioners in making out such a survey plan, demarcating the exact location of the fences, is understandable given the practicalities involved in such an exercise.

However, none of the Petitioners thought it fit to indicate the location of the fences that have been erected around their properties or to the location of the buildings put up by the Army in relation to their respective lots, either by way of a sketch or an indication of same on Plan No. 665A itself, in view of the bare admission made by the 1st Respondent in his Statement of Objections. The Petitioner in SC (FR) No. 236/2013, in fact did refer to a sketch in her letters P2 to P5 but did not think it necessary to annex same to the instant petition. When the Respondents claim that they built a residence for the Brigade Commander on that 20 perch land, the Petitioners have merely reiterated what they alleged in the petitions in their counter affidavits that the land was fenced off and did not make any reference to a building erected on any of their lands.

With the said admission of the 1st Respondent in his Statement of Objections, it becomes clear that the Army is in fact occupying a parcel of land in extent of 20 perches within the larger land depicted in Plan No. 665A, with a building constructed by it. The fact of Army occupying a land in extent of only 20 perches from the said larger land is supported by the direction issued by the Minister of Lands to the 6th Respondent, directing the latter to initiate acquisition process. Each of the three Petitioners claim that the Army is occupying their lands. The question whether the land admittedly occupied by the Army belong to any of the three Petitioners.

In the absence of a specific admission to that effect, a question necessarily arises whether the land occupied by the Army belongs to any one or more of the Petitioners. The determination of the exact location of the said occupied land in relation to the three parcels of land to which the Petitioners individually claim title could be one way of determining that issue. It must be noted that the admission made by the 1st Respondent in turn give rise to several probabilities that this Court should consider before it ventures to answer the said question.

Lot No. 2A consists of 20 perches in extent and accordingly the occupied land could well fit into that parcel of land. That is one probability. The occupied 20 perch could also be located completely within the demarcated Lot No. 3, which is over 40 perches in extent and thus presents another probability. The occupied land could also be located in lot No. 2B consuming it in totality as the said parcel of land is only about 17 perches. There exists another probability that the 20 perch land is located well within land area covered by all three lots. It appears that the likelihood of occurring any one of these probabilities are of equal in value.

In addition to the probabilities that are referred to, there is yet another probability that exists. The larger land, as per Plan No. 665A, consists of about 130 perches in total. As already noted, the three lots to which the Petitioners claim ownership, forms the southern part of the said larger land. The said three allotments are about 77 perches in its total extent, leaving a balance of 53 perches for the remaining lot Nos. 1A and 1B, which forms its northern part. It could well be that the said 20 perch lot with a building standing on it is located within the land area forming the said northern part, to which none of the Petitioners could claim title to. If the 20 perch land, occupied by the Army, is located within the said northern part of the larger land, then none of the Petitioners are entitled to the declaration they sought from this Court.

The 1st Respondent specifically avers that the Army had carried out construction work on the said occupied land and had annexed building plans and several photographs of the buildings that had been put up on that land to his Statement of Objections (photographs marked RX2 to RX5). The photographic evidence tends to indicate that the construction activities of the building are already completed. The building plan of the said construction is annexed to the Statement of Objections as RX-8 and is indicative of the fact that the Army had constructed the said building from its foundation level as totally a new construction and not merely repaired a damaged or an uninhabitable building that stood on the occupied land.

Strangely, none of the Petitioners did offer any additional material to indicate that the 20 perch land occupied by the Army with a building on it falls within the boundaries of any or more of the three lots to which they claim title. In other words, it was imperative for the Petitioners to satisfy this Court that any one or more of them had title to the 20 perch land occupied by the Army. The Petitioners have filed their petitions in 2013. Statement of Objections of the 1st Respondent were tendered to Court in 2017 and the Petitioners countered the assertions made in the objections with their counter affidavits filed in 2018.

Given the fact that the existence of a building is clearly visible through a fence, unlike a building constructed within a premises surrounded by high parapet walls and thereby totally blocking any visual access, the reason as to why none of the Petitioners referred to a building put up by the Army on their lands and thus limiting their allegation only to the act of fencing is somewhat intriguing. If the building was constructed after the petitions were tendered to this Court, the Petitioners could have easily clarified that position, despite the absence to any reference to a construction in their original petitions.

In these circumstances, I am of the considered view that each of the Petitioners have failed to satisfy this Court on a balance of probabilities that their lands were occupied by one or more of the Respondents as alleged. Their failure to exclude the probability of the location of the 20 perch land under occupation within the northern part of the larger land depicted in plan No. 665A, makes the 1st Respondent's claim that no land belonged to any of the Petitioners is being occupied by Army, a more probable one when compared with the others.

In view of the above considerations, the Petitioners in SC (FR) Nos. 236/2013, 237/2013 and 238/2013, have either individually or collectively failed to satisfy their allegation that the Respondents have deprived their rights to property by illegally occupying their lands infringing their fundamental rights, guaranteed under Article 12(1) of the Constitution, as described in the three petitions.

Accordingly, I dismiss the said three petitions without costs.

ARGUED &

DECIDED ON : 28-11-2023.

P. PADMAN SURASENA J,

Court heard the submissions of the learned Counsel for the Petitioner as well as the submissions of the learned State Counsel who appeared for the Respondents and concluded the argument.

The Petitioner was a Sub Postmistress who had obtained maternity leave subsequent to a child birth. After the period of paid maternity leave granted to her, she had continued to be on leave on medical grounds on the basis of 'no pay leave' for another eighty-four days.

The primary purpose as to why the Petitioner has filed this petition is to get the document produced marked P11 quashed. The said document (P11) has been written by Regional Superintendent of Posts - Kalutara, addressed to the Petitioner, to inform her that it is the Petitioner's responsibility to appoint a substitute at her expense, to cover up her duties as the Sub Postmistress as per the conditions in the letter of appointment issued to the Petitioner.

The letter of appointment dated 13-09-2007 issued by the Department of Posts, to the Petitioner, has been produced marked P1. According to Clause 15 of the said letter of appointment, it is the responsibility of the Petitioner to select a substitute, train such person and register that person in order to be employed whenever necessary, to cover the duties of the Petitioner (when Petitioner obtains leave).

The complaint made by the leaned Counsel for the Petitioner is that it is unreasonable to impose upon the Petitioner, the responsibility of making payments to the substitute who would cover her duties when the Petitioner is on no pay leave.

Learned State Counsel drew the attention of Court to Clause 9(2) ii of the Sri Lanka Sub Postmaster Service Code produced marked 1R3 in which there is a specific provision with regard to the procedure through which a Sub Postmistress could obtain maternity leave. The said provision shows that it is the same procedure (as in normal leave) that should be adopted when such officer obtains maternity leave.

We observe that the prayer (g) of the petition dated 17-08-2016 is a prayer for a direction on the 3rd Respondent (Postmaster General) not to require Sub Postmistresses to pay salaries to such substitutes employed at their respective sub post offices while they are on maternity leave.

Therefore, it is clear that the Petitioner through this petition is primarily challenging the aforesaid Sri Lanka Postmasters Service Code which has been in force with effect from 1st January 1996 (Clause 2). Therefore, as submitted by the learned State Counsel, the Petitioner's application is time barred. This is because the Petitioner has filed this petition on 18-8-2016.

Learned State Counsel appearing for the Respondents, also brought to the notice of Court that the Petitioner has now retired from service on medical grounds. She also brought to the notice of this court that the employment of Sub Postmasters under the aforesaid code is a specific arrangement which is only relevant to that service. We also observe that it is so because this service is not transferable in terms of clauses mentioned in that code.

Moreover, we observe that according to the letter dated 12th July 2016 written by the Petitioner produced marked P14, addressed to the Regional Superintendent of Posts Kalutara, the Petitioner had specifically given her consent to make the payments to the substitute during the period in question although the Petitioner has now chosen to challenge the very arrangement that was made with her consent.

For the above reasons, we see no merits in this petition. We proceed to refuse this petition and proceed to dismiss this petition without costs.

COUNSEL : Manohara de Silva PC with Ms. Kaveesha Gamage for the Petitioner.
Ms. Indika Demuni de Silva, PC, SG with Ms. Indumini Randeny, SC for the Respondents.

ARGUED ON : 16th June, 2022.

DECIDED ON : 09th November, 2023

ACHALA WENGAPPULI, J.

The 132 Petitioners, who are currently serving as Assistant Cultural Development Officers while being attached to their respective Regional Cultural Centres, established by the Ministry of Culture and Arts, have collectively invoked jurisdiction conferred on this Court under Articles 17 and 126 of the Constitution, on an alleged infringement of their fundamental rights guaranteed under Article 12(1) of the Constitution. Their complaint of infringement is based on categorisation of the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officer as Management Assistant – Non Technical – Segment 2 and placement of that post in salary scale of MN-1-2006-A in the approved Scheme of Recruitment. The Petitioners further complain that the National Salaries and Cadre Commission (hereinafter referred to as "NSCC") had infringed their fundamental right to equality by its decision to reject the 1st Respondent's request to grant approval to amend the Scheme of Recruitment (hereinafter referred to as "SOR"), in which they were categorised as Supervisory Management Assistant and placing in salary scale of MN-3- 2006-A. They allege their rights were further infringed by the NSCC, by approving the said SOR, which contain the impugned categorisation and placement and recommending same to the Public Service Commission, in terms of Public Administration Circular No. 6/2006.

The Petitioners have named the members of the NSCC as 13th to 27th Respondents and, by way of an amended petition dated 13.02.2014, added the members of its succeeding entity, National Salaries Commission, as the 30th to 50th Respondents.

The Petitioners, in their amended petition have prayed for inter alia the following reliefs from this Court;

i. a declaration that the Petitioners fundamental rights guaranteed by Article 12(1) of the Constitution has been infringed;

ii. to declare null and void the decision/recommendation of the National Salaries Commission and/or the 13th to 27th Respondents to refuse the proposal of the 1st Respondent to categorise Assistant Cultural Development Officers as Supervisory Management Assistants and place them in Salary scale MN-3-2006-A;

iii. to declare null and void the decision of the 1st and/or 3rd Respondent to implement the recommendation of the National Salaries and Cadre Commission to categorise Assistant Cultural Development Officers as Management Assistants – Non-Technical – Segment 2 and place them in salary scale MN-1-2006-A;

iv. to declare null and void the decision of the 1st and/or 3rd Respondent to categorise Assistant Cultural Development Officers as Management Assistants – Non- Technical – Segment 2 and place them in salary scale MN-1-2006-A;

v. to make order directing the NSCC and/or the 13th to 26th Respondents and/or the 3rd and/or 28th Respondents to recommend the proposal of the 1st Respondent to categorise Assistant Cultural Development Officers as Supervisory Management Assistants and to place them in salary scale MN-3- 2006-A;

vi. to make order directing the 1st Respondent and/or the 3rd Respondent to categorise Assistant Cultural Development Officers as Supervisory Management Assistants and to place them in salary scale MN-3-2006-A;

vii. in the event the proposed Scheme of Recruitment, by which the educational qualifications required for recruitment to the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officer was brought down to one pass at the GCE(A/L) Examination has been approved by the Public Service Commission, make order cancelling the decision of the Public Service Commission (4th to 12th Respondents) to approve the same inasmuch as it is contrary to the policy decision taken by the Cabinet of Ministers acting under Article 55(4) of the Constitution;

viii. to declare null and void the decision of the 1st and/or 3rd Respondent to make recruitments to the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officers from among those who have passed only one subject at the GCE(A/L) Examination, contrary to the policy decision taken by the Cabinet of Ministers acting under Article 55(4) of the Constitution;

ix. to direct the National Pay Commission and/or the 30th to 50th Respondents to recommend the proposal of the 1st Respondent to categorise Assistant Cultural Development Officers as Supervisory Management Assistants and place them in salary scale MN-3-2006-A.

It is evident from the wide spectrum of reliefs sought by the Petitioners, that their complaint of infringement of right to equality stems from the decision of the NSCC, in refusing to accept a proposal submitted by the 1st Respondent to categorise the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officers as Supervisory Management Assistants and place them in salary scale MN-3-2006-A by amending the approved SOR for that post. They also challenge the recommendation made by NSCC to the Public Service Commission to lower the qualifications required for recruitment to the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officers.

When the instant petition was supported for leave to proceed, learned Solicitor General, who represented the Respondents, raised a preliminary objection on their behalf and sought for its dismissal in limine. Her objection was that the placement of the Petitioners in salary scale of MN-1-2006 was made by the NSCC in the year 2006, as evidenced by the appointment letters issued to them at the time of confirmation of their appointments to the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officer. Therefore, she contended that the challenge on the validity of the decision to place them in the said salary scale, being the core complaint of the Petitioners before this Court, is clearly time-barred. The learned President's Counsel sought to counter the said objection by presenting a contention that the Petitioners became aware of the decision made by the NSCC only on 09.10.2012, when it rejected the proposed amendment to the Scheme of Recruitment, which sought to place them in salary scale MN-3-2006-A.

After hearing submissions of the parties on the said preliminary objection, this Court made order on 24.02.2014, that the issue of time bar would be re-considered upon completion of pleadings, in order to satisfy itself whether the material presented before Court discloses the fact that there had been a failure to invoke jurisdiction within the prescribed time period.

It must be noted that at that stage of the proceedings, only the amended petition and its annexures were available before Court and none of the Respondents had tendered their Statement of Objections. The 27th Respondent tendered his Statement of Objections on 16.02.2016 and the 55th Respondent tendered Objections on 29.02.2016, followed by counter affidavit of the Petitioners tendered on 20.06.2017.

Hence, this Court should consider the said preliminary objection at the very outset of this judgment, in the light of factors disclosed by the completed set of pleadings and make an appropriate determination on the question of time bar.

The prayer to the amended petition of the Petitioners, as quoted above, sets out the nature of multiple reliefs sought from this Court. The entitlement to the substantial relief prayed by the Petitioners, being a declaration of infringement of their fundamental rights guaranteed to them under Article 12(1), is dependent on the validity of the impugned decision to place them on salary scale of MN-01-2006-A and categorisation of the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officers as Management Assistant – Non Technical – Segment 2, as they also seek annulment of these decisions. In addition, the Petitioners challenge the validity of the rejection of the proposed amendments to the SOR. There had been a series of subsequent decisions made by the Respondents, consequent to the said initial decision, by which the impugned categorisation and applicable salary scale were determined after the issuance of Public Administration Circular No. 06/2006 (hereinafter referred to as P.A. Circular No. 6/2006), culminating with the decision to reject the proposed amendment to the SOR (P17). The NSCC decided to continue with its earlier decision, even after having re-considered the issue upon representations made by the concerned parties (P22).

The Petitioners seek annulment of all these decisions. Table No. 1, that appears below contain the nature of the reliefs along with the dates on which the impugned decisions were arrived at.

Sub-Paragraph of the prayer	Nature of the relief	Date of the impugned decision
(c)	Annulment of the decision to refuse the proposal to categorise Petitioners as Supervisory Management Assistants in MN-3-2000-A	09.10.2012 (P19)
(d)	Annulment of the decision to implement the categorisation of Petitioners as Management Assistants – Non Technical – Segment 2 in MN-1-2006-A	22.06.2012 (27R11)
	Annulment of the decision to categorise Petitioners as Management Assistants – Non- Technical – Segment 2 in MN-1-	1st – with PA Circular

(e)	2006-A	No. 6/2006 2nd – with approval of SOR on 22.06.2012 (27R11)
(h)	If a decision is taken to bring down the educational qualifications to one pass at G.C.E.(A/L) its annulment	Date of approval of SOR (P10) 22.06.2012 (27R11)
(i)	Annulment of the decision to make recruitment to the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officers from those with one pass at G.C.E.(A/L)	Date of SOR (P10) on 22.06.2012 (27R11)

The decision to place the Petitioners in salary scale MN-01-2006 after re-categorisation, in terms of the P.A. Circular No. 6/2006, was made in the year 2006 itself. This is evident from the Letters of Appointment issued to 3rd and 36th Petitioners on 24.07.2006 (P8C) and 04.08.2006 (P8A) respectively. This placement was made on the recommendation of the 1st Respondent and pending approval by the NSCC. The Petitioners claim they did voice their objections to the said placement at that point of time but was told that it would be rectified with the finalisation of their SOR. However, the Petitioners did not annex any document to their amended petition, which tends to indicate either they did make representations against that decision after it was made known to them or was told that their concerns would be addressed to, once the formulation of the SOR (P10) in finalised.

The 27th Respondent, being the Secretary to National Salaries Commission (hereinafter referred to as NSC), refuted the claim of the Petitioners that only in 2012 a SOR was formulated for the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officers, as the draft SOR was first submitted to the NSCC by the 1st Respondent in the year 2005 and an amended SOR was once again submitted with the same salary scale MN-1-2006 in the year 2006 (27R3D).

According to the Petitioners, the Scheme of Recruitment (P10) was presented for consideration and approval of the NSCC by the 1st Respondent on 25.05.2012. However, the 1st Respondent had already tendered a proposed Scheme of Recruitment to NSCC on 19.05.2006 seeking its approval (27R3D) on identical terms. Be that as it may, the NSCC conveyed its approval to the SOR (P10) by letter dated 22.06.2012 (27R11) to the Director General of Establishments. The said SOR contained categorisation of Assistant Cultural Development Officers as Management Assistant – Non -Technical – Segment 2, in terms of the P.A. Administration Circular No. 6/2006 and placed them in salary scale of MN-1-2006-A. The NSCC also conveyed its decision to the 1st Respondent by letter dated 09.10.2012 (P19).

The Petitioners made representations to the 1st Respondent against the said SOR only on 17.05.2012 (P16A). This is the first time that the Petitioners have ever indicated their opposition in any form to their categorisation and salary scale. The contents of P16A does not refer to the fact that the Petitioners did present their grievances to any of the Respondents any time prior to that particular instance, either on the question of categorisation or on the applicable salary scale, after the implementation of P.A. Circular No. 6/2006.

The proposed SOR (P17), with which the Petitioners agree, was also prepared by the 1st Respondent and submitted to NSCC on 13.09.2012 and the decision to reject the said proposed Scheme of Recruitment was arrived at by the Commission on 09.10.2012 (P19).

The 3rd Petitioner and some of her colleagues have lodged a complaint with HRCSL on 06.11.2012 (P20) alleging that, despite having been assigned with multiple duties, they were placed in salary scale MN-01-2006 instead of MN-03-2006, disregarding their objections. The 3rd Petitioner's complaint to the HRCSL was made within a month of the rejection of the 2nd proposed amendment to the SOR (P17). However, the NSCC had, by then, already made its decision on 04.10.2006, to place the Assistant Cultural Development Officers in salary scale MN-01-2006-A (27R2C) and approved the said categorisation as reflected in SOR (P10). The NSCC, by letter addressed to the Director General of Public Administration on 22.06.2012 (27R11) conveyed its approval. The 1st Respondent too had recommended the said categorisation and the salary scale throughout but entertained a different view and indicated it to NSCC only in the latest of his recommendation (P18).

The 1st Respondent, by his letter dated 21.11.2012 (P21), requested the NSCC to re-consider its decision (P19). The NSCC had re-considered its decision and informed the 1st Respondent on 17.01.2013 that the Commission found no reason to change its already reached decision as to the categorisation, as reflected in the Scheme of Recruitment, and the salary scale in relation to the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officer (P22).

In view of the interrelatedness of the contents of the recommendation and directions and the dates on which the said decisions were arrived at by the Respondents, it is helpful if the said series of decisions, made in relation to the categorisation of the Petitioners as Management Assistants – Non- Technical – Segment 2 with salary scale of MN-1-2006-A, are arranged in a chronological order for the consideration of the time bar objection in its proper context. Table No. 2, which appears below, should satisfy that requirement.

Date	Requests made to NSCC by the 1st Respondent and Petitioners on categorisation and salary scale and the decisions made by NSCC	Marking given to the documents
19.05.2006	Proposed SOR endorsed by the 1st Respondent to be sent to NSCC after P.A. Circular No.6/2006, with salary scale MN-01-2006	27R3D

21.11.2012	Request of 1st Respondent to re-consider its decision P19	P21
17.01.2013	Rejection of the request to re-consider the decision P19 made by P21	P22

The Petitioners tendered their petitions before this Court, alleging infringement of their fundamental rights, only on 28.08.2013. Thus, at first glance, it would appear that the Petitioners have invoked jurisdiction of this Court well after the stipulated time period of one month from the date of the last decision in the said series of the decisions, against each of which infringements of fundamental rights are alleged. However, an in-depth review of the available material, as revealed from the pleadings itself, indicate that at least one of the reliefs prayed for by the Petitioners, namely the impugned decision of the NSCC to reject P17 and 18 (paragraph (c) to the prayer), is not time barred and therefore could be considered by this Court.

The reasons are as follows;

The original petition of the Petitioners is lodged with the Registry of this Court on 28.08.2013 whereas their amended petition, by which the members of the newly constituted NSC are added to its caption (30th to 50th Respondents), was tendered on 13.02.2014. Of the several Petitioners who are before this Court, only the 3rd Petitioner had challenged the decision of the NSCC (P19) to reject the proposed amendments to SOR before the Human Rights Commission of Sri Lanka (hereinafter referred to as "HRCSL") within the statutorily specified period of time (P20). Nonetheless, the 3rd Petitioner failed to annex any communication or at least an acknowledgement issued by the HRCSL on her complaint indicating that the matter is under its consideration. More importantly, the 3rd Petitioner failed to disclose the names of other collegues who joined with her in the complaint to HRCSL (P20). There is no material placed before this Court indicating whether there are any Petitioners among those who joined with her in the lodgment of the said complaint to the HRCSL. It could be that another group of Assistant Cultural Development Officers, who opted not to join the Petitioners in the instant application, supported the 3rd Petitioner with her in that complaint.

Paragraphs 64 and 65 of the amended petition of the Petitioners indicate that the inquiry into the 3rd Petitioner's complaint had been concluded and recommendations of the said Commission is pending. No supporting material were placed before this Court to indicate this position. However, the written representations of the NSCC, tendered to the NSCC (P23A) confirms that an inquiry into complaint by the 3rd Petitioner, under reference No. HRC/4070/201 to HRCSL was conducted by the said Commission. The 27th Respondent further admits in his Statement of Objection that the said Commission is yet to make its recommendation.

As already noted, the alleged infringements complained to this Court are in relation to the placement of the Petitioners in salary scale MN-01-2006-A and rejection of the proposed amendment to the SOR(P17), which meant to categorise their post as Supervisory Management Assistant and to place them in the salary scale of MN-03-2006-A. In view of the objection of time bar taken up by the learned Solicitor General, only the relief prayed for in sub paragraph (c) of the prayer of the Petitioners qualifies to be considered. If the Petitioners are successful in establishing their entitlement to paragraph (c) of the prayer, then they are also entitled to succeed in obtaining relief as prayed for in paragraph (f) to the prayer as well.

This is due to the reason that the letter conveying the rejection of the proposed amendment to the SOR is dated 21.09.2012 (P18) and the 3rd Petitioner had lodged a complaint with the HRCSL on 06.11.2012, within a month of the said decision, in terms of Section 13(1) of the Human Rights Commission of Sri Lanka Act No. 21 of 1996. Therefore, she is entitled to the benefit of the statutory provision which states that " … the period within which the inquiry into such complaint is pending before the Commission, shall not be taken into account in computing the period of one month within which an application may be made to the Supreme Court by such person in terms of Article 126(2) of the Constitution."

It is relevant to note in this context, the manner in which the Petitioners have described the alleged infringement in their amended petition. Paragraph 67 of the said amended petition reads thus;

"[T]he Petitioners state that … the decision of the 13th to 26th Respondents (National Salaries and Cadre Commission) to refuse the recommendation of the 1st Respondent to categorise Assistant Cultural Development Officers as Supervisory Management Assistants and placed them in salary scale of MN-03-2006-A and the decision of the 1st to 3rd Respondents to make recruitment to the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officers from among those who have passed only one subject at the G.C.E. (A/L) is arbitrary, capricious, unreasonable …".

The Petitioners did not present their allegation of infringement of their fundamental rights by executive or administrative action of the Respondents as a continuing act of violation. The paragraph quoted above is clear that the executive and administrative complained of by the Petitioners is restricted to "refuse the recommendation of the 1st Respondent to categorise Assistant Cultural Development Officers as Supervisory Management Assistants and place them in salary scale of MN-03-2006-A". The said refusal by NSCC was conveyed to the 1st Respondent on 09.10.2012 (P19) and the original petition was lodged only on 29.08.2013.

The resultant position therefore is that only the 3rd Petitioner is entitled to pursue the infringement of her fundamental rights before this Court, and that too is confined to the relief prayed for in paragraph (c) and (f), which could be related to the complaint made to the HRCSL within one month of the said decision. As rightly contended by the learned Solicitor General, the decisions that were made thereafter and impugned in the instant application are clearly time barred in terms of the Article 126(2) of the Constitution, which imposes a mandatory requirement to invoke jurisdiction of Court, within one month since the infringement committed by executive or administrative action. The 2nd request of the 1st Respondent made to the NSCC, subsequent to the one already made in P18, urging it to reconsider the decision P19, was on 21.11.2012 (P21). The NSCC rejected that request on 17.01.2013 (P22). The decision P 22 is also caught up with the time bar objection and on that account, should be excluded from consideration. Hence, the decisions of the NSCC, contained in 27R3D, 27R3, 27R2B, P10 and P22 could not be considered for its validity.

The decisions that are to be considered by this Court are thus restricted to the refusal by the NSCC to re-consider its decision on P17 and P18, which was conveyed to the 1st Respondent by letter dated 09.10.2012 (P19).

In view of the above findings, this Court must then consider the entitlement of the 3rd Petitioner to the reliefs prayed by her. The claims of other petitioners ought to be dismissed, owing to the fact that they failed to present their claim of infringement of fundamental rights before this Court within the stipulated time period imposed by Article 126(2). Since the 3rd Petitioner is one among many who presented an identical allegation of infringement of her fundamental rights along with the other Petitioners, for convenience in the presentation of this judgment, the term 'Petitioners' used in the preceding part of the judgment, would be continued in the latter part as well.

In paragraph (c) of her prayer, the 3rd Petitioner seeks a declaration from Court stating that the decision and/or recommendation of the National Salaries and Cadre Commission (13th to 27th Respondents) to refuse the proposal of the 1st Respondent to categorise Assistant Cultural Development Officers as supervisory Management Assistants and place them in salary scale of MN-3-2006-A is null and void, whereas in paragraph (f) she seeks an order of Court directing the National Salaries and Cadre Commission (13th to 27th Respondents) and 28th Respondent to recommend the proposal of the 1st Respondent for an amended SOR, as contained in P17.

In order to consider the allegation of the Petitioners that their right to equality was infringed in the context of the decisions of the NSCC that are not time barred, it is necessary for this Court to consider the circumstances under which the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officer was originally created, the nature of the responsibilities that were conferred on the said post, the parameters under which the said post was categorised as Management Assistants – Non Technical – Segment 2 and placed in salary scale MN-1-2006-A in terms of Public Administration Circular No. 6 of 2006 and the reasonableness of the refusal of the proposal by the 1st Respondent to categorise Assistant Cultural Development Officers as Supervisory Management Assistants and place them in Salary scale MN-3-2006-A and the reasonableness of the decision to lower the entry qualifications.

In the year 1988, the Ministry of Cultural Affairs and National Heritage, initiated an island wide programme to establish 300 Regional Cultural Centres with a view to arrest the gradual erosion of cultural values and practises from our society and to preserve them for future generations. These Cultural Centres were intended to provide opportunities for youth to enhance their innate aesthetic talents and also meant to dissuade them from engaging in anti-social activities. Each of these Cultural Centres were to be staffed by four employees, i.e., a Cultural Development Officer, a Cultural Assistant, an Office Assistant and a Security Officer. Recruitment process to fill the said posts commenced in the year 1999 with public notices inserted in the national newspapers calling for applications.

The Petitioners, having fulfilled the eligibility criterion for the post of Cultural Assistants (P2) by successfully completing four subjects at the G.C.E.(A/L) Examination and six subjects at the G.C.E.(O/L) Examination with four Credit passes including Mathematics and Sinhala, along with pass in Sinhala Typing at the G.C.E.(O/L) Examination or completion of a typing/computer course at a recognised institute, and being below 45 years of age, applied for the said post. After interviewing the Petitioners, they were recruited as Cultural Assistants by the Central Cultural Fund (2nd Respondent) on contract basis and were assigned to the newly established Regional Cultural Centres. Recruitment of Cultural Assistants continued after the first batch of recruitment had taken place in the year 1999, as and when new Cultural Centres were established.

On 08.12.2004, in addressing the grievance of these Cultural Assistants, the Cabinet of Ministers approved their absorption into Public Service. They were initially recruited by the Central Cultural Fund on contract. The said decision was made consequent to the recommendations of a Cabinet Sub-Committee on Establishment Matters (P6), which was established to resolve certain issues faced by the Ministry and Cultural Assistants, who served in their posts for several years without being confirmed in their posts.

The said report included following recommendations;

a. Cultural Officers and other staff who have been recruited on contract basis in accordance with the Scheme of Recruitment and who have already satisfied the requisite qualifications be absorbed into such posts on permanent basis with effect from the date of the Cabinet decision,
b. The said officers are to be placed two increments above the relevant salary scale applicable to theirs posts, but personal to them in consideration of their experience along with previous service in the field,
c. The recruitment of remaining staff to be made in a phased-out basis and a total of 300 Assistant Cultural Development Officers to be recruited from among those who have passed the G.C.E.(A/L) Examination.

Consequent to the Cabinet decision on 22.12.2004, (P7) made on the recommendation of its sub Committee the Petitioners were absorbed into the Public Service, appointed to the post of Assistant Cultural Officers of the Ministry of Cultural Affairs and National Heritage and were confirmed in their posts (P8D). Thus, the post of Cultural Assistant was thereafter re-designated as Assistant Cultural Officers in terms of the said Cabinet decision. However, the appointment letters issued to the Petitioners described the post as Assistant Cultural Development Officer (P8A).

The Assistant Cultural Development Officers were tasked to assist the Cultural Officer, who was placed as the Officer-in-Charge of the several Cultural Centres (vide proposed Scheme of Recruitment in 2006 (27R3D);

> "අනුයුක්තව සිටින සංස්කෘතික මධ්‍යස්ථානයේ ආයතනික කටයුතුවලට සහ මධ්‍යස්ථාන භාර නිලධාරියාට සහායවීම, පුස්තකාලය භාරව කටයුතු කිරීම, හා සාරධර්ම පිරී සමාජයක් ගොඩනැගීමේ කාර්යයට සම්බන්ධව කටයුතු කිරීම, සංස්කෘතික මධ්‍යස්ථානයේ ස්ථාන භාර සංස්කෘතික ප්‍රවර්ධන නිලධාරී නොමැති අවස්ථාවල සියලුම අධීක්ෂණයන් සිදුකිරීම."

The Petitioners primarily relied on three factors in mounting their challenge on the correctness of the decisions to place the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officer in the salary scale of MN-1-2006-A, alleging that the said decision was made arbitrarily and unreasonably. First, they contended that they ought to have been categorised as Supervisory Management Assistants in view of the supervisory functions they perform. Secondly, they contended the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officer should have been categorised as Supervisory Management Assistant instead of their current categorisation as Management Assistants – Non Technical - Segment 2, as they perform multiple duties, which would make them entitled to be placed in salary scale MN-3-2006-A. In support of these two factors, Petitioner relied on a comparison with the categorisation adopted by the NSCC in relation to the post of Postal Services Officers along with the salary scale approved for that service. Thirdly, Petitioners contended that the SOR recommended by the NSCC had lowered the entry qualifications.

Learned Solicitor General, representing the Respondents, strongly resisted the contention of the Petitioners to place themselves in the salary scale of MN-3-2006-A and to re-categorise their post as Supervisory Management Assistant.

Having considered the circumstances under which the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officer was created, the nature of the responsibilities that were conferred on to the said post in the preceding paragraphs, it is opportune at this stage to consider the reasonableness of the decisions of the NSCC to reject the proposal by the 1st Respondent to categorise Assistant Cultural Development Officers as Supervisory Management Assistants and place them in Salary scale MN-3-2006-A, in the light of the parameters set by the P.A. Circular No. 6 of 2006, under which the said post was categorised as Management Assistants – Non Technical – Segment 2 and to place them in salary scale MN-1-2006-A.

In view of the contention placed before this Court by the learned President's Counsel on behalf of the Petitioners, the issue of applicable salary scale arose with the implementation of the Government policy through P.A. Circular No. 6/2006, and therefore it is relevant to devote some space in this judgment to consider the changes made to the public service as a whole by the said circular.

With a view to implement the budget proposals approved by the Parliament in the year 2006, the Government decided to set up a new salary structure for the employees in Public Service based on a systematic categorisation of various posts and, issued Public Administration Circular No. 06/2006. The said circular was revised from time to time to address issues that had arisen in its implementation. The underlying policy consideration of the Government in the issuance of the said Circular was not only to increase salaries of the Public Service, but also to implement a scheme in which each of the posts in the service are re-categorised into 16 pre-specified groups with a attribution of a new nomenclature to describe such posts.

The P.A. Circular No. 6/2006 also intended to place the public employees of a particular post within an appropriate salary scale, selected among a set of 36 pre-determined salary scales, as indicated in Annexure III of that circular and thereby reducing the 137 different salary scales that existed under the scheme put in place by the Public Administration Circular No. 9/2004.

This Court, in Padma Akarawita and Others v Dr. Nanda Wickramasinghe and Others (SC(FR) Application No. 320/2007 – decided on 02.11.2010), made the following observation on P.A. Circular No. 6/2006;

> "It is important to note that PA Circular, No. 06/2006, which deals with the Budget proposals is not a document prepared merely for the purpose of increasing the salary of government employees. On the contrary, the said document had been prepared for the purpose of restructuring the Public Service salaries based on Budget proposals for 2006. Accordingly, the proposal referred to in PA Circular, No. 06/2006 is different to all the other Circulars referred to by the petitioners. By these proposals, as stated by the 5th respondent, 126 different salary scales that had existed previously had been reduced to 37."

In terms of the P.A. Circular No. 6/2006, all posts in the Public Service needed to be re-categorized based on the definitions given in Annexure II and in terms of Annexure III which provided an index to salary conversion. However, the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officer was not included in the said list of posts set out in Annexure III and therefore did not receive its categorisation under Annexure II. In terms of the said circular, any posts/service that are not included in the annexure III, the relevant Ministry/Department ought to take prompt action to submit their proposals to the National Salaries and Cadre Commission (NSCC) for its recommendations to the Public Service Commission with a SOR in accordance with the appropriate definition set out in the Annexure II. That requirement was fulfilled by the 1st Respondent in the year 2006 but eventually received approval of NSCC and was recommended to the Public Service Commission only in the year 2012. Incidentally, the SOR of the Postal Services Officers of the Unified Postal Services (55R1) which the Petitioners compared themselves with also had been recommended by the NSCC to the Public Service Commission on 30.11.2011 (55R1).

It is already noted, in terms of P.A. Circular No.6/2006, each Ministry and Department is expected to re-categorise/re-group all posts/services of public officers under its employment, based on the definitions given in the Annexure II and in terms of Annexure III – "Index to Salary Conversion". The said Circular identified four Service Levels and admittedly the Petitioners are considered as Secondary Level public officers and are accordingly categorised as Management Assistants. In terms of the special set of instructions issued for recruitment of Management Assistants – Non Technical – Segment 2 with salary scale MN-01-2006-A (P11), Management Assistants are generally defined as public officers who facilitate and assist the administrative, managerial and executive grades. Their entry qualifications would differ in keeping with the duties assigned to them and are accordingly further divided to form two sub-categories, i.e. Management Assistants – Non Technical and Management Assistants – Technical.

The Management Assistants – Non Technical, are recruited purely on educational qualifications. No technical expertise was required for that post at the point or recruitment. The Service Level of Management Assistants – Non Technical are further divided into two segments by the said Circular. Segment 1 consists of Management Assistants – Non Technical, whose basic educational qualifications at the recruitment are G.C.E. (O/L) or (A/L) and should possess skills of a defined nature, in addition to the said educational qualifications and are assigned with multi-duties. Circular referred to the posts such as Department of Posts Clerks, typists, stenographers, storekeepers, shroffs, bookkeepers etc. as posts that fall under this categorisation. Segment 2 in which the Petitioners are categorised into, consists of employees whose basic educational qualifications, in terms of the SOR, are a pass at the GCE- OL or AL examination and not required to possess skills of any defined nature as an entry qualification but assigned to perform multi-functional duties. There is no dispute that as at present, the Petitioners are categorised as Management Assistants – Non Technical - Segment 2.

In relation to Service Level of Management Assistants, Annexure II of P.A. Circular No. 6/2006, also creates and recognises yet another distinct category, termed as Supervisory Management Assistants, who are defined therein as Supervisory Management Assistants (Non Technical/Technical). In the said set of special instruction to complete the recruitments to the posts fall under the said categorisation (P13) the category of Supervisory Management Assistant is broadly defined as follows;

> " ආයතනයන්හි විධායකයේ කාර්යයන්ට උපස්ථම්භක වන සේ විධායකය විසින් නිශ්චිත කොට පවරනු ලබන පිරිස් පාලනය, මුදල් භාරකාරිත්වය හා මුදල් පරීහරණය අධීක්ෂණය හා මෙහෙයුම් යන කර්යයන් ඇතුළත් බහුකාර්ය (Multi-Functional) ස්වරූපයේ කාර්යයන් ඉටුකරන සේවා ගණයකි".

The qualifications that are set out in P13 in relation to Supervisory Management Assistants (Non Technical) are, passes in six subjects at the G.C.E.(O/L) examination, with credit passes for Sinhala/Tamil/English, mathematics and two other subjects in one attempt. In addition, pass in G.C.E. (A/L) examination in one attempt along with completion of a course, recognised by Vocational Training Commission, in word processing/ typewriting/stenography.

Thus, if a post held by an employee was to be categorised as Supervisory Management Assistant (Non Technical) Segment 1, then the post he or she hold should possess the following qualifications;

a. In addition to passing G.C.E.(O/L) in six subjects with credit passes for Sinhala/Tamil/English, mathematics and two other subjects in one attempt, passing G.C.E.(A/L) in three subjects in one attempt,
b. should possess skills of a defined nature at the time of recruitment,
c. being assigned supervisory functions,
d. being assigned with multi -functional duties.

The dispute presented to Court by the Petitioners, in their entitlement of being categorised as Supervisory Management Assistants, arises from the assertion that they fulfil all of these qualifications. They relied heavily on the factors of having the entry qualifications to be categorised as such and being assigned with "supervisory" functions coupled with multiple duties. The Respondents however strongly contend that the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officer does not satisfy all of these qualifications, which made the Petitioners disqualified to be categorised as Supervisory Management Assistants. Learned Solicitor General particularly relied on the job description to impress upon this Court that the Petitioners do not function in a supervisory capacity and are not assigned with multiple duties, in terms of P.A. Circular No. 6/2006.

The first of the two contentions referred to above shall be considered now.

Learned President's Counsel's contention was that the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officer, instead of categorising as Management Assistants (Non Technical) Segment 2, who are expected to perform a single function, should have been correctly categorised as Supervisory Management Assistants, in view of the multiple nature of functions they perform, which are also supervisory in nature. It was also submitted on behalf of the Petitioners that in terms of the P.A. Circular No. 6/2006, a Management Assistant who perform supervisory functions, irrespective of whether they are of Non Technical or Technical, should be categorised as Supervisory Management Assistants and as such, they should have been placed at salary scale MN-3-2006-A. The Petitioners averred in their pleadings that they "supervise" the Office Assistant attached to the Cultural Centre. In their counter affidavit, the Petitioners stated that they have been assigned with duties of managing finances of Cultural Centres, managing affairs of the stores, to take part in the annual inventory inspections and also to serve in various units of the Ministry and Universities, in support of the said claims.

Learned President's Counsel, invited our attention to the duties that are assigned to Assistant Cultural Development Officers by making reference to contents of P12, where it is specifically stated that the sole responsibility of managing the library of the Centre is vested with the Assistant Cultural Development Officer, in addition to them being given the 'supervisory' responsibility of keeping the Cultural Centre and its premises clean, and by placing the Office Assistants under their 'supervision'. He further referred to the observation made by the Committee appointed by the 1st Respondent in its report (P16B) stating that the Assistant Cultural Development Officers function as the 'supervising officer' of the Office Assistant and the Security Officer, who are attached to each Centre. Learned Counsel further submitted that this factor was highlighted by the 1st Respondent, in his recommendation, forwarded to the NSCC to categorise the Petitioners as Supervisory Management Assistants (P21).

The Petitioner's claim of performing supervisory functions is based on the factual assertion that the Office Assistant and Security Officer attached to Cultural Centres are placed under their supervision. However, in terms of the assignment of official duties (P12), an Assistant Cultural Development Officer must discharge his duties under the direct supervision of the Cultural Officer, who was appointed as the Officer-in-Charge of the Centre and invested with its overall responsibility. As submitted by learned Solicitor General, paragraph 4 of P12 indicates that it is the Assistant Cultural Development Officer's "responsibility"- "(වගකීම)" to ensure the cleanliness of the Centre through the Office Assistant assigned to that Centre. No reference to any supervision over the members of minor staff was made in P12.

In the report of the Committee, appointed by the 1st Respondent which inquired into and made recommendation on the grievances of Assistant Cultural Development Officers, the only reference of them performing a supervisory function is made in relation to the placement of the Office Assistant and the Security Officer attached to the Cultural Centre. However, the document P12, which sets out the responsibilities of the Office Assistant, indicate a contrary position. Both these documents confirm the fact that the Office Assistant was placed under the direct supervision of the Officer-in-Charge, and not under the "supervision" of the Assistant Cultural Development Officer. In the proposed amendment to the SOR (P17) of the 1st Respondent, a similar position is reflected in relation to the job description of the Office Assistant as well as of the Security Officer assigned to a Cultural Centre. Documents 27R3G and 27R3H describe the job description of the Office Assistants and Security Officers, respectively and indicate that the Office Assistant and Security Officer, assigned to a Cultural Centres, are placed under the direct supervision of the Cultural Officer, negating the Petitioner's assertion.

There is another perspective in which the validity of the Petitioner's claim of performing supervisory functions should be considered. The document containing the job description of the Assistant Cultural Development Officers (P12) specifies the time period they should function in their respective Cultural Centres. The Cultural Centre should be kept open from 8.00 a.m. to 8.00 p.m. for a period of 12 hours on a daily basis. In any given day, the Cultural Officer and the Assistant Cultural Development Officer are expected to function at the Centre for a period of nine hours, including 1-hour lunch break. The Assistant Cultural Development Officers are expected to report to work at 11.30 a.m. and remain in the centre until 8.30 p.m. The Cultural Officer, being the Officer-in-Charge of the Cultural Centre, who should report to work at 8.30 a.m., will remain at the Centre until 5.30 p.m. and only from that time onward the Assistant Cultural Development Officer will function without the former's physical supervision and that too for the remaining three hour period until closing time of the Centre at 8.30 p.m. This is the only time the Petitioners are expected to perform any form of 'supervision' over the two members of minor staff and that too in the acting capacity and on behalf of the Cultural Officer. This factor does not make the Petitioners are assigned with supervisory duties in terms of P.A. Circular No. 6/2006, because, anyway they are expected to cover duties of the Cultural Officer during his absence, being the normal working arrangement for this type of establishments, that are manned by a limited staff.

In view of the above, I am more inclined to accept the submissions of the learned Solicitor General that the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officer is not conferred with any supervisory functions over the Office Assistant or the Security Officer of the Centre and therefore are not entitled to be considered as Management Assistants who are "in charge of supervisory functions" in terms of P.A. Circular No. 6/2006.

Learned President's Counsel's contention on the issue of performing multifunctional duties was that the relevant documentation clearly indicate that they do perform multi-functional duties, in terms of the special set of instructions issued for recruitment of Supervisory Management – Non Technical with corresponding salary scale MN-03-2006-A (P13). The contention that the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officer was erroneously categorised as Management Assistants – Non Technical – Segment 2 and were placed in salary scale MN-1-2006-A by the NSCC, was founded on the claim that they are expected to perform "multi-functional " duties and supervises other employees. In support of the said contention, learned President's Counsel had listed out different functions the Assistant Cultural Development Officers are expected to perform, which included functions related to managing finances, field duties, library management, "supervisory" functions and assignment of other duties. Thus, they contend, the performance of these multiple duties should satisfy the definition contained in paragraph 3.2 at page 2 of Annexure II for "multi-functional" duties and thereby made them entitled to be placed at the salary scale of MN-03-2006-A.

The Respondents challenged the validity of the said contention, which meant to impress upon this Court that the said categorisation is an erroneously made decision by the NSCC. Learned Solicitor General, in her submissions contended that the fact of assignment of several duties does not mean the Petitioners are in fact assigned with "multi-functional" duties in terms of P.A. Circular No. 6/2006. She further submitted that the recommendations made by the Committee appointed by the 1st Respondent in P16B, did so only upon an erroneous application of the definition of "multi-functional" duties in the said P.A. Circular No. 6/2006 and therefore the NSCC was correct in rejecting the 1st Respondent's recommendations, which in effect was made based on that report.

If the decision to categorise the Petitioners as Management Assistants (Non Technical) Segment 1 is found to be made on an erroneous basis as they claim, then that factor would support the position that they should have been categorised as Supervisory Management Assistants. In order to qualify to be categorised as Supervisory Management Assistants, the Petitioners must satisfy this Court that they are assigned with "multi-functional" duties in terms of the P.A. Circular No. 6/2006, in order to qualify for such a categorisation.

The Petitioners contend that they possess all four qualifications referred to above to be categorised as Supervisory Management Assistants, a claim consistently refuted by the Respondents.

The job description for the post of Assistant Cultural Officer as contained in the draft SOR prepared by the 1st Respondent in 2006 (27R3D), indicates that the Assistant Cultural Development Officers are assigned with following functions;

> "අනුයුක්තව සිටින සංස්කෘතික මධ්‍යස්ථානයේ ආයතනික කටයුතුවලට සහ මධ්‍යස්ථාන භාර නිලධාරියාට සහායවීම, පුස්තකාලය භාරව කටයුතු කිරීම, හා සාරධර්ම පිරී සමාජයක් ගොඩනැගීමේ කාර්යයට සම්බන්ධව කටයුතු කිරීම, සංස්කෘතික මධ්‍යස්ථානයේ ස්ථාන භාර සංස්කෘතික ප්‍රවර්ධන නිලධාරී නොමැති අවස්ථාවල සියලුම අධීක්ෂණයන් සිදුකිරීම."

What are these "supervisory" functions that are expected of the Petitioners?

The approved SOR of 2012 (P10), under its paragraph 4 sets out the job description of the Assistant Cultural Development Officers are assigned with. The said paragraph describes 11 different duties. These duties indicate functions related to library activities, clerical work in relation to all correspondence, preparation of vouchers, maintaining attendance registers of students and to act for the Cultural Officer during his absence. The summary description of the post is described in the said job description as "අනුයුක්තව සිටින සංස්කෘතික මධ්‍යස්ථානයේ ආයතනික කටයුතුවලට මධ්‍යස්ථාන භාර නිලධාරියාට සහායවීම, පුස්තකාලය භාරව කටයුතු කිරීම, සංස්කෘතික සේවා සැපයීම හා සාරධර්ම පිරී සමාජයක් ගොඩනැගීමේ කාර්යයට සම්බන්ධව කටයුතු කිරීම".

It is important to note in this context of the general instructions issued in terms of P.A. Circular No. 6/2006, in completion of the Scheme of Recruitment for Management Assistants – Non Technical Segment 2 who are entitled to be placed in the salary scale of MN-1-2006-A, (55R5A). In the said set of instructions, the general definition given to Management Assistants – Non Technical Segment 2 are as follows:-

> "ආයතනයන්හි විධායක කළමණාකරණ හා පරිපාලන කාර්යයන්හි නියුතු වූවන්ගේ කාර්යයන්ට උපස්ථම්භක හා/හෝ පහසුකාරක කර්තව්‍යයන් අතුරින් තාක්ෂණික ස්වභාවයේ නොවන්නාවූද, ඒක ස්වරූපයේ වූද (Single Functional) කාර්යයන් මෙම සේවා ගණයට පැවරේ. මෙම ගණයේ කාර්යයන් අතුරින් පත්කිරීම් බලධරයා විසින් විශේෂයෙන්

නියම කොට දක්වන ලද කාර්යයන් මෙම සේවා ගණයට අයත් නිලධරයන් විසින් ඉටුකරනු ලැබිය යුතුය.”

It is evident from the above quoted descriptions, the assignment of official functions to the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officer are of single functional in terms of the P.A. Circular No. 6/2006, although they are expected to carry out the functions that are specifically assigned to them by the relevant appointing authority (පත්කිරීම් බලධරයා විසින් විශේෂයෙන් නියම කොට දක්වන ලද කාර්යයන් මෙම සේවා ගණයට අයත් නිලධරයන් විසින් ඉටුකරනු ලැබිය යුතුය), which may include the ones that are referred to in the approved SOR of 2012 (P10), under paragraph 4. It seemed that the Petitioners had no serious objection to the said categorisation at that point of time, although they merely stated in their petition that when they made representations over this issue and it was promised to rectify same with formulation of the SOR for the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officers. This was eventually done in the year 2012.

Then only a Collective of Assistant Cultural Development Officers made representations to the 1st Respondent by letter dated 17.05.2012 (P16A) registering their protest for the said categorisation and placement of the impugned salary scale of MN-01-2006. It is stated therein that when the Assistant Cultural Development Officers were recruited in the year 2000, their entry qualifications were set well above the entry qualifications of Management Assistants, but their salary scale is placed lower to that of the other Management Assistants. It is also stated that the said grievance is a direct result of their absorption to the State Management Service. The Committee appointed by the 1st Respondent, after hearing the trade unions who made representations before them, made recommendation to place the Assistant Cultural Development Officers in the salary scale of MN-03- 2006-A and made a factually erroneous observation that the Office Assistant and Security Officer of the Cultural Centres were being supervised by them, in accepting the Petitioner's claim that they do perform supervisory functions. The Committee further recommended that the SOR should be amended to reflect the changes they recommend.

In the proposed amendments to SOR (P17), the general job description for the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officer, re-categorised as Supervisory Management Assistant – Non Technical (MN-03-2006-A) reads "ආයතනයන්හි විධායකයේ කාර්යයන්ට උපස්ථම්භක වන සේ විධායකය විසින් නිශ්චිත කොට පවරනු ලබන පිරිස් පාලනය, මුදල් භාරකාරිත්වය හා මුදල් පරිහරණය අධීක්ෂණය හා මෙහෙයුම් යන කර්යයන් ඇතුළත් බහුකාර්ය (Multi-Functional) ස්වරූපයේ කාර්යයන් ඉටුකරන සේවා ගණයකි". This description is identical to the one provided in the general guidelines issued to complete the Scheme of Recruitment to Supervisory Management Assistants – Non Technical (MN-03-2006-A), (55R5C). However, the functions that are assigned to the said post under the proposed amended SOR differed from the functions that are already assigned under the approved SOR (P10), only in respect of two aspects. In relation to the functions that are associated with the library, the proposed amended SOR made it the sole responsibility of the Assistant Cultural Development Officer and in relation to the Office Assistant and Security Officer, he was expected only to "assist" the supervision of minor staff. Clearly, there was no assignment of supervisory function to the Petitioners even in the said proposed amendment to SOR but only an assignment to "assist" the Cultural Development Officer, in the supervision of minor staff.

The NSCC, by its letter dated 09.10.2012 rejected the said proposed amendments to SOR, indicating there was no sufficient reasons to change its decision to place them in the salary scale MN-1-2006 (P19). Within a month of the said letter, the 3rd Petitioner and others lodged a complaint with the HRCSL under reference HRC/4070/2012 (P20). During the ensuing inquiry before the Commission, the NSCC provided further reasons for its decision in P23A, by way of a reply to specific issues that had been raised. In that letter the NSCC clarified its position that although the Petitioners were placed initially under TB 2-1, before placing them under MN-1-2006 in terms of P.A. Circular No. 6/2006, the mere fact of placement of some others who too were initially under salary scale TB 2-1 in MN-2-2006, does not make the Petitioners entitled to be placed under the salary scale MN-2-2006. This is due to the reason that subsequent salary revisions implemented under different Circulars had introduced changes in the applicable salary scales and with the implementation of P.A. Circular No. 6/2006, and it was therefore imperative for the categorisation of posts/service of the entire Public Service into several categories as stipulated in that circular.

During the process of re-categorisation, the relevant Ministries and Departments were expected to take into consideration the responsibilities that are assigned to each of such posts/services. The NSCC cites an example to highlight its point by stating that no direct comparison could be made to the former salary scales to the new set of salary scales introduced by the P.A. Circular No. 6/2006, by way of a particular salary scale corresponding to the former salary scale. As a result, some of the posts that were placed under the former salary scale TB 2-1 were subsequently placed under MN-2-2006 while several others were not. It was further stated by the NSCC that Schedule 1 to P.A. Circular No. 6/2006 specifically provides under item 6, by stating in order to be categorised as Supervisory Management Assistants, the post/service should have G.C.E.(O/L)/(A.L) with supervision responsibilities as basic qualifications.

Moreover, it is stated in the general instruction to setting up the Scheme of Recruitment for Management Assistants (Non-Technical) who are placed in the salary scale MN-3-2006-A (55R5C), they should perform functions that are classified as "ආයතනයන්හි විධායකයේ කාර්යයන්ට උපස්ථම්භක වන සේ විධායකය විසින් නිශ්චිත කොට පවරනු ලබන පිරිස් පාලනය, මුදල් භාරකාරිත්වය හා මුදල් පරිහරණය අධීක්ෂණය හා මෙහෙයුම් යන කර්යයන් ඇතුළත් බහුකාර්ය (Multi-Functional) ස්වරූපයේ කාර්යයන්" .

It is observed that, in relation to the duties that are connected with the library of the Cultural Centre, job description P12 expects an Assistant Cultural Development Officer to carry them out as his "primary" function, but that too under the supervision of the Cultural Officer, who was placed with overall responsibility for the affairs of the Centre, including its library.

In this context, it is opportune at this stage to consider another important aspect highlighted by the learned President's Counsel for the Petitioners during his submissions. The Petitioners, in their attempt to establish that they were treated differently to another group of employees, who are similarly circumstanced as they are, pointed out that the Postal Services Officers – Grade 1B of Segment B of the Unified Postal Services, who also have similar entry qualifications and perform multifunctional duties as the Petitioners, were placed in the higher salary scale MN-3-2006-A. To illustrate their point, the Petitioners relied on a paper advertisement inserted by Postmaster General (P15), calling for applications for the said post by which it is indicated that applicants to the post of Postal Services Officer - Grade 1B of Segment B, once appointed, were entitled to be placed in salary scale MN-3-2006-A.

This particular contention of the Petitioners appears to have been founded on an erroneous assumption regarding the nature of the criterion employed in the categorisation of posts. It appears that the Petitioners are under a misapprehension that the entry level educational qualifications are the sole criterion. Clearly the entry level qualification is not the sole criterion that is considered for the purpose of categorisation, but only one among several others. Annexure II of P.A. Circular No. 6/2006, sets out the multiple criteria that should be employed for the re-categorisation and re-grouping of posts. Item 1 of the said Annexure II reads thus;

"The categorisation of employees has been based on the following criteria;

a) Entry Qualifications/Scheme of Recruitment
b) Promotional Procedures
c) Nature of Duties
d) Simplicity
e) Practicability
f) Consistency/Compatibility."

It may be a fact that when the Petitioners were recruited, their entry qualifications were comparable to the ones applicable to the recruitment for the Postal Services Officers. But the subsequent change of the policy of the Government, implemented through the P.A. Circular No. 6/2006, had introduced a paradigm shift in the categorisation of posts in the Public Service by adopting the several distinct criteria, as set out therein. This particular aspect was recognised in Padma Akarawita and Others v Dr. Nanda Wickramasinghe and Others (supra)

Learned Solicitor General highlighted the differences in the entry qualifications, assignment of responsibilities and instances which clearly indicate the supervisory character of the duties that are assigned to Postal Services Officers of Grade 1B of Segment B in the Unified Postal Service. She thus contended that the two posts could not be compared and are distinct in all aspects, in terms of the P.A. Circular No. 6/2006. She relied on the applicable Scheme of Recruitment to the said post, 55R1.

Perusal of 55R1 and P15 revealed that the entry requirements to the post of Postal Services Officer - Grade 1B of Segment 2 were that each applicant must pass six subjects in G.C.E.(O/L) examination in not more than two attempts and should have at least four credit passes for subjects including Sinhala/Tamil/English literature and Mathematics. The applicants also must pass three subjects in G.C.E.(A/L) examination and, in addition, must be computer literate in a specified area of a study program which is not less than 720 hours and conferred by an institution approved by the Tertiary and Vocational Education Commission.

In contrast, the entry qualifications for the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officer in terms of the SOR (P10) and proposed SOR (P17) are six passes in G.C.E.(O/L) examination in one sitting and at least a pass in one subject in G.C.E.(A/L) examination. In relation to professional qualification, an applicant must have either followed a course in word processing and typewriting in an institution accepted by Tertiary and Vocational Education Commission or achieved competency to a similar level.

The comparison referred to above as to the entry requirements concerns one of the criteria adopted to the categorisation of Supervisory Management Assistants. That criterion is possession of a skill of a defined nature at the time of recruitment. The SOR of the Unified Postal Services (55R1) as well as the advertisement referred to by the Petitioners, calling for applications for the Unified Postal Services and in setting out the required qualifications for recruitment for the post of Postal Services Officer of that service, clearly specifies under the heading "professional qualifications" that each applicant must possess a qualification of a study programme on a specified area, which is of not less than 720 hours of study, approved by the Tertiary and Vocational Education Commission. None of the Petitioners nor any of the new recruits that are to be selected under the SOR (P10) were expected to fulfil such an entry requirement at the time of recruitment.

It seems that the contention that the SOR (P10) had lowered the entry level educational qualifications is directly relevant to their contention based on the claim of differential treatment with the Postal Services Officers. The Petitioners were recruited with the educational qualifications (as per P2) and with the approved SOR (P10), the lowered entry level qualifications would only apply to new recruits and not to the Petitioners, who were already confirmed in their service. This was made on a policy decision to align with the present categorisation of Assistant Cultural Development Officers with the categorisation of a Management Assistant – Non Technical – Segment 2. Even if the said entry level qualifications on which the Petitioners were recruited are retained, that factor alone will not qualify the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officer to be categorised as Supervisory Management Assistant – Non -Technical.

Thus, it seems that the entry qualifications and professional qualifications that are applicable to the two posts are not comparable. Even if it is comparable, the Respondent's contention is that the educational qualifications are not the sole criterion considered by the NSCC in recommending a salary scale to a post or service in terms of the P.A. Circular No.6/2006, and it is one among five other different factors that should be taken into consideration. Thus, the perceived similarity between the entry requirements between the two posts, as entertained by the Petitioners by placing reliance on entry qualifications that were applied at the time they were recruited on contract basis with that of the entry requirement of the Postal Services Officer, would not advance their cause any further.

This is primarily because, the nature of the duties that are assigned to an Assistant Cultural Development Officer, a criterion imposed by Annexure II for re-categorisation of the posts, indicate a striking dissimilarity between that post and the post of Postal Services Officer. In the applicable SOR (55R1) to the Postal Services Officers, the definition of functions to the said post is stated as follows;

"ශ්‍රී ලංකා තැපැල් දෙපාර්තමේන්තුව යටතේ පවත්නා තැපැල් කාර්යාල, පාලන ගිනුම් කාර්යාල, ඇතුළු සියළුම දෙපාර්තමේන්තු ඒකක වල විධායක කළමණාකරණ සංවර්ධන හා සේවා කාර්යයන් හි නියැලී කාර්ය මණ්ඩලයේ ක්‍රියාවලීන් සඳහා අවශ්‍ය වන්නාවූ පරිපූරක පහසුකරණ හා සහායක කාර්යයන් මෙහෙවීම හා අධීක්ෂණයෙහිලා ගැනෙන පිරිස් පාලන, මූල්‍ය හා වාණිජ කටයුතු, සම්බන්ධීකරණ හා මෙහෙයුම් කටයුතු, පරිපාලන හා ගිණුම් කටයුතු ඇතුළු බහු කාර්ය ස්වභාවයේ කාර්යයන් ඉටු කිරීම, අධීක්ෂණය හා මෙහෙයවීම ඉටු කරනු ලබන නිලධාරී ගණයකි."

The functions that are assigned to the post of Postal Services Officer in the said SOR are as follows;

It is clear from the list of functions reproduced above from the relevant SOR, the post of Postal Services Officer is placed as the senior most officer who is placed in charge of a Post Office and is expected to supervise its sales, accounts, financial, transactions, communications, staff, sorting of postal items and their custody. The term "අධීක්ෂණය" appears in three specific instances, in addition to placing the responsibility of overall supervision of the Post Office and its entire staff on the Postal Services Officer and thus conceding to the supervisory nature of the functions in the definition section itself.

The document containing the assignment duties to the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officer (P12) lists out following duties;

01. ඔබ ප්‍රාදේශීය සංස්කෘතික මධ්‍යස්ථානයේ සංස්කෘතික නිලධාරීගේ සෘජු අධීක්ෂණය යටතේ රාජකාරී කල යුතුය.

08. සංස්කෘතික නිලධාරීගේ අනුදැනුමක් නැතිව කිසිදු ආයතනයකට හෝ කෙනෙකුට ලිපි එවීම එම අයගේ උපදෙස් අනුව කටයුතු කිරීම වැනි ක්‍රියාකාරකම් වලින් වැළකිය යුතුය. සංස්කෘතික මධ්‍යස්ථානයේ ආරක්ෂාව විනය හා ගෞරවය රැකෙන පරිදි කටයුතු කිරීම ඔබගේ විශේෂ වගකීම වේ.

09. ඉහත සඳහන් රාජකාරී වලට අමතරව සංස්කෘතික නිලධාරී, ප්‍රාදේශීය ලේකම් සංස්කෘතික නිලධාරී, ප්‍රාදේශීය ලේකම් හා සංස්කෘතික ඒකකයේ අධ්‍යක්ෂ විසින් වරින් වර පවරනු ලබන රාජකාරී ඉටු කිරීම ඔබගේ වගකීම වේ.

It is very evident from the considerations that are referred to above, the attempt made by the Petitioners to compare themselves with the post of Postal Services Officers in support of their contention that they were treated unequally when compared with others who are similarly circumstanced should necessarily fail for the reason that the very nature of functions that are assigned to Postal Services Officers are clearly of supervisory in nature in terms of the P.A. Circular No.6/2006, whereas the functions that are assigned to the Petitioners are not.

When the nature of responsibilities of the Postal Services Officer is compared with that of Assistant Cultural Development Officers, in relation to the applicable salary scale, the 27th Respondent states at paragraph 39(e) in his Statement of Objections that prior to implementation of the Government policy reflected in the P.A. Circular No. 6/2006, the applicable circular in relation to determination of the salary scale was Public Administration Circular No. 9/2004. In terms of said circular, the Petitioners were absorbed into Public Service in 2006, and were placed on the salary scale of TB-2-1 (Rs. 101, 880 – 14X1,320 – 6X1,160 – 129,720), whereas the officers of the Public Management Assistants Service, had already been placed at a higher salary scale of TB 2-2 (Rs. 108,480 – 9X1,320 – 8X1,560 – 134,500). The Petitioners merely denied this statement of the 27th Respondent by paragraph 45 of their counter affidavit. They only reiterated their claim that they perform both supervisory functions and multiple duties but did not make any specific statement as to applicable salary scale to the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officers in terms of the Public Administration Circular No. 9/2004, contradicting the 27th Respondent's position.

Since the Petitioners grievance over the categorisation and salary scale is founded on the claims that they perform multi-functional and supervisory duties, it is of interest to peruse Annexure III to P.A. Circular No. 6/2006, to have a general overview as to the other posts that are placed in salary scale of MN- 01- 2006-A with the Petitioners along with the posts that had been placed in the salary scale of MN-03-2006.

The posts of Sub Post Masters, Welfare Officers, Co-operative Inspectors, Court Clerks, Court Interpreters, Court Stenographers, Court Typists and Grama Niladhari Class I are placed in the salary scale of MN- 01- 2006-A, whereas officers of the Unified Postal Service Group A Grade III Segment B, Group B, Grade I and Grade II are placed in the salary scale of MN-03-2006, along with Station Master of Supra Grade, Class I and II, and Librarians (non-graduates).

Learned Solicitor General, in her submissions contended that the fact of assignment of several duties does not by itself make the Petitioners as Public Officers who are assigned with "multi-functional" duties in terms of P.A. Circular No. 6/2006 and the Index to Salary Conversion seem to indicate that it had been the underlying rationale adopted uniformly by the NSCC in the determination of salary conversions between posts that are placed in salary scales MN-01-2006 and MN-3-2006.

Thus, the NSCC in determining not to accept the proposed Scheme of Recruitment (P17) not only considered the nature of duties, a criterion set out by P.A. Circular No. 6/2006, that are assigned to the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officers, but also considered and applied the other different criteria as well, as the 27th Respondent avers in his Statement of Objections.

In view of the foregoing, it is evident that the 3rd Petitioner failed to establish that the impugned decision made by the NSCC (P19) to reject the proposed amended Scheme of Recruitment (P17) recommended by the 1st Respondent by his letter dated 21.09.2012 (P18), was not made on the scheme set out by the set of guidelines that had been laid down in the P.A. Circular No. 6/2006 as amended in the re-categorisation of the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officer and in the determination of the applicable salary conversion.

Since the scope of this application is to consider whether the rejection of the proposed Scheme of Recruitment (P17) to amend the existing Scheme of Recruitment (P10) is violative of the fundamental right to equality of the 3rd Petitioner, it is very relevant to refer to the pronouncement made by Sripavan CJ in Disanayake and Others v

Secretary, Ministry of Public Administration and Home Affairs and Others (2015) 1 Sri L.R. 362. His Lordship stated (at p. 367) that "[A] scheme of recruitment once formulated is not good forever, it is perfectly within the competence of the appropriate authority to change it, rechange it, adjust it and re-adjust it according to the compulsions of changing circumstances. The Court cannot give directions as to how the Public Service Commission should function except to state the obligation not to act arbitrarily and to treat employees who are similarly situated equally Once the Public Service Commission lays down a scheme, it has to follow it uniformly."

In the judgment of Gunaratne and Others v Ceylon Petroleum Corporation and Others (1996) 1 Sri L.R. 315, Fernando J stated (at p. 324) in relation to Article 12 of the Constitution that it "prohibits arbitrary, capricious and/or discriminatory action".

The basis on which the NSCC decided not to accept the proposed amended Scheme of Recruitment for the post of Assistant Cultural Development Officers indicative from the contents of the letter P19, which states;

> "ඔබ අමාත්‍යාංශයේ තනතුරු වල බඳවා ගැනීමේ පරිපාටි පිළිබඳව මීට පෙර කරන ලද සාකච්ජා වලදී හුවමාරු වූ අදහස්ද, සහකාර සංස්කෘතික ප්‍රවර්ධන නිලධාරීන්ගේ රාජකාරී හා වගකීම් ආදී කරුණු ද සලකා බැලීමෙන් පසු එම තනතුර සඳහා MN-01-2006 යන වැටුප් පරිමානය යෝජනා කරන ලදි. එම තීරණය වෙනස් කිරීමට තරම් කරුණු ඉදිරිපත් වී නොමැති බව කාරුණිකව දන්වමි".

Therefore, it is my considered view that the impugned decision in P19, cannot be termed as an arbitrary, capricious, or discriminatory decision, and it did not discriminate among persons who are similarly circumstanced.

The petition of the 3rd Petitioner is accordingly dismissed without costs, along with the petitions of the other Petitioners, whose grievances are time barred.

Vijith K. Malalgoda PC J

Petitioner to the instant application Chief Inspector of Police Keliduwa Madduma Liyanage Janaka Priya who was the Officer-in-Charge of Police Station Thelikada in Elpitiya Police Division had come before this Court alleging the violation of his fundamental right guaranteed under Article 12 (1) of the Constitution by transferring him with immediate effect from Thelikada Police Station to Tangalle Police Division for normal duties on the ground of exigencies of service, without following the proper procedure in transferring an Officer-in-Charge of a Police Station.

This Court on 25.07.2022 granted leave to proceed for the alleged violation of Article 12 (1) of the Constitution and at the time the matter was supported before this Court, the learned DSG who represented the Respondents informed the Court that the Respondents will be raising a preliminary objection for the maintainability of the application since the application had been filed out of time.

As revealed before us the Petitioner who joined the Sri Lanka Police Department on 09.03.1993 as a Reserve Sub Inspector was absorbed into the Police Regular Service as a Sub Inspector of Police with effect from 24.02.2006 and was promoted to the rank of Inspector of Police with effect from 25.09.2007. He was subsequently promoted to the rank of Chief Inspector of Police with effect from 01.01.2020. When the Petitioner was holding the rank of the Inspector of Police, on 03.06.2015 he was appointed as the Officer in Charge of the Police Station Uva Paranagama in the Bandarawela Police Division and was transferred to Thelikada Police Station in the Elpitiya Police Division on 15.03.2019.

Objection of Time Bar

The instant application was filed at the registry on the 30th September 2021 alleging that the Petitioner was subject to discriminatory and/or unreasonable and/or arbitrary transfer with immediate effect, communicated to him by Telephone Massage. (TTM 115, CTTM 133 dated 09.08.2021)

As per the provisions in Article 126 (2) of the Constitution any person who alleged that his fundamental right had been violated by executive or administrative action, may apply within one month thereof to the Supreme Court.

The strict application of the above provision required the Petitioner to come before this Court within one month from 09.08.2021.

However, whilst explaining his delay in invoking the fundamental rights jurisdiction before the Supreme Court, the Petitioner had submitted that he could not file the instant application any earlier than he did due to the Island-wide quarantine curfew imposed on 20th August 2021 and therefore the Petitioner did not have the access to his lawyer in order to obtain legal advice.

It is common ground that the country was under a lockdown period due to the COVID-19 pandemic which prevented the public from engaging in day-to-day activities. The Supreme on two occasions issued Temporary Rules under Article 136 of the Constitution to grant relief to litigants who faced difficulties due to the lockdown imposed in the Country. The first set of Rules namely Supreme Court (Temporary Provisions) Rules 2020 were published in the Government Gazette Extraordinary No 2174/4 dated 6th May 2020 covering a period between 16th March 2020 to 18th May 2020.

A similar rule was published in the Government Gazette Extraordinary No. 2211/56 dated 21st January 2021 covering the period 24th October 2020 to 31st January 2021.

However, the rules promulgated above were only applicable to the timeline (of sixty days) identified in rule 7 of the Supreme Court Rules 1990.

Since the rule referred to above had a limited application, a piece of legislation was introduced to address the difficulties faced by the litigants who faced the same difficulty with regard to cases that were not covered by the rules promulgated by the Supreme Court under Article 136 of the Constitution.

An Act titled Corona Vires Decease 2019 (COVID-19) (Temporary Provisions) Act No. 17 of 2021 was introduced with effect from 1st March 2020 for a period of two years and the purpose of introducing the said legislation was identified in the long title to the said Act as follows;

> "AN ACT TO MAKE TEMPORARY PROVISIONS IN RELATION TO SITUATIONS WHERE PERSONS WERE UNABLE TO PERFORM CERTAIN ACTIONS REQUIRED BY LAW TO BE PERFORMED WITHIN THE PRESCRIBED TIME PERIODS DUE TO COVID - 19 CIRCUMSTANCES; TO ASSIGN ALTERNATIVE COURTS WHERE A COURT CANNOT FUNCTION DUE TO COVID - 19 CIRCUMSTANCES; TO CONDUCT COURT PROCEEDINGS USING REMOTE COMMUNICATION TECHNOLOGY TO FACILITATE THE CONTROL OF CORONA VIRUS DISEASE 2019 (COVID - 19); AND FOR MATTERS CONNECTED THEREWITH OR INCIDENTAL THERETO."

Section 2 (1) of the said Act has identified the areas that will be covered by the Act as follows;

2. (1) Where any court, tribunal, or any other authority established by or under any law is satisfied that, a person was prevented from-

    a) Instituting or filing any action, application, appeal, or other legal proceeding, as the case may be, within the period prescribed by law for such purpose; or
    b) Performing any act which is required by law to be done or performed within a prescribed time period, due to any COID-19 circumstance, it shall be competent for such court, tribunal, or any other authority established by or under any law to allow, admit or entertain an action, application, appeal, other proceedings, or act, referred to in paragraph (a) or (b), notwithstanding the lapse of the time period prescribed by law for such purpose and subject to the provisions of section 9, the period within which such person was subject to such COVID -19 circumstance shall be excluded in calculating the said prescribed time period.

However, as per the provisions in section 2 (2), the relief granted under subsection (1) shall not apply to similar reliefs granted by rules promulgated by the Supreme Court under Article 136 including the rules referred to above.

In the said circumstances it is clear that the provision in the Corona Vires Decease 2019 (COVID-19) (Temporary Provisions) Act No 17 of 2021 is applicable to an application filed before this Court under Article 126 (2).

Under Section 6 of the said Act the burden of proof that the inability to comply with the prescribed time periods for the purpose of Section 2 is due to any COVID-19 circumstance, shall be on the party making the application for relief under such Section and in Section 8 "COVID-19 circumstance" is interpreted as,

b) Any other circumstance arising out of or consequential to the circumstances referred to in paragraph (a)

Section 5 restricts the relief period granted under Section 2 to a period not exceeding twelve months.

The Petitioner when invoking the jurisdiction of this Court had explained the delay in coming before this Court as the imposition of Island wide quarantine curfew imposed on 20th August 2021. When the Respondents raised a time bar objection among the objections filed before this Court, the Petitioner had filed papers to establish his position by way of counter objections, and according to the counter objections, the Petitioner logged his out entry on 11.08.2021 and thereafter from 14.08.2021-03.09.2021 underwent home quarantine for a period of 21 days as he was identified as a person exposed to a COVID-19 patient. He has also produced marked X1 the quarantine certificate issued by the Public Health Inspector countersigned by the MOH Beliatta.

The Petitioner has also produced press releases issued by the President's Office extending the quarantine curfew until 13th September, 21st September, and finally until 1st of October. The Petitioner had invoked the jurisdiction of this Court on 30th September one day prior to the lifting of the quarantine curfew.

In the case of Gamaethige V. Siriwardana (1998) 1 Sri LR 384 at 402, Mark Fernando J considering the time bar objection had observed the following;

> "While the time limit is mandatory, in exceptional cases, on the application of the principle lex non cogit ad impossibilia, if there is no lapse, fault or, delay on the part of the Petitioner, this Court has a discretion to entertain an application made out of time."

When considering the material submitted by the Petitioner in the determination of the preliminary objections raised on behalf of the Respondents, I am satisfied with the explanation provided by the Petitioner in explaining the delay and therefore overrule the preliminary objection.

Whilst the Petitioner was serving as the Officer in Charge of the Police Station Thelikada, on 01.01.2020 was promoted to the rank of Chief Inspector of Police. As the Officer in Charge of Police Station Thelikada, the Petitioner along with his subordinate officers conducted several raids and apprehended several suspects for their involvement in unregulated sand mining and Timber Trafficking which were carried out in the Thelikada Police area at a large scale with the blessings of some local politicians for a long period of time.

Even though the Petitioner had taken up the above position and submitted that, due to his impartial conduct in carrying out raids and apprehending suspects, he was not popular among the Criminals and their "Masters" and created enemies who decided to get rid of him from Thelikada Police Station, but failed to submit material to justify his position before this Court. When explaining the above the Petitioner has taken up the position that, his sudden transfer from Thelikada Police Station has prevented him from obtaining the necessary material to place before the Supreme Court.

As further submitted by the Petitioner, while he was serving as Officer in Charge of Police Station Thelikada, he got to know that, an anonymous Petition had been received by his superior officers and an inquiry was conducted on the directives of the 1st Respondent, by a team of Police Officers headed by an Assistant Superintendent of Police of the Special Investigations Unit, and a statement was recorded from the Petitioner.

The Petitioner had reliable information that he was exonerated from the charges leveled against him in the anonymous petition, by the Special Investigations Unit, but to his surprise, he received a Police Message dated 09.08.2021 (TTM 155 and CTTM 139) informing him that he had been transferred to Tangalle Police Division for normal duties on the ground of exigencies of service. (P-4) Somewhere around March 2021 (five months prior to his transfer) the Petition received a letter through post by an anonymous sender said to have been signed by the 2nd Respondent who is a State Minister and a Member of Parliament from the Galle District requesting the 3rd Respondent to appoint one S.M.C.L. Silva an Inspector of Police who was serving at that time at Elpitiya Police Station to the Post of Officer in Charge of Police Station Thelikada, even though there was no vacancy for the above post at that time (a copy of the letter dated 28.03.2021 was produced marked P-3)

On behalf of the Petitioner, it was argued that the transfer order he was served based on exigencies of service, was a cover-up to transfer him out of Thelikada Police Station and to appoint a close associate of the Political leadership as OIC Thelikada Police Station. The Petitioner who was a Chief Inspector of Police and an Officer in Charge of a Station was transferred for normal duties (not to an Officer in Charge Position) was not a transfer on exigencies of service but in fact a demotion for him. At the time the Petitioner came before this Court, the Petitioner was attached to Kataragama Police Station for normal duties by Senior Superintendent of Police Tangalle.

On behalf of the Petitioner, it was further argued that as per the Government Gazette (Extra-ordinary) No 2202/24 dated 20th November 2020, the powers of the Public Service Commission to appoint and transfer the Officer in Charge of Police Stations had been delegated to the Inspector General of Police, and the Inspector General of Police is expected to appoint and transfer the Officer in Charge of Police Stations as per the scheme approved by the Public Service Commission.

However, in the absence of a scheme approved by the Public Service Commission, the transfer of Officer in Charge of Police Stations was to be implemented in terms of the provisions set out in rules 218-223 of the Procedural Rules of the Public Service Commission.

As observed by us clause 196 of the Procedural Rules identified the methods of transfer of Public Officer as follows;

> 196. Transfers are four-fold as indicated below,
>
> i. Transfers done annually > ii. Transfers done on exigencies of service > iii. Transfers done on disciplinary grounds
> iv. Mutual transfers on requests made by officers

Clauses 218 onwards up to clause 221 provided for the transfers made on exigencies of service as follows;

> 218. A Public Officer may be transferred on exigencies of service by the Appointing Authority for any one of the following reasons.
>
> i. Where the service of an officer is no longer needed at his present Station

ii. Where an officer is needed for service in another station or that particular officer himself is needed

iii. Where it is found, due to administrative reasons, that the retention of an officer in his present station is not suitable

219. Before a Public Officer is transferred on exigencies of service, the Authority with Delegated Power shall personally satisfy himself that the need has actually arisen as specified in Section 218 above and that the transfer cannot be deferred till the next annual transfers.

220. Depending on the nature of the need for services that has arisen, the Appointing Authority may transfer an officer at short notice.

221. The Appointing Authority shall record in the relevant file clearly all the factors that caused the transfer of an officer on exigencies of service. The Appointing Authority shall convey the reasons to the officer concerned.

In the transfer order that was communicated to the Petitioner by TTM-155 and CTTM-139, it is stated that,

"මහජන ආරක්ෂක අමාත්‍යාංශයේ ලේකම්ගේ 2021.08.06 දිනැති අංක 02/08/OIC/02/2021 දරණ ලිපියේ සඳහන් අනුමැතිය පරිදි පහත සඳහන් ස්ථාන මාරු කිරීම සේවයේ අවශ්‍යතාවය මත වහාම ක්‍රියාත්මක වන පරිදි නියෝග කරමි.

01. ප්‍ර.පොා.ප. කේ.එම්.එල්. ජනකප්‍රිය — තෙලිකඩ පොලිස් ස්ථානාධිපති තනතුරේ සිට සාමාන්‍ය රාජකාරි සඳහා තංගල්ල කොට්ඨාශය වෙත

From the material placed before this court by the Petitioner, it is revealed that,

a) The Petitioner was promoted to the rank of Chief Inspector with effect from 01.01.2020

b) There were no pending disciplinary matters except for the investigation carried out by the Special Investigation Unit regarding an anonymous Petition received against the Petitioner

On behalf of the Respondents, the 1st Respondent Inspector General of Police had filed objections by way of an affidavit, and in the said affidavit, the 1st Respondent had taken up the position that,

a) The transfer of the Petitioner was made in accordance with the law, having duly considered the facts and circumstances that prevailed at Thelikada Police area which is supported by several reports received by him including, an intelligence report which produced marked 1R1, report by the Superintendent of Police Elpitiya marked 1R2, Report of the Deputy Inspector General of Police Galle marked 1R3 and the Report of the Senior Deputy Inspector General of Southern Province marked 1R4.

b) The investigation carried out by the Special Investigation Unit was based only on one anonymous petition received against the Petitioner but in the reports referred to above, several allegations were leveled against the Petitioner mainly based on the intelligence report received against him.

c) The transfer of the Petitioner was not motivated due to the influence of the political leadership of the area and in fact, after the transfer of the Petitioner from Thelikada Police Station, Chief Inspector of Police Weerakonda Arachchige Shihan Dilanka was appointed as the Officer in Charge of Thelikada Police Station with effect from 27.08.2021 and IP S.M.C.L. Silva has only acted as Officer in Charge of Thelikada Police Station for a brief period of two weeks until the post was filled permanently.

As observed by this Court, the 1st Respondent when justifying his decision to transfer the Petitioner, had heavily relied on the four Reports produced marked 1R1-1R4, but as further observed by this Court, no steps were taken against the Petitioner with regard to the allegations referred to in those reports.

In 1R1, the Report of the Intelligence Unit Galle dated 20.09.2020, there is a reference to making false entries with regard to the use of the official vehicle assigned to the Police Station with the help of the Police Driver Sanjeewa, misusing the money allocated for fuel, having a close relationship with the people who involved in illegal sand mining, Neglecting duties by not visiting the Police Station, associating a set of favourite officers and with the help of one retired sergeant, collecting money from people involved in illegal activities.

It appears that the above allegations are very serious in nature, which can be leveled against an Officer in Charge of a Police Station, and therefore there is a duty cast upon the Respondents to place before the Court the steps that were taken against the Petitioner with regard to the allegation in 1R1. In addition to the above, in the Report produced marked 1R2 prepared by the Superintendent of Police Elpitiya dated 06.09.2020 addressed to DIG Galle, there is a reference to the arrest of some suspects for operating a brothel and for possession of 3170 mg. of Heroin in the Police area of Thelikada on information received by the Senior DIG Southern Province through an informant, by a police party led by IP Thuduwage of Elpitiya District Crime Detective Unit and had taken up the position that the above detection would establish that the Petitioners had failed in his duties as OIC Thelikada. In addition to the above, there is a reference to an illicit affair of the Petitioner with a WPC and an investigation carried out by ASP II – Elpitiya with regard to a petition received against the Petitioner.

1R3 and 1R4 are two Reports one by the Deputy Inspector General of Police Galle addressed to the Senior Deputy Inspector General of Police Southern Province and the other by the Senior Deputy Inspector General of Police Southern Province addressed to the Inspector General of Police. 1R3 was received by the Senior Deputy Inspector General of Police on 07.10.2020 and 1R4 was received by the Inspector General of Police on 15.10.2020. Both reports were based on 1R1 and 1R2, produced by their subordinate officers but the allegation of having an illicit affair with a WPC was explained in detail in those two reports.

However, in both reports referred to above, i.e., 1R3 and 1R4 prepared by the Deputy Inspector General of Police Galle and the Senior Deputy Inspector General of Police Southern Province there is no reference to any disciplinary step taken against or pending against the Petitioner. As revealed before this Court during the argument, the authors of 1R3 and 1R4 had not even directed to record a statement and/or call for his explanation from the Petitioner with regard to the allegations leveled against him in those reports. Even though there is a reference to an investigation carried out by Assistant Superintendent of Police II Elpitiya with regard to a petition, no such material was placed before this Court to establish the allegations against the Petitioner.

As observed by this Court the 1st Respondent who received 1R4 on 15th October 2020, on 25th July 2021, nine months after the receipt of 1R4, based on the allegations against the Petitioner found in 1R4, had recommended to the Secretary to the Ministry of Public Security, Law and Order to transfer the Petitioner to Tangalle Division for normal duties. (1R6)

In the said recommendation, 1st Respondent had first requested to cancel his previous recommendation dated 18.06.2021 to transfer the Officer in Charge Rathgama Police Station to Anuradhapura Division for normal duties and to transfer OIC Achchuweli to Rathgama Police Station, and had referred to the conduct of the Petitioner as revealed in the reports he received in October 2020 including the allegation of an illicit affair with WPC …… (කා.පො.සැ. සමඟ ප්‍රසිද්ධියේ අනියම් සම්බන්ධතාවයක් පවත්වන බවත්….) and recommend to transfer him out of Thelikada Police Station to Tangalle Division for normal duties and to replace him with OIC Achchuweli.

Acting on the said recommendation the 4th Respondent, Secretary to the Ministry of Public Security, Law and Order had transferred the Petitioner as recommended but no order was made to implement the second recommendation to replace him with OIC Achchuweli but made an order to direct the Senior Deputy Inspector General of the area to appoint a suitable officer to cover up duties (1R7) and the said directive was communicated to the relevant officer by the 1st Respondent by TTM155. (1R8)

It is on this directive only the Petitioner was transferred to Tangalle Division with immediate effect and on an acting basis he was replaced by Inspector of Police S.M.C.L. Silva.

As against the transfer order, the Petitioner appealed to the Public Service Commission, and as submitted by the Petitioner as well as the 1st Respondent, the said appeal was rejected by the Public Service Commission (1R12).

The observations forwarded to the 4th Respondent by the 1st Respondent and the observations of the 4th Respondent sent to the Public Service Commission with regard to the said appeal were produced before this Court by the 1st Respondent marked 1R9 and 1R10 respectively and the reason for his transfer was explained in those observations as follows;

1R9 “නිලධාරියා සම්බන්ධයෙන් බස්නාහිර පළාත භාර ජ්‍යෙෂ්ඨ නියෝජ්‍ය පොලිස්පතිවරයා සහ බුද්ධි අංශ විසින් පහත කරුණු වාර්තා කර තිබීම හේතුවෙන් ඔබගේ අනුමැතිය පරිදි 2021.08.09 තෙලිකඩ පොලිස් ස්ථානාධිපති තනතුරින් ඉවත් කර ස්ථාන මාරු කර ඇත.

Even though no disciplinary action was commenced or recommended by the 1st Respondent except for the investigation carried out by the Special Investigations Unit on the directives of the 1st Respondent on one anonymous petition received against the Petitioner, the 1st Respondent had maintained the position that the transfer of the Petitioner was recommended under Clause 218 (iii) of the procedural rules of the Public Service Commission.

The objections filed before this Court by the 1st Respondent were challenged by the Petitioner and in the counter objections filed, the Petitioner had relied on four documents marked X-1 to X-4. The documents produced X-3 and X-4 refer to the investigation carried out by the Special Investigation Unit with regard to the petitioner and X-3 is a letter dated 20.05.2021 bearing No. PHQ/ED/05/07/522-2021 addressed to the Director Special Investigation Unit by the 1st Respondent and the said letter refers to the following;

> "That, the 1st Respondent by letter dated 07.09.2020 bearing No. Staff/03/IGP/OUT/05/4632/2020 advised the Director Special Investigation Unit to conduct an inquiry into an anonymous petition received by him regarding allegations of acts of misconduct of the Petitioner
>
> That, the said investigation had been conducted by the said unit, and the final report was forwarded to the 1st Respondent on 22.04.2021 bearing No. D/SIU/OW/533/2021. The Report and the entire investigation file had been forwarded to Director Disciplinary and conduct and report had been called by him.
> That, according to the report received from the Director, of Disciplinary and Conduct the allegations made against the Petitioner were not proved. However, it was recommended that WPC.... had been found guilty of dereliction of duty, for failing to enter her off duty, on 14.08.2020 in the daily information book, and enter the same on 15.08.2020 below the entry made by the Officer in Charge of Night Duty."

and Directed the Director of the Special Investigation Unit to communicate the disciplinary recommendation with regard to WPC ..... and to report the progress.

In response to the above direction, the Director Special Investigation Unit sent X-4 dated 01.06.2021 to the Senior Superintendent of Police Elpitiya directing him to take disciplinary action against WPC. …. Police Station Thelikada and to report.

As observed by this Court, the 1st Respondent is silent on these two letters. Even during the arguments before us, X-3 and X-4 were never rejected or challenged on behalf of the 1st Respondent. It is observed that the said letters are neither copied to the Petitioners nor sent to the personal file of the Petitioner. They are internal communications in the Police Department and the Petitioner has failed to explain to this Court, how he received these documents. However, in the absence of any challenge to X3 and X4 on behalf of the 1st Respondent, this Court will only take into consideration that by May 2021 a decision has been taken

a) To exonerate the Petitioner of the allegation leveled against him in the petition that was investigated by the Special Investigation Unit

b) To charge sheet WPC…. for her conduct with regard to the allegation of leaving the Police Station without making an official entry in the relevant register.

However as already referred to by me in this judgment the 1st Respondent's recommendation to transfer the Petitioner was mainly based on the allegation with regard to his alleged involvement with the WPC …., in the recommendation sent to the Secretary to the Ministry of Public Security Law and Order on 25th July 2021 approximately two months after a decision was taken that the material is insufficient to establish charges against the Petitioner.

When the Petitioner appealed to the Public Service Commission against his transfer order, the 1st Respondent submitted his observation (1R9) dated 10th January 2022 mainly on three issues

a) That the petitioner was having an illicit affair openly with WPC ….
b) That on 14.08.2020 WPC …. had left the Police Station without reporting her off duty and the Petitioner had made a false out entry in his handwriting to help the WPC

c) That there is an inquiry pending against the petitioner with regard to the above incident by the Special Investigations Unit, when in fact the inquiry is concluded and the decision had already being communicated by that time.

When making his recommendation to transfer the Petitioner out of Thelikada Police Station (1R-6), the 1st Respondent failed to ascertain the correct position with regard to the inquiry pending against the Petitioner and totally depended on the reports he received from the Senior Deputy Inspector General of Police Southern Province eight months before.

It is also observed by this Court that there was an attempt to oust the Petitioner from Thelikada Police Station by the Higher Ranks of the Southern Police Division to please the political leadership, and when transfer order was received to replace Officer in Charge Thelikada with a suitable officer to act, Inspector of Police SMCL Silva who was recommended to the above post (P-3) by the 2nd Respondent was appointed to act as the Officer in Charge of Thelikada Police Station.

In the case of Range Bandara Vs. General Anuruddha Ratwatte and another (1997) 3 Sri LR 360 Mark Fernando J having observed the following;

> "The 2nd Respondent stated that it was a continuation of the end-of-the-year transfer from 1995 and that 68 officers were transferred at the same time. Although he did not make any reference to the 'exigencies of service,' the 1st Respondent claim that the 2nd Respondent had told him it was on account of the exigencies of service……."
>
> As for alleged complaints after October 1994, since the 2nd Respondent did not refer to any reports relating to such complaints, it is quite unsafe to act on the 2nd Respondent's bare assertion that he was 'made aware' of complaints, particularly because these were not disclosed to the Petitioner so that he could have been heard in his defence……
> But there is a more serious objection to allowing that material to be tendered. Not having given the Petitioner even an inkling that his transfer was on account of such complaints, and had pretended that the transfer was a normal annual transfer-with 68 other transfers-can the 2nd Respondent now be allowed to say that it was on disciplinary grounds, 'so that proper inquiries could be conducted', in respect of the complaints against him? All the complaints referred to in the October 1994 reports were not proceeded with, either because they were withdrawn or because there was insufficient evidence. Even if there were subsequent complaints (i.e., between October 1994 and December 1995) why was no action taken in 1995? ....."

had held that;

"In my view, the summary transfer of the Petitioner to a distant place was unreasonable, on the material available to the 2nd Respondent, and it was also a misuse of discretion to withhold from him, the true reason for the transfer because it deprived him of the opportunity to rebut it. I hold that the 2nd Respondent's decision to transfer the Petitioner was arbitrary, capricious, and unreasonable, and in violation of the Petitioner's fundamental right, under Article 12 (1)." (Emphasis added)

The petitioner was transferred from Thelikada Police Station on, the ground of exigencies of service, but the 1st Respondent was silent on the relevant provision of Clause 218 of the Procedural Rule he acted upon when making the recommendation.

As already observed in this order, the 1st Respondent when making his recommendation had heavily relied on the alleged illicit affair of the Petitioner but also referred to the misuse of the official vehicle and fuel allocated to the Police Station and having a close relationship with criminals of the area but in the absence of any pending investigation or inquiry based on these allegations the Petitioner is totally unaware of the reasons for his transfer except the fact that he is being transferred on exigencies of service.

Clause 218 refers to three different criteria a transfer could be implemented on exigencies of service. The Petitioner who faced the transfer on exigencies of service was deprived of properly defending himself without knowing the real reason for his transfer, when compared to a transfer made on disciplinary grounds, where the officer is well aware of the reason for his transfer. The person who is transferred on exigencies of service should have been informed of the reasons behind his transfer. If the Petitioner was informed of the reasons for his transfer he could have properly defended himself before the Public Service Commission when he submitted the appeal and the 1st Respondent would not have been able to mislead the Public Service Commission.

The allegation that the 2nd Respondent was involved in the transfer of the Petitioner was not established before this Court except for the fact that he wanted a particular officer to be appointed as the Officer in Charge of Thelikada Police Station. The material that was placed against the 4th Respondent that he had arbitrarily and/or unreasonably approved an adhoc transfer of the Petitioner was not established since the 4th Respondent was acting on the recommendations of the 1st Respondent but the 4th Respondent was reluctant to implement the full recommendation made by the 1st Respondent.

When considering the material already discussed in this judgment it is clear that the conduct of the 1st Respondent in recommending the transfer of the Petitioner on exigency of service is in violation of the fundamental rights of the Petitioner guaranteed under Article 12(1) of the Constitution. The Petitioner was not successful in establishing any violation of his fundamental rights by the other Respondents.

For the reasons given in this judgment, I hold that the 1st Respondent has violated the Fundamental Rights of the Petitioner guaranteed under Article 12(1) of the Constitution by transferring the Petitioner from Thelikada Police Station.

Since the Petitioner is presently serving as an Officer in Charge of a Police Station, this court will not make any order to have him back at Thelikada Police Station.

Argued on: 18.01.2023

Decided on: 16.10.2023

Janak De Silva, J.

The Petitioner is a Grade III officer of the Sri Lanka Education Administrative Service (SLEAS). She was appointed as the Principal of Nakkawatta National School by letter dated 10.12.2013 (P14a) with effect from 01.01.2014.

According to the Petitioner, the school was in a state of neglect when she took on her duties. The Petitioner's efforts resulted in a significant improvement in the quality of education. The school's best result in the past was a student who received 6 'A' grade passes in the General Certificate of Education (Ordinary Level) Examination. After the Petitioner assumed duties, a student obtained 9 'A' grade passes for the first time in the history of the school while four other students obtained 8 'A' grade passes and two students obtained 7 'A' grade passes.

During the August school vacation in 2016, the Petitioner received a letter dated 10.08.2016 (P21) from the Secretary, Ministry of Education informing that, subject to the covering approval of the Public Service Commission (PSC), she has been temporarily 'attached' to the Provincial Education Department of the North Western Province with immediate effect due to exigencies of service.

The Petitioner appealed to the Secretary of the Ministry of Education and requested that her temporary attachment be rescinded with immediate effect. She also made an appeal to the PSC. According to the Petitioner, the usual course of action adopted by the Ministry of Education in such circumstances is to allow the incumbent to continue in the post till a decision is taken on the appeal. Nevertheless, the Secretary of the Ministry of Education temporarily attached the 12th Respondent with immediate effect to cover duties as the Principal of Nakkawatta National School by letter dated 30.08.2016 (P24). At that time, the 12th Respondent was the Deputy Principal of Kuliyapitiya Central College. The 12th Respondent is a Class III officer of the SLEAS but is junior to the Petitioner by 6 years.

The Petitioner claims that she was removed from her post as Principal of Nakkawatta National School for the purpose of giving the 12th Respondent a promotion in effect and in fact. It is alleged that her attachment to the Provincial Education Department of the North Western Province is arbitrary, unreasonable, irrational, tainted with malice, and made for an ulterior and collateral purpose.

The Petitioner seeks inter alia the following relief:

(a) Declare that the Petitioner's fundamental rights guaranteed to her under Article 12 (1) and/or 14 (1) (g) of the Constitution have been infringed by the 1st to 11th Respondents or one or more of them;
(b) Declare that the 'attachment' (evidenced by P21) of the Petitioner to the Provincial Education Department of the North Western Province is null and void;
(c) Direct the 1st to 11th Respondents or one or more of them to forthwith appoint the Petitioner to a suitable substantive post commensurate with her qualifications, experience and seniority in the SLEAS.

Leave to proceed has been granted only under Article 12 (1) of the Constitution.

On 12th December 2018, the Petitioner informed that she may consider returning if offered a suitable school in the Central Government. On 2nd September 2020, the Respondents filed a motion along with a letter dated 24th February 2020, by which the Petitioner was appointed as the Principal of Mayurupada Vidyalaya in Kurunegala. The Petitioner appears to be with this appointment.

Nevertheless, she is desirous of proceeding with this application. Therefore, we must proceed to investigate the allegations of infringement of her fundamental rights under Article 12 (1).

The Respondents claim that the Petitioner's temporary attachment to the Provincial Education Department of the North Western Province by P21 was based on exigencies of service and was not disciplinary in nature.

According to the Respondents, an internal audit was conducted on 28th March 2016 on the orders of the Secretary of the Ministry of Education as part of the internal audit programme 2016/2017. It revealed several lapses in the administration and discipline of Nakkawatta National School, as well as several irregularities regarding the finances and assets of the school. In light of the findings of the internal audit report (1R1) following the aforementioned internal audit, the predecessor of the 1st Respondent was of the opinion that due to the administrative reasons borne out in the said audit report (1R1) the retention of the Petitioner as the Principal of the Nakkawatta National School, was not suitable. Accordingly, the predecessor of the 1st Respondent, by P21, took steps to temporarily attach the Petitioner to the Provincial Education Department of the North Western Province.

A preliminary investigation was conducted following the audit report on the PSC's direction. A preliminary investigation report was issued on 7th February 2018 after the preliminary investigation was completed. Pursuant to the said report, the 1st Respondent requested the PSC to grant covering approval for the attachment of the Petitioner to the Wayamba Provincial Department of Education and for approval to implement the recommendation of transferring the Petitioner in the preliminary investigation report. The PSC approved the transfer of the Petitioner after taking into account the preliminary investigation report.

Nevertheless, whether the fundamental rights of the Petitioner guaranteed under Article 12 (1) has been violated or not must be decided on the material available with the predecessor of the 1st Respondent at the time P21 was issued. The temporary attachment made by P21 cannot be justified based on subsequent events. In fact, the Respondents have, at paragraph 4 of the written submissions filed with motion dated 3rd February 2022, emphasised that the decision made in 2016 was reasonable based on the material available to the Secretary, Ministry of Education at the time the decision was made. According to the Respondents as well, the focus should be on the material available at the time P21 was issued.

This position appears to have been in the minds of the drafters of the Procedural Rules on Appointment, Promotion and Transfer of Public Officers and to provide for matters connected therewith and incidental thereto published in Gazette No. 1589/30 dated February 20, 2009 (PSC Rules 2009). Rule 221 reads:

> "221. The Appointing Authority shall record in the relevant file clearly all the factors that caused the transfer of an officer on exigencies of service. The Appointing Authority shall convey the reasons to the officer concerned." (emphasis added)

The Appointing Authority cannot use other materials that were not available at the time of the decision to justify the transfer because of this obligation.

I am conscious that the Respondents do not assert that the Petitioner was transferred. They claim that it was only a 'temporary attachment' based on service exigencies. Nevertheless, there is no reference to 'temporary attachment' in the PSC Rules.

Moreover, the Respondents have in the written submissions filed with motion dated 3rd February 2022, sought to rely on Rule 218 (iii) of the PSC Rules to justify the contents of P21. Rule 218 (iii) empowers a transfer on the basis of exigencies of service "where it is found, due to administrative reasons, that the retention of an officer in his present station is not suitable". As a result, the Respondents acknowledge that P21 is in fact a transfer.

The Respondents deny that the transfer was due to disciplinary reasons. It is claimed to have been due to exigencies of service. Such a transfer can indeed be made in accordance with Rule 243 (XXVI) of the PSC Rules, which reads:

> "'Transfer' means the moving of a public officer from one station or institution to another station or institution by the Commission or an authority with delegated power at their discretion or on disciplinary grounds or on the proposal of an Annual Transfer Committee and/or on the recommendation of an Annual Transfer Proposals Review Committee or on the request of the officer or on exigencies of service or on the appointment of the officer to another post as a result of promotion." (emphasis added)

The 1st Respondent in his affidavit states that in the light of the findings of the internal audit report (1R1), his predecessor was of the opinion that due to administrative reasons borne out in the said report, the retention of the Petitioner as Principal of Nakkawatta School was not suitable.

However, P21 does not refer to the transfer made for the reasons outlined in the affidavit of the 1st Respondent. It merely states that the transfer is made due to exigencies of service.

PSC Rule 218 identifies three situations where a transfer can be made on the exigencies of service. They are:

> (i) Where the services of an officer is no longer needed at his present station;
>
> (ii) Where an officer is needed for service in another station or that particular officer himself is needed;

(iii) Where it is found, due to administrative reasons, that the retention of an officer in his present station is not suitable.

Hence, it was imperative for the Secretary of the Ministry of Education to specify in P21 which of the above is the reason for the transfer of the Petitioner. This enables the Petitioner to become aware of the reasons for her transfer and take any necessary steps to defend her rights.

In Dayasena v. Bindusara, Director, National Blood Transfusion Service and Others [(2003) 1 Sri.L.R. 222] court was called upon to examine the legality of a transfer order. Fernando J. held (at page 227):

"While the 2nd Respondent had authority to transfer the Petitioner on one or more of the grounds stated above, there is no proof that he did actually make a transfer order. Even assuming that he did make a transfer order, there is no evidence as to the basis on which he acted, and it cannot be assumed that it was on one of the four permitted grounds. But even if I were to assume that he did act on one of those grounds, yet that ground and the supporting reasons were not disclosed to the Petitioner when the transfer order was made, and even when his appeals were refused and that was a fatal flaw…In the present case, not only the reasons but even the ground had not been disclosed. I therefore hold that the Petitioner's transfer was wrongful and arbitrary."

Moreover, a public officer cannot be transferred due to service exigencies at the whims and fancies of a superior. PSC Rule 219 requires that before a public officer is transferred on exigencies of service, the Authority with Delegated Power shall personally satisfy himself that need has actually arisen as specified in Rule 218 and that the transfer cannot be deferred till the next annual transfers. Accountability and transparency are established by this.

PSC Rule 221 seeks to crystallise this situation by requiring the Appointing Authority to record in the relevant file clearly all the factors that caused the transfer of an officer on exigencies of service. The Appointing Authority shall convey the reasons to the officer concerned. These are mandatory requirements.

In Premachandra v. Bandara, Secretary Ministry of Lands, Irrigation and Mahaweli Development and Others [(1994) 1 Sri.L.R. 301 at 318], Fernando J. held, in reference to the scheme stipulated in the Establishment Code, that:

> "[…] when the law requires disclosure of such reason*, it will have to be disclosed – and,* if not disclosed*, legal presumptions will be drawn.*" (emphasis added)

The note or minute the Secretary, Ministry of Education should have recorded in the relevant file in terms of PSC Rule 221 would have established if the transfer of the Petitioner was made for the reasons outlined in the affidavit of the 1st Respondent. However, the Respondents have not produced the said note or minute.

In the absence of such note or minute, the best evidence to prove that the Petitioner's transfer was actually based on the internal audit report (1R1) is not available. Furthermore, the internal audit report (1R1) does not recommend the Petitioner's transfer.

In the aforementioned circumstances, we are entitled to draw an adverse inference in terms of section 114 (f) of the Evidence Ordinance that evidence which could be and is not produced would if produced, be unfavourable to the person who withholds it.

Moreover, in response to the appeal made by Petitioner to the PSC, the PSC referred the letter dated 05.10.2016 (P37) stating that:

> "සී.ඩී.බී. බස්නායක මහත්මිය විසින් 2016.08.30 දිනැතිව උක්ත කරුණ සම්බන්ධයෙන් ඔබ මගින් මා වෙත යොමු කර ඇති අභියාචනයක ප්‍රගමන පිටපතක් මෙම කාර්යාලය වෙත ලැබී ඇත.

02. එහි පිටපතක් මේ සමඟ අමුණා එවන අතර, අභියාචනයෙහි සඳහන් කරුණු සම්බන්ධයෙන් ඔබගේ නිරීක්ෂණ හා නිර්දේශ රාජ්‍ය සේවා කොමිෂන් සභාව වෙත ඉදිරිපත් කිරීමට හැකිවනු පිණිස දන්වා එවන ලෙස කාරුණිකව දැනුම්දෙමි."

The final sentence of the passage confirms that the internal audit report (1R1) did not reach the PSC by the date mentioned earlier. It should be noted that there is a nearly two-month difference between the letter dated 10.08.2016 (P21) and the letter dated 05.10.2016 (P37).

In the circumstances, I am inclined to draw the inference that the transfer was not based on the internal audit report (1R1).

Nevertheless, the Respondents submit that the internal audit report (1R1) is dated 4th August 2016 and P21 is dated 10th August 2016. As a result, the Petitioner has been transferred within a week of the internal audit report (1R1). The Respondents argue that the close proximity of the two events indicates a causal nexus between the audit report and the action taken.

Assuming that the transfer of the Petitioner was actually based on the internal audit report (1R1), it is nonetheless troubling for various reasons.

According to the Petitioner, the audit officers who conducted the audit failed to record her statement, nor did they make any inquiries from her regarding matters stated in the internal audit report (1R1). According to the Petitioner, she became aware of the report when it was filed with the objections in this application.

It was admitted that the audit was finished within a day. The report does not refer to any statements recorded from the Petitioner or at a minimum, any inquiries made from her regarding the matters dealt with therein. The decision to transfer the Petitioner had allegedly been taken based on such a report.

Public officers play a crucial role in providing public services to the public. They do so at great sacrifice, disregarding more lucrative opportunities in the private sector, and for a meager salary.

It is important to point out that the SLEAS is perhaps one of the most significant sectors in the public sector of the country. The concept of 'free education' makes it even more special. The public officers' role in the context of free education does not merely suggest that education is provided free of charge by the State, but it is offered to the highest standard within the limitations of the resources available. Furthermore, Article 27 (2) (h) of the Constitution states that:

> "27. (2) The State is pledged to establish in Sri Lanka a Democratic Socialist Society, the objectives of which include – […]
> (h) the complete eradication of illiteracy and the assurance to all persons of the right to universal and equal access to education at all levels."

The concept of free education is still maintained by Sri Lanka, which is a welfare State, through tax payer money. Due to this, administrators have a higher responsibility in ensuring that education is provided smoothly, effectively, and efficiently. The process of developing a robust system begins within the system itself. Free education can only produce the desired results if the administration maintains the highest standards in its functions. Actions with negative outcomes, whether deliberate or inadvertent, will result in demoralising the teachers, which in turn negatively impacts their productivity. The lower officials cannot be expected to adhere to the laws and norms of the public sector if the higher officials fail to do so. Moreover, the failure to uphold the highest standard would ultimately affect the student.

In Premachandra v. Bandara, Secretary Ministry of Lands, Irrigation and Mahaweli Development and Others [(1994) 1 Sri. L. R. 301 at 318], Fernando J. held that:

> "The State must, in the public interest, expect high standards of efficiency and service from public officers in their dealings with the administration and the public. In the exercise of constitutional and statutory powers and jurisdictions, the Judiciary must endeavour to ensure that this expectation is reali[s]ed." (emphasis added)

An individual's dignity and freedom are guaranteed by the Preamble to the Constitution. In the case of teachers, it requires that they be assured of good working environment where they are able to render their services with dignity befitting of the sacred role, they play in molding future generations. Any action taken in relation to a public officer must conform to the rules that the State has adopted.

In Abeywickrema v. Pathirana and Others [(1986) 1 Sri. L. R. 120 at 138] Sharvananda C.J. held:

> "Article 55 (4) empowers the Cabinet of Ministers to make rules for all matters relating to public officers […] The power conferred on the Cabinet of Ministers is a power to make rules which are general in their operation, though they may be applied to a particular class of public officers. This power is a legislative power and this rule making function is for the purpose identified in Article 55(4) of the Constitution as legislative, not executive or judicial in character. A rule made in exercise of this power by the Cabinet has all the binding force of a statute, or regulation."

The same rationale applies to the PSC Rules which have constitutional underpinning and were issued by the PSC in accordance with Article 61B and 58 (1) of the Constitution. It is important to follow them in all matters pertaining to public officers. Failure to do so will result in a violation of Article 12 (1) of the Constitution.

The decision to transfer the Petitioner by P21 was made based on an internal audit report that was prepared without recording a statement from the Petitioner. Moreover, the Secretary of the Ministry of Education has failed to comply with PSC Rule 221. The Petitioner was not made aware of the reasons for her transfer. The PSC Rules recognise three different categories of exigencies of service, so merely stating that it was on exigencies of service is not sufficient.

Based on the foregoing reasons, I hold that the Secretary, Ministry of Education has violated the Petitioner's fundamental right under Article 12 (1) by issuing P21. I award her a sum of Rs. 1,00,000/= as compensation payable by the State, and a sum of Rs. 50,000 as costs also payable by the State.

Both of these sums should be paid to the Petitioner within one month of the judgment.

ORDER

Aluwihare PC. J

Proceedings in this matter were terminated initially on 20th May 2015. Subsequently, after consideration of several motions filed by the parties, proceedings were terminated for the second time on 13th November 2019 before a bench that comprised Justice Prasanna Jayawardena PC. The minutes of this Court of that date however could not be finalised in view of the untimely passing away of Hon. Justice Prasanna Jayawardena, PC. Subsequently however proceedings were terminated for the second time on 19th June 2020. Nevertheless, this Court, thereafter, entertained several motions filed by the parties.

The investor ZRA was selected after a long-drawn process in identifying a suitable investor. Along with the assistance of the Central Bank of Sri Lanka, the services of KPMG, the Chartered Accountancy firm was obtained to evaluate and ascertain the suitability of the prospective investors who expressed interest in taking over the 5th and 6th Respondent companies [Finance and Guarantee Property Developers (private) Limited] and [Finance and Guarantee Real Estate Company Limited], respectively. The main objective of this strategy adopted was to facilitate the repayment of the depositors who had invested monies with the said Respondent companies. Accordingly, it was expected that all parties concerned would, cooperate in the implementation of the Investor Agreement. This Court notes with dismay, that the parties and the stakeholders have failed to implement the Investor Agreement although three years have lapsed since the termination of the proceedings.

This Court considered a number of motions filed by several parties, some urging the Court to vary or annul the Investor Agreement on the basis that the property values have increased over time and the depositors can be paid in full, instead of 51% [in respect of FGPDL] and 61% [in respect of FGRECL] of the value of the deposits, as per the Investor Agreement. The Court, however, notes that as per Clause 3(m) of the said agreement, the depositors are eligible to subscribe to non-voting shares at issue price of Rupees Ten [Rs.10] in the respective companies to the extent of the value of the remainder of the deposit amount outstanding, that is after the payment of 51% and 61% of the deposits as referred to above.

It would be reasonable to infer that, if the value of the assets as asserted by several respondents had increased, the depositors would stand to benefit from it as the value of the share price also may go up corresponding to the increase in the asset values.

As such this Court is not inclined to make any variation to the Investor Agreement dated 30th April 2021.

The Court having considered the motions and the submissions made on behalf of the several parties, it appears that, the [Court appointed] Board of Directors of both the 5th and the 6th Respondent companies have not taken any meaningful steps to implement and give effect to the Investor agreement which was expected of them. This Court is also of the view that several steps are required to be taken by the respective Boards of the 5th and 6th Respondent Companies to give effect to the same.

In the circumstances the Court makes order as follows;

(1) Board of Directors of the 5th Respondent Company and the Company secretary is hereby directed by this Court to furnish to the Registrar of Companies the Notice of the Special Resolution passed at the extra Ordinary General Meeting of the shareholders of the 5th Respondent company on the 2nd November 2021, in compliance with the provisions of the Companies Act, on or before 11th August 2023.

(2) Board of Directors of the 6th Respondent Company and the Company Secretary is hereby directed to take steps in order to hold an Extra Ordinary General meeting of the 6th Respondent Company with a view to amend the Memorandum and the Articles of Association of the 6th Respondent Company, on or before 11th August 2023.

(3) The Extraordinary General Meeting should be held within the time prescribed in the Articles of Association, with the resolve of rescinding the Articles relating to the authorised Capital of the 6th Respondent Company as reflected in its Memorandum and the Articles of Association.

(4) Upon passing of such Special Resolution at the Extra Ordinary General meeting [Hereinafter the EGM] as referred to in paragraph (3) above, Board of Directors of the 6th Respondent Company and the Company Secretary are directed to give notice of the Special Resolution passed, to the Registrar of Companies in terms of the provisions of the Companies Act, within one week of the holding of the EGM.

(5) To give effect to Clause 1.1 of the Investor Agreement dated 30th April 2021, Board of Directors of the 5th Respondent Company and the Company Secretary are hereby directed to pass a Board Resolution, to issue Two Billion Five Hundred Million voting shares in favour of the investor ZRA Holdings (Pvt) Ltd. This step must be taken in compliance with the provisions of the Companies Act and at the earliest possible date as permitted by the Articles of Association of the 5th Respondent Company.

(6) To give effect to Clause 1.1 of the Investor Agreement dated 30th April 2021, Board of Directors of the 6th Respondent Company and the Company Secretary are hereby directed to pass a Board Resolution, to issue Two Billion five hundred Million voting shares in favour of the investor ZRA Holdings (Pvt) Ltd. This step must be taken in compliance with the provisions of the Companies Act and at the earliest possible date as permitted by the Articles of Association of the 6th Respondent Company.

(7) Within two weeks of the passing of the resolution referred to in paragraph (5) above, on a date agreed by the parties, the investor [ZRA Holdings Private Limited] must handover a Bank Draft to the value of Rupees Two Hundred and Fifty million [Rs.250,000,000/-] to the Board of Directors of the 5th Respondent company and the said directors in turn must hand over the certificates relating to Two Billion five hundred million voting shares to the investor [ZRA Holdings Private Limited].

(8) Within two weeks of the passing of the resolution referred to in paragraph (6) above, on a date agreed by the parties, the investor [ZRA Holdings Private Limited] must handover a Bank Draft to the value of Rupees Two Hundred and Fifty million [Rs. 250,000,000/-] to the Board of Directors of the 6th Respondent company and the said directors in turn must hand over the certificates relating to Two Billion five hundred million voting shares to the investor [ZRA Holdings Private Limited].

(9) Immediately after compliance with paragraphs (7) and (8) above, the present Directors of both the 5th and 6th Respondent companies must resign and facilitate the Investor to appoint three Directors, nominated by the Investor.

(10) The Company Secretary of the 5th Respondent Companies is directed submit all necessary Forms/documents to the Registrar of Companies in compliance with the Companies Act within the prescribed time, after the changes to the 5th Respondent Company is effected as spelt out in the preceding paragraphs.

(11) The Company Secretary of the 6th Respondent Company is directed submit all necessary Forms/documents to the Registrar of Companies in compliance with the Companies Act within the prescribed time, after the changes to the 6th Respondent Company are effected, as spelt out in the preceding paragraphs.

(12) Within three months, upon completion of the steps referred in the preceding paragraphs, the Investor [ZRA Holdings Private Limited], is directed to file by way of a motion, a complete list of Depositors [outstanding] in both the 5th and 6th Respondent companies depicting the amounts that each depositor would be entitled to as per the payment plan. [Compliance with Clause 3(m) of the Investor Agreement].

(13) The present Directors of both the 5th and 6th Respondent companies are required to cooperate fully and should ensure that the directions given by this Court, enumerated above are complied with.

Decided on: 12th January, 2023

Yasantha Kodagoda, PC, J

This judgment relates to an Application filed by the Petitioners in terms of Articles 17 and 126 of the Constitution. Following the Application being supported for the grant of leave to proceed, the Supreme Court has granted leave in terms of Article 12(1) of the Constitution.

Case for the Petitioner

All the Petitioners are residents of the Salawa area in Kosgama. At the time of the incident referred to in this judgment, they had engaged in various businesses and vocations, and their business establishments and places of work were also located in the same area.

In 1994, the Sri Lanka Army established an Army camp at the site of the former State Timber Corporation in Salawa, located adjacent the Colombo – Avissawella main road, in Kosgama. Within the army camp was one of the main armories of the Sri Lanka Army. On the night of 5th June 2016, an explosion occurred within the army camp (not suspected of having been intentionally caused), which resulted in the entirety of the armory catching fire and a series of dangerous and huge explosions occurring. Projectiles (some of which were parts of explosives) from within the camp flew out, resulting in a large number of houses and business establishments in the area of Salawa catching fire and getting fully or partly destroyed. The entire armory was destroyed.

The Petitioners and other inhabitants of the area who lived within a 3 km radius were initially evacuated from the area and temporarily located for several weeks. After several weeks, they were permitted to return to their premises. In addition to the Petitioners, approximately 250 other families were also affected by this explosion and the ensuing fires.

Based on the degree of damage caused, those who could not live in their houses, were provided money to rent-out alternate housing. After some time, the police recorded statements of the Petitioners and others whose properties and business were affected.

The Petitioners have presented to this Court details of damage caused to their dwellings, personal belongings, business premises and to their cultivation and livestock.

The Petitioners have stated that the Cabinet of Ministers took certain decisions regarding this matter and thereby authorized the granting of relief to the victims of the explosion and fire, which included the Petitioners. The Cabinet of Ministers had also allocated funds for the payment of compensation. A committee chaired by Dr. S. Amalanadan, an Additional Secretary to the Ministry of Disaster Management had been established to assess and determine compensation payable to the affected persons. The 1st, 19th, 20th and 21st Petitioners were members of the committee.

Meanwhile, as part of the scheme put in place by the government, from about 15th June 2016, officers of the Valuation Department visited the area, inspected affected sites and engaged in a process of assessing the losses and damages suffered by the affected families. Though not the subject matter of this Application, the Petitioners have alleged that the losses suffered by them were not properly assessed by these officials. Officers of the Sri Lanka Army have also engaged in a process of assessing the damage suffered by the residents of the area. Some of the residential properties which had been partially damaged had been repaired by members of the armed forces and returned to their respective former occupants. However, the Petitioners claim that their business premises were not repaired. The Petitioners have also received monetary compensation from the government. However, they allege that in comparison with the loss to their property and businesses, the compensation so received was grossly inadequate. The Petitioners claim that they did not receive any compensation for loss of income from their business activities for the period following the incident. Once again, this aspect is also not the subject matter of this Application.

Meetings of the above-mentioned committee had been held on 15th, 22nd and 29th July 2016. The 12th Respondent – K.C. Niroshan, Additional Divisional Secretary who was also a member of the committee had openly showed his displeasure towards the Chairman of the committee. The Petitioners claim that the 12th Respondent 'scuttled' progress being achieved by this committee, as he disliked being subordinate to the Chairman Dr. Amalanadan. When the Petitioners who were members of the committee requested the 12th Respondent to convene meetings of the committee so that progress could be made with regard to payment of compensation, the 12th Respondent is alleged to have told them that he cannot work subordinate to Dr. Amalanadan, referring to him in a derogatory term.

Once compensation payable to the affected persons had been computed, those amounts were notified to them and those dissatisfied had presented administrative appeals. Sequel thereto, some amounts had been increased. The Petitioners have presented to this Court details of compensation they received and reasons as to why they claim that the amounts given by the government is insufficient. Further appeals presented by the Petitioners to higher authorities have not yielded a positive outcome.

In view of the foregoing, on or about 6th September 2016 the 1st Petitioner acting on behalf of the Petitioners has presented a complaint in this regard to the Human Rights Commission of Sri Lanka (hereinafter sometimes referred to as 'the HRCSL' and sometimes as 'the Commission') seeking the following reliefs:

(i) Cause a re-assessment of the damages caused to movable properties of those who are disputing the original assessment carried out by government authorities.
(ii) Cause a declaration to be issued disclosing the criteria applied for the assessment of damages to movable and immovable properties.
(iii) Cause a direction that the amount expended by the Army to carryout temporary repairs not be deducted from compensation payable.
(iv) Cause the grant of relief to businessmen and others whose livelihoods have been affected until their businesses / livelihoods are revived.
(v) Cause the grant of compensation for damages and destruction caused to agricultural lands, farms and vehicles.

On 29th December 2016, the HRCSL conducted an inquiry into the complaints. The 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 5th, 6th, and 11th, Respondents were represented at the inquiry. On 23rd January 2017 and 29th March 2007 further sessions of inquiry were held. At the end of the proceedings of 29th March 2017, the Commission observed the need for the following:

(i) A proper assessment of the damage caused to all property, with the participation of officers who have technical expertise;
(ii) Determine the compensation payable for loss of money, jewellery and misplacement of property;

(iii) Provide relief or concessions with regard to inability on the part of the Petitioners to pay for goods purchased and loans obtained;
(iv) Establishment of a fair procedure to consider objections and appeals submitted in respect of assessment of compensation.

On 3rd May 2017, the Commission announced the following 'interim recommendation' ("P19"). The Petitioners state that the 1st to 3rd, 5th, 6th and 11th Respondents expressed agreement with these interim recommendations.

(i) Establishment of an Appeals Committee comprising of the Respondents.
(ii) Preparation of a template to obtain information regarding damages caused to property and distribute such forms.
(iii) Provide fresh opportunity for dissatisfied parties to present appeals.
(iv) Collect information pertaining to damage within 14 days of the distribution of the above-mentioned forms.
(v) Prepare assessments in respect of every application.
(vi) Report to the HRCSL regarding the reason for the staying of the monthly interim payment of Rs. 50,000/=.
(vii) Look into the welfare of children.

In terms of this 'interim recommendation' made by the HRCSL, the Respondents were required to submit a report to the HRCSL before 5th June 2017. They were required to provide information regarding the status of implementation of the recommendations. The Petitioners claim that the Respondents did not take any steps to implement the recommendations of the HRCSL and did not submit a Report to the HRCSL. In the circumstances, by letter dated 30th June 2017, the Commission called upon the Chief Assessor to inform the HRCSL by 14th July 2017 regarding steps taken to implement the recommendations of the HRCSL. Subsequently, the HRCSL called upon both the Petitioners and the Respondents for a further inquiry to be held on 23rd August 2017. On that date, only a nominee of the 2nd Respondent attended the inquiry. He notified the HRCSL that the Ministry of Disaster Management was not prepared to establish the mechanism recommended by the HRCSL. He has further stated that the said Ministry is of the view that reliefs have been adequately provided to the Petitioners.

In view of the foregoing, the Petitioners claim that the Respondents have failed to give effect to the interim recommendations of the HRCSL. The Petitioners further claim that the Respondents have no valid reason to refuse to comply with the recommendations made by the HRCSL. In the circumstances, the Petitioners claim that the failure and refusal on the part of the Respondents to implement the interim recommendations made by the HRCSL is an infringement of the Fundamental Rights of the Petitioners guaranteed under Article 12(1) of the Constitution.

Case for the Respondents

The case for the Respondents was presented by the 2nd Respondent – Secretary to the Ministry of Disaster Management.

The position of the Respondents is that sequel to the explosion and fire referred to in the Petition, a mechanism was developed to assess the damage caused to residents of the affected area, and in terms of that mechanism, following the police having recorded the statements of those affected, officers of the valuation department visited the area, examined affected premises and engaged in a valuation. As an interim measure, all affected persons were given an interim allowance of Rs. 50,000/= per month for a period of 3 months, for temporary accommodation. An allowance of Rs. 50,000/= per month had been paid due to loss of monthly income and Rs. 10,000/= per month had been paid to workers of damaged business premises and owners of damaged three-wheelers. All the affected houses were repaired by members of the Sri Lanka Army. Thereafter, in terms of certain decisions taken by the Cabinet of Ministers, compensation had been granted to those affected by the incident.

The 2nd Respondent presented to this Court detailed information regarding compensation awarded to the Petitioners. The 2nd Respondent has denied the allegation that the compensation granted was grossly inadequate. His position is that the government made maximum effort to compensate the victims by rebuilding the affected premises and establishing a mechanism for valuation of damages and payment of compensation. Those who were dissatisfied with the award of compensation were provided an opportunity of presenting an appeal.

According to the 2nd Respondent, following the HRCSL having made certain interim recommendations on 3rd May 2017, the then Secretary to the Ministry of Disaster Management had by letter dated 31st August 2017 (R1) written to the HRCSL explaining why in accordance with the interim recommendation made by the HRCSL, a separate mechanism was not established afresh to consider the grievances of the Petitioners and the others affected by the incident.

The position advanced by the 2nd Respondent is that two opportunities were given to the Petitioners to present appeals against valuation of damage and losses caused and regarding the compensation granted.

The concluding position of the 2nd Respondent is that in view of the mechanism established by the State to assess the damage, and award compensation to affected persons and the award of interim relief and compensation, the interim recommendations made by the HRCSL became redundant.

According to the 2nd Respondent, even as at 16th October 2018, the inquiry regarding this matter before the HRCSL was pending and no final determination had been made by it. Further, no action has been taken by the HRCSL regarding the alleged non-compliance of the interim recommendations made by the HRCSL.

Submissions made on behalf of the Petitioners

The primary submission made by learned counsel for the Petitioners was that there was a failure and refusal on the part of the Respondents to comply with the 'interim recommendation' made by the HRCSL that a mechanism (as recommended by the HRCSL) be put in place and implemented for the purpose of assessing / re-assessing the damage and losses caused to the Petitioners and the other inhabitants of the area and awarding compensation based upon acceptable criteria. It was submitted that such failure and refusal was arbitrary.

Learned counsel drew the attention of this Court to section 10(b) of the Human Rights Commission of Sri Lanka Act (hereinafter sometimes referred to as 'the Act') and submitted that the Commission has been empowered to inquire into and investigate complaints pertaining to infringement of fundamental rights and to provide resolution thereof by conciliation and mediation. He submitted that the interim recommendations which the Commission made were 'with the agreement of the 1st to 9th Respondents'. He submitted that the Act does not state that a recommendation made by the Commission is not binding. Therefore, he submitted that there was an obligation in law for the Respondents to comply with the recommendations made. Citing the case of Sri Lanka Telecom Ltd. v. Human Rights Commission of Sri Lanka*, [SC Appeal No. 215/12, SC Minutes 1st March 2017]* learned Counsel submitted that the Supreme Court has held that a recommendation made by the HRCSL can be judicially reviewed in the exercise of the writ jurisdiction. Citing an excerpt from the judgment, he submitted that the Supreme Court had rejected the notion that as a decision of the Commission was a mere recommendation which could not be enforced, and that nothing could be done in an instance where a recommendation is not implemented.

Learned counsel for the Petitioners submitted that if officers of the state are permitted not to implement recommendations made by the HRCSL, the entire purpose for which the Commission has been established will be rendered nugatory and futile.

In view of the foregoing, learned counsel for the Petitioners submitted that this Court should determine that the refusal on the part of the Respondents to carry-out the interim recommendations of the Human Rights Commission of Sri Lanka was an infringement of the fundamental rights of the Petitioners.

Learned counsel for the Petitioners further submitted that if a state official does not comply with a recommendation made by the HRCSL, the Commission may acting in terms of section 15(8) of the Act present to the President a full report on the matter to be placed before the Parliament. He stressed that a public authority should not be permitted to arbitrarily refuse to give effect to a recommendation made by the HRCSL, taking up the position that a recommendation of the HRCSL is not binding.

Submissions made on behalf of the Respondents

Learned Senior Deputy Solicitor General submitted that the legal issue presented to this Court was unique, in that there was no judicial precedent on the questions (i) whether the state was legally obliged to give effect to a recommendation made by the Human Rights Commission of Sri Lanka, and (ii) whether non-implementation of a recommendation made by the HRCSL amounted to an infringement of a fundamental right. He submitted that the failure or refusal of the Respondents to implement the 'interim recommendations' made by the HRCSL sequel to a complaint inquired into by the Commission does not give rise to an infringement of a fundamental right of the complainant. He further submitted that the HRCSL Act contains a specific mechanism to deal with a possible failure or refusal to carry-out such recommendation. In terms of section 15(8) of the HRCSL Act, the HRCSL may prepare and submit a report on the matter to the President who is required to cause such report to be placed before Parliament. Learned Senior DSG submitted that the report of the Commission being submitted to the President and subsequently placing it before the Parliament is to enable policy or administrative action to be taken as regards the impugned conduct and for the head of the Executive (the President) and for the legislature (Parliament) to consider 'a deviation in policy or action being taken, if deemed appropriate'.

Responding to the primary allegation made by the Petitioners against the Respondents, learned Senior Deputy Solicitor General for the Respondents submitted that by letter dated 31st August 2017 ("R1"), the 2nd Respondent had explained to the Commission reasons as to why the interim recommendations of the Commission could not be given effect to. The Commission had thereafter not made any further decisions or recommendations, and thus, the matter complained of remains 'within the jurisdiction of the Commission for a final decision'. Thus, as the matter is still before the HRCSL, the Petitioners cannot complain of an infringement of their fundamental rights. He also submitted that the refusal on the part of the Respondents to implement the interim recommendations of the HRCSL was reasonable and certainly not arbitrary and therefore it cannot be alleged that the Respondents had infringed the fundamental rights of the Petitioners.

Learned Senior DSG further submitted that as revealed in "R1", (i) two rounds of assessments had been carried out by state officials of damaged and destroyed property, (ii) wide publicity had been given to enable dissatisfied persons to present appeals in respect of assessments carried out, (iii) appeals had been accepted even though some appeals had been presented out of time, (iv) Rs. 50,000/= interim allowance had been given to affected persons till such time the Army reconstructed their damaged dwellings and other places affected, (v) the payment of the interim allowance had been terminated only after the affected persons were resettled, and (vi) needs of affected school children were fulfilled. In the circumstances, he submitted that carrying out the interim recommendations made by the HRCSL was made redundant. He pointed out further that, as revealed in "R11" the 30 Petitioners have been adequately compensated, with the highest amount being Rs. 30 million being paid to the 21st Petitioner.

Concluding his submission, learned Senior DSG submitted that it appears that the HRCSL not having taken any action following the receipt of "R1" reveals that the Commission was satisfied with the action taken by the Respondents. He submitted that the Commission had not taken any action under section 15(8) of the HRCSL Act, since it was content that meaningful action had been taken by the Respondents and hence no further action was necessary. In view of the foregoing submissions, learned Senior DSG submitted that the Respondents had not infringed the fundamental rights of the Petitioners and therefore urged that this Application be dismissed.

Consideration of material placed before Court, submissions made by Counsel and conclusions reached

A consideration of the material placed before this Court and the submissions made by learned counsel for the Petitioners and the Respondents reveal clearly that the ground of complaint before this Court is that the Respondents have failed to give effect to and implement certain recommendations made by the Human Rights Commission of Sri Lanka referred to in these proceedings as 'interim recommendations'. The contention of the Petitioners was that the non-implementation of these recommendations was arbitrary and unreasonable, and that such conduct on the part of one or more Respondents amounted to an infringement of the fundamental right to equal protection of the law, guaranteed under Article 12(1) of the Constitution.

For the purpose of clarity, it must be noted that in the present Application, the Petitioners do not allege that their fundamental rights were infringed by the government by non-payment or insufficient payment of compensation. What they allege is that the non-implementation of the interim recommendations made by the Commission by officials of the government, amounts to an infringement of their fundamental right to equal protection of the law guaranteed by Article 12(1) of the Constitution.

In view of the foregoing circumstances, it is necessary to consider whether the Respondents are 'guilty' of what has been alleged by the Petitioners, namely unreasonable and arbitrary non-implementation of the interim recommendations made by the HRCSL. However, prior to considering that aspect of the case, it is my view that a survey and examination of certain provisions of the HRCSL Act would be useful for the purpose of appreciating the 'determination of the truth' and 'dispute resolution function' of the HRCSL and the legal significance of 'recommendations' of the Commission connected with these functions.

The centerpiece so to say of the legislative infrastructure and the ensuing system created by the Human Rights Commission of Sri Lanka Act, No. 21 of 1996 (hereinafter referred to as 'the Act') towards the promotion and protection of fundamental rights, is an institution created by the Act called the "Human Rights Commission of Sri Lanka" (HRCSL), a body corporate, consisting of five members having knowledge of or practical experience in matters relating to human rights, and appointed by the President on the recommendation of the Constitutional Council. It is evident that the HRCSL Act has been enacted (a) for the promotion and protection of fundamental rights, (b) to advise and assist the government on the manner in which fundamental rights may be promoted and protected by legislative and administrative means, (c) provide for the ascertainment of truth, and for dispute resolution with regard to alleged infringement or imminent infringement of fundamental rights, (d) to facilitate compliance with international norms and standards relating to human rights, and (e) to create awareness regarding human rights. The Human Rights Commission of Sri Lanka is a 'national human rights institution' (generally referred to as a "NHRI") and is called upon to perform vital and critically important functions aimed at the promotion and protection of Human Rights.

The creation of an independent, para-judicial or administrative state (nevertheless independent) institution statutorily empowered to engage in investigation and inquiry, ascertainment of the truth, possessing authority to engage in dispute resolution pertaining to infringement of human rights, and for the performance of a multitude of other functions aimed at the promotion and protection of human rights, is a globally recognized, critically important norm. An independent, competent and effective national human rights institution is a cornerstone of a country's mechanism for the promotion and protection of human rights. In Sri Lanka's context, it is aimed at subordinately augmenting the role of the Supreme Court in the area of disputes arising out of alleged infringement / imminent infringement of fundamental rights.

Needless, I assume to emphasize, when a dispute exists pertaining to the infringement or imminent infringement of a fundamental right and a complaint is made to the Commission, engaging in truth-seeking through mechanisms such as investigation and inquiry, thereby ascertaining the truth, causing the dispute to be resolved, and awarding relief to the affected person, is only one function of the Commission. The investigative, inquisitorial and dispute resolution mechanisms provided for in the Act are subordinate and alternate to the Constitutional mechanism created by Article 17 read with Article 126 of the Constitution for the protection of fundamental rights through judicial adjudication of disputes pertaining to the infringement and imminent infringement of fundamental rights. A careful consideration of the provisions of the Act clearly reveals that the HRCSL has not been created to make inroads towards the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. Nor has the Commission been established to create a parallel system for judicial or quasi-judicial adjudication of disputes.

Nevertheless, it must be appreciated that the investigational, inquisitorial and dispute resolution mechanisms created by the HRCSL Act is aimed at inter-alia providing the public a mechanism to which they may have convenient and expeditious access for the resolution of disputes arising out of the alleged infringement of their fundamental rights and to obtain relief, without having to access the Constitutional mechanism by invoking the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. In the circumstances, for the purpose of having fundamental rights related disputes resolved and to obtain relief, if they choose to, the public need not go through what is now observable as being a cumbersome, complicated, time-consuming and possibly expensive method of judicial adjudication of disputes.

A consideration of the HRCSL Act amply reveals that the Act had been enacted with the noble objectives of inter-alia promoting and protecting fundamental rights and to provide people with an alternate and convenient route to have disputes resolved and to secure relief. I repeat, while emphasizing that the purpose for which the Human Rights Commission of Sri Lanka has been established by the Act is manifold, ascertainment of the truth and dispute resolution pertaining to alleged infringement and imminent infringement of fundamental rights is only one such purpose. I observe that if the system for dispute resolution of the Commission works efficaciously, it will, while providing relief to the public, also serve the invaluable purpose of lessening the burden on the Supreme Court. Such reduction of the inflow of fresh fundamental rights Applications will contribute towards making the justice delivery system more efficient. However, I must state that the efficacy of the system created by the HRCSL Act, is a different matter altogether.

In terms of section 10 of the HRCSL Act, the functions of the Commission include – the duty to inquire into and investigate complaints regarding infringement or imminent infringement of fundamental rights, and in accordance with the provisions of the Act provide for resolution thereof by conciliation and mediation. For the purpose of giving effect to the functions of the Commission, section 11 of the HRCSL Act has conferred on the Commission certain powers. Those powers include the power to investigate any infringement or imminent infringement of fundamental rights in accordance with the provisions of the Act. Section 14 of the Act provides (a) the manner in which the Commission may take cognizance of an alleged infringement or imminent infringement of a fundamental right (on its own motion or on a complaint made to it), (b) who may present a complaint (an aggrieved party, aggrieved group of persons, or a person acting on behalf of an aggrieved person or a group of persons), (c) what type of matter the Commission may investigate into and limitations thereto [allegations of the infringement or imminent infringement of a fundamental right caused (i) by executive or administrative action or (ii) as a result of an act which constitutes an action under the Prevention of Terrorism Act committed by any person]. Section 18 confers on the Commission powers to enable it to conduct an inquiry, including the power to summon persons to testify, examine witnesses, record their evidence under oath or affirmation, and to procure documents.

According to section 15(2) of the HRCSL Act, where an investigation conducted by the Commission under section 14 discloses the infringement or imminent infringement of a fundamental right, the Commission shall have the power to refer the matter, where appropriate, for mediation or conciliation. Under section 15(3) of the HRCSL Act, in the following situations, namely (i) where it appears to the Commission that it is not appropriate to refer the matter for conciliation or mediation, or (ii) where it appears to the Commission that it is appropriate to refer the matter for conciliation or mediation, or (iii) where it appears to the Commission that it is appropriate to refer the matter for conciliation or mediation, but all of any of the parties object or objects to conciliation or mediation, or (iv) where the attempt at conciliation or mediation is not successful, the Commission may –

(a) recommend to the appropriate authorities, that prosecution or other proceedings be instituted against the person or persons infringing such fundamental rights,

(b) refer the matter to any court having jurisdiction to hear and determine such matter in accordance with the rules of court as may be prescribed therefor, and within such time as is provided for invoking the jurisdiction of such court by any person, or

(c) make such recommendations as it may think fit, to the appropriate authority or person or persons concerned, with a view to preventing or remedying such infringement or the continuation of such infringement.

It would thus be seen that upon the receipt of a complaint alleging infringement or imminent infringement of a fundamental right, the Commission shall in terms of section 10 paragraph (b) of the Act, investigate and inquire into the incident said to have given rise to the alleged infringement. When one considers section 15(5), it is evident that during the inquiry, the principles of audi alteram partem should necessarily be adhered to by the Commission. Where the investigation and inquiry reveal an infringement or imminent infringement of a fundamental right, in terms of sections 14 and 15(3) of the Act, the Commission has been vested with a degree of discretionary authority (following a consideration of the findings of such investigation and inquiry) to refer the matter for mediation or conciliation of the dispute for the purpose of resolution of the dispute.

Notwithstanding the method of dispute resolution resorted to or attempted (may it be mediation or conciliation) the Commission may at its discretion where it deems doing so to be appropriate, make a recommendation aimed at the resolution of the dispute. That is primarily for the purpose of affording relief to the person whose fundamental rights have been infringed. The voluntary character of mediation and conciliation as dispute resolution mechanisms has been recognized by the Act, as section 15(3) indicates the possibility of a disputant party to object to participate in mediation or conciliation.

In terms of section 16(5), where mediation or conciliation is successful in resolving the dispute, the mediator or conciliator shall report to the Commission the outcome including the settlement arrived at. Section 16(6) provides that where settlement has been arrived at through mediation or conciliation, the Commission shall make such directions (including directions as to the payment of compensation) as may be necessary to give effect to the settlement reached.

Section 15(3) provides that the Commission has been empowered to make a recommendation (i) notwithstanding the outcome of mediation or conciliation, and (ii) even in instances where mediation or conciliation has not taken place either because the Commission has deemed that engaging in such process is inappropriate, or one or both parties have declined to participate in mediation or conciliation, or the attempt at dispute resolution through mediation or conciliation has not been successful. However, it is evident from the scheme of the Act that the Commission may make a recommendation only after conducting an investigation and inquiry. The Act does not specifically provide for the Commission to make an 'interim recommendation'. However, taking into consideration the objects and purposes for which the Parliament has enacted Act No. 21 of 1996 and thereby established the Human Rights Commission of Sri Lanka, I find nothing contrary to law for the Commission in appropriate circumstances (following an investigation and inquiry conducted and a finding being arrived at that a fundamental right has been infringed or is imminently likely that a fundamental right will be infringed), making appropriate 'interim' recommendations.

In the instant case, an examination of the positions taken up by the Petitioners and the Respondents and the material placed before this Court, it is evident that by letter dated 6th September 2016 ("P15") the Petitioners have presented a complaint to the HRCSL regarding the insufficiency of the relief granted by the government in respect of the losses and damage suffered by them arising out of the explosion and fire that occurred at the Salawa Army camp on 05.06.2016. On 29.12.2016, 23.01.2017 and 29.03.2017 an 'inquiry' into this complaint had been conducted by the HRCSL. That has been with the participation of the related Respondents. One can reasonably assume (and such position was not disputed by the parties) that associated with the inquiry, the Commission would have conducted an 'investigation' into the complaint, as well.

Following the inquiry, whether the Commission attempted to resolve the dispute between the Petitioners and the Respondents through mediation or conciliation, is not clear. Neither party has taken up a specific position in that regard. However, according to the Petitioners, at the end of the inquiry held on 29.03.2017, the HRCSL made certain interim recommendations (which the Commission was entitled to) and they were read over by the Chairperson of the Commission. ("P19") The Petitioners claim that the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 5th, 6th and 11th Respondents who were present, 'agreed' with these interim recommendations. These recommendations were aimed at causing the establishment of a mechanism to provide relief to the Petitioners. An examination of "P19"reveals that agreement was reached between the complainants (Petitioners) and the Respondents regarding the said interim recommendations.

Though the Petitioners claim that the Respondents did not take steps to implement the interim recommendations of the HRCSL and did not submit a Report to the HRCSL, this position is contested by the Respondents. Their position is that in terms of the several Cabinet decisions, government officials continued with the payment of compensation and granting of other relief.

By letter dated 30th June 2017, the Commission has inquired from the Chief Valuer of the government (11th Respondent) regarding steps taken to implement the interim recommendations. Subsequently, on 23rd August 2017, a further session of inquiry had been conducted by the HRCSL. On that date, a nominee of the 2nd Respondent had informed the HRCSL regarding steps taken and details of compensation paid and other reliefs granted to those affected, and in the circumstances had stated that the Ministry of Disaster Management was not prepared to establish a new mechanism as recommended by the HRCSL.

According to the 2nd Respondent, by letter dated 31.08.2017 ("R1") addressed to the Commission, the Respondents have explained in detail action taken for the assessment of the damage and the payment of compensation and had accordingly explained that it would not be necessary to commence a fresh process aimed at re-appraisal of damage and losses and payment of compensation. Basically, the position of the Respondents is that the need to implement the 'interim recommendations' made by the Commission does not arise. That is due to substantial action having been taken by government authorities to provide for an effective mechanism to assess and determine losses and damage caused to the Petitioners, to determine compensation to be awarded and for the payment of compensation and awarding of relief.

The Respondents have also placed before this Court details of compensation and interim relief granted to the Petitioners. An examination of the material placed before this Court by the Respondents reveal that in fact the relevant authorities of the government have discharged their duties towards inhabitants of the area affected by the explosion and fire by awarding substantial compensation and interim payments. Whether the relief so granted was reasonable and adequate is not the subject matter of this Application.

In view of the foregoing, the allegation made by the Petitioners against the Respondents that they unreasonably and arbitrarily refrained from giving effect to the 'interim recommendations' made by the Commission is in the opinion of this Court, ill-founded. Available material indicates that, as the government on its own volition had provided adequate relief to the Petitioners and others affected by the incident that took place in Salawa on the night of 05.06.2016, the need did not arise from the point of view of the Respondents to give effect to the interim recommendations made by the Commission.

It is also to be noted that upon the receipt of "R1", the Commission does not seem to have resumed its inquiry. In fact, following the receipt of "R1", the Commission seems to have satisfied itself that action taken by the Respondents sufficiently addressed the interim recommendations made by it. The Petitioners have not complained to this Court regarding the non-resumption of the inquiry by the HRCSL. The inference this Court can reasonably reach, is that upon a consideration of "R1", the Commission determined that as the Petitioners have been adequately compensated, no further inquiry was necessary.

In fact, in the instant matter, the Commission does not seem to have made a final recommendation in terms of section 15(3) of the Act. That is of course a matter of concern. The scheme of the HRCSL Act necessitates the Commission to arrive at a finding pertaining to each and every complaint it receives, and to do so within a reasonable period of time. Complaints received by the Commission cannot remain in limbo. However, the Petitioners have not complained to this Court regarding that failure on the part of the Commission to discharge its statutory function, and thus a finding in that regard by this Court is not necessary.

The Petitioners have also not complained to the Commission regarding the alleged non-implementation of the interim recommendations made by the Commission. That is a step that was well within the reach of the Petitioners. The inference to be reached is that the Petitioners themselves at that point of time were satisfied regarding the status of the payment of compensation and other relief granted by the Respondents. In the circumstances, the Commission has not been called upon to take steps in terms of section 15(8) of the Act to report the matter to the President, who is required to place such report before Parliament.

In view of the foregoing, I am unable to agree with the position advanced on behalf of the Petitioners that the Respondents had arbitrarily and unreasonably failed to give effect to the interim recommendations made by the Commission. I find myself in complete agreement with the submissions made in that regard by learned Senior Deputy Solicitor General.

As the Commission has not made a recommendation (final recommendation) under section 15(3) of the Act or any other finding in terms of the HRCSL Act, the question as to whether non-implementation of a recommendation made by the Commission under section 15(3) founded upon unreasonableness or arbitrariness on the part of one or more Respondents, is only a moot point. In any event, as stated above, it is the view of this Court that there is no basis in fact or law to conclude that the Respondents have acted in an unreasonable or arbitrary manner.

However, in my opinion, it is necessary to observe that notwithstanding the fact that what the Commission acting in terms of section 15(3) of the Act is empowered to make 'is only a recommendation' (terminology used by the learned Senior DSG) as opposed to a 'an order' or 'a direction', it remains incumbent on the government to give effect to such recommendation. They are called upon to do so in the name and style of good governance and in the spirit of its obligations under the Constitution and international law to promote and protect human and fundamental rights. Should the government find itself in any difficulty in giving effect to or implementing the recommendations made by the Commission, as done by the Respondents in this matter, it must communicate its position to the Commission. In any event, section 15(7) read with section 15(8) of the Act gives rise to the requirement that the persons to whom the recommendation has been addressed to, should within the time period specified in the recommendation report back to the Commission on the status of the implementation of the recommendation. Arbitrary or unreasonable failure to comply with a recommendation made by the Commission, will give rise to legal repercussions (particularly from the perspective of Article 12(1) of the Constitution), which in the circumstances of this matter, need not be discussed in this judgment. It would be pertinent to note that this Court has held in several judgments that arbitrary or unreasonable executive action would under certain circumstances amount to an infringement of Article 12(1).

In view of the foregoing, I hold that the fundamental rights of the Petitioners guaranteed by Article 12(1) of the Constitution have not been infringed by any of the Respondents. Therefore, this Application is dismissed. In the circumstances of this case, no order is made with regard to costs.

As this judgment relates substantially to the functioning of the Human Rights Commission of Sri Lanka and the Commission is not a party to the Application, the Registrar is directed to forward a copy of this judgment to the Chairperson of the Human Rights Commission of Sri Lanka.

K. PRIYANTHA FERNANDO, J

1. This application stems from the bus accident, also known as the, "Passara Bus Accident", which claimed the lives of 14 passengers, while leaving 35 individuals injured. The petitioners' claim that at the time the bus accident occurred, *Benadict Medon*a and Anthoni Saminoda, the mother and father of the 3rd to 5th petitioners, had also been travelling in the same bus and were unfortunately found among the dead. The 3rd to 5th petitioners are the children of Benedict Medona and Anthoni Saminoda. The 1st and 2nd petitioners are the grandparents of the 3rd to 5th petitioners. The petitioners claim that the most prominent cause for the death of Benadict Medona and Anthoni Saminoda (hereinafter referred to as the "Deceased") were the "actions and/or inactions and/or omissions" on the part of the 03rd to 10th respondents (hereinafter referred to as the "Respondents") and therefore alleged that the fundamental rights of the parents of the petitioners guaranteed under Articles 11, 12(1), 12(2), 14(1)(c), 14(1)(f) and 14(1)(h) of the Constitution has been infringed by the 03rd to 10th respondents.

2. This Court granted leave to proceed under the alleged infringement of Article 12(1) of the Constitution against the 3rd to 9th respondents.

Facts in Brief:

3. On 20.03.2021, at about 6.45 a.m., the private bus bearing No. UP-ND 6448 plying from Lunugala to Colombo with around 60 passengers has gone off the road and fallen into a precipice of about 250 feet near the 13th mile post on the Lunugala-Passara road (A 005).

4. The petitioners state that the road had been partially obstructed due to a boulder which had fallen onto the road due to a landslide which had occurred on

20.11.2020, which was about four months prior to the accident and as a result of which the two-lane road had been narrowed down to a single-lane, thereby no two vehicles could pass on the road at the same time.

5. According to the petitioners, a tipper truck bearing No. LH-9388 had been approaching from the opposite direction towards Lunugala at the double bend which had caused the bus driver to swerve to the edge of the road to make room for the tipper truck. However as a result of this, the front wheel of the bus had slipped off the road causing the bus to fall down the cliff, causing the death of the parents of 3rd to 5th petitioners. The petitioners claim that the edge of the road had been eroded and was landslide prone.

6. The petitioners while admitting that it is the negligence of the bus driver which resulted in the deaths of Benadict Medona and Anthoni Saminoda, likewise submitted that if not for the inactions or omissions of the respondents, this accident would not have happened. Therefore, the petitioners claim that the respondents, who has a prime duty and/or responsibility for the maintenance of the roads and who has a duty to ensure the ultimate safety of the general public of the country are in violation of the rights guaranteed to the petitioner under Article 12(1) of the Constitution.

7. In the further written submissions tendered to this Court by the petitioners, the learned Counsel asserts section 9 of the Road Development Authority Act No.73 of 1981, which provides the powers, duties and functions of the RDA to show how the RDA has a duty to ensure the safety of the public.

8. Additionally, the learned Counsel submitted the preamble to the National Thoroughfares Act No. 40 of 2008 to further illustrate the responsibility owed by the RDA and submitted that in light of the preamble, it is clear that the intention of the legislature is to provide a legal framework to facilitate the maintenance and administration of the road network of the country.

9. The learned Counsel for the petitioners further submitted that according to section 3 of the National Thoroughfares Act, the RDA has exclusive power of implementation and administration of the provisions of the Act. Moreover, the learned Counsel for the petitioners submitted that according to section 5 of the said Act, the 3rd, 5th and 6th respondents are to be responsible for the implementation and administration of the provisions of the said Act.

10. Furthermore, the petitioners also claim that despite having known that the boulder was obstructing the road, the respondents had failed to take steps to clear the road for a duration of four months and therefore they are thoroughly responsible for the death of the deceased.

11. The petitioners claim that the respondents have neither erected a safety fence along the eroded edge of the road, nor have placed any warning signs and/or barriers to warn the road users of the boulder and to alert passengers of the road to be more vigilant.

12. In the further written submissions tendered to this Court, the learned Counsel for the petitioners draws attention of the Court to the cases of Jayanetti v The Land Reform Commission and Others [1984] 2 SLR 172, Azath Salley v Colombo Municipal Council and Others [2009] 1 SLR 365, Everad Anthony Payoe and Others v Hatton Dickoya Urban Council & Others SC FR 654/09 S.C Minute 23.06.2017, and the case of Gamlakshage Sunil Seneviratne v Shelton Gunasekara & Others SC FR Application No. 476/2012 S.C.Minute 13.07.2015 to explain as to how the facts of this case could satisfy to invoke a fundamental rights action.

13. In response to these submissions by the petitioner, the 7th respondent (Chairman of the Road Development Authority) in his affidavit claims that the section of the road where the accident occurred had been handed over to the contractor named AMSK Constructions (Pvt) Ltd (the 11th respondent) which is evident from the letter marked ['R1'], for widening and development under the OFID Funded Project on 31.01.2017 and submits that according to their contractual obligations, the construction company was obligated to look after the overall safety and maintenance of the road.

14. The 7th respondent claims that from September 2020 up until February 2021, there had been severe monsoons in that area, which had resulted in landslides around 45 locations along the same road and admits that on 20.11.2020 a large volume of rocks had fallen onto the site of the accident causing a boulder, soil and debris to block the road. The 7th respondent further claims that, once the Road Development Authority (hereinafter referred to as the "RDA") had been informed about the land slips by the contractor, they had advised the contractor to take immediate action to clear the location. The contractor had started clearing the road once they were advised by the RDA. Although they had been able to clear the debris and the soil to make the road passable, they had been unable to remove the boulder.

15. In furtherance to that, the 7th respondent explains that although advised to remove the boulder immediately, the contractors were not able to remove it as it had been precariously balanced on vulnerable rock surface and due to the rainy weather conditions prevailing in that area. He further states that if removed at that instance, it would have resulted in further more landslides, and would have endangered the houses atop the rock surface. It was submitted on behalf of the 7th respondent that, it was dangerous to remove the boulder by using normal explosives. Therefore, they had several meetings with the experts and finally decided to do a chemical blasting where the risk is minimal.

16. In addition to that, the 7th respondent claims that some of the other slips that had occurred during that time as mentioned above were worse in terms of volume and damage caused to the road when compared to the landslide which had occurred at the site of the accident and therefore, they had to first attend into clearing those areas of the road that were largely affected.

17. In furtherance to that, the 7th respondent claims that the RDA consultant and the officers of RDA have had conducted regular site inspections and several meetings had also been held with the contractors regarding the site and the safety measures which could be taken by the contractors.

18. In answering to the petitioner's claim, the 7th respondent deposed that the contractors have taken the necessary precautions to warn the public. In his affidavit he claims that the contractors have placed yellow tape and poles had also been fixed with illuminating stickers. The 7th respondent further deposed that apart from that, the contractors have also placed "drive slow" road signs at the double bend area. The 7th respondent further submits that iron poles have been erected along the right side of the road, however, the poles were removed by unknown people several times and the contractor had to continuously replace the same. Complaints had been made by the contractors regarding the same to the Passara Police Station.

19. The petitioners have submitted that just two to three days after the accident, the RDA has removed the boulder which had fallen on the road and erected a safety fence along the right edge of the road and pleads the question as to why the respondents could not have done this earlier.

20. In response, the 7th respondent submits that, as mentioned before, they were unable to remove the rock due to safety reasons and due to the prevailing weather conditions in the area. On 19.03.2021, the day before the accident the contractor had commenced drilling the rock for the purpose of chemical blasting which was to happen on the next date (i.e. 20.03.2021). Therefore, the 7th respondent deposed that since the process had already started, the 11th respondent has completed it by a controlled blasting method as instructed by the National Building Research Organization (NBRO).

21. The 7th respondent further submitted that, the driver of the bus, as a person who would be taking the same route daily ought to have been familiar with the terrain and about the fallen rock. The 7th respondent deposed that the RDA had acted according to the law and discharged their duties and has not done anything to erode the public trust as was claimed by the petitioner.

22. In this instance, the learned Counsel for the respondents further contends that the facts of this case does not create a basis for the invocation of the fundamental rights jurisdiction and that this is a matter that should be determined in a trial in the District Court.

Alleged Violation of Article 12(1):

23. Having heard all parties at the hearing, and at the perusal of the petition, objections, and written submissions of parties, I shall now examine as to whether the 3rd to 9th respondents are in violation of Article 12(1) of the Constitution.

24. At the hearing of the case, this Court had the opportunity to watch the video recording submitted by the learned Counsel for the petitioner marked as ['X13(A) to X22(A)'] in open Court. It was seen that the driver of the ill-fated bus, drove the bus at a very high speed on the slope and went out of control upon seeing the tipper truck and swerved towards the precipice. In the event the driver had been more cautious, careful and driving at a controllable speed, he would have been able to stop the bus upon seeing the tipper truck and would have safely passed the boulder without any accident. The bus driver being a person who drives daily on the same route would have been familiar about the road and the boulder.

25. In addition to that, the tipper truck driver also had a responsibility to have stopped his vehicle before the boulder and make way for the oncoming bus as he could have reasonably foreseen that it would be dangerous for both vehicles to pass alongside the boulder at the same time as there was only one operative lane in the road due to the boulder.

26. Nevertheless, in this instance, as mentioned above, it needs to be considered whether there was any action, inaction or omission on the part of the 03rd to 09th respondents as alleged by the petitioners.

27. Article 12(1) of the Constitution provides;

> "All persons are equal before the law and are entitled to the equal protection of the law."

28. Article 12(1) incorporates two distinct principles; the negative concept and the positive concept. His Lordship, Justice Janak De Silva in the case of D. S. Fernando v

Hon. Laxman Kiriella and Others SC/FR/360/2016 S.C. Minute 10.08.2023 stated that;

"…The negative concept is that all individuals are equal before the law and that no one should be treated differently. The positive concept is that all individuals are entitled to equal protection of the law, which requires them to be treated equally in similar circumstances. The negative concept requires the application of the law to everyone. No one is entitled to be treated differently, except where the law recognizes a specific exemption to its application…Any act which contravenes the law will violate the rule of law embedded in Article 12(1)".

29. The RDA being a public authority who carries out administrative actions, is deemed to provide equal protection to individuals and in the event that they are found to have infringed a fundamental right of an individual by way of an administrative action, the individual is able to invoke jurisdiction against the RDA under Article 17 of the Constitution. This is also evident from the case authorities provided by the learned Counsel for the petitioners as mentioned in paragraph 12 above.

30. Section 101 of the Evidence Ordinance No.15 of 1895 provides;

"Whoever desires any court to give judgment as to any legal right or liability dependent on the existence of facts which he asserts, must prove that those facts exist.

When a person is bound to prove the existence of any fact, it is said that the burden of proof lies on that person."

It is for the petitioners to prove that the actions and/or inactions of the respondents violated their rights enshrined under Article 12(1) of the Constitution.

31. As submitted by the learned counsel for the petitioners the publication present on the RDA website, where it provided;

"…it is the responsibility of the RDA to maintain the road network to a reasonable standard so that there would be uninterrupted public transport available to them".

The RDA owes a duty to maintain the roads and to remove any hazards that would obstruct or cause harm to the public who uses the road. This is also evident through the preamble to the National Thorougfares Act No. 40 of 2008 and the Road Development Authority Act No. 73 of 1981 as provided by the learned Counsel for the petitioners.

32. As was stated in the Supreme Court of Canada in the case of Housen v Nikolaisen [2002] 2 S.C.R. 235, a municipality has a duty to keep a roadway in a reasonable state of repair so that the users of the roadway, exercising ordinary care may travel upon it safely. The municipality owes a duty of care to the ordinary driver, not the negligent driver.

33. In this situation, the petitioners allege that the respondents had done nothing to remove the boulder for a period of four months, but had been able to remove it just few days after the accident. Prima facie, this would show that the RDA had breached their duty owed to the public and has not acted with due care and diligence and therefore could be made liable for having knowledge of the possible hazards that could arise due to the fallen rock, and yet not clearing the road.

34. However, when considering the facts and circumstances of this case, it could be seen that the RDA has since the day of the landslides, taken steps to clear the roads with more than 40 landslides. This is evident from the fact that they have initially cleared the soil and debris that had covered the road and also from the fact that they have had several meetings with the 11th respondent contractors and have conducted several inspections as to how they could remove the boulder which was large in volume and which had been lying in a vulnerable position.

35. The explanation provided by the RDA as to why they were unable to remove the boulder at the very instance of the landslide; the fact that a normal blasting of the boulder would have been very risky and if they have removed it during the monsoon season it would have caused a potential threat to the houses that were atop the hill, shows that they have looked into this matter with caution, taking into consideration all the other situations which could arise.

36. It could be seen that although the RDA had not been able to remove the boulder earlier, they had initiated measures to do chemical blasting. Moreover, they had taken necessary precautions to warn the public as submitted by the respondents. This is evident from the fact that they have placed 'drive slow' warning signs at the double-bend, they have also erected poles with illuminating stickers and yellow tape, which can be seen in the photographs marked as ['R9 to R12'] and the video recordings marked as ['X13(A) to X22(A)'].

37. In addition to that, as submitted by the learned Counsel for the respondents, despite warning signs being present or not, the bus driver as someone using the same route daily, ought to have been aware of the boulder which had been present there for the past four months.

Declaration:

38. Therefore, for the foregoing reasons and pertaining to the circumstances of the present case, I hold that the respondents are not in violation of Article 12(1) of the Constitution.

Application dismissed without costs.

WRITTEN SUBMISSIONS: 13th January 2023 for the Petitioners.

DECIDED ON: 31.10.2023.

Judgement

Aluwihare, PC, J,

The Facts

1) The 1st, 2nd and the 3rd Petitioners took up temporary residence at No. 654/1, Balagolla, Kengalle, No. 668/1A, Balagolla, Kengalle and No. 668B, Balagolla, Kengalle respectively between the years 1992 and 1994. They have not relocated to any other residence since then and are currently residing in the same. All of the aforementioned dwellings are situated in State lands belonging to the Victoria Reservoir Project, adjacent to the Reservoir. This fact is admitted and forms the basis of contention for the detailed submissions made by all parties in this case.

2) The Balagolla Division had been initially used for settling persons whose houses were acquired for the purpose of constructing the Victoria Reservoir. The Petitioners are 3, among 55 other Occupants of settlements which were added to the Balagolla settlement area and permitted to reside in the vicinity of the Division. The Petitioners annexed a map titled "Blocking Out Diagram – Pallekalle Estate – Balagolla Division", and this map demarcates the lots allocated to the Petitioners.

3) At various points of time, the Petitioners had made several pleas and requests to the 1st Respondent Authority (hereinafter referred to as the 'Mahaweli Authority) seeking a plot of land to construct permanent housing. In response, the Mahaweli Authority informed the Petitioners by letter dated 30th May 2005 ('P1' in the brief), that they were requested to be present for an inquiry to regularise their residencies.

4) Pursuant to the above letter, a Land Kachcheri had been held on 17th June 2005 and on the same day, lands had been allocated to 298 individuals including the Petitioners. A separate list titled "අනවසර නියමානුකූල කිරීමේ නිදෙර්ශිත නාම ලේඛණය" [Recommended list of unsanctioned dwellings to be Regularised] ('P2' in the brief) was prepared and displayed around the Petitioners' neighbourhood. The list, comprising in total 55 individuals' names had also included the Petitioners' names. Per the list, the Petitioners had been granted the lots they were already in occupation.

5) In 2006, the Petitioners had constructed permanent houses in the lots granted and had made substantive improvements to the lands by obtaining electricity and water lines. The petitioners had also had lands they occupied surveyed in 2007 and the maps issued, with the specific demarcations and extent (20 Perches) of the plots have been produced ('P5(a)-(c)' in the brief). By letters dated April 2007, the Licensed Surveyor informed the Mahaweli Authorities that the survey conducted on the instructions of the Petitioners was completed ('P4' in the brief). Although the Petitioners had thereafter repeatedly inquired from the Respondent Authority regarding the regularisation of lands they occupied, no further steps had been taken by the Authority.

6) On or around the same time, the Petitioners became aware of the regularisation of other lands and residences which were published in P2. The Petitioners claimed to be aware that several officers of the Respondent Mahaweli Authority have taken up residence in lots of the Division. Specifically, the Petitioners claimed that the 2nd Respondent is living in one of those lands, and was, at the time of the application, constructing a large house therein. The petitioners also claimed to be aware that one of the lands in the Division was granted without a Land Kachcheri to a 'Police Constable Costa' who is related to a 'Linton Wijesinghe', a member of the Central Provincial Council.

7) On 23rd July 2008, by way of a letter ('P7'), the Petitioners were informed that;
   - they had been selected for regularisation of their residences;
   - they were required to contract the services of a Licensed Surveyor to survey the lands in order to facilitate an issuance of relevant permits; and
   - that the surveying of the lands had been delayed due to a shortage of surveyors on the part of the Authority.

   The Petitioners then informed the Authority that lands they occupied had already been surveyed.

8) Thereafter, on or around January 2011, an 'Application for Ejectment' had been filed in the Magistrate's Court of Kandy by the 5th Respondent, the Engineer in Charge, under Section 5 of the State Lands (Recovery of Possession) Act, No. 07 of 1979 in respect of the Petitioners. The relevant Case references are as follows;
   - Case No. 35033/11 against the 1st Petitioner
   - Case No. 35028/11 against the 2nd Petitioner
   - Case No. 33069/11 against the 3rd Petitioner

   In June and July 2011, the Magistrate's Court of Kandy issued Orders to eject the 2nd and 3rd Petitioners from their residences and at the time of this application, the 1st Petitioner stated that he bore a reasonable apprehension that an order for ejectment would be issued against him too.

9) On 7th August 2011, the Petitioners filed a petitioner in this Court, alleging the violation of their Fundamental Rights Guaranteed under Articles 12(1) and 14(1)(h) of the Constitution. This Court granted leave to proceed under Article 12(1) on 23rd September 2011 and vide Supreme Court Minutes dated 23.09.2011, cases instituted against the Petitioners were stayed until the determination of this case.

10) During the pendency of proceedings before this Court, the Respondents appraised the Court and the Petitioners of the possibility of offering alternative land in the Ambakote area, pursuant to the 'alternative relief' sought in the Petition. However, the Petitioners declined this offer [vide Journal Entries dated 10.11.2021 and 28.07.2021].

The Position of the Petitioners

11) The Petitioners contended that the Petitioners bore a legitimate expectation due to repeated assurances of the Mahaweli Authority that their residences would be regularised and acting on such expectation, the Petitioners set up permanent residence and made substantial improvements to their respective houses and lands. In such context, the Petitioners argued that the attempt to evict or eject the Petitioners was arbitrary, done for collateral purposes such as offering those lands to favoured individuals, and in a manner contrary to principles of natural justice. The Petitioners submitted that the conduct of the Respondents so impugned violated the Petitioners Fundamental Right to equal protection of the Law guaranteed under Article 12(1).

12) Moreover, the learned Counsel for the Petitioners argued that the right to be adequately housed, including having secure tenure, right to respect for home and family life are crucial to the dignity of the Petitioners and are therefore rights which would fall within the ambit of rights to be safeguarded by Article 12(1).

13) The Petitioners contended that the move to eject the Petitioners from their residences was contrary to principles of natural justice and the legitimate expectation borne by the Petitioners due to repeated and consistent assurances of the Mahaweli Authority, and if allowed, would cause great injustice to the Petitioners and also (relying on the judgement of Dayarathna v. Minister of Health and Indigenous Medicine [1999] 1 SLR 393) amount to a violation of their Fundamental Right to equal protection of Law guaranteed under Article 12(1).

14) Adverting to the jurisprudential evolution of the concept of 'equal protection', and relying on the decisions of Karunathilaka v. Jayalath de Silva [2003] 1 SLR 35 and Wijerathna v. Sri Lanka Ports Authority, S.C F.R 256/2017, S.C Minutes of 11.12.2020, the learned Counsel noted that it is now understood that reasonableness and fairness are conceptual elements the court may take cognizance of when considering an alleged violation of Article 12(1).

15) It was the submission of the Petitioners therefore that, in considering this application, the Court would be mindful of the injustice caused to the Petitioners by the Respondents and also that relief could be granted in respect of any arbitrary or mala fide exercise of power vide Rajavarothiam Sampanthan & Others v. The Attorney General & Others, SC FR 351-361/2018, S.C Minutes of 13.12.2018.

The Position of the Respondents

16) The Respondents submitted that the Petitioners were and continue to remain in unauthorised occupation of State Land and the Petitioners have converted the temporary residences into permanent residences prior to them being issued with any Permit, Grant or Document permitting such occupation.

17) The Respondents contend that the said residences were illegal as the construction of houses on private lands adjacent to Reservoirs is monitored and are subject to guidelines ('4R3') and in terms of the Regulations promulgated under Section 54 of the Mahaweli Authority Act of Sri Lanka ('4R1') vide Section 7.7(b), construction of buildings and structures in and around a Reservoir without prior approval is prohibited.

18) It is also the position of the Respondents that although a Land Kachcheri was held, and a List was prepared, no steps were taken to issue 'Permits, Grants or any written authority' regularising the unauthorised occupation of the Petitioners.

19) The Respondents claimed that the move to eject the Petitioners was taken pursuant to, and in deference to a judgement of this Court. The said judgement being Environmental Foundation Limited & Others v. Mahaweli Authority of Sri Lanka & Others [2010] 1 SLR 1. This Fundamental Rights Application was filed in the Public Interest complaining of a violation of Article 12(1) of the Constitution by the alienation of the lands and the granting of permission for construction of buildings on lands in an arbitrary and ad hoc manner in violation of the applicable legal provisions and guidelines. The said lands were within the "Special Area" declared in terms of Section 3(1) of the Mahaweli Authority Act No. 23 of 1979 and also fell within the 100-metre reservation from the full supply level of the Victoria Reservoir. In this case, having upheld a violation of Article 12(1) on the part of the Mahaweli Authority, the Court made the directions listed below.

"(b) Court directs that a proper investigation be conducted by the 2nd Respondent and suitable action be taken against the officials responsible for the unauthorized alienations and the granting of permission to construct buildings in violation of the applicable legal provisions,

(c) Court holds that no further allocation of lands in the subject area be made without following the procedure laid down under Part IV C of the National Environmental Act No. 47 of 1980, and the regulations made their under,

(d) Court also holds that the guidelines contained in the document annexed marked as "P12" to the petition be followed in the future when granting permission for the construction of residential buildings".

20) In the same judgement [supra], this Court had also observed that the Mahaweli Authority had failed to comply with Guidelines issued on 18.06.1997 for the Construction of Houses in Private Lands [4R3] formulated by a Special Committee appointed by the Director General of the Mahaweli Authority. Per the Guidelines, there should be a minimum land area of around 20 meters between two houses. It was also observed in the judgement that the Hon. Attorney General had advised the Director General of the Mahaweli Authority that the Director General has no legal authority to permit any construction in derogation of these guidelines and that the alienation of lands and the granting of permission to construct housing as it pertained to that case, had been done in violation of the guidelines.

21) Another matter which was addressed by this Court in the aforementioned judgement was that the regulations promulgated in terms of Section 23Z of the National Environment Act as amended had not been complied with. The regulations contain a schedule of projects for which approval is required under Part IV of the Act and defines the term 'reservoir' as follows:

"reservoir" means an expanse of water resulting from manmade constructions across a river or a stream to store or regulate water. Its "environs" will include that area extending up to a distance of 100 meters from full supply of the reservoir inclusive of all islands falling within the reservoir.

Subsequently, the regulations had been amended by Gazette No. 859/14 dated 23.12.1995 to include a 100-meter boundary from a lake as well.

"within 100 meters from the high flood level contour of, or within, a public lake as defined in the Crown Lands Ordinance including those declared under Section 71 of the said ordinance."

22) The Respondents averred that the steps taken to evict the Petitioners were taken pursuant to cognizance of the aforementioned judgment which highlighted the failure on the part of the Mahaweli Authority to comply with the provisions of the Mahaweli Authority of Sri Lanka Act, the National Environment Act and the Regulations promulgated under the Act to alienation of State Land situated within 100-meter reservation adjacent to the Victoria Reservoir.

23) The Respondents also relied on the interpretation provided to 'unauthorised possession or occupation' in the State Lands (Recovery of Possession) Act to substantiate the contention that the Petitioners were residing illegally, in a manner liable to being issued a Quit Notice in terms of Section 3 of the Act, and if such notice is not complied, eviction proceedings being instituted under Section 5 of the Act. Section 18 of the Act defines 'unauthorised possession or occupation' as follows:

"Except possession or occupation upon a valid permit or other written authority of the State granted in accordance with any written law, and includes possession or occupation by encroachment upon State Land."

24) The Respondents also submitted that per the State Lands (Recovery of Possession) Act, a person on whom the quit notice is issued bears an opportunity to appear and show cause to establish lawful possession or occupation of State Land based on a valid permit or other written authority of the State granted in accordance with any written law. Essentially, it was the submission of the learned Deputy Solicitor General that without a valid permit or other written authority, the Petitioners were in unlawful occupation of state land and were therefore liable to be ejected in the manner prescribed by the Act, and if the Petitioners wished to demonstrate a contrary position, they may do so as prescribed by the Act, before the learned Magistrate. The Respondents also relied on the judgements of Nirmal Paper Converters (Pvt.) Ltd v. Sri Lanka Ports Authority & Another [1993] 1 SLR 219, Aravindakumar v. Alwis & Others [2007] 1 SLR 316, Senanayake v. Damunupola [1982] 2 SLR 621 and Muhandiram v. Chairman, Janatha Estate Development Board [1992] 1 SLR 110 to further substantiate their position.

25) Furthermore, responding to the Petitioners' claim that while they were not issued permanent permits, other persons, one 'Police Constable Costa' who is related to a 'Linton Wijesinghe', a member of the Central Provincial Council and the 2nd Respondent, the Director General of the Mahaweli Authority, the 4th Respondent, in his affidavit, states that the Petitioners were not issued with temporary permits, the Petitioners were 'squatters' and that the permits issued to the 2nd Respondent and Police Constable Costa were by way of the Crown Lands Ordinance ad the State Lands Ordinance respectively.

Determination

26) The Petitioners' complaint is primarily twofold. First, the Petitioners complain that despite repeated, consistent assurances, both verbal and written, the Mahaweli Authority reneged on such assurances and instead, attempted to evict the Petitioners from their residences. Secondly, that the Petitioners were treated differently in that lands they occupied were not regularised while other the lands in the same neighbourhood were regularised, and such lands are now occupied by a 'Police Constable Costa' and an Officer of the Respondent Mahaweli Authority.

27) Upon examining the provisions of the State Lands (Recovery of Possession) Act, I am of the opinion that the conduct of the Respondents in attempting to evict the Petitioners was not unlawful. The petitioners were unlawful occupants of State Land per the scheme of the Act and the Respondents were lawfully entitled to seek ejectment per Section 5 of the Act.

28) The Learned Counsel for the Petitioners argued that Article 12(1) encompasses a fundamental right to secure housing. I do not think a fundamental right to 'secure housing' rests within the ambit of rights offered by Article 12(1). A qualified right to remain housed without arbitrarily, mala fide, unlawful interference or hindrance may however exist within the equal protection the law guarantees under Article 12(1) of our Constitution. In that regard, I cannot more strenuously state how greatly a person's state of residence affects their dignity. Every person aspires to be secure in their residence devoid of compulsion to relocate. Our lives are invariably defined by where we reside, and this truth forms the core of the Petitioners' complaint. For all intents and purposes, these families considered these lands their home. It is therefore imperative that this Court examines whether the Petitioners were sought to be evicted arbitrarily, in bad faith, unlawfully or in a manifestly unjust manner.

29) I must admit that the Court is placed in a difficult position. On the one hand, the Respondents have not traversed the law in attempting to evict the Petitioners, and they claim to have undertaken such action in deference to a judgement of this Court. On the other hand, despite the lawfulness of such attempt, the Petitioners' complaint is remarkably genuine and tragic. The Petitioners were first told by way of a published list [P1] that there lands have been selected for regularisation, giving rise to the expectation that they would be able to securely reside in the lands they occupied and thereafter, upon seeking persistent clarifications, they were repeatedly assured that there would be no cause for insecurity, their residences would be regularised, and the evident delay was due to an insufficiency of resources on the part of the Authority. This is most evident in the letter dated 23rd July 2008 'P7'. The letter is reproduced here to demonstrate the gravity of the assurance given.

30) Acting upon the mentioned assurances, the Petitioners took steps to enhance their quality of life by obtaining a secure supply of water and electricity and making substantial improvements to their houses. Subsequently, without forewarning, the Petitioners were issued a Quit Notice and ordered to remove themselves from their homes.

31) It is of import that P7 is dated 23rd July 2008. The Judgement in Environmental Foundation Limited & Others v. Mahaweli Authority of Sri Lanka & Others [2010] 1 SLR 1 was delivered on 17th June 2010 (vide S.C Minutes of 17.06.2010), and the Petitioners were sought to be ejected from the lands they occupied in January of 2011. Therefore, I find the submission of the Respondents-that the move to eject the Petitioners was taken pursuant to and in deference to the aforementioned judgement of this Court, compelling, and considering the lack of any material impeaching the claim, on a balance of probabilities, acceptable.

32) However, this submission expressly admits that the Mahaweli Authority had not been complying with the law and relevant regulations until the pronouncement of the said judgement. Therefore, it logically follows that the representation made to the Petitioners by way of P7 too was ill-formed in that it was based on an illegality. Put simply, no officer of the Respondent Mahaweli Authority was legally entitled to approve or convey any assurance of such approval of the regularisation of lands or structures constructed in violation of the 100-meter reservation regulation.

33) A crucial point of law is to be addressed here. What requires adjudication is whether the verbal and written assurances given to the Petitioners gave rise to a legitimate expectation on the part of the Petitioners that lands they occupied would be regularised. It is the submission of the Petitioners that the assurances of the Respondents gave rise to a substantive legitimate expectation that the lands they occupied would be regularised and they would be issued permits. However, it is now settled in our law that a legitimate expectation cannot arise upon an illegality and that a representation which in itself is ultra vires cannot bind a public authority. His Lordship Sarath N. Silva, CJ in Tokyo Cement (Company) Ltd Vs. Director General of Customs [2005] BLR 24 (at p.27-28) cited the judgement of the Court of Appeal of England in Regina Vs. Secretary of State for Education and Employment, Ex parte Begbie [WLR 2000 Vol. 1, p. 115] which held that "courts would not give effect to a legitimate expectation if it would require a public authority to act contrary to the terms of the statute". This approach was subsequently followed by the Court of Appeal in Ceylon Agro-Industries Ltd Vs. Director General of Customs [CA Writ 622/2009] C.A Minutes14.02.2011 at p.8, Manufacturers (Pvt) Ltd Vs L.K.G Gunawardena & Others [CA /Writ/242/2015] C.A Minutes 15.12.2016 at pp.6-7 and in Pushparaja Vs. UC Of Nawalapitiya [CA PHC No. 161/2008] C.A Minutes15.03.2019 at p.6. Therefore, it is my considered opinion that P7 and any other verbal assurances given to the Petitioners to the effect that the lands occupied by the Petitioners would be regularized and the Petitioners would be granted permits was devoid of any force in law, as it was ultra vires from inception.

34) It is the bounden duty of the Court to adjudicate a matter with complete fidelity to the law and the set of facts or circumstances germane to the case before it. Assuming an authority not bestowed on me and deviating from established principles of our law in order to disseminate what I consider just per the context of the dispute, beyond the set of circumstances presented for adjudication would be most improper, and unjust. If Justice must be done, and must be seen to be done, parties to proceedings and their advocates cannot be uncertain of the law at the time they advocate their case. The success or failure of the legal arguments of Counsel irreparably affect the rights of the parties they represent, and any deviation from the settled understanding of this Court, in order to accommodate the grievances of the Petitioners beyond the scope of what was lawful would invariably lead to a debate on what may not give rise to a legitimate expectation law. Hence, in my view, I am not permitted to determine the rights and entitlements of the present parties in view of a larger social context, without regard to the confines of the law. Such a pursuit would unfailingly impede Justice. This does not however mean that the Court should restrain itself in a manner which renders itself ineffectual in the face of grave injustice.

35) It is now evident that the 1st Respondent (the Mahaweli Authority) had made several representations which were inconsistent with the laws and regulations applicable to the subject matter. To permit such disregard for the law by public authorities, who are beneficiaries and trustees of public resources would, in my view be an abdication of this Court's duty. Therefore, while I do not hold that the Petitioners bore a legitimate expectation of being granted permits to occupy the lands they presently occupy, I hold that the Mahaweli Authority has been remiss in permitting unlawful representations to be made. These representations have led to the Petitioners harbouring hopes and expectations which, had they been clarified in the first instance, the Petitioners would not have borne.

36) The Petitioners' central grievance before this Court is that the failure on the part of the Mahaweli Authority to give effect to the assurances given, breached their legitimate expectations and that constitutes a violation of Article 12(1) of the Constitution and that the Respondents were attempting to unlawfully evict the Petitioners in violation of their Fundamental Rights. In the preceding paragraphs, I have demonstrated how a legitimate expectation cannot arise upon an ultra vires assurance or representation. Therefore, it follows that without a 'legitimate expectation' to be breached, the assurances of the Respondents, however misconceived, or the failure to give effect to them, could not have violated the Petitioners' fundamental rights to equal protection of the law and equality before the law guaranteed under Article 12(1). Furthermore, I observe that since the Respondents had complied with the statutory scheme imposed by the State Lands (Recovery of Possession) Act, they have not acted unlawfully in attempting to evict the Petitioners. Therefore, I hold that the Respondents have not violated the fundamental rights of the Petitioners.

37) This Court is vested with the jurisdiction to grant "such relief or make such directions as it may deem just and equitable in the circumstance" [vide Article 126(4)] and it is now understood that the Court is not constrained in its competence by the finding of a violation of a fundamental right in order to award such relief [vide Noble Resources International Pte Limited Vs. Hon. Ranjith Siyambalapitiya, Minister of Power and Renewable Energy & Others, S.C F.R No. 394/2015, S.C Minutes 24.06.2016]. What is 'just and equitable' cannot surely be interpreted to include what may be contrary to Stature, but it does include, in my view, efforts to alleviate persons from unjustly bearing the consequences of unreasonable, arbitrary, or unlawful conduct of Public Authorities. I am conscious that the 1st Respondent authority had provided ultra vires assurances on a matter so significant as a person's housing.

38) In view of the above, and for or all the reasons enumerated in the preceding analysis, I direct the 1st Respondent Authority to once again offer alternative lands to the Petitioners for relocation, pursuant to the 'alternative relief' sought in the Petition. Should the Petitioners choose to accept such relief, the 1st Respondent must direct its officers and personnel to facilitate the granting of any permits lawfully, per the requirements and stipulations of the National Environmental Act and all the regulations promulgated therein. In the circumstances, I make order retracting the stay-order issued vide Supreme Court Minutes dated 23.09.2011 on the proceedings of the Magistrate's Court of Kandy in the following cases:

- Case No. 35033/11 against the 1st Petitioner
- Case No. 35028/11 against the 2nd Petitioner
- Case No. 33069/11 against the 3rd Petitioner.

A violation of fundamental rights has not been established.

K. PRIYANTHA FERNANDO, J

1. The petitioner in this case is a 33-year-old who has been arrested by the police pursuant to a warrant being issued against her. The petitioner alleges that, the manner in which the respondents carried out her arrest and the events following such arrest have violated the fundamental rights guaranteed to her under Articles 11, 12(1), 13(1) and 13(2) of the Constitution. At the hearing of this application, this Court granted leave on the alleged violations of Articles 11 and 12(1) of the Constitution.

2. The Petitioner's Position.

   On 19.05.2014 at around 5.15 p.m. the acting Officer in Charge of the Welipenna police station (hereinafter referred to as the 1st respondent) has arrived at the residence of the petitioner in a police jeep along with four other police officers. According to the petitioner, at the time the 1st respondent and the other police officers arrived, the petitioner and her family has been inside their house. The petitioner states that she has been breastfeeding her youngest child who was seven months of age at the time. The four police officers have walked towards the petitioner's husband and has informed him that a warrant has been issued against the petitioner and her mother for failing to appear before the Magistrate of Mathugama in case No. 7653/14.

3. The petitioner's husband has requested the 1st respondent that he be permitted to bring the petitioner to the Welipenna police station the next day or to be permitted to have the petitioner produced directly to Court. However, the 1st respondent has denied this request, and has tried to arrest the petitioner in executing the warrant.

4. Upon hearing the conversation between her husband and the 1st respondent, she has come out of her house carrying her youngest child in her arms, accompanied by her daughter who was two-and-a-half years of age. After getting to know that she was to go to the police station, she has requested for a woman police officer to accompany her to the police station.

5. The 1st respondent has denied her request for a woman police officer to be present and has grabbed the petitioner by her left upper arm and pushed her into the police jeep. She alleges that, when she was pushed into the police jeep along with the child that she was carrying, she was partially denuded. She further alleges that, she suffered intense humiliation as the neighbours also witnessed the treatment that was meted out to her. Thereafter, the mother of the petitioner has been arrested and the 1st respondent has also grabbed the daughter of the plaintiff and pushed her into the police jeep.

6. It is averred that, although she and her husband requested that the children be left at home, the 1st respondent has refused such request and has directed the petitioner's husband that if he wished to collect the children, he should come to the Welipenna police station. The petitioner further alleges that, she was not informed of the fact that a warrant has been issued and no copy of the warrant has been shown to her.

7. At about 7.00 p.m. on the same day, the petitioner's husband, along with her family and some neighbours have come to the Welipenna police station to request the 1st respondent to release the children. The 1st respondent has informed the petitioner's husband to come on the following day to collect his children.

8. On the next morning (20.05.2014), the 1st respondent has directed the petitioner's husband to come to Court and informed him that the children will be released in Court. Thereafter, the petitioner's husband has complained to the National Child Protection Authority (NCPA). However, the petitioner states that no steps have been taken regarding the same.

9. According to the petitioner, at about 11.45 a.m., the petitioner has been produced before the Magistrate's Court of Mathugama. The petitioner and her children have been immediately released. The petitioner whilst stating that she was not permitted to make any statement in Court regarding the treatment that was meted out to her, has further stated that she did not wish to make such complain due to fear of repercussions from the police.

10. On 21.05.2014, the petitioner's husband has submitted a complaint to the Assistant Superintendent of Police (ASP) of Kalutara on behalf of the petitioner. Thereafter on 27.05.2014, a further complaint has been made to the Deputy Inspector General of Police (DIG) of Kalutara. Since no action was taken, on 13.06.2014 the petitioner's husband has submitted a complaint to the Inspector General of Police (IGP) (3rd respondent) regarding the events that had transpired. Although a complaint bearing No. IGP/PAC/O/673/2014 has been recorded, the petitioner alleges that she is unaware of any action being taken regarding the same. On 17.06.2014, the petitioner's husband has also submitted a complaint on behalf of the petitioner to the Human Rights Commission of Sri Lanka, regarding the arrest that took place on 19.05.2014 and an inquiry is pending.

11. The Respondents' Position

    The 1st respondent in his response, denying the allegations against him states that, on 19.05.2014, he has reached Dodampapitiya along with his team to arrest the petitioner and her mother in terms of the order bearing No. 658/14 on a warrant issued against them in case No. 7653/14 in the Magistrate's Court of Mathugama. However, when the petitioner was informed about the warrant and shown the warrant, the petitioner has resisted arrest and has clung on the 1st respondent's hand and has also started shouting in a threatening manner and stated "මම යන්නේ නැහැ යකෝ". She has also yelled at the police in abusive language. The petitioner has also refused to part with the child and has refused to wear appropriate clothing to go to the police station. In the backdrop of these circumstances, the subordinate police officers have pushed her into the police jeep as she was resisting arrest. Both the petitioner and her mother has been taken into custody. The 1st respondent also states that, he did not pull the petitioner's jacket causing it to tear. Thereafter, at the police station, the 1st respondent has directed a matron to attend to the petitioner and her mother and they were searched and detained under the supervision of the matron.

12. Contrary to what the petitioner states, the 1st respondent states that, the mother of the petitioner, the petitioner, and her youngest child who she refused to let go, had been taken into custody and were taken to the police station. Thereafter, at around 9.00 p.m. on the same day, the petitioner's husband has come to the police station and has forcibly left the older child in the custody of the petitioner without the permission of the 1st respondent.

13. The 1st respondent stated that, he had every authority to make the arrest as there was a warrant issued on the petitioner and her mother. He denies the allegations made by the petitioner of ill treatment and assault and states that, he had to use reasonably necessary force to effect the arrest as the petitioner had been acting in a violent manner. The 1st respondent states that, he had not acted in a manner which would violate the fundamental rights of the petitioner. A copy of the extract from the day book maintained at the Welipenna police station has been produced as [A-6].

14. The 2nd respondent, who is the Officer in Charge of the Welipenna police station stated in his affidavit in response, that on 19.05.2014 which was the day the petitioner was arrested, the 2nd respondent has been on official duty appearing before the High Court of Anuradhapura in case No. 129/13.

15. Alleged violation of Article 11 of the Constitution.

The learned Counsel for the petitioner on behalf of the legal aid commission, submitted in her written submissions that, in the case of W.M.K. de Silva v. Chairman, Ceylon Fertilizer Corporation [1989] 2 S.L.R. 393 it was recognized that Article 11 of the Constitution is not confined to physical violence and encompasses protection against emotional or psychological harm as well. The claim in the instant case is also based on psychological harm that was suffered by the petitioner. It was submitted that the petitioner has suffered immense psychological harm when she was berated in the presence of her family and neighbours, when she was arrested demeaning her dignity, her clothes been torn and being partially denuded and having to travel to the police station in such torn clothing in the presence of male police officers, being pushed into the police jeep while carrying her child, witnessing her daughter being manhandled into the police jeep. She has also suffered immensely for not being able to provide protection for her children and fearing for their safety.

16. The learned Counsel for the petitioner relied on the case of W. Nandasena v. U.G. Chandradasa, Officer-in-Charge Police Station Hiniduma and Two Others [2006] 1 Sri.L.R. 207 and submitted that allegations of the violation of Article 11 can be proven by way of affidavits even in the absence of medical evidence where the suffering was of an aggravated kind. Even in the instant case, the affidavits of the petitioner's family and neighbours corroborate the evidence of the petitioner being subjected to degrading treatment by the respondents.

17. The learned Counsel for the petitioner further submitted that, in the case of Adhikary and Another v. Amerasinghe and Others [2003] 1 S.L.R. 270 the Courts recognized the plight of a mother and her little child whose allegations were not physical injuries, where there was no evidence of physical injury and no submission was made as to medical evidence. However, the Court in the above case recognized the psychological harm suffered by the wife who was torn between the safety of her husband and her child and the feelings of the husband who could not protect his wife and his child from the respondents when he was being arrested. It was submitted that the above case has glaring similarities with the instant case.

18. It was further submitted that, the petitioner in the instant case too undeniably faced immense humiliation in the presence of neighbours and male officers when she was partially denuded by the 1st respondent, further she was in anguish as she was unable to protect her infant son who was in her arms when she was pushed into the police jeep. She has also feared for the safety of her two-and-a-half-year-old daughter when she was pushed into the police jeep.

19. The learned Counsel submitted that, as Article 11 of the Constitution has several limbs, in the event the conduct of the respondents in respect of the petitioner and her family does not amount to torture, it would at least fall within the second limb which is "cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment."

20. The learned Counsel for the petitioner further submitted that, the police have got angered when the petitioner's family requested if she could be brought directly to police station the next morning and when she requested time to dress herself. It was submitted that, the acts of the police in making the petitioner's children spend the night at the police station while being denied the safety of their home was to punish the petitioner by placing her children through unnecessary trauma. This has caused anguish to the petitioner. This is an unnecessary and disproportionate response by the police. Therefore, it violates Article 11 of the Constitution.

21. It was further submitted by the learned Counsel that, in the case of Subasinghe V Police Constable Sandun [1999] 2 S.L.R. 23 the Court has recognized that the conduct of police in causing an affront to an individual's human dignity as being violative of Article 11 of the Constitution. It was submitted that the petitioner was stripped off of her human dignity by the actions or inactions of the respondents. Therefore, her rights guaranteed under Article 11 of the Constitution has been violated.

22. It was submitted by the learned Counsel for the 1st respondent that, the documents tendered to this Court by the petitioner in support of her petition does not establish the veracity of averments made by the petitioner in her application to establish a violation of the said Articles.

23. The learned Counsel for the 1st respondent submitted that, as laid out in the case of Velmurugu v. AG [1981] 1 S.L.R. 406. The standard of proof in deciding whether any fundamental right has been infringed is the standard of proof in Civil matters. Further in Channa Pieris v. AG [1994] 1 S.L.R. 1 it has been held that having regard to the gravity of the matter in issue, a high degree of certainty is required before the balance of probability might tilt in favour of the petitioner to discharge his burden of proof that he was subject to torture, cruel inhuman degrading treatment or punishment. The petitioner must adduce sufficient evidence to satisfy Court that Article 11 has been violated. Further in Jeganathan v. AG [1982] 1 S.L.R 294 it was held that when public officers are accused of violating Article 11 of the Constitution such allegation must be strictly proved.

24. The learned Counsel for the 1st respondent further submitted that, section 12 of the Convention Against Torture and other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading treatment or Punishment Act, No. 22 of 1994 defines 'torture' and therefore, it must be ascertained whether the allegations made by the petitioner falls within such criteria in determining if Article 11 of the Constitution has been violated.

25. The learned Counsel for the 1st respondent further submitted that, the police officers who were performing a legal duty in executing a warrant, have used minimum force when she was held by her shoulder and pushed into the police jeep as the petitioner was vehemently against the arrest and refused such arrest.

26. It is further submitted by the learned Counsel that, the petitioner has failed to provide cogent evidence with regard to the alleged torture, inhuman and degrading treatment by the respondents.

27. When considering the instant application, it is alleged that the petitioner has been subjected to torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment by the 1st respondent. It is also alleged that, such violations have taken place at the time of arrest of the petitioner and also while in the custody of the police. The petitioner alleges that her rights under Article 11 of the Constitution is violated by the acts of the respondents and it is furthered by the anguish she had to undergo as a mother for not being able to protect her children from the actions of the respondents causing her psychological torture. Article 11 of the Constitution of Sri Lanka provides that,

> "No person shall be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment."

28. In the case of Amal Sudath Silva v. Kodituwakku, Inspector of Police and Others [1987] 2 Sri.L.R 119 Atukorale J said that,

> "Article 11 of our Constitution mandates that no person shall be subjected to torture, or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. It prohibits every person from inflicting torturesome, cruel or inhuman treatment on another. It is an absolute fundamental right subject to no restrictions or limitations whatsoever. Every person in this country, be he a criminal or not, is entitled to this right to the fullest content of its guarantee. Constitutional safeguards are generally directed against the State and its organs. The police force, being an organ of the State, is enjoined by the Constitution to secure and advance this right and not to deny, abridge or restrict the same in any manner and under any circumstances. Just as much as this right is enjoyed by every member of the police force, so is he prohibited from denying the same to others, irrespective of their standing, their beliefs or antecedents. It is therefore the duty of this court to protect and defend this right jealously to its fullest measure with a view to ensuring that this right which is declared and intended to be fundamental is always kept fundamental and that the executive by its action does not reduce it to a mere illusion."

29. When considering the above case, it is evident that the protection provided under Article 11 of the Constitution, unlike other fundamental safeguards, provides for absolute protection to an individual. It is recognized as an absolute right, which guarantees absolute protection. This means that, the freedom from torture cannot be tampered with, limited, or restricted under any circumstances. As it is observed in the case of Amal Silva(supra) the Courts of Sri Lanka have acted as guardians to ensure that this right is protected to its fullest measure.

30. In case of W.M.K. de Silva v. Chairman, Ceylon Fertilizer Corporation [1989] 2 S.L.R. 393 it was stated that,

"I am of the opinion that the torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment contemplated in Article 11 of our Constitution is not confined to the realm of physical violence. It would embrace the sphere of the soul or mind as well."

31. In light of the above case, it can be observed that Article 11 of the Constitution is not restricted to physical torture, it also includes mental torture within its realm. The instant case is striking as it relates to a lawful arrest carried out pursuant to a warrant being issued against the petitioner. Admittedly, a warrant has been issued against the petitioner and her mother for failing to appear before the Magistrate of Mathugama in case No. 7653/14. The petitioner and her mother have had a long-standing land dispute with a neighbour. When the police officers tried to inquire into the dispute on 10.03.2014 at the Welipenna police station, the parties have behaved in an unruly manner inside the police station.

32. Pursuant to this unruly behaviour of the parties, the police have made an application and produced both the parties including the petitioner and her mother to Court in terms of section 81 of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act. The parties were required to show cause as to why they should not be ordered to execute a bond for keeping the peace in terms of section 81. However, the petitioner who was on bail failed to appear in the Magistrate's Court on the date she was required to show cause. As a result, the said warrant has been issued by the Magistrate's Court.

33. In the instant case, the petitioner has resisted lawful arrest. This is evident through the affidavit of the petitioner as well as the affidavits of the several witnesses marked [P-8(a)] and [P-8(b)]. Accordingly, when the husband of the petitioner has asked the petitioner to go to the police station with the police officers, she has resisted stating that, she cannot get into to the police jeep unless a woman police officer accompanies her. When a warrant has been issued, the person against whom the warrant is issued is expected to comply with such warrant. The petitioner could have avoided this entire course of events that allegedly caused her immense psychological torture if she had complied with the said police officers who were engaging in their official duty. One cannot make allegations of mental torture for the acts which are incidental to lawful actions of officials acting within their power.

34. When considering the allegations that the petitioner was berated and thereafter manhandled into the police jeep, it can be observed that the 1st respondent in his affidavit has also admitted that he did push the petitioner into the police jeep as she was resisting lawful arrest. Attention must be drawn to section 23(2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act No. 15 of 1979. It sets out that,

"If such a person forcibly resists the endeavour to arrest him or attempts to evade the arrest, the person making the arrest may use such means as are reasonably necessary to effect the arrest."

35. It is clear that the petitioner in this case has resisted lawful arrest. Further, when perusing the document marked [A-6] and the affidavit of the 1st respondent where it has clearly been deposed that, when the petitioner was informed of the arrest, she has vehemently refused to comply with the warrant and has refused to part with her child. She has also refused to wear appropriate clothing and started shouting at the police in a threatening manner. Thereafter, the police officers have pushed her into the police jeep. When considering these circumstances, it seems to me that the conduct by the police officers in pushing the petitioner into the police jeep was reasonably necessary for the police to effect the arrest of the petitioner who was resisting arrest. Police officers are duty bound to comply with the warrant of arrest. Therefore, it is clear that in the circumstances of this case, the police officers have acted within the power conferred to them under section 23(2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act No. 15 of 1979.

36. It has also been alleged by the petitioner that, the acts of the 1st respondent have caused her clothes to be torn and she has been partially denuded and she has also had to travel to the police station in such torn clothing in the presence of male police officers. This has been denied by the 1st respondent in his affidavit. When perusing the affidavits of the witnesses on behalf of the petitioner, it can be observed that, most of the witnesses have deposed that the petitioner was partially denuded when the police officer carrying out the arrest grabbed her in order to effect the arrest. However, in the affidavit of the witness marked [P-8(c)] it has been deposed that, one of the police officers from the Welipenna police station have ripped off the upper garments of the petitioner, so as to completely denude her before she was pushed into the police jeep. This is patently an exaggeration.

Therefore, the veracity of such documents submitted by the petitioner is questionable.

37. Further, it is observed that the petitioner while resisting arrest was carrying her seven-month-old child in her hands. When the police used minimum force to push her inside the police jeep, the petitioner has been carrying the child in her hands. In a situation such as this, separating the infant child from the mother would be more traumatic to the mother and the child rather than allowing the child to be in the mother's arms. Therefore, it is the petitioner's resistance to lawful arrest, that has led to these events.

38. With regard to the two-and-a-half-year-old daughter, the notes made by the officer at the police reserve [A-6] clearly sets out that, the daughter had been subsequently brought to the police station by relatives and kept within the custody of the petitioner. The 1st respondent in his affidavit has also stated that the said daughter was not taken in the police jeep when the petitioner was arrested but that she was subsequently brought to the police station by her family. Therefore, the conduct of the police in respect of the petitioner's children cannot be considered as an unnecessary and disproportionate response.

39. The petitioner in paragraph 15 of her petition states that, when she was produced before the Magistrate's Court of Mathugama on the day after the arrest, she has not informed the Magistrate as to what had transpired. The petitioner claims that, she was not permitted to make any statement in Court, nor could the petitioner complain of the ill-treatment that was meted out to her by the police. The same position is taken by the husband of the petitioner in his affidavit [P-7]. However, the learned Magistrate has recorded that the petitioner has explained her absence in Court on the previous occasion. She had explained how she had been in the wrong Court room when the case was being called. Therefore, it is evident that the petitioner had sufficient opportunity to inform the learned Magistrate as to what had transpired and the alleged violations that took place if she so wished. It is also clear that the petitioner has been insincere when she stated that she was not given the opportunity to speak in Court.

40. In case of Nandasena v. Chandradasa, O.I.C., Police Station, Hiniduma and Others. [2006] 1 Sri.L.R. 207 it was stated that,

> "When there is an allegation based on violation of fundamental rights guaranteed in terms of Article 11 of the Constitution, it would be necessary for the petitioner to prove his position by way of medical evidence and/or by way of affidavits and for such purpose it would be essential for the petitioner to bring forward such documents with a high degree of certainty for the purpose of discharging his burden. Discussing this position, Amerasinghe, J. in Channa Peiris and others vs Attorney General and others had clearly stated that,
> > "Having regard to the nature and gravity of the issue a high degree of certainty is required before the balance of probability might be said to tilt in favour of the petitioner endeavouring to discharge his burden of proving that he was subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment"."

41. When perusing the several affidavits that have been filed on behalf of the petitioner, it can be observed that all the affidavits except for [P-8(c)] are verbatim. While statements that were made and incidents that occurred at the scene of arrest could nevertheless be verbatim, the use of the exact same words in describing matters incidental to the main incident raises a doubt in my mind as to the possibility of concoction or exaggeration. Further, the only affidavit that is not verbatim [P-8(c)] seems to be a clear exaggeration of the events that transpired (more fully described in paragraph 35 of this judgment). Therefore, when considering the probability in the sequence of events, I am inclined to accept the version of the 1st respondent. Although the petitioner asserts that allegations of the violation of Article 11 can be proven by way of affidavits, where the affidavits in question creates a doubt as to concoction or exaggeration it would be unsafe to act upon them.

42. It can be observed that, while the case of Adhikary and Another v. Amarasinghe and Others [2003] 1 S.L.R. 270 seems to have certain factual similarities to the instant case, it has important and striking dissimilarities as to the points of law. The petitioner in the above case was assaulted by the respondents who were security officers of a minister without any authority. However, in the instant case, a warrant has been issued by the Magistrate and the respondent police officers were exercising their lawful authority in arresting the petitioner in the instant case. Therefore, the rationale of that case cannot be applied in the instant case.

43. In light of the above findings, it is my view that, there has been no violation of the rights guaranteed to the petitioner under Article 11 of the Constitution. I cannot comprehend how effecting an arrest by the use of minimum force, while the person against whom a warrant has been issued is resisting arrest, would amount to a violation of Article 11 of the Constitution by the police. If this is allowed, the police officers would be obstructed from carrying out their official duties.

44. Alleged violation of Article 12(1)

The petitioner also alleges that the rights guaranteed to her under Article 12(1) of the Constitution is affected by the arrest, detention and the arbitrary and malicious conduct of the respondents.

45. The learned Counsel for the petitioner submitted that, as recognized in Wickramasinghe v. Ceylon Petroleum Corporation [2001] 2 S.L.R. 409 the essence of Article 12(1) is reasonableness as opposed to arbitrariness. It was submitted that the police in the instant case have not acted reasonably but in fact they have acted arbitrarily. Therefore, the rights guaranteed to the petitioner under Article 12(1) of the Constitution has also been violated.

46. Further, it was submitted that the petitioner has not been shown the warrant as required by section 53 of the Criminal Procedure Code. It was submitted that this has violated the equal protection which has constitutionally been provided for in Article 12(1) of the Constitution.

47. When considering the alleged infringement of Article 12(1) of the Constitution it is clear that, as clearly explained previously in this judgment, the police in arresting the petitioner has not acted in an unreasonable or arbitrary manner as they have only used reasonable force in arresting the petitioner. The police have acted within the bounds of their authority in accordance with the power conferred to them under section 23(2) of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act No. 15 of 1979.

48. Article 12(1) encompasses two concepts, 'equality before the law' and 'equal protection of the law'. This is explained in the case of Satish Chandra v. Union of India [1953] A.I.R. 250 where it was stated that all persons and things similarly circumstanced should be treated alike in the matter of privileges conferred and liabilities imposed.

49. As it was explained in the case of Leo Fernando v. Attorney-General [1985] 2 S.LR. 341, 'equal protection of the law' does not mean that the same law should identically apply to all persons. What it stipulates is that, the law should apply similarly and without discrimination to all persons similarly situated. Thus, the petitioner in the instant case cannot claim that she has been treated arbitrarily as her circumstances are similar to a person against whom a warrant has been issued and the police officers acting within their lawful authority has in my view, not denied the petitioner the equal protection of the law.

50. It has been deposed in the affidavit of the 1st respondent that the petitioner was informed of and shown the warrant. In any event, the petitioner should have been aware that a warrant would be issued against her and her mother for not appearing before the Magistrate of Mathugama in case No. 7653/14.

51. The petitioner has stated that, a female police officer has been absent while the petitioner was being arrested. She further states that, this has not been contradicted by the respondents. In light of this position, it is my view that, generally it is proper to accompany a female police officer when the person against whom a warrant has been issued is a woman. However, there is no rule of procedure requiring the same.

52. Section 30 of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act No. 15 of 1979 sets out that,

> "Whenever it is necessary to cause a woman to be searched the search shall be made by another woman with strict regard to decency."

The above rule of procedure relates to a situation where a search is carried out. When considering the facts of this case, there is no evidence of a search being carried out at the scene of arrest. Therefore, the fact that a woman constable was absent at the scene of arrest does not violate any rules of procedure. Therefore, this position advanced by the petitioner has no merit.

53. In a practical sense, the police officers intending to arrest a person against whom a warrant has been issued would generally expect that, the person against whom the warrant has been issued would comply with such order. Further, one cannot expect the police officers to go back to the police station to bring a woman constable when the woman against whom the court has issued a warrant resists arrest.

54. In the circumstances of this case, it is my view that the rights guaranteed to the petitioner under Article 12(1) of the Constitution has not been infringed by the respondents as they have acted reasonably in exercising their lawful authority. Further, there exists no violation of rules as to procedure by the police officers.

55. Liability of the 2nd respondent.

At the argument of this appeal, the learned Counsel for the petitioner submitted that, the 2nd respondent who was the Officer in Charge of the Welipenna police station would also be liable for the actions of the police officers that carried out the arrest. It was stated that the OIC must take reasonable steps including the monitoring of subordinates. The Counsel for the petitioner relied on the cases of Ukwatta v. Sub Inspector Marasinghe S.C. F.R. Application No. 252/2006 S.C. Min. 15.12.2010, Sharmila v. K.W.G. Nishantha S.C. F.R. Application No. 398/2008 S.C. Min. 03.02.2023 and the case of Sriyani Silva v. Iddamalgoda [2003] 2 Sri.L.R. 63.

56. The learned Counsel for the 2nd respondent submitted that, on 19.05.2014, he was on official duty appearing before the High Court of Anuradhapura in case no. 129/13. The record book maintained by the Welipenna police station also confirms that the 2nd respondent was in Anuradhapura on official duty on that day [B-1].

57. In Ukwatta(supra) the petitioner has been brutally assaulted at the police station by the 1st respondent and other police officers. The 2nd respondent OIC in the above case has also been made liable as the illegal detention and torture of the petitioner could have been prevented by him and on the basis that alteration of information books by the 1st respondent could not have been carried out without the authority of the

OIC. When considering the facts and circumstances of the instant case, the alleged torture has taken place outside the police station. The arrest that was carried out by the 1st respondent and the subordinate officers was a lawful arrest carried out on the basis of a warrant and the 2nd respondent had been away on official duty and in a practical sense there is nothing that the 2nd respondent could have done to prevent these events. Therefore, due to the striking dissimilarities in the instant case when compared with the above case, the rationale in that case cannot be applied to the instant case.

58. Further, in the case of Sriyani Silva(supra) the courts found that the officer-in-charge was under a duty to take reasonable steps to ensure that persons held in custody were treated humanely and in accordance with the law. And that included monitoring the activities of his subordinates. However, in the instant case there has been no ill-treatment carried out against the petitioner in the police premises and neither has the 2nd respondent seen the petitioner. Therefore, as the above cases have no applicability to the instant case, the 2nd respondent OIC could not have been held liable in the circumstances of this case.

59. Liability of the 3rd respondent.
The petitioner in paragraph no.16 of the petition dated 28.11.2014 stated that, she is unaware of any action being taken by the 3rd respondent even after the complaint bearing No. IGP/PAC/O/673/2014 was recorded.

60. The learned Deputy Solicitor General (DSG) for the 3rd respondent contended that, the document marked [3R-1] as reported on 12.09.2014 clearly demonstrates that an inquiry has been conducted regarding the alleged violation. However, neither the petitioner nor her mother have appeared at the inquiry even after they were informed to be present. Thus, in light of the document [3R-1] it is my view that the 3rd respondent IGP has acted promptly and the petitioner has patently been insincere to Court in stating that she was unaware of any action being taken by the 3rd respondent.

Therefore, it is evident that the petitioner has not come to Court with clean hands.

61. Declaration.

In the above premise, for the reasons that I have elaborated above, I declare that the fundamental rights that have been guaranteed to the petitioner under Articles 11 and 12(1) of the Constitution has not been violated by the actions of the 1st to 4th respondents. I make no order with regard to costs.

The Petitioner owns a parcel of land that is situated in Rattanapitiya, Boralesgamuwa and facing the Pamankada-Horana main road. According to the Petitioner this is the sole residential property owned by him. The State acquired two portions of the same parcel of land on two separate occasions for road development.

The factual circumstances of the two acquisitions are as follows.

A section 2 notice under the Land Acquisition Act (Act) dated 08.04.2008 (9R1) was published asserting that land was required for the public purpose of "widening of Colombo – Horana Highway […] under the National Highways Sector Project". On 06.02.2012, a section 5 notice under the Act (9R2) was published reflecting the decision of the Minister of Lands, inter alia, that Lot No. EF depicted in the Advance Tracing bearing No. CO/KSB/2008/198 (9R3) was required for the said public purpose. On 19.02.2013, an order (9R4) was made in terms of section 38 (a) of the Act (9R4). The notice in terms of section 7 of the Act (9R5) was published on 08.05.2013.

On 27.05.2013, an inquiry was held in terms of section 9 of the Act with the participation of the Petitioner. A decision in terms of section 10(1)(a) of the Act (9R8) was made accepting the claim of the Petitioner in respect of Lot No. 1 depicted in Plan bearing No. 9332 subject to the life interest of the mother of the Petitioner. On 10.03.2014, an award in terms of section 17 (1) of the Act (9R9) was made awarding a sum of Rs. 2,840,000/- as compensation for the acquisition of 2.29 perches.

Subsequently, the Petitioner preferred an appeal to the Land Acquisition Board of Review. Later, the Petitioner made an appeal to the Ministerial Committee as reflected in document marked P17. Upon considering the appeal, the Land Acquisition and Resettlement Committee ("LARC"), increased the compensation to Rs. 4,070,041/-. This decision was later affirmed by the Ministerial Compensation Appeal Board ("SUPER LARC"). The Petitioner refused to accept the said compensation along with the ex-gratia payment of Rs. 500,000/- claiming that he found the proposed compensation insufficient and that he wanted to seek an enhancement of the proposed compensation. The State has taken possession of the said portion of land.

In the second acquisition, a section 2 notice under the Act was published on 12.12.2013 for the same public purpose, namely widening of the Pamankada-Horana Road. A section 38 (a) order under the Act was published on 05.05.2014, covering 1.38 perches of land belonging to the Petitioner. On 08.02.2017 and 19.04.2017 respectively steps were taken to publish notices in terms of Sections 5 and 7 of the Act. On 08.05.2017, an inquiry in terms of section 9 of the Act was held with the participation of the Petitioner. The Petitioner's claim to the said land was accepted in terms of section 10 (1) (a) of the Act in the decision marked 9R26 dated 16.05.2017. On 03.10.2017, an award in terms of section 17 (1) of the Act was made awarding Rs. 1,496,500.00 as compensation. This was subsequently increased to Rs. 3,235,750.00 by LARC and to Rs. 4,623,875.00 by SUPER LARC. The State has taken possession of this portion as well.

Hence, a total sum of Rs. 8,693,916.00 has been determined to be paid as compensation to the Petitioner for the acquisition of a total of 3.64 perches of land. The Petitioner has thus far refused to accept this amount.

Leave to proceed has been granted under Articles 12(1), 12(2) and 14(1)(g) of the Constitution.

The Petitioner is seeking the following reliefs:

1. Declaration of an infringement and/or continuing violation of the Petitioner's fundamental rights guaranteed under Articles 12 (1) and/or 12 (2) and/or 14 (g) of the Constitution by the 1st – 10th Respondents; and,
2. A direction that the 1st – 10th Respondents pay compensation to the Petitioner for the acquisitions together without any delay.

Articles 12 (1) and 12(2)

Article 12(1) of the Constitution encompasses two distinct principles. The negative concept is that all individuals are equal before the law and that no one should be treated differently. The positive concept is that all individuals are entitled to equal protection of the law, which requires them to be treated equally in similar circumstances.

The negative concept requires the application of the law to everyone. No one is entitled to be treated differently, except where the law recognises a specific exemption to its application such as Articles 12(4), 15(7) and 15(8) of the Constitution. Any act which contravenes the law will violate the rule of law embedded in Article 12(1).

In C. W. Mackie and Company Ltd. v. Hugh Molagoda, Commissioner General of Inland Revenue and others [(1986) 1 Sri L.R. 300 at page 309] Sharvananda C.J. held that:

> "[…] [T]he equal treatment guaranteed by Article 12 is equal treatment in the performance of a lawful act. Via Article 12, one cannot seek the execution of any illegal or invalid act*. Fundamental to this postulate of equal treatment is that it should be referable to the exercise of a valid right, founded in law in contradistinction to an illegal right which is invalid in law.*" (Emphasis added)

This decision was quoted with approval in Farook v. Dharmaratne, Chairman, Provincial Public Service Commission, Uva and Others [(2005) 1 Sri L.R. 133 at 140] where Dr. Shirani Bandaranayake C.J. observed that:

> "Article 12 (1) of the Constitution does not provide for any situation where the authorities will have to act illegally*. The safeguard retained* in Article 12 (1) is for the performance of a lawful act and not to be directed to carry out an illegal function*. In order to succeed the petitioner must be in a position to place material* before this Court that there has been unequal treatment within the framework of a lawful act." (Emphasis added)

Therefore, where there is an allegation of a violation of Article 12(1) of the Constitution, it is incumbent on the Petitioner to, inter alia, establish that the Respondent will not have to act contrary to law in providing the relief sought by the Petitioner.

The Petitioner does not challenge the legality of the acquisition of the two parcels of land. In fact, he makes a laudable assertion that he did not challenge the acquisition in the public interest. His grievance is that the compensation paid for the two acquisitions is inadequate as it was calculated based on the acquisition having been made on two different dates. The Petitioner contends that he is entitled in law to have the authorities calculate the compensation assuming the two acquisitions were done together and not independently.

In this context, I have to examine the basis on which compensation is calculated in terms of the Act.

Part VI of the Act deals with compensation. Section 46 of the Act deals with the "market value" of the land or servitude that is to be acquired for the stated public purpose. Section 45 of the Act specifies the factors that must be taken into account when determining the market value for compensation assessment.

It states that this market value refers to the value specified in section 7 of the Act. This position is clearly defined in the Act, but it has been reaffirmed in C.E.A Perera v. The Assistant Government Agent, Kaluthara (74 N.L.R. 130), where Weeramantry, J. held:

> "Section 45 (1) of the Land Acquisition Ordinance (Cap. 460) provides that the market value of a land for the purposes of that Ordinance shall be the amount which the land might be expected to have realized if sold by a willing seller in the open market as a separate entity on the date of publication of notice under Section 7*.*" (Emphasis added)

It is evident that the market value of the land acquired must be determined on the date of the notice under section 7 of the Act. The section 7 notices for the two acquisitions were published on two different dates, 08.05.2013 and 19.04.2017. Thus, the market value of the two portions of land must be determined based on those two different dates on which the section 7 notices were made although acquired for the same public purpose. There is no provision in the Act to apply one date to both acquisitions.

The State has followed the provisions of the Act when calculating the compensation. The Petitioner is asking the State to determine the compensation for the two portions of land acquired in the two different days, assuming they were done on the same day. That basis may lead to the Petitioner receiving a higher compensation. Nevertheless, the existing law does not permit the Court to order such a course of action.

Court is certainly exercising just and equitable jurisdiction in terms of Article 126(4) of the Constitution. In Noble Resources International Pte Limited v. Hon. Ranjith Siyambalapitiya, Minister of Power and Renewable Energy and Others [S.C. FR No. 394/2015, S.C.M. 24.06.2016] The Court issued directives pursuant to Article 126(4) even if no violation of a fundamental right has been established. However, the Court cannot under the guise of just and equitable jurisdiction enshrined in Article 126(4) of the Constitution grant any remedy which requires any person to act contrary to law.

I hold that the Petitioner has failed to establish any violation of Article 12(1) of the Constitution. Moreover, the Court cannot direct the State to calculate compensation assuming both acquisitions were done on the same day as it would require the State to act contrary to law.

Furthermore, the Petitioner has failed to show that he was discriminated in calculating the compensation contrary to Article 12(2).

Article 14 (1) (g)

The petitioner contends that he and his wife were forced to cease their self-employment of supplying readymade garments because of the lack of space in their residence after the acquisition.

Article 14 (1) (g) of the Constitution states that "[e]very citizen is entitled to the freedom to engage by himself or in association with others in any lawful occupation, profession, trade, business or enterprise."

The right to engage in any lawful trade or profession is infringed if that right is restricted contrary to law. [W.M.K. De Silva v. Chairman, Ceylon Fertilizer Corporation (1989) 2 Sri L. R. 393 at pages 407-408, Nuwan Chathuranga Padmasiri and Others v. C.D. Wickremaratne and Others (S.C. (F/R) No. 46/2021, S.C.M. 23.11.2022)].

Moreover, the fundamental right to engage in a trade or business, must be read together with Articles 15 (5), 15 (7) and 15 (8) which demonstrate that Article 14 (1) (g) is not an unrestricted fundamental right.

Specifically, Article 15 (5) states that:

"15 (5). The exercise and operation of the fundamental right declared and recognized by Article 14 (1) (g) shall be subject to such restrictions as may be prescribed by law in the interests of national economy or in relation to –

(a) the professional, technical, academic, financial and other qualifications necessary for practising any profession or carrying on any occupation, trade, business or enterprise and the licensing and disciplinary control of the person entitled to such fundamental right; and

(b) the carrying on by the State, a State agency or a public corporation of any trade, business, industry, service or enterprise whether to the exclusion, complete or partial, of citizens or otherwise." (Emphasis added)

In Licensing of Produce Brokers Bill [Decisions of the Supreme Court on Parliamentary Bills, 1978-1983 (Vol. I), page 32], it was observed that Article 15 (5) restrictions are permitted only in accordance with law. Restrictions over an individual's employment shall be permitted in the interest of the general public [Jeshingbhai v. Emperor AIR 1950 Bombay 363 at page 367].

Road transport is a significant part of economic activity, particularly in developing countries like Sri Lanka. Although it may be difficult to quantify in economic terms, the contribution of transport for national development, there is no doubt that developed road network plays an indispensable role in providing access to a myriad of economic activity including health, education and facilitating markets for economic growth.

Admittedly, the impugned acquisition has been made for a road widening project. The Petitioner in paragraph 14 of the affidavit dated 12.10.2016 states that he "did not intend to stand in the way of the said road widening project considering the national importance of the same". The national importance of the project is thus conceded.

Nevertheless, any restriction on the right to engage by himself or in association with others in any lawful occupation, profession, trade, business or enterprise must be reasonable and proportionate to the object sought to be achieved. Such restrictions would not be reasonable if they arbitrarily and excessively invade the freedom of individuals [Chintamoan Rao v. State of M.P. AIR 1951 SC 118; Rashid Ahmed v. Municipal Board, Kairana AIR 1950 SC 163].

I observe that the State has in this instance resorted to a least intrusive approach in the acquisition of land in the instant case by first acquiring a portion which was deemed to be absolutely necessary for the stated public purpose. The second acquisition followed sometime thereafter.

Moreover, in Elmore Perera v. Major Montague Jayawickrema, Minister of Public Administration and Plantation Industries [(1985) 1 Sri. L. R. 285 at 323] Sharvananda, C. J. held that the discontinuance of a job or employment in which any person is engaged in does not by itself infringe his fundamental right to carry on an occupation or profession which is guaranteed under Article 14 (1) (g) of the Constitution. Despite the claim of discontinuance of self-employment by the Petitioner, attachment marked P26(iv) shows that the Petitioner, at the time of filing this action, continued to engage in his employment, albeit somewhat restrictively for lack of space, and hence, the Petitioner was not completely deprived of his ability to engage in his trade or business.

In any event, the Respondents have factored in the employment of the Petitioner and the impact the acquisition had on it when compensation was calculated. In the final determination of the SUPER LARC dated 12.05.2015 marked as P35, that part has been addressed as "අවිධිමත් ව්‍යාපාර අහිමිවීම" in the computation of Rs. 4,070,041/=.

For all the foregoing reasons, I hold that the Petitioner has failed to establish any violation of Article 14(1)(g) of the Constitution.

Before parting with this judgment, I wish to draw attention to a shortcoming in the Act that must be corrected. The comity between the legislature and the judiciary requires the Court to draw the attention of the legislature to situations where a lacuna in the law prevents the Court from remedying an injustice. The State has chosen a less intrusive method of acquiring land for the project's development by doing it in two stages. This is in line with the principle of proportionality mentioned earlier and should be encouraged to be followed in future acquisitions as well. The Act does not provide for the compensation to be calculated equitably in such a situation, given the provisions in section 7.

The attention of the legislature is drawn to this deficiency in order to examine an appropriate amendment to the relevant provisions to provide for equitable compensation in similar situations.

The application is dismissed without costs.

Obeyesekere, J

The Petitioners filed this application on 8th September 2008, alleging that their fundamental rights guaranteed by Article 12(1) of the Constitution have been infringed by the 1st – 9th and 11th Respondents as a result of the 12th Respondent, G.M. Somaratne, being promoted to the rank of Assistant Superintendent of Police [ASP] with effect from 29th March, 2007 and seeking a direction that the National Police Commission promote the Petitioners to the said rank of ASP with effect from 1st July 1999. On 18th November 2008, this Court granted the Petitioners leave to proceed in respect of the alleged infringement of Article 12(1). Although the Petitioners have thereafter filed an amended petition on 1st December 2008, the relief claimed from this Court has remained the same.

The events that culminated in this application go back to August 1998, and pervades across several fundamental rights and writ applications, to which I shall refer to in detail in order to place the issue that needs to be decided in this application in its proper perspective.

Scheme of Recruitment and Promotion as an Assistant Superintendent of Police

Pursuant to the approval granted by the Cabinet of Ministers on 5th August 1998, the Ministry of Defence submitted to the 1st Respondent, the Inspector General of Police, the schemes of recruitment and promotion of the Senior Gazetted Officers of the Police Department. Schedule 1 of the said scheme [P2] provided for the recruitment and/or promotion to the rank of ASP under three categories. The first category was recruitment through an open competitive examination where graduates of recognised universities who possessed the qualifications set out therein were eligible to apply for selection as ASPs. 25% of the vacancies in the ASP cadre were to be filled under this category. The second category was by way of merit promotion where 50% of the vacancies were to be filled from among Chief Inspectors of Police who had been confirmed in that rank. The third and final category by which selection to the rank of ASP was to be done was through the results of a limited competitive examination. The balance 25% of the vacancies were to be filled under this final category, and it is this category that is the subject matter of this application.

In order to be eligible to apply under the limited competitive category, a candidate was required to either be a Chief Inspector of Police, or an Inspector of Police with 10 years in service, and possess an unblemished record of service during the five-year period immediately before the closing date of applications. The selection procedure stipulated in Schedule 1 of the Scheme of Promotion required each candidate to sit for a written examination conducted by the Commissioner General of Examinations, for which 75% of the marks were allotted, and to face a viva voce interview before a Board of Interview appointed by the Public Service Commission, for which the balance 25% of the marks were allotted. Thus, the ratio between the marks for the written examination and the interview was 3:1.

Under this selection procedure, it had been noted that, "The number of candidates summoned for the viva voce test will be equal to five times the number of vacancies to be filled, but the candidates to be so summoned will be limited to those who have obtained a minimum of 40% marks at the written examination." The requirement to call 5 times the number of qualified candidates was applicable to all three categories referred to above. Under the third category, a candidate had to satisfy two criteria in order to be eligible to be called for the interview. The first was to obtain a minimum of 40% marks at the written examination and the second was to be within 5 times the number of vacancies.

Calling for applications

By an internal Circular dated 3rd September 1998 [P3], the then Inspector General of Police called for applications to fill the vacancies that existed in the rank of ASP under the aforementioned third category.

The Petitioners, who at that time were either holding the rank of Chief Inspector of Police, or Inspector of Police with ten years in service, had applied and sat for the limited competitive examination held in November 1998. It is admitted that each candidate was required to sit for the following subjects, with the total number of marks for the examination being 600, and the marks being apportioned in the following manner:

Subject	Mark
Language Ability (essay and precis)	150
General Knowledge and Intelligence	150
Social, Political and Economic Development	100
Practical Police Methods	100
Police Administration	100

As the number of vacancies that existed at that time was 14, 70 candidates were entitled to be called for the interview. Accordingly, the then Secretary, Ministry of Defence, by a letter dated 26th February 1999 [P4a], had requested the Commissioner General of Examinations to submit a list containing the names of the 70 candidates who had obtained the highest marks at the examination, provided they had obtained the minimum 40% mark, but without specifying the marks obtained by each of the said candidates at the written examination. It is admitted that those placed at the 71st and 72nd positions at the said examination had obtained the same mark as the candidate placed at the 70th position, and that the Commissioner General of Examinations had sent a list containing the names of 72 candidates, including the Petitioners – vide P4b – in the ascending order of the index numbers of the 72 candidates. It is also admitted that the Petitioners were thereafter called for the viva voce interview held in March 1999. Upon the conclusion of the interview, the marks allotted to each of the candidates at the interview had been sent to the Department of Examinations for the purpose of aggregating with the marks at the written examination, in order to determine the candidates who are eligible to fill the 14 vacancies that existed at that time.

Conversion of the marks

It must be noted that when submitting the marks, the Department of Examinations was required to submit the marks that each candidate had obtained out of (a) 600 at the written examination, and (b) 200 at the viva voce interview. However, in the final mark sheet [P5] submitted by the Department of Examinations, which I shall refer to as the 'converted mark sheet,' it had converted the 150 marks allocated for the Language and General Knowledge question papers to 100 through a process of pro-rating the marks obtained for the said subjects, and marked each candidate by a total of 500 marks for the written examination. In other words, the Department of Examinations had allotted 100 marks for each of the five examination papers, contrary to the Circular issued by the Inspector General of Police which stipulated that the written examination will attract 600 marks. Consequently, it was contrary to the stipulation that the ratio between the written examination component and the viva voce interview shall be 3:1, since the ratio effectively was now 5:2.

The first application challenging the results

The above conversion of the marks does not appear to have drawn the attention of either the Inspector General of Police or the Public Service Commission, and the first 14 candidates in the converted mark sheet P5 were appointed to the post of ASP by the Public Service Commission with effect from 7th June 1999. It must be observed that while the candidate placed 1st had an aggregate of 375.4 marks, the candidate placed 14th had an aggregate of 329 marks.

Several unsuccessful candidates who were dissatisfied with the said appointments filed Fundamental Rights Application Nos. 607/1999, 609/1999, 641/1999, 646/1999 and 647/1999, alleging that their fundamental rights guaranteed by Article 12(1) have been infringed as a result of the said appointments. Unaware of the fact that the Department of Examinations had converted the marks in two subjects and that the total marks at the written examination had been calculated out of a mark of 500 as opposed to 600, these petitioners complained that some of the candidates appointed had not crossed the 40% threshold required in the written examination in order to be eligible to be called for the interview. It is at this point that the Department of Examinations disclosed that the raw marks out of 150 in respect of each of the two subjects (Language and General Knowledge) had been converted to a percentage of 100 in respect of all candidates, with the Department of Examinations claiming that this was in accordance with the practice prevailing at that time at the said Department.

By its judgment dated 12th January 2000, this Court dismissed the said applications while holding that, "this practice adopted by the Commissioner of Examinations to convert the marks obtained by the candidates out of 150 for the first two subjects to a percentage to ensure uniformity has not caused any prejudice to any of the candidates as that was the practice that had prevailed in the Department of Examinations." Thus, for all intents and purposes, this Court had sanctioned the converted mark sheet, and the appointments made pursuant thereto.

The raw mark sheet

The mark sheet prior to the aforementioned conversion, where the marks given out of 600 are reflected, was produced together with the petition marked as P7. The said mark sheet which I shall refer to as the 'raw mark sheet' is dated 16th February 2000 and has been prepared subsequent in time to the judgment of this Court in SC (FR) Application No. 609/1999. Although the circumstances under which P7 was prepared have not been explained to this Court either by the Petitioners or by the Respondents, it appears that P7 was prepared in order to arrive at a settlement in CA (Writ) Application No. 1164/1999 filed by an unsuccessful candidate, to which application I shall advert to, later.

According to P7, 13 of the 14 candidates who were promoted under the converted mark sheet were identical to the first 13 candidates in the raw mark sheet. Therefore, irrespective of whether the appointments had been done on the basis of the converted mark sheet or the raw mark sheet, the appointment of 13 of the 14 candidates was beyond challenge.

The issue arose, however, with the appointment of L.H.E. Cooray, who was placed 13th on the converted mark sheet, but only placed 17th on the raw mark sheet. Thus, had the raw mark sheet been adopted for the purpose of making the promotions instead of the converted mark sheet, someone other than Cooray would have been eligible for appointment.

Court of Appeal (Writ) Application No. 1164/1999

H.K.D.W.M.G.D. Ratnatilleke, who had been placed 14th in the raw mark sheet (but 20th on the converted mark sheet) and who therefore had obtained higher marks than L.H.E. Cooray under the raw mark sheet, complained to the Court of Appeal in CA (Writ) Application No. 1164/1999 that the practice of pro-rating of marks was arbitrary and in excess of the powers of the Commissioner General of Examinations. Even though this Court in SC (FR) Application No. 607/1999 did not find the preparation of the converted mark sheet obnoxious, the Public Service Commission, who by then had obtained the raw mark sheet dated 16th February 2000 [P7], had appointed Ratnatilleke, as well as M. Moses and V.D. Chandrasiri, who were placed 15th and 16th on the raw mark sheet, to the post of ASP with effect from 7th June 1999.

There are four observations that I must make at this stage. The first is that with the said appointments, the Public Service Commission opened the doors to cross-refer or zigzag between the two mark sheets. The second is that the Public Service Commission formally recognised the raw mark sheet and commenced making appointments based on the raw mark sheet, thus recognising the existence of two mark sheets and in the process creating two parallel streams of candidates, even though the source of both streams was the results of one examination. The third is that the appointment of Ratnatilleke, Moses and Chandrasiri were over and above the 14 vacancies that existed under the aforementioned third category and were therefore outside the approved cadre of ASPs prevailing at that time for the said category. The fourth is that even though Ratnatilleke, Moses and Chandrasiri were placed 14th, 15th and 16th on the raw mark sheet, they were placed 20th, 39th and 29th respectively, in the converted mark sheet, which meant that more litigation was bound to follow from those who had scored more marks than Ratnatilleke, Moses and Chandrasiri on the converted mark sheet, demanding that the cross-referencing between the two mark sheets continue.

Further litigation before the Court of Appeal

As ought to have been expected, the said appointments of Ratnatilleke, Moses and Chandrasiri as ASPs spurred further litigation. The first was CA (Writ) Application No. 736/2000, filed by those candidates placed 15th – 19th, 22nd, 25th, 26th, 31st, 34th, 36th and 37th on the converted mark sheet. The second was CA (Writ) Application No. 907/2000, filed by W.M.R.M. Welikanna who was placed 24th on the converted mark sheet. The complaint of the petitioners in the above two applications (which were taken up together) was that as all of them were placed higher on the converted mark sheet than Moses and some of them higher than Ratnatilleke and Chandrasiri as well, the appointment of Moses was, and where applicable, that of Ratnatilleke and Chandrasiri were, arbitrary and illegal.

The fact that the Court of Appeal was puzzled by the necessity for the Public Service Commission to prepare and act on the raw mark sheet when this Court had accepted the converted mark sheet as not being violative of Article 12(1), is evident from the following passage of the judgment of Amaratunga, J in Karavita and Others and Welikanna v Inspector General of Police and Others [(2002) 2 Sri LR 287 at 294]:

> "Several questions arise in view of the aforesaid averment. What was the necessity to amend the marks sheet tendered to the Supreme Court? Were there mistakes in P5 [converted mark sheet] and if so what were those mistakes and how did such mistakes occur? Who detected those mistakes and who requested or authorized the preparation of an amended marks sheet? I cannot find answers to any of the above questions in the affidavit of the 4th respondent. The Commissioner General of Examinations is a respondent to these applications but he has not filed an affidavit setting out the reasons for and the basis on which he prepared the amended mark sheet 4R1. In the absence of any explanation from the Commissioner General of Examinations, Chairman of the Public Service Commission or from the Inspector General of Police the reason for the preparation of the amended mark sheet remains a mystery as far as this Court and these applications are concerned."

The Court of Appeal issued a Writ of Mandamus to appoint all the petitioners in CA (Writ) Application Nos. 736/2000 and 907/2000 as ASPs with effect from 7th June 1999 as, "The respondents have failed to establish the validity of the amended mark sheet 4R1 as against the original mark sheet accepted by the Supreme Court as the correct mark sheet (and also by the PSC by appointing 14 ASPP on the basis of P5) and as such the respondent members of the PSC are under a duty to order promotions on the basis of the results reflected in P5*. By promoting a person who has obtained less marks than all petitioners in these two applications they have failed to perform their duty according to law and have failed to adhere to the results reflected in P5.*" [emphasis added].

A few weeks after the delivery of the above judgment, CA (Writ) Application No. 1016/2002 had been filed by those candidates who had been placed 21st, 23rd, 27th, 30th, 32nd, 33rd, 35th and 38th on the converted mark sheet. Udalagama, J, P/CA (as he then was), referring to the judgment of this Court in SC (FR) Application No. 607/1999 and the related cases held that while he is "inclined to the view that the aforesaid Supreme Court decision … conferred legal sanctity to the results released by the Commissioner of Examinations and that the respondents to those applications were legally bound to give effect to same," the Public Service Commission had "flagrantly ignored the legal sanctity conferred on the results sheet." It is in this background that the Court of Appeal held in Application No. 1016/2002 that the petitioners in that application, by virtue of the fact that they were placed higher on the converted mark sheet than Moses and some of them over Chandrasiri, are entitled to be promoted to the rank of ASP, with effect from 1st July 1999. With this judgment, the first 39 candidates on the converted mark sheet, except the 28th Respondent, had been promoted to the rank of ASP, even though the number of vacancies was only 14 at the time applications were called.

It will thus be seen that even after this Court found that the converted mark sheet was not illegal, the Public Service Commission acted on the raw mark sheet and made appointments in terms of the raw mark sheet, with the result that there was litigation whenever those on the converted mark sheet, who had more marks than those on the raw mark sheet, were appointed, or vice versa.

Litigation continued when another set of officers who were placed higher in the order of merit in the raw mark sheet than many others appointed on the basis of the converted mark sheet filed Writ Application No. 1484/2002 in the Court of Appeal. Although the said application had been dismissed, upon special leave to appeal being sought [SC Spl L/A Application Nos. 13/2005 and 14/2005], this Court had directed that administrative relief be sought from the National Police Commission. The National Police Commission had accordingly appointed the petitioners in those cases, namely K. Wedasinghe, K.K.A.P. Mapalagama, H.H. Chulasiri, C.A. Premashantha and G.W.W.B.R.M. Dambagalla, who were placed 44th, 47th, 48th, 49th and 54th respectively on the converted mark sheet, and 46th, 43rd, 44th, 38th and 33rd respectively on the raw mark sheet, as ASPs. These appointments, which had been conveyed to this Court on 9th November 2007, were with effect from 29th March 2007, and thus brought the number of appointments made outside the approved cadre to 30.

Appointment of the 12th Respondent as an ASP

The above five appointments saw five other candidates, namely L.A. Guneratne, M.A.D. Dhanasekara E.M.U.V. Guneratne, S.D.S.P. Sandanayake and the 12th Respondent, G.M. Somaratne, who were placed 40th, 42nd, 45th, 50th and 52nd respectively in the converted mark sheet, file Fundamental Rights Application No. 6/2008, claiming that under the converted mark sheet, some or all of the aforementioned five appointees had less marks than them, and that the appointments of the said five candidates were violative of their fundamental right to the equal protection of the law.

This application too had been settled by the National Police Commission. According to its decision dated 8th May 2008, the National Police Commission, having observed that all five petitioners had secured more marks than Dambagalla (i.e., more than 300 marks) in the converted mark sheet, had appointed the aforementioned petitioners including the 12th Respondent to the rank of ASP with effect from 29th March 2007.

The complaint of the Petitioners

The 12th Respondent's promotion to the rank of ASP was based on his ranking in the converted mark sheet. However, in terms of the raw mark sheet, the 12th Respondent had identical marks as that of the 7th Petitioner in this application, but was otherwise placed below the other six Petitioners. This prompted the filing of this application, with the Petitioners alleging that their fundamental right to equality guaranteed by Article 12(1) of the Constitution had been infringed by the Respondents as a result of the 12th Respondent being promoted over and above them to the rank of ASP with effect from 29th March, 2007. It is on this basis that the Petitioners, who claim that they became aware of these appointments when it was communicated within the Police Department on 14th August 2008, filed this application soon thereafter, seeking a declaration that their fundamental right to the equal protection of the law guaranteed by Article 12(1) had been infringed and a direction that the National Police Commission promote the Petitioners to the rank of ASP with effect from 1st July 1999.

The learned President's Counsel for the Petitioners presented two arguments before us.

The conversion of the marks distort the promotion scheme

The first argument was that even though the Circular issued by the Inspector General of Police required 600 marks to be given for the written examination and 200 marks for the viva voce interview, and thereby maintain a ratio of 75% to 25% (i.e., 3:1) between the two, by adjusting the marks at the written examination to a total of 500, the percentage for the written examination had been brought down from 75% to 71.4%, thereby distorting the intended ratio as well as the scheme contemplated by the said Circular, and resulting in a deviation from the marking scheme set out therein. It is on this basis that the learned President's Counsel submitted that the converted mark sheet is contrary to the scheme embodied in P2, and that this Court must uphold the raw mark sheet as the only correct mark sheet.

Article 126(2) of the Constitution requires an infringement of a fundamental right to be challenged within one month of the said infringement. It has been held in Demuni Sriyani De Soyza and Others v Dharmasena Dissanayake, Chairman, Public Service Commission and Others [SC (FR) Application No. 206/2008; SC minutes of 9th December 2016] that, other than the limited exceptions which have been referred to therein, it is mandatory to comply with the provisions of Article 126(2). The fact that the Department of Examinations had converted the marks at the written examination to 500 and that the initial 14 appointments had been made on the results of the said converted mark sheet, should have been known to the Petitioners as far back as 1999 when the converted mark sheet and the appointments that were made on the basis of that mark sheet were made public in the pleadings tendered to this Court by the respondents in SC (FR) Application No. 607/1999, or, at the very least soon thereafter and definitely much earlier than 2008, given the number of promotions made pursuant to the aforementioned litigation. This application has been filed almost nine years after this Court delivered its judgment in SC (FR) Application No. 607/1999, where the converted mark sheet and the consequential appointments were disclosed for the first time. In the absence of any of the exceptions referred to in Demuni Sriyani De Soyza, I am of the view that the Petitioners cannot challenge the preparation of the converted mark sheet and the appointments made thereon in this application. Nor can they now claim that the raw mark sheet is the correct mark sheet, as such a challenge is not only contrary to the provisions of Article 126(2), but with the judgment of this Court in SC(FR) Application No. 607/1999.

The appointment of the 12th Respondent - revisited

The second argument of the learned President's Counsel for the Petitioners was that the appointment of the 12th Respondent, who had identical or less marks than the Petitioners on the raw mark sheet is in violation of the Petitioners' right to equality guaranteed by Article 12(1). In essence, the Petitioners are asking this Court to continue to cross refer between the two mark sheets, as has been done on previous occasions when promotions were granted, except for the first appointment of 14 candidates.

As this argument of the learned President's Counsel centres around the 12th Respondent's appointment as an ASP through the actions of the National Police Commission, it would be apt at this point to consider in detail the basis on which the said Commission effected the promotions, first in SC Spl L/A Application Nos. 13/2005 & 14/2005 and thereafter in SC (FR) Application No. 6/2008.

The learned Deputy Solicitor General submitted that pursuant to this Court directing the parties in SC Spl L/A Application Nos. 13/2005 and 14/2005 to make representations to the National Police Commission and seek administrative relief, the National Police Commission had appointed a sub-committee to consider the grievance of the petitioners in those two cases. It must be observed thar the petitioners in the above two cases, namely Wedasinghe, Mapalagama, Chulasiri, Premashantha and Dambagalla had obtained more marks than M.K. Dayananda and D.G.R.M. Ellepola on the raw mark sheet but the latter two officers had been appointed as ASPs as a result of them having been placed at the 34th and 36th positions (and higher than those petitioners) in the converted mark sheet [vide CA (Writ) Application No. 736/2000].

In its report [3R7], the Sub-Committee had observed as follows:

> "The sub-committee in deference to the wish of the Supreme Court considered a way to resolve the problem with the view to granting administrative relief to those who secured more raw marks than Mr. Dayananda and Mr. Ellepola. In doing so, the Committee arrived at the following formula.
> Those who had obtained above 340 marks as raw marks, and above 284 marks as converted marks, and who possessed an unblemished record of service, as stipulated in the advertisement calling for applications for promotion, may be promoted to the rank of ASP."

Although the Sub-Committee had not given a basis for determining the above cut-off mark, had the said cut-off mark proposed by the Sub-Committee been adopted, whether it be under the converted mark sheet or the raw mark sheet, 70 of the 72 candidates who had faced the interview would have been eligible for promotion. However, that was not an issue in SC Spl L/A Application Nos. 13/2005 and 14/2005 as the petitioner who had scored the lowest mark on the converted mark sheet [Dambagalla] had 300 marks, and the petitioner who scored the lowest mark on the raw mark sheet [Wedasinghe] had scored 364.8 marks. Be that as it may, the above recommendation to have a cut off mark in respect of each mark sheet was acted upon and the petitioners in SC Spl L/A Application Nos. 13/2005 and 14/2005 were appointed as ASPs with effect from 8th August 2007.

As I have already stated, the above settlement was followed by the filing of SC (FR) Application No. 6/2008, with the petitioners in that application claiming that in terms of the converted mark sheet, one or more of them had more marks than those appointed as per the settlement in SC Spl L/A Application Nos. 13/2005 and 14/2005. The National Police Commission considered the position of the petitioners in the former application, and in their decision [3R10] concluded as follows:

> "Notwithstanding the cut-off marks decided earlier, the Commission felt that 60% of the total marks for the five papers ought to be 360; and 60% of the converted marks for the five papers ought to be 300 marks. An officer who stands above either of the two marks could claim for promotion."

Thus, the National Police Commission gave equal importance to both mark sheets but in the process ensured that cross-referencing between each mark sheet shall not be done henceforth. As L.A Guneratne, Dhanasekara, E.M.U.V Guneratne, Sandanayake and Somaratne had all obtained over 300 marks in the converted mark sheet, they became eligible to be appointed as ASPs in accordance with the decision of the National Police Commission to promote any candidate who had obtained over 300 marks in the converted mark sheet. Accordingly, the petitioners in SC (FR) Application No. 6/2008 had been promoted to the rank of ASP with effect from 29th March 2007.

In order to capture the above in its proper context, the marks obtained by the Petitioners under each of the mark sheets vis-à-vis the 12th Respondent are produced below:

Name	Marks in the converted mark sheet	Rank in the converted mark sheet (P5)	Marks in the raw marks sheet	Rank in the raw mark sheet (P7)
1st Petitioner	297.4	56	362.4	49
2nd Petitioner	297.2	58	357.2	54
3rd Petitioner	291.6	62	355.6	56
4th Petitioner	285	66	354	57
5th Petitioner	289.8	63	351.8	60
6th Petitioner	297.6	55	351.6	61
7th Petitioner	284.8	68	350.8	64
12th Respondent	301.8	52	350.8	63

The disparity in the marks under the two mark sheets is amply demonstrated by the document marked P8 annexed to the petition, in which the Petitioners have set out the names of the 72 candidates and the marks obtained by each of them in terms of both the converted mark sheet and the raw mark sheet.

The resultant position of the above decision of the National Police Commission, as reflected in P8, can be summarised as follows:

(a) The 12th Respondent has obtained 301.8 marks in the converted mark sheet, and was therefore eligible to be appointed as an ASP;

(b) The last candidate from the converted mark sheet to have been promoted was Dambagalla, who had 300 marks;

(c) All seven Petitioners had marks less than 300 in the converted mark sheet and were therefore not eligible for promotion;

(d) Under the raw mark sheet, the 12th Respondent had only obtained 350.8 marks and was ineligible to be promoted. However, the 12th Respondent was not promoted on the results he had on the raw mark sheet;

(e) While the 1st Petitioner had scored 362.4 marks under the raw mark sheet and was eligible to be promoted as an ASP in terms of the said decision, the other Petitioners had scored less than 360 marks in the raw mark sheet and were therefore not eligible for promotion;

(f) Although the 7th Petitioner had identical marks to that of the 12th Respondent in terms of the raw mark sheet, all other Petitioners had scored more marks than the 12th Respondent. However, this was irrelevant as the 12th Respondent had not been promoted on the result he had obtained in terms of the raw mark sheet.

I shall now consider whether the decision to recognise two distinct mark sheets and the imposition of a cut off mark by way of a minimum percentage in respect of both mark sheets, is a violation of Article 12(1).

Article 12(1)

Article 12(1) of the Constitution provides that, "All persons are equal before the law and are entitled to the equal protection of the law."

In Karunathilaka and Another vs Jayalath de Silva and Others [2003 (1) Sri LR 35], Shirani Bandaranayake, J (as she then was) pointed out as follows:

> "The basic principle governing the concept of equality is to remove unfairness and arbitrariness. It profoundly forbids actions, which deny equality and thereby becomes discriminative. The hallmark of the concept of equality is to ensure that fairness is meted out. Article 12(1) of the Constitution*, which governs the principles of equality,* approves actions which have a reasonable basis for the decision and this Court has not been hesitant to accept those as purely valid decisions." [emphasis added]

In Wickremasinghe vs Ceylon Petroleum Corporation and Others [2001 (2) Sri LR 409 at 416-417], Chief Justice Sarath Silva, having considered whether the decision of the Ceylon Petroleum Corporation to terminate the lease agreement that it had with the petitioner was arbitrary in the context of the said decision being unreasonable, stated as follows:

> "The question of reasonableness of the impugned action has to be judged in the aforesaid state of facts. The claim of each party appears to have merit when looked at from the particular standpoint of that party. But, reasonableness, particularly as the basic component of the guarantee of equality, has to be judged on an objective basis which stands above the competing claims of parties.
> The protection of equality is primarily in respect of law, taken in its widest sense and, extends to executive or administrative action referable to the exercise of power vested in the Government, a minister, public officer or an agency of the Government. However, the Court has to be cautious to ensure that the application of the guarantee of equality does not finally produce iniquitous consequences. A useful safeguard in this respect would be the application of a basic standard or its elements, wherever applicable. The principal element in the basic standard as stated above is reasonableness as opposed to being arbitrary. In respect of legislation where the question would be looked more in the abstract, one would look at the class of persons affected by the law in relation to those left out. In respect of executive or administrative action one would look at the person who is alleging the infringement and the extent to which such person is affected or would be affected. But, the test once again is one of being reasonable and not arbitrary. Of particular significance to the facts of this case, the question arises as to the perspective or standpoint from which such reasonableness should be judged. It certainly cannot be judged only from a subjective basis of hardship to one and benefit to the other. Executive or administrative action may bring in its wake hardship to some, such as deprivation of property through acquisition, taxes, disciplinary action and loss of employment. At the same time it can bring benefits to others, such as employment, subsidies, rebates, admission to universities, schools and housing facilities. It necessarily follows that reasonableness should be judged from an objective basis.

When applied to the sphere of the executive or the administration the second element of the basic standard would require that the impugned action, is based on discernible grounds that have a fair and substantial relation to the object of the legislation in terms of which the action is taken or the manifest object of the power that is vested with the particular authority.

Therefore, when both elements of the basic standard are applied it requires that the executive or administrative action in question be reasonable and based on discernible grounds that are fairly and substantially related to the object of the legislation in terms of which the action is taken or the manifest object of the power that is vested with the particular authority. The requirements of both elements merge. If the action at issue is based on discernible grounds that are fairly and substantially related to the object of the legislation or the manifest object of the power that is vested in the authority, it would ordinarily follow that the action is reasonable. The requirement to be reasonable as opposed to arbitrary would in this context pertain to the process of ascertaining and evaluating these grounds in the light of the extent of discretion vested in the authority." [emphasis added]

In W.P.S. Wijerathna vs Sri Lanka Ports Authority and Others [SC (FR) Application No. 256/2017; SC minutes of 11th December 2020], Kodagoda, PC, J, having referred to the long line of cases which had considered the application of the principle of equality enshrined in Article 12(1) in the context of appointments and promotions in the Public Service, observed that, "… as pointed out repeatedly by numerous erudite judges, 'arbitrariness is the anathema of equality'. In India's former Chief Justice Bhagwati's words, 'equality and arbitrariness are sworn enemies'."

The resultant position would then be that while the executive or administrative action in question must be reasonable and based on discernible grounds, reasonableness must be linked to the manifest object of the power that is vested with the particular authority and looked at in the context of the measure, consistent with that object, sought to be achieved.

Is the decision of the National Police Commission arbitrary?

I must state at the outset that the situation that has arisen is extremely unusual. Candidates who sit for the same written examination and face the same interview board must stand on the same level playing field and must be treated equally. There must be only one mark sheet and the successful candidates must be selected according to merit, based on the results of the examination and interview. The fact of the matter is that the preparation of the converted mark sheet by the Department of Examinations was accepted by this Court, and thereafter all appointments should have been made in terms of the converted mark sheet.

Wittingly or not, the decision of the Public Service Commission to promote Ratnatilleke, Moses and Chandrasiri on the basis of the marks obtained by them in the raw mark sheet has resulted in the Public Service Commission making appointments based on the results of one examination under two separate mark sheets. However, by cross-referring to both mark sheets in making appointments, and by comparing the marks obtained by one candidate in one mark sheet with the marks obtained by another candidate in the other mark sheet, the two mark sheets have been integrated into one another and effectively been considered as one.

Although 13 of the 14 candidates who were initially appointed featured in both sets of mark sheets, it was not so with regard to the other candidates, and switching between mark sheets was similar to a game of snakes and ladders. As is evident from the above narration, by cross-referring to the marks in the two separate mark sheets, whenever an appointment was made under the converted mark sheet, this gave rise to a situation of the appointee having less marks than another candidate in terms of the raw mark sheet, or vice versa. The end result was that an examination that was scheduled to select 14 candidates for appointment to the rank of ASP and for which 72 candidates had been interviewed, had resulted in the appointment of an additional 40 candidates, well above the cadre requirement of the Police Department.

As I have already stated, the problem arose when the Public Service Commission acted on the raw mark sheet despite this Court having sanctioned the converted mark sheet. The result was complete pandemonium as candidates who were otherwise not eligible for promotion by virtue of not being within the first 14 successful candidates suddenly found that they could claim inequal treatment, with the end result being that 54 Chief Inspectors of Police or Inspectors of Police were promoted to the rank of ASP, when the number of vacancies was only 14. In my view, a solution had to be found to the absurd situation that resulted from the ill-considered actions of the Public Service Commission.

By its aforesaid decision 3R10, the National Police Commission has:

(a) formally recognised the existence of two separate mark sheets; and

(b) created two distinct and parallel streams from which promotions could be made, subject to the limitation that irrespective of the mark sheet from which a candidate is selected, in order to be promoted to the rank of ASP, a candidate must have scored a minimum mark.

None of the Petitioners have achieved the said cut off mark under either of the mark sheets, except the 1st Petitioner, who has scored 362.4 marks, as per the raw mark sheet, and who has since been promoted.

As this is the basis on which the promotion of the Petitioners has been denied, the question that must be answered is whether the said course of action adopted by the National Police Commission is arbitrary and therefore a violation of the provisions of Article 12(1).

In 'Fundamental Rights in Sri Lanka – A Commentary' by Chief Justice S. Sharvananda (1993), he has stated as follows at page 81:

> "Equal protection means the right to equal treatment in similar circumstances, both in the privileges conferred and in the liabilities imposed by the law … The guiding principle is that all persons and things similarly circumstanced shall be treated alike.

'Equality before the law' means that among equals the law should be equal and should be equally administered and that the like should be treated alike. What it forbids is discrimination between persons who are substantially in similar circumstances or conditions… It is the guarantee that similar people will be dealt with in a similar manner and that people of different circumstances will not be treated as if they were the same."

True enough, the Petitioners and those who have been promoted prior to that have all stood together at the starting point. But as submitted by the learned Deputy Solicitor General, as they went along, they have branched out into two separate and distinct streams, and thus, those in one stream ceased to be similarly circumstanced with those in the other stream. While candidates in each stream were placed in equal circumstances within that stream, they were not so equally circumstanced, vis-à-vis the other stream. In other words, cross-referencing between the two streams could not be done as the basis for their selection had changed and were distinct to one another. To that extent, I am of the opinion that the Public Service Commission, and later the National Police Commission had erred when they started comparing the marks of one mark sheet with that of the other.

It is in these circumstances that a solution had to be found, in order to put a stop to the absurdity that had arisen. The resulting solution [3R10] was to treat the candidates under two distinct mark sheets, and thereafter impose a cut off mark by way of a minimum percentage in respect of each mark sheet, thus bringing a semblance of uniformity and common sense to the issue before us.

I am of the view that the said decision is reasonable, when considered in the backdrop of the following factors:

(a) There existed only 14 vacancies, and thus, a candidate knew very well that in order to be promoted, he must be within the first 14;

(b) While the first 14 in the converted mark sheet had obtained a mark ranging from 375 – 329, the Petitioners had obtained between 284.8 – 297.6 marks;

(c) While the first 14 in the raw mark sheet had obtained a mark ranging from 444.6 – 390.6, the Petitioners had obtained between 350.8 – 362.4 marks;

(d) In terms of the converted mark sheet, none of the Petitioners had scored more marks than the 12th Respondent who was promoted by virtue of having scored 301.8 marks on the converted mark sheet;

(e) In view of the recognition of two distinct streams, and as the Petitioners were no longer similarly circumstanced as the 12th Respondent, comparing the marks of the 12th Respondent on the raw mark sheet with the marks obtained by the Petitioners on the raw mark sheet is both illegal and unwarranted;

(f) If, as has been done previously, the Petitioners are promoted by virtue of having either an identical or higher mark than the 12th Respondent on the raw mark sheet, that would result in a further seven candidates from the converted mark sheet who are placed higher than the Petitioners being promoted, with the result that 69 of the 72 candidates who faced the interview must be promoted. And, the cycle would continue;

(g) There is no proof of discriminatory intent or purpose, and nor has the National Police Commission acted with an evil eye and an unequal hand so as to discriminate between persons in similar circumstances.

In the above circumstances, I am of the view that:

(a) Other than the 1st Petitioner who has already been appointed as an ASP, the other Petitioners are not entitled to be promoted to the rank of ASP on the basis of the results obtained by them at the examination held in November 1998 and the interview that followed;

(b) The fundamental rights of the Petitioners guaranteed by Article 12(1) have not been infringed by the 1st – 9th and 11th Respondents.

This application is accordingly dismissed, without costs.

K. PRIYANTHA FERNANDO, J

1. The two petitioners are employees of Rodrigo Suppliers which is a business engaged in exporting sea food, meat, vegetables and bakery products in whole sale. The first petitioner is the driver of the lorry bearing Registration No. WPLF 5769 and the second petitioner is the cleaner of the same lorry. The two petitioners complained of the alleged violation of their rights guaranteed under Articles 12(1) and 13(1) of the Constitution due to the actions of the respondents. This Court granted leave to proceed for both the alleged violations.

2. The Facts
According to the petitioners, on 15.09.2016 they set off in a lorry bearing Registration No. WPLF 5769 to go to Haneefa Farm in Mihintale. Upon reaching the farm, they purchased 300kg of mutton priced at Rs. 322,500 (receipt [P-1]). At around 4.00 p.m. on the same day, they loaded the mutton after getting it inspected and approved by the Public Health Inspector (PHI) of Mihintale. The petitioners left the farm at around 10.00 p.m. to come towards Negombo.

3. When they were on their way to Negombo, on the 16.09.2016 which was a poya day, the lorry was stopped in Maha Weva at about 2.30 am by the 2nd respondent who is a police sergeant and some other police officers. The police officers have asked them to show their permit for transporting meat. The petitioners have stated that, they have often been transporting meat and such permit was never required.

4. Thereafter, the 2nd respondent arrested the petitioners and took both the petitioners along with the vehicle containing mutton to police custody. The petitioners state that they were not informed the reason for the arrest. Thereafter, at about 6.30 a.m. they were locked up at Marawila police station and was produced before the Acting Magistrate of Marawila at 4.00 p.m. on the same day. According to the Magistrate Court record No. B/1137/16 [P-2] the petitioners were released on bail and the Magistrate ordered to continue to keep the mutton in the cooler of the lorry. The Magistrate further called for a veterinary surgeon's report and the case was called on 19.09.2016, on which the police informed Court that the report of the veterinary surgeon dated 17.09.2016 stated that the meat was not fit for human consumption.

5. On 21.09.2016, upon the request of Court, reports from the veterinary surgeon [P-2(a)] and the PHI [P-2(b)] were produced to Court, which stated that the mutton was not fit for consumption. Thereafter, the Court directed to destroy the meat and the lorry be released to the owner subject to a bond.

6. According to the B report filed by the 1st respondent [P-2(c)] the petitioners were said to have been arrested on the basis of transporting 300kg of mutton without permit, an offence said to be punishable under section 4(1) of the Butchers (Amendment) Act.

7. Later, on 19.09.2016, the police stated that the law set out in the B report was erroneous and on 21.09.2016 they stated that the relevant law under which the petitioners had committed an offence was section 20(a) read with 20(1) of Butchers' Ordinance 1957 and section 14 read with section 17 of the Holidays Act No. 29 of 1971.

8. The petitioners state that the law set out above has no application to them as it was purchased on 15.09.2016, and as they have not committed an offence there is no cause for their arrest and detainment by the 1st and the 2nd respondents which makes the arrest contrary to law.

9. On behalf of the respondents, it was submitted that, the petitioners were arrested while transporting a huge quantity of meat during the wee hours of a Poya day. It is the contention of the learned Deputy Solicitor General (DSG) for the respondents, that in the circumstances, there existed a reasonable suspicion that animals have been slaughtered for sale on a Poya day. It was further submitted that, the petitioners were charged under the provisions of the Food Act for the possession and transporting of mutton which is unsuitable for human consumption, as per the report of the Veterinary Research Institute of Gannoruwa. It is the contention of the learned DSG that, the 1st and the 2nd respondents have always acted in good faith in conducting their duties.

10. Admittedly, the petitioners were arrested in the wee hours of 16.09.2016. The petitioners have been in possession of a receipt [P-1] for purchasing the 300kg of mutton from Mihintale. Admittedly, the petitioners were in possession of a certificate issued by the PHI of Mihinatle, which was taken by the police.

11. The petitioners were initially produced before the Magistrate Court of Marawila on 16.09.2016 with the B report which stated that the petitioners have committed an offence in terms of section 4(1) of the Butchers Act No. 13 of 2008. In the B report signed by the Headquarters Inspector of Marawila (1st respondent), he has moved the learned Magistrate to remand the petitioners till 23.09.2016, that is, until they obtain a report from the Government Veterinary Officer.

12. As per the report issued by the PHI of Thoduwawa, he has examined the meat (mutton) on 21.09.2016 at 2:30 p.m. on which he found that the temperature of the deep freezer truck was not up to the expected standard, and that the meat is not fit for human consumption and also that the official stamp was not visible on the meat.

13. Although the learned DSG for the respondents submitted that the official stamp was not visible on the meat, when the petitioners were arrested, no such thing was reported to the learned Magistrate in the first B report. It is observed that it may have been an afterthought when the police obtained the report form the PHI on 21.09.2016 which stated that the official stamp was not visible on the meat. It is pertinent to note that, the PHI of Marawila has inspected the meat on 21.09.2016, which is five days after the arrest of the petitioners.

14. Both the reports issued by the PHI of Marawila and the PHI of Thoduwawa [P-2(a)] and [P-2(b)] respectively, were issued on 21.09.2016, that is five days after the arrest. As per the petition, when the petitioners were arrested, they were in possession of a report from the PHI of Mihintale to the effect that the lorry was fit to transport meat and that the meat was fit for human consumption. The respondents in their objections/written submissions on their behalf, other than the general denial of the averments of the petition, has not specifically denied that the petitioners were in possession of the PHI report.

15. The learned DSG for the respondents submitted that, when the respondents stopped the lorry, the temperature of the freezer was shown to be not up to the expected standard. However, the respondents have failed to mention this in the first B report. Although it is mentioned in the notes of the police officers, those notes were pasted on the 25.09.2016, 6 days after the incident.

16. The learned DSG on behalf of the respondents heavily relied on the case of Joseph Perera alias Bruten Perera v. The Attorney-General and Others 1 Sri.L.R. [1992] 199 and submitted that, for an arrest, there need not be clear and sufficient proof regarding the commission of the alleged offence. A reasonable suspicion based on an objective standard would be sufficient to show that the respondents have acted in good faith if they had reasons to suspect that the petitioners have committed the alleged offence.

17. However, in Joseph Perera (supra) the provisions of the U.K. law which reflects the interpretation of the above position has been duly explained by citing what Lord *Scott L.*J stated in the case of Dumbell v. Roberts.

> "the constable shall before arresting satisfy himself that there do in fact exist reasonable grounds for suspicion of guilt. That requirement is very limited. The police are not called upon before acting to have anything like a prima facie case for convicting ... The duty of the police ... is, no doubt, to be quick to see the possibility of crime, but equally they ought to be anxious to avoid mistaking the innocent for the guilty ... The police are required to be observant, receptive and open-minded and to notice any relevant circumstance which points either way, either to innocence or guilt. They may have to act on the spur of the moment and have no time to reflect and be bound, therefore, to arrest to prevent escape; but where there is no danger of the person who has ex hypothesi aroused their suspicion ... (escaping) ... they should make all presently practicable enquiries from persons present or immediately accessible who are likely to be able to answer their enquiries. I am not suggesting a duty on the police to try to prove innocence; that is not their function; but they should act on the assumption that their prima facie suspicion may be ill-founded*."*

[Emphasis Mine]

18. In light of the 'reasonable suspicion to arrest', I do concede that a certain degree of discretion must necessarily be awarded to the police for the due performance of their duties and maintenance of public order. However, allowing the police to arrest on suspicion where it is not reasonable would create room for violations of liberty to take place. Therefore, the discretion granted should not extend to the extent where it would amount to an arbitrary violation of liberty and should be strictly where there exist reasonable grounds for such arrest. Even in such a situation, the police must always be mindful that their assumptions may be incorrect.

19. In the instant case, the 2nd respondent arrested the petitioners while they were transporting meat in the wee hours of 16.09.2016 which was a Poya day.

20. Upon being questioned whether there was a permit to transport meat, the petitioners have asserted that it was never a requirement to carry a permit when transporting meat. However, they have produced the receipt in proof of purchasing the meat [P-1] and the certificate issued by the PHI of Mihintale to the respondents. This cannot be considered as falling within the purview of an 'arrest based on reasonable suspicion' simply due to the fact that, there was no basis for such a reasonable suspicion to arise. The petitioners were not butchers, they were employees of a wholesale transport service. Further, the respondents cannot rely on the fact that there was reasonable suspicion to suspect that animals have been slaughtered for sale on a Poya day, as the petitioners were arrested at about 2.00 a.m. on the Poya day itself (16.09.2016) in Maha Weva, a considerable distance from the place of purchase, which is Mihintale. Further, the certificate issued by the PHI of Mihintale stating that the meat is fit for human consumption is dated 15.09.2016 which is conclusive on the fact that the animals were slaughtered on or before 15.09.2016. Thus, a logical application of mind and reason would have led to the reasonable conclusion that the animals were slaughtered the day before, that is, on 15.09.2016.

21. In Piyasiri & Others v. Nimal Fernando, A.S.P. & Others it was held that,

> "The arrest of the petitioners was highly speculative and.. was for the purpose of ascertaining whether any of them could be detected to have committed an offence of bribery. No Police Officer has the right to arrest a person on a vague and general suspicion, not knowing the precise crime suspected but hoping' to obtain evidence of the commission of some crime by searching the petitioners after arresting them. The Law does not sanction such a course of action."

22. In the case at hand, the petitioners were arrested on mere speculation, without any basis for reasonable suspicion.

23. Upon a careful perusal of the Magistrate Court record [X-1], it must be noted that the respondents initially failed to demonstrate the provisions of law under which they charged the petitioners. Later, the respondents attempted to carry on the case by introducing new offences on two occasions and continued to violate the rights of the petitioners. It is pertinent to note that, according to the affidavit of the 2nd respondent dated 01.03.2018, after investigating further, a plaint was filed on 07.11.2016 which was produced as [1R-2]. Three offences are mentioned on top of the document 1R-2 with the draft charges overleaf. The charges were, the transporting of mutton without a permit, having in possession of mutton for sale on a Poya day, transporting mutton that is unfit for human consumption respectively. The learned Magistrate eventually discharged the petitioners upon the finding that, by proceeding with the charges levelled against the petitioners, it would not be possible to punish the petitioners on the said charges. It is clear that the respondents have acted on afterthoughts when they found that there is no provision to charge the petitioners after they were arrested and brought to the police station with the lorry that contained the meat. This course of events clearly portrays malice on the part of the respondents. Actions such as these should not be carried out.

24. The respondents arrested the petitioners without reasonable grounds on vague suspicion, intending to obtain evidence after the arrest. Further, malice on the part of the respondents also contributes to conclude that this course of action is strictly outside the authority afforded to police officers and therefore is a direct violation of Article 13(1) of the Constitution.

25. Alleged Violation of Article 12(1)
It is submitted on behalf of the petitioners that, the arrest carried out on a purported basis of a violation of the Butchers Ordinance and the Holidays Act, is without legal basis, arbitrary, illegal and is in violation of the fundamental rights of the petitioners guaranteed by Articles 12(1) and 13(1) of the Constitution.

26. Article 12(1) guarantees equality before the law and equal protection of the law.

27. In case of Ariyawansa and others v. The People's Bank and others [2006] 2 Sri LR 145 at 152 Bandaranayake J. stated that,

> "The concepts of negation of arbitrariness and unreasonableness are embodied in the right to equality as it has been decided that any action or law which is arbitrary or unreasonable violates equality."

28. Thus, the arbitrariness of the arrest made without legal basis affects the equal protection guaranteed to the petitioners under section 12(1) of the constitution as well.

29. Article 126 – One Month Rule
Article 126(2) of the Constitution sets out that a fundamental rights petition must be presented to the Supreme Court within one month of such violation. In the case at hand, the petition has been presented to Court on 17.10.2016, and the arrest was made on 16.09.2016.

30. Although this issue was not taken up by the respondents at the initial stages, at the hearing of this application, the learned DSG for the respondents raised this objection stating that the application was filed out of time. At the hearing of this application, both parties were permitted to file further written submissions, if necessary, within a period of four weeks from the date of the hearing. In his written submissions, the learned Counsel for the petitioners has brought to the notice of this Court that the petition was submitted to Court within the permitted time period, as 16.10.2016 was a Sunday and that the petition was filed on the following day which was a Monday.

31. In terms of Section 8(1) of the Interpretation Ordinance,

> "Where a limited time from any date or from the happening of any event is appointed or allowed by any written law for the doing of any act or the taking of any proceeding in a court or office, and the last day of the limited time is a day on which the court or office is closed, then the act or proceeding shall be considered as done or taken in due time if it is done or taken on the next day thereafter on which the court or office is open."

32. In the instant case, the date in which the alleged illegal arrest took place was 16.09.2016 and the required one-month period would generally only extend up to 16.10.2016. This application was filed on 17.10.2016. However, as 16.10.2016 was a Sunday in which the Court office is closed, the next working day would be 17.10.2016. Thus, considering the provisions laid down in section 8(1) of the Interpretation Ordinance, this application would be considered as made in due time and should be allowed even though it was filed one day after the lapse of one month since the alleged illegal arrest. Therefore, the said objection has no merit.

33. In light of the observations made above, it is my view that the arrest of the petitioners was not made on reasonable suspicion as required by law, and therefore is illegal and unlawful and in violation of the fundamental rights that have been guaranteed to the petitioners under Articles 13(1) and 12(1) of the Constitution. Further, the objection raised on the issue of the application being time barred also cannot stand. Thus, this application should be allowed.

34. Declarations and Compensation.

In the above premise, I declare that the fundamental rights that have been guaranteed to the petitioners under Articles 13(1) and 12(1) of the Constitution has been violated.

As per Article 126(4) of the Constitution, the Supreme Court is empowered to grant such relief as it may deem just and equitable in the circumstances in respect of any petition referred to it under Article 126(2). Therefore, in the circumstances of this case, considering the discomfort and the losses that were suffered by the petitioners due to the arbitrary acts of the respondents, I order the 1st respondent to pay a sum of Rs. 25,000/- as compensation to each of the petitioners. I further order the 2nd respondent to pay Rs. 10,000/- as compensation to each of the petitioners. The respondents are ordered to pay the above compensation out of their personal funds.

Application Allowed.

K. PRIYANTHA FERNANDO, J

1. The petitioner who is a Grade I medical officer in the medical officer's service, complained of a violation of his fundamental rights guaranteed in terms of Articles 12(1), 14(1)(a) and 14(1)(g) of the Constitution due to the actions of the 1st to 22nd respondents, which led to his interdiction from services as a government medical officer. This court granted leave to proceed for the alleged violation of Articles 12(1) and 14(1)(g) of the Constitution.

2. The Facts

According to the petitioner, he has been the president of the 'Medical and Civil Rights Professional Association of Doctors' (MCPA). The petitioner has visited Walsapugala, Koswagawa village in Suriyawewa situated in the district of Hambantota on 19.09.2022 to conduct a medical clinic for children in order to check their nutrition level, health, etc. It is his position that, he received requests from the community organizations in that area as he has served there previously. He had collected about 20 clinic cards from children, out of which he observed about 6 children were at severe malnutrition levels and about 10 were at moderate malnutrition levels. He has also observed that the weight of around 50% - 80% of the children whose clinic cards were inspected by him were not appropriate for their age. The petitioner says that, the weight of a child is internationally recognized as an important indicator of nutritional status and health of a child.

3. After conducting the survey, the petitioner being the president of the MCPA, has addressed the mothers who gathered with the clinic cards at the Medical Clinic to explain the process that was followed in conducting the survey. The transcript of the speech he made was marked and produced as [P-13(B)]. The petitioner has circulated the address he made to the mothers, on newspapers and social media platforms including the YouTube as well. Thereafter, on 25.09.2022 the 8th respondent has intimated to the petitioner that he is required to make a statement regarding the incident to the Ministry of Health. The petitioner has made a detailed statement to the Inquiring Unit of the Ministry of Health on 26.09.2022. Subsequently, on or about 01.11.2022 the petitioner has received a letter dated 25.10.2022 sent by the 10th respondent to the 2nd respondent, which was copied to the petitioner, giving approval to interdict the petitioner (document [P-8(A]). Thereafter, the petitioner has received the second letter dated 03.11.2022 (document [P-8(B)]) under the hand of the 2nd respondent, interdicting him from services with immediate effect.

4. It is the contention of the learned President's Counsel for the petitioner that, as per the letter of interdiction [P-8(B)], it refers to articles published in the newspapers "Divaina", "Aruna", and "The Island". However, the learned President's Counsel referring to the transcript of the speech [P-13(B)] submitted that the newspapers have clearly embellished the statement made by the petitioner in their respective newspapers and TV channels. It was further submitted that, as mentioned in the letter of interdiction [P-8(B)], in his address to the mothers of the children, he never stated that 80% of the children of Suriyawewa are suffering from malnutrition. Thus, it was the contention of the learned President's Counsel that, the basis of the interdiction is misconstrued.

5. It was further submitted on behalf of the petitioner that, as per the Medical Services Minute of Sri Lankan Health Service, published in the Extraordinary Gazette No.1883-17, dated 11th October 2014, medical officers who come under the Sri Lanka Health Service are also responsible for education, training and supervision in relation to health care and research, apart from the patient care services.

6. The learned President's Counsel further submitted that, in terms of the 'Hippocratic Oath', the petitioner is expected to use dietary regimens which will benefit the patients to the best of his ability and to ensure that no harm or injustice would be caused to them. It was further submitted that, as per chapter 31 of the Establishment Code, the petitioner is entitled to, and has a right to make statements objecting to or criticizing the government policy in respect of their terms of service.

7. It was further submitted that, the minister of health, who is the 1st respondent, has also made a statement on or around 12.10.2022 stating that the malnutrition in the country has increased.

8. Apart from the instant issue, similar occurrences have taken place on previous occasions as well. This was between the years 2016 and 2018 and also in the year 2020. Preliminary inquiries against the petitioner have been conducted regarding these allegations. It was submitted on behalf of the petitioner that those allegations were maliciously levelled against him. It was submitted by the learned Additional Solicitor General (ASG) that, the petitioner has been issued charge sheets on three previous occasions and formal disciplinary inquiries are pending against him. When disciplinary inquiries are pending with regard to an officer, and where a formal charge sheet has been issued, in order to go on foreign trips on scholarships the officer has to obtain permission from the Disciplinary Authority. Although the petitioner has pleaded that he could not attend his post graduate studies abroad, the petitioner has not filed seeking leave to travel abroad for those purposes. Therefore, it is the contention of the learned ASG that the fundamental rights of the petitioner have not been violated.

9. It is the contention of the learned ASG that, as the petitioner is primarily a medical officer, the provisions of the Establishment Code apply to him. Further, there is no material to prove that the petitioner conducted the so-called survey at the request made to him by a trade union or under the authorization of a trade union. According to the petitioner, he has collected the clinic cards of 20 children and made an assessment based on it. The learned ASG contended that, one cannot come to a conclusion regarding the percentage of children suffering from malnutrition in an entire area merely by perusing 20 clinic cards as it is inadequate to come to such a finding. It violates medical ethics to come to such a conclusion based on 20 clinic cards. Admittedly, the petitioner has made a statement to the press [P-13(B)] which he was not permitted to make in terms of the Establishment Code, and therefore, it is sufficient to interdict the petitioner from his post as a medical officer.

10. Admittedly, the petitioner is a government medical officer who is subject to the provisions of the Establishment Code. The position taken up by the petitioner is that, the petitioner has been interdicted from his official duties in terms of chapter XLVIII, section 31:1:15 of the Establishment Code. The said section 31:1:15 reads, "where it is considered that allowing an officer to perform his duties is harmful or imprudent so far as the public service is concerned". The alleged acts of misconduct are mentioned in the above referred letter of interdiction [P-8(B)]. They are, first, the statements made by the petitioner without the authority or permission from the secretary to the Ministry of Health through a TV channel and various newspapers, stating that 80% of children from Suriyawewa are suffering from malnutrition. Second, by the statements made by him through the said media whereby, using media to criticize the government institutions and third, by making the above false statements through media trying to create a false impression and distrust in the eyes of the public.

11. In terms of chapter XLVII, section 6 of the Establishment Code, the release of official information to the mass media or the public may only be done by the secretary or the head of the department. Further, in terms of section 7:2 of the above chapter, "an officer shall not publish any book or article or give broadcast, talks or express opinion in public on any manner which can be administrative, without prior approval of the secretary." The petitioner has not obtained such approval.

12. It is the position of the petitioner that, in publishing his statement [P-13(B)], the media has embellished it. Although in paragraph 25 of the petition he states that he addressed the mothers who had gathered with the clinic cards explaining the process followed in the survey, and that it was the media personnel who were present that have published this information in the newspapers and on social media including YouTube, upon a plain reading of his statement [P-13(B)] (transcript) it is abundantly clear that the statement has not been made to the mothers in the rural village explaining the process followed in the survey, but it was a statement made to the media. Further, the photographs published in newspapers alongside articles attached clearly show that the presence of the media personnel had been prearranged.

13. Alleged Violation of Article 14(1)(g)
The petitioner alleges that, the respondents by interdicting him from services, has violated the rights guaranteed to him under Article 14(1)(g) of the Constitution.

Article 14 (1)(g) of the Constitution provides that, "every citizen is entitled to the freedom to engage by himself or in association of others in any lawful occupation, profession, trade, business or enterprise."

14. In case of Elmore Perera v. Major Montague Jayawickrama*, [1985] 1 Sri L.R. 285, the petitioner who was the Deputy Survey-General was compulsorily retired. He complained, Inter alia, of violation of his fundamental right under Article 14(1)(g) of the Constitution. Sharvananda C.J. delivering the majority judgment rejected the complaint and said at page 323,

> "The right of the petitioner to carry on the occupation of surveyor is not, in any manner affected by his compulsory retirement from government service. The right to pursue a profession or to carry on an occupation is not the same thing as the right to work in a particular post under a contract of employment. If the services of a worker are terminated wrongfully it will be open to him to pursue his rights and remedies in proper proceedings in a competent court or tribunal. But the discontinuance of his job or employment in which he is for the time being engaged does not by itself infringe his fundamental right to carry on an occupation or profession which is guaranteed by Art 14(1)(g) of the Constitution. It is not possible to say that the right of the petitioner to carry on an occupation has, in this case been violated. It would be open to him, though undoubtedly it will not be easy, to find other avenues of employment as a surveyor. Art 14(1)(g) recognizes a general right in every citizen to do work of a particular kind and of his choice. It does not confer the right to hold a particular job or to occupy a particular post of one's choice. The compulsory retirement complained of may, at the highest, affect his particular employment, but it does not affect his right to work as a surveyor. The case would have been different if he had been struck off the roll of his profession or occupation and thus disabled from practicing his profession."

15. In the instant case, the petitioner is not deprived of his freedom to engage in his profession as a medical officer. His interdiction which resulted due to a procedural step taken in an inquiry into the alleged misconduct in violation of the conditions stipulated in the Establishment Code, is simply in relation to preventing him from serving as a medical officer in the government health service. Hence, the fundamental rights enshrined in article 14(1)(g) of the Constitution have not been infringed.

16. Alleged Violation of Article 12(1)
The petitioner asserts that, the reasons upon which his interdiction was based on was false and inaccurate. He states that, he never made a statement that 80% of the children in Suriyawewa were suffering from malnutrition.

17. However, he states that there are children in the Hambantota area who are malnourished as well as children having a high risk of becoming malnourished and that when taken as a whole, it can be seen that there is a gradual decrease in the weight appropriate to age in about 50-80% children in the area as per the survey conducted by him.

18. The respondent asserts that, it is wrong of the petitioner to come to a conclusion and publish information regarding the overall percentages of malnutrition in a particular area merely on the basis of a survey based on 20 clinic cards of children. The respondent further states that, the petitioner has not denied that the sample he took into consideration in coming to the conclusion was in fact 20 clinic cards.

19. The petitioner asserts that, in terms of Chapter XLVIII Section 31:11 of the Establishment Code, the wages of a public officer who has been interdicted can be withheld only upon two clearly defined instances being fulfilled. He states that the case at hand does not fall within the purview of these instances and therefore, his wages cannot be withheld.

20. However, Chapter XLVIII Section 31:12 clearly states that, for instances not falling within the purview of Section 31:11, the decision to pay or withhold wages is within the discretion of the Disciplinary Authority, giving due regard to factors such as the seriousness of the charge, prior record of service of the officer, his financial needs, etc.

21. The petitioner states that the actions, inactions and decisions of the respondents are violative of his rights guaranteed under Article 12(1) of the Constitution which provides for equality before the law and equal protection of the law. In that, they are discriminatory, arbitrary, irrational, illegal and unreasonable and violative of equality and equal protection of law. The petitioner states that the actions, inactions and decisions of the respondents are a breach of legitimate expectations and the rules of natural justice.

22. Specific provisions are made on releasing of official information to the mass media or the public and publication of books, articles, broadcasts, talks etc in chapter XLVII section 6 and 7 of the Establishment Code respectively. Public officers are prohibited from giving media statements without prior approval from the authorities. As mentioned before, some of the statements he made appears to be inaccurate and were based on incomplete data which may cause embarrassment to the government and also could mislead the public.

23. Undoubtedly, the petitioner as a government servant is entitled to the fundamental rights enshrined in the Constitution. However, as per Article 55 of the Constitution, state preserves the right to regulate the conditions of public service, disciplinary control and their conduct.

24. The scope of Article 12(1) has expanded to a great extent in the recent past. It captures within its purview many violations affording extensive protection of fundamental rights.

25. In case of Ariyawansa and others v. The People's Bank and others [2006] 2 Sri LR 145 at 152 Bandaranayake J. stated that,

> "The concepts of negation of arbitrariness and unreasonableness are embodied in the right to equality as it has been decided that any action or law which is arbitrary or unreasonable violates equality."

26. In Wijerathna v. Sri Lanka Ports Authority [2020] SC (FR) Application No. 256/2017 - SC Minutes 11.12.2020 Justice Kodagoda explains the concept of equality as provided within Article 12(1) as follows:

> "The concept of 'equality' was originally aimed at preventing discrimination based on or due to such immutable and acquired characteristics, which do not on their own make human being unequal. It is now well accepted that, the 'right to equality' covers a much wider area, aimed at preventing other 'injustices' too, that are recognized by law. Equality is now a right as opposed to a mere privilege or an entitlement, and in the context of Sri Lanka a 'Fundamental Right', conferred on the people by the Constitution, for the SC F/R 231/2018 JUDGEMENT Page 8 of 17 purpose of curing not only injustices taking the manifestation of discrimination, but a host of other maladies recognized by law."

27. Thus, it is obvious that arbitrary, unreasonable decisions do fall within the ambit of Article 12(1) of the Constitution.

28. However, in Jaisinghani v. Union of India and others (1967 AIR 1427 at 1434) Ramaswami J. observed:

> "[T]he absence of arbitrary power is the first essential of the rule of law upon which our whole constitutional system is based. In a system governed by rule of law, discretion, when conferred upon executive authorities, must be confined within clearly defined limits. The rule of law from this point of view means that decisions should be made by the application of known principles and rules and, in general, such decisions should be predictable and the citizen should know where he is. If a decision is taken without any principle or without any rule it is unpredictable and such a decision is the antithesis of a decision taken inaccordance with the rule of law. (See Dicey - "Law of the Constitution" - Tenth Edn., Introduction cx)."

29. The fact that a decision is not in one's favor does not make it arbitrary. In accordance with the rule of law, if a decision is predictable and in accordance with existing rules and principles, it cannot be arbitrary. In the instant case, the Establishment Code clearly lays down the conduct that should be followed by a public officer, and it could be predicted that a conduct in violation of such provisions would inevitably entail disciplinary action, as clearly set out in the Code.

30. The petitioner states that his interdiction was done maliciously and lacks uberrima fides.

31. In case of Sasanasiritissa Thero v. P. A. de Silva [1989] 2 Sri L.R. 356, Kulatunga, J explained that,

"while, in its narrow sense, mala fides means personal animosity, spite, vengeance, personal benefit to the authority itself or its relations or friends, the phrase is used by Courts in the broad sense of any improper exercise or abuse of power."

32. In the instant case, there is no allegation of personal animosity, spite or vengeance nor is there any personal benefit accrued by the authority by the interdiction of the petitioner. Thus, the actions, inactions and decisions of the respondents are not arbitrary and therefore, are not violative of his rights guaranteed under Article 12(1) of the Constitution.

33. Public officers are placed with a very important function in the society. However, the power that is conferred onto them is not absolute. They must essentially use such powers for the benefit of the public, to further the purposes for which they were entrusted with such power. When looking at the bigger picture, careless behavior of this nature involving the media should be restrained to preserve social order.

34. When considering the material that has already been discussed above, I am of the view that the petitioner has failed to establish the violation of his Fundamental Rights guaranteed under Article 14(1)(g) and 12(1) of the Constitution. The Application is dismissed. I make no order with regard to costs.

Application is dismissed.

BEFORE : BUWANEKA ALUWIHARE, PC., J.
JANAK DE SILVA, J.
ACHALA WENGAPPULI, J.

COUNSEL : Sanjeewa Jayawardene, P.C. for the Petitioner.
Viveka Siriwardene, (P.C.), ASG for the 1st to 13th and 15th Respondents.

ARGUED ON : 18th January, 2023

DECIDED ON : 13th November, 2023

ACHALA WENGAPPULI, J.

The Petitioner, a Grade 3 Sri Lanka Education Administrative Service officer, was transferred on the basis of 'exigencies of service' from Vidyartha College, Kandy where he functioned as its principal. In invoking the jurisdiction conferred on this Court, under Articles 17 and 126 of the Constitution, the Petitioner alleges that the decisions of the 1st and 12th Respondent to transfer him are violative of his fundamental rights guaranteed under Articles 12(1) and 14(1)(g) of the Constitution.

It was strongly asserted by the Petitioner that the impugned transfer was made illegally, unlawfully, arbitrarily, unreasonably, unfairly, irrationally and was prompted by mala fides, ulterior motives and extraneous considerations.

On 09.02.2018, this Court granted leave to proceed as prayed for.

At the hearing, learned President's Counsel submitted on behalf of the Petitioner that since assuming office as the principal of Vidyartha College in March 2015, the Petitioner had effectively rectified and resolved many a problem that affected proper administration of the school. It was further submitted that the Petitioner had eradicated the drug abuse among student population that prevailed when he assumed office and instilled discipline in them and, as a result, was able to restore the status of Vidyartha College as a leading and respectable boys' school in Kandy.

The Petitioner averred in his petition that, commencing from or about November 2016, there were several anonymous letters addressed to Central and Provincial Authorities, containing a series of false, frivolous and defamatory allegations against him. The Petitioner further added that, however, none of the several investigations carried out by the provincial authorities on these anonymous complaints revealed any misconduct, irregularity, fault or wrongdoing on his part.

The Petitioner asserts that he was "surprised", when he received a letter, signed by the Zonal Director of Education (the 12th Respondent), on 25.09.2017 (P18), which enclosed another letter dated 22.09.2017 (P17) signed by the Secretary to the Provincial Ministry of Education (the 1st Respondent), conveying of his transfer on 'exigencies of service' with immediate effect. He was further directed to report to the Provincial Department of Education. The Petitioner, therefore, seeks a declaration of this Court that the said decisions are illegal, null and void. He further sought to nullify the appointment of the 14th Respondent, who succeeded him as the principal, Vidyartha College, and in addition, prays for a declaration that the Respondents have violated his fundamental rights guaranteed under Articles 12(1) and 14(1)(g).

The Petitioner contended that the decisions made by the 1st and 12th Respondent to transfer him on 'exigencies of service', were violative of his fundamental rights. He relied on the following grounds, in order to substantiate his contention;

a. the decision to transfer was made mala fide, and with ulterior motives and on extraneous considerations
b. letters P17 and P18 were issued in blatant violation of the Rules of the Public Service Commission, since no reasons were provided for the decision to transfer the Petitioner on 'exigencies of service',
c. the transfer of the Petitioner, not being a disciplinary transfer but on exigencies of service, was made without satisfying the ingredients that constitute conditions precedent to the lawful exercise of power,
d. the transfer was not made in respect of any particular post or position at the Department of Education and there was no mention that the Petitioner's services are needed at that institution,
e. the normative period of 5 years to serve in one station was summarily denied.

The 1st Respondent, through his Statement of Objections, denied the allegation of infringement of fundamental rights of the Petitioner and resisted his entitlement to the reliefs sought. The 1st Respondent averred that an exigency of service arose to have the Petitioner transferred to the Central Provincial Department of Education, in order to facilitate the conduct of several preliminary inquiries. The 1st Respondent also seeks to counter the Petitioner's claim that none of the inquiries conducted by the Respondents revealed any misconduct, irregularity, a fault or wrong doing on his part by stating that the latter was well aware of the fact that there were several preliminary inquiries being conducted out regarding multiple allegations of misconduct, which included admission of students contrary to the applicable circulars, accepting donations for admission of students, printing and selling of diaries to students, renting out school premises to park private vehicles for a fee and permitting a private educational institution to erect a hoarding within school premises for a payment.

Whilst denying the impugned transfer was made arbitrarily, unreasonably, mala fide and for collateral purposes the 1st Respondent avers that the reasons for the impugned decision to transfer the Petitioner on exigency of service arose due to following factors;

i. his failure to co-operate with the inquiring officers and causing obstruction to the unimpeded conduct of preliminary investigations;
ii. his conduct of repeatedly making frivolous excuses in order to avoid making a statement to the inquiring officers, despite the many opportunities that were afforded to him;
iii. his presence as the principal of the school which became a hindrance to record statements of the members of staff who came under his direct supervision and control.

It is the position of the 1st Respondent that the 14th Respondent's appointment was intended to fill the vacancy created by the impugned transfer and made only as a measure to avert the situation that had arisen due to the conduct of the Petitioner.

In support of the contention of the Petitioner that he was transferred out illegally by the 1st and 12th Respondents, alleging that they acted mala fide, with ulterior motives and on extraneous considerations due to 'political' pressure, learned President's Counsel relied on the fact that the Respondents, in spite of an already concluded preliminary inquiry on the allegation of irregular admissions of students, had more initiated a second preliminary inquiry on the same unfounded allegation, in order to somehow rope in him. Learned Counsel further contended that the said second inquiry was initiated due to political interference and that too only after the Presidential Secretariat had directed the Respondents to conduct a 'comprehensive' investigation by "an experienced officer" (R12).

This contention shall be considered at the outset of this judgment for its merits.

The 12th Respondent, by letter dated 10.03.2017 (R1) directed a Deputy Director of Education to conduct a preliminary inquiry into the allegations of admission of students to Vidyartha College irregularly and submit a report along with his recommendations. The said Deputy Director of Education had conducted an inquiry on the same day and submitted his report (R2). In that report, the inquirer had identified of 39 specific instances of irregular admission of students, contrary to applicable circulars. The inquirer also made an entry, in the logbook of the school, directing that no student shall be admitted to any of the grades until further notice.

In spite of the said prima facie finding that there were instances of irregular student admissions, the inquirer however did not make any recommendations in R2, nor did he ensure compliance of the provisions contained in Clause 13.12 of Chapter XLVII of the Establishment Code, which states " [T]he officer conducting the preliminary investigation should also prepare a draft charge sheet as per Appendix 5 of this Code and forward it to the relevant authority in the event that sufficient material is disclosed that call for disciplinary action against the suspect officer …".

The Petitioner, along with his counter affidavit, had tendered a letter containing his observations (CA-1), that had been submitted to the 1st Respondent on 26.04.2017. This was in response to the allegation of irregular admission of students. However, the 1st Respondent, in his Statement of Objections, failed to disclose of any decision taken either on P2 or CA-1 and of any follow up action taken thereafter. Interestingly, the counter affidavit of the Petitioner, also annexed documents CA-2(a) to (e), by which the 1st Respondent had directed him to admit students on several occasions outside the regular admission process.

On 08.08.2017, after almost five months since P2 was tendered, the Director (investigation) of the Presidential Secretariat, called a report from the Director of Education of Kandy on several allegations that were received against the Petitioner (R6). This report was to be submitted to the President of the Republic. The allegations referred to in R6 were in relation to several other matters and did not include the allegation of irregular admission of students. However, upon this direction from the Presidential Secretariat, the 12th Respondent appointed a three-member team of inquirers on 15.08.2017 (R7) and directed them to conduct a preliminary investigation into the allegations referred to in R6. The report of this inquiry was submitted to the 12th Respondent by the panel of inquirers on 24.09.2017 (R10).

The 1st Respondent, however, failed to explain the reason to appoint another two-member panel of inquirers in respect of the allegation of irregular admission of students, in spite of an already concluded inquiry. The report of the said panel of inquirers, who were appointed to inquire into the allegation of irregular admission of students, issued their report on 17.08.2018 (R10A). The introduction of the said report indicates that the inquiry panel was constituted and directed by the 12th Respondent to conduct a preliminary inquiry on 15.08.2017 and also made reference to a letter dated 03.07.2017, issued by the Secretary to the Governor of the Central Province in that regard.

It is not clear that the report of the 1st inquirer (R2) was forwarded to the Presidential Secretariat at any point of time. However, it is to be noted that the report R10A, prepared by the said two-member panel of inquirers on irregular admission of students, consists of a total of 32 pages whereas the 1st report (R2), which also refers to inquiry into the same allegation, confines to a mere one side of a single A4 sheet of paper. Considered in this context, the directions issued by the Presidential Secretariat on the 1st Respondent to conduct a 'comprehensive' investigation by "an experienced officer" would have been resulted after perusal of P2.

Similarly, the enquiries made by the Presidential Secretariat regarding the conduct of inquiries was necessitated due to a petition addressed to that establishment by a group of 'concerned parents' of certain students of Vidyartha College. In this context, it is relevant to note here, that another group, claiming themselves to be committee members of the School Development Society, also made an allegation in their letter to the Presidential Secretariat that, despite that fact of making several complaints against the Petitioner, the Respondents have thus far failed to initiate a single inquiry (P12(c)). They attributed the close relationship the Respondents had with the Petitioner as the reason for the said inaction.

If these two factors, the obvious failure to take any meaningful action on R2 and the decision to appoint a two-member inquiry panel to conduct a second preliminary inquiry, are considered together, it appears that the 2nd inquiry was prompted only when the Presidential Secretariat had indicated its concerns on R2. This comparison indicates that the allegation, that there were mala fides, ulterior motives and extraneous considerations on the part of the Respondents in making the transfer, is not supported by the available material. It appears that, the actions of the Respondent indicate contrary position to the one presented by the Petitioner as clearly a very conciliatory approach had been adopted, in dealing with the allegations of irregular admission of students. This inference finds further support when considered in the light of another factor, which will be dealt during the latter part of this judgment.

Learned President's Counsel's other contention was founded on the failure of the Respondents to provide reasons for their decision, as set out in the applicable Sections of the Rules of Procedure of the Public Service Commission, which they were bound to comply with.

In this regard, learned President's Counsel contended that the decision to transfer the Petitioner was said to have been taken on the premise that his retention in his post was inappropriate due to the possibility of obstructions and interference to the conducting of an inquiry. If that being the real reason, learned Counsel argued that, in fact the transfer was made on disciplinary grounds and not on an exigency of service.

Learned President's Counsel also contended that, if indeed the purported allegations against the Petitioner were genuine and legitimate as the Respondents claim, they had recourse to Section 222 of the said Rules, under which a transfer order could validly be made, but only after giving reasons. Thus, he submitted that the illegality which taints the decision to transfer is the failure of the Respondents to comply with the provisions of Section 222, where a mandatory requirement to give reasons for the transfer of a public officer was imposed.

It appears from the above, that the contention advanced by the Petitioner before this Court on this point is that he was transferred in fact on 'disciplinary grounds' and not on exigencies of service is in turn based on the 1st Respondent's explanation that the transfer was made in order to conduct the several investigations initiated by them unimpeded by actions of the Petitioner. The letters of transfer P17 and P18 indicate that the Petitioner was transferred on exigencies of services and not on disciplinary grounds.

In view of these divergent positions of the contesting parties, it is relevant to have a cursory glance over the scheme of transfer that had been laid down in the Procedural Rules of the Public Service Commission, published in the Government Gazette (Extraordinary) No.

1589/30, dated 20.04.2009 (hereinafter referred to as the "Rules"), which deals with different types of transfers that could be made.

Section 195 of the said Rules stipulates all or several or any one of the following objectives are sought to be achieved by transferring a public officer;

i. fill a vacancy in an institution;
ii. meet the administrative needs of an institution;
iii. promote the efficiency and productivity of an institution;
iv. meet the needs of a disciplinary process;
v. implement a disciplinary order;
vi. provide the officer with an opportunity to gain experience in a wider field;
vii. provide the officer with an opportunity for professional development and improve of his skills viii. provide relief from personal difficulties experienced by the officer.

Thus, in terms of Article 55 of the Constitution and Section 194, a public officer can be transferred only by the Public Service Commission or by an Authority with Delegated Power of the Commission to achieve any one or more of these objectives.

Section 196 states as follows;

"Transfers are fourfold as indicated below:

(i) Transfers done annually;
(ii) Transfers done exigencies of service;
(iii) Transfers done on disciplinary grounds;

(iv) Mutual transfers on requests made by officers."

Of these fourfold categories of transfers, the ones that would be examined in relation to the instant matter are the transfers on exigencies of service and transfers on disciplinary grounds. Sections 218 to 221 governs the transfer procedure applicable to service exigencies while Section 222 governs the transfer procedure applicable to transfers made on disciplinary grounds.

The contention of the Petitioner in this respect is twofold. First, he contends that the Respondents have blatantly violated the said procedural rules, in their failure to discharge the obligation to convey reasons that formed the basis of the transfer to the Petitioner and cited dicta of Sripavan CJ in Sumedha Jayaweera v Dharmasena Dissanayake, Chairman of the Public Service Commission (SC(FR) Application No. 484/2011 – decided on 16.01.2017).

Secondly, he contended that the Respondent's claim of obstructing or refusing to co-operate with the inquiries that were being conducted against him is a belated concoction by the 1st Respondent to deceptively justify the impugned transfer. In this regard, the Petitioner stressed that the 1st Respondent must present credible material before this Court in order to establish the said allegation that he refused to cooperate with the inquiring officers. He further contended that the inquiry reports reveal that even though the Petitioner was unable to present himself for investigations on two occasions, he had subsequently cooperated with the inquirers by making statements within a reasonable time.

In support of the contention that the Respondent failed to adduce reasons for the transfer, the Petitioner relied heavily on the provisions of the Section 222 (iii) which states " [W]here it is found on matters revealed either before the beginning, or in the course of an investigation or on existing circumstances that the retention of a Public Officer in his post or station may obstruct the conduct of a preliminary investigation" such an officer could be transferred out even without prior notice. It was his position that the transfer order was made under this Section. Section 222 of the Rules further imposes a duty on the appointing authority that it "shall convey the reasons in writing to the officer concerned." Thus, the Petitioner contends that the impugned transfer is illegal, as it was made in violation of the provisions contained in these Sections.

In presenting a counter argument, learned Addl. S.G submitted that in fact an exigency arose to have the Petitioner transferred out with immediate effect, in order to conclude the investigations against him as his presence in the school as its principal had become a hindrance to record statements of those who came under his direct control and supervision. She submitted therefore he was rightly transferred out on exigencies of services to assume duties as Assistant Director of Education at the Provincial Department of Education. She further submitted that since the completion of the preliminary inquiries, the Petitioner was served with a charge sheet containing a total 13 charges, which in itself is an indication as to the seriousness of the allegations and the nature of the inquiries that had been conducted by the Respondents. Learned Addl. S.G. also contended that the Petitioner had made blatantly a false statement in his petition by stating that "… no disciplinary action whatsoever had been initiated or taken against the Petitioner".

It appears from the contention that had been advanced by the Petitioner, that he presupposes the fact that an Appointing Authority could transfer a public officer, who is facing a preliminary inquiry from station he currently serves, only under Section 222(iii) as that is the sub Section, which provide for situations where it found that the retention of that officer may obstruct the conduct of a preliminary inquiry. This Section deals with transfers made on disciplinary grounds.

However, the Petitioner was transferred not on disciplinary grounds but on exigencies of service, as the said letters P17 and P18 clearly indicate. In view of the contention of the Petitioner, a question arises whether there is a similar provision in the Rules of Procedure that govern transfers on exigencies of service, which also permits the Appointing Authority to transfer an officer due his failure to cooperate with the conduct of a preliminary inquiry. Section 218, which generally deals with transfers made on exigencies of service, in sub section (iii) provides an answer to that question in the affirmative. Section 218(iii) states " [W]here it is found, due to administrative reasons, that the retention of an officer in his present station is not suitable."

Thus, in both these instances, Rules of Procedure indeed provide for transfer of a Public Officer from his current station, but such a transfer could validly be made only when the conditions that are stipulated in the said Sections are satisfied and fully complied with. However, it must be noted here that the considerations that apply in these two specific instances are slightly different to each other in certain aspects.

In view of the Respondent's justification of the transfer and the Petitioner's contention that it was a concocted position, taken up belatedly as an attempt to justify otherwise an illegal transfer, it becomes necessary at this stage to consider whether there were factors which could reasonably be taken as "administrative reasons" which in turn would render "the retention of an officer in his present station is not suitable", and those factors did exist before the issuance of P17 (on 22.09.2017).

It has been stated earlier on in this judgment that there was a preliminary inquiry that had already been conducted against the Petitioner on irregular admission of students and its report R2 was tendered. During this inquiry, as R2 indicate, the Petitioner had provided necessary information to the inquirer facilitating the conduct of the said inquiry. The Deputy Director made a log entry of the school on 10.03.2017 (R3), expressing his appreciation of the assistance rendered by the Petitioner and his staff during the course of his inquiry. The Respondents have not decided that at that point of time that it was expedient to transfer the Petitioner, notwithstanding the serious allegation that had been inquired into i.e., irregular admission of students.

In addition to the said allegation, there were other anonymous complaints alleging several other acts of wrongdoing on the part of the Petitioner. One such allegation was that the Petitioner had misused the school grounds by allowing it to be used as a parking area and collected a substantial amount of funds. The Petitioner himself was aware of these allegations as some of the anonymous petitions were in fact copied to him (P12(a)-(e)) by the Respondents themselves.

The inquirer, who was appointed to inquire into the said allegation of misuse of school grounds, reported back to 12th

Respondent that the Petitioner declined to make a statement, when requested to do so on 13.09.2017 and continued to avoid making one, despite several opportunities being afforded for that purpose (R5). The said report highlighted the fact that the Petitioner also failed to handover the receipt books used to issue parking tickets and owing to those reasons the inquirer was unable to complete her report.

It was during this time that the Presidential Secretariat, directed the 1st Respondent to submit a report on or before 22.08.2017 for the consideration of the President of the Republic (R6).

The conduct attributed to the Petitioner, as indicative in the report R5, signifies a clear change of his behaviour towards the pending inquiries. Having rendered his assistance to conduct the first inquiry (P2), after a mere lapse of six months and whilst serving in the same school, the Petitioner had adopted a contrasting approach with a view to delay the conclusion of several inquiries that were pending against him. This was noted by the 11th Respondent who conveyed same to the 1st Respondent, by a letter dated 18.09.2017 (R8).

The 1st instance of the Petitioner's evasive approach was noted by the Respondents on 13.09.2017(R5). In R5 a specific reference was made that the Petitioner refused to make a statement citing different reasons. The 2nd instance of not cooperating with the inquirers was noted in R8, a letter issued on 18.09.2017.

Paragraph 13.11 of Chapter XLVIII of the Establishment Code, under the heading "Rules of Disciplinary Procedure" it is stated that "[I]t would be an act of grave misconduct for an officer to refuse to make a statement with regard to an investigation when he is required to do so by an officer duly appointed to conduct a preliminary investigation. When such an incident is reported by an officer conducting a preliminary investigation, it will be the responsibility of the relevant Head of Institution to report such fact to the relevant Disciplinary Authority to enable him to take disciplinary action against the officer concerned."

Contrary to the claim of the Petitioner that he was illegally transferred out for extraneous reasons, it is thus evident that the Respondents have taken the decision to transfer him only after they were made aware of his conduct, which was clearly indicative of his reluctance to voluntarily participate in the inquiries pending against him. In addition, the Petitioner was reported by the inquirer, due to the failure of the former to submit relevant documentation that were in his possession, when demanded.

In view of the foregoing, I am of the considered view that there were factors that were presented before for the Respondents for them to reasonably entertain "administrative reasons" that "the retention of an officer in his present station is not suitable". In the judgment of Waidyaratne v Provincial Commissioner- Local Government and Others (SCFR Application No. 137/2011 – decided on 25.10.2019) Amarasekara, J. was of the view when there are grounds to satisfy that there was a situation that demanded the transfer was necessary for the proper administration of the service and the workplace, a need of a disciplinary inquiry does not arise.

The other premise on which the Petitioner sought to impugn the decision to transfer (P17) was the failure of the Respondents to provide reasons for the said decision other than merely stating "exigencies of service". He relied on the Section 221 where it states that the Appointing Authority "… shall convey reasons to the officer concerned". Section 221 not only imposes a duty on the Appointing Authority to convey reasons for the decision to transfer but also impose a similar duty that it "… shall record in the relevant file clearly all the factors that caused the transfer of an officer on exigencies of service."

It is to be noted that the 1st Respondent, failed to tender a copy of the minute/entry made in the relevant file, in which the several factors that contributed to the decision to transfer, should have been clearly set out. The letter of transfer P17 merely conveyed that the Petitioner was transferred due to exigencies of service. It cannot be emphasised enough that the necessity to comply with the Rules of Procedure, as set out by the Public Service Commission, by the Appointing Authorities and thereby ensuring transparency in the decision-making process regarding transfer of public officers on exigencies of service. The strict compliance of the Rules is therefore fundamental to the proper administration of the Public Service.

The question, whether the Petitioner was conveyed of the reasons of his transfer, shall be considered next. In this particular instant, it must be noted that the Petitioner was possessed of the fact of his impending transfer well in advance, even prior to the issuance of P17 on 22.09.2017. This was evident from the contents of the letter P12(f) annexed to the petition. The Petitioner tendered copies of several anonymous letters and petitions were sent to him by the 11th and 12th Respondents, annexed to his petition. Letter P12(f) to be a one such petition, appears to have been sent by a group of parents who attended a meeting convened by the Petitioner. What is important is that the said meeting was convened on 20.09.2017, two days prior to the issuance of P17, and the Petitioner had publicly declared in that gathering of his transfer. He described his imminent transfer as a 'promotional' transfer. There is no denial by the Petitioner in his petition as to the truth of the contents of this particular letter or to the specific event it speaks of. Prior to this meeting, a petition was signed by 132 members of the staff of Vidyartha College, addressed the Chief Minister informing him of certain moves to have the Petitioner transferred out (P15).

The Petitioner claims there were strong rumours indicating that he would be transferred out soon. But it is evident from this letter, despite the rumours, the Petitioner himself was aware of the fact that he would be transferred out of the school. He also knew that transfer in effect offered him a 'promotion'. Coupled with this fact, the Petitioner's presence in the Provincial Department of Education on 22.09.2017 for the purpose of making a statement (R10), being the day on which P17 was issued, makes it more probable that he was informed of the reasons for the issuance of letter P17 as well.

Letter of transfer P17 was signed by the 1st Respondent whereas letter of transfer P18 was signed by the 12th Respondent on the 25.09.2017. The fact that Petitioner was in contact with the 12th Respondent in the previous day, before P18 was signed, is evident from his own statement to police on 24.09.2017 (P10(e)). In his statement, the Petitioner mentions that he sought advice on that very morning from the 12th Respondent before making the statement, meant for future reference. In these circumstances, it is highly unlikely that the Petitioner was not informed of the reasons for his transfer, given the apparent close relationship he had with the 12th Respondent.

The Petitioner, however, averred in paragraph 31 of his petition that "to my shock and surprise, I received a letter on 25.09.2017 from/through the 12th Respondent, which enclosed a further letter sent to me by the 1st Respondent's predecessor in office (dated 22.09.2017) informing that I had been transferred with immediate effect …". In view of the several factors considered in the preceding paragraph, this particular averment of the Petitioner, claiming that he was 'surprised' to receive the transfer order, could not be accepted as an accurate description of the events that had taken place. Thus, the fact that Petitioner had prior knowledge of his impending transfer and the type of transfer is undoubtedly evident from his own actions.

Section 221 as well as Section 222 (iii) imposes a duty on the Appointing Authority to convey reasons for transfer to the officer concerned. Section 221 lay down the procedure and the manner in which a decision should be made to transfer a public officer on exigencies of service, when it specified a requirement of making an entry in the relevant file of all the factors that caused the transfer. It also imposes a similar duty that it shall be conveyed to the officer under transfer.

However, a significant difference exists in relation to the manner of conveying the reasons. Section 222 (iii) speaks of conveying the reasons to transfer "in writing" to the transferred officer whereas Section 221, speaks of mere conveying the reasons, allowing the Appointing Authority to convey reasons for transfer to the concerned officer in any other form as well.

Returning to the question, whether the 1st Respondent "conveyed" the reasons to the Petitioner in this particular instance, in my view, it could be answered in the affirmative since he was most probably was verbally conveyed of the reasons for his transfer.

Although this form of informal conveyance cannot be considered as the best method that should be adopted and followed by the Appointing Authority in making orders for transfer, nor it could be taken as an acceptable manner of formally conveying the reasons for transfer. In Range Bandara v Gen. Anuruddha Ratwatte and Another (1997) 3 Sri L.R. 360 Mark Fernando J held (at p. 372);

> "… the summary transfer of the petitioner to a distant place was unreasonable, on the material available to the 2nd respondent, and it was also a misuse of discretion to withhold from him the true reason for the transfer, because it deprived him of the opportunity to rebut it."

A similar approach was taken in Chandrasena v Kulatunga and Others (1996) 2 Sri L.R. 327. Connected to the issue of giving reasons for the transfer, learned Presidents Counsel for the Petitioner relied on the judgment of Sripavan CJ in Sumedha Jayaweera v Prof. Dayasiri Fernando (supra) where his Lordship states thus;

> "Giving of reasons is an essential element of administration of justice. A right to reason is, therefore, an indispensable part of a sound system of judicial review. Reasoned decision is not only for the purpose of showing that the citizen is receiving justice, but also a valid discipline for the administrative body itself. Conveying reasons is calculated to prevent unconscious, unfairness or arbitrariness in reaching the conclusions. The very search for reasons will put the authority on the alert and minimize the chances of unconscious infiltration of bias or unfairness in the conclusion. The duty to adduce reasons will be regarded as fair and legitimate by a reasonable man and will discard irrelevant and extraneous considerations. Therefore, conveying reasons is one of the essentials of justice (Vide S. N. Mukherjee Vs. Union of India (1990) 4 S.CC.C. 594; A.I.R. 1990 S.C. 1984."

But, since the circumstances referred to in the preceding paragraphs are strongly supportive of the conclusion that the Petitioner had been adequately forewarned of the impending transfer and therefore the reasons for his transfer were "conveyed" to the Petitioner even before P17 was issued, it could be taken as sufficient compliance of the procedural requirements imposed by Section 221, in relation to this particular instance.

In a recent pronouncement of this Court, the judgment of Bandulani Basnayake v Sunil Hettiarachchi and Others (SC(FR) Application No. 311/2016 – decided on 16.10.2023) De Silva J, in reference to the Rules made by Public Service Commission stated "[I]t is important to follow them in all matters pertaining to public officers. Failure to do so will result in a violation of Article 12(1) of the Constitution." This was an instance where this Court found an infringement of fundamental rights of the petitioner, when she was transferred on exigencies of service, after an audit inquiry which conducted and concluded without recording a statement from her and thereby denying her an opportunity to respond to any of the allegations that had been inquired into. Strangely, the said audit report did not even recommend her transfer.

However, the factual position revealed from the pleadings in the instant matter is totally different to the position revealed in the said application.

Thus, after a careful consideration of all the circumstances, I am of the view that the decision to transfer the Petitioner was made on account of his conduct which provided justification for entertaining an "administrative reason" that a preliminary inquiry could not be conducted unimpeded with the presence of the Petitioner. The said decision thus cannot be termed as an unreasonable decision. Moreover, the Respondents have sufficiently "conveyed" reasons for the transfer order, well in advance to the issuance of P17.

In these circumstances, I hold that the Petitioner failed to establish that the executive and administrative action of the Respondents in transferring him, infringed his fundamental rights guaranteed to under Articles 12(1) and 14(1)(g) of the Constitution.

Accordingly, the petition of the Petitioner is dismissed without costs.

Application dismissed.

ARGUED ON : 17th October 2022

DECIDED ON : 24th October 2023

S. THURAIRAJA, PC, J.

The Petitioner namely, Gunarathinam Manivannan (hereinafter referred to as "the Petitioner") and the 12th Respondent are the hereditary trustees of the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil (hereinafter sometimes referred to as the Temple), a venerated place of worship situated on the A9 Highway. Petitioner states that, since the 12th Respondent is over 80 years of age, although she is a resident in Sri Lanka due to her advanced age, she is not in a position to join in with the Petitioner in filing this application as a co-trustee.

The Petitioner has made the instant application seeking relief in respect of the infringement of his Fundamental Rights guaranteed under and in terms of the Constitution, in the manner hereinafter more fully set out, against the Respondents. The Petitioners instituted this action at the Supreme Court under Article 126 of the Constitution, through Petition dated 2nd July 2010 against the 1st -13th Respondents claiming that the Fundamental Rights of the Petitioner as guaranteed by Articles 10, 12(1), 12(2), 14(1)(e) and 14(1)(f), 14(1)(h) of the Constitution have been infringed by the Respondents. Further, an interim order restraining the 1st-11th Respondents and those under them from causing any further destruction, alteration or new construction to the land granted under the Crown Lease, constituting trust property on which the said Temple and its temporalities stand. Moreover, an interim order directing the 1st - 11th Respondents to hand over to the Petitioner and the 12th Respondent the control and management of the Temple and to restrain any commercial exploitation of the Temple.

This matter was supported on 15th July 2010 and leave was granted under Article 12(1) of the Constitution. The Respondents filed their Statement of objections, and the Intervenient - Respondents, who are the devotees of the subject temple and representing the "Worshippers Society" of the Thiru Murikandy Pillayar Temple, made an application to intervene in this matter by their Petition dated 01st August 2012 seeking inter-alia the reliefs prayed for therein and the application for intervention was allowed by this Court. Thereafter, when the matter came up on 17th October 2022 for Argument, the parties made their respective oral submissions before this Court and at the conclusion, the Court directed the parties to file their respective written submissions.

I find it pertinent to establish the facts of this matter before addressing the issue of violation of Fundamental rights.

Facts of this case

The Petitioner states that the 1st Respondent is the Minister of Buddhist and Religious Affairs and in charge of the Buddhist and Religious Affairs Ministry, under whose purview, formulation of policies and programmes to inculcate religious values among people in order to create a virtuous society falls. Both the Department of Hindu Religious and Cultural Affairs and the Department of Buddhist Affairs fall under the said Ministry; the 2nd Respondent is the Director of the Department of Hindu Religious and Cultural Affairs, and the Petitioners further that the 2nd Respondent together with the 4th to 9th Respondents has, as hereinafter set out, acted contrary to the Fundamental Rights of the Petitioners guaranteed and protected under the Constitution.

Petitioner states that the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil and its temporalities, the subject matter of this application, is a place held in veneration by all and is situated on the A9 Highway (Kandy to Jaffna), at Murikandy in Kilinochchi. It is said that all vehicles plying the A9, be it towards Colombo or towards Jaffna, stop at the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil to pay their obeisance to the presiding Deity before proceeding. The Petitioner's and the 12th Respondent's ancestor, Kathiresar Vythilingam, was an engineer in the employment of the Crown and was posted to Thiru Murikandi in or about the year 1880. During his time at Thiru Murikandi, a God called Pillayar (Pillayaar is a Hindu God who is believed to remove obstacles) appeared in his dream and told him that he, the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar, was in the new well that was being dug there and to extricate him from the rock and to consecrate him at a Kovil there. Kathiresar Vythilingam, as directed by the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar found the Deity in the well that was being dug and was thereafter consecrated at the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil with Kathiresar Vythilingam as the trustee of the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil and built a home as well adjoining the Temple. In a short span of time, the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil became well known as a place of Hindu religious worship, and soon thereafter, by a Deed dated 10th December 1886, a Crown Lease, in extent Two Acres One Rood and Eight Perches (A2-R1-P8), including the land on which the temple and its temporalities stood was granted in favour of the said Kathiresar Vythilingam in what would appear to be in perpetuity. Upon the death of Kathiresar Vythilingam, the trusteeship of the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil devolved on his son Vythilingam Kanagasabai. Upon the demise of the said Vythilingam Kanagasabai, the trusteeship of the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil devolved on his nephew Kandappar Sellappah and his adopted son Ponnuthurai, who functioned as co-trustees of the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil.

Upon the demise of Kandappar Sellappah, his trusteeship devolved on his son Sellappah Gunarathinam by virtue of deed No. 7429 dated 4th April 1967. Likewise, Ponnuthurai, by a deed of donation dated 20th September 1951, passed on the trusteeship to Thirunavukarasu Thanaledchumy, the daughter of Kandappah Sellappah, the 12th Respondent. Thereafter, upon the demise of Sellappah Gunarathinam on 6th October 1993, his rights of management and trusteeship of the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil devolved on the Petitioner, namely, Gunarathinam Manivannan who is the only son of the said Sellappah Gunarathinam. From the inception of the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil, the Petitioner's and 12th Respondent's ancestors had lived in very close proximity to the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil. However, in or about the year 1990, the LTTE (Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam- A militant group) forcibly took over the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil and its temporalities, which forced the Petitioner's family, including the Petitioner, to flee to India. Thereafter, the LTTE appointed their representatives to administer the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil and collected all the income that accrued to the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil. During the LTTE's administration of the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil, several shops sprung up in the vicinity of the Temple with the only aim being the generation of income and without any concern whatever for the religiosity and the sanctity of the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil and its surroundings.

Petitioner states that, in 2003, during the ceasefire, when the A9 was diverted around the Temple, which continues to date, the 12th Respondent's consent was sought and obtained in this regard. After the military defeat of the LTTE, the Petitioner made several attempts to speak to the relevant authorities in order that he, along with the 12th Respondent, may, as they lawfully might, resume the exercise of their legal right to the management and control of Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil and its temporalities as the lawful trustees thereof. However, upon visiting the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil, the Petitioner was reliably informed, and he verily believes that the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil is now being managed and administered primarily by the 2nd Respondent together with the 4th to 9th and 11th Respondents.

The Petitioner states that the continued management and administration of the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil by the 2nd Respondent, together with the 4th to 9th and 11th Respondents, is arbitrary, capricious, without any legal right or authority of whatsoever nature and is violative of the Petitioner's Fundamental Rights enshrined and protected under the Constitution.

The Petitioner, to his utter dismay, also found that the Viswamadu Cooperative Society, the 8th Respondent, with the concurrence and/or collusion and/or permission of the 2nd, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 9th and 11th Respondents, was running a Cooperative Store and a restaurant at the building that was the Petitioner's and 12th Respondent's home prior to their forcible eviction by the LTTE.

The Viswamadu Co-operative Society, the 8th Respondent, had caused serious and extensive damage to the Petitioner's home. The Petitioner also verily believes that the Viswamdu Cooperative Society, the 8th Respondent, and/or its officers and/or its agents and/or the 2nd, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 9th and 11th have not taken any steps whatsoever to prevent the consumption of alcohol in close proximity to the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil and are thus defiling and desecrating the sanctity of the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil.

The Petitioner further verily believes that moves are afoot to once again commercially exploit the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil and its environs and thus defile the sanctity of the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil as was done by the LTTE.

The Petitioner has been reasonably informed and also verily believes that the Viswamadu Cooperative Society, the 8th Respondent, is planning to make Several structural changes/alterations to the Petitioner's home, which is at least 130 years old and that the said changes would completely alter the nature and character of the Petitioner's home and would render it unfit to be used as a home.

The Petitioner, by his letters dated 7th April 2010 addressed to the Government Agent of Mullaitivu, the 5th Respondent, and the Assistant Government Agent of Oddusuddan, Mullaitivu, the 6th Respondent, through the Grama Sevaka, the 7th Respondent, informed them that he had returned to Sri Lanka upon the cessation of the war and that his properties are being administered by the Government and pleaded that his properties be returned to him and Petitioner annexed several documents authenticating this claim.

The Petitioner, by letter dated 3rd May 2010, preferred an appeal to the 3rd Respondent, Governor of the Northern Province, setting out his circumstances and pleading that the Governor intervene in the matter. Thereafter, by letter dated 6th May 2010 addressed to the 2nd Respondent, the Petitioner set out his current predicament and requested that his properties be returned to him. Petitioner states that, regretfully, none of the Petitioner's letters to the relevant authorities were even acknowledged or replied.

In this background, the Petitioner was alarmed and perturbed to read a news item in the "Uthayan" Newspaper of 21st May 2010 which stated that the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil had been taken over by the Government and was being run by the Department of Hindu Religious and Cultural Affairs by Shanthi Thirunavukkarasu, the 2nd Respondent. This news item further went on to state that in response to a query posed to the 2nd Respondent regarding the same, she had stated that the Department of Hindu Religious and Cultural Affairs was administering the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil and had appointed a priest and a Manager and that once resettlement was completed in the area the administration and control of the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil was to be handed over to representatives of the persons resettled. The Petitioner, by Email of 21st May 2010, addressed to the "Uthavan' newspaper, set out the true factual position regarding the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil and stated that the statements attributed to the 2nd Respondent appearing in the above-mentioned news article were false.

Since no response whatsoever was forthcoming from the 2nd Respondent regarding the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil, the Petitioner, once again by letter dated 12th June 2010 addressed to the 2nd Respondent and copied to Government Agent – Mullaitivu, Assistant Government Agent Oddusuddan, Grama Sevaka Thiru Murikandi, Governor - Northern Province, Minister Douglas Devananda, The Prime Minister, Member of Parliament Chandrakumar, set out yet again his claim to the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil and its temporalities by annexing several documentation in proof of his claim.

The Petitioner alleged that, however, not even a single acknowledgement for the letters was received from the 2nd Respondent, neither were any favourable steps taken by the 2nd Respondent and/or any of the other Respondents to return to the Petitioner and the 12th Respondent the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil and its temporalities.

Objections filed by the Respondents and Intervenient Respondent

The 2nd Res, the Director of Hindu Cultural Affairs, has filed an affidavit dated 29th September 2010, stating that, the Temple has been managed by a Board of Trustees since 1992 and has been administered as a Public Temple for the past 18 years; on the request of the Public, the Department of Hindu Religious and Cultural Affairs took over the administration of the Temple in or about November 2009 and appointed a priest to carryout religious ceremonies. Further, 2nd Respondent states that, on completion of the resettlement process, the administration of the affairs of the Temple will be handed to a committee comprising of the residents of the area and the as Petitioner alleged, the Department of Hindu and Cultural Affairs is not responsible for any construction activities in the vicinity.

The 9th Respondent, the Commissioner of Local Government has filed an affidavit dated 5th January 2011, stating that the validity of the Crown Lease and the extent of land granted thereby are matters to be established by the Petitioner in Court of Law; there are many building which were previously controlled by the LTTE and thereafter abandoned, hence private ownership in regard to lands would have to be established in law; there are many land disputes in Killinochchi District and it is not practical for the Governor to investigate these matters; the activities of the temple and the surrounding lands are not matters that the Commissioner of Local Government is involved with.

It was submitted on behalf of the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 5th, 6th, 9th and 13th Respondents that, the Petitioner's application is primarily in the nature of a vindicatory action in which he seeks possession and control of the Temple and the administration of its affairs.

Further, the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 5th, 6th, 9th and 13th Respondents states that, they have not dispossessed the Petitioner and the Petitioner according to his affidavit has abandoned the temple and its premises in or about 1990 and has been away for a long period of time, with no evidence of having controlled the affairs of the temple in that period of absence of 18 years. In the circumstances, the Petitioner would have to establish in a District Court, his right to control the Temple and the Administration of its affairs.

The 4th Respondent submits that, the lease relied on by the Petitioner, was expired in the absence of the renewal and, therefore, the Petitioner has no rights to the subject matter. Further, it was submitted that the land is a State land given to Vythilingam from whom the Petitioner claims that he is a hereditary trustee. The 4th Respondent alleges that the Petitioner abandoned his trusteeship for a long time, and his claims are prescribed in law. The 4th Respondent submits that, as far as concerned, the 4th Respondent is a public-oriented body and is involved in serving the public. They have constructed 46 peanut shops, 12 tea kiosks and a toilet to enable the worshippers and the users of the road to ease themselves and buy pooja items. The money for the construction of the shops is from public funds and entitled to collect rents and has no duty to account to Petitioner.

The Intervenient-Respondent states that, in terms of Trusts Ordinance No.9 of 1917 as amended and as the Petitioner claimed in paragraph 1 of the Petition, the place as a venerated place of worship and when there are no Trustees, then an application has to be made under Sections 75 and 76 of the Trusts Ordinance No.9 of 1917 as amended with regard to the trusteeship. The Intervenient- Respondent alleges that, there was no application made or no order was provided to that effect by the Petitioner and there is no instrument of Trust was submitted or produced to court with regard to the said claim by way of Hereditary Trustee by the Petitioner. In these circumstances, a competent court should have issued an order under Section 112 of the Trusts Ordinance. In this case, there was no such order produced by the Petitioner. In these circumstances, the Petitioner has no status to file this application. The Petitioner sought relief in the Petition on the basis that he is entitled to the management and control of the "Thiru Murikandi Pilayar Kovil". But no order has been obtained or produced under Section 75 or 76 or 112 of the Trusts Ordinance No.9 of 1917 as amended.

Further, the Intervenient-Respondent states that the best interest of the devotees shall be in the safe custody of the "State Institution" or a receiver appointed under Section 671 of the Civil Procedure Code by the District Court. In the event the Petitioner establishes his right in the proper forum, namely "District Court", which has jurisdiction to make an appropriate order in respect of the Religious Charitable Trust under the Trusts Ordinance No. 09 of 1917 or under Section 671 of the Civil Procedure Code, the Petitioner may claim by a Court order. In the absence of such court order, the Petitioner has no right to file this application as the Petitioner has filed this application for his personal and individual right as a hereditary Trustee.

The 12A Respondent states that the Petitioner and the 12th Respondent, Thirunavukkarasu Thanaladchumy (She died pending the Case), are the hereditary trustees of the Thiru Murikandy Pillayar Temple situated by the side of A9 road at Murikandy in Kilinochchi and the other Respondents have illegally, unlawfully and against the law applicable in the Country taken over the possession, administration, maintenance and management of the Thiru Murikandy Pillayar Temple and its temporalities after the end of civil war and thereby violated the fundamental rights of the Petitioner and 12A Respondent.

The 12A Respondent states that the Trusteeship of the Petitioner and the 12th Respondent is affirmed in the Supreme Court Case No. 115/1954, decided on 1st April 1955. The 12th Respondent is a party to the said case. Decree, Writ and the execution papers of District Court of Vavuniya Case No. 826 are filed by the 12th Respondent along with the Affidavit of the 12th Respondent.

As per the submission of the 12A Respondent, the Pillayar (Vinayakar) was placed under a tree by Great Grandfather of the 12th Respondent in the year 1884. He constructed a small hut and maintained the Pillayar as a Vazhi Pillayar with the belief that God protected their journey. The Thiru Murikandy Pillayar temple is a famous "vazhi Pillayar' which means temple situated by the side of a road where the devotees are people and passengers using the said road. Thus, these types of temples do not have any permanent devotees. These temples are not traditional temples. In these temples, there is no priest and there are no rights and rituals observed strictly.

The Temple is situated in the State Land. The State has, by a long-term lease, given the land in extent of about Two and a half Acres (including the land where the temple is situated) to the predecessors of the Petitioner and the 12A Respondent. Till 1990, the Petitioner and the 12th Respondent and their predecessors to the Trust were in possession, control, management and administration of the said temple and its temporalities. Thereafter, the LTTE took control of the Kilinochchi district and considering the "Till" collection from the said temple, LTTE took total control, management and administration of the temple, which forced the Petitioner to flee to India and the 12th Respondent to Nelliyadi in Point Pedro. The Petitioner and the 12th Respondent were forcibly prevented from performing their duties as trustees due to the said illegal and unlawful taking-over of the LTTE. The Petitioner and the 12th Respondent did not have any place or forum to seek any effective relief against the said acts of the LTTE. The above facts, such as the Trusteeship of the Petitioner and 12th Respondent, taking over of the Temple and its temporalities by the LTTE and its control and fleeing of the Petitioner and 12th Respondent against their will, are admitted by the 4th Respondent.

Article 12(1) violation

The Petitioner and the 12A respondent in this application claim that the actions of the Respondents have violated their fundamental rights under Article 12(1) of the Constitution. Article 12(1) of the Constitution provides as follows;

> "All persons are equal before the law and are entitled to the equal protection of the law."

The Petitioner filed this application on the basis that his fundamental rights have been violated in as much as the State Institutions have taken over and managed the subject temple of this application. The above facts, such as the Trusteeship of the Petitioner and 12th Respondent, taking over of the Temple and its temporalities by the LTTE and its control and fleeing of the Petitioner and 12th Respondent against their will are admitted by the 4th Respondent in the Statements of Objection of the 4th Respondent. As in the 6th Paragraph, it was stated that, "...the 2nd Respondent together with the 4th Respondent and 9th Respondent did not act so as to deny the rights of the Petitioner and the 12th Respondent, but to preserve and protect the temple which was abandoned by the trustees from 1992 till the military took over". Further, in paragraph 16, it was stated as "... the management and trusteeship of Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Temple was taken over by LTTE from the year 1990. Therefore, the Petitioner and the 12th Respondent by flying to India have lost their rights to be trustees."

Furthermore, in 20th, 21st and 22nd paragraph reads as follows, - ".... Petitioner and the 12th Respondent abandoned the said trusteeship, and thereby allowed the management and control of Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Temple to be temporally managed by the Department of Hindu Religious and Cultural Affairs and to do eventually taken over by the Board of Trustees elected or selected by the worshipers once settlement of displaced people is over.", "....as the Petitioner and 12th Respondent abandoned the said trust...", ".... as the Petitioner and the 12th Respondent failed to manage the trust and the right to repossess. ...."

The above quotes, extracted from the Statement of Objections of the 4th Respondent is proof of facts and admissions of the Trusteeship of the Petitioner and 12th Respondent, taking over of the Temple and its temporalities by the LTTE and its control and fleeing of the Petitioner and 12th Respondent against their will are admitted by the 4th Respondent. Further, as submitted above it is clearly established that the 12A Respondent and the Petitioner are the hereditary trustees of the said Temple.

It is an admitted fact that the Department of Hindu Religious and Cultural Affairs has taken over the possession and administration of the Thiru Murikandy Temple and its temporalities after the end of the civil war. The 2nd Respondent, who is the Director of the Department of Hindu Religious and Cultural Affairs, has in her affidavit stated that the Department of Hindu Religious and Cultural Affairs, on or about 9th November 2009, took over the administration of the Temple and appointed a priest to conduct the pooja at the said Temple. Further, as per paragraphs 06, 20 and 22 of the Statements of Objection of the 4th Respondent, in which the 4th Respondent has clearly stated that the Department of Hindu Religious and Cultural Affairs under the Ministry of Cultural Affairs have taken over the temple and its temporalities.

As the 2nd and/or 4th respondents claimed, they did not submit any legal authority to prove that they have power or authority whatsoever under any laws of the country to take over the temple/temples on anyone's request and/or to regulate the administration and management of any temple/temples. The 2nd Respondent is not empowered to take over any temples in any manner whatsoever and for any reasons whatsoever without any legal authority; therefore, I am of the view that the 2nd Respondent had acted in contravening the law and the fundamental rights of Petitioner.

Further, the 4th Respondent had failed to prove in which manner they got the authority to collect the rents from the shops constructed by utilizing the money of public funds offered for charitable purposes of the Temple. As the 2nd Res claimed in her Affidavit, paragraph 8, the Department of Hindu and Religious Affairs nor the persons administering the Temple are responsible for the purported constructions referred to by the Petitioner and the said constructions, if any, are by private persons.

The 2nd Respondent and the 4th Respondent stated that there were requests from the devotees to take over the temple, and as such, the 2nd Respondent took over the temple and after the resettlement, the temple will be handed over to a committee elected by the devotees. But there are no permanent devotees or worshipers to the said Vazhi Pillayar Temple as it was a temple situated by the side of a road where the devotees are people and passengers using the said road.

As it was submitted by the Respondents, I am of the view that Section 75 or 76 or 112 of the Trusts Ordinance No. 09 of 1917 will not apply to this application since the Petitioner and the 12th Respondent as hereditary trustees of the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil did not abandoned their rights and responsibilities as trustees willfully but due to the reason of civil war occurred they were forced to leave the area or the country for their protection of lives.

Further, I am of the view that Section 102 of the Trusts Ordinance No. 09 of 1917 will not apply to this application, since this Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil is a "Vazhi Pillayar" which means temple situated by the side of a road where the devotees are people and passengers using the said road.

Decision

In the above premise, I am of the view that the acts and deeds of the Respondents are arbitrary, capricious, contrary to law, without authority and without any legal basis and violated the Fundamental Rights of the 12th Respondent and the Petitioner under Article 12(1) of the Constitution. Therefore, I order the 1st to 11th Respondents or any one or more of them to hand over the management and control of the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil, its temporalities and the appurtenant land constituted in the Crown Lease marked and annexed as "P1" of the Petition. Further, I direct the 1st- 11th Respondents not to interrupt the trusteeship of the Temple and the land on which the temple and its temporalities stand.

Application Allowed.

JUDGE OF THE SUPREME COURT

JANAK DE SILVA, J

I have had the benefit of reading in draft, the judgment proposed to be delivered by my brother Thurairaja, J. As I am respectfully not in agreement with it, I have written this dissenting judgment.

I do not wish to set out the factual circumstances in great detail as my brother has done so. I will refer to them to the extent required to explain my conclusions.

The Petitioner claims that he is a hereditary trustee of the Thiru Murikandi Pillayar Kovil (Kovil), which is undoubtedly a venerated place of Hindu religious worship. The State land forming the subject matter of this application was leased in perpetuity to Kathiresar Vythilingam, an ancestor of the Petitioner. It is claimed that the LTTE forcibly took over the Kovil and property around 1990. The Petitioner and his family were forced to flee to India.

After the military defeat of the LTTE, the Kovil and properties have been managed by the 2nd, 4th to 9th and 11th Respondents. The Petitioner is seeking to recover possession and control of the Kovil and properties.

As I held in Centre for Environmental Justice (Guarantee) Ltd. v. Anura Satharasinghe, Conservator General and Others [C.A. 291/2015, C.A.M. 06.11.2020 at pages 5,14], there is a need to settle down all internally displaced persons, who were displaced due to the war in Sri Lanka, as far as possible in the areas where they were residing. However, this is subject to other overriding concerns and, above all, the respect for the rule of law, which is the foundation of our Constitution.

There is no unequivocal admission by the Respondents that the Kovil and its properties are trust property or that the Petitioner is a hereditary trustee. Admittedly, paragraphs 6, 16, 20, 21 and 22 of the statement of objections of the 4th Respondent may be understood in that sense. Nevertheless, in paragraph 3 thereon, it is clearly claimed that the state land leased in 1880 to Kathiresan Vythilingam has expired. Moreover, it is asserted that Kathiresan Vythilingam or his heirs are not the owners of the said land and cannot claim hereditary trusteeship. Hence, the position of the 4th Respondent on these two issues is equivocal.

The Petitioner relies on a judgment of the Supreme Court of Ceylon (P3). It is one made in an appeal between Velupillai Thirunavukkarasu and Kandappar Sellappah and Chelliah Ponnadurai. The State was not a party to that case. Moreover, it is based on a settlement decree between the parties.

The 2nd Respondent states that the Kovil is been managed by a Board of Trustees since 1992 and has been administered as a public Kovil for more than 18 years as at the time the affidavit was attested in 2010. At the request of the public, the Department of Hindu Religious and Cultural Affairs took over the administration of the Kovil in or about November 2009 and appointed a priest to carry out religious ceremonies. On completion of the resettlement process, the administration of the Kovil will be handed over to a committee comprising the residents of the area.

In this context, it is incumbent on the Court to examine the claim made by the Petitioner that the land forming the subject matter of this application is trust property.

In terms of section 3 of the Trusts Ordinance No. 17 of 1917 as amended ("Trusts Ordinance"), "trust" is an obligation annexed to the ownership of property, and arising out of a confidence reposed in and accepted by the owner, or declared and accepted by him, for the benefit of another person, or of another person and the owner, of such a character that, while the ownership is nominally vested in the owner, the right to the beneficial enjoyment of the property is vested or to be vested in such other person, or in such other person concurrently with the owner.

In Fernando v. Sivasubramaniam Aiyer (61 NLR 241 at 243), it was held that no particular formula is required by law for the creation of a trust. The requirement of law is that the author should make his meaning clear and evince his intention to create a trust, and the Court will give effect to that intention.

However, there is nothing on the face of the Crown Lease (P1) which indicates that the Crown (then) intended it to form part of a religious trust or trust property. A clear typed copy of P1 has been produced by the State with motion dated 16th May 2018. It is a lease granted in the name of Kathiresan Vayittilingam and his heirs and assigns in free and common socage forever on the payment of an annual quit-rent. In that sense, it appears to be a lease in perpetuity as claimed by the Petitioner. However, it permits the State to enter upon the land for reasons specified therein. In my view, the contents of the said lease do not support the claim of the Petitioner that it is part of a Hindu religious trust.

No doubt, section 107 of the Trusts Ordinance permits the Court to assume an implied trust if it is of the opinion from all the circumstances of the case that the trust, in fact, exists, or ought to be deemed to exist. However, no such material is available before the Court.

Hence, in my view, the application of the Petitioner must fail on the ground that it has not been established that the State land forming the subject matter of this application has been shown to be part of the trust property in question.

Even if one assumes that it is so established, the question of hereditary trusteeship and control over the State land must be addressed.

In examining these two issues, it must be borne in mind that there are two distinct and different modes associated with the devolution of trust property, one in regard to title and the other in regard to the office of trusteeship. The relevant principles have been succinctly stated in Kumaraswamy Kurukkal v. Karthigesu Kurukkal (26 N.L.R. 33), Karthigasu Ambalawanar v. Subramaniar Kathiravelu (27 N.L.R. 15) and Letchi Raman Balasunderam and Others v. Kalimuttu Letchi Raman and Others [(79) I N.L.R. 361]. They are as follows:

When a person who owns a land dedicates it for the purpose of religious worship or transfers it to a temple, the effect of his doing so is to constitute himself a trustee for a charitable trust for the purpose of the religious worship to be carried out at the temple.

The legal title or dominium remains with the dedicator or the author of the trust and, on his death, passes to his heirs subject to the obligations of the trust, the heirs being constructive trustees.

The legal ownership or dominium does not ordinarily devolve with the office of trustee. Upon the death of the trustee, in whom legal title is vested to the property, the legal ownership does not pass to the new trustee. In the absence of any formal instrument, it will pass to the trustee's heirs, who will hold it subject to the trust.

In so far as the devolution of trusteeship is concerned, Vythilingam Kanagasabai is said to have inherited the trusteeship from Kathiresan Vythilingam. Nevertheless, there is a question mark over the devolution thereafter. It is said that it devolved in equal shares to Kandappar Sellappah, his nephew and Ponnuthurai, his adopted son. How they became the heirs of Vythilingam Kanagasabai is not established.

Moreover, the 14th and 15th Respondents, who are worshippers of the Kovil and the President and Secretary, respectively, of the Kovil Worshippers Council, state that the management of the Kovil should not be left to individuals or to a Government Department of Ministry. They further state that the Kovil should be managed by the Hindus, and they should not be politically involved in any manner. It is claimed that either they or the 12th Respondent are in law entitled to possession, management or control of the Kovil.

For the foregoing reasons, I hold that the Petitioner has failed to establish that the State land in issue is trust property. Neither has he succeeded in establishing that he is an heir of Vythilingam Kanagasabai or a trustee. Hence, I refuse to grant the relief claimed by the Petitioner.

In conclusion, I wish to state that my conclusions are based on the evidence placed before the Court. It should not prevent the Petitioner from seeking to establish both matters before any other Court in appropriate proceedings. In fact, most of the Respondents claim that these matters are more suitable to be determined as provided for in the Trusts Ordinance.

Application dismissed. No costs.

Aluwihare PC. J.,

(1) This is a fundamental rights application by Mohammed Rashid Fathima Sharmila on behalf of her deceased husband, Mohammed Nizar Mohammed Irfan, (hereinafter also referred to as the 'deceased'). She petitions that her deceased husband was apprehended by the 1st to 4th Respondents along with three other police officers and was shot dead in the following morning by the 3rd Respondent. It is alleged by the 3rd Respondent that the shot was fired when exercising his right of private defence against an alleged violent attempt by the deceased to escape the charge of the police officers accompanying him on a search for concealed weapons. The Petitioner claims that the arrest and execution of her husband is a violation of his fundamental rights guaranteed under Article 11, 12(1), 13(1) and 13(4). Leave to proceed, however, was granted for the alleged violation of all the Articles referred to above, sans Article 11.

(2) Prior to addressing the issue relating to the alleged violation of fundamental rights, an illustration of the incidents that transpired leading to the present application is merited.

(3) Around 1 p.m. on 2nd September 2008, the 1st to 4th Respondents along with three other police officers, had arrested the deceased on the charges of allegedly possessing a live hand grenade, murder, attempted murder, and robbery. About an hour later on the same day, the 1st and 2nd Respondents, according to the Petitioner, had brought her deceased husband to the Petitioner's home and searched the premises for concealed weapons, albeit unsuccessfully.

(4) In this instance, the 1st and 2nd Respondents had also assaulted the deceased's cousin Mohammed Azar Ghouse Mahamood, a boy of 15 years, who had visited the Petitioner's home after hearing the news about the arrest of the deceased. The 1st and 2nd Respondents had proceeded to arrest the cousin as well, and left with both the deceased and his cousin in their custody. The Petitioner's account of this fact is corroborated by the said Ghouse Mahamood's complaint to the Human Rights Commission marked and produced as P4a and his affidavit marked and produced as P4b.

(5) The deceased, thereafter, was allegedly detained at the Slave Island Police Station and he was allowed to contact his wife several times that day. According to the Petitioner, in the course of the telephone conversations, the deceased had informed her that he was threatened by the 1st and 2nd

Respondents that he would be executed if he failed to produce some weapons by 10 p.m. that night. The Petitioner who was distressed by these communications thereafter visited the Slave Island Police Station to meet the deceased and to ascertain the condition of his health, which had been around 8.30 p.m. on the same day. Police officers at the station had shown the deceased's skullcap and said "in jest" that her husband was safe and was being fed "කැඳ" [porridge]. Contradictorily, however, they have also told that her husband was safe and was taken to Anuradhapura and was no longer in the custody of the Slave Island Police Station, and that she would come to know what happened to her husband the next morning.

(6) Early next morning [3rd September], the deceased had been allegedly taken by the police to Maligawaththa and Kotahena, for the purpose of locating weapons and to arrest two other suspects. The Petitioner, becoming privy to rumours that her husband had been shot dead near 'Gaspaha' junction (ගෑස්පහ හංදිය), she had visited the said location to find her husband's dead body inside the Police vehicle No. 32-8466.

(7) The facts of this incident had been reported to the Chief Magistrate of Colombo under case number B6578/01/2008. (Vide P5). In the course of the evidence led at the Inquest before the Magistrate, it was revealed that the deceased was travelling within the police area of Pettah, in the Police vehicle No. 32-8466 with eight (8) Police officers. While so travelling, the deceased, who was handcuffed at the time, allegedly attempted to escape from the moving vehicle by seizing the weapon of Sergeant Pulleperuma and making an attempt to fire at 3rd Respondent, Sergeant Karunathilake. At that moment, the deceased had been shot twice by the 3rd Respondent; once in the chest and once in the abdomen, allegedly exercising his right of private defence.

(8) The cause of death, according to the Judicial Medical Officer, was "close range rifled firearm injury to the chest and abdomen." (Vide 4R3). With this sequence of events in mind, before venturing into the many inconsistencies between the Petitioner's and Respondents' versions of events, it is pertinent to make a brief comment at the outset on the locus standi of the Petitioner.

Locus Standi of the Petitioner

(9) Earlier, the position pertaining to locus standi was that a Petitioner can complain only of the violation of his or her own fundamental rights. Action could only be filed by the Petitioner or by an Attorney-at-law acting on the Petitioner's behalf, as per a "plain, natural, ordinary, grammatical and literal" reading of Article 126(2) (Somawathie v Weerasinghe (1990) 2 Sri LR 121 at 124).

(10) Subsequently, however, with the pronouncement of the principles laid down by Fernando J. in the case of Kotabadu Durage Sriyani Silva v Chanaka Iddamalgoda, Officer-in-Charge, Police Station Payagala (2003) 1 Sri LR 14, it is now well-established and solidified law that the next of kin has a right to sue on behalf of the deceased, in order to uphold the right to life implicit in Article 13(4). To hold that no one is entitled to sue the wrongdoers in the present case, would mean that there is no remedy for a violation of Article 13(4) by causing death itself, but an imminent threat to one's life and liberty is remediable; rendering the right to life impliedly recognised by this Court under Article 13(4) merely illusory. In such circumstances, the need to avoid anomalies, inconsistencies and injustice calls for an expansive interpretation of the constitutional remedy provided by Article 126(2).

(11) This view was endorsed by Justice Shirani Bandaranayake [as she then was] in Lama Hewage Lal (deceased) and Rani Fernando (wife of deceased Lal) v. OIC Seeduwa Police Station (2005) 1 Sri LR 40, 45 where her ladyship held; that after the decision of Sriyani Silva (supra), "it is therefore settled law that the lawful heirs and/or dependants of a person who is deceased as a result of an act of torture should be entitled to a declaration of the violation and compensation".

(12) Furthermore, of particular relevance to the present case, is Article 14.1 of the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment of 1984, to which Sri Lanka is a party, posits "in the event of the death of the victim as a result of an act of torture, his dependants shall be entitled to compensation." The interpretation that the right to compensation accrues to or devolves on the deceased's lawful heirs and/or dependants brings our law into conformity with international obligations and standards, incorporated through the enabling legislation, the Convention against Torture and other Cruel Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment Act, No. 22 of 1994, and must be preferred. Such an interpretation is also bolstered by Article 4(d) of the Constitution.

(13) In the present instance, the deceased's rights have accrued or devolved on his next of kin. The Petitioner, therefore avails herself of the remedy available to the deceased. Hence, the present Application is in accordance with Article 126(2) of the Constitution. Having established the locus standi of the Petitioner, it is apposite to consider the credibility of the Respondents' narrative.

Shifting stances in the Respondents' Narrative

(14) The credibility and consistency of the Respondents' narrative are called into question, due to the shifting of positions from the very inception to the conclusion of their account of the events that transpired, and the discrepancies that can be observed.

(15) There is an incongruity inter-se between the affidavits of the Respondents even after they were re-submitted after amending, in 2011. Inconsistency is observed even in the basic fact as to who arrested the deceased at the Maligawatte Applewatte Milad Mosque. In the 1st Respondent's affidavit, it is averred that he assisted Police Sergeant 'Karunathilake' in the arrest of the deceased, while the 2nd Respondent has taken up the position that it was one Police Sergeant 'Kaluarachchi' who made the arrest [paragraph 7 of the 2nd

Respondent's affidavit]. According to the affidavit of the 3rd Respondent Karunathilake, he has also assisted one Police Sergeant 'Kaluarachchi' in making the arrest of the deceased. Interestingly, it was the 4th Respondent, Kaluarachchi, who is an Inspector of Police who had made an entry in the Information Book pertaining to the arrest of the deceased (vide "4R2A"). This fact was also admitted in the testimonies of 1st, 3rd and 4th Respondents in the inquest Proceedings (vide "P5"). The lack of consistency in their own narration of events at the Magistrate's Court and before this Court is telling of the incoherence in their narrative.

(16) Further, it is submitted by the Petitioner that her deceased husband's cousin Mohammed Azar Ghouse Mahamood [hereinafter referred to as Ghouse], a young schoolboy of 15 years of age, who had visited her house upon hearing the distressing news of the deceased's arrest, had also been arrested by the Respondents when they brought the deceased to Petitioner's home for a search. Ghouse had made a complaint to the Human Rights Commission (HRC) on 4th September 2008 and submitted an affidavit in this regard (P4a and P4b, respectively) where he states that he was arrested without citing reasons, was severely beaten, detained inside a bus outside the Slave Island Police Station and subsequently released without any charges. In his affidavit, the details about the presence of the 1st, 2nd and 4th Respondents at the deceased's house, the time at which they visited the house, and the manner and the place where the deceased was detained after being taken to the Slave Island Police station, are consistent with the IB entries pertaining to the arrest of the deceased ["4R2A"]. His account of events is corroborated by the Petitioner and the parents of the deceased who have also filed complaints with the HRC (vide "P8a"). The Respondents merely deny such substantial claims of assault and arrest in their affidavits, without countering the allegation or providing any explanation, ebbs away the credence of their version of events.

(17) The root of inconsistency goes deeper, down to ascertaining the place of detention of the deceased. The Petitioner claims that her husband "was detained at the Slave Island police station" (paragraph 6(e) of the Petition). She had even visited the Slave Island police station in the hope of meeting her husband at which instance she received contradictory information about her husband being well and being fed porridge, and later was told that he was taken to Anuradhapura. The Petitioner's claim that the deceased was held at the Slave Island Police station is corroborated by the affidavit of Ghouse, who states that he witnessed the deceased being "placed in a room inside the Slave Island Police Station" (paragraph 6 of "P4b"). It is also lent credibility by the Human Rights Commission complaint filed by the deceased's parents where they state they were informed by the Legal Officer at the Human Rights Commission that their son was under the charge of one Kaluarachchi of the Slave Island police station, the location to which they hurried with the expectation of seeing their son, but were told to return the next morning. (vide "P8a" and "P8b").

(18) Yet the 4th Respondent [IP Kaluarchchi] claims, that as per the IB entry recording the arrest, the deceased's investigation was to be conducted under the supervision of Officer-In-Charge of Pettah Police Station, and he was presented to the Pettah Police Station after arrest. The 4th Respondent goes further to state that the Petitioner herself was informed of this fact when he took the deceased to Petitioner's house to search for concealed weapons. (4R2A). In the "out" entry, (4R5) which is extracted from the IB of the Pettah police station, the 4th Respondent claims that it was the Pettah Police Station they left on the morning of 3rd September 2008, taking the deceased along with them, and this is reiterated in his depositions at the Inquest Proceeding (vide "P5", page 16). But this account by the Respondents naturally raises the question as to why the aggrieved wife, mother and father of the deceased would concern themselves with calling over at the Slave Island police station and receive such perplexing responses from the officers therein, if they were quite dependably informed of the whereabouts of the deceased by the 4th Respondent. The Respondents have offered no clarification regarding the same.

(19) The credibility of the Respondents' narrative is placed in peril owing to contradictions in the material facts regarding the scuffle in which the deceased's death ensued, as portrayed in the original and the amended affidavits of the Respondents. Given that these affidavits were filed by officers of the Police who are well-versed in and much dependent upon the accuracy of the detailed notes they take pertaining to each investigation, such lapses raise incredulity. The original affidavits of the 1st to 4th Respondents filed on 18th February 2010 had stated in unanimity that they "categorically deny that the deceased was handcuffed while he was travelling in the Police vehicle No. 32-8466 along with 8 armed police officers", which is inconsistent with the depositions of the 4th Respondent before the Inquest (vide "P5", page 15). It also contradicts the "in" entry of the IB on 3rd September 2008 (vide "4R5A"), where he stated that the deceased was handcuffed.

(20) However, the original affidavits were amended after a lapse of more than a year in August 2011, to read that the Respondents "categorically deny that the handcuffed deceased was travelling in the Police vehicle…", reverting from their original position and conjuring the unconvincing image of an individual defined by the Respondents themselves as an "an absconding under-world gang leader wanted by the police in connection with offences of attempted murders, murder and robbery" known to be adept at wielding a gun, being taken around with such scant security measures. This renders the narrative of the Respondents further implausible and wavering.

(21) Irregularities are also observed as to the time of death. It is stated in the "out" entry by the 4th Respondent (Vide 4R5) and in his depositions at the Inquest (Vide P5), that 8 Police Officers left the Pettah Police Station with the deceased to Kotahena and Maligawatte at the dawn of 3rd September, 2008 at 4.05 a.m. in order to locate some weapons and arrest 'Nilafer' and 'Azmi mama', based on information revealed through the deceased's statements (Vide 4R5). However, the "in" entry registers that at 4.50 a.m. After 45 minutes] they were still travelling towards Barber Street along the Pettah Main Street when the scuffle occurred and the deceased was shot dead (Vide 4R5A). The distance from Pettah to Maligawatte (approximately 3 Km) and the time taken to make the trip, makes it questionable why this journey had to be made while the surrounding was still dark, given that the main aim of the journey was to locate weapons. The requirement of undertaking an urgent search operation, being pressed by some urgent concern is nowhere expressed by the Respondents. It was only bound to limit the efficiency and success of their search.

(22) The Respondents are seen to be well-aware that the deceased was an 'under-world gang leader' adept at handling weapons. Experienced Police officers acting with a mind to preventing exigencies routinely take sufficient care when transporting such a detainee. But a question is raised as to why such care was not exercised in the present instance, given that in the "out" entry, as they left for the search, Police Inspector Kaluarachchi had advised the police officers that, as they are embarking on an investigation to arrest hard-core underworld criminals and to look for their weapons, and suspects who are adept at using grenades, to be vigilant and careful (vide 4R5). Therefore, it is only natural that the officers should have, in the ordinary course of events, taken extreme care to ensure that their weapons are out of reach of the deceased suspect. However, an extra degree of care taken to prevent such an exigency is not exhibited in the conduct of the 8 police officers, with 6 out of them being armed, and the deceased's actions limited to the confined space of the moving Police vehicle.

(23) As per the above analysis, it is my considered opinion that the Respondents' version of the events is contradictory, improbable and thus must be refuted. In this context, it should be examined whether the conduct of the Respondents have violated the rights afforded to the deceased under Article 12(1), 13(1) and 13(4).

Violation of Article 12 (1)

(24) Article 12 (1) of the Constitution embodies two vibrant concepts - equality before the law and equal protection of the law to all persons. The two limbs of this Article are lucidly elaborated by Ivor Jennings in, 'Law of the Constitution', 5th edition, at page 50 where he posits that,

> "[e]quality before the law is a negative concept implying the absence of any special privilege in favour of any individual and the equal subjection of all classes to the ordinary law. Equal protection of the law is a more positive concept and implies equality of treatment in equal circumstances."

(25) In the present case, the alleged criminal record of the deceased is immaterial to a violation of his fundamental rights ensured by the Constitution. As each person ought to be subjected equally to the ordinary law of the country, the deceased should similarly be subjected to a fair trial before a competent court and be found guilty of any charges against him. In any case, he is equally entitled to receive the same protection of his fundamental rights as any other citizen in the same circumstances. It is quoted with approval that this was correctly noted by Fernando J in Sriyani Silva v. Iddamalgoda (supra) at pages 78-79, "[r]espondents should have concentrated their efforts to have the allegations against the deceased determined by a competent Court, after a fair trial. Until then the deceased was entitled to the benefit of the presumption of innocence."

(26) Annexure "4R1" which notes down fifteen allegations against the deceased is merely a sheet of paper on which 15 case numbers are typed alleging that the deceased was treated as a suspect in those cases. "4R1" is not a document maintained by the police in the normal course of their duties, but appears to be a document prepared to counter the allegations against the Respondents in the instant application, whereas the Respondents could have filed copies of the "B" Reports filed by the police when facts were reported to court citing the deceased as a suspect in those respective cases. In this backdrop, it is difficult to place much credence on "4R1". Thus, the assertion on the part of the Respondents, that the deceased was a 'wanted man' in connection with many crimes cannot be relied upon by this court.

(27) In any case, any such supposed allegation has not been determined by a competent court after a fair trial and until such time, the presumption of innocence will prevail as per Article 13(5) of the Constitution. Even if his record was bad, it is now rendered more serious as the deceased has lost his life, and consequently, lost the opportunity to redeem his bad record. Thus, it submitted that the argument that the deceased was a known criminal has no credibility, and has no bearing on his fundamental rights.

(28) It is contended by the Petitioner, quoting Dumbell v. Roberts (1944) All ER 326, 329 as cited in Muthusamy v. Kannangara (1951) 52 NLR 324 and Faiz v. The Attorney General (1995) 1 Sri LR 372, that the principle 'innocent until proven guilty' applies to the Police function of arrest. Even in the context of the arrest being based on a mere list of cases allegedly pending against the deceased, (Vide 4R1) presented along with an IB entry claiming that the deceased held a live grenade in his possession at the time of arrest (Vide 4R2A), the deceased is nevertheless entitled to be protected by the law against violations of his life and liberty.

(29) This notion is expressed by Justice Sharvananda, in his Treatise, 'Fundamental Rights in Sri Lanka' at page 84, where citing Paliwadana v. A.G., he states,

> "The fundamental fact is men are not alike […] what is postulated is equality of treatment of all persons in utter disregard of every conceivable circumstance of the differences…"

(30) Therefore, despite the allegations against him of criminal conduct, in the absence of an order of a competent court handing down a sentence, the deceased was entitled to the ordinary and equal protection of the law against the violation of his fundamental rights by the actions of the 1st-4th Respondents, which resulted in his death. The 5th Respondent who is the officer-in-charge of the Slave Island police station, was under a duty to take all reasonable steps to ensure that persons held in custody were treated humanely and in accordance with the law. This included monitoring the activities of his subordinates. He did not claim to have taken any steps to ensure that the deceased was being treated as the law required him to be.

(31) Thus, in light of the foregoing evaluation, it is my considered view that the 1st to 5th Respondents have violated the fundamental rights of the deceased by failing to afford equality before the law and equal protection of the law to the deceased, guaranteed by Article 12(1) of the Constitution.

Violation of Article 13 (4)

(32) Article 13(4) prohibits punishing any person with death or imprisonment except by order of a competent court, made in accordance with the procedure established by law. In the present case, it is admitted by both parties that the deceased was shot by the 3rd Respondent and thereafter the deceased succumbed to the injuries thus inflicted. Therefore, it is not contested that the death of the deceased was not in accordance with an order of a competent court.

(33) Bearing in mind the potential criminal liability of the 3rd Respondent, in the present case, the deceased was put to death by him in the absence of any order of a competent court to that effect, made in accordance with the procedure established by the law, in a deliberate violation of the sanctity of his life. This is corroborated in the Petition by the Petitioner who claims that the deceased had prior apprehension regarding his imminent execution, which was also communicated to her. (Vide paragraph 6(f) of the Petition)

(34) The learned Deputy Solicitor General argued on behalf of the Respondents that Article 12(1) is linked to Articles 13(1) and 13(4) and as such Article 12(1) cannot stand alone but intrinsically linked to the Articles referred to. His argument appears to be that if the court cannot come to a finding that the Respondents have infringed Article 13(1) and 13(4), the court cannot proceed to consider a violation under Article 12(1). He contended further that the deceased was arrested for possession of a hand grenade and he was informed of the reasons for the arrest. As such, the respondents cannot be held to have infringed the rights referred to in Articles 13(1) of the Constitution. It was the position of the learned DSG that there is no material before court to conclude the shooting of the deceased was to mete out a punishment to the deceased and that the exercise of the right of self [private] defence operate as an exception to Article 13(4). However, it must be noted that a person can be arrested in accordance with the law, but cannot be punished in violation of it. And this would engender a denial of equal protection of the law.

(35) Section 89 of the Penal Code stipulates the general provision that 'nothing is an offence which is done in the exercise of the right of private defence.' However, even though under Section 93, the right of private defence of the body may extend to causing death when faced with an assault that reasonably causes apprehension of death, according to Section 92(4), the right in no case extends to the inflicting of more harm than necessary for the purpose of defence.

(36) Even assuming that the deceased did make an attempt to escape ; in a situation where 8 trained policemen, (who were further instructed in advance to be prepared to face the dangers and exigencies involved in this operation [Vide "4R5"]) were accompanying the deceased, with 6 of them armed and easily able to overpower the deceased by inflicting lesser harm than killing him, the 3rd Respondent is seen to have acted in excess of self-defence. As per Section 92(4) therefore, that defence cannot be extended to the present case. Thus, the right of self-defence presents a weak case for exculpating the 3rd Respondent of criminal liability. Having given its mind to the attended facts and circumstances, the court indeed entertains serious doubts as to whether the scuffle has indeed transpired, as alleged by the Respondents.

(37) In the Case of Wijesuriya v. The State, 77 NLR 25 (Premawathie Manamperi Case) which concerned the killing of a prisoner who was a suspected insurgent held in custody by a military officer, while a state of emergency prevailed in the country, Alles J. observed the following,

"…there was no justification for the shooting of a suspected insurgent taken into custody. What then is the position of a soldier subject to Military Law in such situation? He continues to remain the custodian of the civil law and it will be his duty to shoulder the responsibility of police duties, in the discharge of which he is as much subject to the civil law as the ordinary policeman" (at page 32, emphasis added).

(38) It is apparent that a military officer's duties during a state of emergency is equated to those of a police officer, who is the 'custodian of the civil law' and he/she can offer no justification for killing a prisoner in custody in violation of the civil law.

(39) Even though the Fundamental Rights Chapter of the Constitution of Sri Lanka does not consist of a standalone right to life, in Sriyani Silva v. Iddamalgoda (supra) at page 75, this Court has upheld this right to life as impliedly recognized by Article 13(4), even if it is of a person accused of a bad record. The Court held; "Although the right to life is not expressly recognised as a fundamental right, that right is impliedly recognised in some of the provisions of Chapter III of the Constitution. In particular, Article 13(4) [….] That is to say, a person has a right not to be put to death because of wrongdoing on his part, except upon a court order. Expressed positively, that provision means that a person has a right to live, unless a court orders otherwise." (Emphasis added).

(40) This implication of right to life was also acknowledged in Lama Hewage Lal (deceased) and Rani Fernando (wife of deceased Lal) v. OIC Seeduwa Police Station (supra) at page 45. Bandaranayake J held that without a court order, no person could be put to death and therefore in the absence of such an order, any person has a right to live. And when such a right is created, it will naturally be followed with a remedy, as a right must have a remedy is based on the principle which is accepted and recognized by the maxim ubi jus ibi remedium, viz., 'there is no right without a remedy'.

(41) Right to life is the most fundamental and basic of human rights and the fountain from which all the other human rights spring and it therefore is deserving of the greatest respect. United Nations enshrined the right to life in Article 3 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, postulating that "everyone has the right to life, liberty and security of person".

(42) The right to life is one of the four "non-derogable rights" which cannot be suspended even in a state of emergency, common to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (Article 6), the European Convention on Human Rights (Article 2) and the American Convention on Human Rights (Article 4) and is considered as consisting the "irreducible core" of human rights and a part of customary international law. In light of this, the judgment of the European Court of Human Rights in Finucane v. The United Kingdom (Application no. 29178/95) 1 July 2003, upholding the states' obligation to protect the right to life enshrined in Article 2 of the European Convention on Human Rights is of great persuasive value of the present case.

> "The essential purpose of [official investigations when individuals have been killed as a result of the use of force] is to secure the effective implementation of the domestic laws which protect the right to life and, in those cases involving State agents or bodies, to ensure their accountability for deaths occurring under their responsibility." (para. 67)

(43) Therefore, prevention of extra-judicial killings or custodial deaths invites raising the domestic standards to meet international obligations in upholding the inviolability of life, supplementing the fundamental rights protections of the domestic law. The Article 13(4) of the Constitution as applicable to the present case should be interpreted broadly, especially in view of the State's responsibility of upholding fundamental rights, as enshrined in Article 4(d) of the Constitution, which requires all organs of government, including the Police, to "respect, secure and advance" the fundamental rights declared and recognized by the Constitution and to not "abridge, restrict or deny" such rights.

(44) Even in the absence of a separate standalone right to life, a purposive construction of Article 126(2) read with Article 4(d) of the Constitution, would in the present case, hold the State liable for the arbitrary deprivation of the deceased's life by the Respondents utilizing extrajudicial means, in addition to the liability of the Respondents.

(45) As Justice Sharvananda in the volume, 'Fundamental Rights in Sri Lanka' at page 2, quoting Lord Templeman in Societe United Dock v. Government of Mauritius (1985) A.C.585, 605 commendably postulates,

> "A Constitution concerned to protect the fundamental rights and freedoms of the individual shall not be narrowly construed in a manner which produces anomalies and inexplicable inconsistencies."

(46) Therefore, relevant Articles of the Constitution should be expansively interpreted to recognize the right to life inferred in Article 13(4) and the Petitioner's right to be granted relief. Where there is an infringement of the right to life implicit in Article 13(4), and Article 126(2) must be interpreted in order to avoid anomaly, inconsistency and injustice.

(47) This argument is in line with what Lord Wilberforce in Minister of Home Affairs v. Fisher (1979) 3 A.E.R.21, 25 P.C. illustrated regarding fundamental rights and freedoms provisions, stating that "those provisions 'call for a generous interpretation, avoiding what has been called the austerity of tabulated legalism', suitable to give to individuals the full measure of the fundamental rights and freedoms."

(48) Police brutality should in no terms be allowed to become a fact of normal life and such trends can only be arrested by the broad application of Fundamental Rights which should not merely be excellent in theory. Arbitrary executions in violation of the judicial procedure, by officers of the State should be condemned. The Police Force cannot, at any instance, undermine the criminal justice mechanism of the country.

(49) The Indian Supreme Court has delivered a string of judgements on 'encounter killings', which term is used to describe extrajudicial killings committed by the law enforcement officers of that country, supposedly in self-defence, when they encounter suspects.

(50) In Prakash Kadam et al v. Ramprasad Vishwanath Gupta and Another (2011) 6 SCC 189, Supreme Court of India dismissing the appeal against the refusal of bail for several police officers held as follows; "The 'encounter' philosophy is a criminal philosophy, and all policemen must know this…Fake 'encounters' are nothing but cold blooded, brutal murder by persons who are supposed to uphold the law. In our opinion, if crimes are committed by ordinary people, ordinary punishment should be given, but if the offence is committed by policemen much harsher punishment should be given to them because they do an act totally contrary to their duties."

(51) In Nilabati Behera v. State of Orissa and Others 1993 SCR (2) 581, the Supreme Court asserted that,

> "Convicts, prisoners or undertrials are not denuded of their fundamental rights… There is a great responsibility on the police or prison authorities to ensure that the citizen in its custody is not deprived of his right to life. His liberty is in the very nature of things circumscribed by the very fact of his confinement and therefore his interest in the limited liberty left to him is rather precious. The duty of care on the part of the State is strict and admits of no exceptions." (Emphasis added)

(52) As for the liability of the 5th Respondent for violation of Article 13(4), reiterating what was stated above, he was the Officer-In-Charge of the Slave Island Police Station, and was under a duty to take all reasonable steps to ensure that persons held in custody were treated in accordance with the law. That included monitoring the activities of his subordinate officers of the Divisional Crime Detection Bureau-Colombo (Central), such as the 3rd Respondent, who are attached to the Slave Island Police Station and sanctioning their actions.

Therefore, he bears responsibility for the deceased being put to death in the absence of any order of a competent court to that effect, made in accordance with the procedure established by the law.

(53) For the aforesaid reasons this court holds that the deceased's Fundamental Right guaranteed under Article 13(4) has been infringed by the 3rd and 5th Respondents.

Violation of Article 13(1)

(54) Article 13(1) stipulates that 'no person shall be arrested except according to procedure established by law. Any person arrested shall be informed of the reason for his arrest.'

The Petitioner has not shown substantial cause to the establishment of the fact that the deceased was arrested except according to the procedure established by law and that he was not informed of the reason for his arrest, which was attributed as being in possession of a live hand grenade. The Respondents' affidavits and the IB entry of the arrest unanimously claim that the reasons for the arrest were communicated to the deceased, and the reasons are consistent with those documents. Therefore, there is no material before court to hold that Article 13(1) was infringed in the present case.

Declarations and Compensation

(55) As per Article 126(4) of the Constitution, the Supreme Court is empowered to grant such relief as it may deem just and equitable in the circumstances in respect of any Petition referred to it under Article126(2). Hence, bearing in mind the Petitioner's situation in life; now a single mother with three children to support, and the emotional and psychological trauma she and the children may have suffered due to the death, in addition to being deprived of the care and companionship of a husband and father, compensation is ordered under the just and equitable jurisdiction of the Court.

(56) As referred to earlier the court held that the deceased's Fundamental Rights under Articles 12(1), have been infringed by the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th and 5th

Respondents and Article 13(4) by the 3rd and 5th Respondents and by the State, and that the deceased's right to compensation has accrued to or devolved on the Petitioner.

(57) Therefore, I order the State to pay Rs.250, 000/- as compensation to the Petitioner. In addition, I order the 1st, 2nd and 3rd Respondent to pay Rs.25,000/- each to the Petitioner. Further, I order the 4th and 5th Respondent to pay Rs. 200,000/- each to the petitioner and all payments by the respondents are to be paid personally.

(58) Before I part with this judgement, I wish to advert to several matters which, are, to say the least, disturbing. Sri Lanka Police established in 1806, has a history of over two centuries and one would expect it to develop into a body that comprises of professional law enforcement personnel. I am at a loss to understand, in the present day and time as to why such an established law enforcement entity is incapable of affording due protection to a citizen who is in their custody. Unfortunately, it is not rare to hear instances of suspects dying in the hands of the police. It only highlights the utterly unprofessional approach to duty by the personnel who man it and as a consequence, people are increasingly losing trust in the police. It had lost the credibility it ought to enjoy as a law enforcement agency. The incident relevant to this application had taken place in 2008, however, this court observes that instances of death of suspects in police custody are continuing to happen, even today. It appears that the hierarchy of the administration had paid scant attention to arrest this trend which does not augur well for the law enforcement and the rule of law.

(59) In these circumstances we are of the view that we should direct the 6th Respondent, the Inspector General of Police to formulate, issue and implement, guidelines to the police, elaborating the steps that should be taken by each officer to avoid 'encounter deaths' of this nature in the future.

This matter will be mentioned on 24th March 2023 and the 6th Respondent is directed to report to this court the steps taken by the 6th Respondent in this regard.

Argued on: 27-01-2023 and 07-03-2023

Decided on: 11-05-2023

Murdu N.B. Fernando, PC J.

The Petitioner a British national, filed this fundamental rights application dated 27th December, 2022 and moved this Court for leave to proceed inter-alia and specifically prayed to quash the decision made by the 2nd Respondent, the Controller General of Immigration on 10th August 2022 (X 4), to cancel the visa issued to the Petitioner and advising the Petitioner to leave this country on or before 15th August, 2022 and further moved for interim relief preventing the Petitioner being deported from Sri Lanka, until the hearing of this application.

The Petitioner also moved for relief against the 1st Respondent a Judge of this Court, for a declaration that the 1st Respondent has violated the fundamental rights of the Petitioner enshrined in Articles 10, 11, 12 and 13 of the Constitution. The Petitioner further pleaded for compensation to be paid to the Petitioner in a sum Rs. 10 million by the 1st and the 2nd Respondents in their personal capacity.

When this matter was taken up for support before us, the Deputy Solicitor General appearing for the 2nd and 3rd Respondents moved that this application be dismissed in limine as it is misconceived and cannot be maintained before this Court, for the following reasons;

- the application does not fall within the ambit of executive or administrative action;
- the petitioner has suppressed material facts and misrepresented facts to court;
- there is no proper affidavit before court; and
- application is vexatious and designed to embarrass court.

We heard the submissions of the learned Deputy Solicitor General and of the learned counsel for the Petitioner in response. We now proceed to consider the said preliminary objections raised before us.

To look at this matter in its correct perspective, it is best to begin by alluding to certain litigation (detailed below) that transpired in the submissions made before Court wherein the Petitioner has invoked the jurisdiction of this Court previously, against the 2nd Respondent regarding the core issue, i.e., the cancellation of the visa issued to the Petitioner (X 4) by the Controller General of Immigration, the 2nd Respondent.

The said litigation is as follows: -

CA/WRIT/299/2022 - Case (1)

- By this writ application filed before the Court of Appeal, the Petitioner challenged the decision of the 2nd Respondent regarding the cancellation of the visa granted to the Petitioner dated 25-02-2022 valid till 08-03-2023.
- The Court of Appeal refused to issue notice and the application was dismissed on 16-08-2022.

SC/SPL/LA/ 218/2022 - Case (2)

- The Petitioner filed a special leave to appeal application against the aforesaid Court of Appeal Order.
- This application was dismissed by this Court for non-compliance of the Supreme Court Rules on 02-09-2022.

SC/SPL/LA/ 246/2022 - Case (3)

- The Petitioner filed a fresh special leave to appeal application dated 08-09-2022 against the very same Court of Appeal Order.
- This matter was taken up before this Court on 08-12-2022 and re-fixed for 07-06-2023 for support for granting of special leave to appeal and is presently pending before this Court.

SC/FR/ 299/2022 - Case (4)

- The Petitioner filed a fundamental rights application dated 05-09-2022 against the 2nd Respondent Controller General of Immigration et al for violation of the fundamental rights guaranteed under Article 12(1), 13(1) and 13(2) of the Constitution. The Petitioner also sought an interim order not to arrest, detain or deport the Petitioner until the fundamental rights application was concluded.
- This Court was not inclined to grant leave to proceed and on 14-09-2022 the application was dismissed, subject to costs fixed at Rs. 100,000/=

SC/FR/399/2022 - Case (5)

- The Petitioner filed the instant fundamental rights application wherein the relief sought is specifically against the 1st and 2nd Respondents as referred to earlier. No relief is sought against the 3rd Respondent, the Hon. Attorney General.

From the foregoing it is clearly seen that the core issue i.e., the matter pertaining to cancellation of the medical visa granted to the Petitioner is still pending before this Court and is now scheduled for granting of special leave on 07-06-2023.

It is pertinent to observe that in the instant fundamental rights application, though the Petitioner is seeking to quash the decision made by the Controller General of Immigration X 4, no violation of a fundamental right is alleged against the 2nd Respondent.

Hence, by this instant fundamental rights application, the Petitioner is seeking from this Court, a declaration that the Petitioner's fundamental rights enshrined in Article 10, 11 ,12 and 13 of the Constitution have been violated specifically by the 1st Respondent, a Judge of this Court.

The case presented by the Petitioner is that the alleged infringement or the violation took place when the 1st Respondent on 08-12-2022 made order in SC/SPLA/246/2022 (the 3rd case referred to above) to re-fix the said special leave application for a further date. The said order was annexed to the petition marked as ''X 17".

It reads as follows: -

Kumudini Wickramasinghe, J.

A.L Shiran Gooneratne, J."

"Mr. Nagananda Kodituwakku informs Court that the Petitioner does not want him to support this application before Justice Priyantha Jayawardena, PC as His Lordship has delivered a Judgement in this matter on a previous occasion.

However, Mr. Kodituwakku does not produce any written document from the Petitioner.

He submits that he has received a text message from the Petitioner through her boyfriend's telephone, i.e., 0771897562.

As there is no written instructions from the Petitioner, the Court does not accept the alleged text message.

In view of the submissions made by Mr. Kodituwakku, the Petitioner is directed to appear in Court in person on the next date.

If the Petitioner does not appear in Court in person, an appropriate order will be made in this matter.

Since, SC.CHC.APPEAL NO 11/2006 is in progress this application cannot be taken up for support today.

In view of the above, application is re-fixed for support.

Of consent, support this application on 07.06.2023.

Registrar is directed not to entertain any motions in respect of this application.

This application should not be called tomorrow or any other dates prior to 07.06.2023."

Thus, it is apparent that the pivotal matter in this fundamental rights application revolves around the afore said direction made by this Court in SC/SPL/LA 246/2022 on 08-12-2022.

At the outset, it is observed that the said direction is an 'Order of Court' made by a bench of three judges of this Court and not by a single judge, i.e., the 1st Respondent sitting alone or in chambers. Hence, the rationale of the petitioner bringing only the 1st Respondent as a party to the instant application is a threshold matter that begs an answer. No explanation or reason whatsoever, had been given by the Petitioner in the petition or subsequently tendered to Court by way of a motion or even relied upon by the learned counsel in the submissions made on behalf of the Petitioner.

Thus, the Petitioner in my view has failed to pass the threshold or give one good reason for singling out one judge of a bench of three to allege wrongful conduct and has failed to justify or rational the grounds for invocation of the jurisdiction of this Court, only against a single judge.

Having referred to the '*Order of Court' X 17, let me now advert to the objections raised by the learned Deputy Solicitor General for the State.

Firstly,

The maintainability of this case since the instant application does not come within the ambit of 'executive or administrative action'. It was strenuously argued by the State that the impugned Order (X 17), is a 'judicial act' correctly made by a division of this Court.

It would be opportune at this juncture to refer to the submissions of the learned counsel for the Petitioner, i.e., the aforesaid X 17 Order, is an 'executive or administrative act' and it does falls within the scope of Article 126 of the Constitution and not a 'judicial act' as contended by the State. The counsel repeatedly emphasized that it 'tantamount to pure abuse of office for improper purposes by the 1st Respondent', and the direction to the Registrar of the Court is 'immoral' and 'not expected from a judge in the Supreme Court'. (vide. paragraphs 20 and 22 of the petition) This Court however observes that the reference in paragraph 22 of the petition to an order dated 28-11-2022 appears to be an obvious error since the record does not bear out such a date. Nevertheless, the allegation of the Petitioner against the 1st Respondent does not appear to be diminished by such error.

In order to buttress its argument, the learned Deputy Solicitor General relied upon the judgement of Canonsa Investments Limited v. Earnest Perera and others [1991] 2 Sri LR 214 whereas, the learned counsel for the Petitioner relied upon the judgements of Maharaja v. Trinidad and Tobago (No 2) [1979] A.C. 385 (PC) ; Peter Leo Fernando v. AG [1985] 2 Sri LR 341, Joseph Perera v. AG and two others [1992] 1 Sri LR 191 and Weerawansa v. AG and others [2000] 1 Sri LR 387 to present a case that the actions of the 1st Respondent falls within the ambit of Article 126 of the Constitution.

The question of what constitutes an 'executive or administrative action' in the context of Article 17 and 126 of the Constitution have been exhaustively dealt by this Court in a string of cases from the time the fundamental rights applications entered the judicial arena and especially so in respect of orders made by Magistrates, regarding remand orders and issue of search warrants, i.e., personal liberty matters. In this judgement, I do not wish to repeat or restate the voluminous views and expressions of this Court made in reference to 'executive or administrative action', suffice is to refer to the oft-quoted case Cannosa Investments Ltd. v. Earnest Perera (supra), wherein H.A.G. de Silva, J., having analyzed a long line of judgements observed as follows;

> "[....] On a consideration of the above cases, it would appear to be well established that where an action complained of is in consequence of the wrongful exercise of a judicial discretion, even on false material furnished to a judge maliciously, such action will not attract the provisions of Article 126 of the Constitution" (page 219).

In the aforesaid Canonsa case the issuance of a search warrant for the purposes of entering a premises was the matter in issue and no mala fides or impropriety whatsoever was imputed to the Magistrate and this Court categorically held, even in an instance of wrongful excise of judicial discretion, resorting to the provisions of Article 126 of the Constitution for infringement or imminent infringement of a fundamental right declared and recognized by chapter III of the Constitution will not arise.

In the matter before us, the impugned X 17 Order has been made by a 'bench of three judges' of the Supreme Court in pursuance of the judicial process. Furthermore, it is observed that such direction to re-schedule the matter was made by the Court, upon the application of the Petitioner, as the Petitioner was not willing to present its case before the particular bench. In our view the impugned Order X17 is a 'judicial act' performed by a bench of this Court. It is not in the nature of 'executive or administrative action'. It is an act done in the exercise of judicial discretion and will not attract the provisions of Article 17 and 126 of the Constitution. Thus, we see merit in the submissions made by the State, that the impugned Order X 17 does not constitute an 'executive or administrative action' within the meaning of Article 126 of our Constitution and it will not give rise to an infringement of a fundamental right of the Petitioner enshrined and guaranteed by our Constitution, as alleged to by the Petitioner before us.

The learned counsel for the Petitioner on the other hand quoted and relied upon the judgements of Maharaja v. Trinidad and Tobago; Peter Leo Fernando ; Joseph Perera and Weerawansa referred to earlier, wherein the order of the Magistrate was the matter impugned to present and establish a case of a violation of a fundamental right in relation to personal liberty and to claim compensation. However, the learned Counsel failed to draw a parallel with the instant case and more so, failed to place any material before Court to justify a specific 'abuse of office for improper purposes' by the 1st Respondent as alleged to in the petition filed before this Court. Neither did the learned Counsel prove 'immoral conduct' as alleged or establish 'wrongful exercise of judicial discretion' of the 1st Respondent acting in the capacity of the presiding judge of a bench of three judges of the Supreme Court.

The cases relied upon by the counsel for the Petitioner are distinct and distinguishable from the instant application before this Court and we see no reason to term the Order X 17, as an 'executive or administrative act' as contented by the Petitioner.

Coming back to the Order 'X17' made by this Court on 08-12-2022, there is no ambiguity or doubt that it was a direction by Court to re-schedule a special leave to appeal matter upon the application of the counsel for the Petitioner on the ground that the Petitioner does not wish the matter to be supported before the presiding judge i.e., the 1st Respondent, who had delivered Order regarding the core issue in an earlier occasion. However, the Petitioner was not present before Court and there was no written document or instructions to such effect from the Petitioner to the Counsel per se before Court and it appears, for the said reason and the said reason only the special leave to application had to be re-scheduled.

In any event, it is not necessary to examine the merits of this case at this stage. We are only considering the preliminary objection raised by the counsel for the State, that the Order X17 is a 'judicial act' and does not come within the realms of an 'executive or administrative action' to invoke the jurisdiction of this Court in terms of Article 126 of the Constitution coupled with the further submission that the course of action initiated by the Petitioner is vexatious and is designed to embarrass this Court, i.e., the Supreme Court.

In terms of Article 118 of the Constitution, the Supreme Court is the highest and the final Superior Court of record in the Republic and subject to the provisions of the Constitution exercise the matters referred to therein and especially, the exclusive jurisdiction for the protection of fundamental rights.

Hence, the submission of the State, that the matter in issue is vexatious litigation and filed to embarrass this Court must be considered in the said light. This is especially so since the allegation of the Petitioner is that the Order X17, 'tantamount to pure abuse of office for improper purposes by the 1st Respondent', and the direction in X17 to the Registrar of the Court is 'immoral' and 'not expected from a judge in the Supreme Court'. This Court has already held that the impugned Order X 17 is a 'judicial act' performed by a bench of three judges in its judicial discretion and does not amount to 'executive or administrative action'. As emphasized earlier, the Supreme Court is the highest and final Superior Court in Sri Lanka and the Order X17 is made by a bench of three judges of the Supreme Court in the administration of justice.

However, only the 1st Respondent has been made a party to the instant application. No justifiable reason is given in singling out the 1st Respondent except to plead that in making the X17 Order the 1st Respondent completely ignored the request of the counsel for the Petitioner to refer the matter to the Hon. Chief Justice, to appoint an impartial bench to hear the case of the Petitioner 'a young foreign girl forced to live in hiding', as specifically stated in the petition and that the 1st Respondent, i.e., a judge of this Court, patently abused public office as a judge of the Supreme Court to deny Petitioner's legitimate right to justice and alleged deliberate acts of violation of the Petitioner's fundamental rights which the Petitioner claims is guaranteed under Article 10, 11, 12 and 13 of the Constitution. Furthermore, the Petitioner also prayed for compensation in a sum of Rs 10 million, to be paid to the Petitioner by the 1st Respondent in his personal capacity. Thus, the submission of the State, that this application is vexatious and has been designed to embarrass the Supreme Court has merit, given the fact that the Order X17 is a 'judicial act' done within jurisdiction, in its discretion, in the judicial process of administering justice.

I would pause for a moment to reflect on the observations made by Lord Denning MR in the Court of Appeal in England, in the celebrated case, Sirrors v. Moore [1974] 3 A11 ER 776 at page 785;

> "Every judge of the courts of this land -from the highest to the lowest- should be protected to the same degree, and liable to the same degree if the reason underlying this immunity is to ensure 'that they may be free in thought and independent in judgement' it applies to every judge whatever his rank. Each should be protected from liability to damages when he is acting judicially. Each should be able to do his work in complete independence and free from fear. He should not have to turn the pages of his books with trembling fingers, asking himself: 'if I do this, shall I be liable in damages?' So long as he does his work in the honest belief that it is within his jurisdiction, then he is not liable to an action. He may be mistaken in fact. He may be ignorant in law. What he does may be outside his jurisdiction - in fact or in law – but so long as he honestly believes it to be within his jurisdiction, he should not be liable [..] Nothing will make him liable except it be shown that he was not acting judicially, knowing that he had no jurisdiction to do it."

Under the old common law, as we are aware, the immunity regarding judges of the superior courts was absolute and universal. However, regarding judges of the inferior courts (a synonym for the minor judiciary) the immunity was only while the said judges acted within jurisdiction. Nevertheless, in the aforesaid English case it was held that in England, this dichotomy has now been abolished and under the changed judicial system, all judges are immune and protected from liability to damages when the judge is acting judicially. Hence, Lord Denning MR, after a careful examination of the liability of a judge who acts within and outside of its jurisdiction uttered the famous words 'nothing will make a judge whatever his rank liable, except when it be shown that he was not acting judicially knowing that he had no jurisdiction to do it'.

The afore quoted observations of Lord Denning, MR has been echoed and re-echoed by our courts in the Peter Leo Fernando case and Weerawansa's case referred to earlier.

In the Sirrors case, the English case referred to above, a judge of the crown court dismissed an appeal against a recommendation for deportation and after giving judgment ordered the appellant to be arrested and detained which the judge had no jurisdiction to do. The detainee was later released by habeas corpus. The action brought by the detainee against the judge of the crown court and the police officers who executed the arrest order was dismissed. The court concluded that although the judge had no jurisdiction to detain the said Sirros in custody, since the judge was acting judicially in good faith, albeit mistakenly, no action will lie against him and he was entitled to immunity.

In my view, the above observations of Lord Denning MR are equally applicable to the matter before us. I have no hesitation in repeating the words "nothing will make a judge liable except it be shown that he was not acting judicially knowing that he had no jurisdiction to do it". The reason for such immunity is not because the judge has any privilege to make mistakes or to do wrong but because he should be able to do his duty with complete independence and free from fear. Thus, when a judge is hauled-up before court for every trivial order made, the freedom of suit is given by the law to the judge not so much for the judge's own sake but for the sake of the public and for the advancement of justice.

In the said light, I see merit in the submissions made by the State that the petition is vexatious and brought to embarrass the court.

In the matter before us for determination, not only the 1st Respondent has been singled out and made a party to the instant case, but is also sued for compensation in a sum of Rs One million to be paid in his personal capacity. The above factor in my view, sheds more light to the objection raised by the State, that the instant petition is vexatious and designed to embarrass this court, albeit the Supreme Court- the apex court of the land- the highest and the final court of record in Sri Lanka.

The next objection raised by the counsel for the State pertaining to the maintainability of this application is that there is no proper affidavit before court as required by the Supreme Court Rules.

The learned DSG contended that the hand written note (marked X26) purported to be a letter of authority must be considered upon the background of the Petitioner living in hiding to avoid execution of a 'removal order' and that the Petitioner by this application is attempting to perpetuate an illegality. It was further submitted that illegality and equity do not go hand in hand. In response, the counsel for the Petitioner relied on Rule 44(2) of the Supreme Court Rules and submitted that the Petitioner was living incommunicado and thus cannot appear in person before court or even sign a proxy authorizing a counsel to appear and plead a case before a court of law.

The Petitioner before court is Ms. Kayleigh Frazer a foreign national. The affidavit filed before court supporting the petition is not of Ms. Kayleigh Frazer.

The affidavit filed of record, which refers to many matters of a very personal nature, ranging during a period of 3 years, from December 2019 to December 2022 has been deposed to by one Nagananda Kodituwakku of No.99, Subadrarama Road, Nugegoda. Its observed that he has affirmed to the facts stated in the affidavit, on behalf of the Petitioner, supposedly 'from his personal knowledge and from documents made available' to the said Nagananda Kodituwakku. Similarly, the petition dated 27-12-2022 filed before court has also been signed by the very same Nagananda Kodituwakku, as the Attorney-at-Law for the Petitioner. Admittedly, there is no proxy filed of record by the Petitioner Ms. Frazer. The proxy tendered to court has also been signed by Nagananda Kodituwakku. Whilst the Petitioner has not subscribed to the affidavit, the petition, and the proxy, all three documents have been deposed to and executed by Nagananda Kodituwakku. Incidentally, the learned counsel who is representing the Petitioner before this Court is also Nagananda Kodituwakku, Attorney-at-Law.

We have carefully considered the above facts, in relation to the provisions of Rule 44 of the Supreme Court Rules and specifically the provisions relating to Rule 44(2) and 44(3) of the Supreme Court Rules pertaining to applications under Article 126 of the Constitution and its applicability pertaining to persons who are unable to sign a proxy. We are also mindful of the case law regarding the aforesaid Supreme Court Rule 44.

Further, we have considered the plethora of judgements of this Court pertaining to the validity of an affidavit filed of record and especially the significance of the below mentioned dicta of Sharvananda J., (as he then was) in Kobbekaduwa v. Jayawardena and others [1983] 1 Sri L R 416:

> ''The function of an affidavit is to verify the facts alleged in the petition. The affidavit furnishes prima facie evidence of the facts deposed to in the affidavit. Section 13 of the Oaths and Affirmation Ordinance (Cap17) furnishes the sanction against a false affidavit. In an affidavit person can depose only to facts which he is able of his own knowledge and observation to testify." (emphasis added)

An affidavit of a Petitioner deposed to by his own knowledge and observations, amounts to prima facie evidence and is an important document upon which much reliance is placed in a fundamental rights application. It supports the petition and assist the court in its pursuit in ascertaining the truth. As observed by Mark Fernando, J. in Sooriya Enterprises (International) Limited v. Michael White & Company Limited [2002] 3 Sri L R 371 "the fundamental obligation of a witness or deponent is to tell the truth (section 10), and the purpose of the oath or affirmation is to reinforce that obligation''.

Hence, when an affidavit to support a petition is tendered by a person, who is not the Petitioner and a person who cannot vouch to the veracity of facts and depose to the matters and circumstances from his own personal knowledge and observations, court will take cognizance of such fact in arriving at its decision. Thus, on this view of the matter, we see substance in the objection raised by the State that there is no proper affidavit before court in terms of the Supreme Court Rules.

The final objection raised by the State regarding the instant application is that the Petitioner has suppressed facts and misrepresented material facts to court.

In order to justify the above preliminary objection, the learned DSG drew our attention to the following material which the counsel alleged, the Petitioner suppressed from court and grossly misrepresented to court, viz that the Petitioner was granted a medical visa to travel to Sri Lanka; the Petitioner's visa was cancelled as the visa conditions were violated; and the cancellation took place consequent to holding of an inquiry in terms of the Immigration and Emigration Act No 20 of 1948 as amended.

Further, it was asserted in addition to challenging the said decision (X4) to cancel the visa by way of a writ application (1st ,2nd and 3rd case referred to earlier) and the instant fundamental rights application (5th case referred to earlier), the Petitioner filed another fundamental rights application bearing number SC/FR/299/2022 against the 2nd Respondent and others (4th case referred to earlier) which fact the Petitioner has completely suppressed from this Court. A copy of the said petition and the Order of this Court was filed of record by the counsel for the State. Upon perusal of the said order, it is patently and manifestly clear that the said fundamental rights application filed by the very same Petitioner, has been dismissed by this Court in limine, on 14-09-2022, with costs fixed at Rs 100,000/=. However, the Petitioner has failed to disclose or refer to such fact in the instant application, i.e., the 5th case referred to above, filed on 27th December 2022.

We consider the failure to refer to the said case SC/FR/299/2022, in the instant application SC/FR/399/2022 as a relevant and a material factor, that should be foremost in our minds, when deciding on this important objection of misrepresentation and suppression of material facts.

Furthermore, the Petitioner has categorically pleaded in the petition and deposed to in the supporting affidavit that the Petitioner has not invoked the fundamental rights jurisdiction of this Court previously against the 1st Respondent, but has failed to assert that the Petitioner had in fact invoked the fundamental rights jurisdiction in respect of the core issue earlier and also moved for interim relief against the decision of the 2nd Respondent contained in X4. Thus, in the said context the statement pertaining to invocation of jurisdiction in the petition and the supporting affidavit too, is palpably wrong and erroneous.

The learned DSG contended that the failure to refer to the previous fundamental rights application filed by the Petitioner i.e., SC/FR/299/2022 in the instant case was a serious suppression of fact and relied on the case of Jayasinghe v. The National Institute of Fisheries and Nautical Engineering and others reported in [2002] 1 Sri L R 277 to substantiate its contention.

The learned counsel for the Petitioner did not respond to this allegation of suppression of material pertaining to SC/FR/299/2022 in his submissions before us. However, he was gracious enough to accept that the Petitioner was in Sri Lanka not on a resident visa as pleaded in the petition but on a medical visa which is clearly depicted in the visa document X5 filed together with the petition. Hence, we do not wish to examine the objection pertaining to suppression regarding the category of visa any further.

Nevertheless, in our view the suppression pertaining to the fundamental rights application SC/FR/299/2022 filed in September 2022 is grave and serious. Time and time again our courts have held that a litigant should come to court with clean hands and without any blemishes. A litigant should be honest to court and disclose all relevant material to court for the court to come to a finding after weighing and analyzing all material and evidence before court. Moreover, a Petitioner owes a bounden duty to court to be forthright. This is more so, in applications filed under Article 17 and 126 of the Constitution where the exclusive jurisdiction is with the Supreme Court and findings are made on affidavit evidence placed before court.

In Jayasinghe's case referred to above, the Supreme Court has emphatically held that "failure to disclose a fact that a Petitioner very well knew is a serious suppression of a material fact which indicate that the Petitioner has manifestly failed to carry out an imperative legal duty and obligation to court".

Similarly, in the case of Blanka Diamonds (Pvt) Ltd. v. Wilfred Van Els and two others [1997]1 Sri L R 360 a judgement of the Court of Appeal, it was held "that the conduct of the Petitioner in withholding material facts from court shows a lack of uberrima fides on the part of the Petitioner and that when a litigant makes an application to court seeking relief he enters into a contractual obligation to disclose all material facts correctly and frankly to court and that a party who misleads court and misrepresent facts to court or utters false hoods in court will not be able to obtain relief from the court".

Hence, a Petitioner has an imperative legal duty and obligation to court and comes to a contractual agreement with court to disclose all material facts correctly and accurately to court. This in my view, is a sacred duty, that should be preserved and protected at all costs. In fact, in "The Supreme Court (Conduct and Etiquette for Attorneys-at-Law) Rules", under the heading 'Relationship with Court' it is stated as follows:

> "51. An Attorney-at-Law shall not mislead or deceive or permit his client to mislead or deceive in any way the Court or Tribunal before which he appears."

Thus, an Attorney-at-Law has a bounden duty not to permit his client to mislead or deceive court, in any manner whatsoever, either by suppression, misleading or misrepresenting facts to court to gain an advantage, which in my view is detrimental to the interests of justice.

In the aforesaid circumstances, we see merit in the submissions of the State regarding the afore said objection, that the Petitioner has suppressed material facts and misrepresented facts to this court.

Having considered the totality of the preliminary objections raised before us, and examined and assessed the material placed before court and the submissions of the learned counsel, we are convinced that there is much merit in the preliminary objections raised on behalf of the State*, namely,*

- the application does not fall within the ambit of executive or administrative action;
- this application is vexatious and designed to embarrass the court;
- there is no proper affidavit before court; and
- the Petitioner has suppressed material facts and misrepresented facts to court.

Hence, we uphold all four preliminary objections raised on behalf of the 2nd and 3rd Respondents and reject this application in limine and dismiss the instant case with costs fixed at Rs.500,000/= to be paid by the Petitioner forthwith.

Prior to parting with this Order, I wish to refer to another factor that shocked the conscious of court. Consequent to the conclusion of the hearing of this matter before us, the Attorney-at- Law and counsel for the Petitioner by a communique addressed to the Hon. Chief Justice dated 08-03-2023, together with many annextures has brought certain matters to the attention of the Hon. Chief Justice for necessary action. This communique was passed to us for information. However, in arriving at the aforesaid finding on the suppression of material facts, i.e., the objection lastly dealt by us, we have not examined or considered the matters stated in the communique forwarded as we did not wish to cloud or prejudice our minds by extraneous factors.

Nevertheless, in the interest of justice we wish to place on record the following factors elicited from the documents annexed to the said communique;

(i) the assertion made by the Attorney- at Law for the Petitioner in a motion dated 23-01-2023 filed in the instant case, that the Petitioner in a hand written communication dated 22-01-2023 has confirmed that SC/FR/299/2022 had not been initiated on her instructions and the affidavit annexed thereto is a forged document with the signature of the Petitioner interpolated by fraudulent means; and

(ii) the Petitioner has never seen the affidavit dated 04-10-2022 tendered to court in SC/SPL/LA/246/2022 wherein it is categorically stated: -

> "4. At the same time another lawyer […] advised me that I was entitled to initiate fundamental rights violation petition in the Supreme Court […] and he agreed to represent me.
> 5. I state that the said fundamental rights violation petition (SC/FR/299/2022) was taken up on 14th September 2022 and it was dismissed […]"

Having said that, we wish to re-iterate that in coming to the finding regarding the preliminary objections raised by the State, in respect of the maintainability of this application, we have not been swerved by the aforesaid assertions referred to in the communique forwarded to His Lordship the Chief Justice.

We have considered the preliminary objections raised by the State, referred to in this Order within the four corners and the parameters of the law and for reasons more fully adumbrated in this Order, we uphold all four preliminary objections and dismiss this application with costs fixed at Rs. 500,000/=

The Petitioner, an employee of George Steuart (Pvt) Limited, complained that his Fundamental Rights enshrined in Articles 11, 12(1), 13(1) and 13(2) of the Constitution were violated by the Respondents. The 6th Respondent is a private party, and the Petitioner alleges that the 6th Respondent lodged a false complaint against him with the Criminal Investigation Department, which the Petitioner claims, led to his arrest. On 01.02.2019, this Court granted Leave to Proceed for the alleged violations of the Fundamental Rights of the Petitioner under Articles 12(1), 13(1) and 13(2) of the Constitution.

The Factual Background

According to the Petitioner, he had been acquainted with a certain Rehana Marian Sebastian [Hereinafter referred to as Rehana] for a long time. Sometime later, Rehana introduced the Petitioner to her sister, presently, his wife, Stephanie Sylvia Sebastian. The Petitioner's relationship with the 6th Respondent resulted from his acquaintance with Rehana. The Petitioner states that the 6th Respondent and Rehana had entered into a loan agreement for a sum of Rupee Fifty-Three Million whereby Rehana had agreed to pay back the principal with an interest of 12% per annum, to the 6th Respondent. The Petitioner's position was that he was totally oblivious to this transaction between the 6th Respondent and Rehana, at the time the incident central to the present application took place. At some point Rehana had approached the Petitioner, stating that she was receiving money from a friend, namely the 6th Respondent and had requested the Petitioner to facilitate the said transaction by permitting that money to be credited to his bank account and provided a letter (Marked P 13) which states that she was to receive money from a friend as a loan on interest and that she does not have a bank account with the Sampath Bank PLC. This request, that is to allow her friend to deposit the said money to the Petitioner's account, appears to have been made purely for their convenience. The Petitioner had agreed because of his close relationship with Rehana and this conduct on the part of the Petitioner does not appear to be unusual given the fact that Rehana was his sister -in- law to be.

Sometime after this request was made, a sum of Rupees seven million Rupees 7,000, 000 /- was deposited to the Petitioner's account in several tranches, which the Petitioner had withdrawn and handed over to Rehana. Rehana's position was that she repaid the amount borrowed, with interest, however, the 6th Respondent had threatened her, which had prompted her to write to the Officer-in-Charge of Keselwatte Police on 02.05.2018. Her sister, Stephanie also had made statements at the Narahenpita Police and Keselwatte Police on 04.05.2018 and 18.05.2018 respectively, stating that her sister Rehana had repaid all the monies borrowed and had submitted documents and bank slips to the police as proof of the repayment.

On 07.05.2018 the 6th Respondent had visited the Petitioner's house in his absence, and had intimated to his father that he had deposited the money to the bank account of the Petitioner and that he will be compelled to complain to the Criminal Investigation Department if the Petitioner fails to repay him. The 6th Respondent also provided his mobile phone number to the father with instructions for the Petitioner to phone the 6th Respondent. The Petitioner as requested had phoned him on the very day itself. The Petitioner's position was that, as he felt the conduct of the 6th Respondent was dubious, therefore, he took precautions to record the conversation he had with the 6th Respondent.

The Petitioner had, along with the petition, filed a transcript of this conversation. Throughout the conversation the Petitioner denies knowledge of any transaction between the 6th Respondent and Rehana. Moreover, the 6th Respondent provided several unrelated and convoluted reasons for depositing the money to the Petitioner's account and had threatened to have a complaint lodged at the FCID. Importantly, throughout the conversation, there is no mention whatsoever by the 6th Respondent regarding any agreement or an arrangement between the Petitioner, Rehana and himself to import two BMW vehicles for his use. The significance of this omission will be apparent later. The very next day i.e., 08.05. 2018, the Petitioner had lodged a complaint against the 6th Respondent at the Narahenpita police, alleging criminal intimidation.

On 01.06.2018 the 6th Respondent had lodged a complaint with the Criminal Investigation Department [Hereinafter the CID] complaining that the Petitioner and Rehana defrauded the 6th Respondent of seven million rupees [Rs.7.0 million] by agreeing to import two BMW vehicles on behalf the 6th Respondent. He further claimed that the Petitioner and Rehana are avoiding the 6th Respondent. No documentation is available before this Court as proof of the existence of this purported Agreement or any communications between the Petitioner and the 6th Respondent to indicate such an arrangement or agreement was negotiated between the parties. The only documents produced by the 6th Respondent are the bank slips indicating that seven million Rupees were deposited into the account of the Petitioner in several transactions. The Petitioner, however, has not denied the receipt of the money but has explained that the money was received to facilitate the transaction between the 6th Respondent and Rehana, which was referred to earlier. It is also important to note that, as referred to earlier, nowhere during the phone conversation on 07.05.2018, between the 6th Respondent and the Petitioner, the 6th Respondent refers to any agreement to import vehicles, although several unrelated accusations had been made by the 6th Respondent against the Petitioner. Thus, the basis of the complaint to the CID, which was made three weeks after the telephone conversation, appears to be an entirely new accusation made by the 6th Respondent.

The objections filed by the Respondent CID officers, do not give details of the investigations and/or steps taken by the CID in pursuance of the 6th Respondent's complaint. What is more shocking is that, after the complaint was made against the Petitioner, no attempt appears to have been made by the CID officers to notice the Petitioner of the complaint made against him nor had independently verified the truth of the allegation. Instead, the 2nd Respondent claims that the Petitioner was absconding. In the B Report dated 19.09.2018 (which is more than four and a half months after the complaint) filed by the CID officers marked "2R 1" it is stated that there is reliable information that the Petitioner was attempting to travel abroad to evade justice and on that basis a travel ban under Section 51C (1) of the Immigrants and Emigrants Act (as amended) was sought from the Learned Magistrate of the Wattala and it was issued on the same day. No document was produced as proof of any notice being issued to the Petitioner. The Petitioner on the other hand had produced taxi bills as evidence of his travels he made from his residential area as proof that he was very much in the area where he lived and had made no attempt to abscond.

Oblivious to all these events, the Petitioner had planned to travel overseas to China and Malaysia on holiday in November 2018, which was five months after the initial complaint. On arrival at the Bandaranaike International Airport on 15.11.2018 to board a flight scheduled to depart, he was informed at the Immigration Counter that he was charged with an offence, and a travel ban is in operation. The Petitioner states that this was the first time he was informed of any allegation or charge against him by the authorities. According to the Petitioner, he was arrested by a CID officer. The arrest notes marked "2R 3" indicate that the Petitioner was arrested at 23:20 hours. According to the Petitioner, despite making several inquiries to ascertain information about the offence he had allegedly committed, the only information divulged was that it was related to the financial fraud of seven million Rupees.

Some officers of the CID had arrived from Colombo and had taken over the custody of the Petitioner. Once in Colombo, he was informed that he had misappropriated and/or defrauded money at the behest of one Rehana. The Petitioner was further informed that he was arrested on a complaint made by one Maheepala Saveen Chathuranga Gunaratne, (the 6th Respondent), for defrauding or misappropriating seven million Rupees. The said complaint alleges that the Petitioner committed criminal breach of trust by obtaining 7 million rupees on a promise to import two BMW vehicles on behalf of the 6th Respondent and that the Petitioner was introduced to the 6th Respondent by Rehana.

Subsequently, the Petitioner was produced by the 2nd Respondent before the Learned Acting Magistrate of the Wattala on 16.11.2018 who refused to enlarge him on bail, as the CID officers informed the court, that further time is required to conduct investigations. The Petitioner had been remanded until 19.11.2018 and on 19.11.2018, it was submitted that a statement had not yet been taken from the Petitioner and the Petitioner was further remanded till 23.11.2018, on which date Bail was finally granted, after having been incarcerated for 8 days.

Petitioner filed the present petition on 13.12.2018 seeking relief and during the pendency of this matter, the Hon. Attorney General on 23.07.2019 had forwarded an indictment in terms of Section 400 of the Penal Code against the Petitioner.

I shall now consider the alleged violations of the Fundamental rights of the Petitioner.

Alleged Violation of Article 13(2) of the Constitution

Article 13 (2) provides that; "Every person held in custody, detained or otherwise deprived of personal liberty shall be brought before the judge of the nearest competent court according to procedure established by law, and shall not be further held in custody, detained or deprived of personal liberty except upon and in terms of the order of such judge made in accordance with procedure established by law" As held in Farook v Raymond and Others [1996] 1 Sri L.R 217,

"the object of Article 13(2) of the Constitution is to afford a person who has been deprived of his personal liberty by executive action, to have the benefit of placing his case before a neutral person - a judge - so that a judicial mind may be applied to the circumstances and an impartial determination made in accordance with the applicable law. The provision is designed to eliminate arbitrariness in depriving a person of his liberty, and this extends to the exclusion of arbitrariness on the part of a judge who orders that a person brought before him be further held in custody, detained or deprived of personal liberty. If in depriving a person of his liberty a judge does not act according to procedure established by law, there is a contravention of the guarantee enshrined in Article 13(2) of the Constitution."

The procedure established by law in which a detainee is to be produced before a judge is contained in Section 36 and 37 of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act No. 15 of 1979. Sections 36 and 37 reads as follows;

"A peace officer making an arrest without warrant shall without unnecessary delay and subject to the provisions herein contained as to bail take or send the person arrested before a Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case"

"Any peace officer shall not detain in custody or otherwise confine a person arrested without a warrant for a longer period than under all the circumstances of the case is reasonable, and such period shall not exceed twenty-four hours exclusive of the time necessary for the journey from the place of arrest to the Magistrate"

It is apparent from the above Sections that a detainee should be produced within 24 hours before a Magistrate having jurisdiction in the case. Petitioner states that there was a deliberate attempt to delay in producing the Petitioner before a Magistrate. The arrest notes marked "2R 3" indicate that the Petitioner was arrested on 15.11.2018 at approximately 23:30 at the Airport. The Petitioner disputes the time of the arrest as 22:30, however, given that the Petitioner's flight was scheduled to depart at 00:25 hours on 16.11.2018, it is highly likely that the arrest took place between 22:30 and 23:30.

According to the Petitioner, he was produced before the Magistrate on 16.11.2018 approximately at 23:30 hours. If there was a deliberate attempt to delay the production of the Petitioner, it is highly likely that he would have been produced much later. The Petitioner was arrested on the 15.11.2018 and was produced before the Magistrate on 16.11.2018, according to the B Report marked "2R 4". Therefore, it appears that he had been produced before the magistrate within 24 hours. Hence, I hold that the Petitioner has failed to establish that the Respondents had violated his fundamental rights enshrined in Article 13(2).

Alleged Violation of Article 13(1) of the Constitution

The personal liberties of a person are protected from arbitrary arrest by Article 13(1) of the Constitution. Article 13(1) provides that "No person shall be arrested except according to procedure established by law. Any person arrested shall be informed of the reason for his arrest." The procedure established by law for arresting a person without a Warrant is set out in Chapter IV B (Sections 32-43) of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

According to the 2nd Respondent's affidavit, it is stated [paragraph 6(c)] that "the Petitioner could not be found in his usual place of abode when the police visited his residence in order to record a statement". Thereafter, the facts were reported to the Learned Magistrate in the Magistrate Court of Wattala by way of a B report dated 19.09.2018 marked "2R 1" and a travel ban was sought and was issued by the Learned Magistrate on the same day. Subsequently, the Petitioner was arrested on 15.11.2018 at the Airport. Therefore, it is apparent that the Petitioner was arrested without a warrant.

The Respondents justify the arrest by resorting to Section 32(1)(b) of the Code of Criminal Procedure Code. Section 32(1)(b) provides that;

"(1) Any peace officer may without an order from a Magistrate and without a warrant, arrest any person-

(a) who in his presence commits any breach of the peace;

(b) who has been concerned in any cognizable offence or against whom a reasonable complaint has been made or credible information has been received or a reasonable suspicion exists of his having been so concerned;"

Even to make an arrest under Section 32(1)(b) of the Code of Criminal Procedure, reasonable suspicion must exist of the suspect having been concerned with a cognizable offence in the mind of the police officer effecting the arrest. The test is objective, and an arrest made purely on subjective grounds or on a general or vague suspicion would be arbitrary. What would amount to a reasonable suspicion? The requirement is limited and is not equated with prima facie proof of the commission of the offence. As stated, however, by His Lordship Justice Amarasinghe in Channa Pieris and Others v. Attorney General and Others [1994] 1 Sri L.R 1 at p. 46

"A reasonable suspicion may be based either upon matters within the officer's knowledge or upon credible information furnished to him, or upon a combination of both sources."

Police officers cannot mechanically make an arrest upon a mere complaint received, without forming the opinion that the allegation is credible. Thus, a police officer is required to make necessary investigations, unless the facts are obvious, to verify whether the complaint is credible or whether the information provided is reliable. An arrest upon a general or vague suspicion would lead to significantly abridging the personal liberties guaranteed to a person by the Constitution. Therefore, an element of prudence is required from police officers before making an arrest to verify the allegation. This requirement, in my view, applies with greater force in 'white collar' crimes. The reason being, it needs to be ascertained whether the impugned transaction is purely a commercial transaction which had gone wrong or whether the suspect had the intent to defraud.

As held in Gamlath v Neville Silva and Others [1991] 2 Sri L.R 267;

"A suspicion is proved to be reasonable if the facts disclose that it was founded on matters within the Police Officer's own knowledge or on statements made by other persons in a way which justify him giving them credit."

Moreover, the principle laid by Lord Devlin in Shaaban Bin Hussien v Chong Fook Kam [1969] 3 All ER 1626 at 1630 is relevant to the instant case. As a general rule, an arrest should not be made until the investigation is complete. Still, the legislature allows police officers to affect an arrest before the completion of the investigation in certain circumstances; this is to avoid the investigation process being hampered and in order to maintain the law and order in the country. But to give the power to arrest on a reasonable suspicion does not mean that it should always be or even ordinarily be exercised. It means that there is executive discretion. In the exercise of such discretion, many factors must be considered. Besides the strength of the case, the possibility of escape, obstruction of the investigation, prevention of further crimes, and the threat of the accused to the public are some of the factors a police officer may consider. Thus, it appears the 'strength of the case' is a critical factor in making an arrest. In the words of Lord Devlin;

"It is indeed desirable as a general rule that an arrest should not be made until the case is complete. But if arrest before that were forbidden, it could seriously hamper the police. To give power to arrest on reasonable suspicion does not mean that it is always or even ordinarily to be exercised. It means that there is an executive discretion. In the exercise of it many factors have to be considered besides the strength of the case. The possibility of escape, the prevention of further crime and the obstruction of police enquiries are examples of those factors with which all judges who have had to grant or refuse bail are familiar."

When one considers the material that was available at the point of arrest, it cannot be said that the Respondents had a reasonable suspicion that the Petitioner committed an offence. The Respondents purely acted on the complaint made by the 6th Respondent, which is evident by the B report dated 19.09.2018 marked "2R 1". There is no material before this court indicating that the CID officers had conducted any investigations to verify the allegation and only had bank receipts provided by the 6th Respondent as evidence, which merely indicated that money was deposited into the Petitioner's account. It is clear that the officers of the CID had acted on the complaint without making any attempt to verify the complaint independently or attempting to verify whether the complaint of the 6th Respondent was creditworthy.

At best, the CID officers could have suspected a commercial transaction existed between the 6th Respondent and the Petitioner to import vehicles, and there is nothing illegal in engaging in a commercial transaction of that nature. On an objective assessment, investigating officers would require additional credible information to form the opinion of a reasonable suspicion of a commission of an offence. Evidence nor any material to form such a suspicion was placed before this Court.

Moreover, the Court cannot accept that the CID officers had reasons to believe that the Petitioner was evading justice. The Petitioner was in the country for a period of more than five months from the initial date of the complaint, and even after a travel ban was sought, the Petitioner was in the country for nearly two months. It was pointed out that, if the Petitioner wished to evade justice, he could easily have made an attempt to travel to a country with a visa-on-arrival concession was available, instead of making arrangements to travel to China and Malaysia, two countries that require prior visa approval. Every person is entitled to enjoy the freedom of movement within and without the country, a fundamental right guaranteed under Article 14(1) (h) of the Constitution, and as delineated by Article 4(d) of the Constitution, it is the duty of the State and its agencies, not to act in a manner to abridge, restrict or deny such right. This Constitutional duty cast must be respected and adhered to by all persons concerned without an exception. In this backdrop, when seeking a judicial order preventing a person travelling overseas, such an order can only be sought in situations where the officer concerned is possessed of credible information that the suspect is likely to flee the country and not otherwise.

Necessity to Inform the Reason for the Arrest of the Petitioner

Article 13(1) requires a person to be informed of the reason for the arrest. Justice Sharvananda states the purpose of this requirement in his treatise, "Fundamental Rights in Sri Lanka" on page 141 as;

"Meant to afford the earliest opportunity to him to remove any mistake, misapprehension or misunderstanding in the mind of the arresting authority and to disabuse the latter's mind of the suspicion which triggered the arrest and also for the arrested person to know exactly what allegation or accusation against him is so that he can consult his attorney-at-law and be advised by him."

Further, Section 23(1) of the Code of Criminal Procedure requires that the person making an arrest to inform the person to be arrested of the nature of the charge or allegation upon which he is arrested. This requirement aims to ensure that the person arrested is afforded the opportunity to challenge the arrest at the earliest opportunity. A particular form is not required for the notification, nor does it require a complete detailed description of the charges against the suspect. The requirement is for the arrested person to be told in simple, non-technical language that he can understand, the essential legal and factual grounds for his arrest at the earliest reasonable opportunity. Justice Sharvananda in his treatise (supra), on page 141 in this regard, went on to state that;

"All the material facts and particulars which form the foundation of the arrest must be furnished to the arrested person because they are the reasons or grounds for his arrest to enable the arrested person to understand why he has been arrested."

"Further, it is important that the communication of the reasons should be in a language that the arrestee understands. The adequacy of the reasons for arrest require that they are: (a) such as to prima facie warrant arrest and (b) based upon information which is considered reliable"

The Petitioner contends that at the time of the arrest, the CID officer that arrested him at the Airport merely informed him that he was arrested on a charge that was related to the financial fraud of seven million rupees. Meanwhile, the arrest note marked "2R 3" produced by the 2nd Respondent states that;

"මෙම ගුවන් මගියාට අපරාධ පරීක්ෂණ දෙපාතර්මේන්තුවේ විශේෂ විමශර්ණ අංශ 11 මගින් සිදු කරනු ලබන විමශර්නයකට අදලව වත්තල ම/ඵ බී 1505/18 අදලව ලබාගෙන ඇති ගුවන් තහනම් නියොග ප්‍රකාරව කරුණු පහද දී පැය 2320ට නො 84/90, නාවල පාර, නාරාහෙන්පිට ලිපිනයේ පදිංචි ගණේෂන් රොයි සම්සන් යන අය අත්ඩංගුවට ගන්නා ලදි."

It is pertinent to observe that even the arrest note produced does not state the substance of the allegation or charge against the Petitioner and only provides a vague statement that the reasons for the arrest were given. Informing that the Petitioner was arrested on a complaint related to the financial fraud of seven million Rupees is not sufficient for the Petitioner to understand the legal and factual grounds for his arrest. The requirement is to ensure that the arrested person is aware of the reasons relied on to deprive his liberty. In the present case, the information divulged was insufficient in our view for the Petitioner to appreciate the allegation or accusation against him.

On the other hand, even if the CID officer that arrested the Petitioner stated the allegation or charge against him, the allegation must be one that is be based on information well founded. Section 32(1)(b) of the Code of Criminal Procedure provides for the arrest of a person concerned with a cognizable offence without a warrant if there is a reasonable complaint, credible information or reasonable suspicion against such person. Therefore, a person cannot be arrested on a vague allegation. It must be based on information well-founded, and only if the allegation or charge against a person is well-founded can the accused be produced before a Magistrate as per Section 114 of the Code of Criminal Procedure Code. Otherwise, the accused has to be released on an execution of a bond.

Parroting a vague allegation to the Petitioner cannot excuse the Respondent's liability under Article 13(1) of the Constitution. If the allegation was vague, then there were no reasons for the arrest. If there were no reasons for the arrest to begin with, then there was no charge or allegation to inform the Petitioner. The right to arrest and the duty to submit are correlative. A person having lawful authority to deprive the liberty of another person must know the reasons for the arrest, otherwise, it will constitute false imprisonment. As held in Christie and Another v Leachinsky [1947] 1 All ER 567 at 579

"The omission to tell a person who is arrested at, or within a reasonable time of, the arrest with what offence he is charged cannot be regarded as a mere irregularity.

Arrest and imprisonment, without a warrant, on a charge which does not justify arrest, are unlawful and, therefore, constitute false imprisonment, whether the person making the arrest is a policeman or a private individual"

The Court held further at page 580 that;

"I find it impossible to suppose that the law will hold the arrest good if it subsequently appears that the officer had in his own mind an unexpressed suspicion that a felony had been committed."

Similarly, the arresting officers could not have arrested the Petitioner if the allegation was not well founded. Consequently, the arrest was defective from the inception. Hence, even if reasons are given by the arresting officer, such reasons were also defective. Therefore, I declare that the Petitioner's rights under Article 13(1) are infringed.

Alleged Violation of Article 12(1) of the Constitution

Article 12(1) of the Constitution guarantees that "All persons are equal before the law and are entitled to the equal protection of the law". The essence of Article 12(1) is to ensure that a person is protected from arbitrary, capricious, irrational, unreasonable, discriminatory, or vexatious, executive or administrative actions. Delivering the judgement in the case of Rajapaksha v Rathnayake and Ten Others Sri L.R 1 [2016] 119 at p. 130, His Lordship Justice Sisira de Abrew stated that;

"When the 1st Respondent arrested the petitioner without any reasons and fabricated a false charge against him, can it be said that he got equal protection of law and that the 1st Respondent applied the principle that 'all persons are equal before the law' to the petitioner? This question has to be answered and is answered in the negative. It is now proved that the petitioner was arrested and detained in the police station without any reasons and the charge framed against him was a fabricated charge. Thus, the principle that 'all persons are equal before the law and are entitled to the equal protection of the law' has not been applied to the petitioner by the 1st Respondent."

It is explicit that the power of arrest cannot be exercised arbitrarily. It would deny the equal protection of the law to the Petitioner. In the present case, the arrest was made, merely on the complaint without any verification of the allegation made. Moreover, the Respondents had ample opportunity to check the veracity of the allegation since the arrest was made after five months from the initial complaint. The 6th Respondent had provided the telephone number of the Petitioner to the CID when the initial complaint was made. In the objections filed on behalf of the 1st to the 8th Respondents, which are 'sparse' to say the least, it is averred that the 'Petitioner could not be found in his usual place of abode when the police visited his residence'. The objections do not disclose the date and time they visited the residence of the Petitioner and how many such attempts were made. If he was not at his residence, did they leave the contact number of the investigating officer with any inmate of his residence, requesting the Petitioner to contact the CID? What prevented them from acting under Section 109(6) of the Criminal Procedure Code, a provision which all law enforcement agencies regularly resort to, in order to compel persons to attend the office of the law enforcement agency, in the instant case the CID. What prevented CID officers, from calling the Petitioner on his telephone as the number was available to the CID? If any of these steps were taken, in all probability they would have secured the presence of the Petitioner and would have provided the CID officers with an opportunity to question and verify the complaint and the Petitioner could have directed the CID officers to the police complaints made to the Keselwatte Police and Narahenpita Police Station on numerous instances, thereby allowing him the opportunity to purge any suspicion.

The credibility of the 6th Respondent's version is also suspect and appears to be low. It is unlikely for a person to import high-end luxury vehicles without entering into some agreement, which provides for the particulars of the transaction, before parting with money. It is common knowledge that unlike any other merchandise, when placing an order for a vehicle the specifications of the vehicle matters. The engine configuration, the options the buyer would want the vehicle to be equipped with, the colour and the list goes on. In addition, the mode of liability, method of payment are all factors that any reasonable party will consider before entering into a similar transaction, therefore, parties are bound to leave behind a paper trail. Whether such a 'high end' vehicle can be imported for a sum of Rs.7.0 million is also questionable. In the complaint of the Petitioner, he does not disclose the cost it would incur to import each vehicle.

According to the 'complaint' made by the 6th Respondent to the CID, he states that somewhere in 2017, at the residence of Rehana, he had met both Rehana and the Petitioner regarding the importation of two BMW vehicles, which the petitioner had denied. The arrangement, according to the 6th Respondent, was for Rehana to import a BMW X5 and the Petitioner to import a BMW 318i. Accordingly, he had credited Rs. 23.4 million to Rehana and Rs. 7.0 million to the Petitioner in July and August 2017, expecting the vehicles to arrive in December 2017. The vehicles, however, had not arrived according to the 6th Respondent. Going by the version of the 6th Respondent, it was a joint arrangement of both Rehana and the Petitioner to source the two vehicles. Strangely, the 6th Respondent had lodged a complaint only against Rehana leaving out the Petitioner and subsequently followed it up by lodging a separate complaint against the Petitioner. The complaint against the Petitioner had been made on the 1st June 2018, however the date of the complaint against Rehana is not available to the court.

In spite of the fact that the vehicles had not arrived even by December as alleged, the 6th Respondent had given a loan of Rupees fifty-three million [RS.53.0 million] to Rehana in December 2017, at 12% interest payable in three months. The loan agreement, a notarially attested document has been produced marked "P12".

According to the Petitioner, the 6th Respondent had visited his house at a time when he was not at home and had instilled fear in his father to the effect that he would get the Petitioner remanded for 3 months as he has lodged a complaint with the CID. The 6th Respondent also had said that he credited Rs.7.0 million to the petitioner's account and had left his telephone number with his father.

The Petitioner states that, as he has had no previous interactions with the 6th Respondent, he phoned him up straight away and took the precaution to record the conversation. The transcript of the conversation has been produced marked "P19". It is clear from the transcript that there is no mention whatsoever regarding an arrangement for importation of vehicles. In the course of the telephone conversation, the 6th Respondent clearly says that he credited to the Petitioner's account as requested by Rehana as she required money to place an order to import ointments. It is also clear from the transcript that this was the first conversation between the Petitioner and the 6th Respondent and that they had not known to each other before.

From the above, along with other material produced by the respective parties to this application, it is clear that the version of the 6th Respondent is bereft of any credence, and his complaint appears to be a concocted one.

After the telephone conversation, as referred to earlier, the Petitioner had lodged a complaint against the 6th Respondent at the Narahenpita police on the very next day, i.e. on 08.05.2018, alleging criminal intimidation. The Respondents, however, in particular the 1st to the 3rd Respondents, had not considered any of these material facts and merely acted on the word and on the Bank slips provided by the 6th Respondent. I wish to reiterate that, especially in cases where financial fraud is alleged, it is incumbent on the investigating agency to ascertain whether it is purely a transaction commercial in nature or whether a criminal element is present. As far as this incident, was concerned, this aspect was an essential part of the investigation, which the CID officers had to carry out before proceeding to place the Petitioner in custody. In the circumstances I hold that the arrest of the Petitioner is arbitrary, irrational, and unreasonable and had deprived the Petitioner the equal protection of the law guaranteed to him under the Constitution. Thus, I declare that the 1st to the 3rd Respondents had infringed the Petitioner's fundamental right under Article 12(1) of the Constitution.

Liability of the 6th Respondent

The 6th Respondent was absent and unrepresented when this application was supported for leave to proceed, nor was he represented when this matter was taken up for argument, although notice was issued to him, on no less than four occasions. After the arguments were concluded, however, in the interest of justice, the Court took the additional step of issuing notice on the 6th Respondent for the fifth time, through the Officer-in-Charge of the Sapugaskanda Police Station. On 23.03.2023 he was represented by Counsel and sought permission to file objections on behalf of the 6th Respondent, which was permitted.

As per the statement of objections filed by the 6th Respondent, he states as per paragraph 5(f) and 5(g) that;

"That the petitioner although has taken money never took steps to import one BMW 318i car as agreed and just passed time making various excuses and thereafter never answered the phone. The said Rehana who also had taken 23 million from the 6th Respondent did not take steps to import BMW 5 car as agreed and ceased all contacts with the 6th Respondent"

That thereafter the 6th Respondent made separate complaints against the said Rehana and the Petitioner at the CID. The 6th Respondent handed over the original deposit slips to the CID during the investigation regarding the said complains and the Petitioner has also admitted that he received money"

The complaint made by the 6th Respondent against the Petitioner is certainly false. This can be gleaned from the background facts. During the phone conversation between the Petitioner and the 6th Respondent on 07.05.2018 as said earlier, there is no mention of any agreement to import vehicles, by the 6th Respondent. Parties are likely to negotiate in depth any commercial arrangement, but no evidence was forthcoming from the 6th Respondent as proof of such an agreement. Hence, considering the material that is available at this point of time, the inference that can be drawn is that the complaint made by the 6th Respondent is false and bereft of any truth.

The entire process that culminated in the arrest of the Petitioner was instigated by the 6th Respondent and consequently resulted in the breach of the Petitioner's fundamental rights. I am of the opinion that this is a fit matter to apply the principle laid down in the case of Faiz v Attorney General and Others Sri L.R 1 [1995] 372. In the case of Faiz [supra], his Lordship Justice Mark Fernando stated;

"Article 126 speaks of an infringement by executive or administrative action; it does not impose a further requirement this action must be by an executive officer. It follows at the act of a private individual would render him liable, if in the circumstances that act is "executive or administrative". The act of a private individual would be executive if such act is done with the authority of the executive such authority; transforms an otherwise purely private act into executive or administrative action*; Such authority may be express, or implied from prior or concurrent acts manifesting approval, instigation, connivance, acquiescence, participation and the like (including inaction in circumstances where there is a duty to act); and from subsequent acts which manifest ratification or adoption. While I use concepts and terminology of the law relating to agency, and vicarious liability in delict, in my view responsibility under Article 126 would extend to all situations in which the nexus between the individual and the executive makes it equitable to attribute such responsibility. The executive, and the executive officers from whom such authority flows would all be responsible for the infringement.* Conversely, when an infringement by an executive officer, by executive or administrative action, is directly and effectively the consequence of the act of a private individual (whether by reason of instigation, connivance, participation or otherwise) such individual is also responsible for the executive or administrative action and the infringement caused thereby*. In any event this Court would have power under Article 126(4) to make orders and directions against such an individual in order to afford relief to the victim."* [emphasis added]

As we have concluded that the arrest of the Petitioner was arbitrary and unreasonable and that the arrest was a direct consequence of the instigation on the part the 6th Respondent by making a complaint which was false, the 6th Respondent cannot avoid liability. In the process of protecting the Fundamental Rights of the citizenry, the Court cannot condone private parties instigating the executive to use its powers to achieve their ulterior motives unreasonably and/or in an arbitrary manner. Permitting such conduct would lead to a breakdown of the Rule of Law and erode public confidence, as such, infractions should be frowned upon by this Court.

The Decision to Indict the Petitioner.

When this matter was taken up, on 12.11.2011, the Court inquired from the learned State Counsel whether the transcript of the telephone conversation dated 07.05.2018, between the Petitioner and the 6th Respondent was considered before forwarding the indictment. Requested by the Court, the learned State Counsel produced the file pertaining to the Petitioner containing the decision to forward the indictment against him. Upon perusal of the said file by the Court, it was observed that;

1. The material relating to the telephone conversation between the Petitioner and the 6th Respondent had not been considered by the Learned State Counsel before deciding to forward the indictment.

2. Other than the bare statement stating that the Complainant had deposited a sum of Rupees Seven Million in the Bank Account of the Petitioner no other material whatsoever had been considered by the Learned State Counsel to establish the requisite ingredients, in particular the requisite mental element of the offence of cheating

3. Further, the Learned State Counsel had paid scant regard as to whether the facts relating to this case makes out an offence of cheating and whether the material is sufficient to establish the offence.

Neither a declaration nor any relief was sought in relation to the indictment against the Petitioner. The Court, however, cannot ignore the scant regard the Learned State Counsel had paid when forwarding the indictment. I am reminded of the dicta of his Lordship Justice Sansoni in the case of The Attorney General vs. Sivapragasam et al, 60 NLR 468 at p. 471,

"The prosecutor is at all times a minister of justice, though seldom so described. It is not the duty of prosecuting counsel to secure a conviction, nor should any prosecutor feel pride or satisfaction in the mere fact of success .... His attitude should be so objective that he is, so far as is humanly possible, indifferent to the result"

Similar views were echoed by His Lordship Justice Mark Fernando in the case of Victor Ivon vs. Sarath N. Silva, Attorney General and Others [1998]1 Sri. L.R. 340 at p. 344. The Attorney General has a statutory discretion and the decision to file an indictment; however, this discretion is subject to certain limitations. Any executive discretion should be exercised on constitutionally permissible factors. If a suspect is indicted by the Attorney General when the evidence was plainly insufficient, it would be prima facie arbitrary or capricious. In the words of His Lordship Justice Mark Fernando;

"If a person complains that he was criminally defamed at a public meeting, at which he was not present, and the only witness he has, as to the actual words spoken, is a person who is quite hard of hearing, could sanction be granted, without any further investigation, and without the statement of the accused having been recorded? A decision to prosecute in such circumstances would be, prima facie, arbitrary and capricious, and so would the grant of sanction."

No doubt, the Attorney General enjoys unfettered discretion in almost all aspects of criminal processes; institution of criminal proceedings, conduct of prosecutions as well as discontinuing of proceedings and is not obliged to explain why a particular decision was taken either to indict or not to indict an individual. Prosecutorial discretion is an essential element of our criminal justice system and is also critical to the fair and efficient administration of criminal justice. However, the right to a fair administration of justice holds so prominent a place in a democratic society that it cannot be sacrificed at the altar of expediency.

The decision to prosecute is a serious step that affects suspects, victims, witnesses and the public at large and must be undertaken with the utmost care. Many common law jurisdictions apply a two- stage test in deciding whether or not to initiate a prosecution; that is evidential sufficiency and the public interest. In assessing the sufficiency of evidence, the prosecutor should consider, the admissibility, the reliability and the credibility of the material. The evidence of the defence and any argument which might be put forth should be weighed before asking whether it is more likely than not a court would convict the accused. There must be a rigorous examination of the case to ensure that indictments are not made prematurely. Before indictments are filed, the Attorney General should consider if there are reasonable grounds to suspect that the person to be indicted has committed the offence, or if further evidence can be obtained to provide a realistic prospect of conviction, or if the seriousness or the circumstances of the case justifies the making of an immediate decision to file indictments or if it is in the public interest to file indictments against the suspect.

In the instant case, the indicting State Counsel had only to consider the statement made by the Petitioner along with the transcript of the telephone conversation to assess the truthfulness of the complaint, which unfortunately had not happened.

The complaint itself is fraught with improbabilities. The version of the Petitioner, the telephone conversation, and the fact that the 6th Respondent had given Rs.53.0 million to Rehana in December, which was five months after the purported vehicle transaction as alleged [by the 6th Respondent] that both the Petitioner and Rehana were jointly involved, negates any criminal intent on the part of the Petitioner.

It is regrettable neither the indicting State Counsel nor the officer who supervised and sanctioned the indictment, had failed in their duty to consider the facts objectively before taking the decision to indict the Petitioner.

The two decisions [Sivapragasam and Victor Ivan] referred to above and the jurisprudence of this court has spelt out that the discretion vested in the Attorney General, as a public prosecutor, is constitutionally protected and this discretion had been reviewed by this court, thus the jurisprudence permits this court to consider any challenge to the exercise of the prosecutorial discretion statutorily vested with the Attorney General.

Although the discretion of the Attorney General regarding forwarding of indictments is reviewable, the circumstances in which the Court will intervene are rare. Prosecutorial powers are entrusted to identified officers and no other authority can exercise them or make judgments; it is not within the Courts' constitutional function to assess the merits of the polycentric character of official decision-making in such matters. The Court will only intervene when the decision is prima facie, arbitrary, capricious, or unlawful.

Needless to state that the mental trauma one must undergo in facing criminal charges and for that matter an incitement before the High Court would be considerable. The impact of it would be greater if the person charged was of some social standing.

Conclusions

We are of the opinion that the Petitioner has been successful in establishing that his Fundamental Rights enshrined in Article 12(1), and 13(2) of the Constitution had been violated by the Respondents and the court proceeds to make a declaration to that effect.

When one considers the chain of events, it would be reasonable to draw the conclusion that the 6th Respondent had made a false complaint, as far as the matters impugned in these proceedings and had taken advantage of the mechanism of the criminal justice system to achieve his dubious objectives.

I agree with the view expressed by Justice Mark Fernando in the case Faiz v. The Attorney General [supra] when his Lordship said; "….. when an infringement by an executive officer, by executive or administrative action, is directly and effectively the consequence of the act of a private individual (whether by reason of instigation, connivance, participation or otherwise) such individual is also responsible for the executive or administrative action and the infringement caused thereby. In any event this Court would have power under Article 126(4) to make orders and directions against such an individual in order to afford relief to the victim" [at page 383].

As stated earlier, the facts amply demonstrate that the whole process that triggered the action of the 1st to the 3rd Respondents which led to the infringement of the Petitioner's fundamental rights was instigated by the 6th Respondent.

Accordingly, this Court declares that the 1st 2nd and 3rd Respondents had violated the fundamental rights of the Petitioner under Articles 12(1) and 13(2) of the Constitution. The violations aforesaid was either induced or instigated by the 6th Respondent, who therefore is also responsible for the violations.

His Lordship Justice Kulatunga in the case Shaul Hameed and Another v Ranasinghe 1990 1 SLR 104, observed; [at page 119]

"This Court has the power to make an appropriate order even against a respondent who has no executive status where such respondent is proved to be guilty of impropriety or connivance with the executive in the wrongful acts violative of fundamental rights or even otherwise, where in the interest of justice it becomes necessary to deprive a respondent of the advantages to be derived from executive acts violative of fundamental rights e. g. an order for the payment of damages or for the restoration of property to the petitioner. Article 126 (4) provides that The Supreme Court shall have the power to grant such relief or make such directions as it may deem just and equitable in the circumstances in respect of any petition or reference referred to in paragraphs (2) and (3) or this Article.....". The power of this Court to grant relief is thus very wide. Such power has been expressly conferred to make the remedy under Article 126 (2) meaningful."

I agree with the observation made by Justice Kulatunga referred to above and I am of the view that the Petitioner should be entitled to compensation for the violations aforesaid.

I am also of the opinion that we are bestowed with great latitude in terms of granting relief under Article 126 of the Constitution and when this Court orders compensation for the violation of a Fundamental Right it is awarded by way of acknowledgement of regret and a solatium for the hurt caused by the violation. As held by His Lordship Justice Amarasinghe in Saman v Leeladasa Sri L.R 1 [1989] 1 at p. 42;

"When, in an appropriate case, compensation is awarded for the violation of a Fundamental Right, it is, I think, by way of an acknowledgement of regret and a solatium for the hurt caused by the violation of a fundamental right and not as a punishment for duty disregarded or authority abused."

I am also of the view that the 6th Respondent, being a private party, should also be ordered to pay compensation. The 6th Respondent's actions had led to considerable disruption of the Petitioner's life; his plans to embark on a holiday came to an abrupt halt and had to suffer incarceration in remand custody followed by an indictment on a charge of cheating. All these events, no doubt, would have impacted adversely on his life and possibly would have tarnished his reputation as well. This Court would be failing in its bounden duty if we were to ignore the grievance caused to the Petitioner or condone the conduct of the 6th Respondent.

I must also add that although His Lordship Justice Amarasinghe opined in Saman v Leeladasa [supra] that deterrence should not be considered as a relevant element in the assessment of compensation, those opinions were limited to State liability, as the depths of the State coffers is vast, and the burden of large awards will inevitably pass to the taxpayer. But in my opinion deterrence is a relevant element when the Fundamental Rights violation is a result of instigation by a private party. Private parties should be deterred from instigating the executive to use its powers to achieve their ulterior motives unreasonably and/or in an arbitrary manner.

In this regard I am guided by the judgement of Dumbell v Roberts [1944] 1 All ER at pg. 330, where it was held that no person should be arrested by the police except on grounds which in the particular circumstances of the arrest justify the entertainment of a reasonable suspicion. And that, English Law has recognized that is in the public interest that sufficient damages should be awarded in instances of false imprisonment in order to give reality to the protection afforded by the law. The court went on to observe that;

"The more high-handed and less reasonable the detention is, the larger may be the damages; and, conversely, the more nearly reasonable the defendant may have acted and the nearer he may have got to justification on reasonable grounds for the suspicion on which he arrested, the smaller will be the proper assessment. The whole of the facts will, of course, be taken into account on the new trial in order to arrive at a proper figure."

Although the judgement was concerned with appeal from an action for false imprisonment, I believe the instance case is one that is apt to apply the principle enunciated in Dumbell v Roberts [supra], as the spectrum of unlawful arrests and false imprisonments are wide, and the compensations should reflect the events and bereavements of the Petitioner.

However, I am inclined to include a word of caution. The quantum of compensation reflected by the final Order of this Court should not be construed as the rule. It is very much the exception, especially when making an order regarding payment of compensation against a private party as oppose to the state and it should be done only upon carefully weighing the facts and circumstances of each case. The Court is mindful not to unleash a pandora's box. Hence, the compensation granted by the Court is reflected by the circumstances of this case.

Taking into account the facts and circumstance that led to the violation of the Petitioners' fundamental rights, this Court makes order as follows;

1. 1st Respondent is directed to pay a sum of Rs. 75,000.00 as compensation to the Petitioner.

2. Each of the 2nd and 3rd Respondents are directed to pay a sum of Rs, 25,000/- as compensation to the petitioner.

3. The 6th Respondent is directed to pay a sum of Rupees three million [Rs.3.0 million] to the Petitioner as compensation.

Petitioners to the instant application, Kegalle Plantation PLC, Sriyan Eriyagama, Director (Operations) Kegalle Plantation PLC, and S.D. Munasinghe, The Superintendent Etna Estate Warakapola came before this Court alleging that their Fundamental Rights guaranteed Under Article 12 (1) had been violated by the Action of the 1st to 7th Respondents, by evicting them from the land referred to in the document produced marked P-12.

As submitted by the Petitioners, the 1st Petitioner had entered into a Lease Agreement with Janatha Estate Development Board (hereinafter referred to as JEDB) on or about 4th May 1995 which was amended by Amendment of lease dated 25th July 1995 to lease out the land referred to in the schedule including Etna Estate and the said land has been more fully disrobed in the schedule to the above Lease Agreements. Part H referred to Etna Estate and includes 5 divisions namely, Etna Division, Northland Division, Talawatta Division, Monrovia Division, and Penihela Division.

The initial Lease Agreement was entered between the parties for a period of 99 years, but as per the amendment agreement, it was reduced to 53 years and the agreement is valid until 2045.

As revealed before us, with the introduction of the Land Reform Law in the year 1972, a large volume of agricultural land was vested with the state and those were devolved with the Land Reform Commission. According to the Petitioners, the management of those lands was given to the State Plantation Corporation (hereinafter referred to as SPC) and the JEDB. In the said process the management of Etna Estate was given to JEDB and the said decision was Gazetted in Government Gazette Extraordinary No. 183/18 dated 12th March 1982.

A policy decision was taken with regard to the agricultural land Managed by the two Government owned institutions namely SPC and JEDB under the provisions of conversion of Government-owned business undertakings into Public Corporations Act No. 22 of 1987 to privatize the management of those land, and in the said process the lands which were managed by SPC and JEDB were leased out to private plantation companies. It is in this process only Etna Estate, which was managed by JEDB was leased out to Kegalle Plantations PLC the 1st Petitioner before this Court as per the documents marked P-1 and P-2.

According to the Petitioners, after the relevant leases were executed, Etna Estate was handed over to the 1st Petitioner by the JEDB and what was handed over to them were the land, buildings, and machinery that were part and parcel of Etna Estate. As already referred to in this judgment, Etna Estate consists of 5 divisions, and the total extent of the estate is 1219 acres 1 rood, and 1.6 perches.

As submitted by the Petitioners, from the time the estate referred to in the indenture of lease 336 (P-2) and the amendment of lease 1525 (P2A) were executed the lands referred to in part 'H' to the schedule were occupied by the 1st Petitioner and was developed without any objection until P-12 was issued by the 1st Respondent in the year 2016. i.e., 21 years after handing over the estate to the 1st Petitioner. By this time the 1st Petitioner had invested a large sum of money in developing the land and in fact, the portion of land referred to in P-12 had been re-planted with rubber investing a large sum of money.

As submitted by the Petitioners, they have received a letter dated 30th April 2016 somewhere around the 4th May 2016, requesting them to attend a meeting on 16th May at the Land Reform Commission.

At the said meeting, the 1st Petitioner was represented by the 3rd Petitioner and it was informed to the 3rd Petitioner by the Executive Director of Land Reform Commission who presided over the said meeting, to hand over an extent of 50 acres from Penihelawatta to the Divisional Secretary Warakapola which is one of the 14 fields from the Penihela Division of Etna Estate, for a Housing Project.

However, the 3rd Petitioner objected to the said request and informed that the 1st Petitioner is the lawful lessee of the said land and refused to comply with the said request. On or around 30th May 2016 the Manager of Etna Estate was served with a copy of a letter dated 23rd May 2016, addressed to the Senior Superintendent of the Kegalle District Survey Department office by the 1st Respondent requesting him to prepare a block plan in order to distribute a portion of land from Penihela Estate occupied by the 1st Petitioner since the said portion of land had already been acquired by the state in the year 1973.

The second Petitioner once again objected to the said decision of the 1st Respondent, on the ground that the 1st Petitioner is occupying Penihela Division of Etna Estate based on a valid agreement signed between the 1st Petitioner with JEDB and conveyed the said position to the 1st Respondent. In the meantime, the Petitioner obtained a copy of the Gazette Extraordinary 65/10 dated 28.06.1973 (P3B) and learned that four portions of land from Penihelawatte were acquired by the said Gazette under section 38 (2) of the Land Acquisition Act No 09 of 1950 (as amended) by the then Minister of Land, but had taken up the position that in the absence of a proper mechanism to manage the lands vested with the state, the lands were given to SPC and JEDB in the year 1982 and the lands acquired by the said order too was handed over as one single estate to JEDB. It was also the position of the Petitioners before this Court that, the Penihela Division of Etna Estate including the portion called 'Penihelawatte' was since then managed under JEDB and on a policy decision of the Government, leased out to the 1st Petitioner as one single estate namely Etna Estate. The 1st Respondent or any other agent of the 1st Respondent or his predecessors had never entered into those lands and in fact, it was managed until 1995 by the JEDB and since then by the 1st Petitioner as one single estate. It was the position of the Petitioners before this Court that they never encroached into private or state-owned land other than the land legally handed to them by JEDB after entering into the lease agreements.

Whilst referring to P-7, the Petitioners have further taken up the position that until a state minister of the area had shown an interest in this well-maintained portion of Rubber land to the extent of 50 acres the land was managed by the 1st Petitioner and it had uninterrupted possession for the said land for more than two decades.

On the other hand, the Petitioners argued further, that the change of the purpose for which the land is going to be used is another factor that shows the mala fides of the Respondents. In this regard on behalf of the Petitioners, our attention was drawn to the 1st paragraph of the document produced marked P-7 which reads as,

"නිවාස යෝජනා ක්‍රමයක් සඳහා පැණිහෙල වත්ත මැනුම් කිරීම"

"උක්ත කරුණට අදාලව කර්මාන්ත හා වාණිජ කටයුතු රාජ්‍ය අමාත්‍ය _____ මැතිතුමාගේ යෝජනාවකට අනුව වරකාපොල ප්‍රාදේශීය ලේකම් කොට්ඨාශයේ පැණිහෙල ග්‍රාම නිලධාරී වසමේ පිහිටි දැනට කෑගලු වැවිලි සමාගම විසින් භුක්ති විඳිනු ලබන ඉඩම් කොටසක් හඳුනාගෙන ඇත" and paragraph 25 of the affidavit filed by the 1st Respondent to the effect that,

25. I state further that there is a shortage of land in the Kegalle District due to the risk of landslides and there is an urgent requirement to allocate land for a housing scheme in order to evacuate persons from areas that have been identified as posing a landslide risk.

The position taken up by the Petitioners was challenged by the Respondents and on behalf of the Respondents the 1st and the 7th Respondents have submitted affidavits objecting to the grant of any relief to the Petitioners along with documents to support their argument.

Out of the two Respondents, the 7th Respondent Land Reform Commission had submitted the statement of objection along with an affidavit of its chairman W.M.N. Wijesinghe giving the following details of the land in question.

a) Etna Estate which was leased by JEDB to Kegalle Plantation in the extent of 462 acres 01 rood and 09 perches had been devolved on the Land Reform Commission and the management of the same was assigned to JEDB by the LRC.
b) Penihelawatte is a separate and distinct entity, which is not part of the said Etna Estate
c) By operation of Land Reform Law, the land called Penihelawatte which is 225 acres 3 roods and 23 perches in extent was vested with the LRC by a statutory declaration submitted on behalf of the late Walter Seton Scott by Francis Seton Scott and Cobhan Scott. (7R1 and 7R2)

d) By statutory determination, 100 Acres of the said estate were devolved on the heirs namely Francis Seton Scott and Cobhan Scott, 50 acres each but none of them were interested in having Land in Sri Lanka since they were living in Australia at that time. Out of the said 100 acres, 50 acres had already been distributed among the needy public and it is the balance of 50 acres that was acquired under section 38 (a) acquisition order made by the Minister but has not been regularized by the 1st Respondent since the said land was occupied by the 1st Petitioner.

e) Remainder of Penihela Estate which is 125 acres 3 roods and 23 perches has been illegally occupied by the 1st Petitioner, but Penihela Estate which is not a part of Etna Estate is still vested with the 7th Respondent and the said land was never handed over to JEDB under Gazette Extraordinary 183/10 dated 12th March 1982 and therefore JEDB was not empowered to lease out the said estate to the 1st Petitioner in the year 1995.

f) As per the two Surveyor General Plans produced marked 7R4 and 7R5 two lots of Land of Penihela Estate had been clearly identified. 7R4 refers to a portion of 51 acres and 36 perch Block and 7R5 refers to a 113 acres 1 rood and 11 perch Block.

g) Out of 51 acres and 36 perch Block (7R4) 50 acres had been identified as the portion of Land subject to the statutory determination of Francis C. Scott, Darlin Point Sydney Australia which was subsequently acquired by P3B dated 28th June 1973.

When filing the objections by way of an affidavit dated 22nd January 2020, the incumbent additional Secretary Warakapola had produced marked 1R1 the Gazette Extraordinary 183/10 dated 12.03.1982 and submitted that,

a) Gazette Extraordinary dated 12.03.1982 by which lands were vested in the JEDB categorically stipulates that the extent of Etna Estate which is vested in JEDB is 324.43 hectares, which is approximately 801.43 acres

b) As the Petitioners claim that they are in possession of 1219 acres of the Etna Estate, it is apparent that the Petitioners are occupying over 418 acres in excess of what they are entitled to occupy of the Etna estate

Whilst submitting the above, on behalf of the 1st Respondent it was further submitted that the Minister of Lands by order made under section 38 (1) of the Land Acquisition Act No 28 of 1964 acquires 237 acres 01 rood and 05 perches from Penihela Estate including a portion of 51 acres and 36 perches, which is situated in the village of Penihela and the said land which is now occupied by the 1st Petitioner had been properly identified by the Surveyor General by Plans produced as 1R2-1R4.

The 1st Respondent had further produced a document marked as 1R7 to show that as per the acquisition order, the Penihela Estate had been handed over to the District Revenue Officer (DRO) of Beligal Korale on 4th July 1973 by its previous managing agents "Penihela wathu Hawula Ltd".

When considering the material submitted by the parties before this Court, it appears that the parties before this Court had taken up three different versions when submitting their respective cases. Even though the 1st and the 7th Respondents before this Court had taken up a contradictory position with regard to the main Penihela Estate, both parties admit that by Gazette Extraordinary 65/10 dated 23.06.1973 the subject matter, 50 acres from Penihela Estate had been acquired under section 38 (a) of the Land Acquisition Act 28 of 1964 and the said land had been properly handed over by its managing agents to the Divisional Revenue officer in the year 1973.

However, the story of the Petitioner begins in the year 1995 and the 1st Petitioner had taken up the position that the lands vested with the state under Land Reform law were handed over to JEDB in the year 1982 and on a policy, decision taken by the state in 1995, Etna Estate which was managed by JEDB was leased out to 1st Petitioner for the period of 53 years in 1995.

Even though there were no plans prepared or referred to any plans in the lease agreement, the Petitioner had taken up the position that, what was leased to them was the land occupied and /or released to the JEDB for the management of the said land.

There is no doubt that agricultural land that was vested with LRC when the Land Reform Law came into force, was entrusted with SPC and JEDB by a decision of the State. However, the Petitioners have failed to challenge the Government Gazette Extraordinary 183/10 dated 12.03.1982 by which the lands that were vested with JEDB were identified.

According to the said Gazette Etna Estate from Kegalle District with the extent of 324.43 Hectares had been vested with the JEDB. According to the 7th Respondent, the JEDB was given Etna Estate only. Penihela Estate or any other Estate in the vicinity were not given to JEDB and therefore it was the argument of the Respondents that JEDB could not have leased out any land which was not vested with JEDB to a third party. The Petitioners had decided not to make JEDB a Respondent to the instant case.

If JEDB was before us, the JEDB could have explained how the above discrepancy had taken place but this Court is deprived of any explanation with regard to the above position. Neither the Petitioners nor the Lessor, the JEDB, had surveyed Etna Estate prior to it being leased to the 1st Petitioner and therefore the Petitioners, are not in a position to establish the exact extent of Etna Estate.

As it is revealed before us, the extent of Etna Estate,

a) According to LRC it was 462 acres 01 rood, and 09 perches;
b) According to the Gazette Extraordinary 183/10 dated 12.03.1982 Etna Estate consist of 324.43 Hectares (Approx. 801.43 Acres); and,
c) According to the lease agreements P-2 and P-3 Etna Estate consists of Approximant 1219 acres

Even though the 7th Respondents had taken up the position that Etna Estate which consists of only 462 acres was vested to the JEDB. The 7th Respondent had failed to submit any documentation to support this position. The said position is contradictory to the decision in the Government Gazette Extraordinary 183/10 under which 324.43 hectares (approx. 801.43 acres) were vested to the JEDB. In these circumstances, this Court is reluctant to act on the submission placed on behalf of the 7th Respondent.

However, the discrepancy between the extent referred to in the Gazette and the two deeds by which the 1st Petitioner was entrusted with Etna Estate has not been explained by the Petitioners before us. The failure by the Petitioners to bring before this Court the lessor who leased out Etna Estate which consists of 1219 acres, is a vital lapse on the part of the Petitioners. The Petitioner has failed to bring a necessary party before this Court.

In the case of Senaweera and others V. Vocational Training Authority of Sri Lanka and Others 2011 BLR 93 Suresh Chandra J whilst referring to the decisions in Dr. K.D.G. Wimalarathne V. Secretary to the Ministry of Public Administration SC Application 654/95 SC minute dated 09.06.1997 and H.A.S. Hettiarachchi V. Secretary of Public Administration and Home Affairs Sc Application 780/1999 SC minute dated 25.01.2001 had concluded that,

a) a party coming into Court must decide as to who should be made necessary parties to such application and it is not for a party to surmise what objections would be taken up by the opposing party and then decide to add parties to the application when it becomes necessary.
b) When it comes to a situation where the proper and necessary parties have to be brought in at the time of filing the application is a mandatory requirement, reserving a right to add parties would not be sufficient and would amount to a fatal defect in the maintaining of such an application.
c) The promotions that are complained of have been made after a recommendation had been made by the Political Victimization Committee and after obtaining Cabinet approval. In such a situation the Political Victimization Committee and the Cabinet of Ministers would be necessary parties to the application at the time of filing the application.
d) Failure to cite the Cabinet of Ministers as a necessary party at the time of filing an application has been held to be a fatal defect in several judgments of this Court.

On the other hand, it was the position of the 1st Respondent that 237 acres from Penihela Estate had been acquired in the year 1973 under section 38 (a) of the Land Acquisition Act No 09 of 1950 (as amended). When the said order was made by the Minister, in the Government Gazette Extraordinary 65/10 dated 28.06.1973, he had identified four separate lots from Penihela Estate including the lot in question, 51 acres and 36 perches in extent. This was clearly identified by the Surveyor General who submitted his reports which were produced marked 1R2-1R5.

Part 'H' to the Schedule of the two deeds that were produced by the Petitioners, identified Etna Estate and according to the said schedule Etna Estate Consist of 05 divisions and they have been identified in the schedule as follows;

a) Etna division 462 acres 01 rood and 08 perches
b) Northland division 259 acres and 27.2 perches
c) Talawatta division 228 acres 4.6 perches
d) Monrovia division 47 acres 02 roods and 30.4 perches
e) Penihela division 222 acres and 11.2 perches

The total extent of the Estate comes to 1219 acres 01 rood and 1.4 perches

In the said schedule, each division too had been separately identified and the divisions referred to above consist of several lots. As per the said schedule Penihela division consist of 25 lots and they have been identified in the schedule from (a) –(y).

The extent of each lot is identified under the above schedule and among the 25 lots identified under 'Penihela', there are lots ranging from 244 acres to 1.5 perch. As already referred the entire Penihela division contains only 222 acres and 11.2 perches but the lot identified as "Kathurukandehenayaya" consists of 244 acres 3 roods and 33 perches (under 'x') According to the schedule the 25 lots referred under 'Penihela' totally consist of 560 acres 02 roods and 18.5 perches. The Petitioners have failed to give an explanation for this discrepancy, but in their submissions, before this Court, they have taken up a position that, apart from the Penihela division that was handed over to them by P2 and P3, another portion of land called Penihela Estate too was included to the said division and therefore Penihela Estate is also a part of Etna Estate. However, they have failed to explain how they got 560 acres 02 roods, and 18.5 Perches instead of 222 acres and 11.2 perches of Penihela division.

The only party who could have explained this discrepantly is the lessor, JEDB, but the Petitioners have failed to make them a party to the instant case and I have already concluded that the Petitioners have failed to bring a necessary party before this Court.

As further observed by this Court by 1R1 JEDB had been vested with 324.43 Hectares from Etna Estate and the JEDB is not legally entitled to lease out any land over and above the said extent to a third party. However, the Petitioners before this Court were of the opinion that they had a legitimate expectation to possess Etna Estate for a period of 53 years as per the two-lease agreements produced marked P2 and P3 but a question arises whether the Petitioners could entertain a legitimate expectation to possess land in excess of the extent referred to in the lease agreement under which the land was entrusted to them.

In the case of Ginigathgala Mohandiramlage Nimalsiri V. Colonel P.P.J. Fernando and others SC 256/2010 SC minute dated 17.09.2015, it was observed that,

> "An expectation the fulfillment of which results in the decision maker making an unlawful decision cannot be treated as a legitimate expectation. Therefore, the expectation must be within the powers of the decision-maker for it to be treated as a legitimate expectation case.

It was also decided in the case of Tokyo Cement Company (Lanka) Ltd V. Director General Customs and four Others SC Appeal 23/2004 2005BLR 24 that a legitimate expectation has to be taken in the sense of expectation which will be protected by law.

Considering the matters already discussed in this Judgment, I conclude that,

a) The Petitioners had failed to bring JEDB a necessary party to the instant application which is a fatal lapse on the part of the Petitioners that warrants dismissal of the instant application
b) The Petitioner could not have entertained a legitimate expectation to possess the entire extent of Etna Estate handed over to them for a period of 53 years. Since the Petitioners have failed to establish that the lessor was entitled in law to lease out any extent beyond 324.43 Hectares to a third party.

I therefore dismiss the application with cost fixed at Rs. 200000/-

Application is dismissed with cost.

Counsel: Manohara de. Silva PC with Hirosha Munasinghe for the Petitioners

Ms. Chamantha Weerakoon Unamboowe with Ms. Tersha Abeyratne instructed by Ms. Chitra Jayasinghe for the 54th, 55th and 56th added Respondents

Shaheeda Barrie, Senior SC, with Ms. Navodi De. Zoysa, SC for the 1st to 53rd Respondents

Argued on: 19.01.2021

Vijith K. Malalgoda PC J

The three Petitioners namely N.B. Krishantha Kumara, Somasiri Ekanayake, and B.H.M.D. Herath who are members of the Sir Lanka Planning Service and the 4th Petitioner Planning Service Association had filed the instant application before this Court challenging the decision of the 1st to the 9th Respondents contained in the letter dated 08.11.2017 which is produced marked P-10-B, to implement the Cabinet decision dated 23.06.2010 which is also produced marked as P-12, alleging that both P-10-B and P-12 are in violation of the Fundamental Rights guaranteed to them under Article 12 (1) of the Constitution.

The matter was supported before this Court on 28.09.2018 and the Court granted leave to proceed for the alleged violation of the Fundamental Rights guaranteed under Article 12 (1) of the Petitioners. After considering an application made by three Intervenient Petitioners namely U.L. Samaratunga, S.M. Banu, and R.M.N.S. Gunathilake representing the Development Officers', the court granted permission for the said party to intervene in the instant application as 54th, 55th, and 56th Respondents.

During the Argument before us, the Respondents raised two preliminary objections, one with regard to the locus standi of the Petitioner before the Court and the other with regard to the jurisdiction of this Court in deciding an application filed before this Court under Article 17 read with article 126 for allegedly violating the Fundamental Rights of the Petitioners by a policy decision taken by the Executive.

The second objection referred to above needs to go into the facts of this matter and in the said circumstances the said objection will be considered, having considered the merits of this application towards the later part of this judgment. However, the first objection raised will be considered by me now.

The first and the second Petitioners hold the positions of the Secretary and Assistant Secretary of the 4th Petitioner Association and the third Petitioner who also belongs to the Sri Lanka Planning Service is a committee member of the 4th Petitioner Association. The 4th Petitioner, the Planning Service Association is a trade union registered under section 10 of the Trade Union Ordinance.

Whilst referring to Article 126 (2) of the Constitution the Respondents relied on the decision in Ceylon Electricity Board Accountants' Association V. Patali Champika Ranawaka and Others SC FR 18/2015 SC Minute dated 11.03.2016 where Sripawan CJ had held > "….. in the absence of a specific provision permitting a Trade Union to institute action on behalf of its members, the Petitioner Union cannot have and maintain this application on behalf of its members in terms of Article 17 read with Article 126 (2) of the Constitution."

Article 126 (2) of the Constitution reads thus;

> Where any person alleged that any such Fundamental Rights or Language Right relating to such person has been infringed or is about to be infringed by executive or administrative action, he may himself or by an Attorney at Law on his behalf, within one month thereof, in accordance with such rules of Court as may be in force, apply to the Supreme Court by way of petition in writing addressed to such Court praying for relief or redress in respect of such infringement.

It was the argument of the learned Senior State Counsel who represented the Respondents before us, that the Supreme Court had declined to make a broader definition to the term "person" referred to in Article 126 by extending it to unincorporated bodies such as Trade Unions.

The impugned decisions, before this Court, the Cabinet decision (P-12), and the letter by the 1st to the 9th Respondents (P-10-B) refer to the absorption of a certain category of officers into the Sri Lanka Planning Service (hereinafter referred to as SLPS) on supernumerary basis without making them eligible for certain benefits in the said service, but the main complaint before this court is that the said Cabinet decision and the subsequent letter by the 1st to 9th Respondents are in clear violation of the service minute of the SLPS which affects not only to the 1st to 3rd Respondents before Court but also to the entire cadre of the Sri Lanka Planning Service and therefore the 4th Respondent being the Trade Union which represents the entire cadre of the said service is entitled, to prosecute the instant application in the interest of its membership.

When a similar matter had arisen with the Nurses working in Government Hospitals, the Cabinet of Ministers approved additional salary increments to the non-striking staff on the recommendation of the Health Minister, the Pubic Services United Nurses Union, in which the majority of nurses in the Government Hospitals are members, challenged the said decision before this Court.

In the case of the Public Services United Nurses Union V. Montague Jayawickrema Minister of Public Administration and Others, 1988 1 Sri LR 229 this Court held that the said decision violates equality provisions contained in Article 12 since the said decision had granted an ad hoc increment to a very limited class of officers.

However, in the case of Ceylon Electricity Board Accountants' Association V. Patali Champika Ranawaka and Others (Supra), the Supreme Court upheld an objection raised by the Respondents with regard to the maintainability of the said application on the ground that the Petitioner being a Trade Union has no locus standi to institute an application in terms Article 126 of the Constitution.

When deciding the above, Chief Justice Sripawan was mindful of the instances where this Court had permitted unincorporated bodies or persons to institute and maintain applications under Article 17 read with 126 (2) of the Constitution including the case of Public Services United Nurses Union V. Montague Jayawickrama and Others (supra).

Whilst referring to the Nurses Union case referred above Sripawan CJ observed;

> "I do not find myself able to accede to the argument advanced by Mr. ……for two reasons. Firstly, no objection was taken by the Respondents in the said application that the Public Services United Nurses Union had no locus standi to institute an application under Article 126 of the Constitution and the Court did not have the benefit of any argument of the learned counsel on that issue. Secondly, in any event, the second Petitioner was a Nurse and the Secretary of the First Petitioner Union, whose Fundamental Right of equality guaranteed under Article 12 had been violated. Furthermore, the Second Petitioner is a "Person" within the meaning of Article 126 (2) of the Constitution. Thus, the case could have proceeded even if the First Petitioner, namely Public Services United Nurses Union was struck down"

With regard to an Incorporated body, a similar objection was raised by the Respondents in the case of Environmental Foundation Ltd. V. Urban Development Authority (2009) 1 Sri LR 123 and S. N Silva CJ considered the said objection as follows;

> "An objection has been raised that the Petitioner cannot have and maintain this application, since it is an incorporated company and that the Fundamental Rights guaranteed by Article 12 (1) and 14 (1) (a) can be invoked only by persons and in the case of Article 14 (1)(a) by a citizen. In my view, the word "persons" as appearing in Article 12 (1) should not be restricted to "natural" persons but extended to all entities having legal personality. In several cases, this Court has given relief to incorporated bodies that have a legal personality recognized by law…….. Although counsel contended that Article 14 (1) should be read differently in view of the reference to a "citizen" I am of the view that this distinction does not carry with it a > difference that would enable a company incorporated in Sri Lanka, to vindicate an infringement under Article 12 (1) and disqualify it from doing so in respect of an infringement under Article 14 (1).

>
> .....
> In several cases, the Petitioner has assisted this Court in important matters with regard to the preservation of the environment. In this instance too the Petitioner has acted in the public interest…."

However, Sripawan CJ whilst referring to the decision in Environmental Foundation Ltd. (supra) and made a distinction between the two cases in the case of Ceylon Electricity Board Accountants' Association (supra) as follows;

> "His Lordship further noted that in several cases this Court has given relief to incorporated bodies that have a legal personality recognized by law…… In any event, Environment Foundation Ltd. (supra) case was filed in the public interest in order to preserve, safeguard and protect the public interest. Hence incorporated bodies recognized by law were permitted to file action in terms of Article 126 (2) of the Constitution.

The learned President's Counsel who represented the Petitioner in the case of Ceylon Electricity Board Accountants' Association (supra) made an attempt at a later stage to add one of its office bearers as an added Petitioner, but the said application was objected to by the Respondents. The said move by the Petitioner in Ceylon Electricity Board Accountants' Association (supra) is a clear admission by the Petitioner himself with regard to the locus standi of the Petitioner in the said case.

In these circumstances it is clear that the locus standi of an unincorporated body that comes before the Supreme Court in an application filed under Article 17 read with Article 126 (2) is now settled and the Court has permitted the members of the unincorporated body to pursue the application in the instances when their rights guaranteed under the constitution has been violated by the conduct of the Respondents. Therefore, I see no merit in the first objection raised by the Respondents before this Court.

With regard to the impugned Cabinet decision produced mark P-12 and the subsequent decision taken by the Public Service Commission which is contained in the letter produced P-10 B, the Petitioners have submitted as follows;

a) That according to the service minute of the SLPS which was operative until the Public Administration Circular 6/2006 was published in Government Gazette 1134/5 on 30.05.2000, the said service consisted of Class II Grade II, Class II Grade I, and Class I officers.
b) That a new service minute was introduced to the SLPS in terms of Public Administration Circular 6/2006 by Government Gazette 1670/32, which was published on 10.09.2010. According to this service minute the said service consists of four grades namely, Grade III, Grade II, Grade I, and Special Grade.
c) That the recruitment Grade under the previous service minute was Class II Grade II of Sri Lanka Planning Service and under the new service minute it is Grade III.
d) That under both these schemes, provisions had been made to recruit officers under two main streams, namely open and limited and there was a minimum requirement of obtaining 40% of the total mark from a written examination, in order to get through the examination under both schemes.
e) That according to Clause 6.4 of the service minute which was operative until 2010, 75% of the vacancies in Class II Grade II of the SLPS were to be filled on the results of the Open Competitive Examination, and the balance 25% by the Limited Competitive Examination.

f) That the Cabinet of Ministers had arrived at a decision on 24.10.2007 to allow a group of officers to sit for a special examination instead of the examination identified in Clause 6.5 in the service minute in order to absorb them to Class II Grade II of the SLPS on Supernumerary basis.

g) That the said Cabinet decision and the Instructions issued by the Public Service Commission in order to implement the said Cabinet decision were challenged before the Supreme Court by two parties and those matters namely SC FR 236/2008 and 237/2008 were pending before the Supreme Court for determination even at the time the instant application was taken up for hearing before the present bench.

h) That by Government Gazette 1565 dated 29.08.2008 which was amended by Government Gazette 1587 dated 30.01.2009 applications were called from the eligible candidates to sit for the said examination.

i) That the minimum requirement to get through the said examination was unchanged and under paragraph 13 of the Government Gazette 1565 dated 29.08.2008 it was stated that;

"B. තෝරා ගැනීම් ක්‍රමය;

ප්‍රශ්න පත්‍ර සඳහා නියමිත ලකුණු වලින් යටත් පිරිසෙන් 40% ක් වත් ලබා නොගන්නා අපේක්ෂකයන් කැඳවනු ලැබීමට නුසුදුසු වනු ඇත. එක් කරනු ලැබීම සඳහා අපේක්ෂකයන් තෝරා ගනු ලබන්නේ විභාගයේ 40% වඩා ලකුණු ලබාගත් අයවළුන් අතරිනි.

j) That the said examination to appoint officers to Class II Grade II of the Sri Lanka Planning Service on a supernumerary basis was held in April 2009 and steps were taken to recruit those who got through the said examination by obtaining the minimum requirement of 40% of the total mark.

k) That, a Cabinet Memorandum dated 10.06.2009 was submitted by the then Minister of Finance and Planning seeking approval to reduce the pass marks from 40% to 30% for the reasons contained in paragraph 3 of the said memorandum, which reads as follows;

> "3. විභාග ප්‍රශ්න පත්‍රය සම්බන්ධයෙන් විභාග අපේක්ෂකයන් විසින් ඉදිරිපත් කරන ලද නියෝජනයන් තුලින් සහනයක් සලසාදෙන ලෙස කරන ලද ඉල්ලීම සලකා බලා, සම්පූර්ණ විභාගය අවලංගු කොට යලි පැවැත්වීම වෙනුවට විකල්ප ක්‍රියා මාර්ගයක් ලෙස රාජ්‍ය සේවා කොමිෂන් සභාව විසින් අනුමත කරන ලද සමත් වීමේ අවම ලකුණු ප්‍රමාණය වන 40% සිට 30% දක්වා සංශෝධනය කිරීම තුලින් අගතියට පත් අපේක්ෂකයන්ට සහනයක් සැලසීම සුදුසුයයි යෝජනා කරමි. මෙසේ ලකුණු දීමෙන් සමාර්ථය ලබන අපේක්ෂකයන් සංඛ්‍යාව 451 වී ඇති හෙයින් රාජ්‍ය සේවා කොමිෂන් සභාව විසින් බඳවා ගැනීමට අනුමැතිය දී ඇති 526 ප්‍රමාණය ඉක්මවා නොයන බවද සඳහන් කරමි. ….. (P-5)

l) That the said Cabinet Memorandum was approved by the Cabinet of Ministers and conveyed to the Secretary to the Ministry of Finance and Planning by P-6.

m) That the above decision to deviate from the original scheme approved by the Cabinet of Ministers was never challenged, and steps were taken to implement the said decision.

n) That subsequent to the introduction of the new scheme of recruitment in 2010, two rounds of recruitment to Grade III of the SLPS were taken place in 2012 and 2017 based on the new scheme of recruitment.

o) That when the second round of the recruitment process was in progress the Petitioners were informed of an attempt to recruit another batch of officers to the Sri Lanka Planning Service from those who faced the special examination in the year 2009 and had not succeeded in obtaining 30% as required by the Cabinet decision dated 10.06.2009.

p) That the Petitioners made requests from the Public Service Commission and the office of the Cabinet of Ministers under the provisions of the Right to Information Act No. 12 of 2016 in order to obtain information with regard to any decision reached in that regard and the decision of the Public Service Commission dated 17.11.2017 (P10-B) was communicated to the 1st Petitioner by the Public Service Commission by letter dated 04.12.2017 (P-10-A)

q) That, it was revealed from the information gathered, that there was another Cabinet Memorandum dated 17.06.2010 and a Cabinet Decision (P-11 and P-12) to recruit all candidates who faced the examination which was held in the year 2009 irrespective of any marks they received but fulfill the other requirements according to the relevant Gazette notification. However, the said decision was not implemented until 2017, but by letter dated 17.11.2017 (P-10-B), Public Service Commission had instructed the Secretary Public Administration Ministry to implement the said decision.

In these circumstances the Petitioners have further submitted before this Court, that;

i. The said Cabinet decision dated 23.06.2010 (P-12) and the recent decision taken by the Public Service Commission to implement the said Cabinet decision as evinced in the letter dated 17.11.2017 (P10-B) are in gross violation of the service minute of the SLPS and the Government policy on recruiting officers to the SLPS.

ii. The Petitioners have a legitimate expectation that all requirements and provisions in the Sri Lanka Planning Service will adhere in strict compliance with the approved service minute

iii. The service minute clearly specifies that the pass mark for both the Limited and Competitive Examination is 40

iv. When making the recruitments in 2009, the pass mark was lowered to 30, which is also in violation of the Service Minute

v. The impugned decision of the Public Service Commission has the effect of recruiting to the Sri Lanka Planning Service, those who failed to score even 30 marks and thereby failed the examination

vi. Two rounds of recruitment have taken place since 2010 under the new service minute

vii. Grave anomalies would be caused within the SLPS if the impugned decision is implemented

On behalf of the Respondents, the 1st and the 10th Respondents, the Chairman Public Service Commission and the Secretary to the Ministry of Public Administration had tendered affidavits responding to the allegations made against them by the Petitioners and had denied any violation of the service minute of the SLPS. The Respondents have also taken up the position, that the recruitments referred to by the Petitioners had neither violated the legitimate expectations of the Petitioners nor it created any anomalies in the Sri Lanka Planning Service violating the Fundamental Rights of the Petitioners guaranteed under Article 12 (1) of the Constitution.

In this regard, the 1st and the 10th Respondents have taken up the position that;

a) The secretary to the Ministry of Plan Implementation in consultation with some authorities decided to absorb the Development Officers who had completed 05 years of satisfactory service to SLPS Class II Grade II considering the provisions in the scheme of recruitment of the Development Officers

b) The said decision was challenged before the Court of Appeal in CA 329/2007 and in the meantime Secretary to the Ministry of Plan Implementation wrote to the Public Service Commission seeking approval for the absorption of 349 Development officers to Class II Grade II of SLPS

c) However, by letter dated 4th June 2007, the Public Service Commission refused to consent to the above request and also informed its decision to the Court of Appeal

d) A Cabinet Memorandum titled "strengthening the Sri Lanka Planning Service with special emphasis to plan implementation" dated 14th August 2007 was submitted to the Cabinet by the predecessor in office to the 11th Respondent

e) In the said Cabinet of Memorandum, it was recommended that,

    a) a special examination be conducted (by the Sri Lanka Institute of Development Administration) for these officers to assess their suitability for absorption;

    b) the examination focuses primarily on an assessment of applying knowledge relating to field-level experience in planning and plan implementation.

    c) those who are successful at the examination be absorbed into supernumerary Class II Grade II posts in the SLPS with effect from a prospective date, provided they have completed five years of continuous active service, been confirmed in the post, and have passed the first Efficiency Bar examination specified in the scheme of recruitment;

    d) those who are successful at the examination but have not passed the first Efficiency Bar examination at that time, but complete that examination subsequently, be absorbed as set out above, with effect from a prospective date after they pass the First Efficiency Bar Examination;

    e) such number of supernumerary posts as are equivalent to the number of successful candidates be specially created at Class II Grade II level to enable these appointments to be made and that simultaneously the posts currently held by those officers are suppressed;

f) The Cabinet of Ministers had approved the said recommendation and the said decision was communicated to the Public Service Commission in order to grant relief as proposed in the Cabinet Memorandum

g) By letter dated 28th September 2007 the Public Service Commission had voiced its disagreement with the implementation of the said Cabinet Decision

h) The Cabinet of Ministers by its decision dated 10.10.2007, rescinded the earlier decision and appointed an official committee to formulate a promotional scheme to the development officers in order to address the grievances of the development officers.

i) On the recommendations of the said Committee the Cabinet of Ministers by its decision dated 24.10.2007 granted approval to conduct a special examination and appoint successful candidates to the Sri Lanka Planning Service on a supernumerary basis.

j) Applications were called from those who were eligible to sit for the special examination referred to above by Government Gazette dated 29.08.2008 and those who were eligible to sit for the examination were identified in the notice itself.

k) According to the said notice;

    i. The post advertised (Class II Grade II of SLPS) is permanent and pensionable but is on a supernumerary basis and personal to the successful candidate who obtains more than 40 marks from the special examination

    ii. If the candidates intend obtaining other benefits and promotions in the SLPS, he/she will have to face the competitive examination held under the provisions of the service minute of the SLPS.

l) The special examination referred to above was held and steps were taken to give appointments to the successful candidates. However, by Cabinet Memorandum dated 10.06.2009, approval was sought to reduce the pass mark to 30% to grant further relief to the candidates. Cabinet has approved the said memorandum.

m) By another Cabinet Memorandum submitted to the Cabinet on 23.06.2010 by the Minister of Finance and Planning, approval was sought from the Cabinet to absorb the balance of candidates who sat for the special examination into the SLPS.

The Cabinet approval granted to the said memorandum is as follows;

> "අමාත්‍ය මණ්ඩල පත්‍රිකා අංක 10/1317/404/046 වූ ශ්‍රී ලංකා ක්‍රමසම්පාදන සේවයේ II පන්තියේ II ශ්‍රේණියට (අධි සේවක පදනම මත) පත් කිරීම යන මැයෙන් මුදල් හා ක්‍රමසම්පාදන ඇමතිතුමා ඉදිරිපත් කල 2010. 06.17 දිනැති සංදේශය (..... 2009.06.10 දිනැති අමාත්‍ය මණ්ඩල තීරණයට අදාල) ශ්‍රී ලංකා ක්‍රමසම්පාදන සේවයේ II පංතියේ II ශ්‍රේණියට (අධි සේවක පදනම මත) බඳවා ගැනීම සලකා බැලීම සඳහා 2009.04.19 දින පවත්වන ලද විභාගයට පෙනී සිටි ඉතිරී නිලධාරීන්ද, අදාල ගැසට් නිවේදනය ප්‍රකාරව, සුදුසුකම් සපුරා ඇත්ද යන්න සම්මුඛ පරීක්ෂණ මණ්ඩලයක් විසින් පරීක්ෂාකර බලා, ඔවුන්ට පෞද්ගලික වනසේ, ශ්‍රී ලංකා ක්‍රමසම්පාදන සේවයේ II පන්තියේ II ශ්‍රේණියට (අධි සේවක පදනම මත) පත් කිරීම සඳහා අනුමැතිය දෙන ලදී."

n) Subsequent to the above approval, the qualifications of all the candidates who were not eligible under the two previous Cabinet decisions were also checked by an interview panel, and out of 242 candidates interviewed, 146 were shortlisted and another Cabinet Memorandum was submitted on 23.03.2011 recommending that they may be given appointments based on the previous Cabinet approval.

o) However due to reasons not revealed before this court, the Cabinet of Ministers at their meeting on 26.04.2011 sought the views of the Minister of Public Administration and Home Affairs, without approving the Cabinet Paper submitted before the Cabinet.

p) The Public Service Commission which was defunct during this period was reconstituted on 19.05.2011 and the appointments to the Public Service were since then vested with the Public Service Commission and no steps were taken by the Public Service Commission to make those appointments until P-10-B was issued by the Public Service Commission in November 2017 directing those appointments be made with effect from 23.06. 2010 without back wages.

As further observed by this Court, the incumbent Chairman of the Public Service Commission, the 1st Respondent before this court when submitting an affidavit before this court had justified its decision contained in P-10-B stating that the decision of the Cabinet of Ministers dated 23.06.2010 (P-12) has not yet been canceled and it is a policy decision and the Public Service Commission has now decided to implement the said Cabinet decision.

In addition to the Respondents who were represented before this court by the learned Senior State Counsel, this Court had permitted three Intervenient Parties, i.e., 54th, 55th, and 56th Respondents to make a submission through their counsel before this Court.

On behalf of the 54th to the 56th Intervenient Respondents, several objections were raised and they objected to the granting of any relief to the Petitioners.

It was submitted on behalf of them that the Cabinet of Ministers has acknowledged the grievance of the Development Officers who were represented before this Court by the 54th to 56th Intervenient Respondents. As submitted by them the only promotional prospect according to their service minute was referred to in note 3 to the scheme of Recruitment as, “provisions will be made for the recruitment of Department Officers to the Planning Service after 5 years of satisfactory Service.”

By 2007 majority of the Development Officers attached to the Ministry of Planning had completed 5 years of service without any promotional opportunity. Even though the service minute of the SLPS introduced in the year 2000 had included the post of Development Officer to its schedule 'E' and under clause 6.5 provisions were made to hold a Limited Competitive Examination to recruit 25% of its vacancies, no such examination was held for 07 years depriving promotional opportunities to Development Officers.

According to the 54th to 56th Respondents, several services other than Development Officers were included in schedule 'E' and those services were also eligible to sit for the said examination along with the Development officers and therefore the only promotional opportunity available to the Development Officers could not be resolved effectively even by conducting the Limited Competitive Examination in the year 2008 to fill 100 vacancies. In the said circumstances the Respondents argue that conducting the Special Examination as provided by the Cabinet decision dated 24.10.2007 to recruit Development Officers to the SLPS Grade II Class II on a supernumerary basis was not in violation of the Fundamental Rights of the officers in SLPS.

On behalf of the Intervenient Respondents, it was further submitted that there were several issues with regard to the question paper in the Special Examination and therefore the Cabinet of Ministers had first reduced the pass mark to 30 by Cabinet decision dated 10.06.2009 and thereafter decided to recruit all Development Officers who fulfill the other requirement to the Post of Grade II Class II officer in SLPS by the impugned Cabinet decision dated 23.06.2010. It was further submitted on behalf of the Intervenient Respondents that both Cabinet decisions referred to above are policy decisions taken by the Cabinet of Ministers in resolving the promotional prospects of the Development Officers in the Planning Ministry.

At the time this case was taken up for argument, the court was unaware of the two applications that were pending before this court, where several parties have challenged the Decision of the Cabinet of Ministers arrived on 24.10.2007 with regard to the appointments made to Class II Grade II of the SLPS on supernumerary basis. However, after the arguments were concluded and the judgment was reserved, His Lordship the Chief Justice nominated this bench to hear the two cases which were pending before this Court for determination at that time. At that stage, this Court notified all parties, including the Petitioners, Respondents, and the Intervenient Parties in all three applications i.e., SC FR 460/2017, SC FR 236/2008, SC FR 237/2008, and with the consent of all parties, decided to conclude arguments in SC FR 236/2008 and SC FR 237/2008 before the delivery of the judgment in the instant case. 54th,55th, and 56th Respondents in SC FR 460/2017 were also represented at the argument of those two cases and the parties finally agreed for this Court to deliver a separate judgment in SC FR 460/2017 and to deliver a combined judgment in SC FR 236/2008 and SC FR 237/2008.

The argument in SC FR 236/2008 and SC FR 237/2008 had enlightened this Court, of the background to the Cabinet decision dated 24th October 2007, and the Respondents in those proceedings had also taken up the objection, "that the decision challenged in those applications' was a policy decision of the Cabinet of Ministers and therefore it was not amenable to the Fundamental Rights Jurisdiction of this Court.

The extent to which a Cabinet decision could be challenged before the Supreme Court was discussed in the case of Samastha Lanka Nidahas Grama Niladhari Sangamaya and Others V. D. Dissanayake, Secretary, Public Administration and Ministry of Home Affairs, and Others SC Appeal 158/2010 SC minute 14.06.2013 as follows;

> "The first substantive question that has to be determined on appeal, in this case, is purely one of the vires and arises in the context of certain constitutional provisions which seek to distinguish between two categories of decisions that can be made by the executive arm of Government. The first of these are decisions relating to "the appointment, transfer, dismissal and disciplinary control" of public officers, which was vested in the Public Service Commission by Article 55 (1) of the Constitution of the Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka (hereinafter referred to as "the Constitution of Sri Lanka") as amended by the Seventeenth Amendment thereto, which was in force at the time of the pronouncement of the impugned judgment of the Court of Appeal. The second of these categories are decisions pertaining to policy, which in the context of the public service are exclusively vested in the Cabinet of Ministers by Article 55 (4) of the Constitution of Sri Lanka, as amended by the Seventeenth Amendment."

In the case of Jathika Sevaka Sangamaya V. Sri Lanka Hadabima Authority SC Appeal 15/2013 Supreme Court minute 16.12.2015 this court further observed that;

> "As pointed out earlier under Articles 42 and 55 of the Constitution, the Cabinet of Ministers are performing executive functions under the Constitution and their decisions can be either policy decisions or administrative decisions or both. Accordingly, the decisions of the Cabinet of Ministers other than the policy decisions are amenable to judicial review."

Therefore, it is clear that every decision taken by the Cabinet of Ministers cannot be excluded from it being challenged under Article 126 of the Constitution unless there is proof that the decision challenged before the Court is a Policy decision of the Cabinet of Ministers.

As observed by this Court, the Cabinet decision challenged in SC FR 236/2008 and SC SF 237/2008. i.e., the Cabinet decision dated 24. 10.2007 and the impugned Cabinet decision in the instant case, i.e., the decision dated 23.06.2010 both referred to the appointment of Development Officers to the SLPS Class II Grade II on a supernumerary basis based on a Special Examination held for the selection of those officers. However, we observe a significant difference between the two decisions for the reason that, the 1st Cabinet decision refers to a selection criterion based on the recommendations of the Committee of officials appointed by the Cabinet, to the effect,

a) A Special Examination be held at which their suitability will be tested.
b) The successful candidates be recruited to the SLPS on a supernumerary basis. (emphasis by me) but the impugned cabinet decision recommends absorbing the balance candidates (who were not successful under the above criterion) who sat for the Special Examination, if they have fulfilled the other requirement, to be absorbed to Class II Grade II of SLPS on a supernumerary basis. In other words, it recommends absorbing those who had failed the Special Examination held under the 1st Cabinet decision to SLPS Class II Grade II on the supernumerary basis, whereas the 1st decision was specific to absorbing only those who were successful in the said examination.

The argument of the 54th to the 56th Respondents, that the two Cabinet decisions arrived subsequently, was to resolve the administrative lapses in conducting the Special Examination, is a clear indication that the impugned Cabinet decision was not a policy decision by the Cabinet of Ministers but was an administrative decision by the Cabinet of Ministers.

After analyzing the material placed before this Court in those cases, i.e., SC FR 236/2008 and SC FR 237/2008 this Court has now concluded, that the decision challenged in those cases, i.e., the decision by the Cabinet of Ministers taken on 24.10.2007 was a policy decision and therefore the said decision was not amenable to the Fundamental Rights Jurisdiction of this Court. It was further held in those proceedings that, the Cabinet of Ministers by the Cabinet decision dated 24.10.2007 had resolved and decided the policy on the absorption of Development Officers to Class II Grade II of SLPS.

As already observed in those proceedings the Cabinet of Ministers when reaching the decision to absorb Development Officers to the SLPS Class II Grade II on a Supernumerary basis based on the results of the Special Examination held, had first appointed an officials committee comprising of several very senior public servants and had implemented the recommendations of the said committee, by way of the Cabinet decision dated 24.10.2007. However, the impugned Cabinet decision dated 23.06.2010 which is arbitrary in nature had cut across the policy already adopted by the decision dated 24.10.2007 and approved the appointment of Development Officers who were not successful and could not obtain the pass mark to become eligible to be absorbed to the SLPS Class II Grade II on supernumerary basis.

As further revealed before this Court, the Cabinet of Ministers themselves were not impressed with their own decision and put off the absorption of 146 candidates who were selected after an interview, based on the Cabinet decision dated 23.06.2010 and sought the view of the Minister of Public Administration and Home Affairs to implement the recommendations but no progress made for more than six years.

In the case of Public Services United Nurses Union V. Montague Jayawickrema 1988 1 SLR 229 Wanasundara J had rejected a similar argument when the court observed that the Cabinet Decision to grant an Ad hoc increment to a group of public servants was in violation of the Fundermental Rights guaranteed under article 12(1) of the Constitution.

When considering the material discussed above, it is clear that the impugned Cabinet decision dated 23.06.2010 was an arbitrary decision that was contradictory to its own Cabinet decision dated 24.10.2007 by which the Government Policy on absorption of Development Officers to the SLPS was decided.

In the said circumstances, I am of the view that the Petitioners before this Court were successful in establishing that P-12 and P10B had violated their Fundamental Rights guaranteed under Article 12(1) of the Constitution.

Therefore, I hold that the Fundamental Rights of the Petitioners enshrined under Article 12 (1) have been violated. Accordingly, I quash the Cabinet decision No 10/1317/404/046 dated 23.06.2010 produced marked P-12 and the subsequent decision of the Public Service Commission dated 07.11.2017 marked P-10B.

I make no order with regard to costs.

ARGUED &

DECIDED ON : 09/08/2023

P. PADMAN SURASENA, J:

Court heard the submissions of the learned President's Counsel for the Petitioners as well as the submissions of the learned Deputy Solicitor General appearing for the Respondents and also the submissions of the learned President's Counsel appearing for the Intervenient Respondents and concluded the argument of this case.

According to the Service Minute relevant to the recruitment of Class III officers in Sri Lanka Administrative Service which is published in the Gazette No. 1419/3 dated 14/11/2005 produced marked P 1, the vacancies in Class III officers in Sri Lanka Administrative Service must be filled only through two examinations which are identified in the said Service Minute as the Open Examination and the Limited Competitive Examination. The Petitioners in this application are candidates who had sat for the Limited Competitive Examination-2009[1] held for the recruitment of Class III officers in the Sri Lanka Administrative Service. As the Petitioners in this application have complained only about the filling of vacancies through the said Limited Competitive Examination-2009, this Court need not consider at all about the Open Examination.

[1] The Limited Competitive Examination-2009 was held in 2011.

Limited Competitive Examination-2009.

It is by the notice produced marked P 3 that the applications from the candidates have been called for the Limited Competitive Examination-2009. This notice has been published in the Gazette dated 09/07/2010. It is important to observe that this Gazette has been published by the Secretary, Ministry of Public Administration and Home Affairs pursuant to an order of the Cabinet of Ministers. It has been specifically stated in Clause 02 of the said Gazette P 3, that the number of vacancies to be filled and the date of appointments will be decided by Public Service commission/the Cabinet of Ministers.

According to the Gazette No. 1419/3 dated 14/11/2005 produced marked P 1 which is the Service Minute relevant to the recruitment of Class III officers in Sri Lanka Administrative Service, it has been stated in no uncertain terms, that the number of vacancies for the recruitment of officers to Class III in any given year, should be the number of vacancies existing for that post as at 30th June of the relevant year. As the Petitioners in their argument has urged us to draw a parallel between the Limited Competitive Examination-2009 and the Limited Competitive Examination-2010, let us next state below about the Limited Competitive Examination-2010.

Limited Competitive Examination-2010.

The number of vacancies to be filled through the Limited Competitive Examination-2010[2] has been specified in the Gazette No. 1754 dated 11/04/2012 produced marked P 10. According to the said Gazette (P 10), the Public Service Commission has decided on the number of vacancies to be filled by the Limited Competitive Examination-2010. The Learned President's Counsel appearing for the Petitioners drew our attention to Paragraph 31C of the affidavit of the 03rd Respondent which is to the following effect.

> The Public Service Commission considered in full the details regarding the number of vacancies in the Sri Lanka Administrative Service and concluded that as at 30/06/2010 there were 178 vacancies in Class II and III of the Sri Lanka Administrative Service (which is a combined service). However, on 01/07/2010, 144 officers were to be promoted to Class-I of the Sri Lanka Administrative Service. Such promotions to Class-I, would in turn create 144 vacancies in Class II / III of Sri Lanka Administrative Service. If such vacancies were not filled expeditiously the inconvenience to the Sri Lanka Administrative Service would be dire.

Thus, according to the above paragraph, the Public Service Commission had gone beyond the permitted number of vacancies in Sri Lanka Administrative Service as at 30/06/2010 of the relevant year as per the Service Minute (P 1), when calculating the number of vacancies to be filled by the Limited Competitive Examination-2010.

It is on the above basis, that the Petitioners advanced the argument that similar approach should have been taken to calculate the number of vacancies to be filled from the Limited Competitive Examination-2009.

The Petitioners have submitted documentation to establish that the number of vacancies namely 33, which had been filled from the Limited Competitive Examination-2009 is less than the number of vacancies calculated according to the approach taken for the Limited Competitive Examination-2010. According to the Petitioners, the number of vacancies as per the calculation method adopted in the Limited Competitive Examination-2010, would add 24 more vacancies to the 33 vacancies which had been filled by the Limited Competitive Examination 2009. It is on the above basis, that the Petitioners have stated that they have every reason to believe that an additional number of 24 vacancies should have been filled on the Limited Competitive Examination 2009.[3]

It is in that backdrop that the Petitioners in their Petition have prayed inter-alia for,

A) Leave to Proceed under Article 12 (1) of the Constitution in the first instance;

B) A direction to the Respondents to submit the updated list of vacancies for the years of 2008, 2009, 2010 and 2011 in the Sri Lanka Administrative Service (SLAS) Class III;

C) A direction on the Respondents to submit the marking scheme utilized for the interviews which were held for the Limited Competitive Examination-2009 and the relevant mark sheets of the candidates who were interviewed;

D) An interim order restraining/preventing one or more or all of the Respondents from recruiting officers and or taking any steps to recruit to the Sri Lanka Administrative Service Class III from the Limited Competitive Examination held in 2012 until the final determination of this application;

E) Declare that one or more or all the Respondents and/or the State have infringed the Fundamental Rights guaranteed to the Petitioners under Article 12 (1) of the Constitution;

F) Direct one or more or all the Respondents to appoint the Petitioners to Class III of the Sri Lanka Administrative Service on the basis of the Limited Competitive Examination-2009 held in 2011 and back date the said appointment with effect from 15.12.2010 or such other date as Your Lordships' Court deems lawful;

[3] Paragraph 48 of the Petition.

Out of the six prayers in the Petition, there are only two main final prayers in this application. They are prayers (E) and (F). All the other prayers are interim prayers asked for by the Petitioners to facilitate their further collection of the material and further prosecution of this case. Prayer (E) is a declaration to the effect that the Petitioners fundamental rights guaranteed under Article 12(1) have been violated. The prayer (F) seeks a direction on the Respondents to appoint the Petitioners to Class III of Sri Lanka Administrative Service on the basis of the Limited Competitive Examination-2009 held in 2011 and back date the said appointment with effect from 15.12.2010 or such other date as Court would deem lawful.

We observe that the Cabinet of Ministers as per the Cabinet decision produced marked R 7A had specifically decided the number of vacancies to be filled through the Limited Competitive Examination-2009. That number is 33 vacancies which was dully filled subsequent to the Limited Competitive Examination-2009 held as per the Gazette P 3. The Cabinet decision in R 7A was based on the Cabinet Memorandum produced marked R 7B submitted to the Cabinet of Ministers by the Minister of Public Administration and Home Affairs. Admittedly, the Public Service Commission was not functioning at the time the Cabinet of Ministers had decided on the number of vacancies to be filled through Limited Competitive Examination-2009 as per R 7A & R 7B. Therefore, in any event, it is not the Public Service Commission which had made the decision in R 7A. The said decision was taken by the Cabinet of Ministers. The Public Service Commission also has nothing to do with the Cabinet Memorandum R 7B as well.

The number of vacancies to be filled through Limited Competitive Examination-2010 was decided by the Public Service Commission. That was because by that time the Public Service Commission had been constituted and was functioning. Thus, in effect the number of vacancies to be filled through the Limited Competitive Examination-2009 and the number of vacancies to be filled through the Limited Competitive Examination-2010 have been decided at two different times by two different bodies. i.e., the decision in respect of the Limited Competitive Examination-2009 was made by the Cabinet of Ministers and the decision in respect of the Limited Competitive Examination-2010 was made by the Public Service Commission.

The Petitioners complaint was that the same approach adopted by the Public Service Commission for the Limited Competitive Examination-2010 should have been adopted to decide the number of vacancies to be filled through the Limited Competitive Examination-2009.

Invariably this is in effect an argument that the Cabinet of Ministers also should have followed the same approach taken by the Public Service Commission at the Limited Competitive Examination-2010 when they (the Cabinet of Ministers) decided on the number of vacancies to be filled through the Limited Competitive Examination-2009. (in their decision as per R 7A & R 7B).

Thus, it is clear that the argument advanced by the Petitioners is directed to challenge the decision made by the Cabinet of Ministers as per R 7A which was based on the Cabinet Memorandum R 7B. This is because, if at all, it is the Cabinet of Ministers who should have considered such an approach when they made their decision regarding the number of vacancies to be filled through the Limited Competitive Examination-2009 which is set out in R 7A & R 7B. Moreover, in any case, the Public Service Commisssion was not functioning and was not a party to that decision in R 7A & R 7B. Indeed, the Public Service Commisssion has nothing to do with either the Cabinet Decision R 7A or the Cabinet Memorandum R 7B. It was in that backdrop that the learned Deputy Solicitor General drew the attention of Court to the fact that the Petitioners have failed to name the Cabinet of Ministers as Respondents to this Petition despite the fact that they are necessary parties in this case as it is their decision that is being challenged in this case.

It is true that the Petitioners have not made the Cabinet of Ministers as Respondents to this application. As has already been mentioned above, it is also true that it is the decision of the Cabinet of Ministers that is being challenged in this case. This is because the Petitioners' position is that the decision to fill only 33 vacancies through the Limited Competitive Examination-2009 is unlawful and hence has violated their fundamental right guaranteed under Article 12(1) of the Constitution. Who has made that decision? It is the Cabinet of Ministers. Thus, in our view, there is merit in the above submission made by the learned Deputy Solicitor General. It is clear that the Cabinet of Ministers have not been made parties to this application.

Furthermore, Part IV of the Supreme Court Rules would apply in respect of filing of fundamental rights applications under Article 126 of the Constitution. In terms of Rule 44 (1)(a), such Petition shall contain the circumstances and particulars of the 'executive and administrative action' by which the fundamental rights of the Petitioners have been or are about to be infringed. The facts and circumstances relating to such infringement must be clearly and distinctly set out in their petition.

As per Rule 44(1)(b), such Petitioner must name as Respondents not only the Attorney General but also the person or persons who have infringed their fundamental rights. Although in this case the allegation of the infringement of the Petitioners fundamental rights is by a decision made by the Cabinet of Ministers the Petitioners have failed to name the Cabinet of Ministers as respondents to this application as required under Rule 44(1)(b).

Furthermore, the Petitioners have not prayed that the said Cabinet decisions R 7A be quashed. The Petitioners have merely prayed for a direction on the Respondents to appoint the Petitioners to Class-III of Sri Lanka Administrative Service on the basis of the Limited Competitive Examination in 2009.

The Petitioners also have prayed for an alternative relief to direct the Respondents to fill 24 further vacancies (relying on the method by which the number of vacancies were calculated for the Limited Competitive Examination-2010) to Class-III of Sri Lanka Administrative Service on the basis of the Limited Competitive Examination-2009.

As has been already mentioned above, following the Limited Competitive Examination-2009, the number of vacancies (33) have been filled according to the decision made by the Cabinet of Ministers which is R 7A. The notice for calling for applications for the Limited Competitive Examination-2009 has been published by the Secretary, Ministry of Public Administration and Home Affairs. It is not a notice published by the Public Service Commission. (Public Service Commission was not even functioning at that time). The Cabinet of Ministers had decided to fill number of vacancies (33) on 19-05-2010. We observe that the Secretary, Ministry of Public Administration and Home Affairs had clearly stated at the end of the Gazette (P 3) that he had published this Gazette as per the direction by the Cabinet of Ministers. Thus, it was pursuant to that decision in R 7A, that the Secretary, Ministry of Public Administration and Home Affairs had published the Gazette (P 3) dated 09-07-2010 in order to take steps to call for the applications to fill those 33 vacancies.

Thus, as far as the filing of 33 vacancies from the Limited Competitive Examination-2009 is concerned, it was the Cabinet of Ministers which had decided that only 33 vacancies must be filled by the Limited Competitive Examination-2009. As has already been mentioned above, the Petitioners do not seek to quash the Cabinet decision in R 7A. We observe that if R 7A is quashed the Petitioners have no leg to stand in this instance as none of them can be considered for any appointment as it is on R 7A that they too had applied to sit for the Limited Competitive Examination-2009. In those circumstances, we are unable to see how we can direct the Respondents to appoint another set of 24 candidates who had sat for the same examination in 2009 without quashing the afore-stated restriction in the Cabinet decision R 7A. There is no legal basis to take such a course of action.

The learned President's Counsel for the Petitioners also drew the attention of Court to pages 9A and 10A of the Gazette No. 1419/3 dated 14/11/2005 (P 1) at which it is stated that the Public Service Commission will decide the number of appointments to be made at one occasion. He sought to argue that according to the said clause the Public Service Commission has been empowered to decide the number of appointments to be made at one occasion. However, as pointed out by the learned Deputy Solicitor General, we take the view that this clause is not a reference to any power to decide the number of vacancies to be filled through any examination, but only a reference to the number of persons who may be given appointments after finishing the relevant recruitment process in a given year. Therefore, in our view those clauses would not help the Petitioners.

We also note the paragraph 31D of the affidavit filed by the 3rd Respondent, dated 22-03-2013 which states as follows:

> "as such by letter dated 30-09-2011 as a one-off deviation from the Service Minute, the PSC permitted the said 144 vacancies arising one day after 30-06-2010 to be added to the 178 vacancies existing as at 30-06-2010. Of the 322 such vacancies 258 were permitted to be filled through the open competitive examination."

The same view is also reflected in the document dated 30-09-2011 produced marked R 10 which is the decision made by the Public Service Commission on the number of vacancies to be filled by the Limited Competitive Examination-2010.

R 10 states that the real number of vacancies to be filled through the Limited competitive examination-2010 must be taken as the number of vacancies existed at 30th June. However, it was because 144 Class II officers had been promoted to Class I with effect from 01-07-2010, another 144 vacancies had been added to the number of vacancies existed as at 30th June of that year. That was how the 322 vacancies in Class III was calculated for the Limited competitive examination-2010. The Public Service Commission as per R 10 having considered that aspect had approved to fill 258 vacancies in that year. The Public Service Commission had done this 'as a one-off deviation from the service minute'. This could be seen from the two following paragraphs quoted respectively from R 10 and R 08.

The following paragraph is quoted from the document dated 30-09-2011 produced marked R 10 which is the decision made by the Public Service Commission on the number of vacancies to be filled by the Limited Competitive Examination-2010.

> "03. ශ්‍රී ලංකා පරිපාලන සේවා ව්‍යවස්ථාව අනුව ශ්‍රී.ලං.ප.සේ. III පන්තියට පත්කල යුතු සංඛ්‍යාව වනුයේ එම වර්ෂයේ ජූනි 30 දිනට පවතින පුරප්පාඩු සංඛ්‍යාව වන නමුත් 2010.07.01 දින සිට ශ්‍රී ලංකා පරිපාලන සේවයේ I පන්තියට නිලධාරීන් 144 දෙනෙකු උසස්කර ඇති බැවින් 2010.07.01 දිනට ශ්‍රී.ල.ප.සේ III පන්තියේ සම්පූර්ණ පුරප්පාඩු 322ක් පවතී. ඔබේ සමාංක හා 2011.08.22 දිනැති ලිපියේ දෙවන ඡේදයේ සඳහන් කරුණුද සලකා බැලූ රාජ්‍ය සේවා කොමිෂන් සභාව මේ අවස්ථාවට පමණක් සේවා ව්‍යවස්ථාවේ 3(3) වගන්තියේ විධිවිධාන වලින් පරිබාහිරව උක්ත තරග විභාගයෙන් පුරප්පාඩු 258ක් පිරවීම අනුමත කර ඇති බව එම කොමිෂන් නියෝගය පරිදි කාරුණිකව දන්වමි."

The portions highlighted would clearly show that the decision made by the Public Service Commission on the number of vacancies to be filled by the Limited Competitive Examination-2010 is 'a one-off deviation from the service minute'. That becomes further clear from the following paragraph quoted from the letter dated 22-08-2011 which has been produced marked R 08. Indeed, that is the letter referred to as "...ඔබේ සමාංක හා 2011.08.22 දිනැති ලිපියේ දෙවන ඡේදයේ සඳහන් කරුණුද ..." in the above paragraph quoted from R10. Contents of the second paragraph of R 08 is as follows.

> "එහෙත් රජයේ විශ්‍රාමික නිලධාරීන් නැවත සේවයේ නොයෙදවීමට ප්‍රතිපත්තිමය තීරණයක් ගෙන ඇති බැවින් පළාත් සභාවල පුරප්පාඩු පිරවීමේ දුෂ්කරතාවයන් මතුව ඇත. තවද ශ්‍රී ලං.ප.සේ. I පන්තියට උසස් කරන ලද නිලධාරීන්ද පළාත් සභාවල III පන්තියේ තනතුරු වල තවදුරටත් සේවයේ නියතු අතර III පන්තියේ නිලධාරීන් නොමැති වීම නිසා එම නිලධාරීන් I පන්තියේ තනතුරු වලට අනුයුක්ත කිරීම සඳහා ස්ථාන මාරු කිරීමට නොහැකි තත්වයක් උද්ගතව ඇත."

Thus, it could be seen from the above paragraph in R 08 that there was some exigency prevailed at that time.

The above facts would show that the Cabinet of Ministers by R 7A and R 7B had not deviated from the normal practice of calculating the vacancies according to the Service Minute (P 1). However, R 10 shows that the Public Service Commission had deviated from the accepted general lawful practice of calculating the vacancies as at 30th June of the relevant year. Thus, if at all, if there is a violation of law, it must be in the decision made by the Public Service Commission as per R 10 which has violated the accepted normal lawful practice of calculating the number of vacancies for a given year as per the Service Minute (P 1).

Moreover, that decision has only been made applicable to that year. Whether that is correct or wrong or permissible is another matter. In the instant application the Petitioners had neither challenged nor prayed to quash that decision. To the contrary, they seek to rely on that decision which is not strictly as per the law.

Another important thing we observe in this application is that the Petitioners have failed to rely on a particular legal basis to agitate that the Respondents should have filled 24 more vacancies than the 33 number of vacancies which had lawfully existed as at 30th June of that year. As has been mentioned above, the sole basis upon which the Petitioners appear to agitate for their claim is the fact that the Respondents had adopted a different method outside the method specified by law to calculate the number of vacancies to be filled through the Limited Competitive Examination-2010. The Petitioners have not averred that they had a legitimate expectation. The Petitioners were content by mere stating in paragraph 48 of the Petition that they have every reason to believe that an additional number of 24 vacancies should have been filled on the Limited Competitive Examination 2009.

As the Limited Competitive Examination-2009 had preceded the Limited Competitive Examination-2010, the Petitioners would not have known that the Respondents would calculate the number of vacancies in a different way in the following year. Thus, leave alone legitimate expectation, the Petitioners could not have had any expectation of that nature when they applied and sat for the Limited Competitive Examination-2009. Therefore, it is not open for the Petitioners to advance a case on legitimate expectation (The Petitioners have not averred such ground specifically).

As has already been mentioned above, the method of calculation of the number of vacancies to be filled through the Limited Competitive Examination-2010 is outside the method set out in P 1 and that decision does not conform to the published service minute. If the Petitioners had challenged the calculation of the number of vacancies to be filled through the Limited Competitive Examination-2010 it is then altogether a different scenario. As they had not, we are not called upon to consider the legality of the calculation of the number of vacancies to be filled through the Limited Competitive Examination-2010. Suffice to say that one wrong would not make the second wrong legal. Therefore, in our view, the Petitioners are not entitled to claim that the same deviation should have been done to calculate the number of vacancies to be filled through the Limited Competitive Examination-2009 also. That is to say that the Petitioners wished that the Cabinet of Ministers also should have ignored the provisions in the Service Minute P 1. In effect what the Petitioners are trying to do is not to uphold the law i.e., not to conform to the published service minute, but to blatantly go outside it. Then why should the published service minute there for?

On the other hand, as per paragraph 31D of the affidavit filed by the 3rd Respondent dated 22-03-2013, the decision set out in the letter dated 30-09-2011 produced marked R 10, it is clear that the deviated method of calculation of number of vacancies was limited only to that year 'as a one-off deviation from the service minute' for whatever the exigency that may have prevailed at that time. As has already been mentioned above, we would not engage ourselves to consider the legality of the said 'one-off deviation'.

This court by its order dated 04-10-2012, had granted leave to proceed to the Petitioners in respect of the alleged violations of their Fundamental Rights guaranteed under Article 12(1) of the Constitution. Thus, the question arises as to what law the Respondents had violated when they adopted the published method to calculate the number of vacancies existed as at 30th June of the relevant year. There is absolutely none.

Then, what is the legal basis for this Court to hold that any Respondent in this case has infringed the Petitioners' Fundamental Rights guaranteed under Article 12(1) of the Constitution? We cannot see any such basis whatsoever.

For the forgoing reasons, we hold that the Petitioners have not made out a case of any infringement of any fundamental right guaranteed under Article 12(1) of the Constitution. The Petitioners are therefore not entitled to succeed with this petition. We decide to dismiss this Petition but without costs.

Mr. Manohara De Silva, PC appearing for the Intervenient Respondents, in the course of his submissions drew the attention of Court to the fact that the Intervenient Respondents are a set of candidates who had not sat for the Limited Competitive Examination-2009 which is relevant to the case advanced by the Petitioners, but a set of candidates who had only sat for the Limited Competitive Examination-2010. Mr. Manohara De Silva, PC submitted that despite that fact his clients have also been prevented from being appointed to Class-III of Sri Lanka Administrative Service due to the presence of the interim order which had been granted by Court on 03/07/2013.

Both the learned President's Counsel for the Petitioners as well as the learned President's Counsel for the Intervenient Respondents admitted that they are not rivals to each other.

Petitioners in this application have neither challenged Limited Competitive Examination-2010 nor challenged the calculation of number of vacancies to be filled through that examination (2010).

As pointed out by Mr. Manohara De Silva PC, we observe that the Interim Order which had been granted by Court on 03/07/2013 was to restrain/prevent Respondents from recruiting officers and or taking any steps to recruit to the Sri Lanka Administrative Service Class-III from the Limited Competitive Examination held in 2012 until the final determination of this application. Therefore, out of an abundance of caution, we direct that the interim order granted by this Court on 03/07/2013 must no longer have any effect.

The Petition is dismissed without costs.

Vijith K. Malalgoda PC J

Petitioners to the instant case, two trade unions namely Engineering Diplomates Association and Technical Officers Union both from the National Water Supply and Drainage Board (hereinafter referred to as NWS&DB) along with six employees of NWS&DB who are members of the aforesaid two unions had come before this Court alleging the violation of the Petitioners Fundamental Rights guaranteed under Article 12 (1) of the Constitution by,

a) Failure to implement the Board decision dated 26th May 2011 (P-8), the Board Circular No P2/3/EA(c)/Special dated 27th June 2011 (P-10), and the Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) signed between the NWS&DB and the 1st and the 2nd Petitioners on 8th June 2011 (P-9)
b) Implementing the two decisions of the Department of Management Service (DMS) dated 1st June 2011 (P-11) and 3rd October 2011 (P-14)

This Court on 4th October 2012 granted leave to proceed for the alleged violation under Article 12 (1) of the Constitution.

When this matter was taken up for argument, the Solicitor General who appeared for the Respondents raised a preliminary objection with regard to the maintainability of the instant application on the ground that the 1st and the 2nd Petitioners being trade unions, cannot have maintained the application on behalf of its members in terms of Article 17 read with Article 126 (2) of the Constitution. The Solicitor General heavily relied on the decision in Ceylon Electricity Accountants' Association V. Patali Champika Ranawaka and Others SC FR 18/2015 SC minute dated 11.03.2016 when raising the above objection.

Except for the first -two Petitioners six other Petitioners, also had come before this Court, when filing the instant application, and as revealed before us they are office bearers and members of the 1st and 2nd Petitioner Associations who were said to have affected with the impugned decisions of the 3rd Respondent.

In the case of N.B. Krishantha Kumara and three others V. Dharmasena Dissanayake and Others SC FR 460/2017 SC minute dated 01.03.3023, this Court has considered several decisions of the Supreme Court including, the decisions in Ceylon Electricity Board Accountants Association V. Patali Champika Ranawaka (Supra), Public Services United Nurses Union V. Montague Jayawickrema Minister of Public Administration and Others 1988 1 Sri LR 229, and Environmental Foundation V. Urban Development Authority (2009) 1 Sri LR 123 had now concluded that "it is clear that the locus standi of an unincorporated body that comes before the Supreme Court in an application filed under Article 17 read with Article 126 (2) is now settled and the Court has permitted the members of the unincorporated body to pursue the application in the instances when their rights guaranteed under the Constitution has been violated by the conduct of the Respondent. Therefore, I see no merit in the first objection raised by the Respondents before this Court."

Having considered the objection raised and the decision of this Court referred to above, I reject the objection raised before this Court.

As submitted by the Petitioners the 3rd to the 8th Petitioners are holders of National Level Engineering Diplomas awarded after full-time courses ranging from 3 to 3 ½ years, and such diploma holders were recruited to the NWS&DB to Board Grades 11 or 10 based on their qualifications. As per the Scheme of Recruitment (SOR) which was in operation at that time, officers who were recruited to Board Grades 11 and 10 were promoted to Board Grades 9 and 8. Once an officer reaches Board Grade 8 and obtained 3 years of experience as an Engineering Assistant CL-l Board Grade 8, he will become eligible to be promoted to the position of Engineer Board Grade 7. However, only 25% of the total available number of cadre positions of Engineer CL-l, CL-ll, and Senior Engineer were available for the promotion of Engineering Assistants CL-I Serving in Board Grade 8.

It was also the position of the Petitioners before this Court that, a total of 12 years, 17 years, or 21 years were required based on the Education Qualifications and the Board Grade an Officer was recruited, in order for the officers to become eligible to be promoted to the position of Engineer Board Grade 7.

Those who were not successful in entering Board Grade 7 as an Engineer Board Grade 7 due to the above restriction, the Officer will be stagnated as an Engineering Assistant (Special Grade) Board Grade 7 until their retirement from the service.

However, those who were recruited to Board Grade 11 as Quantity Surveyors and Draughtsmen with similar qualifications were entitled to be promoted beyond Board Grade 7 up to Board Grade 3, 4, or 5 during their carrier. In those circumstances, it was submitted that those who do not fall within the 25% slot as Engineer Class II in Board Grade 7 have a long period of stagnation without any prospect of promotion beyond Board Grade 7.

In those circumstances several discussions were held between the management of the NWS&DB and the 1st and the 2nd Petitioners and an agreement was reached between the two parties and a MOU was signed. The progress made during the discussion and thereafter has been summarized as follows;

a) It was decided at the meeting held on 2nd December 2010 to take steps to enable the Engineering Assistant (Special Grade) Board Grade 7 to arrive at Board Grades 5 and 6.
b) A Board paper titled “Promotional path for Engineering Assistants-Special Class up to Board Grade 6 and 5” dated 20th January 2011 was submitted to the NWS&DB Board. (P-6) In the said Board paper it was recommended that; “to create Board Grade 6 and 5 in the SOR of Engineering Assistants subject to the conditions contained in the Board paper.”
c) The said recommendation was approved by the Ministry of Water Supply and Drainage and by letter dated 27th April 2011 Secretary to the Ministry advised the 2nd Respondent, of the manner in which the recommendation is to be implemented (P-7)
d) Special instructions were given in the said letter, i. To promote the Engineering Assistants- Special Grade, who had completed 6-10 years to Board Grade 6

ii. To promote the Engineering Assistants- Special Grade, who had completed more than 10 years to a Grade above Board Grade 6
iii. The promotions should be personal to the said officers
iv. To propose a suitable designation to those who were promoted under these instructions

e) By Board decision dated 26th May 2011 the said instructions were adopted by the NWS&DB Board of Directors.

f) Based on the above decisions MOU was signed between the 1st and 2nd Petitioners and the 2nd Respondent to give effect to the said decisions and it was further agreed between the parties that the agreement is only applicable to 362 officers only.

g) Accordingly, by P-10 NWS&DB had called for applications by advertisement dated 27.06.2011 to give effect to the above agreement from those who were eligible i.e., Engineering Assistant – Special Grade completed more than 10 years in Board Grade 7 for the post of Assistant Engineer (this designation was decided by NWS&DB under (d)-IV above) Board Grade 6 and to place them at a salary scale of MM I-I and Engineering Assistant-Special Grade who has worked more than 6 years and less than 10 years in Board Grade 7 for the post of Assistant Engineer Board Grade 6 and to place them at a salary scale of JM l-2.

Whilst the above process was in progress Department of Management Service had forwarded new cadre recommendations to the NWS&DB by letter dated 1st June 2011. (P-11) As submitted by the Petitioners before this Court, in the said cadre recommendation a post was created as Assistant Engineer for those who belong to the cadre of Engineering Assistant-Special Board Grade 7 but placed them in the salary scale of JM l-2 which is contrary to the MOU already signed between the 1st and 2nd Petitioners and the 2nd Respondent. It was further observed that P-11 had not provided any promotional path for Engineering Assistants in Board Grade 7, those who do not fall within the 25% slot as the Engineer category, but provided positions in the MM category for Quantity Surveyors and Surveyors who were also recruited to Board Grade 10 and 11 along with the Petitioners.

During the same time, the Engineers' Union of the NWS&DB too had objected to P-10 specifically for the positions provided in Board Grade 5 and 6 for the Petitioners and naming those positions as Assistant Engineers instead of the remaining designation Engineering Assistants.

Since there were threats of Trade Union action by both parties, i.e., by the 1st, 2nd Petitioners and Engineers' Union, the 2nd Respondent decided to refer the matter to the Department of Management Services for their recommendation but continued in holding the interviews for Engineering Assistants Board Grade 7as per the applications called by P-10.

In the said circumstances, it was alleged that all attempts made to resolve the issues faced by the Engineering Assistants mainly with regard to their promotions beyond Board Grade 7, by

a) Holding discussions with the Management of the NWS&DB and signing an MOU between the two parties
b) The relevant Ministry and NWS&DB agreeing to grant promotions to the Engineering Assistants belonging to Board Grade 7 special to Board Grade 6 and above based on their experience
c) Calling for applications from the qualified Engineering Assistants to implement the MOU signed between the two parties, in order to resolve the stagnation of the Engineering Assistant failed, but holding the interviews without any assurance and/or without any final decision of resolving the main grievance i.e., granting promotions beyond Board Grade 7, was in violation of the Fundamental Rights of the Petitioners to equal protection of Law guaranteed under article 12 (1) of the Constitution.

In addition to the parties who were made as the Respondents to the instant application, including the Secretary to the Ministry of Water Supply and Drainage, the Director General of the Department of Management Service, and the Secretary of the National Salaries and Cadre Commission, Engineers' Union of the NWS&DB came forward to resist the application filed by the Petitioners before this Court. The Engineers' Union of NWS&DB filed papers before this Court and sought permission from this Court for intervention in the instant application. The application for intervention was also supported before this Court on 4th October 2012 when the main matter was supported for leave to proceed, and this Court permitted intervention by the Engineers' Union of NWS&DB to the instant case.

On behalf of the 2nd Respondent, the General Manager of the NWS&DB and the 3rd Respondent had filed affidavits explaining how the decisions that were challenged before this Court were arrived by the Respondents. In this regard, the position taken by the 3rd Respondent before this Court is very much material since the decisions that were challenged by the Petitioners were decisions made by the 3rd Respondent. In his affidavit filed before this Court the 3rd Respondent had submitted that;

a) Pursuant to the Budget Speech 2006, the Government made a policy decision to implement a new salary structure for the Public Service, and the Public Administration Circular 6 of 2006 dated 25.04.2006 was issued containing the restructured salaries of the Public Service.
b) With the introduction of the new salary structures, the Public Service needs to be re-structured to fit into the salary scales proposed by the circular.
c) With the above proposal, it was also decided to revise the salaries of employees in public Corporations, Statutory Bodies, and Government own business undertakings except those whose salaries were determined by collective agreements
d) In order to implement the above proposal and to restructure the organizational structures to implement the new salary structures, Management Service Circular 30 of 2006 dated 22.09.2006 was issued by the Department of Management Service (3R2)
e) Consequent to the issue of the said circular, discussions were held with the institutions referred to in paragraph 'c' above including the NWS&DB with the participation of the officials of the Ministry of Finance, Ministry of National Water Supply and Drainage and National Salaries and Cadre Commission
f) As a result of the said discussions regarding the NWS&DB it was agreed to implement the common management structure proposed in the said circular and to abolish the Board Grade system followed by NWS&DB
g) The said decision was communicated to the 2nd Respondent by letter dates 23.05.2011 (3R5 and 3R5A) and the cadre based on the above structure relevant to NWS&DB was informed to the 2nd Respondent and the relevant Ministry by letter dated 01.06.2011 (3R6)
h) As per the said decision the Cadre for Engineering Assistant Class III, II and I was 700 under MA 2-2 category and the Engineering Assistant (Special Grade) Board Grade 7 which existed in the 2nd Respondent was re-designated as Assistant Engineer and a cadre of 390 was approved under JM I-2 category.

As submitted by the 3rd Respondent, the said decision which was communicated to the 2nd Respondent and the Ministry of Water Supply and Drainage was in terms of the policy of the Government embodied in Public Administration Circular 6/2006 and Management Service Circular 30 of 2006 and the 3rd Respondent was unaware of any agreement reached between the 2nd Respondent and the Petitioners to the instant application outside the provisions of the circular. It was the position taken up by the 3rd Respondent before this Court that any agreement reached contrary to the provisions of the circulars referred to above is in violation of the policy of the Government.

On behalf of the 2nd Respondent Board, the General Manager of NWS&DB Liyanage Lal Premanath had submitted an affidavit before this Court. According to the said affidavit, on behalf of the 2nd Respondent, it was submitted that, a) At the time the Management Service Circular 30 of 2006 was issued, the Engineering Assistant (Special Grade) Board Grade 7 were eligible to apply for 25% of the vacancies in the cadre of Engineers provided they possess the requisite experience. Since the cadre of Engineers at NWS&DB was 418 at that time, 105 posts were available for Engineering Assistants.

b) Similar to Quantity Surveyors and Draughtsmen who were provided with a promotional path up to Board Grade 5, the Engineering Assistants too had the opportunity to secure promotions to Board Grade 6, 5, 4, and beyond, depending on the availability of vacancies in the cadre of Engineers, Chief Engineer, and Senior Manager posts such as Deputy and Additional General Manager subject to the above restriction. At the time the affidavit was tendered to Court, there were 03 Additional General Managers, 02 Deputy General Managers, and 06 Chief Engineers who were initially recruited as Engineering Assistants to the NWS&DB.
c) However, the 2nd Respondent was concerned with the grievance complained on behalf of the Engineering Assistants by their Trade Unions, and it was agreed after obtaining necessary approvals from the Ministry of Water Supply and Drainage and the Board of the NWS&DB to promote certain Engineering Assistants in the Special Grade as being personal to them in the following manner,

> Engineering Assistants in Special Grade with 6 to 10 years of service are to be promoted to Board Grade 6 and placed on the initial of the applicable salary scale and,

Engineering Assistants with over 10 years of service are to be promoted to Board Grade 6 and to be placed on a higher step of the applicable salary scale.

d) Steps were taken to implement the above decisions by advertising the above positions but the interviews to select the eligible candidates could not be held due to;
    i. Engineers' Union of the NWS&DB raised objections threatening Trade Union action
    ii. A communication received from the Department of Management Service approving the New Cadre to NWS&DB implementing the Management Service Circular 30 of 2006.
e) Subsequent to the issue of Management Service Circular 30 of 2006, the Department of Management Service wrote to the 1st and 2nd Respondents explaining the manner in which the above circular should be implemented at the 2nd Respondent Board.
f) Several discussions were held between the stakeholders to implement the above Circular with the NWS&DB and the 2nd Respondent Board were granted a salary increase of 22% with effect from 01.01.2010, and a series of discussions were held thereafter to restructure the posts in keeping with the above Circular.
g) Whilst the outcome of the said discussions was pending the 2nd Respondent engaged in some discussions with the 1st and the 2nd Petitioners as referred to in subparagraph (c) above, since the said unions complained of the grievance faced by its membership due to stagnation at Board Grade 7.

As revealed from the material submitted before this Court by the 2nd and the 3rd Respondents it is evident that the Engineers Union of the NWS&DB had objected to,

a) Holding interviews as per the MOU signed between the 2nd Respondent and the two Petitioners to recruit Assistant Engineers from Engineering Assistant (Special Grade) Board Grade 7
b) Re-designating Engineering Assistant (Special Grade) Board Grade 7 as Assistant Engineers under JM I-2 category as per the decision of the Department of Management Service which was communicated to the 2nd Respondent by letter dated 23.05.2011

As already referred to in this judgment, the Engineers' Unit of the NWS&DB had sought permission to intervene in the instant application and the said application too was supported before this Court on the same day, the main matter was supported for leave to proceed. This Court granted permission for the Engineers' Union to intervene in these proceedings. As revealed from the material placed before this Court, the said Union had several reasons to object to the decisions of the 2nd and 3rd Respondents, with regard to the promotions proposed to the Engineering Assistants (Special Grade) Board Grade 7.

As submitted by the party sought permission to intervene, they had reasons to believe that;

a) The promotions agreed by the MOU signed between the 2nd Respondent and the first- two Petitioners before this Court are contrary to the approved scheme of Recruitment of the NWS&DB.
b) By promoting the Engineering Assistant to Board Grades 6 and 5 as agreed, will create an imbalance in the management structure since that will provide an additional path for the Engineering Assistant to get into the Higher Management of the NWS&DB.
c) The creation of a cadre designated as Assistant Engineer for Engineering Assistants (Special Grade) Board Grade 7 is in violation of all accepted norms and principles in stating professional nomenclatures.

During the Arguments before this Court, on behalf of the Engineers of the NWS&DB, it was further submitted that the cadre for Engineers in the NWS&DB is only around 400 and the said 400 posts are divided as per their qualifications as follows;

i. Holders of BSC Degree from a recognized University (240 at the time the papers were filed before the Court)
ii. Those who joined NWS&DB with Diplomas and completed the Examination conducted by the Institute of Engineers of Sri Lanka (IESL) or equivalent (60 at the time the papers were filed before the Court)
iii. 25% allocated for Engineering Assistants (Special Grade) Board Grade 7 (100-at the time the papers were filed before Court)

In those circumstances, it was submitted that grave prejudice would cause to the BSC Engineers of the NWS&DB by creating an additional path for the Engineering Assistants outside the approved scheme of recruitment of the NWS&DB.

At the time the Petitioners, including 5 Engineering Assistants of the NWS&DB complained about the violation of their Fundamental Rights guaranteed under Article 12 (1), the grievance complained by them was reflected in the matters that have already been discussed by me in this Judgment.

However, when the matter was taken up for argument, on behalf of the Respondents and the Intervenient Petitioner- Respondents, it was submitted that the status quo is much different from what it was, and submitted that the grievance complained before this Court no longer exists, and that has now been resolved.

Even though the President's Counsel who represented the Petitioners before us does not fully agree with the above submission, it is my duty to consider the above position to come to a correct finding in this case.

The 3rd Respondent had explained the events that took place after communicating the decision of the Department of Management Service by letter dated 23.05.2011 and 01.06.2011, in the objections that were filed on 11th April 2012. As already referred to in this Judgment, the Engineers strongly objected to renaming the designation of Senior Engineering Assistant as Assistant Engineers and providing opportunities for promotions outside the scheme of recruitment to the relevant cadre. The Engineering Assistants (Special Grade) Board Grade 7 were also unhappy with the decision to implement the decision of the Department of Management Service ignoring the MOU already signed to provide promotions beyond Board Grade 7.

It is at this stage the 3rd to the 7th Petitioners and the Unions; the 1st and the 2nd Petitioners came before this Court seeking redress for their grievances. However, it appears that the parties to the instant case had continued with discussion in order to resolve the grievance complained by the Petitioners. It is important to note at this stage that the 2nd Respondent too had at one stage accepted that the Engineering Assistants (Special Grade) Board Grade 7 who were not successful to come within the 25% of the Engineers cadre had to stagnate in the same position until their retirement and therefore agreed to resolve the issue by signing a MOU between the parties.

During the said discussions with all the stakeholders, parties explored the possibility of renaming the designation of the post of "Assistant Engineer" which was proposed by the letter dated 01.06.2011 by the Department of Management Service, and also to resolve the issues of stagnation by placing them beyond the J.M Category which was the basis for the proposed management structure by the Department of Management Service under Management Circular 30 of 2006, since the Board Grade structure was repealed by the Management structure proposed by the Department of Management Service (P-11).

Even though the parties before Court had not fully agreed, two proposals were made during those discussions, for the remaining cadre of Engineering Assistants (Special Grade)

a) To create the posts of work superintendent with a cadre of 28 (MM I-I salary code), Senior Engineering Assistant with a cadre of 362 (JM I-2 salary code (3R7))
b) To create the posts as below instead of the posts referred to in (a) above
   Senior Engineering Assistant (Supra) MM I-I
   Senior Engineering Assistant JM I-2 with proposal (b) above it was further agreed to absorb Engineering Assistants (Special Grade) who have over10 years of service to the post of "Senior Engineering Assistant (Supra)" in the employee category of "Middle Manager" and those with 6 to 10 years of service to the post of "Senior Engineering Assistant" in the employee category of "Junior Manager" and to make those appointments personal to those officers.

However, it is evident from the additional papers filed before this Court on behalf of the 2nd and 3rd Respondent with permission of the Court after concluding the oral submissions made on behalf of the Respondents including the Intervenient Petitioner Respondent, that the second proposal referred to above had been given effect personal to those who were aggrieved from the SOR which was in operation prior to the SOR introduced in 2011, and those officers have been granted promotions even beyond the grades to which they were appointed with the implementation of the New SOR based on the Management Circular 30 of 2006.

As per the papers filed before this Court, out of the six Petitioners before this Court (Petitioners 3-8) five Petitioners were promoted to the post of "Senior Engineering Assistant (Supra)" Grade and the other was holding the position as "Senior Engineering Assistant" at the time he was retired in the year 2017. Among the five Petitioners who were promoted to "Senior Engineering Assistant (Supra)," three of them were promoted to Engineers in the NWS&DB with effect from March 2018.

Out of the Balance 309 Engineering Assistants (Special Grade) Board Grade 7, who were the subject matters in the MOU signed between the 1st and 2nd Petitioners and the 2nd Respondent, all officers were promoted as "Senior Engineering Assistants (Supra)" Grade and out of them 60 were promoted as Engineers. Out of the 309 officers, 80 officers are still in the Service holding the position either as Senior Engineering Assistant (Supra) Grade or as Engineers, and the Balance had retired from the service as Senior Engineering Assistants (Supra).

At the time the Petitioners came before the Supreme Court, the Petitioners whilst challenging the Circular dated 01.06.2011 (P-11) requested to implement the agreement reached in the MOU (P-9). As observed by this Court the MOU too had categorized the Engineering Assistants (Special Grade) Board Grade 7, into two groups when implementing the agreement. i.e., those who serviced over 10 years and served between 6-10 years.

Even though there is no reference to these groups in P-11, the subsequent discussions had granted relief to the same two groups and as revealed from the documentation filed after arguments, all officers similarly circumstanced with the Petitioners were treated equally and promoted to Higher grades, even as Engineers under the New SOR.

On behalf of the petitioners, an affidavit from the 3rd and the 4th Petitioners was tendered along with a motion dated 18.05.2023, even after the preliminary draft judgment was circulated. However, it is observed that the grievance complained in the said affidavit must be considered within the remaining cadre of the NWS&DB, and as already observed in this judgment the matters had been resolved within the remaining framework.

This Court on numerous occasions had declared the powers vested with the Cabinet of Ministers in deciding the Policy, and Article 55 (4) of the Constitution (the text that was operative in the year 2000) and Article 55 (1) of the Constitution (the text that was operative after 9th September 2010) granted the Cabinet of Ministers the following powers;

55 (4) subject to the provisions of the Constitution, the Cabinet of Ministers shall provide for and determine all matters of policy relating to public officers.

55 (1) The Cabinet of Ministers shall provide for and determine all matters of policy relating to public officers, including policies relating to appointments, promotions, transfers, disciplinary control, and dismissal

In the case of Samastha Lanka Nidahas Grama Niladhari Sangamaya and Others V. D. Dissanayake, Secretary, Public Administration and Ministry of Home Affairs, and Others SC Appeal 158/2010 SC minute 14.06.2013 this court observed;

> "The first substantive question that has to be determined on appeal, in this case, is purely one of the vires and arises in the context of certain constitutional provisions which seek to distinguish between two categories of decisions that can be made by the executive arm of Government. The first of these are decisions relating to "the appointment, transfer, dismissal, and disciplinary control" of public officers, which was vested in the Public Service Commission by Article 55 (1) of the Constitution of the Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka (hereinafter referred to as "the Constitution of Sri Lanka") as amended by the Seventeenth Amendment thereto, which was in force at the time of the pronouncement of the impugned judgment of the Court of Appeal the second of these categories are decisions pertaining to policy, which in the context of the public service are exclusively vested in the Cabinet of Ministers by Article 55 (4) of the Constitution of Sri Lanka, as amended by the Seventeenth Amendment."

As already revealed before us the two Circulars one with regard to the Public Service (Public Administration Circular No 6 of 2006) and the other with regard to the Public Corporations, Statutory Bodies, and state-owned Enterprises (Management Circular 30 of 2006) were issued to implement the Government Policy declared in the Budget Speech 2006 to introduce a new salary and service structures in the two sectors referred to above. The proposed structure to the Public Corporations, statutory bodies, and state-owned Enterprises was to implement irrespective of the structures in place at that time, and as a result, all Government Corporations, Statutory Bodies, and State-Owned Enterprises will have similar service and salary structures within those institutions. In the circumstances the Board Grade Promotions, that were identified in the SOR of the NWS&DB will have no force and any decision to implement the said scheme will be in violation of the State Policy.

The new structure had provided a scheme, based on the management responsibilities instead of any other categorization identified by the SOR of the respective Agency including the Board Grade system at the NWS&DB.

The MOU signed between the parties too had provided a scheme to categorize Engineering Assistants into two groups based on their service and to treat them separately under the remaining Board Grade system. As already discussed in this Judgment the same categorization has been applied under the new system and placed them in JM I-2 and MM I-I categories. In this regard the Petitioners have failed to establish that they were differently treated as against the MOU signed between the two parties when implementing the State Policy declared in Management Circular 30 of 2006.

Even though the Petitioners were reluctant to admit the fact that the grievances they complained about were resolved by the New SOR with the amendments introduced after discussions with the stakeholders, the fact that 3rd to the 8th Petitioners as well as all other officers, similarly circumstanced at NWS&DB were granted promotions by the time the matter is taken up for argument is the best evidence that reveals the outcome of the document challenged before this Court.

Even though the amendments proposed had not specifically gone into the "stagnation" as complained by the Petitioners, the implementation of the proposals had given ample opportunities for the Engineering Assistants to be promoted as Engineers within the SOR introduced with the implementation of the state policy.

In these circumstances, we hold that the Petitioners have failed to establish the violation of their Fundamental Rights guaranteed under Article 12 (1) of the Constitution as alleged in their Petition filed before the Court.

The Application is therefore Dismissed.

We make no order with regard to costs.

BEFORE : B. P. ALUWIHARE, PC, J
S. THURAIRAJA, PC, J AND
JANAK DE SILVA, J

COUNSEL : Saliya Peris PC with Thanuka Nandasiri for the Petitioner
M. Gopallewa SDSG for 1st-10th Respondents

WRITTEN SUBMISSIONS : Petitioner on 1st April 2021
Respondent on 27th April 2021

ARGUED ON : 18th November 2022

DECIDED ON : 31st October 2023

S. THURAIRAJA, PC, J.

The Petitioner namely, Captain Ambawalage Dammika Senaratne De Silva (hereinafter referred to as "the Petitioner") served in the rank of Captain in the Sri Lanka Army attached to the 20th Sri Lanka Light Infantry. The Petitioner has made the instant application seeking relief in respect of the infringement of his Fundamental Rights guaranteed under and in terms of the Constitution, in the manner hereinafter more fully set out, against the Respondents.

The 1st Respondent is the Commander of the Sri Lanka Army. The 2nd Respondent was the Commanding Officer of the Alampil Army Camp (Nandikadal) where the Petitioner served at the time the alleged incident took place. The 3rd Respondent is the Centre Commandant of the Regimental Headquarters of the 20th Sri Lanka Light Infantry. The 4th Respondent is the Chairman of the Court of Inquiry held against the Petitioner as described below, while the 5th and 6th Respondents are members of the said Court of Inquiry. The 7th Respondent is the officer who conducted the investigation against the Petitioner at the Sri Lanka Military Police Headquarters. The 8th Respondent is the Secretary to the Ministry of Defence and the 9th Respondent is the Secretary to His Excellency the President. The 10th Respondent is the Hon. Attorney General who has been made a party to this application in compliance with the law.

The Petitioners instituted this action under Article 126 of the Constitution, through Petition dated 14th September 2012 against the 1st-10th Respondents claiming that the Fundamental Rights of the Petitioner as guaranteed by Articles 12(1), 13(3), 13(5) and 14(1)(g) of the Constitution have been infringed by the Respondents and further requesting to quash the recommendation of the 1st Respondent to withdraw the commission of the Petitioner from the rank of Captain of the Sri Lanka Army.

This matter was supported before this court on 24th October 2012 and the Court was inclined to grant Leave to Proceed for the alleged violations of Article 12(1) and Article 14(1)(g) of the Constitution.

I find it pertinent to refer to the factual matrix of this application as enumerated by the parties in order to ascertain whether the Petitioner's Fundamental Rights guaranteed under Article 12(1) and 14(1)(g) of the Constitution have been violated by the 1st-10th Respondents. However, as there are substantial disparities between the narration of facts provided by the parties, I find it necessary to narrate both positions.

The Facts as recounted by the Petitioner

The Petitioner asserts that on 5th December 1990, he joined the Sri Lanka Army as a solider. As claimed by the Petitioner, due to his exemplary performance in the said operations he was enlisted as a Cadet Officer and upon completion of a training course at the Diyathalawa Army Camp he was commissioned in the rank of 2nd Lieutenant on 13th October 1997 and was attached to the 20th Sri Lanka Infantry of the Sri Lanka Army. Following this, the Petitioner was promoted as a Lieutenant on 13th April 2001 and as a Captain on 2nd August 2004 and has served in several operational areas of the country continuously for a period of 19 years, participating in various operations.

As per the Petitioner, in January 2009 he was appointed as the Officer Commanding of one of the companies of the 20th Light Infantry, namely Alfa Company, while the 2nd Respondent was the Commanding Officer. It was the position of the Petitioner that during his period of service in the said Company, differences of opinion arose between the Petitioner and the 2nd Respondent with regard to military strategies adopted by the 2nd Respondent. This had resulted in heavy losses both to soldiers and material and as a result the 2nd Respondent had harboured an animosity towards the Petitioner.

The Petitioner states that while the Petitioner was serving as the Officer Commanding of the aforesaid Company of the 20th Light Infantry, on 22nd April 2009, a soldier named Saman Kumara died from gunshot injuries at the Nandikadal Army Camp area which gunshots were fired from the said Saman Kumara's own weapon. Further the Petitioner states that at the time of his death, said Saman Kumara was serving in a different company to that of the company where the Petitioner was the Officer Commanding.

As claimed by the Petitioner, with the report of the said gunshots, on the directions of the 2nd Respondent and one Major Weerakoon, the Petitioner searched the area and discovered Saman Kumara (hereinafter sometimes referred to as "the deceased") fallen in the jungle with gunshot injuries 300 meters away from where the Petitioner stood. Following which, the Petitioner had dispatched Saman Kumara to the Camp upon instructions, and after informing, the 2nd Respondent. Thereafter, the Petitioner came to know that Saman Kumara had succumbed to his injuries.

It is the position of the Petitioner that on or about 31st May 2009, while he was serving in the aforementioned Company, the Petitioner was directed by the 2nd Respondent to take the body of a deceased soldier named Silva to the Vavuniya Army Camp. As soon as the Petitioner had left the Army Camp the 2nd Respondent had relieved him of his duties as the Commanding Officer of the Alfa Company and replaced him with a much junior officer without a valid reason.

According to the Petitioner, his belongings had been removed and kept under the custody of the 2nd Respondent. Upon the request of the Petitioner, due to the adverse environment created at the army camp, he was permitted to report back to the Regimental Headquarters, Panagoda.

According to the Petitioner, on 9th June 2009 he had come home and had reported back to the Regimental Headquarters on 10th June 2009. However, on or about 12th June 2009, the Petitioner returned home on medical advice to rest, as he was suffering from an eye infection and soon after reported back to Headquarters on the 14th June 2009. Subsequently, the Petitioner was informed by the then Regimental Centre Commandant that there was an anonymous petition made against him and he was detained in a cell in the said Camp.

As asserted by the Petitioner, on 16th June 2009, the Petitioner was brought to the Sri Lanka Military Police Headquarters on the allegation that he had committed the murder of aforementioned Soldier Saman Kumara. Moreover, on 17th June 2009 around 9.45 am, the Petitioner was handed over to the 7th Respondent who carried out the investigation against the Petitioner. The Petitioner further contends that, the officers attached to the Sri Lanka Military Police, including the 7th Respondent threatened to shoot the Petitioner if he fails to tell the truth. Additionally, the Petitioner alleges that the 7th Respondent had brutally assaulted and threatened to kill him in an attempt to obtain a forcible confession to the effect that the Petitioner had shot the said Saman Kumara.

Consequent to the above, the Petitioner was kept under the custody of the 7th Respondent and was denied any visits by his family members despite their continuous requests. As a result, the Petitioner's mother wrote a complaint (marked P1) to His Excellency the President regarding the manner in which the purported investigation was being conducted against the Petitioner. Additionally, she lodged a complaint to the Human Rights Commission of Sri Lanka bearing no. HRC 2855/09 dated 3rd July 2009 (marked P2a) regarding the same. Subsequently, on 7th July 2009, the officers attached to the Human Rights Commission telephoned the 7th Respondent and requested him to allow the family members of the Petitioner to visit him, to which the 7th Respondent agreed to comply with. Accordingly, the Petitioner was allowed to meet his family for the first time on 7th July 2009 after 23 days of arrest.

The Petitioner states that, his aide Dilum Sanjeewa, had also been detained by the Military Police and had been forced to give a statement to the effect that he had shot the deceased on the direction of the Petitioner. Petitioner contends that this statement was given by the said Dilum Sanjeewa under the influence of the officers attached to the Military Police, the 2nd Respondent and the 7th Respondent.

The Petitioner states that the investigation conducted against him was illegal as he was subjected to torture, cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment by the Military Police. Therefore, the Petitioner's Attorney at Law Ms. Niluka Dissanayake had filed a Fundamental Rights Application bearing No. SC/FR/556/2009 on behalf of the Petitioner, against the 7th Respondent, 2nd Respondent, Commanding Officer of the Sri Lanka Military Police and several other responsible officers on the alleged infringement of the violation of the Fundamental Rights of the Petitioner as guaranteed by Articles 11, 12(1), 13(1), 13(2), and 13(3) of the Constitution.

As enumerated by the Petitioner, on 6th August 2009 around 10.30 am, he was handed over to the Criminal Investigation Department with the aforesaid Dilum Sanjeewa. Following which, on 7th August 2009, the Petitioner was produced before the learned Magistrate of Aunradhapura under B report bearing No. B/1228/09 on the allegation that, the Petitioner and the said Dilum Sanjeewa committed the murder of the deceased, an offence punishable under Section 296 of the Penal Code. Eventually, the Petitioner was remanded.

Consequently, on 18th January 2010, the Petitioner's mother filed a Bail Application bearing No. HCBA 125/2009 on behalf of the Petitioner in the Provincial High Court of Anuradhapura. On consideration of the said bail application, the learned High Court Judge had released the Petitioner on bail. Upon being enlarged on bail, the Petitioner had reported back to the Regimental Headquarters. Accordingly, on 18th March 2010, the Petitioner had received a message (marked P14) that he was interdicted with effect from 18th March 2010.

As per the Petitioner, while he was detained in the Sri Lanka Military Police Headquarters, he was questioned by the officers on allegations of sexual assault against the deceased in reference to a letter addressed to the 2nd Respondent by the deceased (marked P15), which alleged that the Petitioner had sexually abused the deceased on 15th April 2009. As revealed from investigations, the deceased had been subject to sexual harassment by the Petitioner on 14th April 2009. Accordingly, the said deceased had given a statement to the 2nd Respondent confirming the said sexual harassment, following which the 2nd Respondent had reprimanded the Petitioner on 18th April 2009. However, it is the position of the Petitioner that the said allegation was a fabrication of the 2nd Respondent or was obtained under duress.

Challenging the purported statement of the 2nd Respondent, the Petitioner asserts that he was in the Anuradhapura Military Hospital from 17th to 18th April 2009 in order to obtain his medical reports (marked P16) for his next promotion to the rank of Major. Therefore, he had reported back to the Camp only on the 19th April 2009. The Petitioner further states that if such a complaint had been made against him on an allegation of sexual harassment, the 2nd Respondent should have taken steps according to the Military Law rather than merely issuing a warning. As such the Petitioner questions the credibility of the 2nd Respondent's statement.

The Petitioner states that the non-summary inquiry in respect of the alleged murder of the said Saman Kumara commenced in the case bearing No. 29204. However, on 24th April 2012, the said Dilum Sanjeewa whom the prosecution claimed to be the assassin of the deceased, was discharged from the proceedings on the instructions of the Hon. Attorney General. While the Petitioner was held in custody of the Military Police, he became aware that there was a Court of Inquiry held against him and his aide Dilum Sanjeewa. Dilum Sanjeewa had informed the Petitioner that he gave a statement at the said inquiry, however, the Petitioner is of the position that no such statement was recorded nor was he summoned before a Court of Inquiry. Therefore, the Petitioner had no knowledge of the said Court of Inquiry held whilst they were in custody.

Subsequently, the Petitioner discovered that the 1st Respondent had convened a Court of Inquiry and the 4th Respondent was appointed the Chairman, whilst the 5th and 6th Respondents were appointed members to the said Court of Inquiry. Accordingly, by letter dated 18th August 2011 (marked P18), the Petitioner was informed by the Centre Commandant of the 20th Light Infantry, that the said Court of Inquiry was scheduled to be held on the 8th September 2011 and the Petitioner was instructed to be present.

At the said Court of Inquiry, the Petitioner had given a written statement (marked P-18a). Furthermore, as per the Petitioner, the statement given by his aide Dilum Sanjeewa (marked P-18b) was in total contradiction with his previous statements given to the Court of Inquiry and/or the Military Police and/or the Criminal Investigation Department.

Moreover, the Petitioner claims that he was not given an opportunity to cross examine any of the witnesses and his signature was never obtained to the proceedings of the Court of Inquiry except to the statement made by him. Additionally, the eye witnesses to the alleged incident categorically stated that the Petitioner had no involvement to the said incident. The Petitioner further states that the persons who have been named as witnesses had testified before the Court of Inquiry in his absence and therefore, the 4th, 5th and 6th Respondents have acted contrary to the army Regulations in relation to Court of Inquiry and claims that it is a violation of the principles of Natural Justice.

Upon the conclusion of the said Court of Inquiry, its members had submitted their findings to the 1st Respondent for his determination and recommendation. Despite the Petitioner's requests for a copy of the said findings and convening order of the 1st Respondent, he has not been furnished a copy up to date. Further, the Petitioner states that at the said Court of Inquiry, he was not questioned about the alleged sexual assault against the deceased.

The Petitioner states that on or about the 7th September he was informed by his Regimental Headquarters that, after submitting the findings of the Court of Inquiry, the 1st Respondent had decided to discharge him from his service in the Sri Lanka Army and to withdraw his rank of Captain. The said recommendation had been sent to His Excellency the President for the purpose of withdrawing the commission of the Petitioner.

It is the position of the Petitioner that, as per the Army Courts of Inquiry Regulations 1952, punishments cannot be imposed on a Respondent Officer upon findings of a Court of Inquiry. In terms of Section 2 of the said Regulations, it is only convened to collect and record evidence, hence it cannot be equated to a trial. Therefore, the Petitioner states that the 1st Respondent has no authority to discharge the Petitioner by recommending a withdrawal of his commission, without having recourse to a Court Martial in terms of law. Accordingly, the Petitioner believes that the said decision of the 1st Respondent is arbitrary, capricious, ultra vires, unlawful, illegal and has no force in law, as the Court of Inquiry was held contrary to the procedure set out in the Army Court of Inquiry Regulations.

Based on the above submissions, the Petitioner claims that his Fundamental Rights guaranteed under Articles 12(1), 13(3), 13(5) and 14(1)(g) of the Constitution have been violated.

Variations in facts as per the Respondents

It is the position of the 1st and 2nd Respondents that, on 22nd April 2009 around 6.45 pm, a soldier named Lance Corporal Saman Kumara was found dead with gunshot injuries, which was initially treated as an accidental discharge of his own weapon. However, prior to his death, the deceased had complained to his superior officers that the Petitioner had sexually assaulted him, and upon the request of the 2nd Respondent, the deceased made a complaint in writing. Following which, his Commanding Officer had taken steps to remove him from the Petitioner's command and assign him to the Headquarters Camp.

Therefore, suspicion had arisen as to whether the Petitioner was involved in the shooting of the deceased and by June 2009, sufficient evidence had surfaced with regard to his involvement, as a result of which, the Petitioner was arrested.

Furthermore, the 1st Respondent states that, in terms of Regulation 3(7)(a) of the Army Court of Inquiry Regulation 1952, in an event where a member of the Army dies, it is mandatory to appoint a Court of Inquiry to determine the cause of death. Accordingly, a Court of Inquiry was convened and in the said Inquiry, the Petitioner's aide Dilum Sanjeewa testified that on the night of 14th April 2009 around 11.30 pm, the Petitioner had forced the deceased to massage his legs, following which the deceased had deserted the camp on 16th April 2009. Moreover, as alleged by the said Dilum Sanjeewa, on 22nd April 2009 around 6.30 pm he had seen the Petitioner shooting the deceased. Consequent to that, at around 9:00 pm, the petitioner asked and threatened Dilum not to tell anyone about the incident, and the petitioner said that if he did, he and the entire family would be killed with the help of the underworld (As per the document marked R3- the testimony given by the Dilum Sanjeewa on 16/6/2009 before Army Court of Inquiry).

As asserted by the 7th Respondent, on 17th June 2009, the Provost Marshal had submitted to him an anonymous letter that was received by the Army Commander, regarding the death of the said Saman Kumara. As per the contents of the letter, the Petitioner was accused of being responsible for the death of the said Saman Kumara. Accordingly, the 7th Respondent initiated a Military Police investigation and arrested the Petitioner. Furthermore, the 7th Respondent denies all allegations made by the Petitioner against him, with regard to him assaulting the Petitioner and treating him arbitrarily and illegally whilst in the custody of the Military Police.

With regards to the Court of Inquiry, the 1st Respondent states that, it is an internal inquiry held to determine whether an officer is fit to hold his office when criminal charges are preferred against him in a court of law. A pending criminal case in a court of law is not a bar to the conduct of an inquiry with regard to the Petitioner's acts of misconduct. Therefore, the second Court of Inquiry was convened for this purpose. At the said inquiry, the Petitioner was given an opportunity to respond to the allegations against him, he had testified under oath and denied any knowledge of the incident and further stated that his statement to the Military Police was obtained under duress. Having considered the reports of the said two Courts of Inquiries, the 1st Respondent came to the conclusion that the retention of the Petitioner was not desirable for the maintenance of good order and discipline in the Army, hence decided to recommend to His Excellency the President to withdraw the commission of the Petitioner.

Validity of the decision to discharge the Petitioner from the Army and to withdraw his commission

In deciding upon the merits of this case, I find it pertinent to examine the matter of contention claimed by the Petitioner that the actions of the Respondents are in violation of Article 12(1) and Article 14(1)(g) of the Constitution.

Article 12(1) reads as follows:

> "All persons are equal before the law and are entitled to the equal protection of the law."

Article 14(1)(g) reads as follows:

> "The freedom to engage by himself or in association with others in any lawful occupation, profession, trade, business or enterprise."

In the instant case, a Petition had been submitted to the Commander of the Army on 17th May 2009 by the 20th Battalion of the Sri Lanka Light Infantry where the deceased was served requesting the Commander to carry out justice to their deceased brother (deceased Lance Corporeal Saman Kumara) who succumbed to the gunshot injuries on 22nd April 2009.

In terms of Regulation 3(7)(a) of the Army Courts of Inquiry Regulation 1952, where a member of the Army dies, it is mandatory to appoint a Court of Inquiry to ascertain the cause of the death and to determine whether the death is duty related or not. Accordingly, a Court of Inquiry was convened to investigate to the circumstances leading to the said soldier's death.

However, it is the position of the Petitioner that he was not informed that a Court of Inquiry had commenced against him and was only made aware of it when his aide Dilum Sanjeewa had informed him that a statement was recorded from him at the said Inquiry. He further alleges that he was not allowed to cross examine the witnesses that testified before the Court of Inquiry. The Petitioner alleges that several other witnesses who have given adverse evidence against the Petitioner had testified in the absence of the Petitioner. The Petitioner submits that it is a violation of fundamental principles of natural justice, which should be followed in such kind of inquiries and Fundamental Rights guaranteed in the Constitution of Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka.

With regard to the Court of Inquiry, the 1st Respondent states that, it is an internal inquiry held to determine whether an officer is fit to hold his office when criminal charges are preferred against him in a court of law. The second Court of Inquiry was convened for the purpose of determining the criminal liability of the Accused. At the said second inquiry, the Petitioner was given an opportunity to respond to the allegations against him, he had testified under oath and denied any knowledge of the incident and further stated that his statement to the Military Police was obtained under duress. In Y.B.A.M. Premakumara vs Army Commander and others (CA WRIT/1153/2006 CA minutes dated 29/10/2009), discussed about the difference between a Court of inquiry and Disciplinary Inquiry which reads as follows,

> "A Court of Inquiry is different from a disciplinary inquiry. In a disciplinary inquiry a charge sheet will be served and the person accused will have an opportunity to answer the charges and defend himself. In a Court of Inquiry there is no accused or charge sheet, all those who appear before the Court of Inquiry are witnesses as it is a fact finding inquiry."

As such, whether the opportunity of cross examination was given or denied will not change the character of the Court of Inquiry as it is a fact finding inquiry conducted to unveil the surrounding facts and circumstances. Hence, I am of the view that the Petitioner was given a fair hearing and the Principles of natural justice was followed as the Petitioner has no contentions against the conduct of the disciplinary inquiry.

As per the evidence adduced by the witnesses before the Court of Inquiry it is revealed that the deceased who initially belonged to the Alfa Company had been transferred to the Delta Company after the allegation was made that he was sexually assaulted by the Petitioner, who at the time functioned as a Commanding Officer of the Alfa Company. The written statement of the deceased explaining the said sexual assault is marked 2R1. Following this complaint, the deceased was relocated in the Southern part of the defence line and he was found shot dead on 22nd April 2009 enroute towards the South of the line of defence.

The Petitioner was arrested for the death of the deceased. Petitioner alleges that he was seriously physically assaulted whilst in the custody of Military Police. On the date of his release from the Military Police he had been produced for a physical examination at the Institute of Legal Medicine and Toxicology in Colombo where the medical practitioner who examined him stated the following in the Medico-Legal Examination Report dated 21st August 2009 (Marked RX10).

> According to the details given by the examinee he had been kept in a cell. He had been assaulted on several occasions with a wooden club and hand. He has experienced pain in the mouth and there had been bleeding from the mouth.
> General conditions – He was conscious and rational and talked freely, no physical deformities detected.
>
> External examination – Examination of the mouth did not reveal damaged teeth or mucosal injuries.
>
> Opinion: 1. The examinee was conscious and rational and was in good physical and mental state
>
> 2. No injuries or scars related to the present incident detected during the examination.

Therefore, as divulged above, no signs of physical injury are evident, hence, the Petitioner's claim of physical assault cannot be considered before this court.

The initial Court of Inquiry was convened on 16th June 2009 (marked 2R2). According to the evidence adduced by Staff Sergeant Premathilaka (1st Witness), the deceased was on movement with one Private Soldier named Rukmal, towards the Southern area of the defence line where the Delta Company was to be relocated. The route of relocation was passing through the front headquarters of the Alfa Company.

As per the evidence adduced by Private Soldier Rukmal (4th Witness), while passing the front headquarters of the Alfa Company, the Petitioner officer had inquired from him about the deceased, who then had met him. The relevant portion of evidence testified by the 4th witness is quoted below.

ප්‍ර05:- ඔබ එසේ ප්‍රකාශ කලාට පසුව කපිතාන් සිල්වා කුමක් පැවසුවෙද?

පි05:- ලාන්ස් කොර්පරල් සමන් කුමාරට කතා කරන්න කීවා. මා ඉන් පසු ලාන්ස් කොර්පරල් සමන් කුමාර යැයි කතා කර කපිතන් සිල්වා කතාකරන බව පවසා සිටියා.

The unofficial English translation of the above is as follows:

Q05:- What did Captain Silva say after you said so?

A05:- He asked me to call Lance Corporal Saman Kumara. Thereafter, I called out to Lance Corporal Saman Kumara and told him that Captain Silva was looking for him.

Q06:- Did you see Lance Corporal Saman Kumara come towards Captain Silva?

A06:- Yes, he (Saman Kumara) passed me because he (the Captain) was in front of me.

Q08:- When you were coming past that company, was there anyone near Captain Silva?

A08:- No, it was only Captain Silva.

Q11:- Do you know the place where Lance Corporal Saman Kumara was shot?

A11:- It's the place where he left the box and came when Captain Silva called for him.

The question arises as to who fired the two gunshots which caused the death of Lance Corporal Saman Kumara. As revealed in the evidence that transpired before the Court of Inquiry, there was no terror attack in close proximity of the incident of death on that particular day. The cause of death was revealed to be two gunshots fired at a close range. Hence, the death cannot be as a result of an attempt of suicide as the deceased could not have fired two shots at himself.

With the above reasoning together with the testimony of the 4th witness, a reasonable inference could be drawn that the Petitioner officer with the support of his aide Dilum Sanjeewa would have shot at Lance Corporal Saman Kumara, from the anger instigated when the deceased had complained of and reported the sexual assault caused to him, to the superior officers of the Petitioner's Regiment.

In terms of Regulation 3(7)(a) of the Army Courts of Inquiry Regulation 1952, where a member of the Army dies, it is mandatory to appoint a Court of Inquiry to ascertain the cause of the death and to determine whether the death is duty related or not. A Court of inquiry as laid down in Regulation 2 of The Army Courts of Inquiry Regulations 1952 means:

> "an assembly of officers or, of one or more officers together with one or more warrant or non-commissioned officers, directed to collect and record evidence and, if so required, to report or make a decision with regard to any matter or thing which may be referred to them for inquiry under this regulation."

Accordingly, a Court of Inquiry was convened to investigate the circumstances leading to the death of Lance Corporal Saman Kumara. At the said Court of Inquiry, the Petitioner's aide Dilum Sanjeewa had testified that on 22nd April 2009 around 6.30 pm he had seen the Petitioner shooting the deceased and therefore he was threatened to be killed, if he divulged the said incident.

Having considered the reports of the two Courts of Inquiry, the Army Commander came to the conclusion that the retention of the Petitioner was not desirable for the maintenance of good order and discipline (which is mandatory in the military), in the Army and hence declared to recommend to His Excellency the President to withdraw the commission of the Petitioner. The Respondents further submit that, the Petitioner has not sought for a relief to quash the findings of the two Courts of Inquiry.

However, the question arises as to whether the Commander of the Army is authorised upon the findings of the Court of Inquiry to make recommendations seeking the discharge and withdrawal of commission of the Petitioner officer. In terms of Regulation 2 of the Army Disciplinary Regulation 1950 read with Section 8 of the Army Act No. 17 of 1949, the Commander of the Army is vested with the responsibility of maintaining discipline in the Army and has a paramount public duty to ensure that the soldiers are commanded by fit and proper officers. Furthermore, in terms of Regulation 2 of the Army Officer Service Regulations (Regular Force) 1992 the Commander of the Army is authorised to forward recommendations to the Minister of Defence for the approval of His Excellency the President.

As per Justice Vijith K. Malagoda PC, in the case of Major K.D.S. Weerasinghe vs Colonel G.K.B. Dissanyake and others (SC minutes dated 31.10.2017)

> "the Commander of the Army shall be vested with general responsibility for discipline in the Army and in the case in hand the Commander acting under the above position had sought a direction from His Excellency the President regarding the further retention of Petitioner. As revealed before us, the above conduct of the Commander of the army when seeking a directive from His Excellency the President was an independent act and was done for the best interest of the Army, in order to maintain the discipline of the Army."

This is further supported by the Extraordinary Gazette bearing No. 780/7-1993 dated 17th August 1993 which reads as follows:

> 38. In forwarding an application from an officer to retire or resign his commission, a commanding officer shall, when such application, is the result of misconduct or anything affecting the officer's honour or character as gentleman, state all circumstances and particulars of the case, the Commander of the Army shall ensure that the statement contains a complete account of the case before forwarding it to the Secretary.
>
> 39. An officer may be called upon to retire or resign his commission for misconduct or in any circumstances which in the opinion of the President, require such action. An officer so called upon to retire or to resign his commission may request an interview with the Secretary, in order that he may be given an opportunity of stating his case.

Accordingly, the Respondents are empowered to forward the said recommendation to withdraw the commission of the Petitioner to the President.

Since the Petitioner is a Presidential appointee who has been granted his commission in terms of Section 9(1) of the Army Act No.17 of 1949, he holds the said commission during the pleasure of the President in terms of Section 10 of the same Act. In the case of Air Vice Marshall Elmo Perera vs Liyanage and Others (2003) 1 Sri L R 331 the Court held that:

> "It was open to the President to terminate the services of the petitioner on the basis that the petitioner holds office at the pleasure of the President.
>
> The 1st respondent was merely carrying out a fact-finding inquiry and the findings or recommendations of the respondent would not be binding on the President."

Therefore, in the instant case, although the 1st Respondent made the recommendation regarding the Petitioner's withdrawal, the authority to withdraw the Petitioner's commission is on the President.

Based on the above submissions, it is the position of the Respondents that the application of the Petitioner cannot be instituted in this Court as what is sought to be challenged in an indirect manner is the right conferred on His Excellency the President to grant and withdraw a commission to an Army Officer under Section 9(1) of the Army Act No.17 of 1949. Since such acts qua President which directly flows from Article 4(1)(b) read with Article 30 of the Constitution, it cannot be challenged in a Court of Law in view of the provisions contained in Article 35 of the Constitution. The Respondents further claim that this application has been filed out of time.

Furthermore, the Petitioner's service was suspended with half pay with effect from 15th March 2010 upon the commencement of the non-summary inquiry bearing No. N/S 29204 before the Magistrate's Court of Anuradhapura. The Petitioner's services were suspended in adherence to the Special Army Order bearing No. 3/75. Hence, although the Petitioner's services were suspended, he continued be paid in accordance with Regulation 2(2) of the Army Pay Code of 1982 which reads as follows:

"when an officer is suspended from exercising the duties and functions of his office, other than on any ground referred to in the sub-paragraph (b) here to, such officer shall receive in respect of each month for the period during which he is so suspended one half of the consolidated pay payable to him."

As per Regulation 3(1)(b) of the Army Pension and Gratuities Code of 1981, an officer shall retire on the expiry of the period in the substantive rank he holds unless he is promoted to the next higher rank within that period. As per the said Regulation the relevant period for a Captain to hold office is 11 years. Accordingly, the Petitioner in the instant case had reached the maximum period permissible within the said rank with effect from 4th August 2015 (he was promoted as a Captain on 2nd August 2004).

Decision

As such, upon careful consideration of all relevant facts and circumstances of the immediate case, I see no reason to allow the Petitioner's application based on the violations of his Fundamental Rights guaranteed under Articles 12(1) and 14(1)(g).

Article 126(4) empowers the Supreme Court "to grant such relief or make such directions as it may deem just and equitable" depending on the facts and circumstances of each individual case. Hence, this court can overlook certain objections in order to serve justice. As evident from the facts above the Petitioner did commit an act which is unbecoming of the character of an officer and did thereby commit an offence punishable under Section 107 of the Army Act No.17 of 1949.

Considering all, it is my view that the 1st Respondent's decision to recommend the withdrawal of the Petitioner's commission is not in violation of his Fundamental Rights as it is required to maintain good order and discipline in the Army.

Application Dismissed.

Petition

The instant application was filed by an Attorney-at-Law (hereinafter referred to as "the petitioner") on behalf of Captain Ambawalage Dammika Senaratne de Silva (hereinafter referred to as "the detainee"), who was detained in military custody at the time of filing the instant application. The petitioner stated that the detainee was serving as a Captain in the Sri Lanka Army at the time material to the application.

The petitioner further stated that the 1st respondent is a Major of the Military Police of the Sri Lanka Army, in whose custody the detainee was kept. The 2nd respondent is the Commanding Officer of the Military Police. The 3rd and 4th respondents are officers attached to the Military Police Headquarters, the 5th respondent is the Commanding Officer of Alampili Army Camp (hereinafter referred to as "the Army camp"), where the detainee was serving and the 6th respondent is the Commander of the Sri Lanka Army.

The petitioner stated that a soldier named Lance Corporal K.G. Saman Kumara (hereinafter referred to as "the deceased soldier") died of gunshot injuries on the 22nd of April, 2009 at the Nandikal Army Camp, where the detainee was serving as the 'Officer Commanding'. Further, the 5th respondent was the 'Commanding Officer' of the said Army Camp at that time. However, the deceased soldier was serving in a different Company at the time of his death.

The petitioner stated that in the log book at the Anuradhapura Army camp, which records the deaths of officers and soldiers of the Army, the cause of death of the deceased soldier was recorded as gunshot injuries sustained from the discharge of his own weapon.

The petitioner further stated that on the 30th of May, 2009 the detainee was ordered by the 5th respondent to take the body of another soldier attached to his Company who died of gunshot injuries, which were similar to the injuries suffered by Lance Corporal K.G. Saman Kumara a few days earlier. However, when the detainee was returning to his camp, he was informed that he had been relieved of his duties as the 'Officer Commanding' from the camp.

Thereafter, due to the adverse environment at the Army Camp that arose after the deaths of the said soldiers, the detainee requested the 5th respondent to relieve him from his duties at the said camp and sought permission to report to the Regimental Headquarters at Panagoda.

The 5th respondent permitted the said request of the detainee, and accordingly, the detainee reported to the Regimental Headquarters on the 10th of June, 2009. Thereafter, the detainee took medical leave on the 13th and 14th of June, 2009 and reported back to duty on the 15th of June, 2009. On the same day, the detainee informed his mother via telephone that he was unable to come home as he was "facing a problem".

The petitioner stated that following the said telephone conversation, the detainee's parents visited the Regimental Headquarters on the 16th of June, 2009 to inquire about their son, and they were informed that the detainee was arrested based on an anonymous letter received by the Army stating that the detainee was responsible for the murder of the deceased soldier, named Lance Corporal K.G. Saman Kumara. Further, they were informed that the detainee was taken to the Sri Lankan Army Military Police Headquarters at Polhengoda.

The petitioner further stated that even though the relatives of the detainee attempted to visit him, they were not given access to him. Thereafter, the mother of the detainee made a complaint to the Human Rights Commission of Sri Lanka (hereinafter referred to as the "Human Rights Commission") on the 3rd of July, 2009 requesting permission for the relatives of the detainee to visit him. On the 7th of July, 2009 the Human Rights Commission requested the 1st respondent to permit the relatives of the detainee to visit him. Thereafter, the relatives of the detainee visited him at the Military Police Headquarters. The petitioner stated that during the said visit, the detainee informed his relatives that he was falsely implicated for a crime that he did not commit because of the animosity that the 5th respondent had with him. Further, the Military Police were trying to forcibly obtain a confession from him.

Furthermore, it was stated that the detainee's mother had received an anonymous telephone call on the 21st July, 2009 alleging that the detainee was blindfolded and severely assaulted with clubs while in the custody of the Military Police. Further, the said anonymous caller had informed her that the 1st, 3rd and 4th respondents were responsible for the assault of the detainee. The petitioner stated that the detainee's mother complained to several authorities about the arbitrary and unfair treatment of the detainee and requested to conduct a fair investigation into the incident.

The petitioner stated that a soldier named Hewapalliyaguruge Dilum Sanjeewa was forced to give a statement stating that the detainee gave his weapon and asked him to shoot the deceased soldier, and that he shot in the direction of the deceased soldier. However, as he missed the target, the detainee took the weapon and shot at the deceased soldier.

The petitioner further stated that if the detainee committed the murder, he should have been handed over to the civil authorities to take steps under the procedure established by law, as the offence of murder is not an offence that comes within the purview of either the Army Act or the military law and the regulations promulgated thereunder.

In the circumstances, the petitioner stated that the arrest and detention of the detainee without reasonable grounds were unlawful, arbitrary and contrary to the procedure established by law and are an infringement of the Fundamental Rights guaranteed to the detainee.

The petitioner prayed, inter alia, for a declaration that one or more of the respondents have infringed the detainee's Fundamental Rights guaranteed to him by Articles 11, 12(1), 13(1), 13(2), and 13(3) of the Constitution, and to grant compensation in a sum of Rs. 1,000,000/-.

Leave to Proceed

The court granted leave to proceed for the alleged violation of Articles 12(1) and 13(2) of the Constitution. It is pertinent to note that the court did not grant leave to proceed for the alleged violation of Article 11 of the Constitution. Thus, the allegations regarding assault and torture will not be considered in this judgment.

Objections of the 1st respondent

The 1st respondent filed objections and stated that the deceased soldier, Lance Corporal K.G. Saman Kumara, served in Company 'A' of the 20th Battalion of Sri Lanka Light Infantry, of which the detainee functioned as the 'Officer Commanding' at the time material to the instant application.

The 1st respondent further stated that the deceased soldier ran away from the said Company on the 16th of April, 2009 and reported to the Battalion headquarters on the following day. Thereafter, the deceased soldier made a written complaint of sexual harassment committed by the detainee. Further, as the deceased soldier refused to report back to the detainee's Company, he was transferred to Company 'D' of the same Battalion.

The 1st respondent stated that Company 'D' was moved to a different location on the 22nd of April, 2009 and to reach the said camp, it was necessary to pass Company 'A'. Further, the death of the deceased soldier occurred when he was passing the location where Company 'A' was stationed.

The 1st respondent denied the allegations that access to the detainee was refused and that the detainee was assaulted while in custody. The 1st respondent stated that an Order was made by the Human Rights Commission requesting the relatives of the detainee to visit him, and the said Order was complied with.

He further stated that the investigation carried out by the Military Police revealed evidence against the detainee with respect to the murder of the deceased soldier. Hence, the Police was informed to take over the investigation with regard to the death of the deceased soldier.

In support of the above statement, the 1st respondent produced a letter dated 3rd of July, 2009 addressed to the Deputy Inspector General of Police of the Criminal Investigations Department, marked as '1R1' which contained the facts revealed during the investigation conducted by the Military Police in respect of the death of the deceased soldier.

The 1st respondent stated that in terms of sections 47(1) and 131(2) of the Army Act No. 17 of 1949, a court martial may be held when an offence is committed by a member of the Army during active service. It was further stated that as the alleged offence was committed by the detainee during active service, the detainee was detained under section 35 of the Army Act and subsequently handed over to the Police on the 6th of August, 2009 for further investigation.

The 1st respondent stated that the detainee was handed over to the Police after the investigation conducted by the Military Police concluded. Thereafter, the Police produced the detainee and Hewapalliyaguruge Dilum Sanjeewa in the Magistrate's Court, and the learned Magistrate remanded them. Later, they were released on bail by the High Court of Anuradhapura on the 18th of January, 2010.

Objections of the 5th respondent

In addition to the averments contained in the objections filed by the 1st respondent, the 5th respondent stated the following in his statement of objections;

The deceased soldier made a complaint of sexual harassment against the detainee on the 17th of April, 2009 which was produced marked as '5R1'. In the said complaint, the deceased soldier stated that the detainee summoned him to his room in the night on the 15th of April, 2009 and sexually harassed him. Further, the alleged sexual harassment commenced with the detainee ordering him to massage his feet.

It was further stated that the cause of death of the deceased soldier was initially considered to be an accidental discharge of his personal weapon, and hence, the letters and messages with regard to his death were issued to that effect. A copy of the message sent by the 5th respondent's battalion informing the headquarters about the death of the deceased soldier and a copy of the convening order of the Court of Inquiry appointed by his battalion to inquire into the death of the deceased soldier dated 23rd of April, 2009 were produced marked as '5R2' and '5R3', respectively.

He further stated that as another soldier named R. Silva, attached to the detainee's Company, also died due to gunshot injuries on the 30th of May, 2009 in similar circumstances that the deceased soldier died, the detainee was removed from his position as the 'Officer Commanding' of Company 'A' with effect from the 1st of June, 2009.

The 5th respondent stated that a military investigation was initiated into the death of the deceased soldier, Lance Corporal Saman Kumara. Subsequently, upon the request of the detainee on the 9th of June, 2009 the detainee was transferred to the Regimental Headquarters of the Sri Lanka Light Infantry at Panagoda.

The investigation conducted by the Army revealed a prima facie case against the detainee and soldier, Hewapalliyaguruge Dilum Sanjeewa. Hence, he was handed over to the Criminal Investigations Department for further investigations on the 6th of August, 2009. Thereafter, the Police produced the detainee and the other soldier in the Magistrate's Court in respect of the death of the deceased soldier, and the learned Magistrate remanded both of them. Subsequently, the detainee was released on bail by the High Court of Anuradhapura on the 18th of January, 2010. He stated that a Court Martial can be held against the detainee under sections 47(1) and 131(2) of the Army Act for the alleged offence of murder of the deceased soldier.

Counter Affidavit of the detainee

The detainee filed a counter affidavit and stated that he was not informed of the deceased soldier's alleged complaint of sexual harassment dated 17th of April 2009, produced marked as '5R1'. He further stated that an allegation of sexual harassment by a Commissioned Officer on a Non-Commissioned Officer is a serious offence under Military Law, which would have resulted in immediate action being taken against him by the 5th respondent as his Commanding Officer.

In the circumstances, the detainee stated that the failure on the part of the 5th respondent to immediately act on the alleged complaint of sexual harassment raises doubts about the veracity of the said complaint. In view of the above, the said complaint marked '5R1' is either a forged document or had been forcibly obtained from the deceased soldier prior to his death.

The detainee further stated that the 1st respondent assaulted him with pipes filled with sand and forcefully tried to get him to confess that he shot the deceased soldier. Moreover, on the 20th of June, 2009 the 1st, 3rd and 4th respondents blindfolded and assaulted him. The detainee stated that, consequent to the assault, he was bleeding from the ear and the nose.

The detainee stated that he still has a difficulty in eating and his feet get numb when he tries to run. He further stated that after he was released on bail, he obtained medical treatment from the Army Hospital and the Kalubowila Government Hospital and produced medical records marked as 'P15A', 'P15B' and 'P15C' as proof of the treatment given to him by the said hospitals.

Further, the detainee stated that the statement of the soldier, Hewapalliyaguruge Dilum Sanjeewa, had been obtained under duress. Moreover, he is falsely implicated in the death of the deceased soldier due to the animosity that the 5th respondent has with the detainee.

The detainee stated that he was illegally kept in detention for 52 days, where he was severely assaulted by the officers of the Sri Lanka Military Police, including the 1st respondent.

Submissions on behalf of the detainee

The learned President's Counsel for the detainee submitted that the detainee's Fundamental Rights enshrined under Article 12(1) of the Constitution has been infringed as he was deprived access to his relatives and lawyers until the intervention of the Human Rights Commission.

It was further submitted that the said detention in military custody for 52 days without either producing the detainee before a Magistrate or handing him over to civilian authorities is a violation of his Fundamental Rights guaranteed under Article 13(2) of the Constitution.

The learned President's Counsel for the detainee submitted that the words "procedure established by law" in Article 13(2) of the Constitution requires a person arrested to be produced before a Magistrate in a court of law. Thus, even though the initial arrest and detention were made under section 35 of the Army Act, further steps should have been taken in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution, which applies to every State institution.

Furthermore, it was submitted that under section 40(1) of the Army Act, the investigation against the detainee should have been conducted "without unnecessary delay" after he was taken into military custody and that steps should have been taken either to initiate proceedings against the detainee under section 40(1)(b) of the Army Act or to have the charges against the said detainee dismissed under section 40(1)(a) of the Army Act. In the alternative, to hand over the detainee to the Police to take steps under the law.

The learned President's Counsel further submitted that this court has given a strict interpretation to the term "time limit" in respect of producing persons detained before the nearest judge of a competent court.

In support of the above submissions, the learned President's Counsel cited Selvakumar v Devananda (*SC/FR/150/93, Supreme Court Minutes 13th of July, 1994), where it was held;

> "if the victim of an unconstitutional arrest may run the risk of such grave harm while in police custody, it seems to me that what a "reasonable time" for production before a Magistrate must necessarily be given a strict interpretation…"

Thus, it was contended that the term "without unnecessary delay" stipulated in section 40 of the Army Act should be given a strict interpretation.

Further, the learned President's Counsel cited the case of Sunil Rodrigo v De Silva* (1997) 3 SLR 265, where the court held that the rights under Article 13(2) of the Constitution to produce a suspect before a judge cannot be taken away unless expressly provided by the Constitution itself.

Moreover, the decision was taken by the Army headquarters to hand over the detainee to the Police on the 3rd of July, 2009 marked as '1R1'. Therefore, the Sri Lanka Army had no viable reason to keep the detainee in custody after the said date. However, the detainee had been kept in military custody until he was handed over to the Police on the 6th of August, 2009 when the instant application was supported in the Supreme Court.

In the circumstances, it was submitted that the procedure established by law as set out in section 40 of the Army Act requiring steps to be taken without unnecessary delay had been violated by the Army.

Furthermore, the learned President's Counsel submitted that military personnel are entitled to the protection of Fundamental Rights enshrined in the Constitution. In support of the said submission, the learned President's Counsel cited Channa Peiris v Attorney General* (1994) 1 SLR 51 at 81, where it was held:

> "Constitutional guarantees cannot be removed or modified except in accordance with the Constitution. That, I believe is a proposition that commends itself to general acceptance. I believe it is still a well-established and universally conceded principle. One might say that it is axiomatic."

Moreover, it was submitted that in Edirisuriya v Navaratnam* (1985) 1 SLR 100, it was held:

> "if it is intended to restrict the requirement of 13 (2) …… this must be specifically done. Article 13 (2) cannot be restricted without a specific reference to it. ..... In the result, the Constitutional requirement that a detained person shall be brought before the judge of the nearest competent court remains unaffected ……"

In the circumstances, it was submitted that the Fundamental Rights of the detainee guaranteed under Article 13(2) has been infringed by the 1st to the 6th respondents.

Submissions of the respondents

The learned Senior State Counsel for the respondents submitted that the arrest of the detainee was made based on the findings of the preliminary investigation conducted by the preliminary Court of Inquiry, which gave rise to a reasonable suspicion of murder of the deceased soldier by the detainee.

It was further submitted that the arrest of the detainee was beyond a mere surmise of a general suspicion, as the findings of the preliminary investigation report contained material to suspect the commission of the offence by the detainee. Thus, the arrest of the detainee was lawful.

In support of the above submissions, she cited the case of Perera v Attorney General (1992) 1 SLR 99, which held;

"…. The power of arrest does not depend on the requirement that there must be clear and sufficient proof of the commission of the offence alleged. On the other hand, for an arrest, a mere reasonable suspicion or a reasonable complaint of the commission of an offence suffices."

The learned Senior State Counsel contended that the detainee was detained by the Military Police under section 35 and other relevant provisions of the Army Act, and as such, the detention in the instant application is subject to 'the special procedure prescribed by law'. Similarly, the operation of Article 13 is subject to the restrictions stipulated in Article 15(8) of the Constitution for members of the Armed Forces, in the interest of the proper discharge of their duties and the maintenance of discipline among them.

In the circumstances, it was submitted that the detention by the Military Police is in accordance with the provisions of the Army Act and there was no violation of Articles 12(1) and 13(2) of the Constitution.

Were the Fundamental Rights guaranteed to the detainee by Articles 12(1) and 13(2) of the Constitution infringed?

Was the arrest illegal?

The deceased soldier, Lance Corporal Saman Kumara, ran away from Company A on the 16th of April, 2009 and reported to the Battalion headquarters on the 17th of April, 2009. He made a written complaint on the 17th of April, 2009 against the detainee, stating that he was sexually abused by the detainee on the 15th of April, 2009. Hence, he refused to report back to Company A where he was attached to. Accordingly, he was transferred to Company D, which was situated close to the Camp that he was serving previously. The deceased soldier was found dead on the 22nd of April, 2009 from gunshot injuries. On the 23rd of April, 2009 the Army appointed a Court of Inquiry to investigate the death of the deceased soldier. The Court of Inquiry concluded by stating that the deceased soldier died due to an actual discharge of his personal weapon.

By letter dated 17th of May, 2009 addressed to the 6th respondent, a group of soldiers from Company A complained that the detainee committed the murder of the deceased soldier, as he had complained against the detainee for sexually abusing him. Thereafter, on the 30th of May, 2009 another soldier attached to the same Company died due to gunshot injuries under similar circumstances.

The detainee was removed from his appointment as the Officer Commanding in the said camp on the 1st of June, 2009. Subsequently, upon a request made by the detainee, he was transferred to the Regimental Headquarters of the Sri Lanka Light Infantry in Panagoda on the 9th of June, 2009.

The Military Police commenced investigating into the death of the deceased soldier on the 17th of June, 2009 under section 40(1) of the Army Act. Further, on the same day the detainee and another soldier named Hewapalliyaguruge Dilum Sanjeewa were arrested on suspicion of the death of the deceased soldier on the same day. The said soldier, Hewapalliyaguruge Dilum Sanjeewa has given a statement to the Military Police stating that the detainee requested him to ask the deceased soldier to come to his room in the night on or around the 15th of April, 2009. When the deceased soldier entered the detainee's room, he heard the detainee asking him to massage his feet. After about half an hour, he saw the deceased soldier leaving the detainee's room. On the next day, the deceased soldier ran away from the Company where he was attached to and reported to the Battalion headquarters on the following day. When the detainee heard about it, he told him that "he will not let him eat rice in the Army, for what he did to me".

In his statement, he had further stated that, on the 22nd of April, 2009 he saw the detainee talking to the deceased soldier but did not hear their conversation. Thereafter, the detainee asked him to bring the detainee's T-56 weapon and a bucket of water, stating that he wanted to go to the jungle to relive himself. He further stated that he brought the detainee's gun and handed it over to him. Thereafter, they followed the deceased soldier, and the detainee gave the gun to him and ordered to shoot the deceased soldier. However, as he missed the target, the detainee took the gun from him and shot the deceased soldier, who fell to the ground.

The detainee alleged that he was illegally arrested and detained by the respondents and thereby, his Fundamental Rights guaranteed by Articles 12(1) and 13(2) of the Constitution were infringed.

Article 15(8) of the Constitution states:

> "The exercise and operation of the fundamental rights declared and recognized by Articles 12(1), 13 and 14 shall, in their application to the members of the Armed Forces, Police Force and other Forces charged with the maintenance of public order, be subject to such restrictions as may be prescribed by law in the interests of the proper discharge of their duties and the maintenance of discipline among them."
>

Thus, in terms of Article 15(8) of the Constitution, the Fundamental Rights guaranteed by Articles 12(1), 13 and 14 are subject 'to the restrictions as prescribed by the laws'. The Army Act No. 17 of 1949 and the Army Disciplinary Regulations 1950 (hereinafter referred to as the "Army Disciplinary Regulations") are applicable to all military personnel, including the detainee. Hence, the applicability of Articles 12(1), 13 and 14 of the Constitution are subject to the provisions of the Army Act and the regulations promulgated thereunder.

Further, the detainee being an officer of the regular force is subject to the military law in terms of section 34 of the Amy Act.

The detainee was detained under section 35 of the Army Act, which states as follows:

> "A person subject to military law who commits any military or civil offence may be taken into military custody."

Further, under section 47(1) read with section 131(2) of the Army Act, a court martial can be held against the detainee in respect of an offence of murder committed by an Army personnel.

As stated above, the evidence transpired during the investigation conducted by the Military Police, established a prima facie case against the detainee and the soldier, Hewapalliyaguruge Dilum Sanjeewa. Hence, the arrest of the detainee and Hewapalliyaguruge Dilum Sanjeewa in connection with the death of the deceased soldier is justified.

Further, it is pertinent to note that, after the detainee was handed over to the Criminal Investigations Department of the Police, the Police informed the Magistrate's Court that there is evidence to suspect the detainee and the soldier, Hewapalliyaguruge Dilum Sanjeewa, for the murder of the said deceased soldier. Having considered the material filed in court by the Police, the learned Magistrate remanded the detainee and the soldier, Hewapalliyaguruge Dilum Sanjeewa pending further investigations in respect of the offence of committing murder of the deceased soldier.

An investigation commences where there is reason either to suspect the commission of the offence.

The sole purpose of the investigation is to gather evidence from which they could form an opinion whether there is material to institute criminal proceedings. Hence, investigation officers are conferred with the power that may be necessary for the discovery of evidence and arrest of the suspects. Further, an investigation has a fact-finding character. At the conclusion of the investigation, it needs only to decide whether there is sufficient material to suspect a particular person or persons committing an offence. Furthermore, a preliminary investigation is not concerned with the issue of actual guilt.

Moreover, a person can be arrested if a credible complaint is received or an information has been received or if a reasonable suspicion exists of committing an offence.

In view of the facts revealed at the investigation carried out by the Military Police and the Criminal Investigations Department of the Sri Lanka Police, I am of the opinion there were sufficient material to arrest the detainee in respect of the offence of murder of the deceased soldier.

Further, the cases of Selvakumar v Devanada, Channa Pieris v Attorney General, Edirisyriya v Navaratnam and Sunil Rodrigo v De Silva cited by the learned President's Counsel for the detainee are not applicable to the instant application as the petitioners in those applications were arrested by the Police under the Criminal Procedure Code and not by the Military Police under the Army Act and the Regulations promulgated thereunder.

Therefore, I am of the view that the Fundamental Rights of the detainee enshrined under Article 12(1) of the Constitution has not been infringed by the respondents by arresting the detainee.

Whether the detention (confinement) is unlawful?

As stated above, the Military Police commenced the investigation with regard to the death of the deceased soldier consequent to the aforementioned letter sent by the soldiers of the Camp A where the deceased soldier and the detainee were serving. Once the investigations were concluded by the Military Police, the evidence revealed that the detainee and soldier, Hewapalliyaguruge Dilum Sanjeewa were responsible for the murder of the deceased soldier. Hence, the Criminal Investigations Department was informed by letter dated 3rd of July, 2009 marked and produced as '1R1', the findings of the investigations carried out by the Military Police on the death of the deceased soldier, Lance Corporal Saman Kumara. Further, as the said investigations found evidence against the detainee and soldier, Hewapalliyaguruge Dilum Sanjeewa, the Police was requested to take over the investigations with regard to the said death of the deceased soldier. Thereafter, the detainee was handed over to the Criminal Investigations Department on the 6th of August, 2009 for further investigations.

Moreover, the Police filed a B report in the Magistrate's Court of Anuradhapura on the 7th of August, 2009. In the said report, the Police has named the detainee and the soldier, Hewapalliyaguruge Dilum Sanjeewa, as suspects is respect of the murder of the deceased soldier. Further, the said report filed by the Police in the Magistrate's Court stated that there is evidence to suggest that the detainee and the soldier, Hewapalliyaguruge Dilum Sanjeewa, committed the murder of the deceased soldier. Hence, the learned Magistrate remanded both of them as the investigations were pending. Later, the detainee was released on bail on the 18th of January, 2010 by the High Court of Anuradhapura.

It was submitted by the learned President's Counsel for the detainee that the detention of the detainee during the time of the investigation by the Military Police without producing him before a Magistrate was a violation of his Fundamental Rights guaranteed under Article 13(2) of the Constitution.

Article 13(2) of the Constitution states:

> "Every person held in custody, detained or otherwise deprived of personal liberty shall be brought before the judge of the nearest competent court according to procedure established by law and shall not be further held in custody, detained or deprived of personal liberty except upon and in terms of the order made by such judge in accordance with procedure established by law."

However, as stated above, the Fundamental Rights of the detainee enshrined under Articles 12(1), 13 and 14 of the Constitution are subject to restrictions prescribed in the military law. Section 18(2) of the Army Disciplinary Regulations states:

> "No officer or warrant office shall be kept in military custody, unless his commanding officer is satisfied on investigation that it will be necessary to proceed with the case and report it to the Commander of the Army."
>

Thus, it is evident that the detainee was kept in military custody during the course of the investigation and thereafter, pending a review from his Commanding Officer as to whether or not to proceed with the case against the detainee and soldier, Hewapalliyaguruge Dilum Sanjeewa. As the evidence revealed that the detainee and the Army were responsible for the death of the deceased soldier, the Army has sent a letter dated 3rd of July, 2009 marked '1R1' addressed to the Deputy Inspector General of Police of the Criminal Investigations Department, to take over the investigations in respect of the death of the deceased soldier. Thereafter, the detainee was handed over to the Criminal Investigations Department on the 6th of August, 2009.

The material filed in this court shows that there was no undue delay on the part of the respondents in handing over the detainee and soldier, Hewapalliyaguruge Dilum Sanjeewa to Police custody. Further, there was no intentional violation of the Fundamental Rights of the detainee.

A similar view was expressed in Wijesinghe v Attorney General and Others (1978-80) 1 SLR 102 at 106 it was held;

> "Every wrong decision or breach of the law does not attract the constitutional remedies relating to fundamental rights. Where a transgression of the law takes place, due solely to some corruption, negligence or error of judgement, I do not think a person can be allowed to come under Article 126 and allege that there has been a violation of constitutional guarantees. There may also be other instances where mistakes or wrongful acts are done in the course of proceedings for which ordinarily there are built-in safe-guards or adequate procedures for obtaining relief."

Therefore, I am of the view that the Fundamental Rights of the detainee enshrined under Article 13(2) of the Constitution has not been infringed by the respondents.

Accordingly, the application is dismissed without costs.

ARGUED ON : 13.02.2023

DECIDED ON : 13.11.2023

K. KUMUDINI WICKREMASINGHE, J

This is an Application filed under Article 126(1) of the Constitution by the Petitioner seeking, inter alia, for a declaration that their fundamental rights to equality before the law and equal protection of the law as guaranteed by Article 12(1) of the Constitution has been violated as a result of the arbitrary, capricious and/or irrational action of the Respondents.

On 12th December 2012, having heard the President's Counsel for the Petitioner in support of this Application and the Learned ASG and the President's Counsel who appeared for the Respondents, this court granted leave to proceed under Article 12(1) of the Constitution for the alleged violation of the said fundamental right by the 1st and 2nd Respondents.

The Petitioner carried on the business of running a toddy tavern at Madampitiya, Colombo 15 and he was awarded the tender to sell toddy at the Madampitiya toddy tavern, Colombo 15 for the period of 01.01.2012 to 31.12.2012. The 1st Respondent who is the Divisional Secretary of Colombo published the Gazette bearing No.1773 on 24.08.2012 (P1) for the sale of the right to sell toddy at the aforesaid toddy tavern for the period starting from 1st January 2013 to 31st of December of 2013 and annually tenders are invited from the prospective bidders in terms of the Gazette No.207 dated 20.08.1982 (P2). The Petitioner in accordance with the aforesaid Gazette submitted a tender for a sum of Rs. 1, 500, 000.00 on 11.09.2012.

The tenders for the sale of the right to sell toddy at the aforesaid toddy tavern was opened on 11.09.2012 and apart from this tender there had been another tender for a sum of Rs. 2, 500, 000.00 submitted by the 4th Respondent. At the opening of the tender, 1st, 2nd and 3rd Respondents, the Clerk of the Colombo Divisional Secretariat, one R.P.G Piyatissa and the Petitioner were present while the 4th Respondent failed to be present.

According to the Petitioner, the 1st Respondent has telephoned the 4th Respondent during the tender board meeting and informed him that the tender will be granted to him. Aggrieved by this the Petitioner has sent a letter (P3) to the 5th Respondent complaining to him about the aforesaid incident and requested that the tender be awarded to him. The 5th Respondent responded by a letter dated 16.11.2012 (P4A) stating that since the 1st Respondent is the Chairman of the Tender Board the 5th Respondent is unable to take any actions against him and advising him to take legal action if any injustice has been caused. Upon receiving this letter the Petitioner has inquired about the same from the Colombo Divisional Secretariat and from the office of the 5th Respondent and he was informed that the tender had been granted to the 4th Respondents.

The Petitioner's position is that the Gazette marked P1 requires the presence of the tenderer at the time of opening the tender and the award of the tender to the 4th Respondent is illegal and unlawful as the 4th Respondent was absent at that specific time.

According to the 4th Respondent he and his father were forcibly taken by some unknown persons to a vehicle (Nissan Vanette Van, White in Colour) parked outside the Divisional Secretariat Office when they were waiting outside the office to be invited to attend the opening of the tender on 11.09.2012 at about 10.00am. The 4th Respondents states that the Petitioner who was not known to him at that time was also inside the said vehicle and they threatened the 4th Respondent and his father to withdraw the tender. Upon the Respondent's refusal to do so, the Petitioner had left the vehicle presumably to attend the tender opening at the Divisional Secretariat Office while the 4th Respondent and his father were detained forcibly to prevent them from attending the same. The 4th Respondent states that those unknown persons threatened to cause harm if they attempted to leave the vehicle and they were driven away in that vehicle and dropped off in Kiribathgoda.

The 1st Respondent states that he was informed that the handing of the tender closed on the same day which was 11.09.2012 and that the 4th Respondent had been present at that time. Nevertheless, the Petitioner has informed him that the 4th Respondent was not present and that he left the premises since he was not pursuing his tender. The Petitioner has told that the 1st Respondent can talk to the 4th Respondent to confirm the same. Having dialed a number, the Petitioner has given his mobile phone to the 1st Respondent. The 4th Respondent who was at the other end has told the 1st Respondent that the Petitioner had intimidated him and chased him away and yet, he was pursuing his claim for the award of the tender. The 1st Respondent has then announced that the tender will be granted to the 4th Respondent.

According to both the 1st and 4th Respondents, the Gazette marked P1 does not require the presence of the tenderer at the time of opening the tender. The relevant conditions of the Gazette marked P1 in this regard are as follows.

“03. සිල් තබන ලද කවරයක බහාලූ එක එක ටෙන්ඩර්පත ඇතුලත් කවරයේ උඩ වම පස කලෙවරේ අංක ..... දරන රා තැබෑරුම් සඳහා ටෙන්ඩර් පත්‍රය - කොළඹ " යනුවෙන් සඳහන් කර - (අ) කොළඹ ප්‍රාදේශීය ලේකම් කාර්යාලයේ ටෙන්ඩර් පෙට්ටියේ තැන්පත් කිරීමෙන්, හෝ (ආ) ලියාපදිංචි තැපෑලෙන් කොළඹ ප්‍රාදේශීය ලේකම් වෙත එවීමෙන් හෝ මෙහි පහත සඳහන් උපලකෙනයේ ඒ ඒ තැබෑරුමට කලෙින් දක්වා ඇති වේලාවන් සහ දිනයන්හි දී හෝ ඊට පරෙ හෝ ලැබෙනෙතට සැලැස්විය යුතුය. ටෙන්ඩර් කරුවන් ටෙන්ඩර් හාර ගන්නා අවසාන වේලාවේ දී කාර් යාලයට පැමිණ සිටිය යුතු ය.

04. තෝරාගත් ටෙන්ඩර් කරු ඒ මොහොතේම ගැනුම්කරු වශයෙන් දැනුම් දෙනු ලබන අතර, ඉහත පල කරන ලද රා රේන්ද විකිණීමේ කොන්දේසි ප්‍රකාර, වරප්‍රසාද විකිණීමේ කොන්දේසි අත්සන් කිරීම සඳහා නියම කරනු ලබන මුදලක් තැන්පත් ඇප මුදල වශයෙන් ප්‍රාදේශීය ලේකම් වෙත ගවෙය යුතු ය.”

According to the above, the presence of the tenderers are required only when they are closing the acceptance of tenders and not at the time of the opening of the tenders.

Further, the condition 07 of the said Gazette marked P1 states that,

"කිසි කරුණක් නොදක්වාම එකක් හෝ සියලුම ටෙන්ඩර් ප්‍රතික්ෂේප කිරීමේ බලය ප්‍රාදේශීය ලේකම්ට තිබේ."

The condition 9 of the Gazette marked P2 also states that,

"The Powers of Acceptance or Rejection of Tenders-

(1) The Government Agent may, in his discretion, accept any tender received.

(2) The Government Agent may,in his discretion, reject any or all of the tenders received…"

It is evident from the above that the complete discretion over the tender lies with the Divisional Secretary. In the present case, the 1st Respondent who is the Divisional Secretary has awarded the tender to the 4th Respondent by considering the fact that the tender submitted by him was Rs. 300, 000.00 in excess of the threshold price fixed by the Excise Department (Rs. 2, 200, 000.00) while the tender of the Petitioner fell short of the threshold price by Rs. 700, 000.00.

Therefore, the actions of the 1st Respondent cannot be considered as arbitrary and unlawful as he has acted according to the Gazette in the best interest of the State.

Furthermore, the Respondents of the present action have contended that the Petitioner's application has been filed out of time. Although this court has decided on 21.12.2012 that the application was filed within the mandatory time limit of one month, this cannot be taken as conclusive as the case was supported ex parte on that day without notice to any of the Respondents. By the journal entry dated 01.07.2014, this court has granted permission to the Respondents to file preliminary objections on time bar before 08.08.2014 and on 19.08.2014, this court has granted further two weeks time to the 4th Respondent to file written submission on the preliminary objections. The 4th Respondent has filed his written submission on 22.08.2014 and 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 5th and 6th Respondents have filed their written submissions on 11.09.2014. In all of those submissions, the Respondents have raised the preliminary objection that the Petitioner's application has been filed out of time under Article 126 (2) of the Constitution and therefore, the matter must be dismissed in limine. According to Article 126 (2) of the Constitution,

"Where any person alleges that any such fundamental right or language right relating to such person has been infringed or is about to be infringed by executive or administrative action, he may himself or by an Attorney-at-Law on his behalf, within one month thereof*, in accordance with such rules of court as may be in force, apply to the Supreme Court by way of petition in writing addressed to such Court praying for relief or redress in respect of such infringement. Such application may be proceeded with only with leave to proceed first and obtained from the Supreme Court, which leave may be granted or refused, as the case may be, by not less than two judges."*

In the case of Ilangaratne vs. Kandy Municipal Council [1995] BALJ Vol.VI Part 1 at p.10, his Lordship Justice Kulatunga observed that,

"the result of the express stipulation of a one month time limit in Article 126(2) is that, this Court has no jurisdiction to entertain an application which is filed out of time – ie: after the expiry of one month from the occurrence of the alleged infringement or imminent infringement which is complained of,. ……. if it is clear that an application is out of time, the Court has no jurisdiction to entertain such application."

In Demuni Sriyani de Soyza and others v. Dharmasena Dissanayake, SC 206/2008 (F/R), SC Minutes of 09.12.2016, Justice Prasanna Jayawardena PC held at page 8 that,

"Article 126 (2) of the Constitution stipulates that, a person who alleges that any of his fundamental rights have been infringed or are about to be infringed by executive or administrative action may "….. within one month thereof ….. " apply to this Court by way of a Petition praying for relief or redress in respect of such infringement. The consequence of this stipulation in Article 126 (2) is that, a Petition which is filed after the expiry of a period of one month from the time the alleged infringement occurred, will be time barred and unmaintainable. This rule is so well known that it hardly needs to be stated here.

The rule that, an application under Article 126 which has not been filed within one month of the occurrence of the alleged infringement will make that application unmaintainable, has been enunciated time and again from the time this Court exercised the Fundamental Rights jurisdiction conferred upon it by the 1978 Constitution."

In the present case, the 1st Respondent has announced his decision to award the tender to the 4th Respondent on the day the Tenders were open, which was on 11.09.2012 in the presence of everyone, including the Petitioner. Subsequently, the Petitioner on 13.09.2012 has written a letter (marked P3) to the 5th Respondent complaining about the incident and requesting to grant the tender to him.

The Petitioner's position is that he became aware of the granting of the tender to 4th Respondent only when he received the letter marked P4 on 20.11.2012 in reply to his letter marked P3. However, in the said letter marked P3 supports the position of the Respondent that the Petitioner was aware of the said decision.

Moreover, clause 10 of the Gazette marked P1 states that if the toddy tender in question was not awarded on 11.09.2012, the tender will be resold on 06.11.2012 at 10.30 am. Nevertheless, there were no steps taken for resale of the impugned toddy tender on the said date. This further affirms that the tender was already awarded to the 4th Respondent on 11.09.2012 and even if the Petitioner was not aware of that on 11.09.2012, he should have been aware by 06.11.2012 as there was no resale as stipulated by the said Gazette.

However, the Petitioner has filed this application on 20.12.2012 after the expiry of one month (which is more than three months after the alleged violation).

Furthermore, in Siriwardena and Others v. Brigadier J. Rodrigo and Others (1986) 1 Sri.L.R. 384, Justice Ranasinghe held at page 385 that,

"An application must be filed within one month from the date of the commission of the administrative or executive act which is alleged constitutes the infringement or imminent infringement of the fundamental right relied on. Where, however, a petitioner establishes he became aware of such infringement or imminent infringement only on a later date, the one month will run from that date. The petitioners had filed their application long after the expiry of one month from the date they became aware of the infringement. Hence the application was out of time."

Similarly, in Gamaethige v. Siriwardena and Others (1988) 1 Sri.L.R. 384, where the Petitioner has sent letters to the Director of Establishments and the Secretary of the Ministry of Public Administration complaining about the violation of his fundamental rights, it was held at page 402 that,

"Three principles are thus discernible in regard to the operation of the time limit prescribed by Article 126 (2). Time begins to run when the infringement takes place; if knowledge on the part of the petitioner is required (e.g of other instances by comparison with which the treatment meted out to him becomes discriminatory), time begins to run only when both in infringement and knowledge exist (Siriwardena v. Rodrigo (2). The pursuit of other remedies, judicial or administrative, does not prevent or interrupt the operation of the time limit*." [emphasis added]*

According to afore-cited cases, the Petitioner seeking an administrative remedy by writing to the 5th Respondent does not stop the running of time as stipulated in Article 126 (2) of the Constitution. Therefore, I am of the opinion that the application of the Petitioner is time barred as it was filed on 20.12.2012 which is more than three months after the alleged violation.

For the reasons set out above, I conclude that the Petitioners application is time barred under Article 126 (2) of the Constitution thus, the same is misconceived in law

On the basis of the aforesaid findings, the Application is hereby dismissed.

JUDGMENT

Aluwihare PC. J,

(1) The Appellant-Appellant [Hereinafter referred to as the Appellant] invoked the jurisdiction of this Court in terms of Section15(11) of the National Gem and Jewellery Authority Act No.5 of 1993 [Hereinafter the Act] challenging the decision made by the 3rd Respondent, the Secretary of the Ministry of Environment.

(2) The gravamen of the Appellant was that the 3rd Respondent, in arriving at his findings has relied on extraneous material that was not part of the inquiry that was conducted before him.

(3) If one is to trace back the history of the dispute;

(a) The Appellant applied for a Gemming Licence [Hereinafter referred to as the 'Licence'] to the 1st Respondent, the National Gem and Jewellery

Authority [hereinafter referred to as the Authority], which is the issuing authority of such licences, in respect of a land called 'Galamune Kumbura'.

(b) The 4th and 5th Respondents also had made similar applications in respect of another land known as Dikwelagawa Arawa, which appears to be contiguous the land the Appellant was interested.

(c) Several other parties had intervened and participated in the inquiry that was conducted by the Authority and the application for the licence had been turned down.

(4) Consequently, the Appellant had appealed against the said refusal of the Authority to the 3rd Respondent, Secretary to the Ministry of Environment [hereinafter referred to as the 'Secretary'] in terms of Section 15(8) of the Act.

(5) Along with the Appellant the 4th and 5th Respondents also had appealed to the Secretary, in respect of the refusal to grant the licence to them by the Authority. The Secretary thereupon had consolidated both applications and had held a common inquiry in respect of both the appeals which had been held on the 12.09.2012.

(6) The learned Counsel for the Appellant contended that, at the said inquiry, representations on behalf of the 4th and 5th Respondents [the two other parties who were seeking licence], the Land Reform Commission and Basnayake Nilame of the Sabaragamuwa Maha Saman Devalaya [hereinafter referred to as the 'Devalaya"] were entertained.

(7) Accordingly, the Secretary by his letter dated 21.01.2013, had communicated his decision [A4] regarding the two appeals by the Appellant and the 4th and 5th Respondents. The Secretary had come to a finding that the land named Galamune Kumbura Dikwelagawa Arawa, are one and the same land and had recommended issuing of a licence to the 4th and 5th Respondents, however, the application of the Appellant was not allowed.

(8) It was argued on behalf of the Appellant that, in arriving at the decision, the Secretary had relied heavily on the contents of a letter submitted by the Basnayake Nilame of the Devalya. It was pointed out that the said letter had been submitted long after the inquiry and the date granted to the parties to tender written submissions. The impugned letter is dated 13.01.2013 and had been submitted four months after the inquiry was concluded.

(9) The learned Counsel for the Appellant argued that none of the parties were privy to the contents of the said letter and furthermore, the position taken by the Basnayake Nilame in the said letter is contrary to the position he took at the inquiry.

(10) Although Basnayake Nilame was not a party to the instant Appeal, this court allowed the application of the Basnayake Nilame to intervene and was added as a party by its order dated 06.03.2017 and consequently was cited as the 6th intervenient Respondent.

(11) Among other grounds, the main thrust of the argument on behalf of the Appellant was that the findings arrived at, by the Secretary upon the inquiry cannot stand, as there was a blatant violation of rules of natural justice and that, not only the 3rd Respondent had relied on extraneous matters to arrive at his conclusions but also none of the parties were given an opportunity to respond to the representations made by the Basnayake Nilame way after the conclusion of the inquiry.

(12) On behalf of the 1st to the 3rd Respondents, the learned Deputy Solicitor General submitted that, although 4th and 5th Respondents were issued with a gemming licence, it was only for a period of one year as it remained suspended in view of the present case. It was further submitted that, as the said licence has lapsed, the present appeal is now academic and granting of substantive relief prayed by the Appellant would be futile.

(13) The written submissions filed on behalf of the said Respondents, however, is silent on the main ground of appeal referred to earlier, namely the consideration of extraneous material by the 3rd Respondent in arriving at his findings. The 3rd Respondent has neither refuted the contention of the Appellant that he considered the contents of the letter submitted by the Basnayake Nilame after the inquiry nor justified his action.

(14) Sub Sections (8) to (11) of Section 15 of the Act read as follows;

(8) Where the Authority;

(a) refuses an application for a licence made under subsection (3) ;

(b) revokes a licence under subsection (7),

(16)

the applicant or the licensee may before the expiry of a period of thirty days from the date of such refusal or revocation, as the case may be, appeal to the Secretary to the Ministry of the Minister (hereinafter referred to as the Secretary)

(9) The Secretary may, on any appeal made to him under subsection (8)

(a) allow the appeal and direct the Authority to issue or renew the licence; or

(b) disallow the appeal.

(10) The Authority shall comply with any direction issued to it under subsection (9).

(11) An applicant or licensee dissatisfied with a decision of the Secretary disallowing, under subsection (9), as appeal made to such Secretary under subsection (8), may appeal from such decision of the Secretary, to the Supreme Court, within thirty days of the date on which such decision is communicated to him.

(15) The statutory provisions referred to above are unambiguous and the Secretary's mandate in exercising the powers vested in him by virtue of Section 15 (9) of the Act is to sit in appeal and review the decision of the Authority in refusing the licence and to decide whether the refusal of the licence on the material placed before the Authority is justified or not.

(16) In reviewing the decision of the Authority, the Secretary may permit the parties to make representation on their behalf, however, as a matter of rule, has to rely on the material considered by the Authority in refusing the grant of licence. In exceptional situations, however, may permit fresh material.

(17) In the instant case the reason for the refusal of the licence was twofold;

(1) The land in question was part of the corpus in a partition case [DC Rathnapura 20008/P] and that the court was yet to deliver the final judgement.

(2) The Authority was not in a position to clearly identify the respective lots claimed by the parties. [Vide letter issued by the Authority to the parties dated 16.03.2012]

(18) The Secretary only had a mandate to consider whether the Authority was justified in refusing the licences to the applicants on the ground referred to above. The Secretary, however, in upholding the decision of the Authority in refusing the licence sought by the Appellant had come to a finding that there is no distinct land called Galamune Kumbura. In doing so, the Secretary had made a distinct reference to the assertion made by the Basnayake Nilame of the Devalaya regarding the impugned lands, in the letter the Basnayake Nilame sent to the Secretary more than three months after the inquiry was concluded.

(19) The Appellant's main contention was that the Secretary ought not to have relied on the contents of the said letter of the Basnayake Nilame without first affording an opportunity to the Appellant to respond to the said assertions of the Basnayake Nilame therein. The Secretary on the other hand had overturned the decision of the Authority in refusing the licence to the 4th and 5th Respondents and had directed the Authority to issue a licence to the 4th and 5th Respondents.

(20) I am of the view that the rules of natural justice required the Secretary to afford an opportunity to the Appellant and other parties to respond to the impugned letter if the Secretary were to act on it, which the Secretary did not do.

(21) As Dr. Sunil Cooray points out [Principles of Administrative Law in Sri Lanka 4th Edition, page 477], "The traditional view was that the rules of natural justice applied only to decisions making process which the courts classified as 'judicial' and 'quasi-judicial'. Today, that is not quite the idea". Quoting Justice U de Z Gunawardena in Geeganage v. Director General of Customs [2001] 3 SLR 179, Dr. Cooray states; "that, the theory is obsolescent if not obsolete. Phrases that have come into use more recently in this context are the 'duty of fair play' 'duty of fairness' and 'acting fairly'. Justice Mark Fernando remarked, in the case of Wijayapala Mendis v. Perera [1999] 2 SLR 110 at 148 "natural justice is fairness in action".

(22) In the case of Wijayapala Mendis v. Perera [supra], the Court observed that "the proceedings of the Commission were not strictly adversarial in nature; the Commissioners had a duty to ascertain the facts themselves. In several instances, the Commission refrained from calling important witnesses". This duty to summon and examine important witnesses, is not a separate duty, but part of the duty to hear, which is the "audi alteram partem" rule.

(23) I find the Secretary fell into error when he decided to act on the contents of the letter of the Basnayake Nilame without ascertaining the veracity of its contents and/or the stand the Appellant took regarding the same. In the circumstances aforesaid I am of the view that the decision of the Secretary which is impugned in these proceedings cannot be allowed to stand. Accordingly, the decision of the Secretary [3rd Respondent] A6 dated 18.01.2013 is hereby quashed, and we direct the incumbent Secretary to reconsider the appeal of the Appellant on its merits, in terms of Section 15(9) of the Act.

Argued On: 14.09.2020.

Decided On: 19.05.2023

E.A.G.R. Amarasekara, J.

As per the petition dated 30th January 2019, the Original Plaintiff Suntel Limited had instituted an action in the Commercial High Court of the Western Province on 20th November 2001, against the Defendant – Respondent – Petitioner (hereinafter referred to as the Defendant – Petitioner) to recover a sum of Rs. 68,765,407/91 allegedly due as unpaid outstanding as of 3rd October 2000 in terms of an agreement between them. The Defendant Petitioner had filed his answer on 30th May 2002 praying inter alia under its first claim in reconvention for a sum of Rs. 41,040,185/12 being an over payment made and under its second claim in reconvention for a sum of Rs. 4,180 million comprising;

1. Rs. 2,180 million estimated loss of profit for 5 years as a result of the wrongful and unlawful disconnection of the telephone service breaching the agreement, and,

2. Rs.2000 million loss as a result of the loss of good will on that action.

The said petition further states that while the trial was proceeding the Plaintiff withdrew the said case and the Plaintiff's case was dismissed. However, the Defendant Petitioner sought to proceed with its claims in reconvention and the matter proceeded to trial accordingly. Subsequently, on 9th March 2012 learned High Court Judge delivered her judgment granting the Defendant - Petitioner the reliefs as prayed in the claims in reconvention. Being aggrieved by the said judgment of the learned Commercial High Court Judge, Plaintiff preferred an appeal to the Supreme Court on or around 16th March 2012. The said petition further reveals that thereafter, the Plaintiff Company Suntel Limited was amalgamated with the Company named Dialog Broadband Networks Private Limited and all the assets and the liabilities of Suntel Limited became assets and liabilities of Dialog Broadband Networks Private Limited, the present Plaintiff Appellant Respondent (hereinafter referred to as the Plaintiff Respondent). The appeal was taken up by this court before a bench comprising of three judges and the judgment was pronounced on 14th December 2018 in open courts and by the said judgment learned Judges of the Supreme Court held in favor of the Plaintiff –Respondent and allowed the appeal by setting aside the judgment of the Commercial High Court.

Being dissatisfied with the said judgment delivered by this court, the apex court of the country, which exercises the final appellate jurisdiction, the Defendant – Petitioner has preferred this application by the said petition before this court inter alia praying for an order setting aside the judgment dated 14th December 2018 delivered in the Supreme Court case No. SC/Appeal/53/2012. The Defendant-Petitioner further requested for a bench comprising of five or more judges of the Supreme Court be appointed to hear this matter. At the top of the caption to the petition, this application has been described as an application to review the said judgment of this court under Article 132(3)(iii) of the Constitution and / or in the exercise of its inherent powers.

The Defendant - Petitioner preferred this application in this court alleging that the judgment demonstrates extreme bias of the judges towards the Plaintiff Respondent inter alia for the following reasons;

1. Son of the presiding judge, as a junior counsel, has associated the Counsel who appeared for the Plaintiff Respondent in the Commercial High Court and the said Counsel was the junior to the Counsel who appeared in this court for the appeal filed by the Plaintiff Respondent. Nowhere has the Defendant Petitioner said that the said son of the presiding judge had appeared as a junior counsel in the relevant action in the original court or in appeal but he refers only to a different case namely CHC /282/2001. The Defendant Petitioner's allegation is that the son of the presiding judge was in association with the said Counsel of the Plaintiff Respondent almost one year prior to the pronouncement of the judgment and it has created a conflict of interest for his father who had been writing the judgment in the case SC/Appeal/53/2012 during the said association causing a reasonable suspicion as to whether the said justice was impartial in delivering the judgment.
2. There is a serious irregularity of existence of two judgments for the case SC/Appeal/53/2012, one appeared as decided and delivered on 12th December 2018 and another as decided on and pronounced on 14th December 2018. (In this context, the petitioner at no stage claims that the contents of the two judgements are different. However, there is a difference on the date of pronouncement as recorded in the copy published in the Supreme Court web site. This Court notes that the soft copy of the unsigned judgement is published in the web site by the Registry and the valid official version is the hard copy signed by the judges filed of record. Therefore, it appears that a possible typographical error in the soft copy is now being used to form accusations against the judges who heard and delivered the judgment).
3. Although the matter was argued for 10 days, only 2 days of arguments i.e., 18th and 19th of October 2016 have been taken for consideration and that written submissions have not been considered by court. This allegation is made on the basis that just before the body of the judgment and after the caption it is mentioned that the matter was argued on 18th and 19th of October 2016. However, the Defendant Petitioner fails to specifically identify any particular submission or argument that had not been considered in the judgement. On the other hand, the petition itself in paragraph 47 indicates that no party filed written submissions within the given time.

4. The judge who wrote the judgment has taken quotes from a deleted section of a document in pronouncing the judgment and other judges have consented to the judgment.
5. The said judges have overlooked an available and marked document in the appeal brief while stating that the said document does not form a part of the brief.

Items no.3,4 and 5 mentioned above, if they are true and have affected the final conclusion, might have been considered under the wider interpretation that may be given to per incuriam concept, which wider interpretation is referred to later in this order. With regard to item no.01 above, it must be noted that it is not uncommon for family members of judges or their colleagues in the University or Law College engaging in the legal profession and practicing in courts. They are independent adults who in their own right engage in the profession. The mere fact that such relationship exists between a family member of the judge and a junior counsel of the team of counsel representing one of the parties before the judge per se is not a ground to allege bias against the judge. Other than the presiding Judge's son's association with the Junior counsel for the Plaintiff- Appellant in the Appeal in a different case, no specific interest or a pecuniary interest of the presiding judge has been averred with regard to the subject matter in the instant application. In relation to item no.2 above, as observed above the difference in the date is found in the copy published in the Web and not in the official copy found in the case record. Even a typographical error in a judgement including an error relating to the date can be corrected using the inherent powers of the court. In that context, an error found in a web copy published by the Registry appears to be a far-fetched reason to blame the relevant Judges. Nonetheless, this court need not go into the merits of this allegations and make final conclusion over such allegations due to the preliminary objection taken by the opposite party which has to be upheld due to reasons given later in this order.

When this petition was to be mentioned on 12.06.2019 before the two judges who took part in the previous decision making in delivering the judgment (the other judge had gone on retirement by that time), the Defendant Petitioner has objected and has requested to appoint a bench comprising of 5 judges in terms of the Article 132(3)(iii) of the Constitution – vide minutes dated 17.05.2019 and 30.05.2019. Motions filed on 24.05.2019 by the Defendant Petitioner also indicate that the plea is to appoint a bench of five or more judges to hear the instant application. It is abundantly clear from the contents of the petition dated 30.01.2019 and the motions filed by the Petitioner, that the application of the Defendant Petitioner is not based on per incuriam concept. The Petition and said motions unambiguously indicate that the Defendant Petitioner based his application on bias of the judges, fabricating of false evidence by the judges and certain impugned criminality associated with the judgment on the part of the judges.

When this application was first filed, the learned listing judge had made a direction to support this application on 17th May 2019, and when on that day it was listed for support as usual, the bench in terms of the decision in Jayaraj Fernanadopulle V Premachandra de Silva and Others (1996) 1 S L R 70 has directed to list the matter before a bench where two of the learned judges who heard and delivered the impugned judgment would be members – vide minute dated 17.05.2019. It appears by this time the other learned judge who took part in hearing and delivering the said judgment had retired from service. Meanwhile on a motion filed by the Defendant Respondent Petitioner, His Lordship the Chief Justice has referred the present application to be considered and decided by three judges nominated by his lordship, two of them being the two learned judges who were in service after the delivering of the impugned Judgment by them. One of the learned judges who took part in the decision making has directed to support the application in open courts and later on he also went on retirement pending the consideration of this application. The learned Judge who wrote the judgment has recused from considering the application due to the contents of the application. The third judge who was nominated by His Lordship the Chief Justice had expressed the view that this court has no power to go into the allegations relating to the misconduct of the judges of this court. He has also declined from hearing this application due to the reasons recorded in the brief -vide Journal Entry dated 16.06.2020.

As per the brief, the Defendant Respondent Petitioner has filed further motions requesting for a suitably constituted bench and His Lordship the Chief Justice has made certain directives to support all the motions before a bench of 5 judges nominated by his lordship. At the end, this matter was taken up before a bench of 5 judges on 14.09.2020. On that date the Plaintiff Respondent made submissions through his counsel with regard to the preliminary objections raised and the Defendant Respondent Petitioner through his authorized agent, namely B A C Abeywardena addressed the court on the preliminary objections so raised by the Plaintiff Respondent.

It was argued by the learned President's Counsel for the Plaintiff Respondent, that the English principle of finality of a judgment of the final court of appeal in its judicial hierarchy was received into our legal system legislatively, first by the Administration of Justice Law No. 44 of 1973, section 14(5) and by the1978 constitution, through its Article 127(1). Accordingly, it was argued that the Supreme Court is the final appellate court of the country and a judgment of the Supreme Court is final and conclusive and it is the parliament that can intervene to correct a judgment which is alleged to be wrong. Accordingly, prayed for the dismissal of the application due to lack of jurisdiction of this court to hear and determine this matter.

It is worthy to see whether this Court lacks jurisdiction to entertain and hear this type of application. Attention shall first be drawn towards the relevant Articles in the Constitution.

The Article 118 of the Constitution of the Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka reads as follows;

"118.The Supreme Court of the Republic of Sri Lanka shall be the highest and final superior Court of record in the Republic and shall subject to the provisions of the Constitution exercise –

(a) jurisdiction in respect of constitutional matters;

(b) jurisdiction for the protection of fundamental rights;

(c) final appellate jurisdiction;

(d) consultative jurisdiction;

(e) jurisdiction in election petitions;

(f) jurisdiction in respect of any breach of the privileges of Parliament; and

(g) jurisdiction in respect of such other matters which Parliament may by law vest or ordain".

This is an application to review the judgment made by this court over a final appeal already made to this court under (c) above and concluded after hearing. This application does not fall within the ambit of (a) to (f) mentioned above. The Defendant Petitioner failed to draw the attention of this court to any law passed by the Parliament that empowers this court to entertain and hear an appeal or review or revision over a decision of this court made in relation to a final appeal and this court is unaware of any such law that gives a right of appeal or revision or review over a judgment of a final appeal made by this court. Hence this application does not fall within the ambit of Article 118(g) mentioned above. As stated in Jayaraj Fernanadopulle V Premachandra de Silva (1996) 1 S L R 70 our Supreme Court is a Creature of Statute and its powers are statutory. Thus, the scope of its power has to be limited to what is laid down by the Statutes but for the inherent powers any court has to meet the ends of justice and to prevent abuse of process. This court has no statutory jurisdiction conferred by the Constitution or by any other law to rehear, review, alter or vary its decision. Its decisions are final.

In some of the cases decided by this court it has been held that this court has inherent powers to correct its errors and mistakes which are demonstrably and manifestly wrong where it is necessary for the interest of justice. – See Ganeshanatham V Vivienne Goonewardena and Three Others (1984) 1 Sri L R 321, All Ceylon Commercial & Industrial Workers Union V Ceylon Petroleum corporation and others (1995) 2 Sri L R 295. Such circumstances may not fall within the restrictive interpretation given to per incuriam rule but may fall within the wider interpretation given to it as referred to later in this order. However, the present application does not refer to an error or mistake caused by this court but is based on the alleged wrongful conduct of the judges who heard the appeal.

The final appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court is further outlined by Article 127 of the constitution as follows;

"127 (1) The Supreme Court shall, subject to the Constitution, be the final Court of civil and criminal appellate jurisdiction for and within the Republic of Sri Lanka for the correction of all errors in fact or in law which shall be committed by the Court of Appeal or any Court of First Instance, tribunal or other institution and the judgements and orders of the Supreme Court shall in all cases be final and conclusive in all such matters". (Highlighted by me)

Reading of Article 118(c) and 127(1) clearly indicate that the decision made by this court in a final appeal is final and conclusive. The impugned judgment has been delivered by a bench comprising of three judges. The above quoted Articles do not create any Jurisdiction for a bench comprising of 5 or 7 or any higher number of judges to hear an appeal or a review or a revision over that judgment or decision made by a bench of three judges of this court.

The caption of the present application shows that the application was made under and in terms of Article 132(3)(iii) of the Constitution of and /or inherent powers of the Supreme Court. Article 132 does not empower this court to entertain or hear an appeal, revision or to review a judgment made by this court on a final appeal. Article 132(2) clearly states that this court can exercise its jurisdiction in different matters at the same time by several judges of the court sitting apart. Thus, it is obvious that a decision made by any division of this court is a judgment of this court.

It is worthy to refer to the decision in Hettiarachchi V Seneviratne, Deputy Bribery Commissioner and Others (No.2) (1994) 3 S.L.R 293 at 296 and 297 at this juncture. The order of the Court made in that case states as follows.

> "It is quite wrong to assume, as the petitioner does in his motion that the power of the Chief Justice under Article 132(3) to direct that an appeal, proceeding or matter be heard by a bench of five or more judges of, in his opinion, the question involved is one of general and public importance, makes any difference. That provision confers no right of appeal, revision or review." (At page 296)

> "It is well established rule that in general a court cannot rehear, review, alter or vary its own judgment once delivered. The rational of that rule is that there must be finality to litigation. Interest republicae ut sit finis litium. A court whose judgments are subject to appeal, cannot set aside or vary its judgment, even if plainly wrong in fact or in law: that can only be done in appeal. It may of course, have a limited power to clarify its judgment, and to correct accidental slips or omissions." (At page 197)

Right to appeal against an order/ judgment by a court has to be given by law. No such right has been given against a judgment of this court over a final appeal. Further, in the above decision this court held that the decision given by a bench of three judges in that case was a judgment of the Supreme Court and they were not sitting as a fragmented part of the Supreme Court. In the said Order of Court, it was specifically stated that Article 132(3) confers no right of appeal, revision or review. No doubt that article 132(3) confers power on the Chief Justice to direct that an appeal, proceeding or matter be heard by a bench of five or more judges if, in his opinion, the question involved is one of general and public importance, but the said decision indicates that it does not create a right of appeal to be considered by a higher number of judges of the same court. A similar approach was taken in the case of Suren Wickramasinghe and others V Cornel Lionel Perera and others (1996) Vol VI Part II Bar Association Law Journal Reports 5, and Fernando J, stated

> "Article 132 shows, ex facie, that the power can only be exercised in respect of a pending appeal, proceeding or matter – but not in respect of a concluded matter…….Further, in terms of Article 132(2) a judgment or order delivered by a bench of three judges is the judgment or order of the Supreme Court, and not of "some a fragmented part of the Court"; it is final [of Article 127(1)], and is not subject to appeal to another bench of Court, even if it were to consist of five, or seven, or nine or even all the Judges……."

The learned Justice further went on to say that using Article 132(3) in a way conferring right of appeal, revision or review would be to usurp legislative power, in order to create an additional right of appeal which the Constitution did not confer; and indeed, an effect to create a right of appeal with leave from the Chief Justice sitting alone. Even in Jeyaraj Fernandopulle V Premachandra de Silva and Others (supra) it was held that a decision of this Court is final; it is not subject to any appeal, revision review, re-argument or reconsideration. At page 98, with reference to Article 132 and 132 (3) it was plainly said "..Article 132 does not confer any jurisdiction on the Court. Nor does Article 132(3) empower the Chief Justice to refer any matter of public or general importance to a Bench of five or more Judges. It empowers him to constitute a Bench of five or more Judges to hear an appeal, proceeding or matter which the court has jurisdiction to entertain and decide or determine. The court has no statutory Jurisdiction to rehear, reconsider, revise, review, vary or set aside its own orders. Consequently, the Chief Justice cannot refer a matter to a Bench of five or more Judges for the purpose of revising, reviewing, varying or setting aside a decision of the Court…"

In Ganeshanatham V Vivienne Goonawardene and Others (supra) it was clearly stated that the Supreme Court has no jurisdiction to act in revision of cases decided by itself, and none of the provisions of the Constitution expressly confers such a jurisdiction on it, nor has the legislature conferred such a jurisdiction by law. It was further stated that the Supreme Court is a court of last resort in appeal and there is finality in its judgment whether it is right or wrong and that is the policy of the Law. I do not see that later amendments to the Constitution have brought any changes to the said policy.

What is discussed above confirms that Article 127 of our Constitution contains the principal of finality. Thus, this court has no jurisdiction to entertain or hear the present application under any statutory provision and as such the Defendant Petitioner's application made under and in terms of Article 132(3) cannot succeed.

Now this court must consider whether this application can be entertained and heard in exercising the inherent powers of this court as the Defendant Petitioner has referred to the inherent powers of this court in invoking the jurisdiction of this court. Inherent powers are to prevent abuse of process and to meet the ends of justice. There may be very limited occasions where a court would exercise its powers in an already concluded matter or application. For clarification of its order or judgment or to correct any accidental omissions or slips or clerical or arithmetical mistakes, a court may revisit a concluded matter. In the same way courts, to meet the ends of justice may vacate its decisions made in per incuriam. In its restricted sense a decision made in per incuriam means a decision made in ignorance or forgetfulness of an existing statute or a binding decision. [for restricted interpretation of per incuriam concept, see Huddersfield Police Authority V Watson (1947) 1 All E R 193, Alasupillai V Yavetpillai (1949) 39 C L W 107, Hettiarachchi V Seneviratne, Deputy Bribery Commissioner and Others (No.2) (1994) 3 Sri L R 293.] However, the dictionary meaning of the Latin term per incuriam appears to connote something similar to ''through lack of care". [for a broader meaning of per incuriam, see Gunasena V Bandaratilleke (2000) 1 Sri L R 292 at 301 and 302 and Kariawasam V Priyadharshani (2004) 1 Sri L R 189]. Adopting the extreme wider meaning represented by the said dictionary meaning may become an obstacle to reach finality in litigation, since lack of care may even appear in evaluation of evidential material after every party is given a chance to present their stances and evidence. Anyway, our courts on certain occasions, where mistake was so obvious, have used the per incuriam concept in much wider meaning than Lord Goddard's interpretation in Huddersfield Police Authority V Watson above. [for such wider application see King V Baron (1926) 4 Times of Ceylon Reports 3, The Police Officer of Mawalla V Galapatha (1915) 1 C W R 197, V.A. Ranmenika V B. A. S. Tissera 65 N L R 214, Kariawasam V Priyadharshani (supra) and Gunasena V Bandaratillake (supra)]. However, it must be noted that this application does not allege any accidental omission or slip or any clerical or arithmetical errors. Neither it requires any clarification of the judgment made in the final appeal nor it alleges any unintentional obvious mistake and/or error. The Defendant Petitioner does not allege that the impugned judgment was made in per incuriam whether in its restricted or wider sense. Thus, this application does not fall under those categories to reconsider the order made. If the allegations fell under those categories, it could have been considered in a better way by the same judges who delivered the judgment. It is clear from the record that the Defendant Petitioner was objecting for the same judges who delivered the judgement considering this application. The allegation made in this application contemplates a sort of a new cause of action against the judges who heard and decided the final appeal for them being bias and /or being acted in a fraudulent manner and/or involved in fabricating false evidence etc. which allegedly represents an intentional wrongdoing by the said judges.

It is also worthy to refer to the decision made in Jeyaraj Fernandopulle v Premachandra De Silva and Others (1996) (supra) again, since there too was a decision made on an application to revisit the judgment made by a bench comprising of three judges by a higher number of judges. Even though, in the said decision it was clearly said that this court has no statutory jurisdiction to rehear, reconsider, revisit, review, vary or set aside its orders, it also recognized that there are certain circumstances under which a Court has the power to re consider judgments or order given by it using its inherent powers. Some of the circumstances discussed in the said case, where inherent powers may be used to revisit a decision already made, is tabled below with a comparison to the present application before this court.

1. Orders made Per incuriam – In this regard several cases have been referred there in the Jeyaraj Fernandopulle case. Some have been referred to above.	Present application as explained above, has not been presented on the premise that it is made per incuriam
2. Presence of clerical mistake or error from an accidental slip or omission- Referring to Marambe Kumarihamy v Perera (1919) VI C W R 325, Padma Fernando V T. S. Fernando (1956) 58 N L R 262 etc.	Present application is not based on an accidental slip or omission.
3. Where a need arises to vary or clarify the order to carry out its own meaning and where the language used is doubtful to make it plain. Referring to Lawree V Lees (1881) 7 App.Cas 19.34, Re Swire (1895) 30 CH. D 239, Paul E De Costa & Sons v S Gunaratne 71 N L R 214, Hatton V Harris (1892) A C 547 etc	Present application is not made for such purposes.
4. Where a party has been wrongly named or described or where the judgment is a nullity owing to the fact that it was delivered against a person who is dead or a non-existing company- Referring to Halsbury, Vol.26-page 26	Present application does not relate to such circumstances.
5. Where the order or judgment has been delivered in default or ex parte.	Present application is not made on such grounds.
6. Where there is a serious irregularity in procedure that makes the judgment a nullity- for e.g., not serving summons or not following a mandatory provision of law.	Present application is not based on such grounds.

7. To repair an injury caused by an act of court done without jurisdiction (by an invalid order). - for e.g., executing a decree to evict a party without a decree for possession.	Present application is not similar to the said situation. In this occasion the judges were using the jurisdiction they had to hear and decide the matter. Allegation is that they were bias, acted fraudulently in creating new evidence and or ignoring available evidence and there is a criminality attached to such behavior. In a way a new cause of action that purportedly accrued while the case was being heard and decided.
8. Dismissal of an FR application on a misunderstanding of facts placed by the opposite party that the petitioner has been or due to be released from detention. – Referring to Palitha v O I C Police Station, Polonnaruwa & Others (1993) 1 Sri L R 161	Present application is not similar to this.
9. An order made on wrong facts given to the prejudice of the Petitioner – Referring to Wijeysinghe et al V Uluwita (1933) 34 N L R 362	Present application differs from this and is based on allegations made against the judges.
10. An action to rescind a judgment which has been obtained by fraud. - Referring to Halsbury vol 26, paragraph 560, page 285 .	In the present application, the allegation is not that the Court was deceived by fraud and obtained the judgment but the court itself was bias, fraudulent and acted in a manner that attracts criminal liability. Thus, as alleged, it is a kind of new cause of action.
11. An action to rescind a judgment on the discovery of new evidence which were not available before. – Referring to Halsbury vol 26 paragraph 561, Loku Banda V Assen 2 N L R 31	Present application is not to rescind a judgment based on discovery of new evidence but on certain allegations against judges who heard the appeal.

In my view, most of the instances referred to above in the table under item 2 to 9 may fall within the wider definition of per incuriam or obvious mistakes since those instances relate to where the court make such decision in ignorance of certain situation due to lack of care or by being misled by the circumstances etc. On the other hand, the instances discussed in the said Jeyaraj Fernandopulle case may not be exhaustive since there may be many occasions that demands the use of inherent powers of the court depending on the circumstances of each case.

However, the situations discussed in the said Jeyaraj Fernandopulle case where inherent powers had been used are not similar to facts of the present application. It must be mentioned here that inherent powers are adjuncts to the existing jurisdiction to remedy injustice and cannot be made the source of a new jurisdiction to revise a judgment rendered by a court - vide All Ceylon Commercial and Industrial Workers Union V Ceylon Petroleum Corporation and Another (supra), Ganeshanatham v Goonewardene (supra). Thus, in my view, the inherent powers this court has are adjuncts to the statutorily given jurisdictions as contemplated by Article 118 of the constitution and do not extend to entertain an application such as one tendered by the Defendant-Respondent-Petitioner.

However, as said before, our Supreme Court is creature of statute. Thus, its powers have to be given by the statute. Our constitution does not give supervisory jurisdiction over its own decisions. As described above inherent powers are adjuncts to existing jurisdiction and cannot use to create new jurisdictions to review, revise or reconsider its own decision.

The Defendant Petitioner in one of the motions has referred to Bandaranaike V De Alwis and Others (1982) 2 S L R 664 to indicate that this court can hear an application against another judge of this court on allegation of being bias. However, there the impugned decision was not a decision of the Supreme Court, but a decision made as a commissioner of a Presidential Commission. Thus, it has no relevance to the matter at hand.

As stated in Mohamed V Annamalai Chettiar (1932) 12 C L Rec 228, the first question that has to be asked is whether this application comes within the scope of inherent jurisdiction of this court and as per the reasons enumerated above answer would have to be in the negative.

For the foregoing reasons, it is my considered view that this application made by the Defendant Petitioner to revisit the judgment dated 14.12.2018 and the motions followed with various applications should not have been entertained by this court since this court has no supervisory jurisdiction to reconsider, review, amend or set aside its own orders on the alleged circumstances.

Hence, the application made by the petition dated 30.01.2019 and the motions that followed filed by the Defendant Petitioners are dismissed with costs.

K. PRIYANTHA FERNANDO, J

1. The learned President's Counsel for the Applicants-Respondents-Appellants as well as the learned President's Counsel for the Respondent-Appellant-Respondent agreed that it would suffice for this court to pronounce one judgment in respect of both the appeals, namely SC/Appeal/104/2019 and SC/Appeal/105/2019 as both the appeals emanate from a single award of the Labour Tribunal and a single judgment of the High Court.

2. The Applicants-Respondents-Appellants (hereinafter referred to as the applicants) instituted proceedings in the Labour Tribunal of Negombo, against the Respondent-Petitioner-Respondent (hereinafter referred to as the Respondent) for compensation, on the basis that their employment was constructively terminated.

3. The learned President of the Labour Tribunal of Negombo, by her award dated 31.10.2017 [A-2] held in favour of the applicants stating that, the respondent had constructively terminated the employment of the applicants and ordered compensation to be paid to the applicants in a sum of Rs.8,419,383 and Rs.8,788,602.69, respectively.

4. Being aggrieved by the said award of the learned President of the Labour Tribunal, the respondent preferred an appeal to the High Court of Negombo. The learned High Court Judge delivering his judgment dated 30.10.2018 [A-3] held in favour of the respondent company holding that, the applicants were removed from the position of directors of the company by virtue of the resolution that was passed and according to the Articles of Association of the company, the employment of the applicants also ceased altogether by the operation of law. It was further held that, as there was no termination of employment by the respondent company, the Labour Tribunal had no jurisdiction in respect of the matter.

5. Being aggrieved by the judgment of the learned High Court Judge, the applicants appealed to this Court seeking special leave to appeal. This Court granted leave to appeal on the following questions of law;

    I. Is the employer respondent justified in coming to the conclusion that the applicant ceases to be an employee under Article 81(2) once he ceases to be a director?

    II. Is the employer entitled to say that it (the employer) has not terminated the services of the employee by operation of Article 81(2)?

    III. Did the employee discharge his burden in establishing constructive termination as pleaded in the application to the Labour Tribunal?

6. The applicants state that, they were initially employed by the respondent company in 1991 and were appointed to the positions of Executive Directors in the year 2005.

Thereafter, by letters dated 07.04.2005 [A-5] in SC/appeal/105/2019 and [A-23] in SC/Appeal/104/2019, they were appointed as directors of the company with effect from 01.05.2005. Thereafter, a resolution was passed by the respondent company at the Annual General Meeting held on 28.09.2012, and by letter dated 08.10.2012 [A-14] in SC/Appeal/105/2019 and [A-30] in SC/Appeal/104/2019 the applicants were informed that they have been removed from their offices as directors of the company with effect from 28.09.2012. The respective letters further stated that, according to the Articles of Association of the company read with the provisions of the Companies Act No. 07 of 2007, as a result of ceasing to be a director of the company, the applicants no longer held an executive position in the company and further stated that, by virtue of this, they have also ceased to hold the respective offices initially held by them as Product Development Director and Production Director in the company.

7. Since the first and the second questions of law set out above are interconnected, those questions can be considered together.

8. At the argument of this appeal, the learned President's Counsel for the applicants stated that, the reliance placed on Article 81(2) of the Articles of Association of the respondent company was erroneous and inapplicable to the facts of the instant case.

9. The position of the applicants is that, Article 81(1) and 81(2) of the Articles of Association of the company must be read together. Further, simply due to the fact that the applicants ceased to hold their respective offices as directors of the respondent company, does not mean that they cease to be employees of the company. In that, it is their position that, the executive positions were not given to them on the basis of Article 81(1) of the Articles of Association of the company, and that although they were later appointed as directors of the company, they continued to be employees of the company. It was further stated that, their appointment as directors of the company did not bring their employment to an end as their salaries were continued to be paid. Therefore, it is their position that, Article 81 (2) of the Articles of Association of the company does not apply to them.

10. In his written submissions, the learned President's Counsel for the applicants submitted that, there exists no restriction on appointing employees to the board of directors contained in the Companies Act, nor is there any restriction to the same effect in the Articles of Association of the company, and therefore, holding employment with the company and accepting the office of a director of the company are not mutually exclusive events.

11. The learned President's Counsel for the applicants further submitted that, the position of the respondent stating that when an employee assumes the office of a director his employment terminates by operation of law, is unsupported by any authority, as there exists no document in the form of a letter of resignation, nor is there any fresh letter of employment upon assuming office of director. He further submits that, ETF and EPF contributions have also been continued to be made to the applicants by the respondent company.

12. The position of the respondent is that, according to Article 18(2) of the Articles of Association of the company, ceasing to hold office as a director of the company would not only amount to a termination of any executive office held in such company, but it would also terminate any existing contract of employment with the company. The respondent states that, the applicants by ceasing to hold office as directors of the company, have by the operation of the law ceased to hold office as employees of the company as well.

13. The learned President's Counsel for the respondent in his written submissions contended that, a director is an employee to the extent of his executive role as a director. It was further contended that contribution of EPF and ETF is not determinative of the status of employment.

14. The learned President's Counsel for the respondent further submitted that, when the applicant accepted the appointment as a director of the company and became a member of the board of directors, his previous employment ceased. He further submitted that, it is completely misleading for the applicant to portray his appointment to the board of directors as a promotion, as the letter of appointment dated 07.04.2005 categorically uses the term "new appointment" clearly showing that it is not a continuation of the previous employment and therefore, upon being appointed as directors of the company, the original employment of the applicant with the company ceased.

15. The Articles of Association of the respondent company sets out that,

Article 81(1)

"The Board may from time to time appoint one or more of their body to be the holder of any executive office, including the office of Chairman, Deputy Chairman or Managing or Joint Managing Director or Manager on such terms and for such period as they may determine. A Director so appointed shall not whilst holding that office, require any qualification or subject to retirement by rotation or be taken into account in determining the rotation of retirement of Directors."

Article 81(2)

> "The appointment of any Director to the office of Chairman or Managing or Joint Managing Director or Manager or any other executive office shall be subject to termination if he ceases from any cause to be a Director but without prejudice to any claim he may have for damages for breach of any contract of service between him and the Company."

16. It is my view that, Article 81(1) of the Articles of Association of the respondent company relates to the power of the board to appoint directors for any executive office of the company and Article 81(2) provides that, where a director ceases to hold office as a director, such appointment would be terminated. In a meaningful reading and interpretation of Articles 81(1) and 81(2) of the Articles of Association of the respondent company, it is clear that, Article 81(2) applies to appointments that were made under Article 81(1), and thus, the Articles 81(1) and 81(2) must be read together.

17. The applicants in the instant case had been employees of the company for a long period of time when they were appointed as directors of the company. It is vital to note that, even after being appointed as directors of the company, their salaries under the contract of employment were continued to be paid and the EPF and ETF contributions were also continued to be made. In light of these facts, it is clear that the executive offices held by them were not given to them in terms of Article 81(1) of the Articles of Association of the company. Hence, the employment of the applicants that continued even after they were appointed as directors, will not cease in terms of Article 81(2), as Article 81(2) does not apply to the applicants in the instant case. Therefore, in answering the first question of law that was raised, I hold that the respondent was not justified in having come to the conclusion that the applicants ceased to be employees of the company under Article 81(2) once they ceased to be directors of the company.

18. In answering the second question of law which is more or less connected to the first question of law, it is my view that, in the circumstances of this case, the respondent company is not entitled to say that the employment of the applicants were terminated by the operation of law in terms of Article 81(2).

19. It is clear that the learned High Court Judge has erred in coming to the finding that the termination of employment of the applicants occurred through the operation of law and that there was no constructive termination of employment in the instant case.

20. In addressing the final question of law, it was submitted by the learned President's Counsel for the applicants that, the respondent company without resorting to the practice of seeking the voluntary resignation from the applicants, sought to explore less ethical means to secure their exit.

21. It was submitted on behalf of the applicants that, the respondent company has attempted to introduce a Non-Disclosure Agreement (NDA), which attempted to impose unfavourable covenants towards the applicants. The applicants have proposed amendments to the NDA prior to placing their signatures to it. The applicants state that, following their reluctance to sign the NDA, the respondent company has taken a decision to subject the applicants to a full strip search prior to entering the respondent's compound. This has been admitted in evidence. There exists no proof to show that this rule was not selectively applied. Therefore, it is submitted that the applicants were victimized. In these circumstances, from 30.08.2012 the applicants have not reported to work based on constructive termination of employment.

22. The learned President's Counsel for the respondent submitted that, the burden of proving constructive termination of employment is on the applicants. He further submitted that, the security procedure at the gate to the company and premises was a normal procedure, therefore it cannot be considered as amounting to degrading treatment. Therefore, the applicants did not report to work on their own free will without justifiable reasons.

23. It was submitted on behalf of the applicants that, the respondent company had taken steps to amend the Articles of Association of the company to facilitate the removal of the applicants from the company. The said Articles were adopted by a Special Resolution passed on 04.05.2012 replacing the previous Articles of Association of the company.

24. Lord Denning in Western Excavating Ltd v. Sharp [1977] EWCA Civ 2. said;

> "If the employer is guilty of conduct which is a significant breach going to the root of the contract of employment, or which shows that the employer no longer intends to be bound by one or more of the essential terms of the contract, then the employee is entitled to treat himself as discharged from any further performance. If he does so then he terminates the contract by reason of the employer's conduct. He is constructively dismissed. …"

25. The learned President of the Labour Tribunal in his order [A-2] discussed constructive termination of employment in detail, giving due regard to the facts and circumstances of the instant case and emphasizing on the conduct of the respondent company which demonstrate how the respondent company by their conduct, has made the applicants constructively terminate their employment.

26. Thus, in answering the third question of law, the applicants have effectively established constructive termination of employment by discharging their burden of proof.

27. In view of the first two questions of law being answered in the negative and the final question of law being answered in the affirmative, it is my view that, there is merit in this appeal. Accordingly, I set aside the judgment of the learned High Court Judge and reaffirm the order of the learned President of the Labour Tribunal. The applicants are entitled to costs in the cause.

Appeals allowed.

Argued on : 03-12-2021

Decided on : 22-09-2023

P Padman Surasena J

The Plaintiff - Respondent, Sri Lanka Savings Bank Limited (Hereinafter sometimes referred to as the Plaintiff Bank), instituted action in the High Court by filing the plaint dated 9th August 2002 seeking to enforce a mortgage bond to recover a sum of money owed by the 1st and 2nd Defendants. Following a default in the settlement, the Plaintiff Bank had obtained an order for the sale of the mortgaged property.

The Court Commissioner, Licensed Auctioneer and Valuer - Petitioner (Hereinafter sometimes referred to as the Petitioner), claims that he had been directed by the Registrar of the High Court to submit a Valuation Report relating to the said mortgaged property. However, the Plaintiff Bank has taken up the position that no commission was issued to the Petitioner in regard to the said mortgaged property and no other auctioneer was appointed by Court to value the property and conduct the auction other than Mr. K. P. Nawanandana Silva.

The Petitioner on the 9th February 2016 has made an application to the Commercial High Court to recover a professional fee due to him from the Plaintiff Bank for a Valuation Report dated 5th October 2015 in respect of the mortgaged property which he states has been submitted to Court. It must be noted that the said Valuation Report has been referred to in the court proceedings, as the Valuation Report tendered by motion dated 2nd October 2015. However, it is the position of the Petitioner that the same was tendered on the 5th October 2015 and that it has been erroneously recorded as 2nd October 2015 in the Execution file maintained by the Registrar of the Commercial High Court.

Subsequently, the Commercial High Court upon consideration of the matter, by order dated 8th August 2016 has refused the said application for the recovery of professional fees claimed by the Petitioner. The Commercial High Court, in that order, had affirmed the position of the Plaintiff Bank that no commission was issued to the Petitioner. The order of the learned Judge of the Commercial High Court has been produced marked P. Thereafter, the Petitioner by the petition dated 20th December 2016 filed the instant Revision Application seeking inter alia to revise and set aside the order dated 8th August 2016 of the learned Judge of the Commercial High Court marked P.

The primary issue this Court has to decide in the instant matter is whether this Court has jurisdiction to hear and determine this Revision Application. In other words, this Court has to first decide whether the Supreme Court has Revisionary Jurisdiction to entertain the instant application.

Accordingly, this Court on 3rd December 2021 heard and concluded the submissions of both learned Counsel for the Petitioner and the Plaintiff Bank regarding the preliminary issue whether this Court has Revisionary Jurisdiction to entertain the instant application of the Petitioner.

At the outset, I must mention here that when this application was taken up before this Court for argument, the learned Counsel who appeared for the Petitioner was unable to point to any specific legal provision which has enabled him, to file and maintain this application.

Although Court has granted time for the learned Counsel who appeared for the Petitioner to file written submissions to substantiate any possible argument in this regard, he has failed to tender any such written submission to Court. Thus, I am unable to ascertain exactly, the legal argument (if any), he was to advance in the expected written submissions.

Be that as it may, I would now proceed to consider whether the Petitioner is entitled to file the instant Revision Application in this Court.

The plenary jurisdiction of this Court is set out in Article 127 of the Constitution of the Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka; it is as follows.

> "127 (1) The Supreme Court shall, subject to the Constitution, be the final Court of civil and criminal appellate jurisdiction for and within the Republic of Sri Lanka for the correction of all errors in fact or in law which shall be committed by the Court of Appeal or any Court of First Instance, tribunal or other institution and the judgments and orders of the Supreme Court shall in all cases be final and conclusive in all such matters.

(2) The Supreme Court shall, in the exercise of its jurisdiction, have sole and exclusive cognizance by way of appeal from any order, judgement, decree, or sentence made by the Court of Appeal, where any appeal lies in law to the Supreme Court and it may affirm, reverse or vary any such order, judgment, decree or sentence of the Court of Appeal and may issue such directions to any Court of First Instance or order a new trial or further hearing in any proceedings as the justice of the case may require, and may also call for and admit fresh or additional evidence if the interests of justice so demands and may in such event, direct that such evidence be recorded by the Court of Appeal or any Court of First Instance."

Article 127 (2) sets out what this Court can do in the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction and therefore the said Article comes into operation only when it considers an appeal lawfully filed before it.

Article 127 (1) has specifically subjected itself to the other provisions of the Constitution. This is clear from the wording "The Supreme Court shall, subject to the Constitution,.." , found in that Article.

Thus, Article 127 (1) must be read with Article 128 of the Constitution. This is because Article 128 is another provision in the Constitution which has specified several channels through which any appeal can reach this Court. Article 128 of the Constitution as it was then,[1] is as follows.

"128 (1) An appeal shall lie to the Supreme Court from any final order, judgment, decree or sentence of the Court of Appeal in any matter or proceedings, whether civil or criminal, which involves a substantial question of law, if the Court of Appeal grants leave to appeal to the Supreme Court ex mero motu or at the instance of any aggrieved party to such matter or proceedings;

(2) The Supreme Court may, in its discretion, grant special leave to appeal to the Supreme Court from any final or interlocutory order, judgment, decree, or sentence made by the Court of Appeal in any matter or proceedings, whether civil or criminal, where the Court of Appeal has refused to grant leave to appeal to the Supreme Court, or where in the opinion of the Supreme Court, the case or matter is fit for review by the Supreme Court:

Provided that the Supreme Court shall grant leave to appeal in every matter or proceedings in which it is satisfied that the question to be decided is of public or general importance.

(3) Any appeal from an order or judgment of the Court of Appeal, made or given in the exercise of its jurisdiction under Article 139, 140, 141, 142 or 143 to which the President, a Minister, a Deputy Minister or a public officer in his official capacity is a party, shall be heard and determined within two months of the date of filing thereof.

(4) An appeal shall lie directly to the Supreme Court on any matter and in the manner specifically provided for by any other law passed by Parliament.

Article 128 (1), (2), (3) refers only to appeals from orders or judgements of the Court of Appeal. The instant matter is neither an appeal nor against an order or judgement of the Court of Appeal. Thus, Articles 128 (1), (2), (3) have no relevance to the instant application. Article 128 (4) of the Constitution also refers only to appeals. Since the instant matter is not an appeal Article 128 (4) is also not relevant to this application.

In Martin Vs Wijewardena.[2] Jameel J (with Ranasinghe CJ and Amerasinghe J agreeing) stated that the right of appeal is a statutory right and must be expressly created and granted by statute.

In Mariam Beebee Vs. Seyed Mohamed,[3] Sansoni C.J. who delivered the majority decision of the Divisional Bench which heard that case stated that the power of revision is an extraordinary power which is quite independent of and distinct from the appellate jurisdiction of the Court.

[2] (1989) 2 Sri. L. R. 409.
[3] (1965) 68 NLR 36.

The above dicta were cited with approval by Soza J (with Sharvananda J, Wanasundera J, Wimalaratne J and Ratwatte J agreeing) in a Divisional Bench decision of this Court in Somawathie Vs. Madawela and others,[4] and later by Kulatunga J (with G P S De Silva CJ and Ramanathan J agreeing) in Gunaratne Vs. Thambinayagam and others.[5]

Revisionary Jurisdiction is not an inherent power of Court. Thus, Revisionary Jurisdiction must have been conferred on a Court to enable it to exercise such jurisdiction. It is then only that a party will be able to invoke such jurisdiction.

His Lordship Amerasinghe J in the case of Jeyaraj Fernandopulle Vs. Premachandra De Silva and Others,[6] stated that "the Supreme Court is a creature of statute and its powers are statutory."

It is Article 138 of the Constitution which has conferred Revisionary Jurisdiction on the Court of Appeal and the Provincial High Courts. As Article 138 has conferred this jurisdiction subject to any law, this jurisdiction must be understood by reading it with High Courts of Provinces (Special Provisions) Act No. 19 of 1990 or Act No. 54 of 2006 depending on whether the relevant matter is civil or criminal. However, I find no such enabling provision in our law to enable the Supreme Court to exercise Revisionary Jurisdiction in respect of the instant application.

In the case of Mahesh Agri Exim (Pvt) Ltd Vs. Gaurav Imports (Pvt) Ltd. and others,[7] this Court had to consider the question whether this Court has Revisionary Jurisdiction against orders made by the Commercial High Court. I had the privilege of agreeing with His Lordship Justice Priyantha Jayawardena who stated in that case, the following.

> "The Counsel for the Petitioner submitted that a grave prejudice has been caused to his client and therefore, the Supreme Court should intervene in this matter. He further submitted that this is a fit and proper case to exercise revisionary jurisdiction and/or inherent powers of this Court.

[4] (1983) 2 Sri. L. R. 15.
[5] (1993) 2 Sri. L. R. 355.
[6] (1996) 1 Sri. L. R. 70.
[7] SC Revision No. 02/2013, decided on 30-07-2019.

We are of the opinion that this Court has no jurisdiction to entertain Revision applications arising from the orders made by the Commercial High Court. Further, the inherent powers of this Court cannot be entertained in this application."

Let me also have the indulgence to refer to the case of Udaya Saman Subhasinghe Vs. People's Merchant PLC.[8] The Petitioner - Respondent in that case (People's Merchant PLC) raised a preliminary objection to the maintainability of that appeal stating that there is no legal provision which provided a right of appeal for the Respondent-Appellant (Udaya Saman Subhasinghe) i.e., to file such an appeal to this Court without first obtaining the leave of the Supreme Court on a question of law, against the impugned order made by the High Court under section 31 (1) of the Arbitration Act. The learned counsel who appeared for the Respondent - Appellant in that case, conceded that the Respondent - Appellant had not first obtained the leave of the Supreme Court on a question of law in that appeal. However, he thereafter submitted that this Court nevertheless has jurisdiction to entertain this appeal both under Article 127 of the Constitution and in the exercise of revisionary powers of this Court. With the concurrence of Her Ladyship Murdu N. B. Fernando PC J and His Lordship A. H. M. D. Nawaz J, I took the view that this Court does not have revisionary powers to intervene and consider that appeal.

In the above circumstances and for the foregoing reasons, I am of the view that this Court does not have Revisionary Jurisdiction to intervene and consider the instant application. I proceed to dismiss this application.

[8] SC CHC Appeal No. 14/2014, decided on 23-06-2021.

MAHINDA SAMAYAWARDHENA J

I had the privilege of reading the draft judgment of Justice Surasena, and I regret very much that I find myself unable to agree with it.

The petitioner filed this revision application against the order of the Commercial High Court made against him dated 08.08.2016. He states that as he is not a party to the case, he has no right of appeal to this Court against the said order in terms of section 5 of the High Court of the Provinces (Special Provisions) Act, No. 10 of 1996, and therefore he has no alternative but to come before this Court by way of revision. If that is correct, there should be a place for the petitioner to challenge the order. That order cannot be considered both as the first and the final order.

The Court of Appeal has no appellate, revisionary or restitutio in integrum jurisdiction over the judgments or orders of the Commercial High Court.

It is significant to note that this revision application was supported for notice before this Court on 13.02.2017 and this Court, after hearing both parties, decided to issue formal notice on the respondent bank and allowed both parties to file objections, counter objections, written submissions, and fixed the matter for argument.

The case came before the present bench at the argument stage. If this Court did not have jurisdiction to entertain this revision application, the previous bench could not have issued formal notice and fixed the matter for argument.

The respondent bank does not take up a jurisdictional objection. The respondent bank moves to dismiss the application of the petitioner in limine on different grounds: failure to plead exceptional circumstances, failure to name necessary parties and failure to tender necessary documents.

This Court has entertained revision applications in the past. One such example is the case of People's Bank v. Ocean Queen Marine (Pvt) Ltd reported in [2016] 1 Sri LR 141.

If this Court is to dismiss the application for want of jurisdiction at this stage, in my view, both parties shall be given a full hearing. Subject to taking up a different position after a full hearing, I am unable to decide at this juncture that the Supreme Court does not under any circumstances have revisionary jurisdiction or at least inherent jurisdiction to remedy an injustice committed by the Commercial High Court, especially when there is no right of appeal.

ALUWIHARE PC, J

A Rule was issued against the Respondent Attorney-at-Law, Alwapillai Gangatharan, (hereinafter referred to as the Respondent) for the breach of Rule Nos. 60 and 61 of the Supreme Court [Conduct and Etiquette of Attorneys-at-Law] Rules of 1998, alleging that the Respondent, by the said breach, had committed deceit or malpractice in terms of Section 42(2) of the Judicature Act, No. 02 of 1978.

The Rule was read out and a copy of the same was handed over to the Respondent on 23.05.2022, however no plea was recorded on that day and the matter was fixed for the 02-06-2022. On the said date the Rule being read over for the second time, the Respondent, at the first given opportunity, pleaded guilty to the same.

When the matter was taken up for further inquiry on 05-07-2022, the learned counsel for the Respondent made submissions in mitigation on his behalf.

Before considering the matters pleaded in mitigation, we wish to place the facts germane to the Rule.

A written complaint dated 12th February 2016 was made to the President of the Bar Association of Sri Lanka by Edward Megarry, Second Secretary (Migration) of the British High Commission in Sri Lanka (hereinafter referred to as the Complainant) alleging deceit and malpractice on the part of the Respondent for furnishing a letter dated 5th June 2015 falsely affirming the existence of a case bearing No.28223/5/2008 in the Magistrate's Court of Colombo, along with documents purporting to be Summons to be served and a warrant of arrest issued by the Kotahena Police station against one Machado, in order to mount support for a claim for asylum in the United Kingdom for the said person. Upon receipt of this complaint, the Administrative Secretary of the Bar Association, directed by the Chairman of the Disciplinary Inquiry panel "11" of the Bar Association, by way of letter dated 26th November 2016, required the Respondent to forward his observations regarding the complaint, by way of an Affidavit. The Bar Association also informed the Respondent that the inquiry into the matter would be held in camera., requesting his presence along with witnesses (if any). On 6th December 2016, the Respondent filed an Affidavit declaring inter alia, that he had not sent the fictitious documents so alleged and that he had no knowledge of the 'Kotahena Police Matter'.

Upon conclusion of the inquiry, the Report of the Special Panel of Inquiry of the Bar Association on the matter was communicated to the Registrar of this Court by letter dated 26th September 2018 by the Bar Association. The report detailed the following:

a. That the Respondent had admitted to issuing the letter dated 5th June 2015 regarding one Mr. Machado, who was unknown to him, affirming that Mr. Machado was held at the Kotahena Police Station on suspicion of being involved in the murder of Mr. Lakshman Kadirgamar, that the suspect was produced in court and subsequently provided bail, that the matter was then still under investigation, that there was a warrant of arrest issued on 17th October 2008 against the suspect in Case No.28223/5/2008 in the Chief Magistrate's Court of Colombo.

b. That although the Respondent did not know the suspect, he had known the suspect's uncle, one Joe Fernando, both as a client and as a friend, and claimed to have acted in the trust placed on Joe Fernando and one Raju (a private secretary to former Minister Douglas Devananda) when issuing the said letter.

c. That a Law Firm, operating under the name and offices of 'Nag law Associates' based in the United Kingdom, operated by one Sakunthala, who was a cousin of the Respondent and her husband one Naguleswaran, Attorney-at-law had requested that he provide such details in a letter.

d. That an inquiring officer of the British High Commission had recorded a statement from the Respondent on the matter, whereupon he had confirmed that he issued such letter.

e. That upon inquiry by the officer of the British High Commission, the Respondent had himself inquired into the matter and verified from the Kotahena Police that there was no case registered under the number and no warrant of arrest as mentioned was issued against Machado.

f. That the Respondent had not sent a letter of apology to the Complainant British High Commission even after realizing that the representations he made on behalf of Machado were false.

The Respondent had also admitted to the violation of the Oath of allegiance to the Republic of Sri Lanka and the Oath he had undertaken as an Attorney-at-Law and expressed his regret to the panel.

Proceedings were initiated against the Respondent before this court for the suspension from practice or removal from the office of Attorney-at-law under Section 42(2) of the Judicature Act, No. 02 of 1978 read with Supreme Court Rules (part VII) of 1978 made under Article 136 of the Constitution.

The learned counsel for the Respondent, making submissions in mitigation, drew the attention of the court to the following matters:

a. That the Respondent had not previously been involved in any matter related to discipline or professional misconduct.
b. That the incident would not have occurred if not for the trust the Respondent placed in the Respondent's cousin and his friends.
c. That the Respondent is 70 years of age, of good character, and has been in practice since 1985.
d. That the Respondent now expresses regret and remorse over the matter and offers an unqualified apology to the Court over his conduct.

The learned Deputy Solicitor General in his submissions invited the court to consider, that the present complaint had been by the British High Commission, and had cast a reflection on the legal profession. The learned Deputy Solicitor General also submitted however that the Respondent had, from the onset, accepted responsibility for his actions.

The Court observes that the representations made by the Respondent to the British High Commission are matters of a serious nature and he would have known that the material submitted by him, would in all probability be considered in deciding the application for asylum by Machado and that the Respondent had the full knowledge that the material supplied by him was likely to mislead the officials entrusted with the task of processing the application for asylum referred to.

It is apt to recall the words of Justice Dr. A.R.B. Amerasinghe regarding the non-exhaustive nature of the Supreme Court Rules, found in his book 'Professional Ethics and Responsibilities of Lawyers'

"The Sri Lankan Rules do not exhaust the legal, moral and ethical considerations that should inform an attorney. No code of ethics is or is meant to be exhaustive. This is generally accepted." [Professional Ethics and Responsibilities of Lawyers, 2018, Stamford Lake (Pvt) Ltd., Fifth Edition, p. 7]

Supreme Court Rules 60 and 61 of 1998 do not expressly address the situation relating to the facts of the present case. They do, however, call attention to the severity of the consequences when Attorneys-at-law do not accept personal responsibility for their work or conduct. This court is entitled to examine and finds instructive aid from the Codes of Conduct for Attorneys-at-law in comparative common law jurisdictions. I have found that 'Rule C20' of the prescribed Code of Conduct for Barristers in the United Kingdom, as it appears presently in Version 4.6 of the Bar Standards Board Handbook, comprehensively elucidates the parameters of personal responsibility lawyers must exercise over their work. The Bar Standards Board is the regulatory arm of the Bar Council of the United Kingdom, which is the Approved Regulator under the Legal Services Act of 2007 in the United Kingdom. Rule C20 of the Bar Standards Board Handbook states:

"…you are personally responsible for your own conduct and for your professional work. You must use your own professional judgment in relation to those matters on which you are instructed and be able to justify your decisions and actions. You must do this notwithstanding the views of your client, professional client, employer or any other person."

As evident from the facts, the Respondent did not exercise personal responsibility over his conduct and professional work. In fact, even after realising the grave error and falsification he had been party to, he did not promptly notify the High Commission. An Attorney-at-law cannot be excused from his duties and responsibilities upon the mere trust and confidence that he had chosen to place upon his acquaintances over his professional work, nor can he be excused for negligence in not bringing it the notice of the British High Commission upon discovering subsequently, that the letter he submitted was false in content.

The manner in which the Respondent has conducted himself in the instant case cannot be treated lightly nor condoned. The only saving grace as far as the Respondent is concerned is the fact that at the first given opportunity, he admitted his errant conduct and expressed regret and remorse.

On his plea of guilt, the Rule issued against the Respondent, is affirmed.
Taking the totality of the facts and circumstances referred to above, this court is of the view that the Respondent should be suspended from the practice as an Attorney-at-Law and accordingly the Respondent is suspended from the practice as an Attorney-at-law for a period of six months, commencing from today.

The Registrar of the High Court of the Central Province sitting in Kandy acting in terms of section 42(4) of the Judicature Act communicated to the registrar of the Supreme Court, that the respondent attorney-at-law was sentenced by the learned High Court judge having found him guilty of four counts on which he stood indicted. A fine of five hundred rupees had been imposed on one count and he had been sentenced to a term of one-year rigorous imprisonment for 3 counts. Those terms of imprisonment had been ordered to run concurrently.

On 20th September 2022, the respondent attorney-at-law who was represented by counsel appeared on notice issued by this Court and the registrar of this Court read over the charges against him in open court. Thereafter the show cause notice along with the charges was served on him. The aforesaid charges allege, that the respondent attorney-at-law fraudulently conspired to attest the deed bearing no 387 dated 05.02.1999, made a false statement in attesting the said deed and committed forgery in attesting the said deed. Furthermore, the respondent attorney-at-law had acted in breach of the rules set out in section 31 of the Notaries Ordinance. Thereby, the respondent attorney-at-law had conducted in a manner which would reasonably be regarded as disgraceful or dishonourable by attorneys-at-law of good repute and competency as well as in a manner which is regarded as deplorable by fellow members of the profession. The respondent attorney-at-law thereby breached Rule 60 of the Supreme Court (Conduct and Etiquette for Attorneys-at-Law) Rules, 1988 as well as Rule 61 of the said Rules as he had conducted in such a manner that is unworthy of an attorney-at-law.

This Court acting in terms of section 42(4) of the Judicature Act, suspended the respondent attorney-at-law from practice in terms of section 42(3) pending the final determination of these proceedings. The learned President's Counsel for the respondent attorney-at-law submitted that no appeal has been made against the conviction or the sentence of the High Court and that the respondent attorney-at-law had already served the term of imprisonment and paid all fines. The respondent attorney-at-law pleaded guilty to the charges and sought time to show cause and plead in mitigation by way of an affidavit as to why he should not be either removed or suspended from practice, by this Court.

The respondent attorney-at-law by his affidavit dated 12th December 2022 pleaded not to suspend or remove him from practice. The learned President's Counsel in his submissions drew the attention of the Court to several mitigatory factors averred in the affidavit of the respondent attorney-at-law and pleaded the Court to act with clemency. Expression of regret and remorse, the old age, previous good conduct and the fact that he had already served the term of imprisonment were pleaded as mitigatory factors.

The respondent was admitted and enrolled by the Supreme Court as an attorney-at-law on 17th November 1988 and on 01st March 1996 he had obtained the license to practice as a notary public. He had been in public service for nearly three decades before he commenced practicing as an attorney-at-law and a notary public. He holds a degree in Bachelor of Arts and a Diploma in Education. He had served as a teacher and a principal during his career in the public service. He plays an active role in many social service organisations and village societies. He is married with three children and is eighty-three years old.

The learned Deputy Solicitor-General who appeared to assist Court drew the attention of the Court to inter alia curses curiae relating to situations where the attorneys-at-law were found guilty of criminal conduct and thereafter subjected to disciplinary proceedings.

Basnayake CJ in In Re Fernando 63 NLR 233 at 235 observed that:

> "There are many instances [In re Ellawala (1926) 29 N. L. R. 13 (acceptance of a bribe). In re Ranasinghe (1931) 1 Q. L. W. 47 (Criminal breach of trust by advocate). In re Kandiah (1932) 25 O. L. W. 87 (offence against the Opium Ordinance No. 5 of 1910), In re Ariyaratne (1932) 34 N. L. R. 196 (culpable homicide not amounting to murder). In re W. A. P. Jayatilleke (1933) 35 N. L. R. 376 (unlawful assembly, house-trespass and hurt). In re Brito (1942) 43 N. L. R. 529 (offence under the Post Office Ordinance sliding indecent or grossly offensive post cards)] in our reports of advocates and proctors having been removed from office for convictions which though quite unconnected with their professional duties have made them unfit to be entrusted thereafter with the office of advocate or proctor as the case may be".

The learned Deputy Solicitor-General further contended that the conduct of the respondent attorney-at-law that led to the conviction for offences pleaded in the indictment has a direct link to the discharge of professional duties as a notary public and therefore is an aggravating factor that needs to be given due regard in determining the nature of disciplinary sanctions that should be imposed on him.

It is pertinent to note that the attorney-general indicted the respondent attorney-at-law along with two others in the High Court. The indictment contained eight counts. All three accused were indicted for conspiracy to commit an offence punishable under section 34 read with section 31(3) of the Notaries Ordinance. In addition, there were two counts on which the respondent was indicted for committing an offence under section 39(c) of the same Ordinance and another count for committing forgery, an offence punishable under section 454 of the Penal Code. All counts in the indictment revolved around an incident where the respondent attorney-at-law attested a deed of transfer. While attesting the said deed he claimed that he did not know the transferor but was known to the two attesting witnesses.

The third accused who stood indicted along with the respondent and the second accused, had pleaded guilty. Thereafter the trial had proceeded against the respondent and the second accused. Evidence presented at the trial revealed that the second accused who was a clerk attached to the respondent's office had been one of the attesting witnesses to the deed in question. The third accused had been the other attesting witness. Even though, the second accused claimed that he knew the transferor, the evidence presented at the trial revealed that transferor is a fictitious person. Investigations revealed that no occupants were in the purported address of this fictitious transferor. Both the respondent attorney-at-law and the second accused had testified in the High Court. The learned High Court Judge having considered all the evidence presented at the trial found both the respondent attorney-at-law and the second accused, guilty of all counts framed against each of them, including the count for forgery framed against the respondent and the count for aiding and abetting the respondent to commit forgery, framed against the second accused. None of the accused namely the respondent attorney-at-law who was the first accused and his clerk the second accused appealed against the judgment of the High Court.

Section 3 of the Notaries Ordinance as amended, provides that an attorney-at-law who had passed the prescribed examination in conveyancing shall be entitled on application to a warrant authorizing him to practice as a notary. Therefore, the respondent's licence to practice as a notary is granted primarily on the strength of him being admitted as an attorney-at-law. Therefore, the foundation of his notarial practice is based on him being an attorney-at-law and no distinction can be made in his conduct between discharging of professional duties as an attorney-at-law and as a notary public. Ill-effects of any dishonourable conduct in discharging professional duties as a notary public will inevitably make an adverse impact on the good name and repute on the legal profession. In the eyes of the general public no distinction will be made between the duties of the two professions in the context of good behaviour. Therefore, the fact that the wrongful conduct of the respondent attorney-at-law is arising from his discharge of duties as a notary public is not a factor that could either absolve or mitigate the respondent's breach of the duty to be of good repute and conduct, the duty arising as a member of the legal profession.

It is also pertinent to note that a conviction by a court of law is not a necessary prerequisite to initiate disciplinary proceedings against an attorney-at-law based on his alleged criminal conduct. Justice Amarasinghe in Chandrathileke v Moonesinghe (1992) 2 SLR 303 at 329 observed,

> "An attorney whose misconduct is criminal in character, whether it was done in pursuit of his profession or not, (this Court has wider powers than those affirmed by section 4 of the Penal Code), may be struck off the roll, suspended from practice, reprimanded, admonished or advised, even though he had not been brought by the appropriate legal process before a court of competent criminal jurisdiction and convicted; and even though there is nothing to show that a prosecution is pending or contemplated. [See Edgar Edema- (1877) Ramanathan 380, 384; Re Isaac Romey Abeydeera - (1932) 1 CLW 358, 359; In re a Proctor - (1933) 36 NLR 9; In re C.E. de S. Senaratne - (1953) 55 NLR 97, 100; Re Donald Dissanayake - Rule 3 of 1979 S.C. Minutes of 31.10.1980; Re P.P.Wickremasinghe - Rule 2 of 1981, S.C. Short v Pratt - (1822) 1 Bing. 102 Vol. 130 (1912 Ed.) ER 42 and Re Knight - (1823) 1 Bing 142.]

I might go further: If Moonesinghe had been charged with the commission of an offence in a competent court and acquitted, he could and ought, nevertheless, to have been dealt with by this Court, as the proctor was in Re Thirugnanasothy - (1973) 77 NLR 236, 239. See also Re Garbett - (1856) 18 CB 403; R v. Southerton - (1805) 6 East 126; Re W.H.B. - (1842) 17 L. Jo. 165. In Re Thirugnanasothy a proctor had been acquitted of criminal misappropriation by a District Court. He was, nevertheless, struck off the roll, G. P. A. Silva, SPJ., explaining at p.239 that although the reasons for the acquittal were "sound", they were technical in nature".

In Re Brito 43 NLR 529, it was held that a conviction for an offence per se is not a ground for disciplinary action against a proctor but is a prima facie reason for such action. It was further held that when there is a conviction, the fact that the conduct which led to such conviction is not qua attorney is immaterial in deciding whether the attorney concerned should be dealt with for such conduct.

It is the persons of "good repute and of competent knowledge and ability" who could be admitted as attorneys-at-law as provided under section 40(1) of the Judicature Act. Therefore, if a person of good repute after admission as an attorney-at-law engages in any conduct that changes the quality of his character and makes him no longer a person of good repute, such a person is liable to be subjected to disciplinary action as provided under the Judicature Act and the Rules of the Supreme Court.

The respondent attorney-at-law in these proceedings was admitted to the legal profession in the year 1988. He commenced his practice as an attorney-at-law three years later after retirement from his twenty-eight years long service in the public service. He commenced his career as a teacher and had retired from service in the year 1991 after serving as a principal. Within the first eight years of his practice as an attorney-at-law, he had engaged in the conduct for which he was convicted and sentenced for the commission of offences under the Notaries Ordinance and the Penal Code. The indictment for the offences committed in 1999 had been served in the year 2003 and the conviction was entered in the year 2020.

Pleading in mitigation before this court, it was submitted that the respondent who had engaged in the legal profession for more than thirty years is now eighty-three years of age and is actively engaged in social service and religious activities. He is the president of several social service organisations and his wife is seventy-five years old. The respondent prays for clemency and pleads not to suspend or remove him from the office of attorney-at-law allowing him to spend the rest of his life with dignity and respect enjoying the love and care of his wife, children and grandchildren. However, in response to a question by court the respondent attorney said that he also desires to continue with his practice.

In this regard, it is pertinent to observe that the respondent had chosen to enter the legal profession in the brink of his retirement from the public service. This Court having being satisfied with his credentials had granted his application having accepted inter alia that he is a person of good repute. However, within the first eight years of his admission to the Bar itself he had conducted in a manner that compromised his good repute. Such conduct of the respondent led to the conviction entered by the High Court. Eventhough, a conviction per se should not result in any sanctions in disciplinary proceedings, the mitigatory factors urged by the respondent fail to provide any explanation as to the conduct that breached not only the Notaries Ordinance but also amounted to the commission of an offence under the Penal Code. All the mitigatory factors urged by the respondent relate to his personal and social life. The respondent despite the conviction expressed his desire to continue in the legal profession in response to a question posed by Court. It is pertinent to observe that the proceedings initiated under the Judicature Act and Rules of the Supreme Court in relation to removal or suspension of attorneys-at-law from practice are not "criminal or penal in nature but are intended to protect the public, litigants and the legal profession itself" – [vide In Re Dematagodage Don Harry Wilbert (1989) 2 SLR 18 at 28]. The long period of time between the wrongful conduct and the conviction is not a ground that warrants any leniency towards the respondent as the conviction is in relation to the wrongful conduct in discharging professional duties. The respondent's desire to continue in the legal profession is to reap the benefits and privileges attached to the profession. However, in my view this Court is unable to act in sympathy based on factors surrounding the personal life of the respondent. The respondent had failed to honour the trust placed on him by this Court. He failed to maintain the good repute and therefore can no longer continue to enjoy the benefits as a member of this noble profession. In this regard it is pertinent to echo the following views expressed by Justice Mukerjee, in- Emperor v. Rajani Kanta Bose et.al [49 Calc.p.804], that were cited with approval by Howard CJ in Re Brito (supra, at page 532)

> "The practice of the law is not a business open to all who wish to engage in it; it is a personal right, or privilege limited to selected persons of good character with special qualifications duly ascertained and certified; it is in the nature of a franchise from the State conferred only for merit and may be revoked whenever misconduct renders the person holding the licence unfit to be entrusted with the powers and duties of his office. Generally, speaking the test to be applied is whether the misconduct is of such a description as shows him to be an unfit and unsafe person to enjoy the privileges and to manage the business of others as a proctor, in other words, unfit to discharge the duties of his office and unsafe because unworthy of confidence."

For the foregoing reasons the Rule made against the respondent is made absolute and make order that the respondent Hettiarachchige Mahinda Ratnayake shall be forthwith struck out of the roll of attorneys-at-law.

Registrar of the Supreme Court is directed to take necessary steps and also to transmit a copy of this judgement to the Registrar General.

Before: Buwaneka Aluwihare PC, J.

Thurairaja PC, J.

Mahinda Samayawardhena, J.

Counsel: Faiz Musthapha PC with N.M. Shaheid PC and M.A. Zaid for the Respondent Attorney-at-Law.

Rohan Sahabandu PC with Chathurika Elvitigala for the Bar Association of Sri Lanka.

Ganaga Wakishta Arachchi DSG for the Attorney General.

Inquiry on: 21.06.2023.

Decided on: 24.10.2023.

Aluwihare PC J.

The respondent, who is an Attorney-at-law, has been called upon to show cause as to why he should not be suspended or removed from office on the ground of conduct that would be regarded as disgraceful or dishonourable by an Attorney-at-law.

When this matter was taken up for inquiry on 21.06.2023, the Respondent Attorney-at-law sought permission of the court to withdraw his earlier plea of, 'not guilty' and he intimated that he wishes to plead guilty to the Rule. Accordingly, the application was allowed and the Rule being read for the second time, the Respondent Attorney pleaded guilty to the Rule.

The Respondent Attorney-at-Law [hereinafter referred to as the Respondent] engaged himself to represent the All Ceylon Jamiyyathul Ulama (hereinafter the 'ACJU') in the proceedings conducted on 9th September 2020 before the Presidential Commission of Inquiry to Investigate and Inquire into and Report or take Necessary Action on the Bomb Attacks on 21st April 2019 (hereinafter the 'PCoI'). Moulavi Murshid Marsa Mullaffar was attending the proceedings of the PCol on 9th September 2020 representing the ACJU in his capacity as the acting Secretary. The Respondent is accused of conveying the mobile telephone of Moulavi Mullaffar, the said representative of the ACJU, bearing Subscriber Identification Number [SIM] 0777 988 395 into the venue of the proceedings and aiding Moulavi Mullaffar to record a part of the proceedings of PCoI on the said date, contrary to the rules of the procedure of the PCoI.

By the aforesaid conduct the Respondent was alleged to have been in breach of Rules 60 and 61 of the Supreme Court (Conduct of and Etiquette for Attorney-at-Law) Rules 1988, made in terms of Article 136 of the Constitution of the Republic of Sri Lanka.

The Respondent Attorney-at-Law has stated his case by affidavit dated 25th November 2020. The Respondent has admitted that he carried the mobile telephone of his client, the said Moulavi Mullaffar into the venue of the proceedings. It is averred that Moulavi Mullaffar had requested the Respondent to keep his mobile phone as he was not permitted to take it into the premises. Only Attorneys-at-Law were allowed to take their mobile telephones into the premises where the hearing of the Commission was taking place.

The Respondent has stated that out of respect for the Moulavi as a member of the clergy of the Respondent's faith and trusting his word, he agreed to keep the mobile phone in his custody. The Moulavi had indicated to him that the mobile phone was on 'flight mode'.

The Respondent in his affidavit has maintained that while the proceedings were ongoing a mild sound had emanated from the mobile phone and it had started vibrating. Failing to switch it off by pressing the power button, the Respondent has stated that he passed the phone to the Moulavi who was seated two rows behind him, so that the Moulavi could switch if off. As the proceedings were ongoing and the Respondent was assisting his Senior Mr. Javed Yousuf to cross-examine Ven. Galaboda Aththe Gnanasara Thero who was giving evidence before the Commission on that day and taking notes he states that he was unable to retrieve the phone from the Moulavi after he passed it over to him. Furthermore, he states that he had no reason to doubt that the Moulavi would not follow his instructions and not switch off the mobile phone.

The Respondent has stated that he was completely unaware of the alleged conduct of the Moulavi and that, had he known of the intention of the Moulavi to record the proceedings he would have declined to take the mobile phone into the venue of the proceedings. He has further stated that he did not intend to abuse the privilege offered to him as an Attorney-at-Law.

The Respondent has stated that he returned the mobile phone to the Moulavi during the proceedings with the indication to turn it off, that he had no knowledge of any ulterior motive on the part of the Moulavi and that he personally had no intention of recording the proceedings of the PCoI. He has further stated that he was unaware that recording of public hearings and/or hearings that were not conducted in camera before the PCoI is prohibited.

On the other hand, the Moulavi Mulaffar in his statement to the police dated 09.09.2020 has stated that he had inquired from the Respondent about the possibility of recording the proceedings on the mobile phone of the Respondent, which the Respondent had allegedly refused to do stating that his mobile phone did not have sufficient memory to record the proceedings. The Moulavi has stated that thereafter, he asked the Respondent whether he can record from the Moulavi's phone and the Respondent had asked him to give the mobile phone to the Respondent after putting it on flight mode and switching on the recording.

The Moulavi has further stated that at one point the Respondent returned the mobile phone to him as it was not working and that thereafter the Moulavi has switched on the recording and kept the mobile phone with him.

The inquiries made by the police unit attached to the PCoI, affirmed the fact that the evidence led before the Commission in the afternoon session in fact had been recorded making use of the mobile phone concerned. Sequel to this revelation, The Chairman of the PCoI had referred this matter to the Supreme Court to consider whether the Respondent was in breach of the Rules relating to 'Conduct of and Etiquette for Attorneys -at -Law'.

The Professional Purpose / Ethics Inquiry Committee of the Bar Association which conducted an inquiry into this matter has observed that the Respondent Attorney had knowledge of the notices placed at the Commission regarding preventive measures put in place to prevent litigants and witnesses taking telephones inside the Commission Hall where the proceedings were held. The said Inquiry Panel has observed that adhering to Rules applicable to the PCoI relating to its proceedings forms part and parcel of responsibilities and obligations towards the Supreme Court Rules applicable to Attorneys.

Pleading in mitigation, the learned President's Counsel on behalf of the Respondent-Attorney, submitted to the court that the court should take cognizance of the fact that the Respondent expressed his unreserved regret and remorse over this incident without wasting the time of the court. The learned President's Counsel urged this court to consider that the Respondent is a young practitioner of law and is a father of an infant child and that he solely relies on the income of his legal practice to support the family. It was also pointed out that the Respondent had come up in life from humble beginnings. It was submitted that due to this social disparity, he was overawed by the presence of the Secretary of the ACJU which is considered a prestigious body of the people that belong to the Islamic faith. Mr. Musthapha PC contended that it was due to these reasons that the Respondent had agreed to take the phone of the Secretary of the ACJU as the request was overbearing and he could not put the request of the Secretary down. The learned President's Counsel further submitted that the Respondent Attorney had no intention whatsoever to record the proceedings as averred in paragraph 31 of his affidavit furnished to the Supreme Court. Mr. Musthapha appealed to the court to consider that the proceedings before the Commission was public hearings with the presence of several journalists covering the proceedings.

The learned DSG pointed out that Moulavi Mullaffar attended the proceedings on the previous day [i.e. 8th September] as well and on that day his phone was left with the officers who were in charge of the security of the Commission.

The Respondent belongs to the noble profession from which one is entitled to expect a conduct appropriate to the profession which should be of a very high degree with utmost honesty. We share the view of the Disciplinary Committee that the Respondent had full knowledge of the notices placed at the Commission and therefore the restrictions that were put in place. The complaint against the Respondent is a serious one. The degree of punishment that should be imposed in cases of this nature is always a difficult decision to make. We have taken into account the mitigating factors mentioned by the learned President's Counsel and are also not unmindful of the consequences that our order would have on the Respondent's life and future. We however feel that we must mark our disapproval of the conduct of the Respondent in no uncertain terms and are of the view that the professional misconduct that has been disclosed in this case calls for his suspension from the roll of attorneys for a period of eight months.

The suspension of the Respondent from the practice will come into effect from 1st January 2024. The period of eight months will be reckoned from that date.

Decided on: 10.03.2023

Vijith K. Malalgoda PC J

The Complainant Dr. Lakshman Lucian de Silva Weerasena a Medical Practitioner by profession had complained to the Registrar of the Supreme Court by way of an affidavit dated 24th February 1999 against two Attorneys at Law namely Jayantha Attanayake and Ratnamalie Maitipe Attanayake regarding a series of transactions, that had taken place between 05.10.1992 and 01.08.1996 with regard to a property situated at No 90, Lauries Road, Colombo 04.

The inquiry into the said complaint was commenced before the Supreme Court after issuing the rule for the alleged misconduct specified in paragraphs (a)- (h) against both Attorneys at Law on 16.01.2001. An amended rule dated 17.09.2001 was served on the two Respondents on 18.10.2001. Of the misconduct alleged against the two Respondents, misconduct specified in paragraphs (a) -(e) and (h) relates to the 2nd Respondent, and paragraphs (a), (f), and (g) relate to the misconduct alleged against the 1st Respondent.

The 2nd Respondent passed away during the pendency of the proceedings before this Court and the inquiry against the 1st Respondent continued until its conclusion. Since the inquiry against the 2nd Respondent did not continue after the death of the said Respondent was reported, (a copy of her death certificate was tendered before the Court by the 1st Respondent who is also the husband of the 2nd Respondent) this Court will not consider the material led against the 2nd Respondent unless the said evidence is linked to the conduct of the 1st Respondent.

The allegations of misconduct under which the inquiry proceeded against the 1st Respondent are as follows;

a) You the 1st and 2nd Respondents above named, being Attorneys at Law, did conspire to fraudulently draw, attest and authenticate or cause the drawing, attestation, and authentication of the Deeds bearing Nos. 705,706,707,726 and 2428 in respect of the property described in the schedules to the said deeds with the intention of depriving the lawful heirs of the Estate of the late Agnes Georgiana Fonseka, the owner of the said property who died intestate.

f) You the 1st Respondent above named being an Attorney at Law, knowingly was a party to a fraudulent Deed of Transfer bearing No. 726 attested by your wife, the 2nd Respondent above named, by which deed Ulpagoda Pathira Arachchige Dona Gunaseeli Karunanayake purportedly sought to unlawfully transfer the title to the property described in the schedule to the said deed to you the 1st Respondent above named, being the property in respect of which the Deed of Declaration No. 706 fraudulently drawn, attested and authenticated by the 2nd Respondent above named.

g) You the 1st Respondent above named being an Attorney at Law, fraudulently caused Deed bearing No. 2428 to be drawn, attested, and authenticated by Mervin Samaraweera, Notary Public in favour of Niroshan Company (Pvt) Limited for consideration in a sum of Rs. 225,000/=, by which deed you the 1st Respondent above named purportedly sought to unlawfully transfer the property purportedly transferred to you by the Deed of Transfer No. 726 fraudulently drawn, attested, and authenticated by your wife, the 2nd Respondent above named.

Based on the above misconduct it was alleged that the 1st Respondent had committed;

a) Deceit and/or malpractice within the ambit of section 42 (2) of the Judicature Act No 2 of 1978 which renders, unfit to remain as Attorney at Law
b) Acted in breach of Rules 60 and 61 of the Supreme Court (Conduct and Etiquette for Attorneys at Law) Rules 1988 made under Article 136 of the Constitution of the Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka and thereby conducted in a manner which would be reasonably be regarded as disgraceful and dishonorable by Attorney at Law of good repute and competence, and which renders, unfit to remain as Attorney at Law.

An opportunity was given to both the Respondents including the deceased 2nd Respondent to show cause why they should not be suspended from practice or removed from the office of Attorney at Law under section 42 (3) of the Judicature Act No 2 of 1978 and the Respondents availed themselves of the opportunity given to show cause and filed an affidavit on their behalf.

As observed by me, the inquiry into the rule issued against the 1st Respondent (and the 2nd Respondent) was not taken up since two actions were pending before the District Court of Mount Lavinia to set aside several deeds attested by the 2nd Respondent.

After the lapse of several years, on 27.04.2011 the rule dated 17.09.2001 was read out to the Respondents and an opportunity was once again given to the Respondents to show cause as to why they should not be suspended from practice or removed from the office of Attorney at Law under the provisions of the Judicature Act No 2 of 1978.

The Rule was subsequently taken up before this Court on 02.05.2012 and the inquiry proceeded before this Court for several dates.

The Registrar of the Supreme Court Duminda Prabath Mudunkotuwa and the Complainant Dr. Lakshman Lucian de Silva Weerasena were summoned to give evidence at the inquiry in order to establish the allegation against the Respondents. Both witnesses were subjected to lengthy cross-examination by the learned counsel who represented the two Respondents including the deceased 2nd Respondent. The 2nd Respondent died on 16.07.2016 when the 2nd witness Dr. Weerasena was under further cross-examination. During the said cross-examination several documents were shown and marked by the Respondents which include documents marked from 2R7 to 2R49 on behalf of the deceased 2nd Respondent.

As already referred in this judgment, the Rule matter against the two Attorneys at Law including the deceased Attorney at Law the 2nd Respondent, was on a complaint made by Dr. Lakshman Lucian de Silva Weerasena to the Registrar Supreme Court by way of an affidavit dated 24.02.1999. When Dr. Lakshman Lucian de Silva Weerasena was summoned to give evidence, whilst confirming the affidavit submitted to this Court the witness had submitted the following;

The witness was a Doctor of Medicine and was working as the Chairman of the Civil Aviation Examination Board and practiced in his clinic at the time he gave evidence before Court. He was the President of the Medico-Legal Association in 2003. His mother's maiden name was Adeline Winifred Perera and after marriage Adeline Winifred Weerasena. His mother was a housewife, and she had 2 siblings; her brother was H.I.C Perera (Attorney-at-Law) who passed away and her elder sister was Agnes Georgiana Fonseka (hereinafter referred to as A.G. Fonseka) married to Richard Clement Fonseka (Barrister and worked as a legal consultant- hereinafter referred to as R.C. Fonseka). Dr. Weerasena had two siblings: Kanishka Lakshman Weerasena (Doctor) and Tharangani Shamalee Anthoney.

His father passed away in 1989 and his mother passed away in 1993. At the time of the death, they were residing at their own house at No 368, Galle Road, Colombo 03. His mother's sister, A.G. Fonseka resided at No. 90, Lauries Road, Bambalapitiya, with her husband, but they did not have children. A.G. Fonseka continued to occupy this house even after the death of her husband with servants until her death. R.C. Fonseka died on 18.03.1982 and A.G Fonseka died on 08.11.1987.

As a nephew of A.G. Fonseka, Dr. Weerasena cared about his mother's sister until the time of her death since she was ill and had no children. She had no financial problems because she was quite stable financially. A.G. Fonseka was in good mental health until her death. There were several domestic aids at her house and most of them were for a long time, due to her ill health.

After the death of R.C. Fonseka, she had a joint account with one Cyril de Silva who was working at her house. Cyril was an educated boy, and he did all the accounts for A.G. Fonseka. Gunaseeli Karunanayake was A.G. Fonseka's domestic servant, but she was never an adopted child. Gunaseeli's father was the caretaker of the garden. The driver of A.G. Fonseka was Thissa. The Gardner was Martin. Cyril used to be in and out of her house to attend to her financial matters and Mercy attended to A.G Fonseka's other matters like payment of wages. Most of them lived in the house of A.G. Fonseka, but there were no adopted children in that house.

In the latter stage of A.G. Fonseka's life, Gunaseeli got married to Nobel Ranasinghe and they lived in the same house. Gunaseeli and Nobel had two children from their marriage and they were Thushari Ranasinghe (elder daughter) and Manori Ranasinghe (younger daughter).

A.G. Fonseka had 13 houses in Colombo. She gave some properties to the people who helped her. The 10th Lane property was given to Thushari (Gunaseeli's eldest daughter). The car and property were given to the Driver.

When R.C. Fonseka passed away, he had a last will, but no testamentary case was filed by Dr. Weerasena until the death of A.G. Fonseka. The witness was not aware of a testamentary proceeding, but he said that A.G. Fonseka enjoyed whatever she got from the last will of R.C. Fonseka because all the properties of R. C. Fonseka had been devolved to A.G. Fonseka.

Nobel Ranasinghe also died after A.G. Fonseka's death. A.G. Fonseka died in 1987 and subsequent to A.G. Fonseka's death, witness's mother also passed away. Although that time period was so critical, before the expiry of 10 years, he filed a testamentary case for A.G. Fonseka. It was entrusted to his elder brother at the beginning, but he too was feeble and did not take any trouble over this. Witness intervened in the testamentary proceedings with the help of Mrs. Pushpa Narendran (AAL).

The testamentary action was filed in 1997 in DC Colombo. Witness's mother as a sibling of A.G. Fonseka would have been the sole inheritor of A.G. Fonseka's estate. In the meantime, his mother died without making a last will. Some of the events that took place during this period were narrated by the witness as follows;

- Two testamentary cases had been filed in respect of the estates of Agnes Georgiana Fonseka (Aunt) i.e., DC Colombo Case No. 33935/T, and Adeline Winifred Weerasena (Mother) i.e., DC Colombo Case No. 34383/T; and witness had obtained the letter of Administration for both cases.
- The domestic helper to late A.G. Fonseka namely Gunaseeli Karunanayake made an attempt to intervene and falsely claim title to the property bearing assessment No. 90 Lauries Road, Bambalapitiya;
- Also, an Attorney at Law Jayantha Attanayake (1st Respondent) had claimed ownership of an undivided portion of the property situated at No. 90 Lauries Road, Bambalapitiya;
- Upon making inquiries it had been revealed that the 1st and 2nd Respondents together with the aforesaid domestic helper Gunaseeli Karunanayake had prepared fraudulent Deeds and purportedly transferred the ownership to the said property to Thushari Ranasinghe (daughter of Gunaseeli Karunanayake) and to the said Jayantha Attanayake.

As submitted by the witness the extent of the land belonging to late A.G. Fonseka was 44 perches and a Deed of Declaration in respect of undivided 37 perches was registered by Gunaseeli Karunanayake the domestic helper of late A.G. Fonseka under Deed of Declaration No. 705 and a Deed of Declaration in respect of the balance 7 perches was also registered by the same person namely Gunaseeli Karunanayake under Deed of Declaration No. 706. The portion of land referred to in Deed No. 705 had been gifted by the declarant to her daughter Thushari Ranasinghe by Deed No.707. All three Deeds referred to above had been attested by the same Notary Public namely Ratnamali Maitipe Attanayake (2nd Respondent) on the same day i.e., on 05.10.1992.

- In the Deed of Declaration No. 705 attested by the 2nd Respondent, the Declarant Gunaseeli Karunanayake had declared that she, by long and undisturbed and uninterrupted possession for over a period of thirty (30) years, is the sole and absolute owner of the land described in the schedule thereto bearing assessment No. 90 Lauries Road, Bambalapitiya (Extent of 37 perches). She had also made a declaration therein that Richard Clement Fonseka and Agnes Georgiana Fonseka are her stepfather and stepmother respectively and that she is the sole heir being their adopted child and that she had inherited the said property;

- The Deed of Declaration No. 706 had been attested on the same day as the aforesaid Deed No. 705, i.e., on 05.10.1992 by the 2nd Respondent, where the same Declarant Gunaseeli Karunanayake had declared that she, by long and undisturbed and uninterrupted possession for over a period of thirty (30) years, is the sole and absolute owner of the land described in the schedule thereto bearing assessment No.90 (part) Lauries Road, Bambalapitiya (Extent of 7 perches). She had also made a declaration therein that Richard Clement Fonseka and Agnes Georgiana Fonseka are her stepfather and stepmother respectively and that she is the sole heir being their adopted child and that she had inherited the said property;

According to the witness, in addition to the three deeds referred to above, details of two more deeds bearing Nos. 726 and 2428 had transpired during the Testamentary proceeding referred to above.

- The Deed of Transfer No. 726 had been attested on 03.02.1993 by the 2nd Respondent whereby the said Declarant Gunaseeli Karunanayake had sold the property in the schedule thereto bearing assessment No. 90 (part) Lauries Road, Bambalapitiya (7 perches) to the 1st Respondent for a consideration of Rs. 200,000/-;
- The Deed of Transfer No. 2428 had been attested on 01.08.1996 by Mervin Samaraweera Notary Public whereby the 1st Respondent had transferred the property he had purportedly purchased from Gunaseeli Karunanayake by Deed No. 726, to Niroshan Company (Pvt) Ltd. in which the two directors at that time were Jayantha Attanayake and Ratnamali Maitipe Attanayake (1st and 2nd Respondents) for a consideration of Rs. 225,000/-;

Since the three deeds bearing Nos. 705, 706, and 707 referred to the property belonging to late A.G. Fonseka, the witness had instituted proceedings before the District Court of Mt. Lavinia seeking a declaration to nullify those deeds.

The judgment in both cases (947/97/L and 882/97/L) filed before the District Court of Mt. Lavinia were entered in favour of the Plaintiff in the year 2006. As already referred to by me in this Judgment, the delay in commencing the proceeding in the instant rule matter was the interest shown by the parties with regard to the outcome of the said proceedings.

The Judgment of the District Court of Mt. Lavinia case No. 947/97/L was delivered on 23.01.2006. (P-7) The Decree dated 05/05/2006 obtained from the District Court of Mt. Lavinia in the said case was marked as P-7A and the Eviction Order as P-7B was carried out to evict Gunaseeli and her daughter Thushari.

In an affidavit submitted by Gunaseeli Karunanayake at the time the three deeds were attested, she had declared that R.C Fonseka and A.G. Fonseka were her stepfather and stepmother, and she was adopted by them and therefore, she had inherited the said property. But witness Dr. Weerasena rejected the above and stated that his aunt A.G. Fonseka was alive till 1987 and therefore Gunaseeli Karunanayake could not claim undisturbed and uninterrupted possession for a longer period since she was the domestic aid of Late A.G. Fonseka until her death in 1987.

According to the witness, the decision of the District Court of Mt Lavinia case No. 947/97/L was challenged before the Civil Appellate Court but was withdrawn by the Appellants and there was no proceeding before any Court challenging the decision in the case No. 947/97/L at the time he gave evidence before the Supreme Court.

Witness Dr.Weerasena further stated that, when A.G. Fonseka died, Gunaseeli was in occupation of the property in question and he granted her permission to stay until they need the property. Further, he accepted that A.G. Fonseka and R.C Fonseka gifted properties to their servants since they have no children, and those servants helped a lot for them. Although they gifted properties in the 9th and 10th lane, in Colpity to Gunaseeli and her daughter, she fraudulently made an attempt to get ownership of the land in question.

Witness Duminda Prabath Mudunkotuwa was the Registrar of the Supreme Court when the Complaint against the two Respondents was received in the Supreme Court Registry on 24.02.1999. (P-1)

On receipt of the said complaint, by letter dated 28.05.1999 (P-2), he had called observations from the two Respondents. (At the time he gave evidence both Respondents were present before Court and were represented by Counsel) Several Communications between the Registrar of the Supreme Court and the two Respondents were marked as P-2 to P-5 during his evidence.

Documents from P-1 to P-17 were marked during the inquiry and that includes the District Court Judgment dated 23.01.2006 in the District Court, Mount Lavinia case No. 947/97/L (P-7), the four Deeds bearing Nos. 705,706,707 and 726 (P-8, P-9, P-10, and P-11), the order dated 05.05.2010 delivered by the Civil Appellate High Court of the Western Province P-12 and Deed Number 2428 attested by Mervin Samaraweera N.P dated 01.08.1996 (P-17)

At the time the case for the prosecution was closed, the 2nd Respondent was not among the living and the inquiry was proceeding only against the 1st Respondent. The 1st Respondent opted to give evidence and according to his testimony, he was called to the Bar in the Year 1982. Since then, he had a civil practice and was having his office at No. 135/5/1 St. Sebastian Hill, Colombo 12 until 1994. He is a graduate of the University of Colombo since 1974 and his graduate certificate was produced marked 1R3. During his carrier as an Attorney at Law, he served as the Chairman Rent Board for a few years since 1984, and also served as a Director of the Sri Lanka State Trading Corporation for a period of 5 ½ years. He was the Managing Director of Niroshan Company (Pvt) Ltd. which was incorporated in the year 1983 and his wife, the 2nd Respondent in the instant inquiry, namely Ratnamali Maitipe Attanayake was the other Director of the said Company. They lived at No. 65, Stork Place, Colombo 10. His wife too had practiced law, mainly handled conveyancing work, and had her office at their residence, No. 65, Stork Place, Colombo 10.

As submitted by the 1st Respondent, parties to Deeds 705, 706, and 707 attested by his wife, the 2nd Respondent, were unknown to him at the time the said Deeds were attested. Later he got to know that the declarant in Deeds 705 and 706 namely Gunaseeli Karunanayake was interested in selling a portion of the land, namely the subject matter to Deed 706, and therefore studied the history of the land and the declarant. He got to know Gunaseeli Karunanayake as the occupant of the house bearing assessment No. 90, Lauries Road, Bambalapitiya. According to the 1st Respondent Gunaseeli was not a domestic servant of A.G. Fonseka. He was informed by Gunaseeli that she was the adopted child, of A.G. Fonseka. He further stated that Gunaseeli has tendered an affidavit to this effect to the case which was pending in DC Mt. Lavinia. Gunaseeli was married to Nobel Ranasinghe.

After her marriage, she lived in the house at No. 90, Lauries Road, Colombo 04. The marriage Certificate No. 6797 dated 25/02/1972 of Gunaseeli and Nobel Ranasinghe was marked as '2R7'. It was mentioned in the said certificate that the place of the marriage as 'මනාලියගේ නිවසේ සිදුවුණා'. The '2R8' was the marriage certificate issued by the Parish Priest of St. Mary's Church Bambalapitiya on 25/02/1972. After the marriage, Gunaseeli and Nobel had two children Thushari Ranasinghe (the birth certificate was marked as '2R9') and Manori Ranasinghe (the birth certificate was marked as '2R10'). Gunaseeli and Nobel lived in No. 90, Lauries Road, Bambalapitiya, and selected it as their matrimonial house. The 1st Respondent further stated that Gunaseeli and Nobel lived in that house, even after the death of R.C Fonseka and A.G. Fonseka.

The 1st Respondent knew about the two Deeds of Declaration. The 1st one is 'P8' – the Deed No. 705 attested by R.M. Attanayake dated 05.10.1992 regarding the land No. 90, Lauries Road, Bambalapitiya – Lot 1A and 1B (as one lot) – Plan No. 1905 made by A.S.P Gunawardena Licensed Surveyor – 37 purchases. The other Deed was marked as 'P9' – the Deed of Declaration No. 706 attested by R.M. Attanayake dated 05.10.1992. –the Plan No. 1905 made by A.S.P Gunawardena Licensed Surveyor – for the Lot 1A, 1B 7 purchase - regarding the land No. 90/1/A, Lauries Road, Bambalapitiya. However, he stated that he does not know about drafting those Deeds, since all the deeds were drafted by his Wife (the 2nd Respondent) without his knowledge.

The 1st Respondent further stated that Gunaseeli has given an affidavit to his wife. Based on the said affidavit, his wife (the 2nd Respondent) has drafted Deeds 705 and 706. The affidavit given by Gunaseeli dated 1992.09.01 was marked as '1R4'.

The Original Deed of Transfer No. 726 was also marked as '1R5'. The transferor was Ulpagoda Pathiraarachchige Dona Gunaseeli Karunanayaka, and her address was No. 90, Lauries Road, Bambalapitiya. The transferee of this deed was Jayantha Attanayake (the 1st Respondent) and his address was No. 65, Stork Place, Colombo 10. The value of the Deed was 2 lakhs.

As stated by the 1st Respondent, the main reason for him to buy the land in question was the relationship he had with Nobel Ranasinghe, husband of Gunaseeli Karunanayake. 1st Respondent wanted to help the Ranasinghe family since they had financial difficulties. Therefore, he agreed to buy a 7 Perch block for Rs. 700000/- from the wife of Nobel Ranasinghe. However, the 1st Respondent had taken up the position that he was unaware of any Deeds attested by his wife including Deed No 706 at the time those Deeds were attested by his wife.

In the first instance, the 1st Respondent paid Rs. 30,000/- and then Rs. 320,000/-. Later he paid another Rs. 350,000/-. However, the 1st Respondent had admitted that the value entered in the Deed was only 200000/-. The 1st Respondent had admitted inspecting the folios at the Land Registry and the documents at Colombo Municipal Council before purchasing the Land.

On the other hand, he could not find any legal document as proof of the adoption of Gunaseeli by A.G. Fonseka and R.C Fonseka. However, the 1st Respondent did not accept the fact that Gunaseeli has not acquired prescriptive rights. At the inquiry, it was revealed that Gunaseeli has not acquired prescriptive rights since the deed was attested 5 years after the death of A.G. Fonseka.

After purchasing the land, he used it as a car park for Niroshan Company (Pvt) Ltd which is a driving institute. 1st and 2nd Respondents were the directors of the said company. He transferred the said land on 01.08.1996 by Deed No. 2428 (P17) to Niroshan Company (Pvt) Ltd. The Deed was attested by Mervin Samaraweera Notary Public. During the cross-examination, it was revealed that notary Mervin Samaraweera used the residential address of the 1st Respondent as notary's address.

The 1st Respondent resigned from Niroshan Company (Pvt) Ltd as Director in 2005 and informed the Company Registrar. Thereafter the Directors of the said Company were his wife the 2nd Respondent and his children namely: Ratnamali Maitipe Attanayake, Dilakshi Kaushalya Attanayake, Mulasi Attanayake, and Yasas Attanayake.

When considering the material already discussed, it appears that the Complainant was unaware of any transaction regarding the house and property at No. 90, Lauries Road, Bambalapitiya when he decided to institute testamentary proceedings with regard to late A.G. Fonseka's estate. As already discussed, A.G. Fonseka and R.C. Fonseka had several servants working for them and after the death of R. C. Fonseka the house was managed by those employees who worked for the family for a long period of time. Since the old couple did not have children, most of their properties were gifted to the domestic employees including Gunaseeli Karunanayake and her children but the house and property at No. 90, Lauries Road where A.G. Fonseka lived at the time of her death were not given to anybody and there was no problem for her to gift the said property if she was interested in doing so.

In the said circumstances it is clear that Gunaseeli Karunanayake never had uninterrupted possession of the house occupied by A.G. Fonseka after her death in 1987 for a long period since the time gap between the death of A.G. Fonseka and making the deed in question is only 05 years.

In his evidence at the inquiry before us, the 1st Respondent took up the position that the main reason for him to buy the land in question was to help Nobel Ranasinghe, the husband of Gunaseeli Karunanayake but he was unaware of any deeds attested by his wife the 2nd Respondent when he agreed to help his relation Nobel Ranasinghe by purchasing a land belonging to his wife at Lauries Road Bambalapitiya. However, this court is mindful of the following facts when analyzing the evidence given by the 1st Respondent at the Inquiry before us.

1. Gunaseeli Karuanayake had made two Deeds of declaration, one for the extent of 37 perches and the other for the remaining 7 perches (deeds 705 and 706) of the same land on 05.10.1992.
2. The land referred to in Deed 705 in the extent of 37 perches was gifted to her daughter by the declarant on the same day by Deed of Gift No. 707.
3. No steps were taken with regard to the land referred to in Deed No. 706 on that day.
4. The land referred to in Deed of Declaration 706 was transferred to the 1st Respondent by Gunaseeli Karunanayake for Rs. 200000/-. The said deed was also attested by the 2nd Respondent (Deed No. 726) on 03.02.1993.
5. The said transaction was done to help Ranasinghe's family since Nobel Ranasinghe the husband of Gunaseeli Karunanayake was a relation of the 1st Respondent.

If the declarant Gunaseeli Karunanayake was interested in claiming the title to the entire land and property within No. 90, Lauries Road, Bambalapitiya in the extent of 44 perches she could have easily included the entire extent to deed No. 705 and gifted it to her daughter but making a declaration separately to a seven perch block and disposing the said portion to the 1st Respondent who is known to her husband on a subsequent day, shows the involvement of the 1st Respondent even at the time the Deeds 705 and706 were attested by the wife of the 1st Respondent. The same notary (i.e., the 2nd Respondent) had attested the Deed of Transfer for the portion of Land referred to in Deed No. 706 after she attested the original Deed of Declaration.

Whilst giving evidence before us, the 1st Respondent took up the position that the 1st and the 2nd Respondents were the Directors of Niroshan Company (Pvt) Ltd during the time he purchased the land in question in the year 1993. On 01.08.1996 the property which was in the name of the 1st Respondent was transferred to Niroshan Company (Pvt) Ltd by Deed No. 2428 attested by Mervin Samaraweera Notary Public. The address given in the Deed by the Notary is No. 65, Stork Place Colombo 10, which is also the residential address of the 1st and 2nd Respondents at that time.

Even at the time the amended Rule was read over to the two Respondents (the 2nd Respondent was alive at that time) the property in question was in the name of Niroshan Company (Pvt) Ltd. where the two Directors were the 1st and the 2nd Respondents. However, as submitted by the 1st Respondent he resigned from the Director Board in the year 2005 and then the Board of Directors of Niroshan Company (Pvt) Ltd. consisted of his wife (the 2nd Respondent) and his three children. As the Company is no longer functioning the land in question has now been divided into two blocks and transferred in the names of two directors (two children of the 1st Respondent) (proceeding dated 28.01.2020. page 11)

As revealed before Court, the Deed Nos. 705,706, and 707 have been declared null and void by the Learned District Judge of Mt. Lavinia in the District Court Mount Lavinia Case No. 947/L/97. The Appeal against the said judgment was withdrawn and the judgment in the District Court stands valid to date. Therefore, it was submitted that the title could not pass to anyone based on the said Deeds. The 1st Respondent's claim to the property in question is based on Deed No. 706 which has been declared null and void.

However, the 1st Respondent was not prepared to accept this position, and the conduct referred to above shows several transactions taking place with regard to the said property within the family of the 1st Respondent even after the decision in District Court Mt. Lavinia Case No. 947/L/97 is pronounced.

As further revealed before this Court the two Defendants before the District Court Mt. Lavinia had appealed against the DC Judgment and while the aforesaid Appeal was pending, an application for the execution of decree pending Appeal had been made on behalf of the Plaintiff in terms of Section 761 of the Civil Procedure Code. The learned District Judge who inquired the said matter by order dated 27.04.2007, had granted a writ pending appeal to evict any person from the property in question and to hand over peaceful possession to the Plaintiff (Dr. Weerasena).

The Eviction Decree dated 30.04.2007 had been issued as per the order dated 27.04.2007. Immediately thereafter, Niroshan Company (Pvt) Ltd made an application dated 08.05.2007 under Section 328 of the Civil Procedure Code to be restored back in possession. However, the learned District Judge found no merit in the application made under section 328 by Niroshan Company (Pvt) Ltd. and dismissed the same.

At the inquiry into the section 328 application, evidence of Mervin Samaraweera Notary Public, and the 1st Respondent had been led. The 1st Respondent had given evidence on three dates i.e., 19.11.2007, 13.02.2008, and 09.05.2008 at the said inquiry. The order on the Section 328 application had been delivered on 21.10.2008 by the learned District Judge rejecting the application and refusing to place the Petitioner (Niroshan Company (Pvt) Ltd) back in possession. In the order of the learned District Judge it has been categorically stated that if the Petitioner Niroshan Company(Pvt) Ltd has any claim to the property in question, a separate action should be instituted.

However, the 1st Respondent has admitted before this Court that no separate action has been instituted for a declaration of title on his behalf or on behalf of Niroshan Company(Pvt) Ltd. (Proceedings dated 28.01 2020 at page 25)

Whilst giving evidence before Court the 1st Respondent had taken up positions which are contradictory to each other. It was his position at one stage, that he transferred the property in question to Niroshan Company (Pvt) Ltd. in which the directors were himself and his wife the 2nd respondent. (Proceedings dated 27.01.2020 on page 03)

Once again, he took up the position that he resigned from the Director Board of the said Company in the year 2005 and it was his wife and three children who were the Directors of Niroshan Company (Pvt) Ltd. since then.

However, he admitted giving evidence before the District Court in 2007 and 2008 even after his resignation from the Director Board when Niroshan Company(Pvt) Ltd made an application under Section 328 of the Civil Procedure Code to restore back in possession. He was the sole witness who gave evidence on behalf of Niroshan Company (Pvt) Ltd. other than Mervin Samaraweera Notary Public who attested the Deed.

It is also important to note at this stage, that the 1st Respondent had given this evidence before the District Court, while the instant Rule matter was pending before the Supreme Court.

In view of the foregoing, it is very much clear that the conduct of the 1st Respondent establishes his involvement in the three deeds including Deed No. 706 attested by his wife, the 2nd Respondent. Ultimately, he had become the beneficiary of the said declaration made by Gunaseeli Karunanayake. 1st Respondent had admitted before this Court that the husband of Gunaseeli Karunanayake was known to him during this period.

Since then, every attempt he had made either, with the help of his late wife or on his own initiative was to retain the property he acquired within his family circle.

From the above material, it is clear that there is ample evidence before this Court to conclude that the 1st Respondent had conspired to fraudulently draw, attest and authenticate or cause the drawing, attestation, and authentication of Deed Nos. 705,706,707,726 and 2428 with regard to the property in question and that he was a party to the preparation of fraudulent Deed Nos. 726 and 2428 where the title had been passed based on Deed No. 706 which was declared null and void by the District Court of Mt. Lavinia. Even though the 1St respondent made an attempt to convince the court that the two deeds 726 and 2428 were attested much prior to the decision of the District Court of Mt. Lavinia, the involvement of the 1St Respondent in the preparation of the three deeds that were declared null and void by the District Court was established before us.

As already referred, the 1st Respondent was issued with a Rule under the hand of the Registrar of the Supreme Court,

a) For committing Deceit and/or Malpractice within the ambit of Section 42 (2) of the Judicature Act No 2 of 1978
b) For Acting in breach of Rules 60 and 61 of the Supreme Court Rules (conduct and Etiquette for Attorneys at Law) Rules 1988

The relevant provision as referred to above under the Judicature Act No. 2 of 1978 and Supreme Court Rules (conduct and Etiquette for Attorneys at Law) 1988 are as follows, Section 42 (2) Every person admitted and enrolled as an Attorney-at-Law who shall be guilty of any deceit, malpractice, crime, or offence may be suspended from practice or removed from office by any three Judges of the Supreme Court sitting together.

Rule 60 An Attorney-at-Law must not conduct himself in any manner which would be reasonably regarded as disgraceful or dishonorable by Attorneys-at-Law of good repute and competency or which would render him unfit to remain an Attorney-at-Law or which is inexcusable and such as to be regarded as deplorable by his fellows in the profession.

Rule 61 An Attorney-at-Law shall not conduct himself in any manner unworthy of an Attorney-at-Law.

The standard of proof in an inquiry relating to a Rule issued under Rule 42 (2) of the Judicature Act No. 2 of 1978 was discussed in Daniel V. Chandradeva [1994] 2 Sri LR 1 by Amarasinghe J as follows;

> "Where the conduct of an attorney is in question in disciplinary proceedings, it requires as a matter of common sense and worldly wisdom the careful weighing of testimony, the close examination of facts proved as a basis of inference and a comfortable satisfaction that a just and correct decision has been reached. The importance and gravity of asking an attorney to show cause make it impossible for the Court to be > satisfied with the truth of an allegation without the exercise of caution and unless the proofs survive careful scrutiny. Proof beyond a reasonable doubt is not necessary, but something more than a balancing of the scales is necessary to enable the Court to have the desired feeling of comfortable satisfaction. A very high standard of proof is required where there are allegations involving a suggestion of criminality, deceit or moral turpitude."

When considering whether the 1st Respondent was guilty of deceit and/or malpractice, it appears that, as already observed, in this Judgement, the 1st Respondent who is the beneficiary of the Deed No 726, was well aware of the preparation of the 3 Deeds, 705, 706 and 707 attested by the 2nd Respondent, his wife. The husband of the declarant who is only the domestic servant of the late A.G. Fonseka was known to the 1st Respondent during this time. A separate declaration was made by the declarant with regard to a 7 perch block by Deed No 706 and later transferred to the 1st Respondent by Deed No 726 attested by the 2nd Respondent. The next transaction with regard to the same plot of land was done before Notary Mervin Samaraweera at the residence of the 1st and the 2nd Respondents, where the Notary Samaraweera had indicated the same address as his office address in the Deed attested by him. This clearly shows as to how secretly these transactions had taken place between the parties.

Even though the 1st Respondent transferred the property by Deed No. 2428 to Niroshan Company (Pvt) Ltd. he and his wife who attested Deed Nos. 726 and 706 had become the beneficiaries of the said transaction since they were the only Directors of Niroshan Company (Pvt) Ltd. at that time. Several other incidents that took place thereafter (as discussed in this Judgment) clearly show the interest the 1st Respondent displayed even after the proceedings in the instant Rule matter was commenced. The 1st Respondent while giving evidence before this Court admitted that he had a civil practice for several years and therefore it is evident that the 1st Respondent had a clear understanding with regard to the transactions that were referred to in this judgment.

On a careful examination of the contention of the 1st Respondent (along with the Deceased 2nd Respondent) as revealed from the evidence of the Complainant, the 1st Respondent, and the documents tendered before us, it is well founded that the allegation of misconduct referred to under paragraphs (a) (f) and (g) of the amended Rule had been established and the 1st Respondent is guilty of deceit and malpractice within the ambit of section 42 (2) of the Judicature Act No. 2 of 1978.

When considering the nature of malpractice and deceit committed by the 1st Respondent, I am reminded of the following passage by Mookerjee J in Emperor Vs. Rajani Kanta Bose and Others (AIR 1922 Calcutta 515) to the effect;

> "The practice of the law is not a business open to all who wish to engage in it; it is a personal right or privilege limited to selected persons of good character with special qualifications duly ascertained and certified; it is in the nature of a franchise from the state conferred only for merit may be revoked whenever misconduct renders the pleader holding the license unfit to be entrusted with the powers and duties of his office"

There is no doubt that the above conduct of the 1st Respondent has brought the legal profession into disrepute and it is plainly dishonourable, disgraceful, and unworthy of an Attorney-at-Law. Hence it is clear that the 1st Respondent has also breached Rules 60 and 61 of the Supreme Court (Conduct and Etiquette for Attorney-at-Law) Rules 1988.

This Court in the case of In Re: D.S. Bodhinagoda SC Rule 01/2010 (SC minute 20.02.2013) considered how the Court should decide as to what cause of action should be taken against an Attorney-at-Law who is found guilty for similar Conduct as follows;

> "Considering the nature of the malpractice and deceit committed by the Respondent the legal profession has been brought into disrepute. The Respondent's conduct is plainly dishonourable and disgraceful and certainly unworthy of an Attorney-at-Law. Hence the Respondent has breached Rules 60 and 61 of the Supreme Court (Conduct and Etiquette for Attorney-at-Law) Rules 1988."

The sentence that should be considered against an Attorney-at-Law, when the Attorney-at-Law was found guilty of professional misconduct was discussed by Basnayake CJ in the case of In Re Fernando (1959) 63 NLR 233 at Page 234 as follows;

> "The power to remove or suspend a proctor from his office is one that is meant to be exercised for the protection of the profession and the public and for the purpose of maintaining a high code of conduct among those whom this court holds out as its officers to whom the public may entrust their affairs with confidence."

Considering the conclusion this Court has already made, the Rule issued on the 1st Respondent is made absolute. I order that the 1st Respondent Jayantha Attanayake Attorney-at-Law be removed from the office of an Attorney-at-Law of this Court and that his name be struck off the Roll of Attorney-at-Law.

Registrar of this Court is to take steps accordingly.

Rule made absolute and the 1st Respondent struck off the Roll of Attorney-at-Law.

E.A.G.R Amarasekara, J

When this Special Leave to Appeal application was taken up for support for the granting of special leave on 01.12.2022, learned counsel for the Applicant-Appellant-Respondent-Respondent (hereinafter referred to as the Applicant-Respondent) raised a preliminary objection that this application has been filed out of time. The said preliminary objection was based on the 'deeming provisions' found in Rule 20(2) and proviso to Rule 22(5) of the Supreme Court Rules found in part 1B of the Supreme Court Rules of 1990.

Parties made their oral submissions and this Court directed them to file their written submissions within 3 weeks thereof. However, as per the brief, it appears that only the Respondent-Respondent-Petitioner-Petitioner (hereinafter referred to as Respondent-Petitioner) has filed his written submissions within the time given for that purpose, and Applicant-Respondent who raised the preliminary objection has not filed her written submissions.

Facts behind this application can be briefly stated as follows:

1. The learned Additional Magistrate of Colombo on 16.01.2019 delivered the order dated 23.12.2018 dismissing the maintenance application of the Applicant-Respondent.
2. Being aggrieved by the said order, an appeal was made to the Colombo High Court by the Applicant-Respondent and after hearing the parties, the learned High Court Judge delivered her Judgment dated 08.10.2020 setting aside the order made by the learned Magistrate and ordered the Respondent Petitioner to pay Rs.25000/= per month as maintenance.

3. In terms of Section 14(2) of the Maintenance Act No.37 of 1997, Respondent-Petitioner filed a leave to appeal application to appeal to the Supreme Court before the High Court.
4. The learned High Court Judge of Colombo High Court No.02 refused to grant leave to appeal to this Court by his order dated 09.12.2021.
5. Being aggrieved by the said decisions of the High Court, this special leave to appeal application dated 19.01.2022 has been filed on 20.01.2022 by the Respondent-Petitioner.

Many decisions of this Court have stated that the said Supreme Court Rules have categorized appeals to the Supreme Court into 3 groups as mentioned below;

- Part 1A-Appeals with special leave obtained from the Supreme Court.
- Part 1B-Appeals with leave to appeal from the Court of Appeal.
- Part 1C-Other appeals from Court of Appeal, other Courts and Tribunals.

[with regard to the above, see Samantha Kumara v Manohari (2006) 2 SLR 57, Sudath Rohana and Another v Mohammed Zeena and Another (2011) 2SLR 134, Priyanthi Chandrika Jinadasa v Pathma Hemamali and Others (2011) 1SLR 337, Asia Broadcasting Corporation (pvt) Ltd v Kaluappu Hannadi Lalith Priyantha (SC/HC/LA/50/2020 SCM of 07/07/2021)]

In the aforesaid case of Sudath Rohana and Another V Mohamed Zeena, it has been held as follows;

'Part 1 of the Supreme Court Rules 1990, refers to three types of appeals which are dealt with by the Supreme Court, viz, special leave to appeal, leave to appeal and other appeals. Whilst applications for special leave to appeal are from the judgments of the Court of Appeal, the leave to appeal applications referred to in the Supreme Court Rules are instances, where the Court of Appeal had granted leave to appeal to the Supreme Court from any final order, judgment, decree or sentence of the Court of Appeal, where the Court had decided that it involves a substantial question of law. The other appeals referred to in section C of part 1 of the Supreme Court Rules are described in Rule 28(1), which is as follows:

"Save as otherwise specifically provided by or under any law passed by parliament, the provisions of this rule shall apply to all other appeals to the Supreme Court from an order, judgment, decree or sentence of the Court of Appeal or any other Court or tribunal" (emphasis added).'

Thus, as per the above quoted paragraph, what is relevant to the application for appeals from the High Court is Part 1C of the said rules which contains only Rule 28 and as per Rule 28 (7), provisions of Rule 27 shall apply mutatis mutandis to such appeal.

However, in the case of Samantha Kumara V Manohari mentioned above, which was an application of appeal against the High Court Order of Dismissal of the appeal from the Magistrate

Court in terms of section14(2) of the Maintenance Act No. 37 of 1999 read with section 9 of Act no. 19 of 1990 but with leave granted by the High Court, it was held;

"The present Appeal is neither with special leave from the Supreme Court nor with leave of the Court of Appeal but with leave from the High Court. Therefore, the instant appeal clearly falls into the category of other appeals and hence rules in Part 1C dealing with other appeals would apply.

The position of the Appellant that there are no rules governing appeals from the Provincial High Court to the Supreme Court is therefore incorrect.

An appeal to the Supreme Court from an order of the Provincial High Court can be either with the leave of the Provincial High Court or with special leave obtained from the Supreme Court upon a refusal of leave by the High Court.

If the appeal is with leave of the High Court, then Supreme Court rules under Part 1C (other appeals) shall apply; If the appeal is with special leave of the Supreme Court, then Supreme Court rules under Part 1A (special leave to appeal) shall apply mutatis mutandis since Rule 2 relates to every application for special leave to appeal…"

As per the afore quoted paragraph, when the High Court grants leave, rules in Part 1C apply and if the High Court refuses leave, rules in Part 1A apply. It must be noted that the 'deeming provisions' relied upon by the Applicant Respondent in raising the preliminary objection are found in Part IB of the Supreme Court Rules which applies to the appeals where leave to appeal to the Supreme Court is first sought in the Court of Appeal, and that Part has no application to the present application which emanates from the High Court. However, the said decision does not find any issue with filing an application in terms of section 14(2) in combination with the provisions in section 9 of the High Court of the Provinces (Special Provisions) Act No. 19 of 1990. Anyway, as per the said decision, rules in Part IA apply and, as per Rule 7, the time limit to file an application is 6 weeks (42 days).

As said before, Rule 20(2) and Rule 22(5) of the Supreme Court Rules that contain 'deeming provisions' occur in Part 1B which expressly and specifically deal with appeals from the Court of Appeal where leave to appeal is first sought in the Court of Appeal.

The learned counsel for the Respondent-Petitioner in his written submissions has brought this Court's attention to the fact that even though Sections 5 and 7 of the Act No.19 of 1990 have made written laws including rules applicable to the appeals from Magistrates Court, Primary Courts and Labour Tribunals filed in the Provincial High Courts and to the writ applications filed in the Provincial High Court respectively, there are no such specific statutory provisions that make Supreme Court Rules relevant to the Appeals from Court of Appeal to the Supreme Court applicable to the Appeals from the Provincial High Court to the Supreme Court.

It is pertinent to refer the relevant section 14(2) of the Maintenance Act No.37 of 1999 which is mentioned below;

(2) "Any person dissatisfied with an Order made by a High Court in the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction under this section, may prefer an appeal there from to the Supreme Court, on a question of law with the leave of the High Court, and where such leave is refused, with the Special Leave of Supreme Court, first had an obtained."

As per the said section, to file a special leave to appeal application in this Court, there is a pre-condition. First the leave to appeal to Supreme Court has to be refused by the High Court. Till that, time cannot start to run. Thus, in my view, said deeming provisions cannot override said statutory provision, even if they are considered as applicable for the sake of argument.

In the case of Antony Fernando v Deepthi Lakmali (2012) 2 Sri LR 81, Suresh Chandra J, after considering Section 14(2) of the Maintenance Act along with Section 9 of the High Court of the Provinces (Special Provisions) Act, No. 19 of 1990 and provisions of the Industrial Dispute Act No.43 of 1950 amended by Act No. 11 of 2003 relating to appeal to the Supreme Court from the High Court held that;

No direct application can be made to the Supreme Court in respect of an application for maintenance against the judgment of the High Court. Such an application should first be made to the High Court itself seeking leave to appeal to the Supreme Court and in the event of refusal of such application by the High Court, the Petitioner could seek leave to appeal from the Supreme Court.

It was further held "that the maxim 'Generalia Specialibus Non Derogant', when applied to the present instance would also show that the general provisions for appeals from High Court to the Supreme Court as provided by Section 9 of the High Court of the Provinces (Special Provisions) Act, No. 19 of 1990 have no application when a special provision is made in a specific statute such as a provision in Section 14(2) of the Maintenance Act No.37 of 1999 which was also enacted after the introduction of the general provision in Act No. 19 of 1990."

Due to the reasons given above, this Court cannot hold that the said deeming provisions in Part 1B of Supreme Court Rules applies to the present application.

Since provisions in part 1C of the said Supreme Court Rules are silent with regard to the time limit within which an appeal is to be filed, a question arises as to how one decides whether the application is time barred if Supreme Court Rules in Part 1C apply.

In this regard, following passage found in Samantha Kumara v Manohari (2006) 2 SLR 57 is relevant.

"in determining the time for an aggrieved party to lodge an application for special leave to the Supreme Court where no time is fixed either in statutes or the rules; this Court has in the case of Tea Small Holders Ltd v Weragoda[1] and in the case of Mahaweli Authority of Sri Lanka v United Agency Corporation (Pvt) Ltd[2] held that the petitioner should make his application within a reasonable time, and relying on the time period prescribed in the rules for similar applications has held that 42 days is reasonable time."

Thus, in the matter at hand, irrespective of whether Part 1A or 1C apply, the application should have filed within 42 days from the refusal by the High Court to grant leave to appeal which was done on 09.12.2021. This application has been filed on 20.01.2022, thus within 42 days.

Therefore, the preliminary objection raised by the Applicant-Respondent is overruled and the application is fixed for support for special leave to appeal.

Facts of the case

On the 9th of June 2017, the Securities and Exchange Commission of Sri Lanka (hereinafter referred to as the "Respondent") issued a letter to the petitioner in the instant application (hereinafter referred to as the "Petitioner") calling him to show cause as to why no action should be taken against him for trading on shares of Kegalle Plantations PLC during the period between the 30th of June and 10th of July 2015, whilst being in possession of unpublished price sensitive information relating to those securities, in contravention of section 32 of the Securities and Exchange Commission of Sri Lanka Act, No. 36 of 1987, as amended (hereinafter referred to as the "SEC Act").

The said letter further alleged that the Petitioner had knowingly furnished false and misleading information, and concealed material facts during the course of the investigation conducted by the Respondent, in contravention of sections 46A (4) and 51 (1) (b) of the SEC Act.

At a meeting of the Respondent held on the 26th of October 2017, the counsel for the Petitioner was permitted to make representations on behalf of the Petitioner with respect to his innocence and as to why the Respondent should consider compounding the alleged offence.

After considering the representations made by the Petitioner to the Respondent, the Respondent issued a 'notice of action' dated the 1st of November 2017 informing the Petitioner that he had failed to satisfy the Respondent that no legal action should be taken against him.

The Petitioner thereafter filed a Writ Application in the Court of Appeal on the 8th of December 2017 alleging that, inter alia, the conduct of the Respondent, including the refusal to compound the offence, was arbitrary, irrational and unreasonable.

Further, the Petitioner prayed for, inter alia:

(a) Issue Notice upon the Respondents;

(b) Call for and inspect the records and / or files of the 1st Respondent relating to this matter, including the purported Inspection Report referred to in "P4", "P8" and "P9";

(c) Issue an interim order restraining the Respondents from initiating any enforcement action against the Petitioner in respect of the alleged offences set out in "P4" pending the hearing and final determination of this matter;

(d) Issue an interim order restraining the Respondents from initiating any enforcement action against the Petitioner in respect off the alleged offences set out in "P8" pending the hearing and final determination of this matter;

(e) Issue an interim order restraining the Respondents from initiating any enforcement action against the Petitioner in respect off the alleged offences set out in "P9" pending the hearing and final determination of this matter;

AND / OR

(f) Issue an interim order restraining the Respondents from initiating action against the Petitioner in terms of section 136 of the Criminal Procedure Code in respect of the alleged offences set out in "P4" pending the hearing and final determination of this matter;

(g) Issue an interim order restraining the Respondents from initiating action against the Petitioner in terms of section 136 of the Criminal Procedure Code in respect of the alleged offences set out in "P8" pending the hearing and final determination of this matter;

(h) Issue an interim order restraining the Respondents from initiating action against the Petitioner in terms of section 136 of the Criminal Procedure Code in respect of the alleged offences set out in "P9" pending the hearing and final determination of this matter;

(i) Issue a mandate in the nature of a writ of certiorari quashing "P4" and the decisions contained therein (show cause);

(j) Issue a mandate in the nature of a writ of certiorari quashing "P8" and the decisions contained therein (show cause);

(k) Issue a mandate in the nature of a writ of certiorari quashing "P9" and the decisions contained therein (show cause);

(l) Issue a mandate in the nature of a writ of certiorari quashing "P7" and the decisions contained therein (compounding);

(m) Issue a mandate in the nature of a writ of prohibition preventing the Respondents from initiating any enforcement action against the Petitioner in respect of the alleged offences set out in "P4" and / or "P8" and / or "P9";

AND / OR

(n) Issue a mandate in the nature of a writ of prohibition preventing the Respondents from initiating action against the Petitioner in terms of section 136 of the Criminal Procedure Code in respect of the alleged offences set out in "P4" and / or "P8" and / or "P9".

Whilst the said Writ Application was pending before the Court of Appeal, the Respondent instituted proceedings in the Magistrates' Court of Colombo on the 25th of February 2019 against the Petitioner and another in terms of the SEC Act.

Thereafter, the Magistrates Court issued summons on the Petitioner and another named as accused in the said case.

The learned President's Counsel for the Petitioner had then supported the said Writ Application for notice and interim relief before the Court of Appeal. Having heard the parties to the said Writ Application, the Court of Appeal has delivered the order dated the 22nd of March 2019 declining to grant the interim relief prayed for by the Petitioner. Further, in the said Order, the Court of Appeal had directed the parties to file written submissions with regard to issuing notices on the Respondents in the said application.

Being aggrieved by the said order of the Court of Appeal, the Petitioner filed an application for Special Leave to Appeal dated the 28th of March 2019 and sought Special Leave to Appeal from this Court.

Preliminary objection raised by the Respondent

When this application was taken up for support on the 21st of July 2023, the learned Additional Solicitor General raised a preliminary objection on the maintainability of the application for Special Leave to Appeal on the basis that the affidavit dated the 28th of March 2019 tendered in support of the petition of Special Leave to Appeal to the Supreme Court was not in conformity with the Consular Functions Act, No. 4 of 1981, as amended (hereinafter referred to as the "Consular Functions Act").

It is however pertinent to note that the Petitioner tendered the original affidavit to this Court, which was certified on behalf of the Ambassador of Sri Lanka in Japan, by way of a motion dated the 3rd of June 2019 in the Supreme Court.

Submissions of the Respondent

The learned Additional Solicitor General for the respondents submitted that Rule 2 read together with Rule 6 of the Supreme Court Rules 1990 mandatorily requires that a petition in an application for Special Leave to Appeal be supported by an affidavit.

He further submitted that foreign affidavits tendered to court are not automatically recognized as valid unless it conforms to the applicable laws. Moreover, in terms of section 3 (i) of the Consular Functions Act, a foreign affidavit would only be recognized as valid in the courts of Sri Lanka, if the document was certified by a diplomatic or consular officer, who is ex officio deemed to be a Justice of the Peace for Sri Lanka.

Accordingly, it was submitted that the affidavit filed by the petitioner purported to have been executed before a Notary Public in Japan cannot be recognized as a valid affidavit under our law as it has no consular authentication or validation by the Embassy of Sri Lanka in Japan.

Submissions of the Petitioner

The learned President's Counsel for the Petitioner submitted that the preliminary objection raised by the Respondent cannot be sustained, because an affidavit in support of a petition in an Application for Special Leave to Appeal is not mandatory. Rules 2 and 6 of the Supreme Court Rules of 1990 stipulates that a petition must be filed together with a supporting "affidavit or document" only where the application contains allegations of fact which cannot be verified by reference to the judgment of the Court of Appeal. The learned President's Counsel further submitted that in the instant application, the allegations of fact can be verified from the impugned Order, and therefore the instant application does not require an affidavit or other documents.

Without prejudice to the aforementioned submission, the learned President's Counsel further submitted that given the urgency of the matter, it would be frivolous and highly technical to insist that all steps pertaining to the certification of a foreign affidavit be carried out at the point of filing the petition for Special Leave to Appeal within the prescribed time frame.

The learned President's Counsel further submitted that, in any event, out of an abundance of caution the affidavit had been certified by the Sri Lankan Embassy in Japan and subsequently been tendered to this court.

Consideration of the preliminary objection

There are three main aspects to be considered in the instant application:

(a) Whether it is mandatory under Rules 2 read with 6 of the Supreme Court Rules of 1990 to tender an affidavit in support of a petition in a Special Leave to Appeal Application;

(b) Whether non-compliance with the Consular Functions Act can subsequently be cured; and

(c) Whether the Petitioner has tendered a valid affidavit to court in support of the petition.

Is it mandatory to tender an affidavit under Rule 2 read with Rule 6 of the Supreme Court Rules 1990 in a Special Leave to Appeal Application?

Rule 2 of the Supreme Court Rules of 1990 reads as follows:

> "Every application for special leave to appeal to the Supreme Court shall be made by a petition in that behalf lodged at the Registry, together with affidavits and documents in support thereof as prescribed by rule 6, and a certified copy, or uncertified photocopy, of the judgement or order in respect of which leave to appeal is sought. Three additional copies of such petition, affidavits, documents and judgment or order shall also be filed;"
>

Rule 6 further provides as follows:

> "Where any such application contains allegations of fact which cannot be verified by reference to the judgment or order of the Court of Appeal in respect of which special leave to appeal is sought, the petitioner shall annex in support of such allegations an affidavit or other relevant document (including any relevant portion of the record of the Court of Appeal or of the original court or tribunal). Such affidavit may be sworn to or affirmed by the petitioner, his instructing attorney-at-law, or his recognized agent, or by any other person having personal knowledge of such facts. Every affidavit by a petitioner, his instructing attorney-at-law, or his recognized agent, shall be confined to the statement of such facts as the declarant is able of his own knowledge and observation to testify to: provided that statements of such declarant's belief may also be admitted, if reasonable grounds for such belief be set forth in such affidavit."

[Emphasis added]

Rule 2 read with Rule 6 of the Supreme Court Rules of 1990 shows that an affidavit is needed to be filed together with a Petition of Appeal for Special Leave, in order to support the allegations of facts in the petition that cannot be verified by reference to the judgment or order in respect of which Special Leave to Appeal is sought.

Accordingly, a Petition of Appeal for Special Leave not containing allegations of facts which could be considered by reference to a judgment or order of the Court of Appeal, can be considered by the court even in the absence of a supporting affidavit.

However, an affidavit would be mandatory if the allegations of facts contained in the Petition of Appeal for Special Leave cannot be verified by referring to the impugned judgment or order of the Court of Appeal.

A careful consideration of the impugned Order shows that the instant application can be supported without an affidavit as the Petitioner is relying purely on questions of law arising out of the impugned Order of the Court of Appeal dated the 22nd of March 2019.

It is further pertinent to note that the Petitioner had tendered an affidavit sworn overseas along with the Application for Special Leave to Appeal. Moreover, the Petitioner had obtained certification from the embassy of Sri Lanka in Japan as required in terms of the Consular Functions Act, after the said objection was raised by the Respondents.

Furthermore, the proviso to Rule 2 of the Supreme Court Rules 1990 permits the court to deem compliance of the Rules where a petitioner is unable to tender such materials with the application, provided the Petitioner has set out the circumstances for his failure to do so in the petition and the said reasons are acceptable to court.

The proviso to Rule 2 reads as follows:

"Provided that if the petitioner is unable to obtain any such affidavit, document, judgment or order, as is required by this rule to be tendered with his petition, he shall set out the circumstances in his petition, and shall pray for permission to tender the same, together with the requisite number of copies, as soon as he obtains the same. If the court is satisfied that the petitioner had exercised due diligence in attempting to obtain such affidavit, document, judgment or order, and that the failure to tender the same was due to circumstances beyond his control, but not otherwise, he shall be deemed to have complied with the provisions of this rule."

[Emphasis added]

The above proviso to Rule 2 has therefore conferred wide discretion on the Supreme Court to allow a petitioner to file an affidavit, if the petitioner has reserved his right to file an affidavit, document, impugned judgment, order or certified copy of the case record.

However, I am of the view that even if the Petitioner has not reserved the right to file such materials, the Supreme Court has a wide discretion to grant permission to a petitioner to file such materials if the circumstances warrant granting such permission in the interest of justice.

A similar view was expressed in Priyani Soysa v Rienzie Arsecularatne [1999] 2 SLR 179, where Wijetunga J in his dissenting judgement held that even the failure of the petitioner to obtain permission of the court to tender a valid affidavit would not necessarily dismiss a case unless there is a compelling reason to do so.

"Even assuming, though not agreeing, that the affidavit filed by the petitioner under Rule 6 was inadequate and that certified copies of the record of the Court of Appeal should have been submitted with the original application, the only lapse then on the part of the petitioner would be that she did not obtain the permission of the Court to tender the same, under the proviso to Rule 2, and that she tendered only 3 copies to Court. Having regard to the purpose of the Rules pertaining to special leave to appeal, it appears that non-compliance of this nature would not necessarily deprive a party of the opportunity of being heard on the merits at the threshold stage, unless there is some compelling reason to do so."

[Emphasis added]

Further, in Kiriwanthe and Another v Navaratne and Another [1990] 2 SLR 393, Fernando J held:

"The weight of authority thus favours the view that while all these Rules must be complied with the law does not require or permit an automatic dismissal of the application or appeal of the party in default. The consequence of non-compliance (by reason of impossibility or for any other reason) is a matter falling within the discretion of the Court, to be exercised after considering the nature of the default, as well as the excuse or explanation therefor, in the context of the object of the particular Rule."

[Emphasis added]

Can non-compliance with the Consular Functions Act subsequently be cured?

Section 3 (i) of the Consular Functions Act reads as follows:

"Upon the application of, a person who is a citizen of Sri Lanka or any other person, a diplomatic or consular officer may

(i) certify, attest, authenticate or do any other such act to validate any document"

[Emphasis added]

Further, section 4 (i) of the Consular Functions Act reads as follows:

"Every diplomatic or Consular Officer shall be deemed to be ex officio a Justice of the peace for the Republic of Sri Lanka and accordingly may administer any oath or affirmation or take any affidavit and such oath or affirmation or such affidavit shall be deemed to have been administered or take, as the case may be, in Sri Lanka."

[Emphasis added]

As stated above, consular certification by the Sri Lankan Embassy in Japan has been obtained after the Preliminary Objection was raised and the same was tendered to this Court. In the aforesaid circumstances, it is necessary to consider whether an affidavit for which an objection has been raised in terms of the Consular Functions Act can be cured.

Section 9 of the Oaths and Affirmation Ordinance reads as follows:

"No omission to take any oath or make any affirmation, no substitution of anyone for any other of them and no irregularity whatever in the form in which any one of them is administered, shall invalidate any proceedings or render inadmissible any evidence whatever in or in respect of which such omission, substitution or irregularity took place, or shall affect the obligation of a witness to state the truth."

[Emphasis added]

In Mohamed Rauf Mohamed Facy v Mohamed Azath Sanoon Sally (SC/Appeal No. 04/2004), BASL Law Journal 2006 page 58 in considering the impact of technical defects in an affidavit, the court observed that section 9 of the Oaths and Affirmations Ordinance is a salutary provision which was intended to remedy such maladies.

In Senok Trade Combine Ltd. v K.H.S. Pushpadeva (SC/HC/LA Application No. 02/2014) SC Minutes dated 4th September 2014 it was held as follows:

> "Infirmities and irregularities in the affidavit of the petitioner referred to by the Respondent are technical in nature that can be cured by application of Section 9 of the Oaths Ordinance and therefore do not impact on the validity the affidavit."
>

In several other instances, the courts have held that the defects in affidavits are of a mere technical nature and allowed the litigants to seek redress from the justice system.

It is also worth placing on record that requiring certification, attestation, authentication or any other such act to validate any document in terms of section 3 of the Consular Functions Act, No. 4 of 1981 is not practical in urgent circumstances due to the geographical size of certain countries and the need to travel great distances to reach the embassy of Sri Lanka in certain countries. Thus, the courts should take such circumstances into account when considering objections as to the validity of such documents and allowing any defects in those documents to be rectified.

In this regard, it is useful to refer to instances where the courts accept proxies sent by fax from overseas and allow the original to be filed in courts when the original is available in Sri Lanka. Further, if there are defects in proxies, the courts allow the parties to rectify the defects if they are of a technical nature. The approach of the modern courts is to depart from dismissing cases based on mere technicalities and to allow the parties to present their respective cases for proper adjudication of facts by the courts in order to meet the ends of justice.

A similar view was expressed as far back as 1936 by Abrahams CJ in Vellupille v Chairman, Urban District Council [1936] 39 NLR 464 who held "this is a Court of Justice, it is not an Academy of Law."

Further, no prejudice whatsoever has been caused to the Respondents as a result of the alleged default and the smooth functioning of the court has not been interrupted.

Conclusion

In the aforesaid circumstances, I am of the view that:

(a) for the reasons stated above, the instant application can be supported in court even without an affidavit in terms of Rule 2 read with Rule 6 of the Supreme Court Rules of 1990;
(b) in any event, the Petitioner has obtained consular certification and rectified the defect in the affidavit filed along with the Petition to Appeal for Special Leave and the court accepts the said affidavit as a valid affidavit to support the averments in the Petition.

Hence, the preliminary objection is over-ruled.

No costs.

Judge of the Supreme Court

Achala Wengappuli, J

I agree.

Judge of the Supreme Court

E. A. G. R Amarasekera, J

I had the opportunity of reading the order written by His Lordship Justice Priyantha Jayawardena PC in its draft form. I totally agree with his Lordship that when Supreme Court Rules 2 and 6 are read together, an application for special leave to appeal containing allegations of fact which can be verified by reference only to the judgment or order, can be considered by Court even in the absence of a supporting affidavit. In other words, if the questions of law can be ascertained on the face of the judgment or order, there is no need of a supporting affidavit. So, I totally agree with the view taken by His Lordship Justice Jayawardena PC that the instant application can be supported in court even without an affidavit in terms of Rule 2 read with Rule 6 of the Supreme Court Rules of 1990 to point out questions of law arising out of the impugned order itself.

Supreme Court Rules do not say that the affidavits mentioned in the said rules should be sworn or affirmed in Sri Lanka or that the affidavits referred to in the said rules preclude affidavits executed in foreign countries. Sections 437 and 438 of the Civil Procedure Code clearly identify the possibility of executing affidavits in a country outside Sri Lanka before a person qualified to administer oath or affirmation according to the law of that countries. The question is how a court in Sri Lanka recognizes the person who administers oath or affirmation as a qualified person to administer oath or affirmation in the relevant country. If the opposite party does not challenge the qualification of the person who has administered oath or affirmation in the relevant case, there may not be an issue, but when there is a challenge, it may have to be established that it was done before a person qualified to administer oath or affirmation in the relevant country. Even with regard to an affidavit executed within the country, one can raise an objection that the oath or affirmation was not administered before a Justice of Peace or Commissioner of Oaths recognized by our law. Once it is established that the Justice of Peace or the Commissioner of Oaths had the authority to administer oath or affirmation, the affidavit is valid from the date it was made.

The objection was raised in terms of the Sections 3(1) and 4(1) of the Consular Functions Act No.4 of 1981. Other than that, no provision that states the making of an affidavit in a foreign country makes it ipso facto invalid or inadmissible in evidence has been brought to our notice. Further, no other defect with regard to formalities in making of an affidavit has been brought to our notice.
Section 4(1) of the Consular Functions Act considers Diplomatic/ Consular officers as Justices of Peace and enables them to act as a Justices of Peace in administering oath or affirmations. Affidavits made before them are deemed to be made in Sri Lanka. This is only an enabling provision and it does not invalidate or make inadmissible other affidavits sworn or affirmed before a person qualified to administer oath or affirmation in terms of the law of the relevant country. If it is so interpreted to say that other affidavits sworn or affirmed in foreign countries are not valid before our courts, the relevant parts of sections 437 and 438 of Civil Procedure Code become redundant. On the other hand, if this is to disregard other affidavits made in foreign countries, litigants living abroad or in foreign countries at a given time, who have to tender affidavits within time limits, may have to face serious repercussions if there is no diplomatic/consular office within a close distance. The law does not expect to do impossible things. So, my view is that the said Section 4(1) has no relevance to the matter at hand. Our attention has not been brought to any provision which states that the affidavit must be sworn or affirmed only before a consular or diplomatic officer if it is a foreign affidavit.

If there is any relevance, it is Section 3(1) of the said Consular Functions Act. It is questionable whether an affidavit falls within the term 'any document' contained therein as per the interpretation given to the said term in the interpretation section of the said Act. However, certain parts contained or attached to the affidavit to show that the person who administered the oath/affirmation is a qualified person may need verification by a proper authority.

In my view, the validation contemplated in Section 3(1) is not to certify the truth of the contents of a document which the officer is not the author. Even if the officer certifies the truth of the contents, it becomes hearsay. Thus, the validation contemplated there is to certify, attest or authenticate the genuineness or the authenticity of the document to the effect that it has originated from the correct or lawful source. However, it does not create a bar to accept foreign affidavits. It only provides for Sri Lankan citizens or any other person a mode to meet challenges to foreign documents on the basis of authenticity, legality etc. The Consular Functions Act does not say that such certification, attestation or authentication must always accompany with the document when it is tendered. It does not prevent one to provide the said certification or authentication when the authenticity or genuineness or legality is challenged. In this matter as His Lordship has mentioned in the draft judgment, certification has been tendered after the objection was raised. Now any doubt to the authenticity has been removed as per the law. Now there is no hindrance to accept the affidavit from the day it was sworn or affirmed.

In my view, there is nothing wrong with the affidavit per se as far as the formalities are concerned or regarding its validity except for the doubt created by the objection whether it was sworn or affirmed before a qualified person as per the laws of the relevant country. Such doubt cannot be sustained after a copy with the certification is tendered.

In other words, there was no defect in the affidavit in its making to reject or cure with amendments but the challenge to the validity created through objections cannot hold water from the moment the certification is tendered. Thus, I hold that there is a valid affidavit even to support the averments in the petition.

Thus, I agree with His Lordship's decision to overrule the preliminary objection.

Heard learned counsel for the Appellant and learned Deputy Solicitor General for the Hon. Attorney General.

The Appellant stood indicted for having on 14th December 2009 in Maradana committed the Murder of one Hewagamage Thilakaratne, and for having caused hurt to one A.H.M. Thamara Kumari. The High Court convicted the Accused-Appellant for having committed both offences. The Court of Appeal affirmed the conviction and sentence.

The Incident:

The Appellant worked in a small boutique which was a restaurant situated in Maradana, and the deceased being the proprietor of the restaurant slept in the rear of that place along with his wife (injured victim). The evidence reveal that the Appellant was an employee of the deceased and the deceased had not being regularly paying the Appellant his wages. During the evening of the day of the incident, having booked a bus journey to proceed home on a bus which was due to depart at 12 midnight that day, the Appellant had returned to his place of employment to obtain his wages from his employer (the deceased). Around mid night, he appears to have woken- up the deceased, and asked for his wages. The deceased had refused pay the wages due to the Appellant. It is the Accused's evidence under oath (which testimony has not been successfully impeached by the prosecution), that an argument ensued, and the deceased slapped him. The Accused got angry and had retaliated by stabbing and cutting the deceased with the aid of a knife used for cooking, which had been nearby along with other cooking utensils. This incident had occurred at about 1.30am, and by that time the accused had missed the bus in which he was due to go home.

Circumstances taken into consideration:

1. The deceased has sustained 11 cut injuries and 8 stab injuries, of which four had been fatal, and one had been necessarily fatal. It appears that the Appellant had within a brief moment of time acted in a rage and inflicted all these injuries on the deceased. This is clearly reflective of the accused having lost self-control.

2. During the course of this incident, the accused had sustained 8 injuries, the infliction of which has not been explained as part of the prosecution's narrative of evidence. The wife of the deceased who claimed to be an eyewitness does not explain how the accused sustained injuries.

3. There is no evidence that the Appellant had from outside brought into the scene of the incident the knife that was used to inflict the fatal injuries, or that he had previously surreptitiously kept the knife at the location of the scene so that he could use it subsequently to inflict injury on the deceased. This shows that the Appellant who had got angry sequel to the deceased refusing to pay his wages and thereafter slapping him, quite spontaneously took the knife which was nearby and stabbed the deceased.

4. The accused is an uneducated, unskilled labourer from the lower strata of society. His susceptibility to provocation would have been quite high. Furthermore, there is no evidence of premeditation of committing murder.

All these items suggest unequivocally to the accused having been provoked by the deceased, and having lost control of himself and got into a rage and attacked the deceased.

Finding:

In view of the above circumstances, this Court concludes that the accused had been suddenly and gravely provoked by the deceased, at the time he attacked the deceased.

In the circumstances, this Court while answering the two questions of law in the affirmative, arrives at the conclusion that the conduct of the Accused- Appellant comes within the purview of exception 1 to section 294 of the Penal Code and that the infliction of injury on the deceased by the accused had been at a time when the Appellant was deprived of the power self-control due to grave and sudden provocation, and thereby he caused the death of the person who gave such provocation. I have considered and concluded that none of to the provisos of the 1st exception would be applicable to this case.

It is unfortunate that the Appellant's case had not been presented before the Court of Appeal in a manner that would have enabled that Court to have considered his culpability from the perspective of the 1st exception to section 294. Had it been done, in all probability, the Court of Appeal would have also arrived at this same finding.

In the circumstances, this Court vacates and sets aside the impugned judgment of the Court of Appeal dated 14.09.2022 and the Judgment of the High Court dated 25.07.2019 and substitute therefor a verdict of culpable homicide not amounting to murder on the basis of the 1st exception to section 294. Accordingly, a sentence of 20 years imprisonment (which sentence shall operate from the date of the original conviction imposed by the High Court) is imposed on the Appellant.

The conviction and the sentence with regard to the 2nd count to shall remain the same.

Accordingly, this Appeal is partly allowed.

This Court wishes to take of this opportunity to appreciate the highly professional, thorough and persistent manner in which learned counsel for the Appellant pursued this appeal on behalf of his client. This Court also wishes to place on record its appreciation of the submissions that were made by learned Deputy Solicitor General in his capacity as an officer of this Court and as representative counsel for the Hon. Attorney General. He placed before this Court the true facts of this case in a fair manner, and assisted Court in the dispensation of justice. His conduct is in line with the traditions and the ethical standards of true officers of the Attorney General's Department.

JUDGMENT

The two appellants before this Court namely Indiketiya Hewage Kusumdasa Mahanama and Piyadasa Dissanayake were indicted by the Director General of the Commission to Investigate Allegations of Bribery or Corruption (hereinafter referred to as DG-CIABOC) before the High Court of the Western Province holden in Colombo on several charges under the Bribery Act No. 11 of 1954 (as amended- hereinafter referred to as the Act). Acting on the Directive made by the Commission to Investigate Allegations of Bribery or Corruption (hereinafter referred to as CIABOC) under section 12 A (4)a of the Judicature Act (as amended) reference was made by DG-CIABOC to His Lordship the Chief Justice, and His Lordship had nominated a bench of three Judges of the High Court to hear and determine this case before the Permanent High Court at Bar (hereinafter be referred to as High Court at Bar).

The First and Second Appellants stood indicted by the DG-CIABOC for conspiring to solicit a sum of USD Three Million in the first instance and later Rupees Hundred Million as gratification and acceptance of Rupees Twenty Million as a gratification as an inducement or a reward in order to facilitate the process of handing over the machinery of the sugar factory in Kanthale, from the Virtual Complainant, Kotagaralahalli Pedappiah Nagarajah, during the period between 11th August 2016 to 03rd May 2018.

The Indictment that was served on the two accused contained 24 charges and except for the 4th count all the other counts contained charges against either the 1st or the 2nd Accused-Appellant, 4th count was a count of conspiracy against both Accused-Appellants.

As revealed before us 1st, 2nd and 5th - 12 counts were solicitation counts under sections 19 (b) and 19 (c) of the Act, and counts 13 and 14 were counts of acceptance under sections 19 (b) and 19 (c) of the Act against the 1st Accused-Appellant. Count 3 was a count of solicitation under section 19 (c), counts 15-22 were abetment counts corresponding to counts 5-12, and counts 23 and 24 were abetment counts corresponding to counts 13 and 14 against the 2nd Accused-Appellant.

The said 24 counts against the two Accused are set out as follows:

1. That on or about 11th August of 2016, at Colombo, within the jurisdiction of this court, the 1st accused, being a Public Servant, had solicited US$ 03 million as a gratification (Rs. 450 million) from Kotagaralahalli Pedappiah Nagarajah, as an inducement or a reward for his performing or abstaining from performing any official act, or expediting, delaying, hindering or preventing the performance of an official act namely to hand over a plot of land, buildings, and machinery for the functioning of the Sugar Factory in Kanthale without any obstacle, had thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 19(b) of Bribery Act No. 11 of 1954 as amended.

2. At the time, place, and in the course of the same transaction referred to in the 1st count, the 1st accused, being a Public Servant had solicited US$ 03 million (Rs. 450 million) as gratification from Kotagaralahalli Pedappiah Nagarajah, had thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 19(c) of the Bribery Act No.11 of 1954 as amended.

3. On or about 05th September of 2017, at the same place and in the course of the same transaction referred to in the 1st count, the 2nd accused, being a Public Servant, had solicited a sum of Rs.450 million as gratification from Kotagaralahalli Pedappiah Nagarajah, and thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 19(c) of Bribery Act No. 11 of 1954 as amended.

4. During the time period between 05th September 2017 and 03rd May 2018 at the same place and in the course of the same transaction referred to in the 1st count, the 1st and the 2nd accused, being Public Servants, had conspired to commit or abet or to act together with a common purpose or in committing or abetting, with or without any previous concert or deliberation, to solicit a sum of Rs. 100 million as a gratification from Kotagaralahalli Pedappiah Nagarajah and as a result of such conspiracy, had solicited a sum of Rs. 100 million as a gratification from Kotagaralahalli Pedappiah Nagarajah, and thereby committed an offence under Section 113(A) of the Penal Code, read with Section 25(3) and 19(C) of Bribery Act No. 11 of 1954 as amended.

5. On or about 27th February of 2018, at the same place and in the course of the same transaction referred to in the 4th count, the 1st accused, being a Public Servant, had solicited a sum of Rs. 100 million as a gratification from Kotagaralahalli Pedappiah Nagarajah, as an inducement or a reward, for his performing or abstaining from performing any official act, or expediting, delaying, hindering or preventing the performance of an official act that is, to facilitate the process of handing over the machinery of the Sugar Factory in Kanthale, and thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 19(b) of Bribery Act No.11 of 1954 as amended.

6. At the time, place, and in the course of the same transaction referred to in the 5th count, the 1st accused, being a Public Servant had solicited a sum of Rs.100 million as a gratification from Kotagaralahalli Pedappiah Nagarajah, and thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 19(c) of the Bribery Act No. 11 of 1954 as amended.

7. At the time, place, and in the course of the same transaction referred to in the 5th count, the 1st accused, being a Public Servant, had solicited a sum of Rs. 20 million as an advance of the gratification from Kotagaralahalli Pedappiah Nagarajah, as an inducement or a reward to expedite or to delay or to hinder performing an official act that is, to facilitate the process of handing over the machinery of the Sugar Factory in Kanthale, and thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 19(b) of Bribery Act No. 11 of 1954 as amended.

8. At the time, place, and in the course of the same transaction referred to in the 5th count, the 1st accused, being a Public Servant, had solicited a sum of Rs. 20 million as an advance of the gratification from Kotagaralahalli Pedappiah Nagarajah, had thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 19(c) of the Bribery Act No. 11 of 1954 as amended.

9. On or about 28th April 2018, at the same place and in the course of the same transaction referred to in the 1st count, the 1st accused, being a Public Servant, had solicited a sum of Rs. 20 million as an advance of the gratification from Kotagaralahalli Pedappiah Nagarajah, as an inducement or a reward to facilitate the process of handing over the machinery of the Sugar Factory in Kanthale, and thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 20 (b) read with Section 20 (a) of Bribery Act No.11 of 1954 as amended.

10. At the time, place, and in the course of the same transaction referred to in the 9th count, the 1st accused, being a Public Servant, had solicited a sum of Rs. 20 million as an advance of the gratification from Kotagaralahalli Pedappiah Nagarajah, and thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 19(c) of the Bribery Act No. 11 of 1954 as amended.

11. On or about 3rd May of 2018, at the same place and in the course of the same transaction referred to in the 1st count, the 1st accused, being a Public Servant, had solicited a sum of Rs. 20 million as an advance of the gratification from Kotagaralahalli Pedappiah Nagarajah, as an inducement or a reward to facilitate the process of handing over the machinery of the Sugar Factory in Kanthale, and thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 20(b) read with Section 20(a) of Bribery Act No. 11 of 1954 as amended.

12. At the time, place, and in the course of the same transaction referred to in the 11th count, the 1st accused, being a Public Servant, had solicited a sum of Rs. 20 million as an advance of the gratification from Kotagaralahalli Pedappiah Nagarajah, and thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 19(c) of the Bribery Act No. 11 of 1954 as amended.

13. On or about 3rd May of 2018, at the same place and in the course of the same transaction referred to in the 1st count, the 1st accused, being a Public Servant, had accepted a sum of Rs. 20 million as an advance of the gratification from Kotagaralahalli Pedappiah Nagarajah, as an inducement or a reward to facilitate the process of handing over the machinery of the Sugar Factory in Kanthale committed an offence punishable under Section 20(b) read with Section 20(a) of Bribery Act by No. 11 of 1954 as amended.

14. At the time, place, and in the course of the same transaction referred to in the 13th count, the 1st accused, being a Public Servant, had accepted a sum of Rs.20 million as an advance of the gratification from Kotagaralahalli Pedappiah Nagarajah, had thereby committed an offence punishable under Section 19(c) of the Bribery Act No.11 of 1954 as amended.

15. At the time, place, and in the course of the same transaction referred to in the 5th count, the 2nd accused had abetted the 1st accused to commit the offence described in the 5th count and as a result of such abatement the 1st accused had committed the said offence, and therefore the 2nd accused had committed an offence punishable under Section 25(2) read with Section 19(b) of Bribery Act No.11 of 1954 as amended.

16. At the time, place, and in the course of the same transaction referred to in the 6th count, the 2nd accused had abetted the 1st accused to commit the offence described in the 6th count and as a result of such abatement the 1st accused had committed the said offence, and therefore the 2nd accused had committed an offence punishable under Section 25(2) read with Section 19(c) of Bribery Act No.11 of 1954 as amended.

20. At the time, place, and in the course of the same transaction referred to in the 10th count, the 2nd accused had abetted the 1st accused to commit the offence described in the 10th count and as a result of such abatement the 1st accused had committed the said offence, therefore the 2nd accused had committed an offence punishable under Section 25(2) read with Section 19(c) of Bribery Act No.11 of 1954 as amended.

21. At the time, place, and in the course of the same transaction referred to in the 11th count, the 2nd accused had abetted the 1st accused to commit the offence described in the 11th count and as a result of such abatement the 1st accused had committed the said offence, and therefore the 2nd accused had committed an offence punishable under Section 25(2) read with Section 20(b) of Bribery Act No.11 of 1954 as amended.

22. At the time, place, and in the course of the same transaction referred to in the 12th count, the 2nd accused had abetted the 1st accused to commit the offence described in the 12th count and as a result of such abatement the 1st accused had committed the said offence, therefore the 2nd accused had committed an offence punishable under Section 25(2) read with Section 19(c) of Bribery Act No.11 of 1954 as amended.

23. At the time, place, and in the course of the same transaction referred to in the 13th count, the 2nd accused had abetted the 1st accused to commit the offence described in the 13th count and as a result of such abatement the 1st accused had committed the said offence, and therefore the 2nd accused had committed an offence punishable under Section 25(2) read with Section 20(b) of Bribery Act No.11 of 1954 as amended.

24. At the time, place, and in the course of the same transaction referred to in the 14th count, the 2nd accused had abetted the 1st accused to commit the offence described in the 14th count and as a result of such abatement the 1st accused had committed the said offence, and therefore the 2nd accused had committed an offence punishable under Section 25(2) read with Section 19(c) of Bribery Act No.11 of 1954 as amended.

Before the commencement of the trial before the High Court at Bar, two preliminary objections were raised with regard to the maintainability of the Indictment before the High Court at Bar, and subsequent to the ruling and/or decision by the High Court at Bar on those objections, the trial was commenced before the High Court at Bar.

During the trial before the High Court at Bar, the prosecution led the evidence of 22 witnesses including the evidence of K.P. Nagarajah the virtual complainant, ASP Ruwan Kumara the Chief Investigating Officer, and Sgt/ Karunarathne who acted as the decoy in the raid and closed the case for the prosecution marking as productions P-1 to P-116 A(a)-A(d) 1-5. The 1st Accused-Appellant made a dock statement and the 2nd Accused-Appellant gave evidence on oath and called one witness when the High Court at Bar called for their defence. At the conclusion of the trial before the High Court at Bar, the learned Judges of the High Court at Bar whilst acquitting the 2nd Accused-Appellant from count No. 3, convicted the 1st Accused-Appellant of all the charges against him, namely charges 1-2, 4, 5-14 and the 2nd Accused-Appellant of charges 4, and 15-24, and imposed sentences on them as follows;

Against the 1st Accused-Appellant;

Count 21 4 years Rigorous Imprisonment with a fine of Rs. 5000/-

Count 22 4 years Rigorous Imprisonment with a fine of Rs. 5000/-

Count 23 4 years Rigorous Imprisonment with a fine of Rs. 5000/-

Count 24 4 years Rigorous Imprisonment with a fine of Rs. 5000/-

Out of the sentences imposed on the 2nd Accused-Appellant the sentences imposed on counts 4, 15, and 19, were ordered to run consecutive to each other, and the sentences imposed on counts 16, 17 and 19 were ordered to run concurrent with the sentence imposed on count 15, and the sentences imposed on counts 20, 21, 22, 23 and 24 were ordered to run concurrent with the sentence imposed on count 19 of the indictment

The aggregate sentence imposed on the two Accused-Appellants are as follows:

Aggregate sentence imposed on the 1st Accused-Appellant,

20 years of Rigorous Imprisonment with a fine of Rs. 65000 and compensation of Rs. 20 million in terms of section 26 of the Bribery Act.

Aggregate sentence imposed on the 2nd Accused-Appellant

12 years Rigorous Imprisonment with a fine of Rs. 55000

Being aggrieved by the said conviction and the sentence imposed on them by the High Court at Bar, both Accused Appellants had preferred two appeals to the Supreme Court under and in terms of section 12 B of the Judicature Act (as amended) read with the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act No. 15 of 1979 (as amended) His Lordship the Chief Justice had nominated the present bench in terms of section 12B of the Judicature Act (as amended) to hear and determine the said appeals and the two Accused-Appellants appeared through their counsel in the hearing of their appeals before this Court.

As already referred to above, the two Accused-Appellants were indicted before the High Court at Bar under the provisions of the Bribery Act for the solicitation and acceptance of bribes. As at the time of the offence, the 1st Accused-Appellant was the Chief of Staff at the Presidential Secretariat and the 2nd Accused-Appellant was the Chairman of State Timber Corporation. The Complainant K.P. Nagarajah an Indian National was involved in Sugar Industry and acted as a representative/ shareholder to a foreign investor who was interested in purchasing the state-owned Kanthale Sugar Factory. The evidence led before the High Court at Bar revealed (which I will consider when analyzing the evidence) that the Complainant had observed an inordinate delay in implementing the unsolicited proposal to purchase the Kanthale Sugar Factory when the matter had been approved by the Cabinet of Ministers. 1st Accused-Appellant being the Secretary to the Ministry of Lands, during the period in question was handling this matter by himself and the complainant had taken up the position that the 1st Accused-Appellant had solicited a bribe of US $ 3 million. Since the Complainant was not happy with the progress made, he brought it to the notice of an official in the Prime Minister's Officer and the matter had referred to the CIABOC by an Additional Secretary to the Prime Minister's Officer. The Complainant Nagarajah had appeared before the Investigation Unit of CIABOC on a telephone message received by the said division.

During the same period virtual complainant had a few meetings with the two accused and it was the position of the witness that the accused had solicited a sum of Rs. 20 million as an advance in order to finalize matters pending at that time and a successful raid had been carried out on the 3rd May 2018 at Hotel Taj Samudra – Colombo when the 1st Accused-Appellant accepted a bribe of Rs. 20 million from the complainant and the 2nd Accused-Appellant too was arrested on charges of abetment.

The indictment that was served on the two Accused-Appellant contained out charges into a series of events that took place in the process of the solicitation and acceptance of the bribe including the original solicitation of US $ 3 million and the subsequent events that took place at the office of the 2nd Accused-Appellant and at Bread Talk restaurant and finally the acceptance that took place at Taj Samudra Hotel Colombo.

During the arguments before us, the two Accused-Appellants raised several grounds of appeal, and the grounds that were raised before us can be summarized as follows,

Was the investigation into the complaint received by the CIABOC against the Appellants, conducted by officers of the CIABOC in a lawful manner? (Was the investigation lawful?)

The Indictment was ex facia ultra vires the provisions of section 11 of the CIABOC ACT

Have the charges in the indictment (joinder of charges) been framed in a lawful manner? More particularly, is the amalgamation of charges 1 and 2 with the rest of the charges lawful, in that, has the prosecution established that the offences contained in charges 1 and 2 were committed in the course of the same transaction with the offences contained in the remaining charges?

Has the Prosecution proved "aliunde" that there were reasonable grounds to believe that two or more persons have conspired together to commit an offence? If not, was resorting to section 10 of the Evidence Ordinance lawful?

In considering the grounds that were raised on behalf of the Accused-Appellants before this Court, it is useful for this Court to first analyze the factual Matrix as revealed before Court during the arguments.

As already referred to above, the prosecution before the High Court at Bar, led the evidence of 22 witnesses including the evidence of witness Nagarajah, the virtual complainant in this case.

According to the testimony of witness Nagarajah, he has first come to Sri Lanka in 1994 seeking the prospects of investing in the apparel sector due to the GSP+ stimulus package that the Sri Lankan Government had been enjoying during that time. Thereafter, in 2011 he had decided to invest in the local sugar industry and had taken part in the international tender called for by the then Sri Lankan Government for Kanthale Sugar Factory. The tender process had been called off before its completion.

The second attempt of the witness to have the Kanthale Sugar Factory project comes to light in 2015, with the establishment of a new Government. According to the witness, he had submitted an unsolicited proposal to the then Minister in charge of Lands, under whose purview Kanthale Sugar Factory project had been listed. The proposal came through Sri Prabhulingeshvar Sugars and Chemicals Company, which has its origins in India and is one of the largest in the global sugar industry. The project proposal is not only for manufacturing sugar but also to produce ethanol, electricity, and organic fertilizer on larger scales as by-products while empowering the farming community with financial assistance and improving their welfare. The proposal suggested a joint venture company to manage Kanthale Sugar Factory of which 51% of shares are owned by the Sri Lankan Government and 49% by the Investor Company. The total investment was estimated to be a Hundred million USD based on Build Operate and Transfer (BOT) as opposed to Build Operate and Owned (BOO). A cabinet memorandum dated 14.02.2015 had been submitted for approval in this regard by the then Minister of Lands the late Mr. M.K.D.S. Gunawardena.

A cabinet subcommittee comprised of three Cabinet Ministers who were appointed to evaluate the said proposal and to report back to the Cabinet of Ministers (P20). The said Cabinet Sub-Committee had referred the project proposal to the Board of Investment of Sri Lanka (hereinafter referred to as BOI) to evaluate the feasibility of the project. During this time, the BOI had been in receipt of another project proposal in respect of the same project from a company called Jupiter Sugars (PVT) Ltd., also from India. (P23)

Having considered the capability, capacity, and experience in the related area, the Cabinet of Ministers on 25.06.2015 approved the proposal submitted by the witness with the concurrence of the BOI. (P24), (P25), (P26)

Witness Nagarajah, on behalf of the Investor Company (at that point of time) MG Sugars Lanka (PVT) Ltd, had entered into an Agreement with BOI on 27th July 2015 as an initial step to commence with the Kanthale Sugar Factory project (P5).

The drafting and preparation of the Shareholders Agreement which was the next stage of this project had prolonged for 13 months. For the project to be carried out in Sri Lanka, a Sri Lankan Company named M.G. Sugars Private Limited was incorporated as a "Special purpose vehicle to undertake the business of revival/ restructuring of the sugar industry in Kanthale through the formation and set up a new sugar factory and associated enterprises and the involvement of the local farming community" The Sri Lankan Government was given shares in the aforesaid Sri Lankan Company as it was a party to this project in terms of the proposals. Further, the investment was channeled via a Company incorporated in Singapore named S.L.I. Development Private Limited which comprised Sri Prabhulingeshvar Sugars and Chemical Industries Ltd, Mendel Gluck, Nagarajah, and Moussa Salem (P6). It was later observed that the said S.L.I. Development Private Limited had also been brought into the Shareholders Agreement. As the initial proposal approved by the Cabinet of Ministers was for the project proposal by Sri Prabhu Lingeshwar Sugar and Chemical Company, it was decided to obtain the approval of the Cabinet of Ministers before signing the agreement by the Government of Sri Lanka and S.L.I. Development Private Limited. The Cabinet of Ministers granted the approval on 14th June 2016 and the Shareholders Agreement was signed on 11th November 2016.

After signing the Shareholders Agreement, in terms of Art. 7.9 of the said Agreement, the Government of Sri Lanka, which held 51% of the shares of MG Sugars Lanka (PVT) Ltd., was supposed to release the agreed existing infrastructure, machinery, and buildings of the existing Kanthale Sugar Factory along with surrounding 500 acres of land to the said MG Sugars Lanka (PVT) Ltd. in order to commence its operations. (P6C)

Witness Nagarajah claimed that a few days after the Shareholders Agreement was signed (11.08.2016), he had a meeting with the first Accused-Appellant in the capacity of the Secretary to the Ministry of Lands, under which the subject of the Kanthale Sugar Factory had been listed. It is at this meeting, according to the witness, the first Accused-Appellant solicited Three Million USD from him in order to facilitate the execution of the proposed project. The witness had neither refused, nor agreed to the said solicitation knowing the fact that the first Accused-Appellant, being the Secretary of the Ministry in charge of the Project can easily scuttle the whole process.

The witness had observed that even after several months of signing the Shareholders Agreement, the first Accused-Appellant failed to comply with the agreed requirements of the said Agreement, and that had gone to the extent of refraining from appointing his nominee.

A letter dated 25.10.2016 from the then Chairman of BOI to the first Accused-Appellant had solicited his assistance “to expedite the process to initially divest relevant lands for factory, nursery and staff residences as provided for in Article 7.1.1(a), 7.1.1 (b) and 7.1.1 (d) of the Shareholders Agreement to the said enterprise to facilitate preparation work of the project” to be implemented within the given timeline enabling “the investor to proceed with preliminary work on land clearance and clearance of old buildings as the implementation of the Agreement is time bound with the bank guarantee”

It is at that point the first Accused-Appellant wrote a letter dated 2.11.2016 addressed to the Secretary of the Ministry of Finance, with a copy to the Chairman of BOI seeking advice on the following matters in order to proceed with the Joint Venture

i. The conditions to be adopted on releasing lands as Article 09 of the Shareholders Agreement affirms that the Government has the authority of 51% of shares of the company.

ii. As part of the revival process, of the Kanthale Sugar Factory, the Ministry of Lands already obtained a sealed valuation from the Government Valuer for machinery and other available resources within the factory premise.

iii. As such, the procedures to be adopted on implementation of Article 7.9 of the Shareholders Agreement

It is in this process that the witness wrote a letter dated 5.12.2016 to the Secretary to the Treasury, with a copy to the first Accused-Appellant, requesting to make necessary arrangements for the leasing of land as per the Agreement in order to commence activities immediately, since 4 months have already passed after the signing of the Shareholders Agreements. (P67)

In the meantime, the Secretary to the then Prime minister, on behalf of the Cabinet Committee on Economic Management (hereinafter referred to as CCEM) had written to the first Accused-Appellant that "The Ministry of Lands has not yet handed over the Land of Kanthale Sugar Plant to the New Investor. The CCEM instructions were given to the Secretary, Ministry of Lands to hand over the land and report back at the Next CCEM Meeting." (P68).

The first Accused-Appellant had then written to the Hon Attorney General on 16/1/2017 with a copy of the Shareholders Agreement attached thereto, soliciting assistance to sort out two matters to proceed with the implementation of the said Agreement. (P70)

i. There is an issue in deciding the consideration of a Lease Agreement for the State Lands to be given to the company since the said Lands are to be given in lieu of the 51% shares of the Government.

ii. Even though the Shareholders Agreement affirms the investor to take possession of land, premises, infrastructure, and machinery, no instructions were given on transferring these resources, approximately valued at Rs.300Mn by the chief valuer.

Several letters had been exchanged thereafter between MG Sugar, CCEM, and the 1st Accused-Appellant about the lease of land as per the agreements already signed but once again the 1st Accused-Appellant wrote to the Hon. Attorney General on 16.03.2017 soliciting advice on:

i. the conditions to be adopted in releasing lands to the investor; and

ii. the procedures to be adopted in disposing the existing infrastructure, machinery, and other movable properties when implementing the Shareholders Agreement. (P76)

However, in a letter dated 20/3/2017 by the Hon. Attorney General to the 1st Accused-Appellant, in reply to P76, observed "……. that although the BOI Agreement was signed on 27/5/2015 and the Shareholders Agreement was executed on 11/8/2016, the said project has not commenced yet and there was inordinate delay". Accordingly, the first Appellant was advised by the Hon. Attorney General: (P77)

i. As regards the releasing of lands to the investor, the modalities are expressly provided in Article 7.1.1. of the Shareholders Agreement. There are no extraneous conditions to be complied with when releasing the said land, and it is incumbent upon the signatories to the said Agreement to strictly abide by the provisions of the said Article. In view of the concerns expressed at the CCEM about the long delay, this process should be completed expeditiously as possible.

ii. Regarding the disposal of existing infrastructure, machinery, and other movable properties, the open tender procedure should be followed within a stipulated time frame.

On or about 18th May 2017, the 1st Accused Appellant met the virtual complainant at the Royal Boat Restaurant in Wattala for a meeting over dinner (the 1st Accused Appellant denied such meeting). The 1st Accused-Appellant had then informed the virtual complainant that if he does not pay the solicited gratification, he would take steps to call for tenders to dispose of the existing machinery.

When the New paper advertisements were published inviting bids to demolish the buildings and sell the equipment as per the instructions of the Hon. Attorney General, the Legal consultants of MG Sugars (Pvt) Ltd wrote to the 1st Accused-Appellant that they have been instructed by their client to institute legal action against the 1st Accused-Appellant if the said invitation for bids is not publicly revoked with immediate effect. The said decision to sell the equipment was the subject matter in an arbitration proceeding commenced in Singapore by MG Sugars (Pvt) Ltd thereafter.

In reply to another letter sent by the 1st Accused-Appellant on 04.08.2017, Hon. Attorney General had observed the following (P83)

> "Upon consideration of the available documentation, it is quite clear that the Ministry of Lands and the BOI have not shared a common understanding or > Agreement pertaining to a revival/restructuring of Kanthale Sugar Factory. As a result, there has been a plethora of letters forwarded to this Department seeking legal clarification on specific matters which are particularly relied upon or perceived by the respective institutions. This has led to five (05) opinions tendered by this Department."

Whilst the exchange of letters, discussions, and consultations take place amongst the stakeholders to the Shareholders Agreement from 11/8/2016 up until P83 was issued by the Hon. Attorney General on 17/8/2017, witness Nagarajah says that he received a call on 05.09.2017 from the second Accused-Appellant, who was known to him previously, requesting him to come to Waters Edge Hotel at Battaramulla in the evening of the same day. Witness had gone to Waters Edge Hotel as agreed upon and during the conversation, the second Accused-Appellant had told the witness that the first Accused-Appellant is disappointed over the recent developments pertaining to the Kanthale Sugar Factory project, especially the adverse media publicity against him.

Witness had not specified whether he wished to pay the solicited amount of bribe indicated by the second Accused Appellant but has indicated that he will have to discuss this issue with the other directors of the company.

It was also claimed by the witness that he recorded this conversation with the second Accused-Appellant by using his mobile phone.

In the meantime, MG Sugars Lanka (PVT) Ltd., through its Attorneys, informed the first Accused-Appellant on 6/10/2017 as follows:

> "……Due to the failure and/or neglect of the Government of Sri Lanka to resolve the matter amicably, and despite the numerous bonafide efforts made by our client in this, the same was referred to the Singapore International Arbitration Centre (CIAC)
>
> As such, an Emergency Interim Relief Agreement (EIRA) was made in terms of Rule 30.2 and Schedule 1 of the CIAC Rules.
>
> Pursuant to the aforementioned application, a hearing was held via telephonic conference on the 29th of September 2017 at 11 a.m. Sri Lanka time. Subsequently, an award of Emergency Interim Relief was delivered in favour of our client……..
> Therefore, you are now compelled to maintain the status quo and are restrained from carrying out any demolition and/or removal exercise of any infrastructure, machinery, buildings and/or implements situated within the said lands." (P84)

Witness Nagarajah had testified before the High Court at Bar that he provided a Bank Guarantee of USD 10Mn in favour of the Government of Sri Lanka for several years by that time and has spent around USD 12Mn as consultancy fees and other expenditures in relation to the project. Considering the arbitration process, the Cabinet Sub Committee decision, and the huge amount that he had to spend during this time, he claims that he was frustrated and left with no option but to complain to the political hierarchy about what was going on in respect of the Kanthale Sugar Factory project.

It is against this backdrop that witness Nagarajah, had made a written complaint dated 7/2/2018 to the then Prime Minister. The witness was given an audience by a senior official of the Prime Minister's office on 9/2/2018 who had advised him that he should raise this issue with CIABOC if he claims that a bribe has been solicited by a Government Official.

ASP/Ruwan Kumara, PW 2, the then Deputy Director (Investigations) of CIABOC confirmed that he was advised by his Immediate Senior Officer, Director (Investigations) on 9/2/2018, that an Indian National is expecting to lodge a complaint with CIABOC and to take further steps in that regard. The mobile telephone number of the said Indian National had also been provided. Several attempts by ASP/Ruwan Kumara to contact the said complainant had not been successful, but he had returned a call to PW 2 on the same day. Thereafter Kotagarahalli Peddapaiya Nagarajah the said Indian National had gone to meet ASP/Ruwan Kumara, at his office at CIABOC around 3.30 p.m. on 9/2/2018 itself.

After listening to the narration of witness Nagarajah, PW 2 informed him that a written complaint should be submitted in order to commence the investigations over the allegations levelled.

In compliance with the directive of PW 2, the witness had handed over a written complaint to the CIABOC on 15/2/2018. Subsequently, witness Nagarajah's complaint had been reduced into writing on 22/2/2018 by IP/ Tennakoon (PW 5) of CIABOC.

After making the statement to CIABOC on 22.02.2018, the witness met the second Accused-Appellant at his office at Timber Corporation on 23/2/2018. During this meeting, the witness conveyed the message to the second Accused-Appellant, that he wants to proceed ahead with the Kanthale Sugar Factory project and therefore willing to pay a "bribe" as per the request of the first Accused-Appellant. It was the suggestion of the second Accused-Appellant at this meeting that the witness must pay Rs. 350Mn for the scrap metal in the factory premises and pay Rs. 100Mn to the first Accused-Appellant in addition. At the end of this meeting, it was agreed to have a further discussion with the first Appellant to iron out the issues that existed over the implementation of the Shareholders Agreement. According to the witness, this conversation had been recorded with the use of his mobile phone.

The witness had met with the first and the second Accused Appellants once again at the office of the second Accused-Appellant at the Timber Corporation on 27/2/2018. According to the witness, the reactions of the first Accused-Appellant towards him at the very beginning was very rude. The first Accused-Appellant, according to the witness, had gone to the extent of saying that he will never trust the witness and does not know whether he is using any recording device even at that point.

The second Accused-Appellant had intervened at this point in time to mediate on the situation and the 1st Accused-Appellant had agreed to talk to the witness about the project. It was suggested by the first Accused-Appellant that the witness should in writing express his willingness to purchase the scrap metal as estimated and a bribe of Rs. 100Mn, out of which Rs. 20Mn is to be paid as an advance with immediate effect.

Witness has testified, before the High Court at Bar, that he tried to negotiate to bring down the bribe to Rs. 10Mn but failed. He says that the first Accused-Appellant was very specific that he would not allow the project to proceed as long as he occupies the office of the Secretary if the demanded amount of Rs. 100Mn is not paid. It was also stated by the witness that the second Accused-Appellant had actively participated throughout this discussion. This conversation on 27/2/2018 had also been recorded by the witness. After the said meeting the witness had to go to India for a short stay.

It was asserted by the witness that he contacted the second Accused-Appellant whilst he was in India and tried to negotiate the amount of bribe but the request was turned down by him saying that the first Accused-Appellant would not agree to such a move.

Upon arrival on 05.03.2018, the witness had met the 2nd Accused-Appellant on two occasions, once at Waters Edge and the other at the 2nd Accused-Appellant's office. Even though the witness had expected to arrange the transaction in early march, that did not materialize due to the retirement of the 1st Accused-Appellant as Secretary Ministry of Lands and his assumption of duties as the Chief of Staff to His Excellency the President.

However, witness Nagarajah had met the two Accused-Appellants at the Bread Talk Restaurant on 28/04/2018 around 11.30 a.m. after the 1st Accused-Appellant assumed duties as the Chief of staff to His Excellency the President. According to the witness, this meeting was arranged as promised by the 2nd Accused-Appellant. It is during this meeting the 1st Accused-Appellant had given his new visiting card (P10) as the chief of staff to His Excellency the President. Witness had stated that, upon his agreement to pay the demanded gratification of Rs. 100 million and to pay Rs. 20 million in advance, the 1st Accused-Appellant agreed to provide his assistance to ensure the continuance of the proposed Kanthale Sugar Factory project. Further, according to the witness he had requested three days to organize things in order to meet the said advance of Rs. 20 million.

Two days after the above meeting, on 30/04/2018, the witness conveyed the message to the 2nd Accused-Appellant that he is ready with the agreed advance money of Rs. 20 million by the 02nd or 3rd of May. By this time the witness had close contact with the officers of the CIABOC and he had even provided a traveling bag to the investigators to bring the money. Sgt/ Karunarathne an officer from CIABOC was entrusted as the decoy and this officer was present at Bread Talk when the witness met the two Accused-Appellants on 28.04.2018. On the instructions of the investigators, it was decided to conduct the raid at the Residence of witness Nagarajah and to introduce the decoy as a domestic helper to the two Accused-Appellants when they visit his residence to accept the bribe.

On the 3rd around 10 o'clock witness received a call from the 2nd Accused-Appellant, that they should be able to meet him after 2 p.m. at Hotel Taj Samudra. Once again, the 2nd Accused-Appellant had called the witness around 11 o'clock and told that both should be able to meet him around 3.20 p.m. at Hotel Taj Samudra.

According to witness Nagarajah, he immediately contacted the officers from CIABOC and informed them of the change of venue and on the instructions, he received from the investigators, left for Hotel Taj Samudra accompanied by Sgt/ Karunarathne in his car driven by his Driver.

Whilst the witness had been waiting at the coffee shop in the lobby of Hotel Taj Samudra, it was the 2nd Accused-Appellant who joined him first. A few minutes later, the 1st Accused-Appellant had also come to the same place and had a conversation for about 50 minutes and had some beverages as well. According to him, the 1st Accused-Appellant had questioned about the money and it was informed to him that it is ready but kept with the personal assistant who is in the car at the car park. It was further told by the witness that the 1st Accused-Appellant wanted "another bag" and that was supplied with the assistance of a waiter at the coffee shop. Upon settling the bill, (P16) all three proceeded towards the car park through the rear passage of the Hotel. When they reached the driveway, the witness waved at his driver with the use of the bag collected from the coffee shop (P17) signaling him to come towards them. Sgt. Karunaratne having seen this signal got off from the car and walked towards the witness and the two Accused-Appellants carrying, the red colour traveling bag which contained Rs. 20 million cash. By the time Sgt/Karunaratne reached the trio, the car also reached closer to them.

According to the virtual complainant, when he asked the 1st Accused-Appellant whether he can hand over the bag, he was told by the 1st Accused-Appellant that he wants to check the money and give the 2nd Accused-Appellant's portion. Thereafter the 1st Accused-Appellant got into the rear seat of the car from the driver's side.

The Prosecution claims that P12 was then handed over to the 1st Appellant who was seated in the back seat and told: "Doctor I did my part and I need your help to continue with the Kanthale Project". Since the 1st Accused-Appellant was struggling to open the bag, the witness had requested Sgt/ Karunarthne to assist the 1st Accused-Appellant to get it open. The decoy, Sgt/ Karunarathne had helped the 1st Accused-Appellant to check the cash bundles and thereafter put three bundles out of four, into the bag that was obtained from the coffee shop, by Sgt/ Karaunarathne on the request of the 1st Accused-Appellant. This paper bag which was produced marked P-17 was with the witness until the 1st Accused-Appellant wanted that bag to be given to Sgt/ Karunarathne to put the 3 cash bundles into the bag. The 2nd Accused-Appellant had been standing at the front passenger seat door during this time.

Witness saw the officers from the CIABOC approaching his car and arresting the two Accused-Appellants, whilst the money that was given to the 1st Accused-Appellant was in his custody.

According to witness Nagarajah, he made a statement to CIABOC on the following day regarding the raid which took place at Hotel Taj Samudra. The investigators had requested him to hand over the two mobile phones that he used to record the conversations with the 1st and 2nd Accused-Appellants, but he has declined to adhere to the said request on the basis that his personal mobile phone contained a lot of financial, personal and health details of him and his family.

The prosecution had relied on the evidence of several officers from CIABOC in establishing the case against the two Accused before the High Court at Bar and Sgt/ Karunarathne who acted as the decoy is one of the main witnesses the prosecution had relied upon.

According to the evidence of Sgt/ Karunarathne, he witnessed the meeting between Nagarajah and the two Accused-Appellants which took place at the Bread Talk Restaurant on 28.04.2018. Thereafter he was instructed to act as a domestic helper at the house of witness Nagarajah when it was arranged to hand over the bribe money to the Accused-Appellants. The said plan was suddenly changed and the witness was instructed to go to Hotel Taj Samudra with the bag containing Rs. 2000000/-. He went to Hotel Taj Samudra accompanied by witness Nagarajah in the car belonging to the witness Nagarajah driven by Nagarajah's driver. He was instructed to be in the car park and to meet witness Nagarajah with the bag containing the money when the message was sent by witness Nagarajah who went inside the Hotel. According to the witness, both the witness and the Complainant Nagarajah were searched by CI/ Pushpakumara before they left the house of the complainant at Rosemond Place. After some time, the driver informed him that witness Nagarajah wanted him to come with the money. At that time, he saw Nagarajah coming towards the car park with two others and waving at them. He immediately got down from the car with the Red colour bag and walked towards them. The car too was moved towards them and stopped Infront of them. At that time, he heard the witness asking the others, whether he could give the money and the 1st Accused-Appellant saying that he wanted to get inside the car and check the money.

When the 1st Accused-Appellant got into the rear seat of the car, Nagarajah had given him the bag and the 1st Accused-Appellant tried to open the bag. At that stage he heard Complainant Nagarajah telling the 1st Accused-Appellant, "Dr. I have done my part, I wanted you to help me to start the sugar project" On the request of Nagarajah, the witness helped 1st Accused-Appellant to open the bag and on the request of the 1st Accused-Appellant witness put 3 bundles of money (out of four) into a bag which was given to him by Complainant Nagarajah (P-17)

After placing three bundles of cash in P17 upon the request of the 1st Accused-Appellant, Sgt/ Karunarathne signaled SI/ Weerathunge (PW06), who was close by, indicating the completion of the transaction.

With the said signal of Sgt/ Karunarathne, all the key members of the investigating team, CI/ Pushpakumara (PW03), IP/ Tennakoon (PW05), and SI/ Weerathunga (PW06), who were approaching the car, had rushed there. Witness then informed the Chief Investigating Officer and others that the person who is in the back seat is the 1st Accused-Appellant and the person who is standing near the front passenger seat is the 2nd Accused-Appellant. He had confirmed the completion of the transaction between the virtual complainant and the 1st Accused-Appellant. It is CI/ Pushpakumara's evidence that the 2nd Accused-Appellant at this point asked whether they are police Officers and the 1st Accused-Appellant had told he is the Chief of Staff to His Excellency the President. CI/ Pushpakumara, has informed him that he is aware of that and requested the 1st Accused Appellant to allow him to continue his duties.

Regarding the investigation carried out by the officers of CIABOC, witness Thushara Ruwan Kumara Superintendent of Police and IP Janaka Pushpakumara gave evidence before the High Court at Bar and witness Anura Tennakoon, Inspector of Police, S.K. Weerathunga, Sub-Inspector of Police and IP/ Janaka Pushpakumara gave evidence about the raid conducted on 03.05.2013 at Hotel Taj Samudra.

As revealed from the evidence of the said witnesses, upon his return from India on 05.03.2018, the Virtual Complainant Nagarajah informed the investigators that there is a great possibility for the transaction to take place either on 8th or 9th March 2018.

Thereafter ASP/ Ruwan Kumara (PW 2) assigned the investigation to a team led by Chief Inspector Pushpakumara (PW 3). CI/ Pushpakumara had been instructed by ASP/ Ruwan Kumara to obtain Rs. 30Mn cash from the Central Bank with the assistance of the Accounts Division. ASP/Ruwan Kumara has stated in his evidence that he decided to obtain Rs. 30Mn, instead of the required amount of Rs. 20Mn simply to avoid any suspicion, had the request of CIABOC being leaked to the suspects.

The investigators had initially suspected that the transaction might take place at the office of the second Accused-Appellant in the Timber Corporation. They had in fact visited the said compound in order to get ready for the raid, in case it takes place in that compound. At the same time, the Investigating Officers had come to the residence of the virtual complainant at Rosemond Place and had been of the view that it is a better location to have the raid conducted, having been compared to the surroundings of the Timber Corporation.

The case for the Prosecution is that, even though the Investigators were ready to conduct the raid on 8th or 9th March 2018, it did not materialize due to Mr. Nagarajah being informed by the second Accused-Appellant that the first Accused-Appellant is to retire as Secretary, Ministry of Lands and to assume duties as the Chief of Staff to His Excellency the President. However, after the meeting with the two Accused-Appellants and the Complainant at Bread Talk Restaurant on 28.04.2018, Complainant Nagarajah informed the Investigators that the transaction might take place within two-three days.

The Investigating team comprised CI/Pushpakumara (PW03), IP/Tennakoon (PW05), SI/ Weerathunga (PW06), and Sgt/Karunaratne (PW07) had visited the residence of Nagarajah on 02/05/2018 and decided at that point that it would be practically convenient for them to conduct the raid if it takes place at his residence.

It was decided at this meeting to have Sgt/ Karunarathne as the decoy when the raid is conducted. The team of investigators had once again visited the residence on 03/05/2018, the following day, to conduct the raid according to the instructions and directions that they are going to receive from the 2nd Accused-Appellant simply because the via media between Complainant and the 1st Accused-Appellant was the 2nd Accused-Appellant. It was at this visit only CI/ Pushpakumara had brought Rs.

20 million out of the money obtained by the CIABOC in March in anticipation of this raid, to the residence of witness Nagarajah and showed the same to him, four bundles of Rs. 5000 notes (P14-a, b, c, d), a total sum of Rs. 20million.

It is also claimed both by the virtual complainant and the investigating officers that the virtual complainant was adequately cautioned that he should not at any point give the money to the suspects forcefully and must give it to the hand of the suspect only if he shows a willingness to accept the money, whilst stressing that the money is being given to him in order to facilitate the Kanthale Sugar Factory project. The decoy Sgt/ Karunarathne too was present when the said instructions were given to the Complainant.

On 03rd May a red colour traveling bag (P 12) had been obtained by the investigators from the Virtual Complainant in order to put the said four bundles of money. Before the bundles of money had been kept inside P 12, they were wrapped using a few pages of an English newspaper (P 13). The cash certificate in respect of the said amount of money had been submitted by the CIABOC at the time suspects were produced before the Magistrate upon arrest (P 15).

Once the venue had been informed by the 2nd Accused-Appellant, CI/ Pushpakumara had decided to send the supporting teams along with IP/Tennakoon (PW 05), SI/ Weerathunga and WSI/Weerasinghe to Hotel Taj Samudra for reconnaissance/or to gather useful information in the ground level to conduct the raid.

Upon receiving the 2nd call specifying the time and confirming the venue, the Investigators who remained at the Complainant's residence had advised him to leave for Hotel Taj Samudra and the Complainant had left for the Hotel, accompanied by Sgt/Karunarathne (PW 07) in his Chauffer driven car.

Complainant Nagarajah had once again been strictly advised not to coerce or not to forcefully get the money accepted. The presence of the decoy at the time of the transaction had also been stressed upon. The decoy and the complainant were both searched by CI/ Pushpakumara and got himself satisfied that there is nothing illegal in their possession.

CI/ Pushkumara had left Nagarajah's residence at the same time in his official car to Hotel Taj Samudra.

According to the evidence of CI/ Pushpakumara when he went to Hotel Taj Samudra, the other CIABOC officer including IP/ Tennakoon, SI/ Weerathunge and WSI/ Weerasinghe had already arrived at the Hotel. He had seen the car belonging to the Complaint parked at the car park and he too has stayed in the car park area. After some time, he saw the Complainant coming towards the car park with two other persons and Sgt/ Karunarathne going towards them with the Red Bag. The car belonging to the Complainant had moved towards them. When he saw PS Karunarathne's signal, he rushed towards the car.

At that time CI/Pushpakumara had witnessed the red colour traveling bag (P12) on the back seat beside 1st Accused-Appellant, CI/ Pushpakumara had further noticed that the three sealed bundles of cash were inside the Taj Samudra paper bag, (P17) and the unsealed bundle of cash was inside the red colour traveling bag (P12). Thereafter CI/ Pushpakumara put three sealed bundles of cash and the Taj Samudra paper bag inside the red colour traveling bag and handed over the same to SI/Weerathunga (PW06).

The 1st Accused-Appellant had been arrested around 4.35 p.m. followed by the arrest of the 2nd Accused-Appellant and both were taken to CIABOC to record their statements.

During the investigation at Hotel Taj Samudra, it has also been revealed that the Toyota Allion car bearing number KF- 9502, which belongs to the presidential secretariat, which was used by the 1st Accused-Appellant on 03.05.2018 to come to Hotel Samudra had been parked at the car park in anticipation of the return of the 1st Accused-Appellant. PW 10, Pinsiri Dharmapriya Peiris, the driver of the said vehicle had been arrested soon after the arrest of the two Accused-Appellants whilst waiting at the hotel car park, but released soon afterward his statement was recorded. Peiris has testified before the High Court at Bar to the effect that he was advised by the 1st Accused-Appellant to wait at the car park of the hotel until his return.

In addition to the evidence of the virtual Complainant and the Police Witnesses, the evidence of the Government Analyst played an important role in the prosecution evidence before the High Court at Bar. The prosecution had placed a lot of reliance on the telephone conversations between the virtual Complainant and the Accused-Appellants. As already referred to above in this Judgment, the virtual Complainant in his evidence before the High Court at Bar referred to several instances where he has recorded the conversation he had with the two Accused-Appellants. In the said circumstances voice identification of the two Accused-Appellants and the recorded conversations between the virtual Complainant and the Accused-Appellants had a key role to play at the trial before the High Court at Bar, and in this regard, the prosecution heavily relied on the evidence of Ms. Dulani Lalithya Gunathilake, an Assistant Examiner of Questioned Documents attached to the Government Analyst Department (PW41)

Witness Gunathilake had been called by the prosecution in order to testify about 18 voice samples she had extracted from two telephones belonging to the virtual Complainant that was handed over to her on 17.05.2018. The two Accused-Appellants had been produced before the witness to obtain voice samples on 29.06.2018 by an order of the Chief Magistrate.

The two Accused-Appellants raised several objections regarding the admissibility of the said evidence during the trial before the High Court at Bar, and several legal issues were raised before us during their submissions. We will be separately analyzing the questions of law raised on behalf of the two Accused-Appellants and will be considering the evidence of witness Gunathilake when analyzing the above.

The contemporaneous recordings of CCTV footage at Bread Talk Restaurant and Hotel Taj Samudra were also another piece of evidence relied upon by the prosecution. The above footages were played before this Court as well as before the High Court at Bar by the prosecution.

Apart from the evidence of the above witnesses, the prosecution had relied on the evidence of a few formal witnesses in order to establish some legal requirements and their evidence was neither challenged nor discussed on behalf of the two Accused-Appellants before this Court. At the conclusion of the trial before the High Court at Bar, Court having considered the material placed before it had called upon the two Accused-Appellants to place their defence before Court.

The 1st Accused-Appellant had made a statement from the dock and the 2nd Accused-Appellant opted to give evidence from the witness box. Witness Neelakandan was called as a witness on behalf of the second Accused Appellant. In his dock statement, the 1st Accused-Appellant admitted that he was appointed the secretary to the Ministry of Lands in 2015 and continued to hold the office until 10.03.2018, since his retirement from the public service. He had then been appointed as the Chief of Staff to His Excellency the President with effect from 22.03.2018, though the letter of appointment received by him on 05.04.2018.

According to the 1st Accused-Appellant he had been in the public service for over 30 years at the time he was arrested in relation to this incident. He vehemently denied the allegation levelled against him and went on to say that he follows a very simple lifestyle that was never tainted with bribes or any improper/ immoral conduct. He claimed that he was trapped by the complainant and that the CIABOC offices may have simply resorted to their ordinary duties.

Nevertheless, the 1st Accused-Appellant admitted that he met the complainant somewhere in August 2016, soon after the Shareholders' Agreement was signed on 11.08.2016, at his office, on 27.02.2018 at the office of the 2nd Accused-Appellant in Timber Cooperation, on 28.04.2018 at Bread Talk Restaurant and on 03.05.2018 at hotel Taj Samudra. He also admitted that the 2nd Accused-Appellant accompanied him during the last 3 meetings above mentioned, at Timber Cooperation, at Bread Talk Restaurant, and at hotel Taj Samudra.

The concern of the 1st Accused-Appellant regarding the project in issue seems to be his observation on the Complainant/ Investor that he is more interested in the scrap metal available in the compound of the factory than in commencing the substantive Sugar Cane project. The 1st Accused-Appellant has stated that he, during the meeting on 27.02.2018, advised the Complainant that he could pay Rs.350 million for the value of the infrastructure available in the premises and commence the Sugar Cane project.

The 1st Accused-Appellant admits the pending Arbitration process in Singapore and submitted to the court that he was supposed to be a witness on behalf of the Sri Lankan Government and the Attorney General's Department was getting ready by preparing his affidavit before he testified. The 1st Accused-Appellant had not been able to testify as scheduled due to the arrest of this case and he has revealed that the Sri Lankan Government had lost the said arbitration in November 2018.

Whilst claiming that the Complainant developed a rift with him during this period of the delays in implementing the Kanthale Sugar project, the 1st Accused-Appellant admits that he took part in the discussions and the meetings with the complainant because of the request by the 2nd Accused-Appellant, who is a long-standing friend of him.

Explaining the events which took place on 03.05.2018, the 1st Accused-Appellant says that he was thinking of getting a lift from the complainant to the Ministry of Postal Services, where his wife was the secretary, got into the complainant's car to the right-hand rear seat. He had then been thinking, according to the 1st Accused-Appellant, to call his driver who was waiting for him at the hotel car park, to go back to the office, but suddenly a few people claimed to be police officers from CIABOC, had approached him and arrested then and there.

He claims that he in fact was a victim of a very well-articulated and executed conspiracy to trap him due to the role he played as the secretary to the Ministry of Lands. He further claims that the voice recordings produced in court are fabricated.

As referred to above the 2nd Accused-Appellant had opted to give evidence from the witness box and he had been subjected to cross-examined by the prosecution.

The career of the 2nd Accused-Appellant in the public sector runs from 1978 to 2015. He himself had been the Chief of Staff to a former president when such a position was created for the first time.

Upon his retirement, in 2015, he had been appointed the Chairman of the State Timber Cooperation, which also falls within the ambit of a "public officer" in terms of the bribery act. He had been holding the said office until he was arrested on 03.05.2018 in relation to this matter. The 2nd Accused-Appellant claimed that he met the complainant at a public function well before the meeting at Waters Edge Restaurant on 09.05.2017. Whilst admitting the first meeting reflected in the indictment, at Waters Edge Restaurant on 09.05.2017, the 2nd Accused Appellant admits the next four meetings he was alleged to have taken part, on 23.02.2018 and 27.02.2018 at his office, 28.04.2018 at Bread Talk Restaurant and finally on 03.05.2018 at hotel Taj Samudra.

The assertion of the virtual Complainant that the first Accused-Appellant blamed him for trying to trap him is corroborated by the 2nd Accused-Appellant to a greater extent. He claims that after the initial exchange of words commenced by the 1st Accused Appellant, both of them had ironed out their differences and agreed to work together.

The 2nd Accused-Appellant speaks of a herbal toothpaste, requested to be brought from India when the complainant goes there. And also, he had stated that the complainant had indicated to him that he has brought a bottle of Brandy when returning from overseas and one of the expectations of the 2nd Accused-Appellant during the meeting at Bread Talk was to obtain the said two items. Apparently, he admits that he was given the said herbal toothpaste by the complainant when they met at the Bread Talk Restaurant, but not the bottle of Brandy.

Explaining the reasons for his presence at hotel Taj Samudra on 03.05.2018, the 2nd Accused-Appellant says that he had to participate in a meeting in the India-Sri Lanka summit in the same evening at the same venue and therefore he thought of accommodating the repeated requests of the Complainant to have a meeting with the presence of the 1st Accused-Appellant.

It is the version of the 2nd Accused-Appellant that after the three of them met at the lobby of Hotel Taj Samudra for a discussion for about 20 minutes, the virtual Complainant had informed them that the two bottles of Brandy brought for them are in the car. According to the 1st Accused Appellant, the reason for him and the 1st Accused-Appellant to proceed towards the car park of the hotel was to get the said bottles. He confirmed the virtual Complainant getting a bag from the waiter of the hotel restaurant and says that he thought it was meant for the bottles the virtual Complainant was to give them.

The 2nd Accused-Appellant confirmed that the car of the virtual Complainant approached three of them when they proceeded towards the car park and a person with a pink colored t-shirt put a red colored bag on the rear seat of the car after opening the back door. He has testified that either time he realized that the said red bag did not contain the anticipated bottles of Brandy, the 1st Accused-Appellant had already got into the back seat of the car from the driver's side. He admits that he too had been leaning onto the car when the investigators surrounded the car.

The 2nd Accused-Appellant vehemently denied that he himself solicited or abetted the 1st Accused-Appellant to solicit and/or accept any bribe from the Complainant in relation to any of the official duties related to Kanthale Sugar Project. Further, at one point, he denied the presence of his voice in the produced audio recording in court and alleged that the said recordings are being tampered with by the Complainant.

It is on the strength of the above evidence placed before the High Court at Bar, Court proceeded to convict the two Accused-Appellants on charges levelled against them except for the 3rd Count framed against the 2nd Accused-Appellant. It is also important to note at this stage that the prosecution after leading evidence before the High Court at Bar had informed Court that the prosecution would not be proceeding against the 2nd Accused-Appellant with regard to the 3rd count framed against the 2nd Accused-Appellant.

In the light of the evidence placed before the High Court at Bar by the prosecution as well as by the two Accused-Appellants, this Court will now proceed to consider the questions of Law raised by the two Accused-Appellants before this Court.

Was the investigation into the complaint received by the CIABOC against the Appellants, conducted by officers of the CIABOC in a lawful manner? (Was the investigation lawful?)

The argument advanced by the Accused-Appellants is that the officers of the CIABOC had not carried out investigations into the complaint received by it against the two Accused-Appellants, in a lawful manner. It was the submission of the learned President's Counsel for the Accused Appellants that the first complaint regarding this incident was not lawfully recorded by the officers of the CIABOC. In order to evaluate this argument, let us first consider the process in which the virtual complainant Nagarajah, approached the CIABOC.

As already observed in this Judgment the virtual complainant had met ASP Ruwan Kumara of CIABOC following the phone call, he received in his office at CIABOC where ASP Ruwan Kumara had advised him to write a complaint regarding the matter. Thus, ASP Ruwan Kumara after listening to the oral account narrated by the virtual complaint, sent the virtual complainant back to submit a written complaint, without proceeding to record/reduce the statement into writing at that time itself. It was the submission of the learned President's Counsel that this procedure is illegal as it is contrary to section 109 of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act No 15 of 1979.

Thereafter, the virtual complainant proceeded to lodge a complaint on 15th February 2018 acting upon which, CIABOC had proceeded to record a statement from him in the English language on 22 February 2018. The investigators then informed him that the available material is not sufficient to proceed with an arrest, to which the virtual complainant responded that he no longer had contact with either Appellant at that point in time. The Investigators had then instructed the virtual complainant to regenerate communication with the Appellants. It is this procedure that the learned Presidents' Counsel for the Accused Appellants complains as being unlawful.

Section 109 (1) of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act No 15 of 1979 on which the learned President's Counsel for the Accused Appellants have relied, states as follows;

> "Every information relating to the commission of an offence may be given orally or in writing to a police officer or inquirer"

Section 109 (2) states-

> "If such information is given orally to a police officer or to an inquirer, it shall be reduced to writing by him in the language in which it is given and be read over to the informant:
>
> Provided that if it is not possible for the officer or inquirer to record the information in the language in which it is given the officer or enquirer shall request that the information be given in writing. If the informant is unable to give it in writing, the officer or inquirer shall record the information in one of the national languages after recording the reasons for doing so and shall read over the record to the informant or interpret it in the language he understands."

However, we observe that the procedure regarding the commencement of an investigation in relation to the offences under the Bribery Act by CIABOC is different. The Commission to Investigate Allegations of Bribery or Corruption Act No. 19 of 1994 (CIABOC Act) has specifically provided as to how CIABOC must commence an investigation. This can be clearly seen in sections 3, 4, and 5 of the Act. It is worthwhile reproducing the following parts from those sections.

CIABOC Act No. 19 of 1994

Section 3

The Commission shall subject to the other provisions of this Act, investigate allegations, contained in communications made to it under section 4 and where any such investigation discloses the commission of any offence by any person under the Bribery Act or the Declaration of Assets and Liabilities Law, No. 1 of 1975, direct the institution of proceedings against such person for such offence in the appropriate court.

Section 4

(1) An allegation of bribery or corruption may be made against a person (whether or not such person is holding on the date on which the communication is received by the Commission, the office, or employment by virtue of holding which he is alleged to have committed the act constituting bribery or corruption) by a communication to the Commission, or a person may by a communication on to the Commission, draw the attention of the Commission to any recent acquisitions of wealth or property or to any recent financial or business dealings or to any recent expenditures by a person (whether or not such person is holding any office or employment on the date on which such communication is received by the Commission) which acquisitions, dealings or expenditures are to the knowledge of the person making such communication not commensurate with the known sources of wealth or income of such person.

(2) Upon receipt of a communication under subsection (1) the Commission, if it is satisfied that such communication is genuine and that the communication discloses material upon which an investigation ought to be conducted, shall conduct such investigation as may be necessary for the purpose of deciding upon all or any of the following matters; -

(a) prosecution or other suitable action under the provisions of the Bribery Act or the Declaration of Assets and Liabilities Law, No. 1 of 1975; or and where the Commission decides, whether before or after the conduct of an investigation, that a communication received by it should be dealt with by any other authority, it may forward such communication to such other authority.

(b) prosecution under any other Law.

(3) the Commission shall have the power to investigate any matters disclosed by a communication received by it under subsection (1) whether or not such matters relate > to a period prior to the appointed date and notwithstanding anything to the contrary in any other law.

Thus, it is a legal obligation in the form of a prerequisite under the CIABOC Act that the Commission must be satisfied that any communication it receives, is genuine and that such communication discloses material upon which an investigation ought to be conducted. Therefore, it would not be lawful for the Commission to bypass this provision and straight away proceed to launch an investigation in respect of any communication it receives irrespective of its merits.

Let us also consider the applicability of the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act No 15 of 1979 to the investigations undertaken by CIABOC.

Section 2 (1) of the Bribery Act No. 11 of 1954 has clearly set out the scope of application of other written laws to the offences under the Bribery Act. It is as follows;

Section 2 (2) of the Bribery Act-

> (2) Where the provisions of this Act are in conflict or are inconsistent with any other written law, this Act shall prevail.

Further, Section 6(1) of the Bribery Act also has clearly specified the application of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act, No. 15 of 1979 to the offences under the Bribery Act in the following manner.

Section 6 (1) of the Bribery Act-

> (1) Such of the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act, No. 15 of 1979, as are not excluded by subsection (2) or are not inconsistent with the provisions of this Act shall apply to proceedings instituted in a court for offences under this Act.

In addition, the Prosecution's 2nd witness ASP Ruwan Kumara has provided the reasoning behind what impelled him not to record the virtual Complainant's statement at the very first instance, but to advise him to provide a written statement as CIABOC could treat it as a communication upon which it could act. Alongside other reasons, ASP Ruwan Kumara has stated in his evidence that as there was a complexity in the complaint and uncertainty in the alleged solicitation of a gratification at that point in time, he had wanted to establish whether the virtual Complainant was consistent in his version and ascertain whether there was merit in the allegations put forward by the virtual complainant.

In the evidence given by the virtual Complainant (PW 1), the learned counsel of the 2nd Appellant highlights that there was no evidence of contact between 2nd Appellant and the virtual Complainant after 5th September 2017, until the 23rd of February 2018, the day after Ruwan Kumara initiated the instigation on 22nd February 2018. Further, the learned counsel for the 2nd Appellant submitted that the entire process by CIABOC was to instigate, induce and inveigle PW 1 to hand over a bribe by providing PW 1 with the money to do so and that was a plan formulated by PW 2 Ruwan Kumara to entrap the Accused Appellants.

Learned Counsel for the Accused-Appellants persistently submitted that the Investigators of the CIABOC had an ulterior motive to entrap the Accused-Appellants, claiming that ASP Ruwan Kumara had made an unjustified phone call to the virtual Complainant instructing him to come to the CIABOC, without waiting for the virtual Complainant to come on his own. However, the evidence given by ASP Ruwan Kumara has clarified that the Director/Investigations of the CIABOC has informed him about the virtual Complainant and asked him to contact the said foreign national. The witness has further explained how they ordinarily receive complaints and has explained the situations where third parties contact the CIABOC on behalf of the Complainants [p.953 Vol 4A of Appeal Brief].

It is the submission of the appellants that the virtual Complainant had no intention of making a complaint to CIABOC. It is on that footing that the appellants further submitted that there cannot be a valid conviction without a legal and fair investigation.

We need to be mindful that the offences of bribery and corruption is generally committed by public officers. Thus, for an instance, in a circumstance where an allegation of bribery has to be made against the officer in charge of a police station, the mechanism provided for in the Code of Criminal Procedure Act for a complainant to make a complaint against the very police officer in the relevant police station appears to cause practical difficulties.

On the other hand, as a person can easily make an allegation of Bribery against any public officer, the legislature has set up a threshold in section 4 (2) of the CIABOC Act in that it has required CIABOC to be satisfied that the information received by it, is genuine and warrants further investigation. That would explain why investigations for the offences under the Bribery Act must proceed on a somewhat different path.

Thus, the legislature in its wisdom has vested the CIABOC with the power of commencing an investigation against any public officer when it receives any such communication only when the Commission is satisfied that such communication is genuine and discloses material upon which an investigation ought to be conducted.

It must also be noted that the 19th amendment to the Constitution which was certified by the Parliament on 15th May 2015 brought in Chapter XIX A introducing a new Article, i.e., Article 156 A. According to Article 156A (1) (b), the powers of CIABOC includes 'the power to direct the holding of a preliminary inquiry or the making of an investigation into an allegation of bribery or corruption, whether of its own motion or on a complaint made to it, and the power to institute prosecutions for offences under the law in force relating to bribery or corruption. (Emphasize is ours)

Accordingly, it is clear that the 19th amendment to the Constitution by Article 156 A had empowered the CIABOC to hold preliminary inquiries or investigations into allegations of bribery or corruption on its own motion also. This is in addition to its power to act when a complaint is made by any person.

We may mention here further that, the aforementioned Chapter (Chapter XIX A) containing Article 156 A was repealed by the 20th Amendment to the Constitution which came into effect on 29th October 2020. Although the said provision was subsequently repealed, the incidents relating to the instant case had taken place while the 19th amendment to the Constitution was in force i.e., the alleged incidents of solicitation of gratification had occurred during the time period between 11th August 2016–3rd May 2018. Thus, steps taken by ASP/Ruwan Kumara of CIABOC towards the commencement of around 22nd February 2018 would fall under Article 156 A making it lawful under the said article only.

Thus, it can be clearly seen that CIABOC had all the power, at the time in question, to commence and proceed with any investigation even on its own motion i.e., without a complaint. In this regard, section 5 of the CIABOC Act would also be relevant and its reproduction would further resolve the above issues. It is as follows;

Section 5 of the CIABOC Act:

> (1) For the purpose of discharging the functions assigned to it by this Act, the Commission shall have the power-
>
> (a) to procure and receive all such evidence, written or oral, and to examine all such persons as the Commission may think necessary or desirable to procure, receive or examine;

(b) to require any person to attend before the Commission for the purposes of being examined by the Commission and to answer, orally on oath or affirmation, any question put to him by the Commission relevant, in the opinion of the Commission, to the matters under investigation or require such person to state any facts relevant to the matters under investigation in the form of an affidavit;

(c) to summon any person to produce any document or other thing in his possession or control;

(d) to direct by notice in writing the manager of any back produce, within such time as may be specified in the notice, any book, document or cheque of the back containing entries relating to the account of any person in respect of whom a communication has been received under section 4 or of the spouse or a son or daughter of such person, or of a company of which such person is a director, or of a trust in which such person has a beneficial interest or of a firm of which such person is a partner, or to furnish as so specified, certified copies of such book, document, cheque or of any entry therein;

(e) to direct by notice in writing the Commissioner-General of Inland Revenue to furnish, as specified in the notice, all information available to such Commissioner-General relating to the affairs of any person in respect of whom a communication has been received under section 4 or of the spouse or a son or daughter of such person and to produce or furnish, as specified in the notice, any document or a certified copy of any document relating to such person, spouse, son or daughter which is in the possession or under the control of such Commissioner-General;

(f) to direct by notice in writing the person in charge of any department, office or establishment of the Government or the Mayor, Chairman, Governor or chief executive, howsoever designated, of a local authority, Provincial Council, scheduled institution or a company in which the Government owns more than fifty per centum of the shares, to produce or furnish, as specified in the notice, any book, register, record or document which is in his possession or under his control or certified copies thereof or of any entry therein;

(g) to direct any person in respect of whom communication has been received under section 4 to furnish a sworn statement in writing-

(i) setting out all movable or immovable property owned or possessed at any time, or at such time as may be specified by the Commission, by such person and by the spouse, son, or daughter of such person and specifying the date on which each of the properties so set out was acquired, whether by way of purchase, gift, bequest, inheritance or otherwise;

(ii) containing particulars of such other matters which in the opinion of the Commission are relevant to the investigation;

(h) to direct any other person to furnish a sworn statement in writing-

(i) setting out all movable or immovable property owned or possessed at any time or at such time as may be specified by the Commission, by a such person where the Commission has reasonable grounds to believe that such information can assist an investigation conducted by the Commission;

(ii) containing particulars of such other matters which in the opinion of the Commission are relevant to the investigation;

(i) to prohibit, by written order, any person in respect of whom a communication has been received under Section 4, the spouse, a son or daughter of such person, or any other person holding any property in trust for such first-mentioned person, or a company of which he is a director or firm in which he is a partner from transferring the ownership of, or any interest in, any movable or immovable property specified in such order, until such time as such order is revoked by the Commission; and to cause a copy of such written order to be served on any such authority as the Commission may think fit, including in the case of immovable property, the Registrar of Lands, in the case of a motor vehicle, the Commissioner of Motor Traffic and in the case of shares, stocks of debentures of any company, the Registrar of Companies and the Secretary of such company;

(j) to require, by written order, any authority on whom a copy of a written order made under paragraph (i) has been served, to cause such copy to be registered or filed in any register or record maintained by such authority.

(k) to require, by written order the Controller of Immigration and Emigration to impound the passport and other travel documents of any person in respect of whom a communication has been received under section 4, for such period not exceeding three months as may be specified in such written order; and

(l) to require by written order, any police officer as shall be specified in that order, whether by name or by office, to take all such steps as may be necessary to prevent the departure from Sri Lanka of any person in respect of whom a communication has been received under section 4 for such period not exceeding three months, as may be specified in such order.

(2) the Commission may exercise any power conferred on it under subsection (1) and any person to whom the Commission issues any direction in the exercise of such power shall comply with such direction, notwithstanding anything to the contrary in any law.

The above section also clearly shows that the procedure of investigating offences under the Bribery Act takes a different form, from that of a normal crime investigation under the Code of Criminal Procedure Act. That is the law of the country.

In the above circumstances, the submission made on behalf of the Appellants that the virtual complainant had no intention of initiating an investigation by the officers of CIABOC becomes irrelevant.

Hence, we hold that the investigators of the CIABOC inclusive of ASP Ruwan Kumara have acted within the parameters of the law and have not acted in any manner which brings their conduct into question.

We need to highlight one other matter regarding the complaint that in the instant case. That is the argument that this case has been fabricated by the CIABOC against the Appellants. The Accused-Appellants were very senior Public Officers with long experience. They had held posts in the top echelons of the Government at the time of their arrest. However, it is noteworthy that at no time had they hitherto ever taken any step to make any complaint to any authority against any investigator for fabricating false evidence to implicate them in this crime. They also had failed to make any complaint against anyone in relation to any coercive act committed or unfair treatment meted out to them at any time during the investigation. Thus, we can conclude safely that no such fabrication had happened in the course of the raid and thereafter.

Hence, we hold that the position of the learned President's Counsel for the Accused-Appellants that the Accused-Appellants were subjected to an unfair, vindictive, prejudicial, and partisan investigation is completely unfounded.

In view of the threshold provision in section 4(2) of the CIABOC Act and also in view of the fact that any authorized officer of CIABOC is duty-bound to follow the procedure set out in the CIABOC Act, the submissions made on behalf of the Accused-Appellants that the failure to record a statement from the virtual complainant on the very first day has led to an unfair investigation, also does not have merit. This is because the law requires that the CIABOC officer commencing the investigation must be satisfied of the genuineness of the complaint/allegation.

The learned President's Counsel for the 2nd Accused-Appellant advanced another argument to the effect that the prosecution had failed to make available to the accused, a copy of the first complaint. According to the learned President's Counsel, the first complaint of this case is the letter written by Nagarajah to the Prime Minister. He urged that we must apply the principles of fair trial enumerated in the case of Wijepala vs Attorney General. [(2001) 1 Sri L.R. 46]

It would be relevant at this stage to reproduce here, Section 444 of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act which is as follows;

Section 444 of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act No. 15 of 179

444. Accused person entitled to copy of first information

(1) Every inquirer or officer in charge of a police station shall issue to every accused person or his attorney-at-law who applies for it a duly certified copy of the first information relating to the commission of the offence with which he is charged and of any statement made by the person against whom or in respect of whom the accused is alleged to have committed an offence.

(2) In every proceeding under this Code the production of a certified copy of any information or statement obtained under subsection (1) shall be prima facie evidence of the fact that such information was given or that such statement was made to the inquirer or police officer by whom it was recorded; and notwithstanding the provisions of any other law, it shall not be necessary to call such inquirer or officer as a witness solely for the purpose of producing such certified copy.

(3) In the course of a trial in a Magistrate's Court, the Magistrate may, in the interests of justice, make available to the accused or his attorney-at-law for perusal in open court the statement recorded under Section 110 of any witness whose evidence is relied on by the prosecution in support of the charge against the accused.

What the learned President's Counsel for the Accused-Appellants complain as being not made available for them, is not the first information relating to the commission of the offence which an inquirer or officer in charge of a police station has had in their custody (as per the above section). What the above section makes every accused entitled to receive, is a duly certified copy of the first information relating to the commission of the offence with which any inquirer or officer in charge of a police station is charged. Any letter written by either Nagarajah or anybody else to the President or to the Prime Minister of the country cannot be considered as the first information relating to the commission of the offence given to any inquirer or officer in charge of a police station under section 444 of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act.

The information which is treated as the first information as per our law is the first information relating to the commission of the offence given to any inquirer or officer in charge of a police station. Even in Wijepala vs Attorney General (2001) 1 Sri LR 46 - Mark Fernando J treated witness named Senaratne's statement around 9.30 pm to hospital Police Post, as the first information.

On the other hand, Nagarajah's evidence on what he informed the President by that letter is the fact that the 1st appellant had called for tenders by way of a Newspaper advertisement, regarding the disposal of the factory building, machinery, and other infrastructure in the premises.

Moreover, the learned Presidents Counsel for the accused-appellants has also failed to show that there is evidence adduced in the trial, establishing the fact that any information/complaint (be it the first information or otherwise) pertaining to a solicitation of a gratification by either the appellants or any other public officer has been made to the President or the Prime Minister of the country.

This means that the appellants have not established the actual availability/actually making of such a complaint although they claim entitlement for it on the basis that it is the first information of the instant case.

There is also no mention of the fact whether the Appellants had taken any step to move court or the prosecution to give them a copy of this document if there was any such document available.

Therefore, this submission made by the learned President's Counsel for the Appellants has no merit.

The Indictment was ex facie ultra vires the provisions of section 11 of the CIABOC ACT

The next question of law raised on behalf of the 2nd Accused-Appellant was that the Indictment was ex-facia ultra vires the provisions of Section 11 of the Commission to Investigate Allegations of Bribery or Corruption Act No. 19 of 1994 (CIABOC Act) for the reason that the Indictment served on the Accused-Appellant was unaccompanied by the direction of the Commission to Investigate Allegations of Bribery or Corruption (the Commission) to institute proceedings against the Accused-Appellants. The above issue was first raised before the High Court at Bar as a preliminary objection by the Accused-Appellants and the High Court at Bar overruled the preliminary objection.

There is no doubt as to the nature of the indictment that was before the High Court at Bar. CIABOC had investigated a complaint of bribery and forwarded an Indictment against the two Accused under the provisions of the Bribery Act. The jurisdictional objection that was first raised before the High Court at Bar as well as before this Court on behalf of the 2nd Accused-Appellant was based on the provisions of Section 11 of the CIABOC ACT.

When raising the objection, it was contended;

a) Whether the CIABOC had considered the investigational findings and directed the Director General of CIABOC to institute Criminal proceedings against the Appellant before the High Court.
b) If such a directive had been issued, was it incumbent on the Director General of CIABOC to have attached to the indictment, the direction received by him by the Commissioners?

and the learned President's Counsel heavily relied on two Appellate Court decisions one by the Court of Appeal and the other by the Supreme Court.

Even though this Court is not bound by a decision of the Court of Appeal, their lordships of the Court of Appeal when deciding the case of Nandasena Gotabya Rajapakse V. Director General Commission to Investigate Allegations of Bribery and Corruption and Others CA (Rev) APN 29/2018 C.A. minute 12.09.2019 had considered a plethora of decisions both by the SC as well as Court of Appeal and therefore it appears to us that the said decision has a persuasive value before the Supreme Court.

The main complaint in the said case was the failure by CIABOC to act under Section 78(1) of the Bribery Act (as amended) by granting written sanction to institute the proceedings before the Magistrate's Court. The English Text of Section 78(1) of the Bribery Act (as amended) reads as follows;

> "No Magistrate's Court shall entertain any prosecution for an offence under this Act except by or with the written sanction of the Commission."

The Court of Appeal has referred to the Sinhala text of Section 78 (1) of the Bribery Act, (as amended) and also to the decision by the Supreme Court in Senanayake V. Attorney General (2010) 1 Sri LR 149 and observed the following;

> "The prosecution 'by' the Commission is therefore clearly legislative residue from Section 78 (1) from the statutory provisions that existed before the amendment brought in by Act Nos. 19 and 20 of 1994, with no corresponding power conferred on the Commission to institute proceedings. In the circumstances, the order of the Magistrate's Court and the Provincial High Court is tainted with illegality and thereby subjected to be interfered with this Court in exerting its power of revision"

The Court of Appeal has observed the above and had finally concluded that "If that Court is the Magistrate's Court, then the Commission must sanction the institution of such proceedings by written communication to that effect, addressed to that Court.

Even though section 78 (1) of the Bribery Act refers to a written sanction in order to entertain any prosecution before the Magistrate, neither Section 78 (1) nor any other provision in the Bribery Act had imposed a similar restriction when forwarding an indictment to the High Court. Since the decision by the Court of Appeal had only considered the question of sanction granted by the 'Commission' under Section 78 (1) of the Bribery Act (as amended) we see no relevance of the above judgment to the instant case.

The Petitioner in Anoma S. Polwatte V. Director General Commission to Investigate Allegations of Bribery and Corruption and Others SC Writ 1/2011 SC minute dated 26.07.2018, had challenged the decision to prosecute the Petitioner before the Magistrate's Court by way of a Writ Application.

In the said case Petitioner's main argument before the Supreme Court was the failure of the CIABOC to adhere to Section 11 of the CIABOC Act when forwarding charges before the Magistrate's Court.

Section 11 of the CIABOC Act which provides for a directive from CIABOC to the Director General, reads as follows;

Section 11 Where the material received by the Commission in the course of an investigation conducted by it under this Act, discloses the commission of an offence by any person under the Bribery Act or the Declaration of Assets and Liabilities Law No. 01 of 1975, the Commission shall direct the Director General to institute criminal proceedings against such person in the appropriate Court and the Director General shall institute proceedings accordingly.

When raising the said objection to the charges that were presented before the Magistrate's Court, the Petitioner had also relied on Section 2 (a) of the CIABOC Act which reads as follows;

Section 2 (a) The Commission shall consist of three members, two of whom shall be retired Judges of the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeal and one of whom shall be a person with wide experience relating to the Investigation of Crime and Law Enforcement.

In the said case it was submitted before the Supreme Court, that during the period of which the investigation with regard to the Petitioner was carried out, CIABOC was not properly constituted since there were some unfilled positions or vacancies in the Commission and therefore the Commission could not have given a directive to the Director General to institute proceedings against the Petitioner before the Magistrate's Court under Section 11 of the CIABOC Act. While responding to the above position taken up by the Petitioner in the said case, the Director General of CIABOC had submitted the journal entry of the relevant file which carried the directive received by him before the Supreme Court along with the affidavit he tendered before the Court. The Supreme Court has considered several provisions of the CIABOC Act and the 'journal entry' that was produced marked R-1, had finally concluded that there was no valid directive made under Section 11 of the CIABOC Act and quashed the charge sheet issued to the Petitioner in the said case.

When raising the question of law, on behalf of the 2nd Accused-Appellant, it was submitted that the said decision had imposed a duty cast upon the Director General to file the directive he received by the Commission under Section 11 of the CIABOC Act along with the indictment filed before the High Court.

As already referred to above, the Petitioner in the case of Anoma S. Polwatte V. Director General Commission to Investigate Allegations of Bribery and Corruption (supra) came before the Supreme Court seeking a Writ of Certiorari to quash the charges served on her since there was no valid directive given by the Commission under Section 11 of the CIABOC Act. The Petitioner in the said Case had not challenged the charges served on her under Section 78 (1) of the Bribery Act (as amended) even though the impugned charge sheet was filed before the Magistrate's Court under Section 78 (1) of the Bribery Act for the failure to submit the written sanction from the Commission, and the Supreme Court when deciding the said case had not considered the provision in Section 78 (1) of the Bribery Act (as amended). It is also important to note at this stage that the Supreme Court when deciding Anoma S. Polwatte V. Director General Commission to Investigate Allegations of Bribery and Corruption (supra) had not pronounced a requirement by the CIABOC to submit a written directive when chargers are filed before the Magistrate's Court.

The requirements that should be fulfilled by CIABOC when forwarding an indictment before the High Court is identified under Section 12 (1) and (2) of the CIABOC Act which reads as follows;

Section 12 (1) Where proceedings are instituted in a High Court, in pursuance of a direction made by the Commission under Section 11 by an indictment signed by the Director General, such High Court shall receive such indictment and shall have jurisdiction to try the offence described in such indictment in all respects as if such indictment were an indictment presented by the Attorney General to such Court.

(2) There shall be annexed to every such indictment, in addition to the documents which are required by the Code of Criminal Procedure Act, No. 15 of 1979, to be annexed thereto, a copy of the statements, if any, before the Commission, by the accused and by every person intended to be called as a witness by the prosecution.

The said provisions, in Section 12 (1) and (2) are silent on any requirement to annex a copy of the directive made under Section 11 of the CIABOC Act even though there is a specific reference to the directive made by the Commission under Section 11 of the CIABOC Act in subsection (1) referred to above.

In these circumstances it is clear that, the Supreme Court when deciding Anoma S. Polwatte V. Director General Commission to Investigate Allegations of Bribery and Corruption (supra) had never intended to impose an additional requirement to submit a written directive when filing charges before Court, and therefore this Court is not inclined to impose an additional requirement other than the provisions already identified in Section 12 (I) and (II) of the CIABOC Act when forwarding an indictment before the High Court.

Whilst raising the above objection to the indictment before the Supreme Court, the learned President's Counsel who represented the 2nd Accused-Appellant drew the attention of this Court to the alleged 'fundamental errors' committed by the High Court at Bar when refusing the same jurisdictional objection at the commencement of the Trial at Bar proceeding.

In this regard it was submitted that the High Court at Bar erred;

a) In holding that this issue had to be 'canvassed in another forum by way of a separate judicial proceeding'
b) In deciding this issue by applying the presumption in Section 114, illustration (d) of the Evidence Ordinance, failing to apply the explicit provisions of the Evidence Ordinance, and totally disregarding the doctrine of 'stare Decisis', in not following the decision of the Supreme Court in the Polwatte case.
c) In its selective application of presumptions under the Evidence Ordinance to the detriment of the Accused,

When considering the submissions referred to above, it is clear that the said grounds of appeal raised on behalf of the 2nd Accused-Appellant were based on a misinterpretation given to the decision of this Court in the case of Anoma S. Polwatte V. Director General Commission to Investigate Allegations of Bribery and Corruption (supra).

As already observed by us, when deciding the above case, this Court had never intended to impose an additional requirement of submitting a written directive given by the Commission when forwarding an indictment by the Director General CIABOC to High Court other than following the provisions already identified under Sections 12 (I) and (II) of the CIABOC Act. If the Director General is directed under Section 11 of the CIABOC Act by the CIABOC to forward an indictment, he is only bound to follow the provisions in Section 12 (I) and (II) of the CIABOC Act. In the absence of any complaint, that the Director General CIABOC had failed to comply with Sections 12(I) and (II) of the CIABOC Act when forwarding the indictment before the High Court at Bar it is correct in refusing the jurisdictional objection raised on behalf of the 2nd Accused before the High Court at Bar. The Trial Judge before whom the indictment is filed is therefore bound to accept the indictment and take up the trial unless there is material to establish that Director General CIABOC had failed to comply with the provisions of Sections 12 (1) and (2) of the CIABOC Act. Any party who intends to challenge an indictment forwarded by the Director General CIABOC on the basis that, the CIABOC had failed to comply with Section 11 of the CIABOC Act, the said challenge could only be raised in an appropriate action filed before an appropriate forum.

In the said circumstance, I see no merit in the argument placed before us.

Have the charges in the indictment (joinder of charges) been framed in a lawful manner? More particularly, is the amalgamation of charges 1 and 2 with the rest of the charges lawful, in that, has the prosecution established that the offences contained in charges 1 and 2 were committed in the course of the same transaction with the offences contained in the remaining charges?

The Accused-Appellants before the High Court at Bar had raised an objection to the amended indictment on the basis that the prosecution could not have lawfully joined the charges in counts 1, 2, and 3 with the rest of the charges as the incidents referred to in charges 1, 2 and 3 do not fall within the same course of the transaction as the rest of the charges.

When the objection was raised in the High Court at Bar, the learned judges had decided to address the said objection after the leading of evidence by the Prosecution. Accordingly, the learned judges in the judgment dated 19th December 2019 have reached the conclusion that the events relating to the charges are interconnected and do form part of the same transaction. The learned Judges of the High Court at Bar have rejected the aforesaid objection of the Appellants.

Let us now consider whether there is merit in this argument. The indictment against both Accused-Appellants contains 24 charges and we have already mentioned the charges and the sentence imposed by the High Court at Bar in this Judgment.

Out of the 24 counts in the indictment, counts 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, and 14 are against the 1st Accused Appellant; the counts 3, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, and 24 are against the 2nd Accused-Appellant. The charge in count 4 has been framed against both Accused-Appellants

Learned President's Counsel for the Accused-Appellants submitted that charges 1 and 2 are in respect of the alleged solicitation of a bribe of Rs. 450 million (USD 3 million) by the 1st Accused Appellant on or about 11th August 2016 whereas charges 4 - 24 are solicitation of Rs. 100 million as a bribe and acceptance of Rs. 20 million as an advance based on a conspiracy set out in charge 4 during the period between 05th September 2017 and 03rd May 2018 and the 3rd charge is for solicitation of a bribe of Rs 450 million by the 2nd Accused-Appellant on or about 05th September 2017. The learned President's Counsel therefore sought to argue that the purpose of soliciting Rs. 450 million in respect of charges 1 and 2 was to permit the virtual complainant to go ahead with the project whereas the purpose in relation to charge 4 which covers the charge of conspiracy between 1st and 2nd Accused-Appellants to solicit Rs. 100 million is different. It was on that footing that the learned President's Counsel for the Accused-Appellants submitted that while there is a common factor of soliciting a gratification, the element of community of purpose cannot be inferred by the same and the Prosecution lacks evidence to prove that there was continuity of action and community of purpose to enable them to lawfully join the charges on the basis that they had occurred in the course of the same transaction.

It is also to be noted that the learned President's Counsel for the 1st Accused-Appellant had submitted before the High Court at Bar that the test used to ascertain whether incidents fall within the same transaction is the test of Common Agreement (පොදු එකඟතාවය), which is not seen in the current instance. Accordingly, it was the position of the learned President's Counsel for the 1st Accused-Appellant that charges 1-2 and 3 cannot be joined with the rest of the charges. In other words, the Accused-Appellants had claimed that charges 1 and 2, charges 3, and charges 4 - 24 do not fall within the course of the same transaction but fall under three separate transactions.

It is the contention of the 1st Accused-Appellant that although the objection was raised at the correct time in the Trial at Bar, the learned Judges had indicated that they would consider the same at the end of the trial, misdirecting themselves on the law. Thus, the learned President's Counsel complained that evidence which otherwise would have been inadmissible was permitted in by the trial Judges. It is therefore the contention of the 1st Accused-Appellant that the Accused-Appellants did not get a fair trial due to the above alleged lapse on the part of the learned Judges of the Permanent Trial at Bar.

Let us first reproduce below, the relevant sections from the Code of Criminal Procedure Act No. 15 of 1979.

Section 173 (Separate charge of separate offence)

> For every distinct offence of which any person is accused there shall be a separate charge and every such charge shall be tried separately except in the cases mentioned in sections 174, 175, 176 and 180 which said sections may be applied either severally or in combination.

Section 175 (1) (Trial for more than one offence)

> If in one series of acts so connected together as to form the same transaction more offences than one are committed by the same person he may be charged with and tried at one trial for every such offence, and in trials before the High Court such charges may be included in one and the same indictment.

Section 180 (All persons concerned in committing an offence may be charged together)

> When more persons than one are accused of jointly committing the same offence or of different offences committed in the same transaction or when one person is accused of committing any offence and another of abetment of or attempt to commit such offence, they may be charged and tried together or separately as the court thinks fit; and the provisions contained in the former part of this Chapter shall apply to all such charges.

The 1st count (under section 19(b) of the Bribery Act) alleges that on or about 11th August 2016 in Colombo, the 1st Accused-Appellant being a public servant, (Secretary to the Ministry of Land), solicited from K. P. Nagarajah (the virtual complainant) a gratification in a sum of USD 3 Million [SLR 450 Million], as an inducement or reward for - his expediting or delaying or hindering or preventing an official act - or for assisting or favouring or for hindering or delaying the transaction of any business with the Government - that is to say the act of giving unto him the machinery along with the entirety of the land and premises for the purpose of operating the Kanthale Sugar Factory. The 2nd count is for the same incident but framed under 19(c) of the Bribery Act and therefore the charge is silent about the purpose for which the alleged gratification was solicited.

The 3rd count (under s. 19(c) of the Bribery Act) alleges that on or about 5th September 2017 in Colombo, the 2nd Accused-Appellant being a public servant, (the Chairman of the State Timber Corporation), solicited from K. P. Nagarajah (the virtual Complainant), a gratification in a sum of USD 3 Mil [SLR 450 million].

According to the Respondent, the alleged solicitation has been made in respect of the same purpose, and the evidence led in the case too clearly shows that the alleged solicitation has been made in respect of the same purpose which is the act of giving the machinery along with the entirety of the land and premises for the purpose of operating the Kanthale Sugar Factory. This is evident from the fact that the 2nd Accused-Appellant had approached the virtual Complainant on 5th September 2017 to discuss at Water's Edge, the matter relating to the Kanthale Sugar Factory project and to inform the virtual complainant about the disappointment of the 1st Accused Appellant. They discussed the recent developments of the project. Although the only connection/standing that the 2nd Accused Appellant had in this event is his mere close friendship with the 1st Accused Appellant, evidence shows very clearly that it was the expectation of the 2nd Accused Appellant to persuade the virtual complainant that he should adhere to the solicitation of the gratification by the 1st Accused Appellant. The gratification solicited is for non-other than relating to affairs of the progress of operating the Kanthale Sugar Factory which falls within one and the same transaction.

The 4th count alleges between the 5th September 2017 and 3rd May 2018 in Colombo, the 1st Accused-Appellant being a public servant, (the Secretary to the Ministry of Land and the President's Chief of Staff) and the 2nd Accused Appellant, being a public servant, (the Chairman of the State Timber Corporation) agreed to act together with or without any previous concert or deliberation with the common intention for or in committing or abetting the offence of soliciting from K. P. Nagarajah, a gratification in a sum of SLR 100 million and the said offence was committed in consequence of the said conspiracy and they thereby committed the offence of 'Conspiracy' punishable under section 25(3) of the Bribery Act read with section 19(c) of the Bribery Act. The incident in count 4 too was committed on the same day as charge 3 (5th of September 2017). Counts 4 - 24 are connected to the aforesaid conspiracy to solicit Rs. 100 million as a bribe and acceptance of Rs. 20 million as an advance based on the same. Indeed, according to the Prosecution, both the Accused-Appellants had been present when the advance of Rs. 20 million was handed over by the virtual Complainant at the car park of Taj Samudra Hotel.

While it is clear from the above facts that the charges in counts 4-24 can be joined along with the charges in counts 1-3 under section 175(1) and section 180 of the Criminal Procedure Code on the basis that they had occurred in the course of the same transaction, let us proceed to consider how our Courts have applied this principle in the past.

In Jonklaas vs Somadasa 43 NLR 284, Wijeyewardene J took into consideration that the substantial test for determining whether several offences are committed in the course of the same transaction is to ascertain whether they are so related to one another in point of purpose or as cause and effect or as principal and subsidiary acts as to constitute one continuous action. His Lordship then went on to hold as follows.

> " …a community of purpose and a continuity of action which are regarded as essential elements necessary to link together different acts so as to form one and the same transaction."

This was followed by Alles J in Don Wilbert vs Sub Inspector Chilaw 69 NLR 448 where the accused was charged on two counts; the first count was for driving a vehicle in a negligent manner; the second count was for failure to report the said accident to the Officer-in-Charge of the nearest Police Station after driving the said vehicle on the said highway at the same time and place and after having met with an accident causing injury to another, an offence punishable under section 224 of the Motor Traffic Act.

In the case of The King V. Aman 21 NLR 375 the Accused was prosecuted upon an indictment containing two counts, one for causing hurt to one Sena Abdul Cader, and the other for voluntarily causing hurt to one Cader Meera Saibo. The accused has had words with the man who is the subject of the second count (Cader Meera Saibo), pulled out a knife, and stabbed him. He then rushed along the street, which had several boutiques, and had seen Sena Abdul Cader at a place about thirty yards from the place where he committed the first offence. He had an altercation with him the previous day about some rice. The Accused reminded him of that occurrence and stabbed Sena Abdul Cader also. The two offences were committed in the same street, and the man who was struck on the occasion of the second offence could see from where he was standing, the disturbance going on in which the first offence was committed. One of the two objections raised in the appeal was that these two offences could not be considered as a series of acts so connected together as to form the same transaction. In that case, Bertram C.J. holding that the acts were so connected together as to form the same transaction stated as follows;

> "The real truth is that in all cases that question is a question of fact. The word " transaction," is defined in the Imperial Dictionary (which seems very closely to follow the definition in Webster) as " that which is done or takes place, an affair." Had the expression in our section been '' a series of acts so connected together as to form the same affair " there would have been no question as to the meaning. The word " transaction " does not necessarily mean something which takes place between parties. That is explained in the case of Drinecqbier v. Wood ([1899) 1Oh.Div.397.), where Byrne J., in interpreting a similar phrase under the English rules of procedure, instances the case of a traction engine proceeding along a highway and causing damage to a terrace of several houses. He says: " In the illustration suggested by the illegal use of a traction engine passing in front of them, each owner would have to prove his title to his house, but the other questions of fact and law would be common to all the owners, and I have no doubt that they could all sue in one action."

In Don Wilbert's case the two offences that were joined, did not even take place between the same parties. The said incidents were joined on the premise that it was committed by the same person one after the other. The Court did not hesitate to treat them as a series of acts so connected together as part of the same transaction. In the instant case, not only are the incidents connected and interwoven together but have occurred in the same course of events following one other. Further, all those incidents had occurred between the same parties namely the Accused-Appellants and the virtual Complainant.

In regard to the instant matter, it is the view of this Court that there exists a common purpose that runs throughout the charges 1-2,3 up to 4-24 which purpose being the need to obtain a bribe and to scuttle and delay the process in order to apply pressure on the virtual complainant to pay the bribe. Further, it is evident that the 1st Accused Appellant has sought the assistance of the 2nd Accused Appellant to solicit the bribe from the virtual complainant. The Respondent has relied on the telephone records in establishing the same. The 1st Accused Appellant has made a call to the 2nd Accused Appellant even prior to the 2nd Accused Appellant contacting the complainant on 5th September 2017.

Following the incident on the 5th of September 2017, there had been three attempts to solicit a bribe i.e., on the 27th of February 2018, the 28th of April 2018, and the 03rd of May 2018. In all of the above three instances, the 2nd Accused-Appellant had been involved in facilitating the transactions. Further in all 5 attempts of solicitation (11/08/2016, 05/09/2017, 27/02/2018, 28/04/2018, and 03/05/2018) the purpose of the bribe was to expedite the process and/or grant clearance of handing over the land and machinery of Kanthale old Sugar Factory to the virtual Complainant and or to his company. Thus, the 2nd Accused-Appellant had throughout been involved in soliciting and aiding the 1st Accused-Appellant.

Further, it should be noted that although there was no telephone correspondence between the 1st Accused-Appellant and the virtual Complainant during the period August 2016 to September 2017, the subject file maintained at the 1st Accused-Appellant Ministry reveals the continuous correspondence between the 1st Accused-Appellant and the Complainant. The relevant correspondence has been submitted before court by Prosecution Witness No. 37.

Accordingly, by the letter dated 16th January 2017 produced marked P-70 it is evident that the 1st Accused-Appellant has sought the opinion of the Attorney General when the same was not required. According to the Prosecution, that was to delay the process. Further, letters produced marked P 67 dated 17th December 2016 and P 73 dated 10th February 2017 prove that the 1st Accused-Appellant had unduly delayed the handing over of the land. The letter produced marked P 75 dated 6th March 2017 further indicates that the 1st Accused-Appellant had once again sought instructions relating to the same issue; this too according to the Prosecution, was to willfully delay the progress of the process.

The Prosecution has also adduced the letters produced marked P-80A dated 8th June 2017, P 80 dated 9th June 2017, and P 83 dated 7th August 2017 to further indicate that the 1st Accused-Appellant had continued to delay the process.

On the other hand, the mere absence of telephone communications between the 1st Accused-Appellant and the virtual Complainant during the period August 2016 to September 2017 does not mean that the relevant parties terminated altogether, the solicitation process they had already started and commenced a fresh solicitation process. Such thinking is far-fetched. Moreover, even if it is so, it is by and large, for the same purpose. Therefore, the continuity of action and the community of purpose are remarkably present in the incidents described in the charges.

Accordingly, it is evident that while the process pertaining to soliciting the gratification had commenced on 11th August 2016 and ended only on 3rd May 2018 running through a time span little over of 1 1/2 years, the 1st Accused Appellant has continued to pursue his aim of soliciting and accepting the gratification from the virtual Complainant throughout the said period with the involvement of the 2nd Accused Appellant also in the process, right through from 5th September 2017 onwards.

Therefore, there is lucid evidence to hold that the Accused-Appellants have acted with a community of purpose and continuity action linking counts 1-2 and count 3 with the rest of the counts (4-24), creating one series of acts so connected together as to form the same transaction. Therefore, we find the joinder of charges in the instant case to be lawful and there is no misjoinder as alleged by the Accused-Appellants.

Has the Prosecution proved "aliunde" that there were reasonable grounds to believe that two or more persons have conspired together to commit an offence? If not, was resorting to section 10 of the Evidence Ordinance lawful?

In count 04 of the indictment, the 1st and 2nd Accused-Appellants have been charged with the offence of conspiracy under section 25 (3) of the Bribery Act read with section 19 (c) of the Bribery Act as amended and section 113 A of the Penal Code. The said count is to the following effect, > "That on between the 5th September 2017 and 3rd May 2018 at Colombo, within the jurisdiction of this Court, in the course of the same transaction the 1st Accused Appellant being a public servant, i.e., the Secretary of the Ministry of Land and the President's Chief of Staff, and the 2nd Accused Appellant being a public servant, i.e., the Chairman of the State Timber Corporation agreed to act together with or without any previous concert or deliberation with the common intention for or in committing or abetting the offence of soliciting from K P Nagarajah, gratification in a sum of SLR 100 Million and the said offence was committed in consequence of the said conspiracy and they thereby committed the offence of "Conspiracy " punishable under s. 25(3) of the Bribery Act read with s.19(c) of the Bribery Act as amended by Acts No.2/1965, 38/1974, 9/1980 and s. 113A of the Penal Code".

It is the contention of the 1st Accused-Appellant that the Prosecution has not placed before Court material aliunde, to prove that there were reasonable grounds to believe that the Accused-Appellants have conspired together to commit the offence described in count 4.

The 1st Accused-Appellant submits that the only evidence the Prosecution has submitted in this regard, are statements alleged to have been made by the 2nd Accused-Appellant to the investigating officers regarding discussions he is alleged to have had with the 1st Accused-Appellant. Accordingly, the 1st Accused-Appellant submitted that these items of evidence are hearsay which would be made admissible only under section 10 of the Evidence Ordinance which is as follows.

Section 10 (Things said or done by conspirator in reference to common intention.)

> Where there is reasonable ground to believe that two or more persons have conspired together to commit an offence or an actionable wrong, anything said, done, or written by any one of such persons in reference to their common intention, after the time when such intention was first entertained by any one of them, is a relevant fact as against each of the persons believed to be so conspiring, as well for the purpose of proving the existence of the conspiracy as for the purpose of showing that any such person was a party to it.
>
> illustrations
>
> Reasonable ground exists for believing that A has joined in a conspiracy to wage war against the Queen.
> The facts that B procured arms in Europe for the purpose of the conspiracy, C collected money in Colombo for a like object, D persuaded persons to join the conspiracy in Kandy, E published writings advocating the object in view at Galle, and F transmitted from Kalutara to G at Negombo the money which C had collected at Colombo, and the contents of a letter written by H giving an account of the conspiracy, are each relevant, both to prove the existence of the conspiracy and to prove A 's complicity in it, although he may have been ignorant of all of them, and although the persons by whom they were done were strangers to him, and although they may have taken place before he joined the conspiracy or after he left it.

The 1st Accused-Appellant argues that prior to section 10 being applied, the Prosecution must prove aliunde that there are reasonable grounds to believe that two or more persons have conspired together to commit an offence. It is the contention of the 1st Accused-Appellant that, in proving such reasonable grounds the statements to be relied on (under section 10 of the Evidence Ordinance) cannot themselves be taken as evidence for the existence of reasonable grounds; the said reasonable grounds should first be established in order to pave the way for the said statements to be admitted as evidence under section 10 of the Evidence Ordinance, and such evidence produced to establish the existence of reasonable grounds would also be considered as additional proof of conspiracy.

in this regard, the learned President's Counsel for the 1st Accused-Appellant has cited the case of Peiris V. Silva 17 NLR 139 at 141. In that case, Perera J had observed as follows;

> "It is manifest that these statements are no more than mere hearsay as against the first accused. They are by no means evidence against him. With reference to them the Solicitor-General cited section 10 of the Evidence Ordinance, but that section applies when it is first established aliunde that there are reasonable grounds to believe that two or more persons have conspired together to commit an offence. The statements relied on cannot themselves be taken as evidence of the existence of such reasonable grounds. Such grounds must first be established in order to pave the way for the admission of the statements as evidence, and when so admitted they may be additional proof of the conspiracy."

This question was further considered in the case of King V. Attanayake (1931) 34 NLR 19 where His Lordship Lyall-Grant J observed thus:

> "Taylor on Evidence (section 590) states that before any act or declaration of one of a company of conspirators in regard to the common design as affecting his fellows is led, a foundation should first be laid by proof, sufficient, in the opinion of the Judge, to establish prima facie the fact of the conspiracy between the parties, or, at least, proper to be laid before a jury, as tending to establish such fact. The connection of the individuals in the unlawful enterprise being shown, every act or declaration of each member of the confederacy in furtherance of the original concerted plan and with reference to the common object is, in contemplation of law an act and declaration of all and this is evidence against each other.
>
>
> This statement of the English law has, I think, exactly the same effect as section 10 of our Code. Taylor proceeds: -"Sometimes for the sake of convenience the acts or declarations of one are admitted in evidence before sufficient proof is given of the conspiracy, the prosecutor undertaking to furnish such proof in a subsequent stage of the case."

In King vs. Attanayake, Lyall-Grant, J. emphasized the followings:

> (a) the judge should decide in every case whether or not reasonable grounds exist to believe that two or more persons have conspired together to commit an offence or an actionable wrong;
>
> (b) in order to do so, the judge can be guided:

(i) by the evidence already led which gives an indication that a conspiracy already exists; and

(ii) by assurance of the prosecuting counsel that he would at a later stage lead further evidence.

(c) the existence of a conspiracy need not be conclusively proved in order to render evidence admissible under Section 10.

In the instant case, the Prosecution has clearly established the existence of reasonable grounds to believe that the two Accused-Appellants have conspired together to commit this offence. It would suffice in this regard, to mention here that the Prosecution has produced three main independent evidence for the said purpose. Firstly, the telephone call records between the Accused-Appellants and the virtual Complainant; secondly, the video footage in which both Accused-Appellants are shown acting in concert; thirdly, the conversations that took place amongst the three as admitted by the two Accused-Appellants.

Moreover, the Prosecution has produced before this Court, a telephone call log showcasing how the two Appellants have been in continuous communication while the 2nd Accused-Appellant had been having independent conversations with the virtual Complainant. The telephone records submitted, show that the 2nd Accused-Appellant had contacted the virtual Complainant via telephone call in twelve instances (during the time period 24th February 2018 – 3rd May 2018)/ The telephone log reveals how the two Accused-Appellants have been in contact with each other either immediately prior to or subsequent to the 2nd Accused-Appellant's telephone conversation with the virtual complainant. The said records have been established in the High Court at Bar by Prosecution Witnesses No. 28 and 29 (witness from Sri Lanka Mobitel Co. and Dialog Axiata Co.). In addition to the above, the 2nd Accused-Appellant has in fact admitted the identity of the voices in the audio recordings to be of his, the 1st Accused-Appellant's and the virtual Complainants. This indicates the existence of communion and agreement between the two.

Further, the video footage submitted, and the evidence led by the Prosecution confirms the presence of both Accused-Appellants along with the virtual complainant during the meetings that had taken place in the run up to the solicitation of the bribe i.e., the meeting at Bread Talk and the meeting at Taj Samudra Hotel. The presence of both Accused-Appellants and the conduct of both Accused-Appellants during the said meetings have displayed them acting in concert to infer the existence of conspiracy. In addition to the above, there is evidence that the 1st Accused-Appellant requesting for a separate bag from the hotel waiter at Taj Samudra once he got to know that the virtual Complainant had brought the money. This when taken together with the other events, leads to the inference that such request was made to separate the share of the 2nd Accused-Appellant.

Thus, taking all of the above factors into consideration and while keeping in mind the degree of proof required by the Prosecution is merely to establish a prima facie case of conspiracy, where a prudent man would feel reasonably convinced that a conspiracy exists, we are of the view that the Prosecution has satisfied the aforesaid threshold requirement.

For the above reasons, we hold that the Prosecution has proved aliunde, that there are reasonable grounds to believe that the two Accused-Appellants have conspired together to commit the offence of conspiracy permitting further evidence in terms of section 10 of the Evidence Ordinance. Therefore, we hold that the learned Judges of the High Court at Bar have correctly applied section 10 of the Evidence Ordinance in relation to the charge of conspiracy against each of the Accused-Appellants.

When the admissibility of voice recording was challenged at the time the prosecution sought to place such recordings before the Court as evidence, was it lawful for the trial judge to have differed taking a decision on the matter till the end of the trial? or in the alternative, Was it incumbent on the trial court to have conducted a voire dire inquiry into the matter and make a prompt ruling regarding the admissibility of the impugned voice recordings?

Was the procedure the trial judges adopted by deferring the decision on the admissibility of the Voice recordings, cause a miscarriage of justice?

On 13/11/2019 the Counsel for the Prosecution who appeared before the High Court at Bar sought to place the recordings (converted into a transcript) before the Court as evidence. The Counsel appearing for the second Accused-Appellant opposed the same stating that the person who prepared the transcript (in accordance with the voice recordings) was not called before Court as a witness and that he/she did not sign the transcript, alleging that the authenticity of the transcript is questionable. Further he submitted to Court that the impugned voice recordings are not clear and hence the transcript which was made based on such recordings cannot be used as evidence. On the same day, Court made a prompt order stating that, Court will make an order considering the objections raised by the Defence at the end of the trial and Court allowed to raise questions based on the transcript (which made in accordance with the voice recordings). In this order, Court observed that though some parts of the voice recordings were not clear, the Court cannot neglect the entire voice recording. Further it was emphasized in this order that the Court will consider the objections raised by the Counsel for the Defence when it would analyze the evidence.

This question of law suggests that, in the alternative, it was incumbent on the trial court to have conducted a voire dire inquiry into the matter and to have made a prompt ruling regarding the admissibility of the impugned voice recordings.

In answering the same this Court need to consider voire-dire inquiries and their application. Despite a judge not being normally required to determine questions of fact before the final judgment, in certain selected occasions the judge is called upon to do the same, particularly when a disputed question of fact must be determined in order to decide whether an item of evidence should be admitted. On these occasions the judge alone determines questions of fact and may generally tend to hear witnesses in order to do so. This procedure is called a "trial-within-a-trail" or "voire-dire."

The procedure at a voire-dire inquiry usually involves various steps including objection being made when the evidence is to be called, and the judge then hearing the evidence before ruling on admissibility, unless the circumstances are exceptional. If the Accused has opted for a jury trial, the jury is normally sent out and the evidence is heard in its absence. Usually, evidence for both prosecution and defence is called. Witnesses are sworn on the voire-dire, not on the oath taken when giving evidence before the jury. Prosecution witnesses may be cross-examined without affecting the right to cross-examination in the substantive trial. The Accused may give evidence himself and may call witnesses on his behalf. When deciding the question of admissibility, the judge should then act on admissible evidence presented at the voire-dire inquiry.

As is evident, a voire-dire inquiry is a protracted procedure which may involve many steps to be followed and generally this procedure may be adopted in a preliminary examination to determine competency of a witness available in Court to give evidence. This is done merely to save time as the Court may decide the competency of a witness at the outset of the trial. However, in the present case though the learned Counsel for the Accused Appellants contended that the learned Trial Judges ought to have conducted voire-dire inquiry to decide the admissibility at the outset of the trial itself, it is our position that holding a voire-dire inquiry is not a sine qua non to decide the admissibility of evidence.

In the case of Halawa V. Federation Against Copyright Theft ([1995] 1 Cr App Rep 21, DC) of the Divisional Court of UK, it was held that,

> "The duty of trial judge, on an application under voire-dire, is either to deal with it when it arises or to leave the decision until the end of the hearing, with the primary objective being to secure is fair and just trial for both parties. Thus, in certain cases there will be a trial within a trial in which the accused is given the opportunity to exclude the evidence before he is required to give evidence on the main issues but in most cases the better course will be for the whole of the prosecution case to be heard, including the disputed evidence, before any trial-within-a-trial held."

(Emphasis Added)

There are other occasions when a trial-within-a-trial is appropriate i.e., to determine the admissibility of tape recordings as held in R v Robson v. Harris, R v Harris (1972) 56 Cr.App.R. 450. However, a trial within a trial may be appropriate if the issues are limited but not if it is likely to be protracted and to raise issues which will need to be re-examined in the trial itself. Hence, it is our considered view that the voire-dire inquiry is a trial within a trial and should be used in the appropriate circumstances. It is not to be used as a means of protracting proceedings, which would in such case defeat the very purpose of having a trial before a High Court-at-Bar. In the instant case, there was sufficient material in the form of submissions of both parties before the Learned Judges to decide the admissibility of the audio recordings at the time they allowed the prosecution to lead such evidence. Hence we hold that it was lawful for the learned Trial Judges to have differed taking a decision on the matter till the end of the trial.

Further, in the impugned order Court made the decision to allow/place such recordings before the Court as evidence due to the fact that the 2nd Accused Appellant on many occasions accepted the voice recordings and its content. The excerpt of the order of the Trial Court is as follows:

"එසේම චිත්තිය විසින් මෙම හඬපටය ලක් කරන කාරණය ඒ සඳහා පදනමක් පවතින්නේද යන්න සම්බන්ධයෙන් නඩුවේ අවසානයේදී තීන්දු කරනු ලබන අතර, එකී කරුණු වලට යටත්ව මෙම ප්‍රශ්න ඇසීමට ඉඩ ලබා නොදීමට පදනමක් අධිකරණය නොදකී. ඊට හේතුව වන්නේ මේ වනවිටද සාක්ශිකරු විසින්ම මෙම හඬවල් බොහෝ දුරට පිළිගෙන තිබීමයි."

The above can simply be translated to the effect that the trial court decided to determine whether the Voice Recordings are admissible evidence for the purpose for which they are led by the prosecution, at the end of the trial. In the meantime, the Court stated that they did not see any basis to disallow questioning based on matters pertaining to the Recordings for the reason that, at such time, the Accused had already admitted matters in the recordings to a large extent during the trial.

It must be noted that this decision was made after consideration of the fact that the evidence was already almost admitted by the accused during the trial. This court observes that the opinion and impression created in the mind of laymen in being faced with evidence is drastically different to that of Judges who consider and evaluate these matters with a judicially trained mind and ample experience. The Judges who were at the Trial-at-Bar have proceeded to hear evidence as they have been capable of distinguishing the difference between admissibility of the evidence as a whole, as opposed to leading evidence for the limited purpose of identity towards the end. The High Court Judgment has dissected the admissibility of this evidence based on identity, content, safe custody and the implication of the evidence and considered each segment on its own merit. As such, this court does not find that this evidence has tainted the decision detrimentally to the accused.

Based on the above, the decision made by the judges to answer the issue regarding the admissibility of voice recordings at the end of the trial is acceptable as doing otherwise would merely have protracted proceedings, which defeats the very purpose of the trial. Therefore, this Court observes that the learned Trial Judges have not erred in allowing the prosecution to lead the audio recordings in evidence in the course of the trial and that the procedure adopted by the trial judges in deferring the decision on the admissibility of the voice recordings has not caused any miscarriage of Justice.

Did the Magistrate have power/Judicial Authority to give voice samples to the Government Analyst? Was the compulsion of the Accused Appellants to give voice samples to the Government Analyst a breach of the rule against self-incrimination and did it cause a miscarriage of Justice?

A prerequisite to the steps of voice identification, particularly for the purpose of Spectrographic and Automatic Analysis is the taking of voice samples from a conversation conducted with the concerned party as well as samples from reading a transcript based on recurring words in the recordings. In furtherance of this aim, the learned Magistrate had made an order dated 5th June 2018 under Section 124 of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act in relation to obtaining voice samples from the 1st and 2nd Accused Appellants as well as the Complainant. The Counsel appearing for the Accused Appellant had objected to the order on the basis that the Magistrate did not have the power under Section 124 of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act to make such order. Having considered the objection, the Magistrate had rejected the same.

The High Court appears to have relied on the cases of Ritesh Sinha v Uttar Pradesh, R v Suppiah and King v Francis Perera in coming to the conclusion that the Magistrate was acting within their powers with the said order. This court is faced with two Questions in this regard; firstly, whether the Magistrate had power/judicial authority to give voice samples to the Government Analyst, and secondly, whether the compulsion of the Accused Appellants to give voice samples to the Government Analyst amounts to a breach of the rule against self-incrimination and thereby caused a miscarriage of Justice.

Section 124 based on which the Magistrate's order has been issued is as follows:

> "Every Magistrate to whom application is made in that behalf shall assist the conduct of an investigation by making and issuing appropriate orders and processes of court, and may, in particular hold, or authorize the holding of, an identification parade for the purpose of ascertaining the identity of the offender, and may for such purpose require a suspect or any other person to participate in such parade, allow a witness to make his identification from a concealed position and make or cause to be made a record of the proceedings of such parade."

In terms of the above, the Accused Appellants argue that the scope of this provision is restricted to the purposes of empowering the Magistrate to hold identification parades, as supported by the fact that the only amendment made to this section pertains to the conduct of such identification parades. Further, it is the position of the Accused that this is supported by Section 123 and the amendments thereof.

Section 123 as amended states,

> "(1) Where any officer in charge of a police station is of opinion that it is necessary to do so for the purpose of an investigation, he may cause any finger, palm or foot impression or impression of any part of the body of any person suspected of the offence under investigation or any specimen of blood, saliva, urine, hair or finger nail or any scraping from a finger nail of such person to be taken with his consent.
>
> (2) Where the person referred to in subsection (1) does not consent to such impression, specimen or scraping being taken, such police officer may apply to the Magistrate's Court within whose jurisdiction the investigation is being made for an order authorizing a police officer to take such impression, specimen or scraping and such person shall comply with such order.
> (3) Any officer in charge of a police station may, where it is necessary for the purpose of the investigation to compare any handwriting, cause a specimen of the handwriting of any person to be taken with his consent.

> (4) Where such person refuses to give a specimen of his handwriting the officer in charge of the police station may apply to the Magistrate's Court within whose jurisdiction the investigation is being made for an order requiring such person to give a specimen of his handwriting, and such person shall comply with such order."

The Accused Appellants claim that the entry of "blood" to sub section (1) above by Section 3 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Amendment) Act No 14 of 2005 supports the position that should the Act empower the magistrate to order the taking of voice samples, the same would have been included in express terms as was done in 2005. As such, they argue that the lack of express authorization is an implication of intentional exclusion of this authority.

However, in interpreting the above provision it is rather apparent that all specimen, impression or scraping; finger, palm or foot impression, impression of any part of the body, specimen of blood, saliva, urine, hair, finger nail, any scraping from a finger nail, or handwriting of any suspect, all relate to identification of the suspect in the course of an investigation, by comparison of samples found in relation to the relevant offence at the scene. As such the purpose of the voice samples directly corresponds to such purpose.

Most importantly, Section 124 in essence provides for the Magistrate to "assist the conduct of an investigation by making and issuing appropriate orders and processes of court" while the portion allowing for the conduct of identification "...and may, in particular..." simply indicates that the Magistrate can also hold or authorize the holding of identification parades "for the purpose of ascertaining the identity of the offender."

Interpretation of this section at such face value does not provide any assistance to crime investigations . Firstly, it must be noted that the primary purpose is not only holding identification parades but rather to provide judicial assistance for the conduct of investigations using the powers vested in the Magistrate to issue processes of court, which is a power neither lightly granted, nor vested in the investigators themselves. As such, this provision allows providing such assistance not provided for under the preceding provisions, to assist identification of suspects. The provision for identification parades is therefore rather an extension of this same power rather than a restriction of it.

The High Court at bar has also considered Section 7 of the Act which states

> As regards matters of criminal procedure for which special provisions may not have been made by this Code or by any other law for the time being in force such procedure > as the justice of the case may require and as is not inconsistent with this Code may be followed.

Considering the above, the taking of voice samples is indeed a procedure which the Code nor any other law expressly provides for, however as discussed above, it is in no way inconsistent with the Code and is aimed at achieving justice as is required in the instant case.

However, the Accused Appellants raise a secondary question whether the above order to provide evidence would potentially incriminate them on positive identification would amount to a violation of the rule against self-incrimination. The Evidence Ordinance Section 120(6) on Competency of witnesses provide that the accused shall be a competent witness in his own behalf, accordingly, the accused cannot be compelled to provide evidence against himself.

In Sri Lanka, this has been tested previously in Rex v Suppiah (1931) Cey. Law Recorder 31, where the accused was compelled by an order of the Magistrate to provide impressions of fingerprints, which cited an observation made in a case before a Full bench of the High Court of Burma, King Emperor v Tun Hlaing (1923) I.L.R. 1 Ran. 759, F.B. wherein it was remarked that:

> "The Court was not in effect compelling him to provide evidence against himself, since what really constituted the evidence, viz, the ridges of his thumb, are not provided by him any more than the features of his countenance"

Further the case of King v. Francis Perera 9 NLR 122 was cited, wherein a sample of handwriting was taken on an order of the Magistrate. In this instance, Middleton J was of the following view,

> "It seems to me that the writing of these words and letter was merely the creation of facts, which standing alone were of no probative value, but which, when coupled or compared with some other facts in the case, might suggest an inference one way or the other, and until that comparison or conjunction was made, no inference arose."

The above view was concurred by Wendt J who stated thus:

> "They are not, the embodiment in language of any facts or opinions. The mere fact that they suggest an inference of guilt is not enough"

In considering the instant case in light of the above, it is apparent that providing samples of his voice in conversation and via reading a transcript does not by itself amount to a confession and is merely a matter of providing a sample of the characteristics inherent to a person's voice, as opposed to posing questions in regard to the contents of the conversations at such stage of investigation. The evidence of the recordings is of relevance at the comparison of the samples and on arriving at a conclusion as to identity of the suspect. It is primarily of relevance that certain communications, of whatever content, were constantly recurring between the parties at hand. The providing of voice samples to arrive at conclusions on scientific basis is a discovery of relevant fact and does not amount to a confession in the sense of violating rule against self-incrimination. To interpret it in such manner negates the functionality of Sections 123 and 124 as has been utilized since the enactment of these provisions. In the instant case this evidence is solely of corroborative value.

As neither of the above circumstances pertain to Voice Samples, the case of Ritesh Sinha v State of Uttar Pradesh (2013) 2 SCC 357 cited cases including that of State of Bombay v Kathi Kalu Oghad (1961) AIR 1808 in which the following observations were made by the then Chief Justice B.P Sinha:

> "…Self-incrimination must mean conveying information based upon the personal knowledge of the person giving the information and cannot include merely the mechanical process of producing documents in court which may throw a light on any of the points in controversy, but which do not contain any statement of the accused based on his personal knowledge.
> In order that a testimony by an accused person may be said to have been self- incriminatory, the compulsion of which comes within the prohibition, of the constitutional provision, it must be of such a character that by itself it should have the tendency of incriminating the accused, if riot also of actually doing so. In other words, it should be a statement which makes the case against the accused person at least probable, considered by itself. A specimen handwriting or signature or finger impressions by themselves are no testimony at all, being wholly innocuous because they are unchangeable except in rare cases where the ridges of the fingers or the style of writing have been tampered with. They are only materials for comparison in order to lend assurance to the Court that its inference based on other pieces of evidence is reliable..."

Applying the above to the instant case, the compelling of the accused to provide voice samples cannot be considered self-incriminatory as it does not make the case against the accused probable by itself, rather it is used upon positive identification only in conjunction with other reliable evidence against the accused. Accordingly, the provided voice samples do not amount to a confession and is not self-incriminatory in nature. It is simply the process whereby facts pertaining to the identity of the accused can be ascertained.

Additionally, the Accused Appellants in their submissions raised a question of the compulsion to provide voice samples being a violation of the rights of the Petitioner. However, as in the Ritesh Singh case, in the specific context of the instant case, the position in Sri Lanka is that the right to privacy cannot be construed as absolute. The suspect under investigation must bow down to compelling public interest and the Magistrate's power to order him to give a sample of his voice for the purpose of investigation of a crime. Such power has been conferred on a Magistrate in order to exercise his jurisdiction vested in him under the aforementioned provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act.

Considering all above, it is the opinion of this court that the Magistrate had power to give voice samples to the Government Analyst and the compulsion of the Accused Appellants to give voice samples is not a breach of the rule against self-incrimination nor has it caused a miscarriage of Justice or violation of their rights.

Is "Voice Analysis" in the manner conducted by Witness Gunathilaka, Assistant Examiner of Questioned Documents of the Government Analyst Department a "Science"?

It must be noted that this question of law at hand is not solely whether Voice Identification itself is a science, but rather whether the Voice Identification in the manner conducted by Witness Gunathilaka qualifies it as a science.

Since the question whether witness Gunathilaka is an expert in Voice Identification has been dealt with, we may consider the circumstances under which the evidence of this witness becomes relevant to the instant matter. As per Section 45 of the Evidence Ordinance, opinions of experts are relevant in certain instances. It is as follows:

> "When the Court has to form an opinion as to foreign law, or of science, or art, or as to identity or genuineness of handwriting or finger impressions, palm impressions or foot impressions, the opinions upon that point of persons specially skilled in such foreign law, science, or art, or in questions as to identity or genuineness of handwriting or finger impressions, palm impressions or foot impressions, are relevant.
> Such persons are called experts. "

Accordingly, an expert is a "person specially skilled in such science." The Accused Appellants have stated in their Written submissions that by the exclusion of any reference to "voice" in the above provision, the legislature never intended to provide for matters of Voice Identification. As has been observed in the Judgment of the High Court, it must be noted that this provision was enacted in 1895. It is rather apparent that the science of "Audio Forensics" was not developed at the time of enactment of the Evidence Ordinance. Despite a lack of substantial amendments, this provision is still operable on the basis that the provision does not restrict the interpretation of what may amount to a science or an art, thus leaving room for the evolution of the same based on available technology, modern developments with the passage of time. The approach of courts has been aptly demonstrated in Singho Appu v the King (1944) 46 NLR 49, which stated thus;

> "… "Science" and "art" in section 45 of the Evidence Ordinance are to be construed widely"

It must also be noted that all areas of expertise expressly provided for in this provision pertain to the ascertainment of identity through the use of science. This has been the basis for leading evidence on many other matters of which expert evidence is admissible in Sri Lankan Courts, that solely fall within the ambit of "science", despite lack of direct mention in Section 45.

Further, as per illustration c of Section 45,

> "The question is, whether a certain document was written by A. Another document is produced which is proved or admitted to have been written by A. The opinion of experts on the question whether the two documents were written by the same person or by different persons, are relevant."

In terms of the above illustration, it is apparent that Section 45 stands to provide for expert evidence on identification. In the instant case, the evidence of the Expert Witness has only been used by the High Court to establish that the speakers in the recorded conversations were in fact the Accused Appellants. It appears that the question whether the voices of the speakers in the recordings as stated by the Complainant were the same voices of the Accused Appellants as per the voice samples provided by them. It is rather similar to the question whether the handwriting is of the same or different persons as raised in the illustration above. Considering all, in the event Voice Identification is considered a science in the manner conducted by the Expert Witness, expert evidence of the same is admissible under Section 45 of the Evidence Ordinance.

In the matter of assessing whether Voice Identification in the manner conducted by the expert witness is a science, the factor of whether the procedure followed during analysis is 'scientific' is of relevance. The High Court considered the fact that Voice Identification has been a developing area of research in Forensic science which has been evolving since World War II. The understanding behind this area of research has drastically evolved since its early days leading to higher levels of accuracy and many more available reliable methods to achieve its objective. The Witness has explained how technological advancements have brought format comparison on par with DNA and handwriting analysis.

As already discussed in this Judgment, prosecution in the instant case had heavily relied on the identification of the two Accused-Appellants through their voice, and as already referred to above, PW 41 Dulani Lalithya Gunathilake testified before the High Court at Bar regarding her expertise on the matter and her findings with regard to the examination conducted on the voice samples submitted before her.

The High court Judgment reproduces at length, the basis of such analysis as described by witness Gunathilake in her evidence and the process utilized to analyze the impugned recordings. Witness Gunathilake in her evidence states specific factors considered in Voice Identification.

The witness described the physiological process through which voice is produced and perceived by a human being. This has been done to explain how this field is being treated as a science. A voice is produced by a stream of air starting at the lungs and moving through the larynx vibrating the vocal cords in it. The vibrations are released as sound waves. The sound waves would differ on factors such as the thickness of the walls of the larynx, the length of the vocal cords, their shape, and the amount of air that flows through it. The sound waves that take different shapes on the above factors would be reflected as 'formants' in the analysis.

The witness also explained that there are four formants in the Human Voice (Named 1,2,3 and 4) Out of the above four formants, the human ear can only perceive the 1st and 2nd formants. The 3rd and 4th formants out of the above are unique to each individual just like handwriting and DNA and is not affected by imitation. The witness explained that the analysis of the above formants is therefore accepted as a science.

In terms of the steps involved in the scientific analysis as conducted by the witness, the steps as described were firstly that of "Critical Listening". Critical Listening is explained as a focused form of listening where small segments are listened to repeatedly. Qualities such as primary frequency, pitch, volume, duration of periods of silence of the speaker, speed of speech, dynamics, the stress put on words/ enunciation of words, accent, words frequently used by the speaker, geographical variations in speech, and stammering are perceived and analyzed at this stage. As explained a voice sample is listened to over one hundred times and Spectrogram Analysis is also conducted to identify the 'formants' in the voices at this stage.

The Second Step is the extraction of voice samples from the individuals in question. Having a normal conversation with the subjects is done first in this process. While basic aspects of the voice are checked, the subjects are later given a transcript to read out. The transcripts are extractions from the recordings that are produced for analysis. The portions from the transcripts are compared with the same portions of the questioned recordings when doing the formant analysis.

The witness further opined that the next expected development in this field would be “automatic comparison.” Even though such a software is used nowadays during the course of analysis, it is said not to be accurate enough to express an opinion based on that alone, Therefore the comparison is not solely based on the automatic analysis giving a margin for errors. The final comparison results are also subjected to review. The witness also explained how her report, in this case, has been subjected to review and agreed upon.

In addition to the above, she has stated that she has taken care to observe any background noises that would affect the analysis. Other factors considered had included whether the voice provided for analysis is a computer-generated voice which is evaluated during the Critical listening stage and through observations done during this phase and she was satisfied that no editing has been done.

The witness has discussed the extraction process of the recordings and the obtaining of the voice samples from witness which will be considered in due course in the analysis of the relevant questions of law. In Cross examination, she was extensively questioned on the validity of the Spectrographic analysis, to which she provided substantial responses with an explanation to the effect that the Spectrographic approach is supplemented by Critical Listening, automatic analysis, and review.

In terms of Audio recorded Evidence and Identification of an accused by voice, such evidence has been admissible in Sri Lanka for well over half a century. The High Court cites and relies on the Case of Abu Bakr v The Queen (1953) 54 NLR 566. In this case, the prosecution adduced evidence to the effect that the incriminating speech in question, which allegedly attempted to promote feelings of ill-will and hostility between different classes of the King's subjects, was electronically recorded, and subsequently reproduced, by means of an instrument and that when it was reproduced it was taken down in writing by an officer of the Criminal Investigation Department, named Wijesena, and that the document containing the text of the speech as taken down by him. The said Wijesena gave evidence, identified the document, and read it aloud to the jury. One of the grounds of appeal is that this document was inadmissible. In this case, an element of Voice Identification was discussed. Gunasekere J considered the evidence reproduced by electronic means to be admissible under S.11 of the evidence Ordinance under the below premise:

"There was evidence before the jury, about the working of the wire recorder, upon which it was open to them to hold that the instrument could accurately record a speech and reproduce it; ….

The police sergeant who had operated the instrument at the time of the speeches gave evidence to the effect that it was he who operated it later to reproduce the sounds recorded on P1 so that Wijesena might take down the appellant's speech as reproduced; and that he identified the appellant's voice on that occasion. Another police sergeant, too, gave evidence to the effect that he was present on both occasions and that he too identified the voice that was reproduced as the voice of the appellant.

The speech that is alleged to have been reproduced in Wijesena's hearing by means of the wire recorder is a fact that, in connection with the other facts alleged by the prosecution witnesses regarding the making of a speech by the appellant and the recording and reproduction of it, makes it highly probable that the appellant made a speech in the same terms on the occasion in question. Therefore, if it is not a fact that is otherwise relevant, it is relevant under section 11 of the Evidence Ordinance; which provides that facts not otherwise relevant are relevant if by themselves or in connection with other facts they make the existence of any fact in issue or relevant fact highly probable. ….. Therefore, even if the document itself was inadmissible there was before the jury admissible oral evidence of what was heard by Wijesena, from which they could infer what was said by the appellant and was recorded on the spool of wire P1.

As such the use of voice recording for the purpose of identification of an individual is not entirely a foreign concept to Sri Lankan Courts. The above case was cited for further discussion of this matter in the case of Karunaratne V. The Queen (1966) 69 NLR 10 concerning a wire recording of a telephone conversation in which the police accused a solicitation of a bribe as inducement for the performance of an official function. The evidence was to be led in the form of the transcript of this conversation, however, the original recording itself was played in court. Hon. Justice T. S. Fernando, J observed:

"It was next urged on behalf of the appellant that, before the tape- recorded evidence was acted upon, the trial judge should have considered the evidence of an expert the defence called at the trial to prove, inter alia, that (1) there are dangers in attempting to identify speakers by their voices as relayed through tape-recorders and (2) the dangers attendant upon such identification are greater in a case where what is relayed is a telephone conversation, and that too a taped telephone conversation. I think the criticism made in this regard is just."

However, the omission of the same was not fatal in the above case owing to ample surrounding evidence to substantiate the charge, as the Judges believed the wire recorded evidence was relevant principally as corroborative evidence touching identity. As evidence was led extensively on the matter of the margin of error in voice identification as well as the actual risk of using the evidence, we find that the circumstances mentioned in Karunaratne case do not apply against the admissibility of the recorded evidence in the instant case.

However, both law and science have developed exponentially since the above decisions. The above cases referred to witnesses simply identifying a suspect by voice and did not delve into determining the admissibility of evidence as a science nor consider expert evidence based on the same. Accordingly, the evidence of Voice Identification has predominantly been used in the past where the witness is familiar with the voice of the perpetrator.

Thus, in discussing whether the methodology used in the instant case is recognized in courts of law as a "Science", we may turn to available research and determinations in other Jurisdictions.

In terms of available research, in delving into the development of this field of science visible speech as a quantitative and legible form of speech was propounded by Melville Bell, and continued by his son, Alexander Graham Bell, and was furthered by the efforts of Bell Telephone Laboratories. The development of this technology was initially for the benefit of the deaf community, but the use of the Spectrograph and related technology was later rated a war project given the military interests in this technology. The technology of "voiceprints", coined with obvious reference to fingerprints, for the purpose of Voice Identification was furthered during this time and was later controversially used in forensic applications by engineer Lawrence Kersta. Others soon discovered that context dependence is important to perform identification and an aural perspective was suggested to increase the accuracy of identification, which has been supported by research subsequently. Accordingly, the development of the methodology as it stands today predominantly focuses on the use of four general approaches including the Auditory Approach, the Spectrographic approach, the Acoustic-phonetic approach, and the Automatic Approach.

In determining whether the utilized procedure is scientific, the High Court has relied on that of Daubert v Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals Inc. 509 U.S. 579. This case was preceded by the case of Frye V. United States, 293 F. 1013 (D.C. Cir. 1923), which had set the standard of admissibility of expert opinion based on a scientific technique. In determining the admissibility of novel scientific evidence, it was famously stated that:

> "Just when a scientific principle or discovery crosses the line between the experimental and demonstrable stages is difficult to define. Somewhere in this twilight zone the evidential force of the principle must be recognized, and while the courts will go a long way in admitting expert testimony deduced from a well-recognized scientific principle or discovery, the thing from which the deduction is made must be sufficiently established to have gained general acceptance in the particular field in which it belongs"
>

This above "general acceptance test" was applied in determining the admissibility of expert evidence on spectrographic voice identification in many instances, including that of US v Smith 869 F.2d 348 (7th Circuit 1989). In this instance, the court was faced with a unique situation of identical twins who had committed financial fraud. The women were indicted and tried together for posing as bank employees and having telephoned banks authorizing them to make wire transfers of non-existent funds. Given that identity was a core dispute at the trial the government had led evidence provided by a Voice Identification Expert who utilized the Spectrographic approach to determine which of the twins had made certain phone calls. It was argued on behalf of the defence that Voice Identification did not pass this test of general acceptance. However, based on sufficient evidence of the reliability of this technique being adduced at trial by a description of the principles behind and the technique used to make spectrographs, as well as the technique being unlikely to mislead the jury, The evidence was held to be admissible.

However, in the case of Daubert V. Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals Inc. 509 U.S. 579, as has been relied on by the High Court, it was held that, faced with expert scientific testimony, the trial judge, must make a preliminary assessment of whether the testimony's underlying reasoning or methodology is scientifically valid and can be properly applied to the facts at hand. Many considerations will bear on the inquiry, including whether the theory or technique in question can be (and has been) tested, whether it has been subjected to peer review and publication, its known or potential error rate and the existence and maintenance of standards controlling its operation, and whether it has attracted widespread acceptance within a relevant scientific community. The inquiry is a flexible one, and its focus must be solely on principles and methodology, not on the conclusions that they generate. Throughout, the judge should also be mindful of other applicable rules.

While it is specified that this is not an exhaustive list, the considerations therein mentioned are sound in assessing whether the scientific method is sound, beyond simply the "General Acceptance" test of Frye.

In the instant case, the Witness has provided information as to the above. She has expounded on the acceptance of this science within the relevant scientific community of Forensic Audio Analysis, and the methods utilized are supported by current scientific findings in this field of science. Additionally, the software and devices used and their acceptance as suitable for the purposes used, and she has provided a clear answer as to the margin of error and potential risks, including the methods used to mitigate errors as far as possible through using a combination of multiple standard methods. As has been aptly noted, the inquiry is a flexible one wherein the methodology used in each science must be considered for its own merit as opposed to a strict checklist to be satisfied. The expert witness has conducted this examination with careful attention on the process and has not hesitated in indicating instances where she could not give conclusive answers, giving her reasoning for such instances. Additionally, her findings are not merely her own, but have been reviewed and approved by competent individuals in her department.

In terms of the error rate, a hundred percent infallibility or unanimity is not a precondition for general acceptance of scientific evidence under our law. Allowing for substantial technological advancement since the decision in the case of U.S. Vs. Smith (Supra) in terms of the Spectrograph analysis alone as it was in that time, the error rates as admitted and discussed in that case, prove that there is a certain margin of error as has been elaborated by numerous studies. However, it is also mentioned that many difficulties encountered in Voice identification using tapes not recorded under laboratory conditions will increase the error rate of false eliminations. As such, instead of results in more false identifications, these variations would result in more false eliminations, doing away with prejudice that may be caused to the accused by the conditions of the recording.

In the instant case this is assisted by the element of the accent and speech style of the two accused, in speaking in English which is not in fact their first language. The 2nd Accused has admitted that he is not particularly comfortable or well versed in speaking English, which amounts to his individual speaking style and accent being much more so pronounced as opposed to comparing the samples of persons whose style and manner of speaking would be easier to replicate. As in Archbold on Criminal Pleading Evidence and Practice 14-72, on Expert Evidence of Voice Identification by personal characteristics, the advantage of expert evidence is that the expert can draw up an overall profile of an individual's speech patterns, in which the significance of each parameter is assessed individually, and which will be backed up with instrumental analysis and reference research.

Additionally, admission of evidence of novel sciences for the purposes of identification is not a foreign experience for Sri Lankan Courts. For instance, the leading of evidence as to identification through DNA typing and fingerprints in the Sajeewa Alias Ukkuwa and Others V. The Attorney-General (Hokandara Case) (2004) 2 SLR 263 as early as 1999 made history as the first case to consider DNA evidence in Sri Lanka. Thereafter, the use of DNA evidence as corroborative evidence in the case of The Attorney-General V. Potta Naufer and Others (Ambepitiya Murder Case) (2007) 2 SLR 144, with extensive elaboration of the methodology and science supporting the use of DNA typing, are both instances of leading expert evidence for the purposes of identification. Given the technological advancement, especially with the use of personal devices as smartphones and personal computers, the outlook on technological evidence must be altered significantly, making room for modern realities which could not have been contemplated by legislators at the time of the enactment of certain legislation effecting such evidence. It is evident that the evolution of technology has outpaced the parallel development of law, and oft it has been demonstrated in cases as the above, that practical necessity being demonstrated in cases, leads to the opinions of courts preceding and influencing eventual legislative amendments encompassing such opinions.

The identification of individuals, earlier being a selected few methods has undeniably advanced during the current millennia. For instance, the development of biometric technology for identification, including methods as facial and retinal recognition, have drastically increased in accuracy.

However, in terms of legal admissibility of evidence based on novel sciences, it is entirely dependent on factors that include those considered above and is undeniably subjective to each individual circumstance, the science concerned, the specific methodology used, and the error margin involved. In the instant case, applying all the above tests and taking the expert evidence into account, with due regard to the methodology used in this specific circumstance, we find that “Voice Analysis” in the manner conducted by Witness Gunathilake, is in fact a “Science” which falls under Section 45 of the Evidence Ordinance.

Was it correct for the trial court to have concluded that Witness Gunathilake of the Government Analyst Department was an “Expert” on “Voice Identification” for the purposes of S.45 of the Evidence Ordinance?

In considering the question of whether Witness Gunathilake is an expert in the field of Voice Identification, her credentials which have been admitted during the examination of the witness before the High court are noteworthy.

She has performed over sixty voice analysis and issued Analyst Reports for similar purposes albeit never having testified before court prior to this occasion. She was functioning in the capacity of Assistant Government Examiner of Questioned Documents and had listed her basic qualifications. In respect of qualifications in the area of Forensic Audio Analysis, she has specialized in this area during the training she received through a project conducted by KOICA Institute (Korea International Cooperation Agency) through which she has participated in a training conducted by four senior scientists at the National Forensic Service (NFS) situated in Wongju, South Korea. Thereafter, a further training was provided on her return to Sri Lanka. The witness explains that the equipment required for this form of testing was donated by KOICA and that she is the most senior officer in regard to Audio Forensic Analysis in her Department and has provided reports since 2017.

In terms of who may qualify as an expert, the High Court has relied on the definition provided by Black's Law Dictionary as > "Someone who, through education or experience, has developed skill of knowledge in a particular subject, so that he or she may form an opinion that will assist the fact finder"

And "expert evidence" as provided by the same source is as follows:

> "Evidence about a scientific, technical, professional or other specialized issue given by a person qualified to testify because of familiarity with the subject or special training in the field"

In the case of Charles Perera V. Motha 65 NLR 294 Hon. Basnayake, C. J. expressed his opinion on the expert witnesses to the effect that:

> The standing of the expert, his skill and experience, the amount and nature of the materials available for comparison, the care and discrimination with which he has approached the question on which he is expressing his opinion, the extent to which he has called in aid the advances of modern science to demonstrate to the Court the soundness of his opinion, are all matters which will assist the Court in assessing the weight to be attached to the fact of his opinion. The cross-examination of the " expert " by the opposing side, where it is properly directed, would also assist the Court in determining what weight it should attach to the fact declared relevant by section 45.

Additionally, in cases such as Solicitor General V. Fernando 1965 67 NLR 159 it was considered that the precise character of the question upon which expert evidence is required has to be taken into account when deciding whether the qualifications of a person entitles him to be regarded as a competent expert. In the situation at hand given that the witness is the expert on Audio Analysis in Sri Lanka and the character of the question pertains to Voice Identification, which is an area she has received special training in, she qualifies as an expert in the instant case on the questions directed to her.

Her credibility is in no way affected by the lack of previous appearances before a court of law. As considered in Mitharadasa Fernando V. S.I of Police, Kalubowila 1961 63 NLR 422*. The fact that a person has provided evidence as an expert 250 instances prior, does not qualify him as an expert in the subject matter. Further, as per Stork I.P Vs. Perera (1948) 38 C.L.W 80*, once the necessary degree of skill is conceded it does not matter how seldom that skill has been displayed in the witness box. Accordingly, the real expertise, training and methodology utilized by the witness is of more important than the number of times a person may or may not have testified before court. This was considered in the field of Voice Identification in the US 7th Circuit Court in US V. Smith 869 F,2d 348 (7th Cir.1989), in leading evidence of an expert who had not previously testified as a voice identification expert in a court of law.

The expert evidence of novel sciences is a question posed to Courts even during cases as Singho Appu V. The King (Supra) in which expert evidence was led regarding footprints, Hon Howard, C.J, considered that;

> "Here again the testimony against the accused did not rest solely on the evidence of foot-prints… it would appear that the learned Judge in the present case was entitled to construe the words "science" or "art" so widely as to include within its ambit the testimony of a person who had studied foot-prints. If he was satisfied that such person was capable of distinguishing and identifying foot-prints, he was also entitled to rely on his testimony"

In such cases, it was made apparent that in addition to the wider construction of Section 45, evidence of such science or art can be admitted if the Court is satisfied that the person testifying regarding the same is a person capable of distinguishing and identifying matters of such nature, Applying the same to the instant case, in perusing the material before this court I find that the Witness has received requisite training and is competent in the field in which she professes to be an expert and she has continually practiced the same in previous instances albeit never having testified before court on the same. The witness has provided extensive and clear answers to the questions posed to her in her area of expertise in addition to a clear report of her investigation. She has expressed the basis of her having formed opinions with direct reference to the methodologies utilized by her in the conduct of her investigation. Further, she has not hesitated in answering with clarity of the instances she could not deduce any matter with certainty. The witness has maintained a professional demeanor, standing firmly in cross examination and has presented her opinion with great confidence in an unwavering manner. The cross examination has not revealed any matters fatal to her findings nor refuted her position through other expert evidence.

For the reasons stated hereinbefore we hold that it is correct for the trial court to have concluded that witness Gunathilake of the Government Analyst Department is an "Expert" on "Voice Identification" for the purposes of S.45 of the Evidence Ordinance.

What amounts to "Safe Custody" as per Section 4 (1)(d) of the Evidence (Special provisions) Act? Were the Voice recordings in "Safe custody," when the recorded conversations were in a mobile phone, which was in the custody of the virtual Complainant? Has the fact that the voice recordings were in the custody of the Virtual Complainant, resulted in the recordings becoming inadmissible?

Information stored on digital devices can pose a number of evidential issues for the courts. This is largely given that rules of evidence contained in the Evidence Ordinance evolved long before the advent of modern electronic equipment and computers, and those rules have not always proved adaptable to evidence emanating from such modern devices. This has necessitated the introduction of legislation with a view of facilitating the proper use of such evidence. The Evidence (Special Provisions) Act No. 14 of 1995 has been enacted in Sri Lanka to provide for the admissibility of audio-visual recordings, and of information contained in statements produced by computers in civil and criminal proceedings.

Section 3 of the Evidence Ordinance has confined its definition of "evidence" to oral and documentary evidence. However, despite the non-inclusion of real evidence within the definition of "evidence" in Section 3, our courts have admitted real evidence also. The introduction of the Evidence (Special Provisions) Act No. 14 of 1995, has now enabled a party to produce in any proceeding where direct oral evidence of a fact would be admissible, any contemporaneous recording or reproduction thereof. (Section 4 (1) of the Act).

Section 4 (1)(d) of the Evidence (Special Provisions) Act reads as follows,

> "In any proceeding where direct oral evidence of a fact would be admissible, any contemporaneous recording reproduction thereof, tending to establish that fact shall be admissible as evidence of that fact. If it is shown that-

a) .....

c) .....

d) the recording or reproduction was not altered or tampered with in any manner whatsoever during or after the making of such recording or reproduction, or that it was kept in safe custody at all material times, during or after the making of such recording or reproduction and that sufficient precautions were taken to prevent the possibility of such recording or reproduction being altered or tampered with, during the period in which It was in such custody."

(Emphasis added)

There was no dispute that the voice recordings relevant to the instant case is a contemporaneous recording in terms of Section 4(1) of the Act. This is presumably because the said voice recording was recorded using a mobile phone.

The main thrust of the arguments put forward by the Accused Appellants is whether the voice recordings were in safe custody while in the possession of the Virtual Complainant. Section 4(1)(d) of the Act (above mentioned) is relevant in this regard.

Safe Custody is the safekeeping of important documents and valuables, in the instant case, the voice recordings. It is important to maintain the chain of custody to preserve the integrity of the evidence and prevent it from contamination, which can alter the state of the evidence. If not preserved, the evidence presented in Court might be challenged and ruled inadmissible. The chain of custody in digital forensics can also be referred to as the forensic link, the paper trail, or the chronological documentation of electronic evidence. It indicates the collection, sequence of control, transfer, and analysis. It also documents each person who handled the evidence, the date/time it was collected or transferred, and the purpose for the transfer.

In order to preserve digital evidence, the chain of custody should span from the first point of data collection, through examination, analysis, reporting, and the time of presentation to the Courts. This is necessary to avoid the possibility of any suggestion that the evidence has been altered or tampered with, in any manner. While it may have been handled correctly during the forensic process, if the evidence is then handed to the Court in a way that then leaves it open to alteration, perhaps by altering the timestamps or metadata associated, it may then be damaged. Hence it is important to establish that the recordings were in safe custody at all material times and that sufficient precautions were taken to prevent even a mere possibility of tampering in order to ensure the authenticity of the recordings. In the instant case, the chain of custody pertaining to the persons in whose possession the evidence was kept, it can be observed that the chain of custody has not been broken as the recordings were constantly in possession of the Complainant until it was handed over to the Government Analyst and there have been no third-party interferences.

The Virtual Complainant has recorded multiple telephone conversations which had taken place between the 1st and 2nd Accused-Appellant and himself during the years 2017-2018 on his two mobile phones (iPhone 6 and iPhone 7). The issue raised by the Accused Appellants is that the alleged mobile phones used to record the conversations had not been tendered to the investigators and that the Complainant traveled to Bangalore, India with the mobile phones in his possession. Therefore, the Accused Appellants argue that they were not in safe custody when they were in the possession of the Virtual Complainant.

As per the Complainant's explanation, this was because he was a businessman and needed the use of the said mobile phones for his day-to-day activities. The Complainant admits that he did not hand over the said mobile phones to the investigators but had directly handed them over to the Government Analyst much later. In the meantime, he had traveled to India several times while possessing mobile phones in his custody and had copied all the recordings onto his computer in Bangalore. He further admits that he had retained custody of the phones for 5 days before the recordings made on 23/02/2018 were copied to the computers of the investigators and for over 5 months before the recordings made on 05/09/2017 were copied to the computers of the investigators.

As per the evidence submitted, the Accused Appellant argue that the said mobile phones had been handed over temporarily to the Government Analyst much later on 17/05/2018 and the same was not sealed. It is the contention of the Accused Appellant that the Complainant had ample opportunity to tamper with them prior to handing them over to the Government Analyst.

However, in the Indian case of S. Pratap Singh V. State of Punjab, AIR 1964 SC 72, it was held that, tape recorded talks are admissible in evidence and the simple fact that such type of evidence can be easily tampered with certainly could not be a ground to reject such evidence as inadmissible or refuse to consider it, because there are few documents and possibly no piece of evidence, which could not be tampered with.

The Accused relying on Indian Law further argues that the fact that the recordings were not sealed "naturally gives rise to the argument that the recording medium might have been tampered with before it was replayed."

In the Court of Appeal case Abeyagunawardane V. Samoon and Others [2007] 1 Sri L.R the video cassette lay for two years in a dark room, which was not padlocked, nor the envelope that contained the video cassette sealed, as in the case of other productions, and accessible to many others. Hon. Imam J stated that,

> "The evidence of P.S. Karunathilaka in my view clearly establishes that the requirements as set out in section 4(1)(d) of the aforesaid Evidence (Special Provisions) Act No. 14 of 1995 were not complied with. Section 4(2) of the aforesaid Act makes it clear that the video cassette could be admissible in evidence only if the conditions set out in section 4(1) are satisfied."

In the above case, it was decided that the video cassette was not admissible as it did not satisfy the requirements set out in Section 4(1)(d) as it was easily accessible to anyone for two whole years and thus could have been tampered with. However, in the instant case, although the devices were not sealed when it was handed over to the Government Analyst, the recordings were on the personal mobile phones of the Complainant. As such, the circumstances of the instant case differ from that of the aforementioned case as it was always on his person even when he traveled to India and was never left unattended unlike in the case of Abeyagunawardane.

Furthermore, the Complainant had established the fact that the two mobile phones were secured with Personal Identification Numbers (PIN) only known to him and it was only he who had access to the phones. In mobile devices, the PIN acts as a password preventing persons from gaining unauthorized access to a personal device. This is a numeric code that must be entered each time the device is started. Unlike a video cassette, a mobile phone is much more advanced in technology and has many security features such as PIN codes or biometric scanners which prevents unauthorized access.

Due to the development of security countermeasures in personal devices, such as smartphones are no longer easily accessible to outsiders. As per Paul Bischoff, who is privacy advocate at Comparitech, iPhones are considered to have a highly secure operating system. Disk encryption is enabled by default, apps from the App Store go through a stricter vetting process, and Apple does not gather users' personal details for advertising purposes. Hence, third party access through hacking or malware is minimal in the devices used by the Complainant.

In the instant case, it is vital to establish that the recording or reproduction was not altered or tampered with in any manner whatsoever during or after the making of such recording or reproduction, or that it was kept in safe custody at all material times, during or after the making of such recording or reproduction and that sufficient precautions were taken to prevent the possibility of such recording or reproduction being altered or tampered with, during the period in which it was in such custody.

As per the testimony of the expert witness Gunathilake, they have subjected the recordings to an initial investigation. She further pointed out that they did not subject the recordings to an authenticity analysis as they were not requested to do so. However, upon the initial investigation they were able to identify that they were not computer-generated voices thus, there was no need to go for an authenticity analysis.

However, they did subject the said recordings to a process of Critical Listening. This involves a thorough breakdown of both foreground and background sounds through repetitive listening. They had scanned the recordings to identify any viruses, then made a duplicate copy of it to work with, in order not to harm the original file. During the initial investigation of the copy, they first identify whether the voices on the recording are computer generated voices. Next, they pay attention to the background noises to see if there have been any changes to the background or if the flow of the conversation has changed. During this process they had listened to recordings repeatedly in order to identify if there has been any editing done to the recording, during which they had not identified any discrepancies. It is submitted that on a preliminary basis there were no indications of alteration shedding doubt on the authenticity of the recordings that would have indicated the need for an Authentication Analysis.

Upon being questioned on whether any mimicry of voices can be identified during the initial investigation, witness Gunathilake explained that only the tone we hear will be different. No matter how hard a person tries to change their voice only the basic pitch can be changed, and the person can still be identified through the process utilized for identification and on the above basis it was observed that the recordings have not been altered or tampered with.

On a secondary level, the Accused-Appellants argue that the presence of a “modified date” on the properties of the said recordings show that they have been modified by the Complainant. As per witness Gunathilake, what appears as the date modified means the last date the file has been modified or the content of the file has been changed. This can be changed or edited by anyone and therefore cannot be considered during a forensic investigation. As she further explained, the date modified can change due to saving the file after any small changes done to it or if the file is copied as a VCD – then both the modified date and created date will change to the date it was created. This can even change if one copies the file to a laptop, in which event the date of the file may change to the date and time of the operating system on the laptop. Therefore, as per witness Gunathilake, the date modified cannot be relied on in identifying whether the file has been tampered with.

Thirdly, the Accused Appellants relying on the testimony of witness Gunathilake, argued that the voice recordings may have been tampered with even before they were handed over to the Government Analyst Department.

As witness Gunathilake explained, a more accurate and scientific form of investigating any tampering or alteration of the voice recordings is by analyzing the Hash Value of the recordings. Hash value is an algorithm which is unique to each file and is used to identify the files. Hash values can be thought of as fingerprints for files. The contents of a file are processed through a cryptographic algorithm, and a unique numerical value (the hash value) is produced that identifies the contents of the file. If the contents are modified in any way, the hash value will also change significantly. Of the many varieties of hash values available, the varieties used in the immediate investigation are MD.05 (Message Digest 5) and SHA 01 (Secure Hash Algorithm 1).

As every file on a computer is, ultimately, just data that can be represented in binary form, a hashing algorithm can take that data and run a complex calculation on it and output a fixed-length string as the result of the calculation. The result is the file's hash value or message digest. Since hashes cannot be reversed, simply knowing the result of a file's hash from a hashing algorithm does not allow a person to reconstruct the file's contents. However, it does allow to determine whether two files are identical or not without knowing anything about their contents.

As witness Gunathilake explained, she cannot confirm that the hash value of the original recording and the hash value of the recording given to her are the same. In the event the recording had been altered with before she received it, she would not have the original hash value. However, what she can confirm is that the hash value of the recording given to her, and the hash value of the recording played in Court are the same. Thus, it can be proved that the recordings have not been tampered with during that specific period of time, however, it is not a fact that can serve to establish genuineness nor tampering of any form.

Due to the above reasons explained, this Court believes that the mobile phones were in safe custody while they were in the custody of the Virtual Complainant.

Additionally, the Accused Appellants had raised objections with regard to the application of Section 7(1) of the Act. Section 7(1) reads as follows;

> The following provisions shall apply where any party to a proceeding proposes to tender any evidence under section 4 or 5, in such proceeding-

(a) the party proposing to tender such evidence shall, not later than forty-five days before the date fixed for inquiry or trial file, or cause to be filed, in court, after notice to the opposing party, a list of such evidence as is proposed to be tendered by that party, together with a copy of such evidence or such particulars thereof as is sufficient to enable the party to understand the nature of the evidence;

(b) any party to whom a notice has been given under the preceding provision may, within fifteen days of the receipt or such notice apply to the party giving such notice, to be permitted access to

At the time of the commencement of the trial, the accused had requested access to the two iPhones, which were used by the Complainant to record the conversations. With the commencement of the prosecution the Court has allowed both Accused Appellants to inspect the two mobile phones of the Complainant. (Both Accused have challenged the voice recordings on the ground that they were not kept in safe custody and that the Prosecution has not excluded the possibility of tampering. Therefore, they contended that it was dangerous to rely on such recordings).

However, as observed by the High Court, the said request for access to the mobile phones were made only on 09/09/2019, which was not within the stipulated period of 15 days. Though the opportunity was granted, the Accused Appellants did not inspect the devices and informed that the given time was not sufficient to employ the services of an expert. The Court had granted further time to have access to the phones on 18/09/2019 and on 20/09/2019. However, the 1st Accused Appellant particularly had failed to lead the evidence of his expert who inspected the two phones and the 2nd Accused Appellant did not even utilize the opportunity given to him by the Court to inspect the two phones. Therefore, the Accused Appellants cannot rely on non-compliance with Section 7 to question the integrity of the recordings.

Finally, in the question of whether the fact of the recordings being in the custody of the Virtual Complainant has resulted in them becoming inadmissible. In the instant case, when dealing with the question of admissibility, the High Court has stated that it used the voice recordings found in the mobile phones only to the limited extent of identifying the voices of the parties involved. However, as discussed above, as the recordings have been in safe custody while in possession of the Complainant, the recordings can be used as evidence to prove that the conversations actually took place and the incidents discussed happened in reality (further proved by the CCTV recordings submitted). Additionally, during cross examination and through independent evidence led to this effect, it became an admitted/proved fact that the relevant conversations and incidents had indeed taken place. This is simply, corroborated by the scientific and technical evidence discussed above. Finally, as per Section 167 of the Evidence Ordinance,

> The improper admission or rejection of evidence shall not be ground of itself for a new trial or reversal of any decisions in any case, if it shall appear to the court before which such objection is raised that, independently of the evidence objected to and admitted, there was sufficient evidence to justify the decision, or that, if the rejected evidence had been received, it ought not to have varied the decision.

It is the opinion of this court that the conviction of the accused is based on sufficient evidence beyond the voice recordings. Indeed, the recordings serve as corroborative evidence supporting the conviction, however, exclusion of the same would not have amounted to any substantial variation of the decision.

Therefore, after carefully observing all the evidence at hand, this Court believes that the voice recordings which were in the mobile phones of the Virtual Complainant were in safe custody as per Section 4(1)(d) and are therefore admissible.

Were the two Accused-Appellants entrapped to commit the offence they have been convicted of, and if so, have they been deprived of a fair trial?

As has already been mentioned above, the virtual complainant had met ASP Ruwan Kumara of CIABOC after he had received a telephone call. Upon the virtual complainant's arrival in his office at CIABOC, ASP Ruwan Kumara had advised him to submit a written complaint regarding the matter. Thus, ASP Ruwan Kumara after listening to the oral account narrated by the virtual complainant, sent the virtual complainant back to submit a written complaint, without proceeding to record/reduce the statement into writing. Thereafter, the virtual complainant had lodged a complaint on 15th February 2018 and CIABOC had proceeded to record a statement from him on 22 February 2018. As has been mentioned before, the investigators then informed him that the available material is not sufficient to warrant an arrest. As the virtual complainant informed CIABOC that he no longer had contact with either Accused Appellant at that point in time, the Investigators had instructed the virtual complainant to renew his communication line with the Accused Appellants. It is the submission of the Accused Appellants that this procedure amounts entrapment of the Accused Appellants at the instance of the officers of CIABOC.

Learned President's Counsel for the 2nd Accused-Appellant vehemently relied on Sorrells V. United States 287 US 435 (1932). In that case the term entrapment has been defined as follows: "… the conception and planning of an offence by an officer and his procurement of its commission by one who would not have perpetrated it except for the trickery, persuasion or fraud of the officer …". It can be seen from the above definition that any defence of entrapment would pre-suppose that the accused person who takes up such defence admits commission of the offending act. It is then only such accused person can assert that he/she would not have committed it in the absence of any trickery, persuasion or fraud of the officer. Let us see whether there was trickery, persuasion or fraud on the part of the CIABOC officers.

When the virtual complainant had received a telephone call from ASP Ruwan Kumara of CIABOC he went on his own volition. It was not his position that he was coerced by any officer of CIABOC to make a complaint against the Accused Appellants. When ASP Ruwan Kumara requested the virtual complainant to submit a written complaint, the virtual complainant could have waited without submitting such statement in writing. Thereafter, the virtual complainant could well have waited without proceeding to CIABOC which led to his statement being recorded on 22 February 2018. When the virtual complainant was informed by CIABOC to renew his communication line with the Accused Appellants the virtual complainant could have waited without implementing that advise. It was not his position that he was lured by any officer of CIABOC to make a complaint against the Accused Appellants. It is also not the position of the Accused Appellants that they would not have perpetrated this crime if not for the trickery, persuasion or fraud of the CIABOC officers. The defence of the Accused Appellants is that they did not commit this crime. Then whose position is this? It is only an argument put forward by the learned counsel for the Accused Appellants in the course the hearing of this appeal inviting Court to hold in this case that the officers of CIABOC have entrapped the Accused Appellants. We are unable to see any merit in this argument.

Moreover, if it is the position of the Accused Appellants that they would not have perpetrated this crime if not for the trickery, persuasion or fraud of the CIABOC officers, that would necessarily be within their exclusive knowledge. Thus, in such circumstances, section 106 of the Evidence Ordinance to wit: 'When any fact is especially within the knowledge of any person, the burden of proving that fact is upon him' shall apply. Even if one is to argue that the above is a special circumstance (not provided by statutory law but as per some law), then too, section 105 of the Evidence Ordinance would apply and the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within such special circumstance is upon the Accused Appellants. The Accused Appellants in the instant case have not even attempted to discharge such burden.

We need to be mindful that Police officers day in and day out, lay traps to detect criminals in action. This happens in cases involving possession and trafficking of dangerous drugs, bribery and corruption, gambling, prostitutions, raids carried out by authorized officers under Food Act and even price control cases. That is a long-standing practice happening from time immemorial not only in this country but in every part of the civilized world. While it is not an unlawful method of detecting crimes, the learned President's Counsel also did not seek to argue that those trap cases come under 'entrapment'. This can be clearly seen from the following quotation relied upon by the learned President's Counsel from the judgment of Justice Panchapakesa Ayyar in M.S. Mohiddin V. Unknown [AIR 1952 Mad 561]:

> "… I have held in several cases already that there are two kinds of traps 'a legitimate trap', where the offence has already been born and is in its' course, and 'an illegitimate trap', where the offence has not yet been born and a temptation is offered to see whether an offence would be committed, succumbing to it, or not. Thus, where the bribe has already been demanded from a man, and the man goes out offering to bring the money but goes to the police and the magistrate and brings them to witness the payment, it will be 'a legitimate trap', wholly laudable and admirable, and adopted in every civilized country without the least criticism by any honest man. But, where a man has not demanded a bribe, and he is only suspected to be in the habit of taking bribes, and he is tempted with a bribe; just to see whether he would accept it or not and to trap him; if he accepts it, will be 'an illegitimate trap' and, unless authorized by an Act of Parliament, it will be an offence on the part of the persons taking part in the trap who -will all be "accomplices" whose evidence will have to be corroborated by untainted evidence to a smaller or larger extent as the case may be before a conviction can be had under a rule of Court which has ripened almost to a rule of law. But, in the case of a legitimate trap, the officers taking part in the trap, like P.Ws 9 to 11, and the witnesses to the trap, like P.W. 8 would in no sense be "accomplices" and their evidence will not require under the law, to be corroborated as a condition precedent for conviction though the usual rule of prudence will require the evidence to be scrutinized carefully and accepted as true before a conviction can be had." (Emphasize is ours).

In the instant case, what had happened is not anything more than the virtual complainant going out offering to bring the money after the Accused Appellants solicited the bribe from him but goes to the CIABOC and brings CIABOC officers to witness the payment. Thus, even in terms of the above case cited by the learned President's Counsel for the 2nd Accused Appellant, the trap in the instant case would be 'a legitimate trap', which is 'wholly laudable and admirable, and adopted in every civilized country without the least criticism by any honest man'. It is not an entrapment.

Moreover, Entrapment as a defence is not part of our criminal justice system. Even if one resorts to section 100 of the Evidence Ordinance, the position would be the same. Section 100 of the Evidence Ordinance is as follows:

> "Whenever in a judicial proceeding a question of evidence arises not provided for by this Ordinance or by any other law in force in Sri Lanka, such question shall be determined in accordance with the English Law of Evidence for the time being."

In R. Vs. Sang*, [(1980) AC 402],* the House of Lords held that Entrapment is not a defence in English Law. Thus, it would further confirm the earlier position we have already taken that even through the window provided for in section 100, Entrapment is not a defence in our criminal justice system.

Furthermore, in Rajapakse V Fernando (52 NLR 361), Mr. Chitty's first submission was that while Courts have to look to the Evidence Ordinance in regard to questions of evidence, nevertheless, it is incorrect to say that the principles of '' Public Policy '' do not form part of our law. Mr. Chitty contended in that case that the power is inherent in the Courts of Justice when it is faced with, what he called, conduct which is contrary to public morality or fair dealing. In such a scenario, Mr. Chitty contended that the Courts, despite the strict rules of evidence, must apply such principles of public policy, and hold that the admission of such evidence would cause greater harm than its rejection, and refuse to receive such evidence. However, Dias SPJ's views stated in that case, could be discernible from following excerpts taken from that judgment. They are as follows:

> "… With this submission I am unable to agree. It will be observed that Mr. Chitty has been unable to quote a single authority in support of his proposition. What authority there is appears to be against him". …
> "…What Mr. Chitty is inviting us to do now is precisely what Wood Renton C J. pointed out a Court of Justice could not and must not do, namely, to expand the law of evidence by importing into it certain grounds of public policy to control or modify the statutory rules of evidence laid down by the Evidence Ordinance. This we cannot do as we possess no legislative powers. An examination of the provisions of the Evidence Ordinance shows that the Legislature when drafting the Evidence Ordinance had ". public policy " in mind, and legislated in order to give effect to the principles of " public policy " of the kind Mr. Chitty refers to in certain cases. Thus the admission of confessions against persons accused of crimes was confined within very strict limits. The rules of evidence relating to privilege and the admission of privileged communications is another example of the Legislature giving effect to certain principles of public policy. The prohibition that the prisoner's spouse should be called as a witness for the prosecution save in very exceptional cases furnishes another example. I am, therefore, unable to agree with Mr. Chitty that, over and above this, there exists a nebulous and undefined residual power in the Courts to admit or reject admissible evidence brought before it by legally competent and compellable witnesses on grounds of "public policy". Section 100 of the Evidence Ordinance provides that in the case of any casus omissus we are to have recourse, not to Scottish or American law, but to the principles of the English law alone. As I have pointed out, under English Law, relevant evidence which has been obtained improperly is not rendered inadmissible on that ground alone". …..

"..Mr. Chitty next argued that altogether apart from the question of public policy, there is another principle of law that an accused person should not be compelled to give or furnish evidence against himself. I agree that it would be immoral and undesirable that agents provocateur and others should tempt or abet persons to commit offences ; but it is a question whether it is open to a Court to acquit such persons where the offence is proved, on the sole ground that the evidence was procured by unfair means. Such considerations may induce the trial Judge ' to disbelieve the evidence, but such evidence is not inadmissible, and, therefore, when the offence charged has been proved, it is the duty of the Judge to convict". …..

The above excerpts are self-explanatory and hence we would not delve on any further discussion on this matter. Therefore, we reject the argument advanced by the Accused Appellants that they have been deprived of a fair trial as the officers of CIABOC have entrapped the Accused Appellants in this case.

In view of the alleged infirmities in the testimony given by the virtual Complainant, can credibility and testimonial trustworthiness be attached to his testimony?

Did the virtual Complainant have a motive to falsely implicate the Accused?

Did the two Accused Appellants possess any motive to solicit and or accept a bribe as narrated by the virtual complainant?

As already referred to above in this judgment, the instant case is based on an investigation commenced by the officers of CIABOC upon a complaint of alleged solicitation of a bribe by two senior Public Servants. The said complaint was investigated by a team of officers from CIABOC and the two Accused-Appellants were arrested at the point of accepting a bribe of Rupees twenty million. The fact that the two Accused-Appellants came to the Coffee-shop of Hotel Taj Samudra and met with the virtual Complainant as pre-arranged by them and the fact that they had some refreshments at the expense of the virtual Complainant is undisputed. The video footages obtained from the Hotel CCTV system confirms this fact. Subsequent to the meeting at the Coffee-shop, all three persons, including the virtual Complainant, the two Accused-Appellants, walked towards the car park. When the car belonging to the virtual Complainant reached them, the 1st Accused-Appellant had got into the rear seat of the said car from the Drivers side, and was seated inside the car with two bags, containing Rs. 20 million when the officers of the CIABOC came to the place. The 2nd Accused-Appellant who accompanied the 1st Accused-Appellant to the car park was watching the transaction when he was arrested by the CIABOC officers.

It is also admitted by the 2nd Accused-Appellant that he met the virtual Complainant on 05.09 2017 at the Waters' Edge Restaurant. The meeting between the two Accused-Appellants and the virtual Complainant on 27.02.2018 at the office of the 2nd Accused-Appellant and on 28.04.2018 at Bread talk Restaurant was admitted by all parties including the two Accused-Appellants. Even though the 1st Accused-Appellant denies his meeting with the virtual Complainant on 17.05.2017 at Royal Boat Restaurant, he too had admitted meeting the virtual Complainant at his office somewhere in August 2016 after signing the shareholders' agreement. It is also an admitted fact before the High Court at Bar, that the virtual Complainant representing Sri Prabhulingeshvar Sugars had submitted the unsolicited proposal for a joint venture between the Government of Sri Lanka and the said company to manage Kanthale Sugar Factory in early 2015 and in fact a cabinet paper was submitted by the late Minister of Lands seeking approval for the above proposal.

The virtual complainant complains of a long delay in giving effect to the unsolicited proposal he made and alleges that the 1st Accused-Appellant being the key person who is responsible for giving effect to the cabinet approval, had purposely delayed the implementation since the virtual complainant did not agree to pay him US $ 300000 as a bribe.

Since the case for the prosecution was solely dependent on the evidence of Nagarajah (the virtual complainant), it was submitted on behalf of the Accused-Appellants that it is unsafe to act on the evidence of the sole witness who cannot be considered as an innocent person but was a dubious investor. In his evidence before the High Court at Bar, the virtual complainant took up the position that he recorded several conversations between him and the two Accused-Appellants and that he did not modify the recordings until the two phones were handed over to the Government Analyst for examination.

However, it was argued on behalf of the Accused-Appellants that the presence of a modified date on the properties that were examined by the Government Analyst creates a doubt on the evidence of the virtual Complainant and therefore his evidence cannot be acted upon or in other words, the virtual Complainant had lied before the High Court at Bar when he said that he did not interfere with the recorded evidence.

In those circumstances, on behalf of the 1st Accused-Appellant, it was submitted that the Court should advert to the principle of "indivisibility of credibility"

In this regard, the 1st Accused-Appellant relied on several appellate Court decisions including the case of Queen V. Vellasamy 63 NLR 265 at 270.

As already referred to by us in this judgment, witness Gunathilake had explained her position with regard to "Modified data" as "the date modified can change due to saving the file after any small change done to it or if the file is copied as a VCD- then both the modified date and created date will change to the date it was created. This can even change if one copies the file to a laptop, in which event the date of the file may change to the date and time of the operating system on the laptop."

Based on the above, witness Gunathilake took the view that the date modified cannot be relied on, in identifying whether the file has been tampered with or not but she took the view that, the recordings before her were subject to Critical Listening which involves a thorough breakdown of both foreground and background sounds through repetitive listing and she could not identify any editing done to the voice samples. Furthermore, we have already held that the voice recordings which were in the mobile phones of the Virtual Complainant were in safe custody as per Section 4(1)(d) and are therefore admissible. we have already given extensive reasons in that regard.

In the light of the above conclusion and on the evidence of witness Gunathilake, it is not possible for this Court to conclude that witness Nagarajah had lied before the High Court at Bar when he denied making any modification to the recordings that were available in his two mobile phones.

When advancing the above argument, the Accused-Appellants further contended that the same principle of indivisibility of credibility applies when the prosecution decided to drop the 3rd charge in the Indictment against the 2nd Accused-Appellant.

As already referred to in this judgment, the 3rd count in the Indictment referred to a solicitation of a gratification of Rs. 540 million from the virtual complainant on or about 05.09.2017 by the 2nd Accused-Appellant. When establishing charges against an accused person, it is the duty of the prosecution to submit evidence to prove each and every charge. As submitted by the learned counsel for the Respondents, even though witness Nagarajah had referred to a meeting with the 2nd Accused-Appellant at Waters Edge Restaurant on 05.09.2017, he had not referred to a solicitation of Rs. 540 million from him on that day.

In the absence of any other evidence to that effect, the prosecution had decided to drop the said count but it cannot affect the credibility of the evidence of the virtual complainant.

As observed by this Court the above decision of the prosecution was solely on the non-availability of evidence to establish the said count, but there is no material before court to conclude that the virtual complainant had either lied or took up a different stand when giving evidence before the High Court at Bar.

Even though the learned Counsel for the Accused-Appellants relied heavily on the principle of indivisibility of credibility and submitted that “witness cannot be both not credible and credible with regard to the very same evidence” and submitted that it is unsafe to act on the evidence of the virtual Complainant, we see no reason to uphold such position for two reasons.

Firstly, the material already referred to above does not reveal that the evidence given by the virtual complainant with regard to the said matters are contradictory in nature compelling the Court to reject his evidence.

Secondly, our Courts have now adopted a more moderate view in following the principle of indivisibility of credibility which is evident from several cases decided in the recent past including the case of Sudu Aiya and Others V. The Attorney General 2005 1 Sri LR 358 at 377 where the position of our Courts was discussed as follows;

> “Further, counsel’s submission that Ratnayake has given false evidence and by the application of the maxim “Falsus in uno, falsus in omnibus” his evidence should be rejected, is also without merit. Other than a few contradictions and omissions which were not very material, defence did not succeed in showing that witness Ratnayake had given false evidence. In relation to this matter, errors of memory, faulty observations, and even exaggerations must be distinguished from deliberate falsehood. Besides, this maxim has not been applied as an absolute rule. It was observed in the case of Samaraweera vs. The Attorney General that divisibility of evidence test is preferred under certain conditions. In the case of Francis Appuhamy vs. The Queen T. S. Fernando J, in the course of his judgment stated as follows: "Certainly in this Country, it is not an uncommon experience to find in criminal cases witnesses who, in addition to implicating a person actually seen by them committing a crime, seek to implicate others who are either members of the family of that person or enemies of such witnesses. In that situation the judge or jurors have to decide for themselves whether that part of the testimony which is found to be false taints the whole or whether the false can safely be separated from the true."

The virtual complainant is an Indian National who was engaged in business activities in Sri Lanka since 2003. In 2011 when the Government of Sri Lanka called for international bids to recommence the work in Kanthale Sugar Factory, he submitted a tender but he was not awarded the tender at that time. However, the said process was subsequently cancelled by the Government and in the year 2015 the virtual complainant had submitted an unsolicited offer for the same purpose through Prabhulingeshvar Sugar and Chemicals Company, a leading Sugar Manufacturer in India.

Subsequent to the signing of the shareholder's agreement in August 2016, the virtual complainant had met the 1st Accused-Appellant at his office and during the said meeting the 1st Accused-Appellant had solicited a gratification of 3 million USD to execute the project.

During this period 1st Accused-Appellant was directly involved in the implementation of the project as the Secretary to the Ministry of Lands. As revealed from the evidence of the virtual complainant, the 1st Accused-Appellant on another occasion had informed the virtual complainant that if he does not pay him the solicited gratification, steps would be taken to dispose of the existing machinery without giving it to the virtual complainant as per Article 7.9 of the Agreement. While the process for disposing of the machinery was in progress, the 2nd Accused-Appellant had met the virtual complainant and influenced him to resolve the dispute between the virtual complainant and the 1st Accused-Appellant with regard to the machinery lying in the Sugar Factory premises.

Even though the virtual complainant had ignored various steps taken by the 1st Accused-Appellant that delayed the implementation of the cabinet decision and the agreements signed between the parties, the seriousness of the conduct of the 1st Accused-Appellant was realized by the virtual complainant when the 1st Accused-Appellant advertised the sale of machinery at Kanthale Sugar Factory.

As already revealed from the evidence of the virtual complainant, the investors had spent more than 20 million USD by this time and therefore, he had decided to bring it to the notice of the Prime Minister and met an officer of the Prime Minister's office and informed his grievance to the said officer. Since there was a reference to a solicitation of a bribe, he was advised by the said officer to lodge a complaint at the CIABOC.

However, the virtual complainant had not gone to CIABOC until he was requested to come by the CIABOC. When he was asked to lodge a complaint by ASP Ruwan Kumara, his first reaction was that he is not interested in taking legal action since he had come here to do business, but finally agreed to submit a written complaint.

The above is the path in a nutshell which ended up with a complaint by witness Nagarajah with CIABOC against the two Accused-Appellants. If he had the intention to falsely implicate the two Accused-Appellants, he would not have waited so long to lodge a complaint against them. As already referred to in this judgment, the Hon. Attorney General too had observed a long delay in implementing certain decisions by the 1st Accused-Appellant but still, the virtual complainant was following the routine procedure by making an appeal after appeal, until he realized that the things have been moving away from the interest of the investor.

Learned President's Counsel on behalf of the two Accused-Appellants argued that the two Accused-Appellants did not possess any motive to solicit and/or accept a bribe as narrated by the virtual complainant.

In support of the above argument the followings were submitted on behalf of the 2nd Accused-Appellant:

a) A copy of the shareholders agreement was not provided to him and he had to request for a copy from the Finance Ministry in order to implement the provisions in the said agreement.
b) Later he had observed that certain provisions in the agreement were contradictory to the advice given by the Hon. Attorney General.
c) In the said circumstances he had faced difficulties in implementing the provisions in the agreement and therefore he had to obtain advice from the Hon. Attorney General on several > occasion, but he never delayed the process to scuttle the implementation of the shareholders agreement.

At this point, I would like to look at Black's Law Dictionary to ascertain the meaning of the term "motive". Black defines motive as, "something esp. willful desire that lead one to Act (Black's Law Dictionary 8th edition) In the above context the motive entertained by the virtual complainant should be for a wrongful purpose or in other words should have had malicious motive to falsely implicate the Accused-Appellant.

It is observed by this Court that the Cabinet Committee on Economic Management (CCEM) and the Hon. Attorney General, both had observed the long delay in implementing the shareholders agreement and the 1st Accused-Appellant had been repeatedly reminded by the said Cabinet Committee to handover the land and report back to the Committee.

Similarly, the Hon. Attorney General too had observed in his letter addressed to the 1st Accused-Appellant which was produced mark P-77 as follows:

> "As regards the releasing of lands to the investor, the modalities are expressly provided in Article 17.1.1. of the Shareholders Agreement. There are no extraneous conditions to be completed with when releasing the said land, and it is incumbent upon the signatories to the said agreement to strictly abide by the provisions of the said Articles. In view of the concerns expressed at the CCEM about the long delay, this process should be completed expeditiously as possible."

When the Hon. Attorney General had reached a specific and conclusive opinion about the issues raised by the 1st Accused-Appellant, as submitted by the learned Deputy Solicitor General before us, the 1st Accused-Appellant had without any justification, turned again towards the secretary to His Excellency the President writing the letter dated 07.08.2017 (P-82) seeking his intervention in the process.

The next notable incident after writing P-82 was the intervention by the 2nd Accused-Appellant, and the meeting the 2nd Accused-Appellant and Nagarajah had at Waters Edge Restaurant on 05.09.2017.

From the call record details produced before the High Court at Bar, it was the 2nd Accused-Appellant who had given the first call to Nagarajah on 05.09.2017 around 11.42.52.a.m.

Since then, the involvement of the 2nd Accused-Appellant is visible from the two CCTV footages produced before Court with regard to the meetings at Bread Talk Restaurant and Taj Samundra Hotel and the call records which show a similar pattern of calls taken between the virtual complainant and the two Accused-Appellants.

When evaluating the above evidence, the High Court at Bar had correctly observed that the 1st Accused-Appellant once retired from the office of the Secretary to the Ministry of Lands and assumed duties as the Chief of Staff of the Presidential Secretariat, where he has no role to play in Kanthale Sugar Factory Project, had still opted to continue the dealings with the virtual complainant and admittedly met with him at Bread Talk Restaurant and Hotel Taj Samudra in order to "discuss" and "assist" him in proceeding ahead with the project. If the 1st Accused-Appellant accompanied by the 2nd Accused-Appellant, wanted to assist the virtual complainant in the said project, being senior officers of the Government, they would obviously know that it is not the acceptable, prudent or transparent way in dealing with the matters of this nature.

When considering the totality of the above material we have no hesitation in concluding that both Accused-Appellants did possess the requisite motive for the solicitation and acceptance referred to in the Indictment filed before the High Court at Bar.

As already observed by this court the virtual complainant being a foreigner who had come to Sri Lanka to engage in business, and gone a considerable distance in the relevant investment by spending and/or investing over 20 million USD. He had not been left with any other option, but to seek some assistance from the higher authorities as he did. It was the version of the virtual complainant that he never wanted/planned to get entangled with anybody in this manner but simply wanted to focus on his business, but the circumstances had led for the final outcome of him becoming the virtual complainant in this case.

In the light of this backdrop, this court concludes that the virtual complainant had simply acted as an ordinary reasonable man who was confronted with a situation to which the solutions were beyond his reach.

We have carefully considered all the arguments put forward before us by both parties. For the foregoing reasons, we are unable to agree with the submissions of the learned Presidents' Counsel for the Accused Appellants that the High Court at Bar has wrongly/unlawfully/unfairly conducted the trial against their clients and wrongly convicted them. We hold that the High Court at Bar has lawfully convicted both the Accused Appellants for the respective charges. We see no necessity for our intervention in this conviction. Therefore, we proceed to affirm the conviction of both the Accused Appellants for the respective charges as entered into by the High Court at Bar.

The learned Presidents' Counsel for the Accused Appellants also made submissions regarding the sentences imposed on them by the High Court at Bar.

We have already mentioned before that both the Accused Appellants at the time they solicited and accepted the bribes relevant to the instant case were holding very high posts in the highest echelons of the Public Service of this country. The magnitude of the bribes they have solicited are unimaginable. The purpose for which they were solicited no doubt shows that the Accused Appellants while holding high positions of the Government had only worked for their unlawful and immoral purposes while only helping the destruction of the country's economy. We are of the view that it would be difficult for this country to revive itself as long as high officers like the Accused Appellants would hold such high offices in the Government. We therefore think that it would be important to take into account the need to deter such public officers from being inclined to embark on such unlawful endeavours.

In the case of The Attorney-General Vs. H. N. De Silva 57 NLR 121, Basnayake, A.C.J. (as he then was) stated as follows:

"In assessing the punishment that should be passed on an offender, a Judge should consider the matter of sentence both from the point of view of the public and the offender. Judges are too often prone to look at the question only from the angle of the offender. A Judge should, in determining the proper sentence, first consider the gravity of the offence as it appears from the nature of the act itself and should have regard to the punishment provided in the Penal Code or other statute under which the offender is charged. He should also regard the effect of the punishment as a deterrent and consider to what extent it will be effective. If the offender held a position of trust or belonged to a service which enjoys the public confidence that must be taken into account in assessing the punishment. The incidence of crimes of the nature of which the offender has been found to be guilty and the difficulty of detection are also matters which should receive due consideration. The reformation of the criminal, though no doubt an important consideration, is subordinate to the others I have mentioned. Where the public interest or the welfare of the State (which are synonymous) outweighs the previous good character, antecedents and age of the offender, public interest must prevail. "

Sri Skanda Rajah J while citing with approval, the above passage from Basnayake, A.C.J.'s judgment, went ahead in the case of M. Gomes (S. I. Police, Crimes) Vs. W. V. D. Leelaratna 66 NLR 233, to add three more grounds which a trial judge should consider in the assessment of the sentence to be imposed on a convicted accused. Three of those additional grounds are firstly, the nature of the loss to the victim and secondly, the profit that may accrue to the culprit in the event of non-detection and thirdly, the use to which a stolen article could be put.

Perusal of the judgment of the High Court at Bar shows clearly, that it has been mindful of all the relevant matters before passing the sentence imposed by it on the Accused Appellants. The sentences imposed by the High Court at Bar are within the sentences the law has prescribed for the relevant offences. We have no basis to disagree with the said sentences. We affirm the sentences imposed on both the Accused Appellants by the High Court at Bar.

We proceed to dismiss the appeals of both the Accused Appellants.

JUDGE OF THE SUPREME COURT

Yasantha Kodagoda, PC, J

I have considered the draft judgment of my brother Judges Honourable Justice Vijith K. Malalgoda, PC, Honourable Justice L.T.B. Dehideniya, Hon. Justice P. Padman Surasena and Hon. Justice S. Thurairaja, PC. I am in agreement with their judgment, including their findings in respect of the several questions of law raised during the hearing of this Appeal, and the conclusion reached that this Appeal should be dismissed for the reasons contained in the said judgment. However, it is my considered opinion that the following question of law raised by the Appellants is unique, extremely important and therefore requires a detailed and an in-depth consideration. Therefore, I present this judgment which contains reasons, conclusions and findings of my own regarding the following question of law:

Were the two Appellants entrapped to commit the offences they have been convicted of, and if so, have they been denied a 'fair trial'?

Introduction

During the hearing of this Appeal, learned President's Counsel for both Appellants jointly raised a novel and innovative question of law. Albeit brief, their position was that (i) both Appellants (more particularly the 1st Appellant) had been 'entrapped' to commit the offences which they had been found 'guilty' of having committed and convicted, (ii) the investigative technique referred to as 'entrapment' is obnoxious to law and hence illegal, (iii) presentation of evidence by the prosecution at the trial arising out of such entrapment was contrary to law, and thus, (iv) the two Appellants had been denied a 'fair trial'. Therefore, learned counsel for the Appellants submitted that convictions of both Appellants should be quashed and the Appeal should be allowed, as their Fundamental Right guaranteed under Article 13(3) of the Constitution (which guarantees an accused a 'fair trial') had been infringed. It was submitted on behalf of the 1st Appellant that the 'defence of entrapment' was raised on his behalf at the end of the trial in the Permanent High Court at Bar, which rejected the said defence. They submitted that the rejection of the 'defence of entrapment' was unlawful and hence this Court should set-aside the finding of guilt pronounced by the Permanent High Court at Bar. They urged that this ground of appeal was of such fundamental and critical importance, that should this Court were to hold with the Appellants on this point, the conviction of the Accused - Appellants should be set-aside and the Appellants should be acquitted while allowing this Appeal.

Both learned President's Counsel emphasized that their arguments pertaining to this question of law were being presented without prejudice to their other submissions which were based on the footing that (i) the institution of criminal proceedings by the Director General of the Commission to Investigate Allegations of Bribery or Corruption was unlawful, (ii) the joinder of charges was unlawful, in that there was a misjoinder, (iii) the testimony given by virtual complainant Nagarajah was false and untrustworthy, (iv) the deferment of the decision pertaining to the admissibility of the mobile telephone call recordings, till the end of the trial, was unlawful, (v) the Magistrate (during the investigation stage) having directed the Appellants to give voice samples to the Government Analyst was in violation of the rule against self-incrimination and was thus unlawful, and (vi) the prosecution had failed to prove the charges beyond reasonable doubt.

Both learned President's Counsel for the Appellants as well as the learned Deputy Solicitor General who appeared for the Commission to Investigate Allegations of Bribery or Corruption (CIABOC) submitted that this was the first instance where the 'defence of entrapment' had been raised in a criminal appeal in Sri Lanka. Therefore, in my opinion, there exists a compelling need to consider this matter very carefully and at considerable length.

Submissions of learned Counsel

Submissions on behalf of the 1st Appellant

Citing the judgment of Justice Rehnquist in United States v. Russell (411 US 423), learned President's Counsel for the 1st Appellant drew the attention of this Court to the following quotation:

> "… that the fact that officers or employees of the Government merely afford opportunities or facilities for the commission of the offence does not defeat the prosecution. … Nor will the mere fact of deceit defeat the prosecution. … For there are circumstances when the use of deceit is the only practicable law enforcement technique available. It is only when the Government's deception actually implants the criminal design in the mind of the Defendant that the defence of entrapment come into play*."* [Emphasis added]

Citing certain principles contained in the judgment of the House of Lords in R v. Looseley*,* learned President's Counsel submitted that in English law, while entrapment is not a substantive defence to criminal liability, it has been held that nevertheless, it is unacceptable for the State, through its agents to lure and entrap its citizens into committing crimes and then prosecute them for their criminal conduct. To allow such prosecutions to take place would be to condone the abuse of its power by the Executive and compromise the integrity of the criminal justice system. Permitting entrapment would result in an abuse of the process of court and possibly lead to a violation of Article 6 of the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR). (Learned President's Counsel drew parallels between Article 6 of the ECHR and Article 13(3) of the Constitution of the Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka, which guarantee inter-alia the right to a 'fair trial'.) Therefore, prosecutions based on entrapment should be stayed as it would amount to an abuse of process. It is necessary to balance the competing requirements that those who commit crimes should be convicted and punished, and that there should not be an abuse of process which would constitute an affront to public conscience.

Learned counsel submitted that even though an accused receives a forensically fair trial, if it would be unfair to present certain evidence or subject the accused to a particular type of trial, he should not be tried in that manner. In appropriate circumstances, the doctrine of entrapment could be availed of by an accused to obtain relief against oppressive actions by the Police.

Turning towards Sri Lanka's law, learned President's Counsel submitted that in terms of Article 13(3) of the Constitution, every accused was entitled to receive a fair trial. He submitted that it was a very important Fundamental Right. A prosecution which is founded upon entrapment deprives an accused of a fair trial. Therefore, principles of law pertaining to entrapment should be applied when deciding Sri Lankan cases of the instant nature. Learned counsel submitted that if the investigation that resulted in the indictment of the accused was based on entrapment, following trial, the accused should not be convicted. In view of these principles of law, as the accused have been unlawfully convicted by the Permanent High Court at Bar, in Appeal, the conviction should be quashed and the Appeal should be allowed.

It is necessary to place on record, that though learned President's Counsel for the 1st Appellant initially attempted to portray that 'entrapment' was an exculpatory defence even under Sri Lankan law, he later abandoned that position, and sought to convince this Court (and I would think, advisedly) that entrapment is an unlawful investigative technique, and thus, the presentation of evidence emanating from an entrapment is unlawful. He submitted that in the instant case, the prosecution had presented evidence emanating from such an entrapment (which amounted to unlawfully gathered evidence), and hence the 1st Appellant (together with the 2nd Appellant) had been denied a fair trial.

Learned President's Counsel for the 1st Appellant further submitted that it was at the instance of CIABOC officers, that the virtual complainant had got in touch with the 2nd Appellant and accordingly on 05.09.2017 both of them had met at the Waters Edge restaurant. On the advice of CIABOC officers, through the 2nd Appellant, a meeting with the 1st Appellant had been arranged. That meeting took place on 27.02.2018 at the office of the 2nd Appellant. At this meeting, learned Counsel alleged that due to persistence by the virtual complainant the 1st Appellant solicited a bribe of Rs. 100 million, out of which the virtual complainant was asked by the 1st Appellant to pay a sum of Rs. 20 million, as an advance. It was submitted that the said solicitation of a bribe took place due to 'trickery' practiced on the 1st Appellant by officers of the CIABOC and the virtual complainant. After this meeting, CIABOC officers attempted to get down the 1st Appellant to the residence of the virtual complainant. Notwithstanding entreaties made by the virtual complainant, the 1st Appellant did not fall prey to that trap. Once again on 28.04.2018, at the instance of the virtual complainant, the 2nd Appellant persuaded the 1st Appellant to come to Bread Talk to meet the virtual complainant. This meeting took place on the same day at Bread Talk outlet, and it is alleged that the 1st Appellant repeated the solicitation of the bribe of Rs. 20 million. Thereafter, the virtual complainant proceeded to India and was there for a week, and returned. After he returned, the 1st Appellant was inveigled by the virtual complainant to come to the Taj Samudra Hotel, and that final meeting took place on 03.05.2018, where the learned President's Counsel submitted that a 'trap' had been laid. Learned counsel submitted that this sequence of events and the associated circumstances, clearly point towards 'entrapment' perpetrated by officers of the CIABOC together with the virtual complainant, to which the 1st Appellant fell victim to.

In view of the foregoing facts and circumstances, learned President's Counsel for the 1st Appellant submitted that this was 'a case of entrapment', and thus, the 1st Appellant has been denied a fair trial and hence the conviction of the 1st Appellant should be quashed in appeal.

Submissions on behalf of the 2nd Appellant

Augmenting the submissions made in this regard by learned President's Counsel for the 1st Appellant and successfully creating a synergy between the two submissions, the learned President's Counsel for the 2nd Appellant submitted that the Constitution ensures and guarantees unto the Accused in this case, as well as to all other accused, the fundamental right to a fair trial. However, the Accused – Appellants in this matter were deprived of a fair trial due to several reasons; the investigation carried out by CIABOC officers amounted to an entrapment was one, and the main ground. The other grounds urged by learned President's Counsel for the 2nd Appellant which he alleged resulted in the Appellants being denied a fair trial have been dealt with by my brother judges as separate and substantive questions of law on their own standing. As I agree with the reasons, findings and conclusions reached in respect of those other grounds of Appeal, I do not propose to deal with those grounds raised by learned President's Counsel.

Learned President's Counsel for the 2nd Appellant submitted that investigation officers of CIABOC have not been vested with power to engage in an 'entrapment' in the nature of what they did in this case. He said that officers of CIABOC have induced and inveigled the virtual complainant who complained only of an instance of solicitation of a bribe, to participate in a scheme which had been designed to entrap the Appellants, so that they may be prosecuted. The entrapment perpetrated by officers of the CIABOC with the cooperation and assistance provided by the virtual complainant resulted in the Appellants committing offences, which they would not have otherwise committed. Entrapment was caused when the virtual complainant offered a bribe to the Appellants, afresh. Such offering was done with the view to luring the Appellants to commit the offence of accepting a bribe, and apprehending the Appellants in the act of acceptance.

Quoting certain observations of Justice Saleem Marsoof, PC in Namunukula Plantations Limited v. Minister of Lands and 6 Others, [(2012) 1 Sri L.R. 365], learned President's Counsel submitted that the conduct of officers of CIABOC was contrary to public policy and hence a prosecution launched based on such a scheme ought not be entertained by any Court, as it would be a pollution of the 'pure stream of justice'.

Citing the judgment of Justice Roberts in Sorrells v. United States*, [287 US 435 (1932]*, learned President's Counsel submitted that this Court should adopt the definition of 'entrapment' found in the said judgment. It defines entrapment as "… the conception and planning of an offence by an officer and his procurement of its commission by one who would not have perpetrated it except for the trickery, persuasion or fraud of the officer". Learned President's Counsel submitted that in the same case, Justice Roberts has held that, "… Proof of entrapment at any stage of the case, requires the court to stop the prosecution, direct that the indictment be quashed, and the defendant set at liberty. …".

Referring to the powers and functions of the CIABOC in terms of the Commission to Investigate Allegations of Bribery or Corruption Act, No.19 of 1994 (CIABOC Act), learned President's Counsel submitted that the CIABOC and its officers did not have the power to 'trap' a person or 'to find out whether he will commit an offence'. Citing Lord Goddard in Brannan v. Peek [(1947) 2 All ER 572], he submitted that unless authorized by an Act of Parliament, no trap can be laid by the police to find out whether a man will commit an offence, and that persons trapping him like that would be accomplices, who are themselves liable for punishment. He submitted that the doctrine pertaining to the prohibition on entrapment contained in Brannan v. Peek should be adopted by Sri Lankan Courts under section 100 of the Evidence Ordinance and incorporated into Sri Lanka's Law of Evidence.

The position advanced by learned President's Counsel was that upon recording the complaint of the virtual complainant Nagarajah relating to the alleged solicitation of a bribe by the 1st Appellant, CIABOC officials should have proceeded to investigate that complaint. If the complaint revealed the commission of an offence or offences, the Commission should have directly taken action against those who have committed such offence(s). He submitted that without doing that, the investigators had engaged in a 'process of entrapment' which is unlawful. Officers of the CIABOC did so by directing Nagarajah to re-establish contact with the Appellants, record all communications he had with them, and luring the suspects to commit further offences. He submitted that doing so was in excess of the powers conferred on CIABOC by the CIABOC Act and was thus, illegal. Therefore, learned President's Counsel submitted that the trial Court (Permanent High Court at Bar) should have rejected the testimony presented by the prosecution relating to the series of events which are said to have occurred after Nagarajah's complaint was recorded by officers of the CIABOC.

Learned President's Counsel in his post-argument written submissions brought to the attention of this Court the following quotation from the judgment of Justice Panchapakesa Ayyar in M.S. Mohiddin v. Unknown [AIR 1952 Mad 561]:

> "… I have held in several cases already that there are two kinds of traps 'a legitimate trap', where the offence has already been born and is in its' course, and 'an illegitimate trap', where the offence has not yet been born and a temptation is offered to see whether an offence would be committed, succumbing to it, or not. Thus, where the bribe has already been demanded from a man, and the man goes out offering to bring the money but goes to the police and the magistrate and brings them to witness the payment, it will be 'a legitimate trap', wholly laudable and admirable, and adopted in every civilized country without the least criticism by any honest man. But, where a man has not demanded a bribe, and he is only suspected to be in the habit of taking bribes, and he is tempted with a bribe just to see whether he would accept it or not and to trap him if he accepts it, will be 'an illegitimate trap' and, unless authorized by an Act of Parliament, it will be an offence on the part of the persons taking part in the trap who will all be "accomplices" whose evidence will have to be corroborated by untainted evidence to a smaller or larger extent as the case may be before a conviction can be had under a rule of Court which has ripened almost into a rule of law. But, in the case of a legitimate trap, the officers taking part in the trap, like P.Ws 9 to 11, and the witnesses to the trap, like P.W. 8 would in no sense be "accomplices" and their evidence will not require under the law, to be corroborated as a condition precedent for conviction though the usual rule of prudence will require the evidence to be scrutinized carefully and accepted as true before a conviction can be had."

Learned President's Counsel for the 2nd Appellant also drew the attention of this Court to the following quote from the judgment in Ramjanam Singh v. The State of Bihar [AIR 1956 SC 643]:

"Whatever the criminal tendencies of a man may be, he has a right to expect that he will not be deliberately tempted beyond the powers of his frail endurance and provoked into breaking the law; and more particularly by those who are the guardians and keepers of the law. However regrettable the necessity of employing agents provocateurs may be (and we realize to the full that this is unfortunately often inevitable if corruption is to be detected and bribery stamped out), it is one thing to tempt a suspected offender to overt action when he is doing all he can to commit a crime and has every intention of carrying through his nefarious purpose from start to finish, and quite another to egg him on to do that which it has been finally and firmly decided shall not be done."

Summing up his submissions on this point, learned President's Counsel for the 2nd Appellant submitted that there cannot be a valid conviction in the absence of a legal and fair investigation. He alleged that the evidence in this case in its entirety is the result of an 'entrapment' which was illegal and conducted by officers of the CIABOC. Learned counsel alleged that the evidence in this case had not been procured by the investigators during a legally valid and fair investigation. Quoting from the judgment of Justice Mark Fernando in Victor Ivon v. Sarath N. Silva, Attorney General and Another [(1998) 1 Sri L.R. 340], learned President's Counsel concluded his submission by stating that "… a citizen is entitled to a proper investigation – one which is fair, competent, timely and appropriate …".

Submissions on behalf of the Respondent

Responding to the submissions made by learned President's Counsel for the Appellants, learned Deputy Solicitor General for the Respondent (CIABOC) made two key submissions. They were that (i)

'entrapment' is not a 'substantive defence in Sri Lankan jurisprudence', and (ii) assuming without conceding that the defence of entrapment can be taken by an accused in a criminal case in Sri Lanka either as an exculpatory defence or as a ground on which it could be alleged that the accused had been denied a fair trial, the facts of the instant case do not fall within the scope of 'entrapment' as recognized by other jurisdictions, and thus the question of legality of the evidence presented by the prosecution does not arise. He emphasized that the two Appellants had not been denied a fair trial.

For the purpose of determining whether a particular set of facts pertaining to an investigation reveal the existence of an 'entrapment' or not, learned Deputy Solicitor General presented the following quotation from the House of Lords judgment in R v. Loosely, [(2001) UKHL 53]*:

> "On this a useful guide is to consider whether the police did no more than present the defendant with an unexceptional opportunity to commit a crime. I emphasize the word "unexceptional". The yardstick for the purpose of this test is, in general, whether the police conduct preceding the commission of the offence was no more than might have been expected from others in the circumstances. Police conduct of this nature is not to be regarded as inciting or instigating crime, or luring a person into committing a crime. The police did no more than others could be expected to do. The police did not create crime artificially. McHugh J had this approach in mind in Ridgeway v. The Queen (1995) 184 CLR 19, 92, when he said:
> > 'The State can justify the use of entrapment techniques to induce the commission of an offence only when the inducement is consistent with the ordinary temptations and stratagems that are likely to be encountered in the course of criminal activity. That may mean that some degree of deception, importunity and even threats on the part of authorities may be acceptable. But once the State goes beyond the ordinary, it is likely to increase the incidence of crime by artificial means.'"

Learned Deputy Solicitor General submitted that though the 'defence of entrapment' was recognized in certain overseas jurisdictions, English Courts do not treat entrapment as a substantive defence. Citing R v. Sang, [(1980) AC 402],* he submitted that the Court had held that the physical and mental elements of an offence are both constituted even when there is entrapment, and that in the circumstances, the value if any of the defence of entrapment is limited to mitigation of culpability. In support of his submission as regards the position in English law, learned DSG cited the following excerpt from the judgment of Lord Nicholls in R. v. Loosely, [(2001) UKHL 53]:*

"In R v Sang [1980] AC 402 Your Lordships' House affirmed the Court of Appeal decisions of R v McEvilly (1973) 60 Cr App R 150 and R v Mealey (1974) 60 Cr App R 59. The House treated it as axiomatic that entrapment does not exist as a substantive defence in English law. Lord Diplock, at p 432, noted that many crimes are committed by one person at the instigation of others. The fact that the counsellor or procurer is a policeman or a police informer, although it may be of relevance in mitigation of penalty for the offence, cannot affect the guilt of the principal offender: 'both the physical element (actus reus) and the mental element (mens rea) of the offence with which he is charged are present in his case'. Likewise, Lord Fraser of Tullybelton observed, at p 446, that all the elements, factual and mental, of guilt are present and no finding other than guilty would be logically possible. The degree of guilt may be modified by the inducement and that can appropriately be reflected in the sentence. Lord Fraser famously added that when Eve, taxed with having eaten forbidden fruit, replied 'the serpent beguiled me', her excuse was at most a plea in mitigation and not a complete defence."

In view of the foregoing, learned DSG urged this Court to follow English law regarding this matter, and to not recognize entrapment as a substantive defence. He stressed that, if at all, 'entrapment' should be treated only as a mitigatory ground for reduction of the severity of the punishment.

Referring to R v. Loosely learned DSG conceded that, following the enactment of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act (1984) by the Parliament of the United Kingdom (the enactment of which pre-dates the decision in R v. Loosely), the concept of excluding from criminal trials evidence emanating from 'entrapment' has been recognized by English law, if such entrapment amounted to an abuse of power or if the conduct of the Police was illegal. He submitted that trial judges were permitted to exclude such evidence on the premise that permitting such evidence would affect fairness of the proceedings. He submitted that in the circumstances, exclusion of evidence emanating from entrapment in English law is an evidential principle as opposed to an exculpatory defence.

Learned DSG submitted further that in Sri Lankan law, trial judges were not empowered to exclude evidence that is relevant and admissible (in terms of the provisions of the Evidence Ordinance), on the premise that such evidence would affect fairness. Citing Rajapakse v. Fernando [52 NLR 361], he submitted that even evidence emanating from a search which was in the circumstances of the situation 'illegal' was admissible provided such evidence was relevant. In this regard, learned DSG cited the following excerpt from the judgment of Justice Dias:

"I agree that it would be immoral and undesirable that agents provocateur and others should tempt or abet persons to commit offences; but it is a question whether it is open to a Court to acquit such persons where the offence is proved, on the sole ground that the evidence was procured by unfair means. Such considerations may induce the trial Judge to disbelieve the evidence, but such evidence is not inadmissible, and, therefore, when the offence charged has been proved, it is the duty of the Judge to convict."

It is a point of considerable significance that learned DSG while emphasizing that admission of evidence during a trial should be screened only from the perspective of 'relevancy' and 'admissibility' (as per provisions of the Evidence Ordinance), did not venture to comment on whether the views of Justice Dias should be reconsidered in the present era, in view of the possible causal relationship between 'evidence gathered through unlawful means' and depriving an accused of the fundamental right to a 'fair trial'.

Based on an analysis of the judgment of the House of Lords in R v. Loosely, learned Deputy Solicitor General pointed out that when determining whether a particular modus operandi adopted by law enforcement authorities in the conduct of an investigation amounts to 'entrapment' (which method he admitted should not be condoned), there are several features the Courts should consider. They are (a) the nature of the offence that was being investigated into, (b) reason for the investigators having adopted the particular investigative procedure, (c) the nature and extent of participation by the investigators, (d) intrusiveness of the investigative method adopted, (e) whether the investigators acted in good-faith, and (f) the antecedents of the suspect.

Turning towards the evidence, learned Deputy Solicitor General submitted that the following evidential aspects pertaining to the case, should be taken into consideration:

(i) The involvement of officers of the CIABOC commenced only after the 1st Appellant had in August 2016 made the initial solicitation of a bribe of USD 3 million from the virtual complainant.

(ii) Following the first instance when the solicitation was made, the 1st Appellant had on several other occasions solicited from the virtual complainant a bribe, and such events reveal a predisposition on the part of the 1st Appellant to accept a bribe from the virtual complainant.

(iii) On 5th September 2017 (well before the virtual complainant complained to the CIABOC), when the virtual complainant met the 2nd Appellant at the Waters Edge, the 2nd Appellant had on his own motion solicited a bribe on behalf of the 1st Appellant. That was without the virtual complainant having induced the 2nd Appellant.

(iv) From that point onwards, it was the 2nd Appellant who had arranged meetings between the 1st Appellant and the virtual complainant. The virtual complainant did not initiate any of those meetings.

(v) At no stage did the officers of the CIABOC instigate or induce or lure either of the Appellants to solicit or accept a bribe. Nor did the virtual complainant do so.

(vi) The role of the decoy who was an officer of the CIABOC was passive, non-intrusive and was a mere 'pedestrian' like presence.

(vii) The decoy did not actively guide the virtual complainant, or manipulate the processes of the raid.

(viii) The virtual complainant on the strict advice of officers of the CIABOC refrained from enticing, luring or otherwise encouraging the 1st and the 2nd Appellants to commit any offence.

Learned DSG submitted that these items of evidence and circumstances support his contention that the instant case was not a case of 'entrapment'. Learned DSG using terminology found in R v. Loosely stressed that the role of CIABOC officers was limited to 'providing an unexceptional opportunity to commit a long-standing pre-planned crime which was already in the move'. He submitted that in the circumstances, the evidence emanating from the prosecution's narrative from the time the virtual complainant complained to the CIABOC up to the arrest of the Appellants, should not be rejected and should be taken into consideration for the purpose of determining this Appeal. He concluded his submissions by stating that in view of the foregoing, the Appellants had not been denied a 'fair trial'.

Finding of the Trial Court

An examination of the impugned judgment of the Permanent High Court at Bar reveals that learned Counsel who defended the two Appellants at the trial had raised 'the defence of entrapment' on the footing that the virtual complainant Nagarajah had acted as an agent provocateur, and that he had lured the accused to commit the offences in the indictment. In the circumstances, learned Counsel had pleaded that the evidence of the virtual complainant relating to events that are said to have occurred from the moment the complaint was made to the CIABOC, be excluded from the trial. Following a consideration of R. v. Sang, the trial Court had rejected the submission that English law recognizes the 'defence of entrapment'. Drawing a parallel, the view formed by the trial Court is that Sri Lanka's law too does not recognize the 'defence of entrapment'. Thus, the Court has concluded that the evidence presented by the prosecution against the accused cannot be rejected. Such refusal to reject evidence presented by the prosecution has also been on the footing that virtual complainant's conduct cannot be treated as that of an agent provocateur.

Consideration, conclusions and findings

The fundamental right to a 'fair trial'

The right of a person accused of committing an offence, to a 'fair trial' against him, which is a fundamental right recognized by Article 13(3) of the Constitution, is of unparalleled importance. It is an important and crucial safeguard to ensure that only a person 'guilty' of having committed an offence is 'convicted' by a Court. Such conviction should be conditioned upon the prosecution having proved the charge against the accused beyond reasonable doubt. It is a 'fair trial' that ultimately ensures that not a single innocent person is convicted of committing an offence for which he is not culpable of. Rightfully, the concept of a 'fair trial' finds itself a foremost place even in the main objective of criminal justice, that in my opinion being, 'the prevention, detection and investigation of crime, and the prosecution and punishment of offenders founded upon a lawful and fair trial*'.*

Particularly due to the prospect of a criminal trial resulting in the imposition of serious penal sanctions which have the potential of depriving the convict of his personal liberty, as well as affecting his financial and proprietary interests culminating in serious and far-reaching consequences, the conduct of criminal trials and related prosecutions must not only be procedurally lawful, they must be conducted in a fair manner as well.

It is primarily a 'fair trial' that reflects the civility of any criminal justice system and ensures that the dignity of all persons who may be prosecuted by the state is protected and that criminal justice is administered according to law, equitably, and in a fair manner. It is the rule of law and a 'fair trial' that separates a 'prosecution' from a 'persecution'. Persecution is a major afront to the rule of law and is unfair. Persecution is a sign of incivility. In the long-term, systematic and widespread persecution has the distinct potential of causing social unrest, resulting in the breakdown of an otherwise cohesive and law-abiding society and culminating in the destruction of the state. The insistence upon the conduct of criminal trials in a fair manner is a safeguard against such dangerous evils.

It is a 'fair trial' that distinguishes a competent criminal trial court discharging justice according to law which is very much in national and public interest, from what is colloquially referred to as a 'kangaroo court' of which the hallmarks are (i) illegitimacy, (ii) absence of independence, impartiality and neutrality, (iii) lack or absence of professionalism and fairness on the part of the judge and the prosecutor, and (iv) the existence of subjectivity, arbitrariness, unreasonableness, prejudice and unjustifiable haste.

'Fair trial' is consonant with the administration of justice, and serves as a protection against harassment and oppressive intrusion into the liberty of not only innocent persons, but even persons who may be culpable of committing offences.

Therefore, 'fair trial' is necessarily a core feature to be expected from Sri Lanka's criminal justice system, which should permeate throughout the multiple phases of the criminal justice system, without being technically restricted to the trial stage. It is an imperative legal requirement that should prevail during pre-trial, trial and post-trail stages of criminal justice. It is of such importance that an accused deprived of a 'fair trial' thereby gains the entitlement to have his conviction challenged in Appeal on that ground alone, particularly if grave and irreparable prejudice to the accused had resulted from such absence or lack of a 'fair trial' culminating in a miscarriage of justice.

Article 13(3) of the Constitution of the Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka provides as follows:

> Any person charged with an offence shall be entitled to be heard, in person or by an attorney-at-law, at a fair trial by a competent court. [Emphasis added]

The importance the Constitution has placed on the fundamental right to a fair trial is manifest in the fact that Article 15 of the Constitution does not recognize any restrictions that may be lawfully imposed on the enjoyment of the right to a fair trial, save as to certain very limited restrictions that may be prescribed by law. The only restriction permitted by the Constitution are those that may be prescribed by law and made applicable only to trials against members of the armed forces, the police and other forces who may be charged with the maintenance of public order. Thus, there can be no derogation from the right to a fair trial even with regard to persons who may be indicted of having committed the most heinous type of offences such as those that may cause serious harm to national security or to the society as a whole.

In The Attorney-General v. Segulebbe Latheef and Another*, [(2008) 1 Sri L.R. 225]* and Attorney-General v. Aponso, [(2008) B.L.R. 145], Justice J.A.N. De Silva (as His Lordship was then) has highlighted the importance of recognizing the right to a fair trial in the following words:

> "The Constitution by Article 13(3) expressly guarantees the right of a person charged with an offence to be heard by person or by an Attorney-at-law at a "fair trial" by a competent court. This right is recognised obviously for the reason that a criminal trial (subject to an appeal) is the final stage of a proceeding at the end of which a person may have to suffer penalties of one sort or another, if found guilty. The right of an accused persons to a fair trial is recognized in all the criminal justice systems in the civilized world. Its denial is generally proof enough that justice has been denied."

Justice J.A.N. De Silva has observed that the right of an accused person to a fair trial is recognized in all criminal justice systems in the civilized world. Its denial is generally proof enough that justice has been denied. Justice De Silva has further observed that like the concept of fairness, a fair trial is also not capable of a clear definition. However, there are certain aspects or qualities of a fair trial amongst other things which could be identified.

From a holistic perspective, it is in public interest that the following are ensured:

(i) That a person who has committed an offence and is therefore indicted, must be found 'guilty' and convicted of committing the offence he has been charged with, and is appropriately punished in terms of the law. However, such outcome must be achieved by prosecuting the alleged offender before a competent court, through a procedurally lawful and fair trial at which evidence that is legally relevant is presented in terms of legally admissible means, through credible witnesses, whose testimonies are trustworthy.

(ii) That a person who has not committed an offence, who nevertheless may have been indicted, must be found 'not guilty' and acquitted of the charges in terms of the law, following a procedurally lawful and fair trial.

Trial outcomes that are contrary to these two principles are inconsistent with the objectives of criminal justice and are not in public interest.

As pointed out by learned President's Counsel for the 1st Appellant, a trial should not only be forensically fair (which means compatibility with procedural and evidential rules), it must be fair in the true sense of the word.

In Zahira Habibullah Sheik and Another v. State of Gujarat and Others*, [Criminal Appeal No. 446-449 of 2004, decided in March 2006 by the Supreme Court of India],* Justice Arijith Pasayat has held the following:

> "The principle of fair trial now informs and energizes many areas of the law. It is reflected in numerous rules and practices. It is a constant, ongoing development process continually adapted to new and changing circumstances, and exigencies of the situation – peculiar at times and related to the nature of crime, persons involved – directly or operating behind, social impart and societal needs and even so many powerful balancing factors which may come in the way of administration of the criminal justice system. … Denial of a fair trial is as much injustice to the accused as it is to the victim and the society. Fair trial obviously would mean a trial before an impartial judge, a fair prosecutor and an atmosphere of judicial calm."

In view of the foregoing, it is my view that judges of trial Courts of this country have an enormous and extraordinary legal responsibility of ensuring that criminal trials are conducted not only in a forensically accurate manner (in accordance with procedure prescribed by law and in compliance with the rules of evidence) but also in a fair manner as well. Similarly, there is an associated professional duty cast on the prosecutor (who in the conduct of criminal prosecutions has a quasi-judicial responsibility to perform, solely in public interest) to conduct the prosecution not only as provided for in the Code of Criminal Procedure Act and to present evidence in accordance with the law of Evidence, but also to discharge that pivotal professional responsibility towards the administration of justice in a fair manner as well. I cannot see a fair trial taking place, unless both the trial judge and the prosecutor discharge their responsibilities in a fair manner. That of course does not mean that all judicial orders and prosecutorial decisions should be favourable to the accused. What it means is that, while the trial judge should make lawful, judicious and fair decisions, the prosecutor must act in a quasi-judicial and fair manner, necessarily in public interest. The master and the guiding force of both the judge and the prosecutor should be the law and the law alone, and no individual or organization or self-interest.

There is one more point that requires, what I wish to refer to as a 'passing comment' . It is necessary to note that the concept of fairness at a criminal trial has been so far recognized as a fundamental right only from the perspective of the accused. However, in my view, it is of paramount importance to recognize that victims of crime are also entitled to receive a fair trial. The right to a fair trial is one of the underlying legal concepts based upon which the Parliament has enacted numerous rights of victims of crime and made them justiciable in terms of the Assistance to and Protection of Victims of Crime and Witnesses Act, No. 4 of 2015. Thus, victims of crime are also entitled by law to receive a fair trial. Witnesses too, have an entitlement to testify at a fair trial. What is even more important to note is that when an offence has been committed, the public at large and the state also have the entitlement to have a lawful, fair and expeditious trial against the perpetrator of the offence. Such trial should be aimed at the conviction of the guilty or the acquittal of the innocent.

Relationship between the fundamental right to a 'fair trial' and adjudication of a criminal appeal

It is natural for one to wonder why in the judicial adjudication of a criminal appeal, judicial consideration need be given to the examination and determination of whether in the impugned trial proceedings the accused – appellant had been deprived of the 'fundamental right' to a 'fair trial'. In this regard, it is pertinent to observe that in terms of the Constitution of the Democratic Socialist Republic of Sri Lanka, it is the duty of all organs of the state (the Executive, Legislature and the Judiciary) to respect, protect and promote the fundamental rights of all persons and not to act in a manner that would infringe fundamental rights. In fact, in my view, the spirit of Sri Lanka's Constitution demands that the three organs of the state undertake and carryout an 'activist role' towards the promotion and protection of fundamental rights. That is an overarching Constitutional duty cast on the state towards the public at large.

While Articles 17 read with 126 provide for a specific mechanism to impugn executive or administrative action on the footing that such action infringed one or more fundamental rights or that there exists an imminent likelihood of a fundamental right being infringed and to therefor obtain declarations from the Supreme Court to that effect and just and equitable relief, it remains the responsibility of all Courts to ensure that judicial proceedings (notwithstanding the nature of the jurisdiction invoked) are conducted in a manner in which fundamental rights are not infringed. It is important to note that as the mechanism contained in Articles 17 and 126 does not confer jurisdiction on the Supreme Court to adjudicate upon allegations that a particular judicial conduct or a judicial decision resulted in an infringement of a fundamental right, it is through appellate proceedings of this nature that the Supreme Court could examine such allegations. Thus, in appellate proceedings (such as in the instant appeal), when an allegation is made that the impugned criminal trial proceedings were conducted in a manner that infringed the fundamental rights of the accused, the Supreme Court must give its anxious consideration to such allegation and arrive at a finding thereon. If it is found that a fundamental right the accused – appellant was entitled to enjoy had been infringed during trial proceedings and such infringement had resulted in a miscarriage of justice, the conviction of the accused – appellant must be set aside.

In this regard it would be pertinent to note that Justice Buwaneka Aluwihare in Hattuwan Pedige Sugath Karunarathne v. Attorney-General [SC Appeal 32/2020, Supreme Court Minutes of 20th October 2020] has observed that Courts must respect and give effect to Constitutional provisions in the conduct of Court proceedings, such as the fundamental rights contained in Chapter III of the Constitution. Justice Aluwihare has proceeded to observe that Article 13(3) recognizes the entitlement of a person charged with an offence to a 'fair trial', a right which the state has an obligation to accord to an accused through the Courts. It is important to note that these observations were made by Justice Aluwihare in the course of adjudicating upon a criminal Appeal.

Basis for the allegation that the Appellants had been denied a 'fair trial'

Learned President's Counsel for the Appellants presented their arguments on the footing that the entire investigation conducted by the CIABOC was founded upon a process of investigation which they referred to as 'entrapment'. They submitted that the investigative process of entrapment is illegal (or to say the least unlawful), and that such illegality in the investigation resulted in the Appellants being deprived of a fair trial, since a lawful and fair investigation was a prerequisite for a fair trial. They submitted that the Appellants had been denied a fair trial, as the Prosecution's evidence was founded upon an entrapment which was illegal. Thus, from a generic perspective, the position advanced on behalf of the Appellants was that as the prosecution was founded upon an entrapment, the accused were deprived of a fair trial, and hence the convictions must be quashed.

Therefore, it is necessary to first consider and conclude whether a 'lawful investigation' is a prerequisite for a 'fair trial' or whether a lawful investigation is a component of a fair trial.

Nature and ingredients of the right to a 'fair trial'

Though the Constitution recognizes the right to a fair trial as a Fundamental Right, the black letters of the Constitution remain conspicuous by their silence as to the exact meaning and the constituent ingredients of a fair trial.

The conceptual origins of a fair hearing (used synonymously with the term 'fair trial') being afforded to a person accused of committing a crime are found in the Magna Carta of 1215 AD. ["… No freeman shall be taken, imprisoned, disseised, outlawed, banished, or in any way destroyed, nor will we proceed against or prosecute him, except by the lawful judgment of his peers or by the law of the land … To no one will we sell, to no one will we deny or delay, right or justice."]

The specific rules which regulate a fair trial have evolved from the rules of natural justice. It is widely accepted that the concept of a 'fair hearing' was developed by the judges of Courts of Equity in England and thereby entered the English common law. In contemporary English law, the concept of a fair hearing has found its way into both administrative law and the law relating to criminal justice. A 'fair hearing' as a Human Right was initially recognized by the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR) in 1948. Article 10 of the Declaration provides that, "Everyone is entitled in full equality to a fair and public hearing by an independent and impartial tribunal, in the determination of his rights and obligations and of any criminal charge against him." [Emphasis added] Articles 11, 14 and 15 of the Declaration refer to certain ensuing rights of persons accused of committing offences, which seek to guarantee a fair trial.

The significance of Articles 10, 11, 14 and 15 of the UDHR fell outside the spotlight in 1966 by the right to a 'fair trial' being recognized as a Human Right under the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR). With almost universal ratification of the Covenant, the ICCPR serves as the bedrock for contemporary International Human Rights Law.

Article 14 of the ICCPR reads as follows:

> 1. All persons shall be equal before the courts and tribunals. In the determination of any criminal charge against him, or of his rights and obligations in a suit at law, everyone shall be entitled to a fair and public hearing by a competent, independent and impartial tribunal established by law. The press and the public may be excluded from all or part of a trial for reasons of morals, public order (ordre public) or national security in a democratic society, or when the interest of the private lives of the parties so requires, or to the extent strictly necessary in the opinion of the court in special circumstances where publicity would prejudice the interests of justice; but any judgement rendered in a criminal case or in a suit at law shall be made public except where the interest of juvenile persons otherwise requires or the proceedings concern matrimonial disputes or the guardianship of children.

2. Everyone charged with a criminal offence shall have the right to be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law.

3. In the determination of any criminal charge against him, everyone shall be entitled to the following minimum guarantees, in full equality:

(a) To be informed promptly and in detail in a language which he understands of the nature and cause of the charge against him;

(b) To have adequate time and facilities for the preparation of his defence and to communicate with counsel of his own choosing;

(c) To be tried without undue delay;

(d) To be tried in his presence, and to defend himself in person or through legal assistance of his own choosing; to be informed, if he does not have legal assistance, of this right; and to have legal assistance assigned to him, in any case where the interests of justice so require, and without payment by him in any such case if he does not have sufficient means to pay for it;

(e) To examine, or have examined, the witnesses against him and to obtain the attendance and examination of witnesses on his behalf under the same conditions as witnesses against him;

(f) To have the free assistance of an interpreter if he cannot understand or speak the language used in court;

(g) Not to be compelled to testify against himself or to confess guilt.

4. In the case of juvenile persons, the procedure shall be such as will take account of their age and the desirability of promoting their rehabilitation.

5. Everyone convicted of a crime shall have the right to his conviction and sentence being reviewed by a higher tribunal according to law.

6. When a person has by a final decision been convicted of a criminal offence and when subsequently his conviction has been reversed or he has been pardoned on the ground that a new or newly discovered fact shows conclusively that there has been a miscarriage of justice, the person who has suffered punishment as a result of such conviction shall be compensated according to law, unless it is proved that the non-disclosure of the unknown fact in time is wholly or partly attributable to him.

> 7. No one shall be liable to be tried or punished again for an offence for which he has already been finally convicted or acquitted in accordance with the law and penal procedure of each country.

Supplementing the ICCPR, several regional Human Rights treaties have come into being, among which is the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR) of 1950. Article 6 of the ECHR seeks to guarantee the human right to a fair trial. Article 6(1) provides as follows:

> In the determination of his civil rights and obligations or of any criminal charge against him, everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law. Judgment shall be pronounced publicly but the press and public may be excluded from all or part of the trial in the interests of morals, public order or national security in a democratic society, where the interests of juveniles or the protection of the private life of the parties so require, or to the extent strictly necessary in the opinion of the court in special circumstances where publicity would prejudice the interests of justice. [Emphasis added]

Judgments of the European Court of Human Rights which contain very important pronouncements on the right to a fair trial embodied in the ECHR (such as Teixeira de Castro v. Portugal cited by the House of Lords in R. v. Looseley, the case which was referred to frequently by learned Counsel during the hearing of this Appeal) have contributed immensely to the development of jurisprudence regarding the human right to a fair trial.

It is to be noted that Article 14 of the ICCPR while recognizing the right to a 'fair hearing' as a Human Right, contains both substantive and procedural safeguards to ensure that accused receive a fair trial. They are recognized under international human rights law only as minimum legal guarantees to be accorded to a person accused of committing an offence. A careful consideration of the schemes and provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act (CCPA) and the Evidence Ordinance (EO) reveal that these two laws which are the two primary cornerstones of the criminal justice system of Sri Lanka, have been designed and structured to recognize many of the features contained in Article 14 of the ICCPR and generally the concept of a fair trial. Nevertheless, it is important to note that the CCPA and the EO do not contain ingredients of a fair trial, exhaustively. Those two laws, provide only the minimum features of a fair trial.

In 2007, the Parliament enacted the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR) Act, No. 56 of 2007, as its preamble reads, to give effect to certain Articles of the ICCPR relating to Human Rights which have not been given domestic recognition through legislative measures. Section 4 of the Act confers on 'alleged offenders' the following 'entitlements':

> (1) A person charged of a criminal offence under any written law, shall be entitled —
>
> (a) to be afforded an opportunity of being tried in his presence;
>
> (b) to defend himself in person or through legal assistance of his own choosing and where he does not have any such assistance, to be informed of that right;
>
> (c) to have legal assistance assigned to him in appropriate cases where the interest of justice so requires and without any payment by him, where he does not have sufficient means to pay for such assistance:
>
> (d) to examine or to have examined the witnesses against him and to obtain the attendance of witnesses on his behalf, under the same conditions as witnesses called against him;
>
> (e) to have the assistance of an interpreter where such person cannot understand or speak the language in which the trial is being conducted; and
>
> (f) not to be compelled to testify against himself or to confess guilt.
>
> (2) Every person convicted of a criminal offence under any written law, shall have the right to appeal to a higher court against such conviction and any sentence imposed.
>
> (3) No person shall be tried or punished for any criminal offence for which such person has already been convicted or acquitted according to law.

Whether these 'entitlements' have the force of law and unconditional justiciability (particularly as they have not been, surprisingly though, classified as 'rights') is a matter to be decided in an appropriate case. However, it is pertinent to note that substantial judicial recognition of these 'entitlements' is found in Attorney-General v. Aponso (cited above).

It is noteworthy that both Article 14 of the ICCPR and section 4 of the ICCPR Act make no mention regarding the need for a lawful investigation based upon which a criminal prosecution could be founded upon and for a lawful investigation to be a condition precedent for a fair trial.

Nevertheless, it is necessary to consider whether this lacuna in international treaty and domestic statutory law, needs to be filled by judicial pronouncements resulting in the development of the common law.

In Wijepala v. Attorney General [(2001) 1 Sri L.R. 46] Mark Fernando, J. observed that Article 13(3) "not only entitles an accused to a right to legal representation at a trial before a competent court, but also to a fair trial, and that includes anything and everything necessary for a fair trial*."* (Emphasis added.) Thus, it is seen that Justice Mark Fernando has by the use of the term 'anything and everything' indicated the impossibility of defining the concept of a fair trial and exhaustively describing the constituent ingredients of a fair trial. He has observed the expansive nature of the concept of a fair trial. Indeed, what amounts to a fair trial would be extremely difficult to define. It is only a series of judgments on this matter that would give rise to a comprehensive description of the concept of a fair trial and illustrate a definitive list of the constituent ingredients of the concept. Whether or not an accused has been denied a fair trial must be determined upon a consideration of the attendant facts and circumstances of the case in comparison with the requirements of a fair trial.

Link between the right to a fair trial, a lawful investigation and the institution of criminal proceedings

It is noteworthy that both the institution of criminal proceedings and the conduct of criminal prosecutions are founded upon the conduct of criminal and forensic investigations. A criminal investigation can be described as a legally regulated process, which is required to be conducted by officials who possess the legal authority to conduct such a process. The primary objectives for which a criminal investigation is conducted, are as follows:

(a) To ascertain the truth pertaining to the information, complaint or allegation that an offence has been committed (i.e. whether in fact an offence has been committed).

(b) If the investigation reveals that in fact an offence has been committed, ascertaining the identity of the perpetrator.

(c) Apprehending the perpetrator.

(d) Collecting 'investigative material' that would have the potential of being admissible against such perpetrator in a court of law, by converting such material into 'judicial evidence' (oral, documentary and technical), so that criminal proceedings could be instituted against the perpetrator, and upon successful prosecution of the perpetrator, he could be convicted for committing the offence and be appropriately punished.

It must be noted that the function of the Attorney General with regard to the institution of criminal proceedings (following a consideration of investigative material) has been conferred on him by statute (the written law). A decision on the institution of criminal proceedings has a direct bearing on the legal rights and interests of both the suspect / accused (alleged offender) and the relevant victim of crime. Therefore, this function of the Attorney General should be viewed from the perspectives of principles of public law. Subject to the exception provided by section 24 of the Commissions of Inquiry Act (as amended by Act No. 16 of 2008), the statutory function of instituting criminal proceedings against alleged offenders is regulated by section 393 of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act (CCPA). With regard to offences that are required to be investigated into by the police, the CCPA requires the decision of the Attorney General on the institution of criminal proceedings to be founded upon an investigation conducted by the police in terms of the law. Thus, with regard to an offence investigated into by the police, a decision on the institution of criminal proceedings by the Attorney General must be founded upon an intra-vires, independent, impartial, neutral, good faith and objective consideration of investigative material relating to an investigation conducted by the police in a lawful manner. The same principle applies to the function of the CIABOC pertaining to the institution of criminal proceedings by it. It needs hardly be mentioned that the institution of criminal proceedings by either the Attorney-General or the CIABOC for whatever collateral purposes of itself or any other person, would be unlawful and amount to an infringement of Article 12 of the Constitution.

If investigators are permitted to conduct investigations in a manner contrary to law, it would amount to a serious afront to the rule of law and will affect the legality of the institution of criminal proceedings. Similarly, it will affect the integrity of the criminal justice system and frustrate the achievement of objectives of criminal justice. It can result in persons suspected of committing offences being deprived of their fundamental rights, the truth being suppressed, and accused persons being unfairly prosecuted. It can give rise to innocent persons being investigated into and actual perpetrators of crime being shielded from criminal justice. In addition to the underlying rationale behind outlawing unlawful investigations, from a public law perspective, using investigative material gathered through such an unlawfully conducted investigation to found a decision on the institution of criminal proceedings would be manifestly unlawful.

In R.P. Wijesiri v. The Attorney General [(1980) 2 Sri L.R. 317], Justice Parinda Ranasinghe (as His Lordship was then) as a Judge of the Court of Appeal, considered the vexed question of (in the circumstances of the case examined by that Court), the legality of an indictment preferred by the Attorney General to the High Court. His Lordship considered whether, even if the Attorney General had the statutory power to prefer an indictment to the High Court, such indictment should have been preceded by a 'lawful investigation'. While answering this question in the affirmative, Justice Ranasinghe observed the necessity for and the importance of a legally valid investigation being conducted by the Police into an offence, before criminal proceedings are instituted by the Attorney General. He observed that the importance of commencing proceedings before a Court in a lawful manner cannot be overstated (at page 339). In the circumstances of that case where the Attorney General had directly instituted criminal proceedings against the Petitioner for having committed an offence under section 480 of the Penal Code, Justice Ranasinghe observed (at pages 346-7) that the indictment should have been preceded by a lawful investigation, and that the absence of such a lawful investigation preceding the indictment rendered the indictment also unlawful. Justice Abdul Cader pronouncing a separate judgment, while expressing agreement with the views expressed by Justice Ranasinghe, held that in the circumstances of that case, the High Court was not empowered to try the case, as the Police had not conducted an investigation in a lawful manner in accordance with the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act. He therefore ruled that the indictment itself was unlawful.

Thus, the law is clear. The institution of criminal proceedings in the High Court by the Attorney-General and by the Director General of the CIAOBC (who is also conferred with the statutory power of instituting criminal proceedings before the High Court by forwarding indictment, on a direction to do so by the Commission) should be founded upon a consideration of investigative material collected in the course of a lawful investigation (which means an investigation conducted in terms of the applicable law) and should be preceded by the conduct of such a lawful investigation by competent law enforcement personnel. All criminal investigations must necessarily be conducted in terms of the law. As observed by the Court of Appeal in R. P. Wijesiri v. The Attorney General, it is only investigative material emanating from a 'lawfully conducted investigation' that a prosecutorial authority such as the Attorney General should consider for the purpose of deciding on the institution of criminal proceedings. The same principle of law would apply to the CIABOC.

In terms of section 11 of the CIABOC Act, where the material received by the Commission in the course of an investigation conducted under the Act, discloses the commission of an offence by any person under the Bribery Act or the Declaration of Assets and Liabilities Law, the Commission shall direct the Director General to institute criminal proceedings in the appropriate Court. It is implicit in section 11, that such investigation should be lawful. Thus, this principle applies equally to both the Attorney-General and the Commission to Investigate Allegations of Bribery or Corruption. It logically flows from this principle of law, that, if upon a consideration of investigative material, an affirmative decision is taken by either of these two prosecutorial authorities to institute criminal proceedings against an alleged offender, the corresponding prosecution can be conducted only based on material collected in the course of a lawful investigation, and not otherwise.

It is necessary to observe that basing prosecutorial decisions such as a decision on the institution of criminal proceedings and framing of charges, and the conduct of prosecutions relying upon material gathered in the course of an unlawful investigation, would be a violation of the doctrine of the rule of law, and be both unreliable and unfair. The resultant effect of an unlawful investigation may be grave prejudice being caused to the accused and depriving him of this fundamental right to a 'fair trial'. Such a process would also amount to an infringement of Article 12(1) of the Constitution (which may be identified as the Constitutional guardian of the rule of law).

Fair investigations

Not only should a criminal investigation be lawful, it must be fair as well; fair from the perspective of both the victim of crime and the suspected perpetrator of the offence. From the perspective of the suspect, a fair investigation will include the investigator adhering to the following:

(i) Explaining to the suspect the allegation against him.

(ii) Affording the suspect, a full opportunity of presenting his position with regard to the allegation against him and regarding persons who have made incriminatory statements and items of incriminatory material gathered by investigators.

(iii) Conducting investigations based on exculpatory positions (if any) taken up by the suspect.

(iv) Treating the suspect in a humane manner, and in a manner that would not infringe his fundamental rights.

The investigator must always maintain an objective mind and not view or treat the suspect with any prejudice. Ascertainment of the truth in terms of the law should be the prime motive of the investigator, and not to 'develop a case against the suspect so that he could be somehow prosecuted'.

In Nirmal Singh Kahlon v. State of Punjab and Others*, [(2009) AIR SC 984]* the Supreme Court of India has held that "… an accused is entitled to a fair investigation. Fair investigation and fair trial are concomitant to the preservation of fundamental right of an accused under Article 21 of the Constitution of India". [Emphasis added] In Sidhartha Vashisht alias Manu Sharma v State (NCT of Delhi), [(2010) 6 SCC 1]* the Supreme Court of India has observed that, "… the alleged accused is entitled to fairness and true investigation and fair trial, and the prosecution is expected to play a balanced role in the trial of a crime... The investigation should be judicious, fair, transparent and expeditious to ensure compliance to the basic rule of law".

If an investigation is conducted in an unfair manner, the accused (when indicted) may be able to claim that he had been deprived of his fundamental right to a fair trial. Further, by the conduct of an unfair investigation, there is every reason to believe that the truth will not surface, and in the circumstances, the public will lose confidence in criminal law enforcement and in the criminal justice system.

Unlawful investigations

There can be a strong causal nexus between on the one hand an unlawfully conducted investigation and on the other hand the conviction of the accused following a trial at which investigative material collected in the course of such unlawful investigation had been presented (as judicial evidence). Presentation of evidence founded upon investigative material (material which has the potential of being converted into judicial evidence at the trial) collected in the course of an unlawfully conducted investigation can pollute the findings of the trial court and its verdict, and thereby render such finding unlawful. That is primarily due to the possibility of highly prejudicial evidence emanating from an unlawfully conducted investigation. Therefore, if the prosecution had relied primarily on evidence collected in the course of an unlawfully conducted investigation, it is possible that such evidence resulted in causing substantial prejudice to the accused and therefore resulted in a miscarriage of justice. If in fact a miscarriage of justice had occurred, the conviction of the accused should be set aside on the premise that the accused has been denied a fair trial. That is a situation where the outcome of the case (conviction of the accused) has been inextricably interwoven with the evidence presented by the prosecution which had emanated from an unlawfully conducted investigation. Therefore, there has been a causal nexus between the unlawfully conducted investigation and the conviction of the accused.

However, there may be situations where the investigation as a whole had been conducted in a lawful manner, and only certain segments of it had been unlawfully conducted. An example would be a lawful investigation into an incident of murder, where a particular search had been conducted in an unlawful manner, and a highly incriminatory item of real (physical) evidence having been found during such unlawful search. In such instances, the Court would have to carefully examine and rule on the impact of such unlawfully conducted portion(s) of the investigation. What was the impact of the search having been conducted in an unlawful manner, on the recovery of the relevant incriminatory item of real evidence? Was evidence presented against the accused based on such unlawfully conducted segments of the investigation? Was the testimonial narrative of the prosecution pertaining to the recovery of such item, credible and trustworthy? Has the presentation of material emanating from such unlawfully conducted segments of the investigation, cause grave and irreparable prejudice to the accused resulting in a miscarriage of justice? It is the answers to these questions, that will enable the Court to determine whether in such instances (where only a part of the investigation had been conducted unlawfully), the accused had been denied a fair trial, and if so, whether the conviction should be set-aside.

Conduct of the investigation by officers of the CIABOC

It is now necessary to consider whether the investigation into the complaint made to the CIABOC by the virtual complainant Nagarajah, had been conducted in a lawful manner. In this regard, consideration of section 5 of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act, No. 15 of 1979 would provide a useful starting point.

> All offences –
> (a) under the Penal Code,
> (b) under any other law unless otherwise specifically provided for in that law or any other law, > shall be investigated, inquired into, tried and otherwise dealt with according to the provisions of this Code. [Emphasis added]

The offences for which the Appellants have been found 'guilty' of committing, are offences under the Bribery Act. The Bribery Act presently does not contain specific provisions pertaining to the conduct of investigations into offences under the Act. [Prior to 1994, there were certain provisions, which were repealed by Act No. 20 of 1994.]

However, the Commission to Investigate Allegations of Bribery or Corruption Act, No. 19 of 1994, which established the Commission to Investigate Allegations of Bribery or Corruption (CIABOC), has vide section 3 of the Act, entrusted such Commission the statutory functions of –

(i) investigating allegations contained in communications made to the Commission under section 4, and

(ii) where such investigation discloses the commission of any offence by any person under the Bribery Act or the Declaration of Assets and Liabilities Law, No. 1 of 1975, directing the Director General for the Prevention of Bribery or Corruption to institute criminal proceedings against such person in the appropriate court.

It would be seen that by section 5 of the CIABOC Act, the CIABOC has been vested with certain powers of investigation. Therefore, the Commission in the exercise of its statutory function of investigating the alleged commission of certain offences (such as the offences the Appellants were subsequently indicted of having committed) is entitled to exercise such powers of investigation contained in section 5 of the CIABOC Act. However, vide section 5 of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act, unless specifically provided in a particular law, an investigation at large should be conducted in the manner provided for in such Code. To enable officers appointed to assist the Commission to exercise powers of investigation contained in the Code of Criminal Procedure Act, section 18(2) of the CIABOC Act provides that the Director General for the Prevention of Bribery or Corruption (referred to as the 'Director General of the Commission' during the hearing of this Appeal) and every officer appointed to assist the Commission shall be deemed to be 'peace officers' within the meaning of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act.

A careful consideration of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act reveals that the statutory regulation of the conduct of an investigation is primarily found in Chapter XI of the Act. As observed by Justice Parinda Ranasinghe in R.P. Wijesiri v. The Attorney-General, Chapter XI contains vital powers of investigation, provisions that are sacrosanct and are invaluable safeguards against oppressive and unlawful forms of investigations. However, it is important to note that there are several very important provisions pertaining to the conduct of criminal investigations outside Chapter XI of the Code as well. They are, the (i) power to conduct search operations (sections 24 to 31), (ii) powers of arrest of suspects (sections 23, 32, 33, 34, and 42), and (iii) power to hold an arrested person in custody (sections 37 and 43A). Additionally, when police officers conduct investigations, they are empowered under the provisions of the Police Ordinance as well. Therefore, restricting the powers of investigation to Chapter XI of the Code would not be correct.

A further examination of the provisions of the CIABOC Act and the Code of Criminal Procedure Act reveals that though the said laws suitably empower any Peace Officer or an Officer-in-Charge of Police Station (in the context of investigations into offences under the Penal Code and various other laws containing offences which may be investigated into by the Police) and the Commission (in the context of offences under the Bribery Act and the Declaration of Assets and Liabilities Law), the two laws in conjunction do not exhaustively contain provisions of law that would regulate the conduct of investigations. Neither of these two laws stipulate the exact modus operandi that may be adopted when conducting an investigation. For valid reasons, determining the exact manner in which an investigation should be conducted has been left to the ingenuity of the relevant investigators based on circumstances relating to each investigation. The manner of conducting an investigation is to be determined keeping in mind a host of factors such as the nature of the offence, the circumstances pertaining to the commission of the offence that is required to be investigated into, and the need to collect sufficient investigative material that would enable the launching of a successful prosecution. Subject to the provisions of the afore-stated laws and circumscribed by such laws, investigation officers have been vested with considerable discretionary authority to determine the exact manner in which the investigation ought to be conducted and implement the conceptualized investigation strategy in a lawful manner. Particularly with regard to complex crimes such as premeditated murder, bribery and corruption, money laundering, and drug trafficking, law enforcement officers would need to adopt complex investigative methodology to detect crime and to gather evidence. Of course, when designing such investigation strategy and implementing it, investigation officers would have to abide specifically by the applicable provisions of the afore-stated two laws and generally by the rule of law, which would include recognizing and respecting the Fundamental Rights of suspects and the rights and entitlements of victims of crime and witnesses. Indeed, every investigation must be conducted in a lawful, impartial, fair, prompt and comprehensive manner, with the view to ascertaining the truth.

Laying of a 'trap' and 'entrapment' as investigative techniques and their legality

Throughout the hearing of this Appeal, there was considerable debate about the investigative technique adopted by CIABOC officials which resulted in the arrest of the appellants. While learned President's Counsel for the Appellants submitted that what took place at the instance of officers of the CIABOC was an 'entrapment', learned Deputy Solicitor General for the Respondents submitted that the investigative technique adopted by officers of the CIABOC did not amount to 'entrapment' and was not unlawful. Learned counsel also debated whether the modus operandi adopted by CIABOC officers was merely 'laying of a trap' or 'an entrapment'. Therefore, it is now necessary to consider (i) what a 'trap' is as opposed to an 'entrapment', (ii) whether the modus operandi of 'entrapment' as alleged to have been adopted by the investigation officers of the Commission in the instant case, amounted to an 'entrapment' (iii) whether such 'entrapment' is 'unlawful' or 'illegal', and (iv) whether in the instant case, officers of the CIABOC engaged in an entrapment and thereby deprived the Appellants of a 'fair trial'.

A search for answers to these questions should be viewed against the backdrop of a core submission made by learned President's Counsel for the Appellants, that when the virtual complainant Nagarajah lodged his complaint at the CIABOC, all what CIABOC officers were entitled to do in terms of the law, was to investigate that complaint containing multiple instances of solicitation of a bribe, and if such investigation revealed sufficient evidence against the perpetrators, take action against them. Learned counsel submitted that instead of doing that (which is the investigative procedure provided by law), the investigators engaged in entrapping the Appellants, which was illegal.

In my view, what was urged by learned President's Counsel for the Appellants as being the lawful entitlement of investigators, was a very conventional and routine investigation: What may be described as a 'simple, conventional and reactive investigation', as opposed to a 'proactive form of investigation aimed at detecting the commission of an offence and gathering cogent evidence relating to the commission of such offence'.

It would be seen that not only in complex crimes such as bribery, corruption, money laundering, terrorism, drug trafficking and online / cyber environment based criminal activities, even in somewhat simple offences such as offences under the Food Act and the Consumer Protection Authority Act, unless law enforcement authorities were to engage in the adoption of proactive and innovative measures of investigation, detecting the commission of the offences, promptly arresting the perpetrator and procuring credible and cogent evidence relating to commission of those offences, would be extremely difficult. Further, by the adoption of simple, conventional and reactive methods of investigation (in the nature of what was submitted by learned counsel for the Appellants as being what was permitted by law), it is highly unlikely that the investigators would be successful in securing sufficient investigative material that would enable the prosecutor to successfully prosecute the offender. Therefore, in my view, what was suggested by the learned President's Counsel for the Appellants as being the only method that is permissible by law, would not be in public interest or in the furtherance of objectives of law enforcement and criminal justice. In my opinion, what was suggested by learned Counsel for the Appellants would be a panacea for perpetrators of crime to avoid criminal justice sanctions, and certainly not in public interest.

Particularly in what may be referred to as 'consent crimes' where there is no direct and immediate victim and both parties had acted surreptitiously in a consensual manner, it is unlikely that law enforcement officers will receive complaints or information pertaining to the commission of such offences. Examples would be (i) a lay person voluntarily giving a bribe to a public officer to secure a benefit for himself and the corresponding acceptance of that bribe by the official for his personal gain, which results in the requested official act being successfully performed and a benefit accruing to both the giver and the receiver of the bribe, and (ii) the sale of narcotics by a large scale drug-trafficker to secure financial gain for himself and the corresponding purchase of such narcotics also by a drug-trafficker or by an addict for re-sale or personal use. Unless law enforcement authorities based on available information and crime intelligence, engage the suspected perpetrator in a proactive manner and devise a method of apprehending the perpetrator at the very moment the offence is committed while they themselves witness the commission of the offence, detection of such offences, arrest of suspects and successful prosecution of offenders would not be feasible. Contemporary law enforcement practices which include covert policing operations in the name and style of sting operations using decoys, other forms of crime detection using decoys, test purchases, controlled deliveries, automated detection of offences using advanced technology, and virtue testing of fidelity to legal values using online communication channels and other methods are adopted throughout the world. Particularly with the increase in the sophistication of commission of crime and the use of advanced technology by criminals, law enforcement authorities have been able to keep society relatively safe from unscrupulous criminals, mainly due to such proactive forms of crime detection and criminal investigation.

Particularly in the field of bribery and corruption, which has most dangerously invaded the officialdom of our country and caused (possibly continues to cause) significant damage to the integrity of governance and devastating economic consequences, the adoption of proactive forms of investigation (to the exclusion of what is illegal) is very much in public interest, and must be encouraged.

Trap

According to the Oxford Advanced Learns' Dictionary (10th Edition - 2020) to the extent it is contextually relevant, a 'trap' is a clever plan designed to trick somebody, either by capturing them or by making them to do or say something that they did not mean to do or say. (e.g. She had set up a trap for him and he had walked straight into it.) A trap is also a trick to get somebody into doing something. According to the Black's Law Dictionary (11th Edition) a trap is a devise for capturing living creatures and that shuts suddenly. A trap has also be described as any devise or contrivance by which one may be caught unawares.

From a crime detection perspective, a 'trap' may be described as an innovative crime detection method which law enforcement authorities use to nab perpetrators at the very instant the offence is committed. It is an undercover method of criminal investigation by which 'a trap is laid' enabling the perpetrator to be apprehended in the 'act of committing the crime' while ensuring that the perpetrator has no room to extricate himself. Where investigators adopt the 'trap' technique, the suspected perpetrator is not apprehended (arrested) immediately following the receipt of information or the complaint that he has committed an offence. A crime detection method referred to as a 'trap' is laid providing the perpetrator an opportunity to commit the substantive offence or a further offence (if he decides to commit the substantive offence or such further offence, on his own volition). It is the commission of the substantive or further offence that is detected by law enforcement officers by the laying of a trap. Thus, what law enforcement officers do is to design and create circumstances that confer on the perpetrator the opportunity to commit an offence on his own free will. This investigative method is designed in such a manner that the suspect receives a free opportunity to commit an offence in the immediate presence of an undercover law enforcement officer, who is generally referred to as a 'decoy'. The decoy is a passive observer of the conduct of the offender and either does not engage with the offenders or engages only minimally. The decoy offers no inducement to the suspect to commit an offence, nor does he lure him to commit the offence. If the offender does commit an offence, the decoy either directly apprehends the offender or signals the rest of the law enforcement personnel, and they rush to apprehend the offender.

The laying of a trap is carried out for multiple reasons. They are, (i) to check the veracity of the complaint / information received, (ii) to directly take cognizance of the offence being committed (as the decoy witnesses the offence being committed), and (iii) to facilitate the perpetrator being arrested 'in the act of committing the offence' or immediately thereafter. This method has the advantage of securing cogent evidence against the perpetrator, obtain corroboration of the complainant's position, preventing the offender from destroying evidence which incriminates him, and also prevents the offender from evading arrest. Therefore, 'laying of traps' is a well-accepted method. Thus, it would be seen that, it will certainly not be in public interest to proscribe all forms and manifestations of 'laying of traps', which do not take the manifestation and aggravated form of 'entrapment' (defined below). I take judicial note of the fact that, the CIABOC presently adopts the 'laying of traps' as a routine method of detection of accepting bribes and its legality has not been challenged in judicial proceedings. During the hearing of this Appeal, learned Counsel for the Appellants were non-committal regarding their views on legality of 'laying of a trap using a decoy'.

In M.S. Mohiddin v. Unknown [AIR 1952 Mad 561] (cited by learned President's Counsel for the 2nd Appellant) Justice Panchapakesa Ayyar has referred to two kinds of traps, namely 'legitimate traps' and 'illegitimate traps'. The challenge in my view would be to draw the dividing line between traps simpliciter that are permissible as they are lawful, as opposed to what are impermissible and thus unlawful. However, it is important to note that basing the argument on what is lawful verses what is unlawful based on nomenclature alone to be assigned to the impugned investigative technique can be troublesome.

Entrapment

'Entrapment' as an investigative technique, which was at the epicenter of the argument in this Appeal, is a term which does not find a statutory definition in Sri Lankan law (both written and unwritten law). Learned Counsel did not bring to the attention of this Court a statutory definition of the term found in a statute of a comparable jurisdiction.

In the foregoing circumstances, it would be logical to commence the search for a definition of the term by ascertaining the literal meaning of the term 'entrapment'. According to the Oxford Advanced Learner's Dictionary (10th Edition - 2020) 'entrapment' means the illegal act of tricking somebody into committing a crime so that he can be arrested for it. Other language dictionaries offer similar literal meanings.

The logical next step would be to refer legal dictionaries. According to the Merriam–Webster's Dictionary of Law, entrapment is the action or process of entrapping and the state or condition of being entrapped. The term has also been defined as the affirmative defence of having been entrapped by an agent of the government. According to the Black's Law Dictionary (11th Edition), entrapment is a law enforcement officer's or government agent's inducement of a person to commit a crime, by means of fraud or undue persuasion in an attempt to cause a criminal prosecution against that person.

All counsel were unanimous in their position that judicial pronouncements of this country do not contain a definition of the term 'entrapment'. In the circumstances, it is necessary to consider judicial interpretations found in judgments of comparable jurisdictions. As referred to above, learned President's Counsel for the 2nd Appellant brought to the attention of this Court a possible definition of the term, found in Sorrells v. United States 287 US 435 (1932), which provides that entrapment is "… the conception and planning of an offence by an officer and his procurement of its commission by one who would not have perpetrated it except for the trickery, persuasion or fraud of the officer …". Learned Deputy Solicitor General did not oppose this definition.

In the English case of R. v. Frank Alexander Birtles [(1969) 53 Cr.A.R. 469], Lord Parker, CJ has, in an instance where the informer had created the commission of an offence by inciting the accused to commit an offence which he would not have otherwise committed, held that "it is vitally important to ensure so far as possible that the informer does not create an offence, that is to say, incite others to commit an offence which those others would not otherwise have committed." These words reflect Lord Chief Justice Parker's views on what entrapment means. In the South African case of S. v Malinga [(1963) 1 S.A.L.R.692] Justice Holmes has defined that a person may be referred to as a "trap" which such "person who with a view to securing the conviction of another, proposes certain criminal conduct to him, and himself ostensibly takes part therein. In other words, he creates the occasion for someone else to commit the offence." In the Canadian case of R. v. Haukness, [(1976) 5 W.W.R. 420], entrapment has been defined as "… the act of an officer who induces a person to commit a crime, not contemplated by such person, for the purpose of prosecuting him …".

Upon a consideration of the literal meaning of the English term 'entrapment', definitions found in legal dictionaries, and judicial pronouncements of comparable jurisdictions, without intending to provide an exhaustive definition, it is my view that 'entrapment' is a process which is associated with the conduct of certain forms of criminal investigations, where one or more law enforcement officers in collaboration with or without the participation of a lay person, engages in the conduct of one or more activities not associated with routine and conventional criminal investigations, for the purpose of inducing or enticing another person to commit a crime. Such stratagem may take the form of instigation, enticement, inveigling, applying duress or luring. As a result of such stratagem, the offender commits an offence, which he did not originally intend to commit. The result of causing the offender to commit an offence is achieved by deception or fraud. As a result of such stratagem and upon being deceived, the offender commits the offence he was instigated, enticed, inveigled or lured into committing. Consequent to the commission of the offence, the offender is arrested forthwith.

Thus, it would also be seen that 'entrapment' is an aggravated manifestation of 'laying of a trap'. In an entrapment, in addition to the routine features of 'laying a trap', investigators engage in certain measures by the application of stratagem, so as to induce or lure the offender to commit an offence which he would not have otherwise committed. In other words, investigators not only set in place circumstances that confer on the offender an opportunity to commit and offence, they 'create' the commission of the offence, as well.

Generally, entrapment is carried out by an agent provocateur. An agent provocateur is a person who entices another to commit an express breach of the law, which that person would not have otherwise committed, and then proceed to inform against him in respect of such offence to a law enforcement agency or to a Court. An agent provocateur could be a law enforcement officer or a lay person who acts in terms of advice or instructions given by a law enforcement officer. It is noteworthy that in entrapment, certain forms of interventions by law enforcement officers, are per-se criminal activities. Examples would be abetting the commission of an offence or conspiracy to commit an offence. Those are instances where the law enforcement officer concerned and or the agent provocateur's conduct forms the actus reus of an offence. However, in certain other entrapments, interventions by the agent provocateur do not constitute the actus reus of any offence. Notwithstanding the possible blameworthiness of the conduct of the agent provocateur, it is necessary to note that in entrapment, the motive of law enforcement officers is to detect and apprehend a person whom they believe has engaged in criminal activity. They do not entertain any criminal intent on their part.

It is thus seen that, in a case of entrapment, what led to the perpetrator to commit the ingredients of the offence, was a form of intervention necessarily associated with deception practiced upon him by law enforcement officers or by a lay person acting at the behest of law enforcement officers. As a result of the intervention, the perpetrator commits an offence which he would not have committed if not for such intervention. These features of 'entrapment' distinguish itself from a 'trap' simpliciter.

In Nottingham City Council v. Amin [(2000) 1 WLR 1071], it was held that the nature of the offence, the reason for the particular police operation, the nature and extent of police participation in the crime, and the character of the accused, are factors among others that may be taken into consideration in determining whether a particular conduct of the law enforcement officers is acceptable or not. It was further held that this was not an exhaustive list of factors and that their relative weight and importance depends on the facts of each case.

Though in order to justify a particular modus operandi adopted by them to investigate a crime, law enforcement officers may advance the proposition that recourse was had to the impugned procedure for the purpose of detecting a person in the act of committing an offence and that they acted in good faith, the legality of such modus operandi needs to be carefully considered.

Legal implications arising out of entrapment

The legal implications arising out of entrapment has been discussed in the English case of R v Sang [(1980) AC 402], which was referred to by all Counsel and by the trial court. In this case, while Sang had been a prisoner detained at the Brixton prison, he met a fellow prisoner called Scippo who unknown to Sang, was a police informant and served in this instance as an agent provocateur. Shortly before Sang was about to be released from prison, Scippo who seemed to think that Sang's business or part of it was to deal in forged banknotes, told Sang that he knew of a safe buyer of forged banknotes and that he would arrange for this buyer to get in touch with Sang by telephone. Soon after Sang left the prison, he was telephoned by a man who posed as a keen buyer of forged banknotes and enquired whether Sang would sell him some. Sang responded that he would, and at a subsequent meeting between the two, the deal was to be completed. Sang had no idea that the man with whom he had been speaking, was, in fact a sergeant of the police. Sang and some of his associates went to the meeting carrying with them a large number of forged USD banknotes and walked straight into a police trap. The forged notes were confiscated and Sang and his comrades in crime were arrested. Subsequently, Sang and another were charged with conspiracy to utter counterfeit banknotes and with unlawful possession of the same.

At the trial, the trial judge ruled that he had no discretion to exclude evidence obtained through an agent provocateur and after trial, convicted Sang. The Court of Appeal dismissed Sang's Appeal. However, the following question was certified as being fit for consideration by the House of Lords: "Does a trial judge have a discretion to refuse to allow evidence-being other than evidence of admission-to be given in any circumstances in which such evidence is relevant and of more than minimal probative value?"

The House of Lords affirmed the view of the Court of Appeal (Criminal Division). It was held that there was no justification for the exercise of the judge's discretion to exclude evidence, whether or not it had been obtained as a result of the activities of an agent provocateur. Accordingly, the appeal was dismissed. In the course of the judgment, the Court enunciated the following principles:

- There is no defence called 'entrapment' known to English Law. The fact that the procurer of the offence (agent provocateur) is a policeman or a police informer cannot affect the guilt of the principal offender, although it may be of relevance in mitigation of penalty for the offence. Both the physical element (actus reus) and the mental element (mens rea) of the offence with which the accused has been charged are present in this case.
- Incitement is no defence in law for the person incited to crime, even though the inciter is himself guilty of crime and may be far the more culpable. There are other more direct, less anomalous ways of controlling police and official activity than by introducing so dubious a defence into the law. The true relevance of official entrapment is upon the question of sentence where its mitigating value may be high.
- A trial judge in a criminal trial has always a discretion to refuse to admit evidence pertaining to entrapment, if in his opinion its prejudicial effect outweighs its probative value.
- Save with regard to admissions and confessions and generally with regard to evidence obtained from the accused after the commission of the offence, the trial judge has no discretion to refuse to admit relevant and admissible evidence on the ground that it was obtained by improper or unfair means. The court is not concerned with how it was obtained. It is no ground for the exercise of discretion to exclude that the evidence was obtained as the result of the activities of an agent provocateur.
- 'Fair' in this context relates to process of trial. No man is to be compelled to incriminate himself; No man is to be convicted save upon the probative effect of legally admissible evidence. No admission or confession is to be received in evidence unless such admission or confession was made voluntarily. If legally admissible evidence be tendered which endangers these principles, the judge may exercise his discretion to exclude it, thus ensuring that the accused has the benefit of principles which exist in the law to secure him a fair trial.

Lord Diplock answered the afore-stated question of law, in the following manner:

> A trial judge may, at his discretion, exclude such evidence pertaining to an entrapment only where its prejudicial effect outweighs its probative value or where the evidence has been obtained from the accused after the commission of the offence, as in cases of admissions and confessions.

Thus, it is evident that R v. Sang has been decided on the premise that procuring evidence through entrapment does not per-se make such evidence inadmissible against the accused. Nor is entrapment an exculpatory defence. If at all, it will have the effect of mitigating the sentence. The view of the Court was that admissibility of evidence procured through entrapment should be determined based on relevancy, admissibility and the probative value of such evidence, and should not be necessarily excluded.

In Regina v. Loosely and The Attorney General's Reference, No. 3 of 2000 [(2001) UKHL 53] (which were two conjoined appeals), the House of Lords revisited the law regarding this matter. Much of the very interesting and argumentative debate during the hearing of the instant Appeal centered around the ratio decidendi of the judgment of the House of Lords and its applicability to the facts and circumstances of the instant case.

In R v Looseley*,* during the course of an authorized police operation relating to the trade in class-A controlled drugs, an undercover police officer who was at a public house, was given the defendant's (Looseley's) name and telephone number as a potential source of drugs. The officer telephoned Looseley who confirmed that he could obtain drugs. After they had agreed on a price for the supply of heroin, the defendant took the officer to an address where the defendant obtained a quantity of heroin and gave it to the officer in exchange for the agreed sum. On two further occasions, the officer contacted the defendant and bought two more quantities of heroin from him. The defendant was charged with supplying or being concerned in the supplying to another of a class-A controlled drug, contrary to section 4 of the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971. The trial judge declined to stay proceedings as an abuse of process of court or to exclude the evidence under section 78 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act. The Court of Appeal upheld the judge's ruling and dismissed the defendant's appeal against conviction. The House of Lords held that there was no objection to the police posing as drug users to trap an active drug dealer.

In Attorney General's Reference (No. 3 of 2000), two undercover police officers offered contraband cigarettes to a youth. The youth took the officers to the accused (who was introduced as a potential buyer), who paid for the cigarettes. The officers then asked the accused if he could supply them with some heroin. At first the accused said he could not get heroin at such short notice and that he was "not into heroin". But eventually he agreed to try and get them some. A few days later, he took the officers to meet the supplier, collected the heroin and gave it to the officers in exchange of 475 pounds. When he was subsequently arrested and interviewed, he said that because the officers were getting him cheap cigarettes, he thought that supplying heroin amounted to a 'favour for a favour'. He did not suggest that the officers exerted pressure of any kind. The accused was charged with supplying to another, a class-A controlled drug contrary to section 4 of the 971 Act. The trial judge stayed proceedings on the ground that the police officers had incited the commission of the offence and that based on jurisprudence of the European Court of Human Rights, held that permitting the evidence to be admitted would deprive the accused of the right to a fair hearing as guaranteed by Article 6 of the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms. When the stay was lifted and the prosecution offered no evidence, the accused was acquitted. On reference by the Attorney-General, the Court of Appeal ruled that the trial Judge had erred in staying proceedings. In the House of Lords, it was held that there was an abuse of process where the defendant, who had never dealt in drugs was induced to procure heroin for an undercover officer by the prospect of a profitable trade in smuggled cigarettes – the police had caused him to commit an offence which he would not otherwise have committed.

It is important to note that during the intervening period between the judgments in Sang and Loosely and AG's Reference 3 of 2000, several significant developments occurred in the United Kingdom, which seems to have had an influence on the outcome of the two conjoined Appeals. They were, (i) the enactment of the Police and Criminal Evidence (PACE) Act of 1984, in which section 74 provides for the exclusion of otherwise admissible evidence on the footing that it would be unfair to adduce it, (ii) the pronouncements of the judgments of the European Court of Human Rights in Ludi v. Switzerland [(1992) 15 E.H.R.R. 201] and Texeira de Castro v. Portugal [(1998) 28 E.H.R.R. 101] where investigations conducted by the police amounting to entrapment were viewed from the context of Article 6 of the European Convention on Human Rights and determined by that Court as having deprived the accused of a fair trial, (iii) the decision of the House of Lords in R v. Latif and Shahzad [(1996) 2 Cr.App.R. 92], and (iv) the enactment of the Human Rights Act of 1998 of the United Kingdom, of which Article 6 guarantees the right to a fair trial.

In R v. Loosely and AG's Reference 3 of 2000, the primary questions before the House of Lords were, (i) whether entrapment was illegal and thus whether evidence pertaining to an entrapment is inadmissible, and (ii) when an attempt is made by the prosecution to present evidence procured through entrapment, whether proceedings should be stayed or the impugned item of evidence should be excluded.

Particularly in view of the divergence of views expressed by learned Counsel during the hearing of this Appeal regarding the ratio decidendi to be deducted from the opinions of the several Lords who heard these two conjoined appeals, in my view, the following detailed reproduction of the principles of law (as contained below) found in the composite judgment of the House of Lords Loosely and AG's Reference 3 of 2000 along with the corresponding observations and comments contained in the several opinions of their Lordships, is quite justified.

(1) It is not acceptable that the state through its agents should lure its citizens into committing acts forbidden by the law and then seek to prosecute them for doing so. Such conduct would amount to entrapment, which would be a misuse of state power and an abuse of process of court.

(2) By recourse to the principle that every court has an inherent power and duty to prevent abuse of its process, the courts can ensure that agents of the Executive of the state do not so misuse the coercive law enforcement functions of the courts and thereby oppress citizens.

(3) As to where the boundary lies in respect of acceptable police behaviour and what is unacceptable, each case must depend on its own facts. A useful guide to identifying the limits of the type of police conduct that is acceptable is to consider whether, in the particular circumstances, the police did no more than present the defendant with an unexceptional opportunity to commit a crime. The yardstick is, in general, whether the conduct of the police preceding the commission of the offence was no more than might have been expected from others in the circumstances; if not, then the police were not to be regarded as having instigated or incited the crime; if they did no more than others might be expected to do, they were not creating crime artificially. However, the investigatory technique of providing an opportunity to commit the crime should not be applied at random fashion or be used for wholesale virtue testing without good reason. The greater the degree of intrusiveness, the closer will the court scrutinize the reason for using it. The ultimate consideration is whether the conduct of the law enforcement agency is so seriously improper as to bring the administration of justice into disrepute. The use of proactive techniques is needed more, and is hence more appropriate, in some circumstances than others; the secrecy and difficulty of detection and the manner in which the particular criminal activity is carried on being relevant considerations.

(4) The difficulty lies in identifying conduct which is caught by such imprecise words as 'lure' or 'incite' or 'entice' or 'instigate'. If police officers acted only as detectives and passive observers, there would be little problem in identifying the boundary between permissible and impermissible police conduct. But that would not be a satisfactory place for the boundary line.

(5) Moreover, and importantly, in some instances a degree of active involvement by the police in the commission of a crime is generally regarded as acceptable. Test purchases fall easily into this category.

(6) Thus, there are occasions when it is necessary for the police to resort to investigatory techniques in which the police themselves are the reporters and the witnesses of the commission of a crime. Sometimes, the particular technique adopted is acceptable. Sometimes it is not. For even when the use of these investigatory techniques is justified, there are limits to what is acceptable.

(7) The fact that the evidence was obtained by entrapment does not of itself require the judge to exclude it. But, in deciding whether to admit the evidence of an undercover police officer, the judge may take into account matters such as whether the officer was enticing the defendant to commit an offence he would not otherwise have committed, the nature of any entrapment, and how active or passive was the officer's role in obtaining the evidence.

(8) The judiciary should accept a responsibility for the maintenance of the rule of law that embraces a willingness to oversee executive action and to refuse to countenance behaviour that 'threatens either basic human rights or the rule of law'.

(9) Entrapment, and the use of evidence obtained by entrapment ('as a result of police incitement'), may deprive an accused of the right to a fair trial. Although entrapment is not a substantive defence, English law has now developed remedies in respect of entrapment: the court may stay the relevant criminal proceedings, and the court may exclude evidence.

(10) Entrapment is not a matter going only to the blameworthiness or culpability of the defendant and, hence, to sentence as distinct from conviction. Entrapment goes to the propriety of there being a prosecution at all for the relevant offence, having regard to the state's involvement in the circumstance in which it was committed.

(11) Expressions such as ‘state-created crime’ and ‘lure’ and ‘incite’ focus attention on the role played by the police in the formation of the defendant’s intent to commit the crime in question. If the defendant already had the intent to commit a crime of the same or a similar kind, then the police did no more than give him the opportunity to fulfil his existing intent. This is unobjectionable. If the defendant was already presently disposed to commit such a crime, should opportunity arise, that is not entrapment. That is not state-created crime. The matter stands differently if the defendant lacked such a predisposition, and the police were responsible for implanting the necessary intent.

(12) The overall consideration is always whether the conduct of the police or other law enforcement agency was so seriously improper as to bring the administration of justice into disrepute.

(13) The use of pro-active techniques is more needed and, hence, more appropriate, in some circumstances than others. The secrecy and difficulty of detection, and the manner in which the particular criminal activity is carried on, are relevant considerations.

(14) It is necessary to consider the reason for the particular police operation. It goes without saying that the police must act in good faith and not, for example, as part of a malicious vendetta against an individual or group of individuals. Having reasonable grounds for suspicion is one-way good faith may be established, but having grounds for suspicion of a particular individual is not always essential. Sometimes suspicion may be centered on a particular place, such as a particular public house. Sometimes random testing may be the only practicable way of policing a particular trading activity.

(15) The greater the inducement held out by the police, and the more forceful or persistent the police overtures, the more readily may a court conclude that the police overstepped the boundary: their conduct might well have brought about commission of a crime by a person who would normally avoid crime of that kind. In assessing the weight to be attached to the police inducement, regard is to be had to the accused's circumstances, including his vulnerability. This is not because the standards of acceptable behaviour are variable. Rather, this is a recognition that what may be a significant inducement to one person may not be so to another. For the police to behave as would an ordinary customer of a trade, whether lawful or unlawful, being carried on by the defendant will not normally be regarded as objectionable.

(16) The fact that the accused was entrapped is not inconsistent with his having broken the law. The entrapment will usually have achieved its object in causing him to do the prohibited act with the necessary guilty intent.

(17) Many cases place emphasis upon the question of whether the policeman can be said to have caused the commission of the offence, rather than merely providing an opportunity for the accused to commit it with a policeman rather than in secrecy with someone else. There is no doubt that this will usually be a most important factor in deciding whether or not the police have overstepped the line between legitimate crime detection and unacceptable crime creation.

(18) The only proper purpose of police participation is to obtain evidence of criminal acts which they suspect someone is about to commit or in which he is already engaged. It is not to tempt people to commit crimes in order to expose their bad characters and punish them.

(19) Closely linked with the question of whether the police were creating or detecting crime is the supervision of their activities. To allow policemen or controlled informers to undertake entrapment activities unsupervised carries great danger, not merely that they will try to improve their performances in court, but of oppression, extortion and corruption.

(20) The remedy where entrapment has occurred is not a substantive defence. It had also been held that entrapment gives rise to a mitigatory plea in so far as the sentence is concerned. However, in view of section 78 of the PACE Act of 1984 and the Human Rights Act of 1998, this approach must be modified. The phrase 'fairness of proceedings' in section 78 of the PACE Act is directed primarily at matters going into the fairness of the actual conduct of proceedings. However, the scope of the wide and comprehensive discretion conferred on trial judges should not be strictly to procedural unfairness and can justify the exclusion of evidence pertaining to entrapment.

Present status of the English law on entrapment

In view of the foregoing, it is evident that the law relating to entrapment as laid down in R v. Sang has been reversed by the House of Lords by their judgment in the conjoined Appeals of R v. Loosely and AG's Reference (No. 3 of 2000). The House of Lords has held that entrapment amounts to an abuse of power conferred on law enforcement and investigation officers. Permitting entrapment to take place is an afront to the integrity of criminal justice and is contrary to public policy. It is inimical to the rule of law, and hence cannot be condoned. Entrapment causes the creation of an offence, that is, in entrapment the offender commits an offence which he would not have otherwise committed. (It should be noted that, 'creating crime' is different from 'creating circumstances that provides a mere opportunity to commit crime'.) In the circumstances, entrapment (the parameters of which have been laid down in the several opinions of the Lords, as being distinguishable from lawful proactive forms of investigation which would include the 'laying of traps' simpliciter) as a form of investigative technique is not lawful under English common law. Nevertheless, entrapment is not a substantive defence in English law. Evidence emanating from an entrapment would impinge on the right of an accused to a fair trial. Therefore, such evidence should not be permitted to be led in evidence.

During the hearing of this Appeal, learned counsel did not bring to the attention of this Court any subsequent judgment of the House of Lords or the Supreme Court of the United Kingdom which reflects that the English common law on this matter has changed since the judgment in R v. Loosely. Nor did a scrutiny of the English law by me reveal such a development. I have considered the judgment of the Court of Appeal (UK) in Haroon Ali Syed v. Regina*, [(2018) EWCA Crim 2809],* and it is my view that English common law on this matter remains that which is contained in R v. Loosely and AG's Reference 3 of 2000*.*

Position of Sri Lanka's law regarding entrapment

I find myself in agreement with the afore-stated principles of law contained in R v. Loosely and AG's Reference (No. 3 of 2000). Adoption of these principles into Sri Lanka's law is wholly consistent with the law and procedure pertaining to criminal justice of this country and is in perfect consonance with the fundamental right to a 'fair trial'. Thus, without any hesitation, I apply those principles in the adjudication of the instant Appeal.

In the present Appeal, the determination of the question of law referred to at the commencement of this judgment is not based only on the unlawfulness of the investigative method of entrapment. The related and more important issue in my opinion is whether permitting a prosecution to present evidence emanating from entrapment would be 'fair' and therefore, permissible.

In a situation where the offender had been entrapped, the intention on the part of the offender to commit the offence is not based on his free will and own volition and independent decision-making. The intention to commit the offence is the result of the stratagem applied on the offender by the agent provocateur. The offender did not on his own free will intend to commit the offence. He was influenced to commit an offence which if left alone to himself, he would not have committed. The offence is committed by the offender influenced by or due to the inducement, incitement or duress provided or as a result of being lured into committing the offence by the agent provocateur. The formation of the mens rea of the offence arises out of the intervention by the agent provocateur. Thus, though the requisite mens rea is entertained by the offender and the actus reus of the offence is completed by him, the modus operandi adopted by the agent provocateur and the investigators cannot be endorsed. In a case of entrapment, law enforcement personnel and or the agent provocateur are responsible for the 'creation' of the offence perpetrated by the offender. If not for their design and intervention aimed at the commission of the offence, the offender would not have committed the offence he has been subsequently charged with. Thus, in situations where entrapment has taken place and such entrapment had resulted in the accused committing the offence, it would be manifestly unfair to prosecute him founded upon evidence arising out of the entrapment. That is because, presenting such evidence would be grossly unfair. In my view, that is the justification for the policy and rationale in outlawing evidence emanating from entrapment.

In view of the foregoing, I hold that the investigative technique of 'entrapment' as defined in this judgment, is unlawful to the extent that, it is an abuse of the powers of investigation conferred on law enforcement officials, is an affront to the rule of law as it amounts to conspiracy or abetment to commit an offence or luring another to commit an offence. Doing so which results in 'creating the commission of an offence' which the offender would not have if not for being entrapped committed, is not in public interest, is against public conscience, has the potential of bringing the system of criminal justice into disrepute, and carries the distinct possibility of depriving an accused of a 'fair trial'.

However, following English law, I hold that entrapment is not an exculpatory defence, as entrapment does not negative criminal responsibility.

It is unlawful for investigators to engage in entrapment, and is thus an unlawful investigative technique. Therefore, adoption of entrapment as an investigative technique is a violation of the rule of law. An investigation which predominantly takes the form of an entrapment is an unlawful investigation. As a lawful investigation is a prerequisite for a fair trial, an entrapment gives rise to the distinct possibility of the accused being deprived of a 'fair trial'. If detected during the trial stage, the duty of the trial judge is to exclude evidence emanating from an entrapment. If alleged and proven during the appellate stage that evidence emanating from an entrapment had been led by the prosecution during the corresponding trial, the responsibility of the appellate judge is to consider the impact of the evidence that had emanated from such entrapment, and quash the conviction and acquit the accused, if the reception of such evidence at the trial had deprived the accused – appellant of a 'fair trial' resulting in a miscarriage of justice.

Did the manner in which the investigation was carried out by officers of the CIABOC, amount to entrapment?

What is now left to be determined is whether, the conduct of CIABOC officials and the virtual complainant (at the instance of CIABOC officials) amounted to 'entrapment' which by its very nature and impact, in the circumstances of this case, would have deprived the Appellants of a fair trial.

In this regard, it is necessary to note that, the Accused – Appellants in their testimonies did not plead that they were entrapped to commit the offences they were accused of committing. Such a suggestion was not even made by the defence to prosecution witnesses. Nor did learned Counsel for the Appellants submit to this Court that the Appellants had committed the offences they were indicted of having committed, because they were entrapped. What was submitted on behalf of the Appellants was that CIABOC officers and the virtual complainant had engaged in entrapment which resulted in the Appellants being arrested and subsequently prosecuted. Thus, the Court is left with only the testimonial narrative of the prosecution to determine whether the Appellants had been entrapped and thereby deprived of a fair trial. In this regard, the following items of evidence, related circumstances and necessary inferences are of particular relevance:

(i) Well before the virtual complainant complained to the Prime Minister's office and thereafter met with and made a statement to the CIABOC, the 1st Appellant had on or about 11th August 2016, solicited a bribe of USD 3 million from the virtual complainant Nagarajah. The solicitation related to a matter that the virtual complainant was legitimately interested in getting attended to, namely facilitating the process of handing over to MG Sugars Lanka (Pvt.) Ltd (a company he was interested in) the plant and machinery of the Kantale Sugar Factory, which was a condition specified in the Shareholders' Agreement which the investor company entered into with the Government of Sri Lanka.

(ii) Thereafter, the 1st Appellant had on 27th February 2017 and 5th September 2017, repeatedly solicited bribes from the virtual complainant. On those occasions too, there was no enticement on the part of the virtual complainant which can be alleged by the Appellants as having resulted in the 1st Appellant soliciting such bribes.

(iii) The virtual complainant did not give the 1st Appellant the solicited bribe. In response thereof, the 1st Appellant did not concede to the legitimate entitlement of MG Sugars Lanka (Pvt.) Ltd to receive the ownership of the old plant and machinery of the Kantale Sugar factory. Thus, in February 2018, as at the time the virtual complainant got in touch with CIABOC officials, the matter the virtual complainant was interested in remained unresolved and pending. At no time between the solicitation and the virtual complainant having come into contact with CIABOC officials did the 1st Appellant withdraw the solicitation or state that he was no longer interested in receiving a bribe for the work the virtual complainant requested him to attend to. Thus, it is important to take note of the fact that the 1st Appellant's predisposition to commit the offence of acceptance of a bribe remained active, notwithstanding the lapse of time between the last solicitation prior to the complaint being made to CIABOC and the time the virtual complainant got in touch with CIABOC officials in February 2018, when the virtual complainant lodged the complaint.

(iv) The 2nd Appellant's involvement in facilitating the 1st Appellant to receive the bribe commenced in September 2017, prior to the virtual complainant coming into contact with CIABOC officials. That was founded upon an initiative by the 2nd Appellant.

(v) The involvement of CIABOC officials commenced in February, 2018.

(vi) The virtual complainant was not under instructions by officers of the CIABOC to incite or lure the Appellants to commit any offence. Nor did he do so. However, on the advice of CIABOC officials, the virtual complainant contacted the 2nd Appellant by telephoning him. At the ensuing meeting, the virtual complainant told the 2nd Appellant that he was willing to pay a bribe to the 1st Appellant. In that regard, all what Nagaraja did was to inform the 2nd Appellant that he was willing to accede to the demand of the 1st Appellant. In response, the 2nd Appellant proposed that a bribe of Rs. 450 million be given to the 1st Appellant. At no stage did the 2nd Appellant indicate directly or otherwise that neither he nor the 1st Appellant were interested in receiving a bribe from the virtual complainant. Thus, the virtual complainant did not lure in the Appellants to accept a bribe. All what the virtual complainant did was to provide an opportunity to the Appellants to commit further offences. Further, these circumstances clearly point towards the continuation of the intent and pre-existing predisposition of the Appellants to commit the offence of acceptance of a bribe.

(vii) The initial use of a 'decoy' (an under-cover CIABOC officer) was limited to ascertaining the veracity of the complaint made by the virtual complainant to the CIABOC. Throughout the series of events that followed culminating in the acceptance of the bribe at the car park of the Taj Samudra Hotel, the decoy was a passive observer and did not instigate or lure either of the Appellants to commit an offence.

(viii) At meetings between the virtual complainant and the two Appellants, the bribe had been reduced to Rs. 100 million, and Rs. 20 million was to be initially paid as an advance. These changes took place at the instance of the Appellants.

(ix) On 3rd May 2018 when the Appellants met with the virtual complainant in the lobby of the Taj Samudra Hotel, neither by word nor deed, did the virtual complainant or the decoy lure, encourage, entice or apply duress on either of the Appellants to accept a bribe.

(x) The acceptance of the bribe of Rs. 20 million by the 1st Appellant was a purely voluntary act on the part of the 1st Appellant. Such acceptance was the culmination of a series of events which commenced from the original solicitation of a bribe of USD 3 million.

(xi) When the Appellants were arrested the same day soon after they accepted the bribe from the virtual complainant (at the time when they were inside the car of the virtual complainant which was in the car park of the Taj Samudra Hotel), the role of CIABOC officers was purely law enforcement in nature. The CIABOC officers or the virtual complainant did not thrust the money upon either of the Appellants. The role of the decoy was passive, and to use terminology of the learned Deputy Solicitor General, 'pedestrian like'.

(xii) As at the time the virtual complainant complained to CIABOC, the only reason as to why the 1st Appellant had not committed the offence of accepting a bribe, was due to the fact that the virtual complainant was not willing to give the 1st Appellant the solicited bribe.

It is also seen from the above-mentioned sequence of events that at no time during the afore-stated events did any CIABOC officer entice, incite or lure either of the Appellants to solicit or accept a bribe. CIABOC officers did not advice the virtual complainant to do so either. Nor did the virtual complainant conduct himself in such a manner. What was done by CIABOC officers and the virtual complainant was to provide an opportunity to the Appellants to fulfil their intent. They did nothing to takeaway or limit the exercise of free will or discretion by the Appellants. The Appellants immediately took advantage of the opportunity that was given.

At the time the virtual complainant got in touch with the 2nd Appellant (sequel to the virtual complainant having met CIABOC officers following the complaint,), his utterance to the 2nd Appellant was limited to informing him that he (the virtual complainant) was willing to pay the bribe which the 1st Appellant had solicited from him. The 2nd Appellant immediately responded by suggesting that the virtual complainant pays a bribe of Rs. 450 million. If by that time, the 1st Appellant had given up his original intention of receiving a bribe from the virtual complainant and the 2nd Appellant was not interested in facilitating the 1st Appellant receiving a bribe from the virtual complainant, there was no reason for the 2nd Appellant to have made the afore-stated suggestion and for the 2nd Appellant to have arranged a meeting between the virtual complainant and the 1st Appellant. Further, unless the 1st Appellant remained interested in receiving a bribe from the virtual complainant, the 1st Appellant would not have participated in the meeting arranged by the 2nd Appellant held on 27th February 2018. Furthermore, the conversation at that meeting had commenced seamlessly from where the parties concluded the last meeting before the virtual complainant complained to CIABOC. At that meeting, the virtual complainant did not have to persuade or encourage the 1st Appellant to accept a bribe. The 1st Appellant solicited a bribe of Rs. 100 million with Rs. 20 million to be paid as an advance.

Prosecution evidence relating to events that took place between 27th February and 3rd May 2018, clearly points towards the interest and keenness on the part of the 1st and 2nd Appellants to receive a bribe from the virtual complainant. The events of 3rd May 2018 show clearly the initiative taken by the 1st and 2nd Appellants to receive the bribe of Rs. 20 million from the virtual complainant. On that final occasion too, there was no inducement on the part of the virtual complainant. His conduct was limited to handing over to the 1st Appellant the solicited bribe of Rs. 20 million. The role of the 'decoy' was observatory in nature. He did not by any utterance or action on his part lure the Appellants to accept the bribe. The role of the other officers of the CIABOC was non-intrusive in nature. During the covert operation they took part in, their role was limited to observing the occurrences keenly and apprehending the Appellants no sooner the bribe was accepted.

Thus, it is beyond doubt that, the events which resulted in the 1st Appellant with the assistance of the 2nd Appellant having accepted a bribe of Rs. 20 million, was purely due to voluntary conduct on the part of the two Appellants, and CIABOC officers along with the virtual complainant had not participated in an entrapment as alleged on behalf of the Appellants. There had been neither illegality nor abuse of power in the manner the officers of the CIABOC conducted the investigation.

In view of the foregoing factual circumstances, neither the officers of the CIABOC who conducted the investigation nor the virtual complainant Nagarajah can be classified as agents provocateurs, as they did not create an offence by enticing or luring the Appellants to commit an offence. They merely provided an unexceptional opportunity to the Appellants to commit a further ensuing offence.

The modus operandi adopted by the officers of the CIABOC does not violate the scheme and provisions of the CIABOC Act and the applicable provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure Act. As observed by me previously, provisions of those two laws do not lay down investigative techniques to be adopted when conducting an investigation. Apart from laying down certain vital provisions of law pertaining to the conduct of investigations (which investigators are obliged to comply with) and powers of investigations, the law does not specify the practical manner in which an investigation ought to be conducted (modus operandi to be adopted when conducting an investigation). Based on the nature of the complaint received, the offence, the investigative material that can be gathered at that point of time, nature and degree of corroboration or the absence thereof of the complainant's narrative, and the propensity of the alleged perpetrator committing further offences, it is up to the investigator to determine whether the suspect should be interviewed and arrested forthwith or to delay the arrest pending further investigative steps being taken in good-faith and in a manner that would not infringe the law, while keeping in mind the ultimate objective of conducting a successful investigation in terms of the law. In the circumstances, the arrest of the alleged offender can be delayed up to a strategic moment when the suspect making use of an unexceptional opportunity provided by the investigator commits an ensuing further offence, enabling the commission of such offence being spontaneously detected and the suspect being arrested in the immediate aftermath of such subsequent offence being committed.

In this instance, the investigators of the CIABOC had decided to conduct further investigations with the view to ascertaining the veracity of the complaint, and should the occasion arise, to arrest the suspects at the time they commit the offence of acceptance of the solicited bribe. Their conduct was unexceptional, and was limited to providing an opportunity to the Appellants to commit an ensuing offence which they in any event intended to commit. The motive of the investigators was achieved, as subsequent investigative steps taken by them enabled them to conclude that the complainant's version of events was credible. Further, they were successful in apprehending the Appellants in the act of committing the ensuing offence, which in this instance was the acceptance of a bribe. Therefore, I am of the view that the investigative technique adopted by officers of the CIABOC was not in violation of the applicable statutory framework, did not amount to an entrapment and therefore was lawful. Further, I do not see CIABOC officers having abused their authority or by themselves having committed an offence or acted with a personal or malicious vendetta against the Appellants. There is nothing in the conduct of CIABOC officers or the virtual complainant Nagarajah that would shock the conscience of the public or bring the criminal justice system into disrepute. Their conduct is not contrary to the notions of fairness, particularly as the commission of an offence was not created by them. Nor were the Appellants deprived of their own free will.

In view of the foregoing, while expressing agreement with the submissions made by the learned Deputy Solicitor General, I conclude that the investigative technique adopted by the CIABOC does not amount to an entrapment and that the Appellants have not been deprived of a fair trial. Therefore, I hold that the Appellants' fundamental right guaranteed under Article 13(3) of the Constitution has not been infringed, and hence there exists no basis in fact or in law to set aside the conviction of the Appellants.

I wish to acknowledge with appreciation the invaluable submissions made by learned President's Counsel for the Appellants and the learned Deputy Solicitor General, which significantly contributed towards the development of this judgment.

Order on: 11.10.2023

Order

Aluwihare PC J.,

(1) The Petitioner invoked the jurisdiction of this court in terms of Article 104H of the Constitution and sought writs in the nature of Certiorari and Mandamus on the basis that the decision of the 4th Respondent to reject the nomination papers tendered by the Political Party the Petitioner represents, to contest the election of members to the Parliament from the electoral district of Trincomalee, is ultra vires.

(2) The Petitioner supported this application for notices on the respondent and the court heard the submissions of the learned President's Counsel for the Petitioner, the learned President's Counsel for the 15th Respondent and the learned Deputy Solicitor General for the 1st, 2nd and the 4th Respondents.

(3) The 'National Congress,' a political party recognized under and in terms of Section 7(4)(b) of the Parliamentary Elections Act No. 01 of 1981 (hereinafter referred to as the 'Parliamentary Elections Act') tendered their nomination paper for the Parliamentary Election of 2020 which was rejected on the basis that the oath/affirmation set out in the Seventh Schedule of the Constitution was not duly tendered.

(4) The Petitioner, the Secretary General of the 'National Congress' by his petition sought a declaration that the determination made by the 4th Respondent, Returning Officer of the Electoral District of Trincomalee to reject the nomination paper of the 'National Congress' to be illegal, void and of no effect or avail in law on the following grounds;

a) The 4th Respondent has no power or authority under the Parliamentary Elections Act No. 01 of 1981 to reject the said nomination paper on the grounds set out in the letter marked 'P3a' and 'P3b' and as such the decision is ultra vires,

b) The said decision is ex facie bad in law and unsupported by evidence and ultra vires,

c) Ex facie the nomination paper has been submitted by the National Congress in compliance with the law and as such the said determination of the 4th Respondent is unsupported by evidence and unreasonable in all the circumstances of the case,

d) The said determination of the 4th Respondent has been occasioned by the failure to take into account relevant circumstances and is therefore unsupported by evidence,

e) The said decision of the 4th Respondent is arbitrary, unreasonable, illegal, in breach of the principles of natural justice and contrary to legitimate expectations and need for accountability and transparency,

f) The 4th Respondent has failed to pose the correct question, namely; as to whether the said nomination paper had been submitted in accordance with the law and thereby misdirected himself and fallen into the further error of failing to take into account all the relevant circumstances,

g) The said determination is vitiated by the failure to give reasons for arriving at the said decision,

h) The said decision is in breach of the 4th Respondent's duty to advance the franchise,

i) The said rejection had been occasioned by the failure to properly construe the terms of the said nomination paper and as such is vitiated by an error of law,

j) The said rejection gravely undermines the free and unfettered exercise of the choice vested in the people in the exercise of their franchise.

(5) It was contended on behalf of the Petitioner that his party submitted the nomination paper with the names of 7 candidates to be elected to the Parliament at the Parliamentary Election of 2020 from the Electoral District of Trincomalee. It was pointed out that the nomination paper was as required by the law and that each of the seven candidates have expressed their written consent and subscribed their respective oath or affirmation in the Form set out in the Seventh Schedule to the Constitution and endorsed in the said nomination paper. The nomination paper was delivered to the 4th Respondent by the first named candidate who is the authorized agent before the expiry of the nomination period on 19th March 2020.

(6) After the closure of the nomination period the 4th Respondent had declared that the nomination paper of the National Congress was rejected. The 4th Respondent had issued a letter dated 19th March 2020 both in Sinhala and Tamil marked 'P3a' and 'P3b' respectively. The same states that, acting under Section 19(2) of the Parliamentary Elections Act, which requires the returning officer to inform the secretary or the group leader who submitted the nomination paper of the fact of such rejection. The letter also states that the nomination paper was rejected under Section 19(1)(d) of the Parliamentary Elections Act for not fulfilling the requirements under Section 15(2).

(7) Section 15(2) requires that the written consent of each candidate to be nominated and an oath or affirmation in the Form set out in the Seventh Schedule to the Constitution by every such candidate shall be endorsed on the nomination paper.

(8) Section 19(1)(d) of the Act, empowers the returning officer to reject any nomination paper where the consent of one or more candidates nominated or the oath or affirmation in the form set out in the Seventh Schedule to the Constitution have not been endorsed on the nomination paper.

(9) It was contended that the Petitioner and his political party were not given an adequate explanation of the reason or the reasons for the rejection. By letter marked 'P4' dated 20th March 2020 the Petitioner had requested for the specific reason in writing for the rejection of the nomination paper and requested for a certified copy of the nomination paper submitted by his party. He had not received a reply to this letter and the Petitioner states that by the fax dated 23rd April 2020 marked 'P8' addressed to the 1st Respondent he had again requested a certified copy of the nomination paper submitted by his party. The letter had been followed by an email on 24th April 2020 to the same effect by the Petitioner. These communications had not received a reply.

(10) The Petitioner had handed over a letter dated 1st May 2020 to the 1st Respondent inter alia drawing his attention to the letters marked 'P4' and 'P8' referred to above. By this letter marked 'P9' the Petitioner had appealed to the Election Commission to review the 4th Respondent's decision to reject the nomination paper and to allow the party to contest the Parliamentary Election, as the party had filed its nomination paper in compliance with the law. The Petitioner, however, had not received a reply to this letter either.

(11) By letter dated 3rd June 2020 marked 'P10' addressed to the 1st, 2nd and 3rd Respondents respectively the Petitioner had demanded from the Election Commission to reconsider the 4th Respondent's decision and permit the National Congress to contest the Parliamentary Election. He had further demanded a certified copy of the nomination paper and connected documents tendered by the National Congress. The letter too had not received a response.

(12) As enumerated above the Petitioner had made several requests for a certified copy of the nomination paper submitted by the National Congress and a detailed explanation of the reason for rejection of the nomination paper, from the 4th Respondent and later from the 1st, 2nd and 3rd Respondents.

(13) By virtue of Section 19(1)(d) of the Parliamentary Elections Act the Returning Officer has the authority to "examine the nomination papers received by him and reject any nomination paper…. where the consent of one or more candidates nominated or the oath or affirmation, in the form set out in the Seventh Schedule to the Constitution, of one or more candidates, had or have not been endorsed on the nomination paper." Section 19(2) specifically states that the decision of the returning officer to reject such nomination paper shall be final. There is no explicit requirement for the returning officer to further explain the reason for rejecting a nomination paper. Section 19(2) only requires "Where any nomination paper has been rejected by the returning officer under subsection (1), the returning officer shall inform the secretary of the recognized political party or the group leader, as the case may be, who had submitted such nomination paper the fact of such rejection."

(14) The nomination paper submitted by the Petitioner's party, the 'National Congress' was submitted to court by the Election Commission, and we have had the opportunity of examining the same. According to our observations the nomination paper is defective due to two grounds;

1. The 7th Schedule to the Constitution requires the respective candidate to either 'declare and affirm' or 'swear'. Thereby the requirement is either to submit 'an oath' or in the alternative, 'an affirmation'. The omission to strike through the unnecessary words and specify whether it is an oath or an affirmation that is being made has rendered the nomination paper submitted by the Petitioner's political party defective.

2. Section 12(3) of the Oaths and Affirmations Ordinance No. 09 of 1895 (as amended) states that any oath or affirmation "shall state truly in the jurat or attestation at what place and what date the same was administered or taken…" The failure to fulfill the requirement of stating the place at which the oath or affirmation was administered or taken has rendered the nomination paper submitted by the Petitioner's political party defective.

(15) On these grounds it is evident that the nomination paper submitted by the Petitioner is defective and warrants rejection. As mentioned before, the returning officer is bound to inform the fact of rejection to the respective secretary of the party or the group leader of the independent group, but there is no explicit requirement for the returning officer to spell out the reason for rejecting the nomination paper.

(16) As the candidacy at an election involves not only the rights of the candidates but also the rights of the electors, transparency and specificity may very well be virtues to uphold. While stating the provisions on whose authority a nomination paper is rejected, mentioning the exact grounds for the rejection, where possible, may serve to demonstrate to the candidates that such rejection was done on justifiable grounds. It may very well settle the minds of the candidates and prevent the need for litigation such as the present matter.

(17) Be that as it may, in the present application the returning officer has carried out the duties recumbent on him and the Petitioner has been duly notified. On such observation, notice is refused.
